CRIME RAYS

It's A Crime is a mail game and as such can take one of two forms, computer or human modulated. Either way you write to KJC who send a rulebook and turn card. You fill out your orders and mail them back. A computer processes your moves and prints out the results. In due course you receive these back and have to decide what to do next.

It's A Crime supports 35 players who all start equal. The game orders are processed every ten days. Each turn costs 62½p plus stamp. (And in a magnanimous financial move, Underground has launched its own team headed by Dr Whybrew. As our rise or fall is plotted you'll be able to see the latest scam by scanning Sub-Culture each month. So, keep the airwaves clear.)

What does the game consist of? Well, imagine New York late 1990s. Lawlessness is rife. The Big Apple has deteriorated into a semi-derelict urban ghetto, rotten to the core. The few brave citizens who remain face a life or death struggle with the ever increasing number of drug crazed street gangs.

This is where you begin, not as a hero sent to clean up the mess, but as a gang leader intent on becoming the Daddy with the biggest turf and the sickest, most notorious outfit. All 35 players attempt to control as many blocks as possible, achieved by sending groups from their gang to mug, steal, firebomb, assault, peddle drugs, spy, ambush or generally act tough. The ultimate aim is to become rich and evil enough to be enlisted into the mob!

If you want to break into gangland yourselves KJC Games can be reached at PO Box 11, Cleveleys, Blackpool, Lancs FY5 2UL.

FINAL by Playground £2.45 & sae from Fourth Dimension Records, c/o Rich, 7 Wentworth Gdns, Bullockstone, Herne Bay, Kent CT6 7TT

■ Bubonic rabble are nothing new in this green septic isle, cropping up at the drop of a Sonic Youth bootleg tape, but in Playground's case there's something a little more truculent, erring constantly on the wild slab of life and here coerced strangely onto tape when several of these songs need to court vinyl for full range impact.

■ Where once a mistrustful drum-machine laughed down its silicon sleeves at the hopeful boys as they pirouetted stonily around stage they now have a drummer. This provides a well-like boost to their scandalous undertakings; lending that fateful tinge to the all-consuming pyre that melts their finer points into a heaving wall of sound.

■ From the unstoppable derangement and intensity of Offering, right through until the appallingly 'jokey' Fuggin' Th' Blues, Playground display fine rambling tension that reaches some quite magnificent heights considering their wayward abilities. The power source is mainly the drums, with a frantic sheet of bass being constantly tugged beneath the snarled vocals and the prime operational tool, a guitar that slaps tiny inserts of shining shivers into a caustic soundscape or just whangs out the power alongside the rest of them.

■ A slump occurs during Satisfied, and Last Laugh could do with a haircut but overall the ruinous spasms are cheering in these satchel and brimstone days.

■ Imagine if you will two huge electricity pylons collapsing on-stage, sparks everywhere, and four halfwitted snotpackers grimly holding on while all around their shoes are burning. Playground on this form virtually live inside catastrophe. And may that always be the way. Pratinjia

ALWAYS FIRST with the new invention? Yep, Factory are first on everyone's block to introduce free car carry cases with selected CDs. So, if you want to take your New Order FACD 50 1981 Movement CD into your convertible Beetle there's no probs. Well, apart from the fact that most of the car CD systems still suffer a little from over rocking, not to mention an urban danger from theft. Next up? Check out the Cabaret Voltaire designed Doublevision satellite dish. (Are you sure about this? — Ed) Triv Tel

From 1974 to 1984, DMPO's On Broadway in San Francisco has played host to 3200 shows featuring many renegades from the cultural fringe — from The Go-Gos to The Ramones, Black Flag, Whoopi Goldberg, Jim Carroll, Blondie, Robert Fripp and Tuxedo Moon. With the club's owners set on a change of direction for the sweatbox, it was left to The Dead Kennedys to bring down the walls for the last time at a special live show that's been lovingly recorded on video with full stereo sound. Running at nearly an hour, the tape will cost you around 15 quid in the shops and it's on the Hendring label.

The music itself easily breaks into the value for cash department and the full force of a DK live soiree is something to experience. Jello Biafra's gradual undressing, his enthusiasm and humorous presentation of hard faced lyricism and subtle sub-horror mimes is perfectly supported by a continuous stage invasion featuring the many variations of West coast dress sense and mindless slam dancing. The Dead Kennedys Live is class stuff — guaranteed to gradually upturn the corners of the most downbeat of mouths. Dave Henderson

PART 2 the sequel

It depends what you want . . . It depends what moves you . . . It depends on your soul . . . In Batman Year One, Part 3, Frank Miller and David Mazzucchelli's re-telling of Batman's past, on DC comics, you turn immediately to a swarm of bats converging out of nowhere; a seething mass against a white sky and an orange moon, Batman, unseen, is hunted by police. "They've got him cornered, They've got him outnumbered, They've got him trapped. They're in TROUBLE." And then your head falls off. The problem with many of the more independent comics face is of course a dearth of similarly imaginative writers or artists. Many of the comics merely look scrappy, some have good stories but poor artwork, or vice versa.

First up is the legendary Gene Vincent session introduced by Stuart Colman which became Vincent's last ever recording. Expect Be-Bop-A-Lula again but the real potato is Distant Drums, unavailable elsewhere except on hideously AM-radio whistle-infested bootlegs. At least the Gene Vincent Fan Club can now stop petitioning the BBC.

The first man in leather should be turning up again alongside Marc Bolan, Syd Barrett and Jethro Tull sessions in Strange Fruit's first pre-1977 archive retrieval. All are pending confirmation but are pencilled in to follow March's half-dozen (The Slits, Siouxsie And The Banshees, Birthday Party, Spizz Oil, The Specials and Stump) and April's shower; The June Brides (from Oct 1985), Culture (Dec 1982) Yeah Yeah Noh (Jan 1986) and The Prefects (Jan 1979).

Buy them all if you can afford it; where else will you find a vital and comprehensive guide to modern Western music without dealing with any suspect door-to-door salesman?

● More news; next week in issue one of Underground, we'll be outlining a super huge competition where one lucky person can win the first 50 Strange Fruit Peel Sessions. Tune in for details.

The Slits in typical Peel seah gear

In a courageous move to map out the future of the mid-North as we know and love it, In Tape have posted a bulletin about their plans and releases up to June. Sadly no mention of boating trips to the Norfolk broads or any other such exciting news . . . we'll have to make do with March's selection of releases which include a 7 and 12 inch from Zor Gabor — featuring ex-Banshee John McKay, plus a 7 and 12 from The Hearthrobs called Toy. Not to be outdone, Frank Sidebottom releases a 7 inch only entitled Tribute To Queen. ■ In April the scam is pretty much the same with Frank hitting it on 7 and 12 with If You Really Love Me Buy Me A Shirt. This activity will be preceded by newies from Gaye Bykers On Acid, Rote Kapelle and Family Fantastic, a new single from The Janitors. And, if we've got any pocket money left as we head off into May, there'll be new things from ex-Weeds person Andrew Berry, The Bargepoles (formerly Implied Consent), The Creepers and Terry And Gerry. More news as it makes plastic.

It's nearly a decade since Trojan Records instigated their Trojan Explosion maxi-singles series of in demand reggae titles and now the company have compiled some of these on one LP entitled Reggae Explosion which is released this month (through PRT and Jetstar).

Containing 20 tracks, the album concentrates on material recorded between 1966-72 and features mostly often anthologised sides like Desmond Dekker's You Can Get It If You Really Want and 007, Harry J All Stars' Liquidator, The Upsetters' Return Of Django as well as contributions from The Wallers, The Maytals, The Melodians, The Ethiopians, The Pioneers, Jimmy Cliff, Boris Gardiner and more.

Premier German tin-bashers Ein-sturzende Neubauten are currently in rehearsal in Hamburg, where they are preparing to provide the music for a new Peter Zadek play, Andy, which opens at the city's main theatre Schausspielhaus, on March 3. ■ The play tells the story of a 15 year old German boy and his life in Hamburg. He was shot three years ago, and the story first ran in Stern as a sequel to Christiane F, which was later made into a film. ■ It will be Zadek's last play for the prestigious theatre company, and he says his aim is to turn the famous theatre into a brothel. Neubauten will be providing the music live each night, and the play is expected to run until May.

But, Superheroes are largely a no-go area today, and a complete bore anyway, so why bother? Indie companies thankfully err towards the "character" side of things, and long-running stories, of which Comico's Grendel is certainly one of the more remarkable, and genuinely sinister. Originally a back-up strip in Matt Wagner's stunning Mage series, Grendel is now a regular series in its own right and definitely a prickly read. It concerns journalist Christine Parr, and the kidnapping, abducting and killing of her son by a travelling Kabuki performer. In the guise of her father's old alter-ego, the battling killer Grendel, she is out seeking revenge, compelled and revolved by the cunning Tyjuo who keeps the eyes of his victims in phials, a gruesome collection!

"If you like your stories sick and twisted," Comico suggest, "keep reading Grendel . . . it gets better as it gets worse."

Gu! Strong rumours persist that it will also be made into a movie.

Pointy breasts, protuberant enough to turn throats dry, flaunt themselves along with their butchery cohorts throughout Ex-Mutants, an amazingly drab Amazing Comics affair. If you mix sorcery, imagery, mutants, adventurous heroes and titanic struggles it naturally follows that bra-strings must be weak.

With many a mesmerising mammary in sight, or a eyestraining groin, we can take refuge inside perhaps the cutest coloured comic of late, Jonny Quest, Comico's young protagonist with the scientist father, cheeky dog and peculiar turbaned colleague pitting their shady wits against shadier space alien adversaries. Farty torpid stories in part but Ken Steacy's visual style smears everything with brilliance.

Strength in character, visual carresses, and storywriting depth. That's what you expect from these indies. Or just the plain awkward, sweet and downright dangerously deranged. Fusion, Eclipse's latent space fantasy narries together alien 'animal' and 'human' form on their mission. Quite what that is we haven't learnt yet. They've been inebrated. Against the scattered style of this story is a stunning back-up, Dr Watchstop worthy of the greatest 8000AD 'Patriot Shocks', whereby a common planet occupant tricks a saviour of 'rare' species to whisk him away to a life of luxury as a unique and endangered specimen. Maybe that's why Matt Johnson often looks so circumspect.

Lloyd Lewellyn, dubious dude of the Fantagraphics stable, is from the jazz-age period. His habit of doings are a cooler counterpoint of Eclipse's Stig's Inferno, where naggingly normal abnormalities juggle with your trusting humour. Brain-bending. Mind-washing. That's what it's all about. And there's so much of it!

I don't know, first Ish and Tragic Venus got slated in the tape review section. QUOTE OF THE MONTH: Bill Prince from The Wishing Stones: "Yeah, Tom Verlaine went downhill after Little Jonny Jewel."

An odder than strange concoction featuring an ex-Monochrome Set and an ex-Zerra One, MY BABY'S ARM have shown up in a hauntingly demonic hue. A weird name, and an even weirder single on the Kasper label, through Rough Trade, looks set to thrust them into the hearts of the public. Hung In The Playground features a moody show of bravado tipped with a cool and sweet chorus line.

Unicorn have a batch of new stuff ready to roll and they'll be kicking off during March with a compilation called Unicorn One featuring diverse tracks from both sides of the Atlantic from The Purple Hearts, The Gents, The Toasters, The Outlets, The Pictures and more. Hot on its heels will be an album called The Golden Age from The Key (whose average age is a mere 16).

Punk primadonnas or poets in residence? The Dead Kennedys have their classy California Uber Alles re-released by Fast Product in 12 inch format.

Oh my God. It's the tenth anniversary of Spizz. Yes, within gobbing distance of last year's soporific 42 part punk retrospectives in lots of muso papers (check out the Underground 24 page history of independent singles given away free with ISSUE ONE of UG, next week), Spizz — the man who was Oil, Energi, Athletico and claims to be currently Sexual — celebrates his 10th anniversary in Shadowplay magazine (PO Box 10, Rainham, Essex — a mere quid including p&p and it comes with a four track cassette).

THE Welsh invasion of our stereo systems continues with the Anhrefn label being followed by an angry six track seven incher featuring six Welsh punk bands. Entitled The First Cuts Are The Deepest, it features Classified Protest, Eifyn Presli, The Heretics, Yr Anhrefn, I Mobster and The Bugs. It's on the Words Of Warning label and it's through Revolver and the Cartel.

Hot poop ... As Jih follow up their Jungle 45, Big Blue Ocean produced by Dave Ball, with a collaboration between Jih and former Associates man-about-town Billy McKenzie. Watch this space for details.

Sketchy plans from Probe Plus Following the tear jerking demise of Half Man Half Biscuit and their subsequent return to their local DHSS office, Probe Plus drown their sorrows with a brace of new platters. Coming soon, claims the tear-blemished missive, a mini-LP from The Tractors, a new 12 inch from Jegsy Dodd And The Sons Of Harry Cross called Look At Life and The Walking Seeds' 12 inch Look At Death. Pretty organised and conceptual, eh? ● And there's more ... from Northern Ireland, Probe will bring us, "the best band in Northern Ireland", yes, it's St Vitus Dance. But, will Trumpton ever be the same again?

And, record title of the month must go to Crazyhead whose What Gives You The Idea You're So Amazing, Baby? (on Food through Rough Trade) has a lot of words in it. The five smelly urchins who perpetrate such noisy symphonies come from Leicester and, after demolishing the ICA Rock Week in a show of greasy rock aggression, they'll be hammering into a wall near you before too long.

A CERTAIN RATIO

Live In America

Dojo DOJOLP 47

NM C ...

1985 US live set that sees A Certain Ratio torn between the devil's jazz and the deep blue hue of their excellent avant-funk. This is a band I have loved and hated between releases. I thought it improbable that they'd recapture the disarming grooviness of their Graveyard And Ballroom first steps, but this live show certainly underlines their breadth and vision. Still teetering on the edge of jazz funk tedium on one occasion, ACR do all the right things at just the right time for just enough of the time. Know what I mean? Dave Henderson

PHILLIP BOA AND THE VOODOO CLUB

Aristocracies

Red Flame RF 52

NM C ...

Crazy man, Phillip. Aristocracies once again tames the unchained beast of rhythm, twisting Third World funk, beatpop and experimental daring into new cut-out shapes. It's hard to fathom why the man from Germany is still a marginal because he really has mastered the commercial world — that's in commercial and inventive. Gag of the decade, sure, but here is the modern dance. Come and get it. Martin Aston

JUNIOR BRAMMER

John Dread JDPL003

Je ..

For more than ten years the man called Trinity was one of the foremost reggae D.J.s, with scores of singles and disco releases and some two dozen albums to his name. Recently he has begun singing in more traditional style and now goes under the name Junior Brammer. His role model is obviously Dennis Brown and he adapts the other's style most pleasingly on this present set, paying tribute to popular bastions of reggae music such as the Peoples Club and Four Aces on Let Me Love You, and detailing the vagaries of Frontline hustling with Dread Special, a tune set to a reworking of the Sleng Teng rhythm to interesting ends. Evelyn Court

CHUMBAWAMBA

Starvation, Charity And Rock 'N' Roll

Aqit Prop PROP 1

RR C ..

An independent chart top fiver from its first faltering steps before Christmas, Chumbawamba's outspoken prose and points of view nestle neatly in some fine music. For the uninitiated, the Chumba's might come on as a little loopy but, get past the sensibly correct facade and you'll discover some fine music and some, or, pretty loopy people. A classic for a distorted and disturbed generation whose consciences are cleared by the love of Bob. But, deep down, there's a deeper dig going on. Dave Henderson

In this special collectable-most-desirable-slim-Jim hip pocket issue, though, our team of vinyl vultures rant endlessly about what's been available since the end of '86 and is still racking in the high street and available for your hi-fi. It goes like this...

THE CREEPERS

Miserable Sinners

In Tape IT 39

RR C ...

Marc Riley's love of Eno variations and mutated pop coupled with time in The Fall and a general wealth of experience in being an independent son has led him into the production of this marvy album. A sound statement of popiness with the odd interlude of uncontrollable power.

The cover of Eno's Baby's On Fire is breathtaking, and the excellent Old Man's Treat is brimming with sexually explicit hip swinging that makes Elv look mucho bland in hindsight. A crusty epic indeed. Dave Henderson

COIL

Horse Rotovator

Force And Form/K.422

RT C ...

After sloganeering their revival as "We've got an uncontrollable dirge", Coil emerge from the cupboard of discontent, following their pleasingly excitable Scatology LP, with a rather splendid new album. Teetering in the wee small hours of an irreverent Saturday night, this is the perfect mix of film noir (New Yawk street cop) and gothic horror monstrosity, steeped in English classicism. Beautifully structured, Horse Rotovator lapses into an almost Almond-esque wilderness that has remained underdog for aeons. Here Coil flex their muscles and produce nightmarish pop for inebriated purists. These are the sounds of Victorian Britain gently stretched through a Revox rack. The gas light flickers on. Dave Henderson

DJ JAZZY JEFF AND FRESH PRINCE

Licensed from Word Up in the States, this leather-capped scratch-and-mix special hangs loose on the plug side Girls Ain't Nothing But Trouble, which has become a catchy cut through its TV theme mix over. But ho! Sexist claimants hang ten, as Jeff and Prince acquit their dubious prose with more than a smattering of sexual fantasies rapped and delivered with humour-injected aplomb. There's even room here to turn the tables with Guys Ain't Nothing But Trouble while still keeping the tempo and quality on the up and up. A Walkman must, Rock The House never threatens the future of A-bomb life as we know and fear it, but it lines up with the title and still manages to catch breath. TC Wall

DEAD KENNEDYS

Bedtime For Democracy

Alternative Tentacles

RT C ●●

The band split shortly after this chart-topping indie monster, and it's a fitting epitaph to Jello Biafra's agi-punk thrashing. The 21 songs included never fail to motor at anything less than 100mph in true Kennedy fashion, and although the lyrical and musical content is crude, it is also potent and effective. Like Jello says in one song though, "punk deserves to die when it becomes just another stale cartoon" — The Kennedys were always much more than a cartoon and they will be missed. This record is one of the USA's more valid contributions to modern culture. Julian Henry

THE EASTERN DARK

Long Live The New Flesh

What Goes On WGO 127

RT C Sh ●●

Singer and writer James Durroch was killed in a car crash just hours after the final mix of this mini-album. The Eastern Dark may have been after legendary status but only because of their tangled, fluorescent guitar rock. Touching on prime time Blue Oyster Cult and recent Died Pretty territory, Long Live . . . is a searing indictment of Radio Free Australia; it's trad but with a lot of space and time on its side. But not for James Durroch. A white-hot record. Martin Aston

HOLGER CZUKAY

Rome Remains Rome

Virgin V2408

Finally, after some three year's wait, Holger follows up his superb Der Osten Ist Rot (The East Is Red) with a new LP — and (Coleman voice:) what an ethereal package he's come up with. Holger's always presented us with a patchwork of ideas and influences, but this LP has more musical squares tacked loosely together than an Oxfam blanket. And thankfully, too, because each component of Rome Remains Rome presents a variety of styles and ideas which remain interesting and fresh throughout, while still presenting a colourful whole. Of course, as the title suggests, there is a loose central thread running through, hinged around a sort of Spitting Image Pope. He, along with his Swinging Nuns, aids in the exorcism of songs like Blessed Easter, a mystically hipswaying number that merges religious overtures with a sensual backbeat. Holger's mushrooming influence is likely to increase with this, perforated as it is by Jah Wobble's insistent basslines, and illuminated by Czukay's own irreverence. What it won't do is mainstream him in any way, and while the cheers of his fans rebound for that, it remains unfortunate that the byproduct is his continuing invisibility to the world at large. Carole Linfield

Don't mess with these boys, they mean business — I Want Everything, I Want You, I'm Unsatisfied — see what I mean? Three titles from this "singles so far" package which is solid evidence, m'lud, that this tight-lipped, determined London five-piece are establishing a track record to prove it. Also included is their second and now deleted single, This Damn Nation, possibly their finest three mins to date, with searing lead guitar calculated to pick you up and throw you against the nearest wall (ouch). Combining Canvey Island R&B with that venerable '60s institution, the garage, bands like The Godfathers are needed to sort out the UK pop charts once and for all. Capisce? Karen Kent

HALF MAN HALF BISCUIT

Back In The DHSS Again

Probe PROBE 8

PR C ●●

Independent chart regulars, the Biccies have had their last crumble, and this posthumous collection commemorates some of their best moments coupled with some of their previously unreleased outbursts. As ever the comic level is high and it all makes for maximum smiles (without developing the dishevelled amateur approach of their debut album too much). A guaranteed populist record that should see a Half Man revival in around five year's time (when Tranmere move into the higher echelons of the super league). Dave Henderson

PETER HOPE AND THE JONATHAN S PODMORE METHOD

Dry Hip Rotation

RR C ●●●

Ex-Box front person shakes off the eccentric overcoat and gets totally wired. I've been lambasted for enthusing over some odd things in my time, and this even made me check my stylus. Not that the quality of sound is questionable, it's just that Hope and his reading of the genre are structured so provocatively. This is an exquisite work that suggests the man may soon have his own talk show on pirate TV. Any backers? Dave Henderson

HURRAH!

Tell God I'm Here

Kitchenware Arista 208201

If you want to blow a blast of fresh, powerful, unstagnated rock music through your speakers, then this is the band, and the LP, to do it with. Hurrah! are exciting, young, guitar-based, divinely uncomplicated; providing the world with a much needed resurgence of rock vitality and purity. Released through Arista, Hurrah! are still tied to the apron strings of Kitchenware, which will hopefully prevent them from being locomoted into the A-Ha league which, on the strength of their sublimely gut wrenching current single If Love Could Kill, could so easily happen. It would be a shame to waste such embryonic greatness for a quick five minutes on Saturday Superstore. All these ten tracks are self penned and have been waiting for the right conditions in which to be let loose on the world at large. The blissful Sweet Sanity, a previous, criminally ignored single; the agonised How High The Moon; the rousing I Would If I Could . . . every facet of their monstrous capabilities are explored. This LP has already been acclaimed elsewhere; do yourself a favour and seek it out. You may not miss it at your peril, but certainly at your cost. Carole Linfield

HÜSKER DÜ

Warehouse — Songs And Stories

Minneapolis' three wise monkeys of pop have issued a double album of some 20 songs following last year's sublime Candy Apple Grey long-player, with a renaissance explosion with nary a duff track in the lot. Still sounding like Ticket To Ride played through a compost heap, the DÜ(?) have continued their winning formula of driving, melodic pop delivered with a dynamism reminiscent of the heady days of early Jam. Standout tracks include the current single, Could You Be The One, Charity, Chastity, Prudence And Hope, and the epic closing cut You Can Live At Home Now, at 5.25 mins virtually a concept piece compared to the usual length of their songs. Completely brilliant. Karen Kent

GERARD LANGLEY AND IAN KEAREY

Siamese Boyfriends

Fire BLAZE 06

NM C ●●

A few dim-lit days and nights in a studio with a master guitarist and a poet with itchy lips might deliver a backslapping, overlapping din, but Siamese Boyfriends is an unassuming giant. Kearey of The Oyster Band, new crossover folk heroes, has a love of folk, Appalachian, blues and other idioms which allows him to join up the dots between Martin Carthy and Ry Cooder — brilliantly — while Blue Aeroplanes mentor Langley speaks the words — acerbic, knarled words with a gritty vision. Both know what the other is doing. Chance it. Martin Aston

LONG TALL TEXANS

Razor Records RAZ 23

P ●●

Is this rockabilly? It doesn't seem lunkheaded enough, because this talented trio disport themselves well, switching from the typical three gears with a simple beat, and instead opting to dip wildly into various paces and always with a snappy production and cool arrangements that generally work best when they're not off on their jaunty sprints. If you have to lurch about with a stupid haircut this might be the soundtrack of your wettest weekends. Pratninja

MICRODISNEY

Virgin V2415 ●●

It seems as if Microdisney have been wallowing around in the peripheries for an eternity. Yet they've shown rare patience and iron tenacity, have been out the sombre, post-punk monochrome sets, and have arrived in a musically bleak midwinter all full of smiles and summertime. Crooked Mile has finally given them a solid backbone, one which they seem certain to flesh out. The chart success of Town To Town aptly displays their melodic tendencies, which if anything grow meeker and more subtle as the LP proceeds, letting go of all pretensions and fashionability. This is gentle lust, a lullaby for the post AIDS generation. Carole Linfield

THE PASTELS

Up For A Bit With The Pastels

Glass GLALP 021

NM C ●●●

The Pastels are up for a bit of respect with this overdue debut and they've won it. The anti-shambling texture of this year's Pastels model is less coy, less awkward and possibly less endearing, but songs like Crawl Babies, If I Could Tell You and Get Around Town fluently grab toy orchestras, strings and heartstrings in a rejuvenated effort. Thank God The Pastels won't be getting upstaged. Martin Aston

PIANOSAURUS

Groovy Neighbourhood

New Rose ROSE 107

RT C ●●●

New Jersey wackos who've gone down in some dodgy combos over the years come up with the ultimate in tourist tat. Yes, Pianosaurus play toy pianos and guitars and probably have a drumming bunny thrown in for good measure. The sweet quality of this candy-coated confection is tasty though. Instead of drab ineffectiveness, the kids of P are kept in check and come in with actual songs. Maybe the melodies do consist of odd left-field ideas in places but Pianosaurus aren't scared to tangle with The Box Tops, Annette Funicello and The Beach Boys. Groovy Neighbourhood is pure bubblegum, the kind of album that The Residents should have made years ago. Dave Henderson

BIM SHERMAN

Haunting Ground

C ●●●

The creative impulse of singer Bim Sherman has maintained a consistent equilibrium in the dozen or so years since his first recordings. He has not spread himself too thinly during this time and, perhaps as a consequence of this, there is always a thoughtful grace to his work. His curious pitch of voice carries its own gentle momentum and this is suitably instructed here with sympathetically languid accompaniment from a mix of Dub Syndicate and Radians musicians, Sherman's customary force. Haunting Ground is an appropriate title for this evocative music. Evelyn Court

MICHELLE SHOCKED

The Texas Campfire Tapes

Cooking Vinyl Cook 002

RT C ●●●

Crickets singing, strings snapping, swimmers being attacked by killer sharks, it's all here as Michelle Shocked guides us through her folk repertoire invoking an intimacy that is as delightful as her songs. With the recording budget of a set of batteries, she communicates a deceptive innocence with songs like 5am In Amsterdam and (Don't You Mess Around) With My Little Sister, all wrapped up in a sickly-sweet Texan accent. With just an acoustic guitar, she has an innocence and an endearing lack of inhibition that just lets the melodies flow until the fire, or the batteries, die out. Michelle confirms that folk rock is set to make a big impact in the late '80s. Get those campfires going. Bernie Rose

SQUIRREL BAIT

Skag Heaven

Homestead HMS 072

Sh RT C ●●●

It's always nice to have energy creep up over your shoulders like a living, breathing carpet and Squirrel Bait have so successfully stewed their potent body-building, bone-scraping sounds that you slip into the sound more than listening, there to be pummelled into the nearest casualty unit when least expected. The guitars mellow out of their more angst-ridden stages to double back and raid your spinal fluid with compressing action. A form of music which lacks the quite tedious excesses of the Arsehole Stuffers and their reprehensible art-folk dirge. This is clever because it's crafted, in a natural manner, where bands who go for glory in guts don't usually get any further than their playpens in the dark. Squirrel Bait are like a rag-doll version of Big Black embedded in a decibel romance. Pratninja

CDI

RT Sb C ●●

A reasonably priced addition to the CD shelf for those aspiring sound structuralists who've been bored to tears by the bland Tangerine Dream, Kitaro and endless imminent Beatles releases in the genre. CD1 is a previously unreleased symphony in sound created by TG circa '79. Recorded on 8 track it lacks some of the clout of digital production but it's chocful of ideas and interesting twists. In Mute's move to re-educate the world in terms of TG development, it's just the tip of an iceberg that'll include their previous four Industrial Records. They're LPs heading for a big thaw near you . . . soon. Dave Henderson

Twenty track mix down of all you've ever wanted to know about electro and hip hop that transcends its earlier dodgy days and introduces the listener to the newer, more pertinent, profound and effects — heavy teams. Excellent in places, awful elsewhere, this is Streetsounds' last will and testament before the big bank manager in the sky took back their blotter. With prime cuts from DJ Jazzy Jeff & Fresh Prince, Duke Bootee and D.ST. Dave Henderson

P ●●●

If pop is meant to be irreverent, beguiling, glamorous, avaricious, arrogant, melodic, memorable and discontented, then the él label is pop music. Except pop is meant to sell records. This sampler of él, circa 1986, is the best way to get introduced to the cast of divine eccentrics and the way él has recaptured some of the essence of pop the chameleon — from the camp (Marden Hill, Cagliostra), to the hit parade art of The King Of Luxembourg, Bid and Anthony Adverse and back. Don't forget, too, the almost straight melodic seduction of Gol Gappas, Always and Rosemary's Children. If you like your music enlightened by character, take London Pavilion at least once a day, and keep paying attention. Martin Aston

WISEBLOOD

Dirtish

RT C ●●

A sweaty union between Clint Foetus and Roli Swan in an ever expanding do-deca-hedra of family inbreeding associated with Some Bizzare. The result is a bastard child for the mutahnt sideswipe of Cap'n Beefcake and Jim Morrison. This, of course, would take place through a confessional vent. But really, Wiseblood offer sex music with dirgey blues thrown in for good measure — imagine The Swans in overdrive or The Dead Kennedys singin' the Hank Williams songbook. Pretty interesting, I'd say. Dave Henderson

Retrospective

| Anka AV002STLP

Je

A strong collection of songs from the ever thoughtful Andy culled from an assortment of sides originally released in singles form between 1970-75. Even the dignified monochrome photograph of the singer which adorns the sleeve is a faithful reflection of the music within. As both composer and singer Bob Andy attends to each nuance of his songs with painstaking deliberation, and the perfection for which he strives he very nearly attains, on tracks like Life, Rock It Down, Desperate Lover and Let Them Say. A most rewarding listen. Evelyn Court

THE CADETS/THE JACKS

The Cadets Meet The Jacks

Ace Records CH 197

P

Classic mid '50s vocal group rock 'n' roll. There was a vocal group called The Jacks who also recorded cover versions of other group's records under the name of The Cadets. Or maybe it was the other way around, music historians aren't sure which came first — very confusing. The biggest hit for them though was under The Cadets moniker, a novelty rocker (subsequently covered by The New York Dolls) titled Stranded In The Jungle which scored in the US R&B charts — and pop charts, something coloured acts didn't often do in 1956. Also included here is the similar sounding Love Bandit and interesting versions of Heartbreak Hotel and Sixty Minute Man re-titled Dancin' Dan . . . Snakey G

JIMMY DONLEY

Give Me My Freedom

Ch

This guy was a tragic case. What he went through in the early part of his life is a psychoanalyst's nightmare/delight (depending on which way you look at it). From a poor area of Mississippi he started his recording days in 1957. He is as much a legend in the Southern States of America as other Swamp Pop heroes such as Jivin' Gene and Johnnie Allan (who, incidentally, wrote the sleeve notes and has a book on Jimmy to follow). A brilliant and prolific song writer, he wrote four hits for Fats Domino, but sadly his main inspirations were his wife whom he 'physically abused' and his devoted mother whose death in 1962 indirectly caused him to take his own life a year later. Snakey G

THE IKETTES

Fine Fine Fine

P

One time female backing group with the Ike & Tina Turner revue display a selection of their own material for the Modern label in the mid-'60s. The set omits their stunning Atlantic side I'm Blue (The Gong Gong Gong Song) but very nearly justifies its price by including the memorable I'm So Thankful and left-fielder Camel Walk Blue On Blue. For the rest, lightweight Motownesque pop of some charm. Evelyn Court

LITTLE RICHARD, BILLY WRIGHT AND THE TEMPO TOPPERS

Hey Baby, Don't You Want A Man Like Me?

P

Little Richard and Billy Wright were two of the most colourful, dare I say 'campiest', characters on the early to mid '50s R&B scene. Both having performed with pancake make-up and eyeliner, outrageous hair styles and, so legend has it, in frocks as well! In 1953 Little Richard was lead vocalist with The Tempo Toppers who have five tracks included here. All early '50s Peacock recordings, there are even tracks here with Little Richard being backed by The Johnny Otis Orchestra, vibes 'n' all. Richard was with the label in the years between leaving RCA and signing to Specialty! — a kicking from label boss Don Robey being the main reason for the change. Billy Wright & Orchestra were on the way out, popularity wise, when they signed to Peacock, having had several R&B hits for Savoy. A very underrated artist, often cited by Little Richard as his major influence. There are four unreleased tracks here, so it's quite a historic release as well as being great, big band R&B. Snakey G

JERRY McCAIN

Midnight Beat

Charly CRB 1148

Ch

Although known as a harmonica player whose biggest successes were instrumentals, Mr McCain also had a very versatile voice that was at home in any style of R&B. Born in Alabama, his career in music started in the mid '50s, recording for Trumpet and OKeh among others. His early recordings were some of the rawest R&B you could find — Cutie Named Judie and My Next Door Neighbour have to be heard to be believed! The recordings on this LP are from much later though, from the period he was signed to Jewel Records (1965-67). His style by then had smoothed out, becoming very slick and varied. The song She's Crazy 'bout Entertainers is well worth a listen, Jerry singing about his wife who turns groupie and goes off bonking the likes of James Brown — a whole host of stars of the time are mentioned. Snakey G

The Blues Is Alright Volume II

Malaco MAL LP0010 Ch

Ch ●●●

The Blues is alright certainly and in careful, capable hands if the material collected here is any gauge. And with contributions from such as Z Z Hill, Johnnie Taylor, Latimore, Denise LaSalle it's as much a synthesis of Deep South deep soul as anything, hardly differing from the kind of sides producer Jerry Ragovy was contriving with Garnett Mimms And The Enchanters and Howard Tate in the mid '60s. What trace of the bar blues does exist is dressed up in suave, sassy arrangements, with the lowdown, downhome sound disappeared for good, although B B King and Little Milton are links with an earlier tradition and Bobby Bland's always sounded this way anyway. For as McKinley Mitchell says here, "the blues ain't nothing but a man in the wilderness looking for his baby", while Johnnie Taylor maintains "people got money, still got problems, anyway you look at it still called the blues". Evelyn Court

This is the myth:

STITCHED BACK FOOT AIRMAN are a bunch of funsters who wear terribly loud shirts and release records with humorous titles. They sing about toy dogs and mumble things about cash registers and criminal records. SBFA are like early Julian Cope, Pink Floyd, The Monkees and early everything else. SBFA are 'arty bastards' with 'a touch of innocent genius'.

This is the truth: Stitches Back Foot Airman are getting pretty pissed off with this misrepresentation! So is there more to the band than just this oddball element with which we have been presented?

Simon: "Oh yeah, we try to play that down — when we get reviewed they don't mention the music. They mention our shirts which is just ridiculous really. People have made comments about our lyrics which just showed that they obviously hadn't listened to the words. It's a bit annoying when that happens in reviews."

Mike: "Especially when we're called 'wacky' because a lot of our words aren't just throwaway. We take a lot of time over them."

Robin: "But it's inevitable really — and of course it's eye-catching copy. SBFA have been noted for their tendency to swap over instruments while on stage. That's a bit wacky isn't it?"

The Airman are bound for bigger things but wouldn't they be forced into a compromise of their values if they became a household name?

Simon: "Yes, that's inevitable. You wouldn't be able to carry on in the same way."

And, your new single, Wouldn't You Like To Know The Stitches Back Foot Airman, is that your bid for fame?

Simon: "Ha! I suppose it is in a way."

Robin: "To be honest, though, we're just going to carry on in the same way as we always have and I can't really see that making us a household name! Unless people find the music so appealing that they just can't resist it!"

Wouldn't you like to know The Stitches Back Foot Airman? Of course you would and in the words of the great men themselves: "Shake-up all you casuals. Wake up!"

The Stitches Back Foot Airman are on Very Mouth and their other release is a 12 inch Egg Timing Greats. It's a cracker.

Baxter: "Me and Ron spent New Year's Eve at a holiday camp in Somerset and at midnight this little old lady between us gurgled, 'Ooh! I'm in the middle of two big boys'."

So that's how you got your name?

"Well, no, it's a '60s porno term for large mammary glands, Sharon Tate said it in Valley Of The Dolls — 'Don't worry about me sugar, I've got ma two big boys to support me'."

TWO BIG BOYS like to dish out references.

"Our aim is to both aurally and visually stimulate the audience via a backdrop of films and slides by Man Ray, Jean Genet, Hans Richter, Warhol RIP and Russ Meyer. A surreal environment injected with '60s tack. A multi-textured entertainment."

Ron and Stella are vocal opposites who fracture then melt together in haunting, gliding harmonies that weave a sultry spell over the psychedelic-pop backing of Harry Day's bass and Baxter Martin's sleazy sax drone. Two Big Boys (and a big girl's blouse) release their debut single Monkeys On Smack very soon. Art, smart or just. . .

THE BLACK ANGLIAS Four young men determined to re-create the sound of one of our most important bands, The Shadows. Armed only with bass, drums, a Telecaster and obligatory Strat they're ready to take on the world. Clad in heavy leathers, polo-necks, shades and a neat line in formation stumbling they're quite a sight live, storming into terrifyingly accurate versions of The Cruel Sea, Slaughter On Tenth Avenue and Walk Don't Run. Occasionally graced by the presence of ex-Kursaal Will Birch on drums, go and see them as soon as possible, you know that Hank would be proud of you

THE WILD BUNCH are Miles and Nellee, a two piece from Bristol whose particular brand of hip-hop is set to burn down a few dance halls this year. They've been together for three years and have used the time to create a superb sound. Their first single, which has just been snapped up by 4th & Broadway, is a double sider with the very hard The Avenue depicting the perils of night-life in Bristol.

But the real peach is a lovers rock version of Herb Alpert's Look Of Love. It features the voice of Shara (who's had a couple of independent soul records out herself) and will be an essential buy. In the meantime the boys have managed to salvage an unspeakable Morgan McVey track with a steaming remix that is actually worth looking out for.

five piece consisting of Rockman Rock, King Boy D. Nigerian born Chike and Lovers rock duo Burning Illusion, they've got a white label rap-a-long beatbox 45 that's got more than an inch of Beatles' circa All You Need Is Love tied up in there too. The whole affair is mysterious, a telephone number only and a threat that the group will soon be releasing more material.

"No, we've not been in bands before, and, yes, I suppose we were originally influenced by The Beastie Boys to actually get up and do something. I mean, if you were 15 and living in America you'd be getting up and doing something after hearing The Beastie Boys."

Too true. But these colonials seem a touch wiser, world weary a bit, but not angry . . .

"We're not like Crass in that kind of way, but we're into ripping things off, we're into saying what we want to say."

And the title of the album?

"Oh, 1987, What The F's Going On?"

And distribution?

"Well, we approached Rough Trade but they've not said anything yet."

Voice Of The Beehive have just released their first single, Just A City, on Food Records. They're going to be big news, coast to coast, but the question is, who are Voice Of The Beehive?

John Best gets the scam
Rod Clark takes the pix

History of the beehive by Julian Henry

The mark one proto-type beehive modelled by Dionne Warwick along with immaculate dental work and perfect go-go pose.

The 'beehive high rise'. The Ronettes achieve multi-story status by climbing on each other's shoulders.

Henderson is speaking: "Go forth into the streets of this great city," he says, like some cheap Biblical bitpart. "Seek out the ones who call themselves Voice Of The Beehive, and find out who they are." You can see why he's editor, I think to myself. So I go, and mere nanoseconds later on the geological clock, I'm in this pub in Camden, face-to-face with two girls and two boys, mouthing the words "who the f are Voice Of The Beehive?"

"We are," they rejoin. I breathe a hefty sigh of relief — found 'em! And, er, who are "we"?

Missing is Mark "Bedders" Bedford, also recently emerged from a state of Madness, and the man VOTB call Mr Bassman, because he, er, plays the bass.

So enough of this jolly banter, I say, how come none of you, girls or boys, have a beehive to call your own? "I'm working on it," proffers Tracey, a little apologetically. "I'm trying to get the record company to give me a little bit of money to get some kind of beehive made, but wigs are so expensive I think I'm going to have to learn to tease my own hair."

At this point I think it's worth stopping to more fully introduce, more fully appreciate, our heroines. LA women and diamond (albeit, paste) girls, the pair of them; they came to London in search of Quadrophonia, and still think it would be neat to lie and say they were scooter girls back home.

When they open their mouths to talk, they're killing; effortlessly witty, backstreet Bette Midlers, if they weren't on the stage already, I say to them, I'd have to suggest they got on it pretty damn sharpish.

When she opens her mouth to talk, Melissa displays a missing molar that this very morning threw in its little toothy towel just as she was having a frank exchange of views with those nice people at Heathrow immigration.

When they open their mouths to sing, they're some fledgling embodiment of classic pop; beyond the need for justification in the way The B-52's and Blondie are. The latest in some kind of long line of delineation that runs from The Shangrilas through The Ronettes down to Harry's mob and beyond. Why, Henderson has even suggested they could be the next Bangles.

"The who? I'm sorry I don't believe I'm familiar with that name. Are they a band or something?"

Feigning ignorance is, the Beehives understand, a far more caustic commentary than any cheap mud slinging.

But, what do they want to be? "We want to be like Madness, The B-52's (aha!), Bow Wow Wow . . . great pop with a real sense of humour." Is there a gap in the marketplace (man) for that kind of thing right now? I ask like some particularly feeble-minded kind of pondweed. "Is there a gap?" Woody, quite rightly incredulous. "The whole market's a gap, isn't it?"

Sometime around this point, Tracey takes my specially prepared sheet of buzzwords (beehive? buzzwords? no, alright then please y'selves) to see what she wants to answer.

"Girl-meets-boy for the self-aware," she reads — well it was just a passing thought! — "I like that. Girl-meets-boy for the self-conscious, maybe," she decides.

Whatever, for a band tapping some classic, disposable pop vein, Tracey's words (Melissa and Mike also write) display some neat erudition and fine, fine sentiments. Check this, dear reader, do:

"Girls lie to boys, and boys lie to girls. He says he's been at the office, papers up to here . . . but he smells of beer. She says it's OK, he thinks she doesn't know . . . women always know. I'm gonna be the one to break all of those rules, I think those people are fools. What good is the truth if you never use it?" — Trust Me.

Pearl-ettes on domestic disharmony worthy of a young Costello, written with the full glorious arrogance of innocence, and the thumping backbeat of a Running Bear — a truly waist-up: waist-down experience. And don't start me off on The Things You See When You Don't Have Your Gun, or I'll never shut up!

Back with the buzzwords, we're at "feminism." "Oh, don't ask us that," they plead, and, not wishing to be a dullard, I suggest we try "boys" instead. "Hang on a minute," chimes in Woody. "Why do interviewers always ask girl groups these sort of questions? Would you ask an all-boy group that sort of thing?" I humbly submit that I probably would, and anyway, Tracey and Melissa are cooing that they want to talk boys.

Melissa likes 'em skinny and wild, Julian Cope-like, Zodiac Mindwarp-esque or Steve Mack-ish — could this be why they do it's A Good Thing live? Tracey's less directly forthcoming, but perhaps being older, seems to prefer a more, uh, manly man. Oh, and they did take Microdisney drummer Tom Fenner surfing with them in California over Christmas. That Petrol Emotion and Microdisney are two of VOTB's favourite groups.

And, to prove serendipity's a reality as well as a nice word to say, two nights after our Camden rendezvous, VOTB played their biggest gig ever, third on the bill to Microdisney at London's Astoria. The A&R men who hadn't already wined and dined them (not many) were there, wondering what price promotion from plucky independent Food?

"It's been great, we spent a whole week going to different restaurants every day. We'd rise around 11, and every day a different car would come and whisk us off somewhere else to see another label." At the time of writing the Japanese meal would appear to be odds-on favourite.

But with all the press and major label attention aren't they afraid of being analysed out of all existence; losing the very perfect imperfection that makes them so loveable?

"Yeah, we're very aware of that, that's what happened to the Shop Assistants" . . . and, to my mind, Fuzzbox, with whom the Beehives share an intuitive, total, and oh-so-fragile glamour, beyond the ken of yer average marketing mind. Unlike Fuzzbox, though, VOTB also have the songs.

Woody, why is there all this interest? Is it because they're girls, because of you and Bedders, or because of the (fab 'n' groovy) songs? "The songs, the songs. They've got such great songs; everyone knows they're just the best band to come through in such a long time."

All I know is that when I hear the sound of their honeyed voices in such edible unison (almost like The Roches (!) "Yes, I like them," Tracey) it's such a dizzy pleasure, I don't have to think, I just like.

One last buzzword: "fame". Tracey: "Great TV show." Woody: "Great record, one of Bowie's best. No, really, fame doesn't really exist. I supposedly experienced it to some extent, and it has no real impact on the person you are, or the way you live your life. The only way I ever knew anyone knew who I was was when I saw my name in print." That, it would appear, is about as tangible as it gets. Melissa? "I can't predict what's going to happen in the next 15 minutes!"

One thing that will happen — indeed, has, by the time you read this — is that VOTB will release their very first record, a single, Just A City/I Walk This Earth, on Andy Ross and David Balfe's aforementioned Food label.

VOTB would have you believe their name comes from some book or other about "the democratic organisation of a beehive". This is, of course, all crap put together afterwards to offset the fact that they all gave their hearts years ago to Queen Bee-52 Cindy Wilson . . . prepare to give yours, honeychild.

AT THEIR

Dusty Springfield struts her stuff with a junior beehive, still in the early stages of construction.

Kate Pierson of the B-52's becomes upwardly mobile, though this impressive bouffant is in fact a wig.

They called her The Queen Of The Beehive. Marl Wilson's singing career has never been the same since the day she forsook her beehive for a standard trendy 1980s perm.

The Subterranean label from San Francisco was started at the tail end of the '70s and has developed a catalogue of more than 50 essential releases during its colourful career. As well as records on their own label, the Subterranean network has evolved through mail order handling of labels such as Alternative Tentacles (Dead Kennedys, Tragic Mulatto, early Butthole Surfers and more), Thermidor (SPK, Nig-Heist, XX Committee, Toiling Midgets), the Italian Diavlyery Productions (Jonee Jonee, Plath), Modern Masters (Arkansaw Man) and one-off material from Factrix, Sun City Girls, Glorious Din, Negativland and many more. • Regular newsletters from their 577 Valencia, San Francisco, CA 944110, USA address also list numerous fanzines, posters, videos and other paraphernalia of interest. All in all, they're well worth contacting for news, information and vinyl of international importance.

Latest newsletter from the label acclaims the new live Flipper double and threatens, soon to be released, delights from Polkacide (San Fran's punk/polka crew with 13 thrashed out originals), The Longshoremen's Walk The Plank (their second album for the label), Controlled Bleeding's Core (a fusion of jazz, electronic and industrial sound, and finally A31's Ruins Of America featuring Flipper's Will Shatter and various other rowdy musicians.

CHROME should have been bigger than... well, they should at least have had the kind of mass acceptance that Devo and Pere Ubu originally grabbed for their strange rock readings split between dirty, filthy pop and electronic dirginess. One of Subterranean's legendary releases was the six album box set which featured previously unreleased material from the pens of Helios Creed, Damon Edge, and Hilary and John Stench. • In the UK they turned up on Don't Fall Off The Mountain, Red Records and Beggars Banquet, but it's more than likely that these releases are deleted now.

FLIPPER's rise to infamy through hardcore notoriety was further enhanced with the release of their superb Gone Fishin' album (recently picked up for UK distribution through Fundamental via Red Rhino and the Cartel). Their aggressive tampered with sounds are close in kinship to the Butthole's and Swans while still retaining a unique edge which is all their own. Internal friction has left them in a state of fatal disagreement but there's a live double (also out through Fundamental here) showing their most dishevelled hours replete with game and fold out sleeve. Oh yes, go get it.

JOE POP-O-PIE is the oddball personified. His Joe's Third Record features the man himself on vocals, harmonica and the odd keyboard. A true left-fielder it was recorded between 8pm and 10am on April 2, 1985 and features distorted versions (sometimes totally backwards) of both I Am The Walrus and Sugar Magnolia. As for the other tracks, Joe wrote them himself and throughout this Flipper go metal, Jonathan Richman on the wild side collection the onus is on fun (and no overdubs).

THE LONGSHOREMEN have a brand of psychologically unsound hipness that could grasp an intrusive journo by the scruff of his giro and make him write a book in biro. These persons throw Kerouac on the fire and hit the road for keeps. Bet they've got holes in the elbows of their sweaters too.

SO, WHAT'S NEW?

From issue one there'll be seven more good reasons to grab a copy of Underground with our specialist contributors telling you all about the life and times of everything from mod and psychedelia to re-issues, rockabilly and the loudest of the loud.

QUIPHOLA... and other silly haircuts
For the fact hungry rockabilly, psychobilly and generally winkle-picking honcho, Snakey G will be putting together the best of what the rest detest with an added slurp of Brylcreem, a nod to the eternally elite, the collector at heart and the man with the expensive cowpoke trowse. Threats, danger and the rest catered for.

STATION TO STATION
Decorum don't come easy, but Evelyn Court's intense prose on the healthiest reggae music from re-issues to the present day can't be considered less than compulsive scanning. Ev's hottest dance tracks, the news that's fit to pop and all the beat-heavy sounds that're cool to mention.

SURFIN' CLAM BAKE
Our man with the patchy complexion and multi-patterned shirt, Hoxton Leonid, will be telling it like it is in a strictly, psychedelic, hyperdelic, surfs up, shades at the ready (remember The Ventures?) type thing. So, if you're into fish and frolics, let's swim.

MIXMASTER
DJ sounds that cross, the missing link between The World's Famous Supreme Team, 23 Skidoo, The Wild Bunch, 400 Blows, The Beastie Boys and Age Of Chance. All revved up and surgically investigated by scratch and spin specialist Paul Howard.

VERY LOUD!
Our eardrum maestro, Whiplash, will be diagnosing the best way to loosen that snotty wax that's lodged in your upper lobes with a sheer and succinct blast from his noisiest compadres. If you thought extreme physical danger from noise emanated from the larynx of jazz crooners intent on smashing a few glasses, then check out Whiplash's hot faves and think again.

GET SMART
The mod scene and gyrating soulfulness through all points of the music world, in maximum detail. Can you tell the difference between a Cushman, a Vespa 125 bored out to a 225, the sound of primal Purple Hearts, the new ska invasion from the States, or, can you measure the velocity of the latest hip swings? Well, Felix Adler can. From Potato Five to Young Holt Unlimited.

REWIND
The past given the kiss of life and massaged back to notoriety. Our team tell all about Little Richard, explain just who The Ikettes were, collate The Impressions' roots and tell you where you can get to hear all of these (and much, much more).

So check this, if you want to keep plugged in...

FIVE TRENDY MURDER SITES TO VISIT WITH YOUR UNDERGROUND TRAVELCARD

1 23 Gardenia Gardens, N10 (Highgate tube). Scene of Dennis Nilsen's little soirees, where drains blocked with boiled human flesh made Dynarod suspicious. (See also his previous abode at 195 Melrose Avenue, NW2; Willesden Green tube.)

2 The Magdala Tavern, South Hill Park NW3 (Belsize Park tube). David Blakeley asked for bitter and got it — his lover Ruth Ellis shot him three times outside this pub, and became the last woman in Britain to really swing.

3 Noel Road, N1 (Angel tube). Just a jealous guy, Keith Halliwell bludgeoned his playwright lover Joe Orton to death before stabbing himself into immortality. Love kills...

4 The Blind Beggar, Whitechapel Road, E1 (Whitechapel tube). HQ of the most infamous twin set, Reggie and Ronnie Kray. George Cornell's brains exited his head at vast speed in this pub thanks to a missile from Ronnie; he should never have called Ron a "fat poofter".

5 Evering Road, N16 (Highbury & Islington tube and a long hike). Reggie's finest hour. Jack McVitie, minor gangland rival, also found out the hard way that sarcasm is the lowest form of wit, and felt cold steel in his liver as a result. His final resting place is reputed to be in a London flyover.

WAITING FOR GODARD

Where are you Vic Godard? The maker of Subway Sect's fine Ambition single (released on Rough Trade in 1978) and the veteran of four different record contracts since, has been lying mighty low of late. Is there no life after Godard? (Geddit?)

But no, there's more. A chance sighting outside a bookies in Putney, south west London, has revealed his whereabouts. Vic has forsaken the late night sophistication of the jazz set, which followed his uncouth youth, and is now pursuing the real love of his life, horse-racing.

How the mighty are not so mighty anymore. Still, get nostalgic — a compilation of the Subway Sect's best moments, Vic Godard & The Subway Sect, A Retrospective 1977-81, is still available on Rough Trade.

Yes, sneaking in at the tale end of last year, a compilation entitled Sub Pop 100, on the Sub Pop label, arrived at the luckier import stores. You might very well have missed it, but it's a little diamond that's well worth seeking out. Pratinja dives from the Lotus position and takes it by its horrible vinyl throat.

They've scratched 'Guitars' and 'Machines' on the relevant sides of this Lord Lucan and they've got Big Black's Steve Albini demanding his breakfast by way of an introduction. They're Americans without their trousers down, their socks unwashed since 1981, which is as far back as they dare go in search of synchronised swimming, bringing us the Scratch Acid tonsilectomy Greatest Gift, a surprisingly puny Nothing To Prove by The Wipers and a typically torturous Kill Yr Idols from Sonic Youth, all of four years old. (Funny, they sound younger.) * Naked Raygun opt for a new Pink Panther theme tune with their choppily irascible Bananacude, six years old and apparently their first recorded work ever. The slack-kneed U-Men are fairly monstrous with Gila, a band who believe that disrupting a charmingly mundane tune makes you more 'interesting' somehow. Crappola! * It's a pleasantly scrappy album this, with all manner of sub-Patti Smith people rubbing grease into their hair before trotting down to the studio to look intense. Middle class layabouts with nothing but self-inflicted grime on their hands, they therefore know how to approach a tune and consequently both Dangerous Birds with Smile On Your Face and Savage Republic's Real Men are scathing but soft in their calamity. Skinny Puppy's fledgling rampart-rubber, from '85, Church In Hell is a meaningless tinkle, and Steve Fisk's Go At Full Throttle is unintentionally hilarious mutant-piffle. * Lupe Diaz tries — oh Lord how he tries — to sound compelling as he's felling ions in the atmosphere; one lolloping slurp of ideas that might actually be an old Spitfire revving up underwater, and Boy Dirt Car's pungently springy Impact Test is a snarling pantsfiller that goes nowhere fast. * As your head spins and demands independence, Shonen Knife crop up with their divine toe-curler One Day Of The Factory. A fine compilation, but for God's sake don't call any of it ART, because that's puke.

Eksakt Records from the Netherlands celebrate five years of rampantly different and slightly strange releases spanning post-psychedelia, sub-Residents, distorted metal, punk, pop and roll and general good time muzak with distribution throughout Europe and a steadily growing reputation. Early releases features Soviet Sex, Exploiting The Prophets, the excellent Idlotsavant, Nine Tobs, the very hard to grapple with compilation Dutch Difficult Music, The Moonies, French outfit Ptöse, the brilliantly named Miners Of Muzo and a cast of other unpronouncables ● Kinda makes it glad we joined the EEC doesn't it? For further details of some fine discs, pen a missive to Aksakt at Willem II Straat 37, 5038 BC Tilburg, Netherlands for a catalogue.

Why would two Californian beach bum brothers choose to forgo sunshine and fresh orange juice in order to carve out their careers in London? Craig and Jason Gray are loony tunesmiths known as Lazy Giants who claim to have "come in search of the big musical dream". But, perhaps nightmare might be more apt. ● The Lazy Sods are proving not a bad player exchange for some of our better known exports to the sunshine state. The brothers create an eerie, though beautifully melodic form of post apocalyptic new age music featuring Jason's croaking, death-raked vocal wail. Tracks like Chernobyl Twist, Sleeping Deep and City In My Room have sprung out of some suitably crackpot minds with a lush depth and quality not usually associated with a cheap 'n' nasty Tascam four-track recording. But as they say, "If you've got imagination the equipment is irrelevant, you just have to work harder." The Giants have been working very hard indeed. ● March is being spent in the previously unknown luxury of a 16-track studio, expect movement from these sleeping Giants, for sure.

COURAGE OF LASSIE say woof. Ron Nelson and Mandy Schenkel are Courage Of Lassie's answer to Roddy McDowall and Elizabeth Taylor, proud owners of a beautiful animal that likes to go musical walkabouts but always returns home to its roots. They have already set plenty of tongues wagging back home in Canada with their distinct brand of dark, wrist slitting rock/folk a la Leonard Cohen, Tim Buckley et al. — although with brief excursions into Japan territory in their instrumental

In a dark disco, at the point of collapse through bad alcohol, a sudden sound assault cleaned me up and made me dance electric. Front 242 at full blast is something that you don't forget. As I picked myself up, four 242's came my way hustling for the bar. Richard (of electronic percussion and piercing eyes) bleats: "As far as Front 242 are concerned, most rock bands are still in the stone age." Right. Right. Front 242 use a sophisticated armada of synths and sampling. It's like the guitar had never been invented. Patrick (on Emulator): "We're the result of our time, there is so much information about . . . radio, TV, the media has such a huge presence these days. Front 242 takes it all, looks at it, transforms it and feeds it back again." Front 242's records have that distinctive electronic rhythm against synth sound that urges you to tap your toes, but little else. The new album, Official Version has much more though. There are pumping bass lines, persuasive dance beats, aggressive sampling and oblique vocals. A perverse son of Kraftwerk, Yello and Depeche Mode. But with all that in mind, it's important to note that Front 242 do have a unique sound. And the effect? You'll either love them to death or hate them for existing. Live, Front 242 use and abuse paramilitary images and a light show that reduces the venue to an ever moving battlefield. For now, most people will have to make do with the new Front 242 LP, on RRE through Red Rhino and the Cartel. Featuring eight non-stop pieces, it perfectly illustrates that Front 242 have something to say and they don't just say it, they shout it. Loud.

● EACH MONTH in Underground we'll be wading through the box of demos and threatening letters in an attempt to see who is coming up, who the A&R men are being subjected to and who are going to be worth watching. Each month a panel of guest reviewers, featuring journalists, DJs, producers, A&R men and the like, will be assembled around an unsuspecting tape deck and their reactions will be systematically taken down and rated. The panel for this special issue consisted of Dave Henderson, DJ Paul Howard, Julian Henry and Ronnie Randall. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential.

THE SWINGING LAURELS (Happy House Studios, Welford Road, Leicester, LE2 6BE) have returned. Where have they been? We don't know. But it must have been somewhere nice, as they're now sounding deliciously modern and relaxed and as a result, this tape is the first serious contender in the pile. They say that Leicester is 'where it's at', so presumably hundreds of A&R men are combing the streets, signing anything that moves. The Laurels were never a band to stand still for more than a moment, perhaps now their time has come. Best song was Closer And Closer.

8 9 8 8

KEVIN WHITE (30 Chessington Road, Ewell, Surrey KT17 1TU) has produced his own cassette which is for sale via mail order, priced £1.99. He recorded it alone, in his bedroom no less, on an 8 track recorder. We all cried Marc Almond! as the tape started, but after a few moments a respectful hush descended. There are plenty of original ideas in his songs, and a big pile of xeroxed literature that came with the tape indicates just how keen Kevin is to become a pop star. We think he deserves to succeed.

7 9 8 8

TRAGIC VENUS (no address supplied) arrived on the cassette deck at just the wrong moment. With no Goths or generally gloomy sorts present to redress the balance, our team was unanimous in its response to the two songs submitted; Doom-laden backing track supports a young lady's operatic vocal contortions. We didn't like it (Henderson was not present). Next.

CATCH THE BOMB (no address supplied) like to travel fast and none of their songs go on for more than 2 minutes 50 seconds which is a good thing. Still, they've recorded this fine tape of five songs, but they've forgotten to use a producer for financial reasons. Honestly. Whatever next? Anyway, they sound a bit like a cross between The Ramones and The Housemartins so we'll forgive them. Too many songs on the tape to get maximum effect and it got a little boring by the time it got to Suicide Girl. At least they move, though.

7 8 8 7

THE FIRST (Unit 119, The Metrotore, 231 The Vale, London W3) are from Birmingham, and are apparently 'generating major record company interest'. Selected comments follow: Oh God. Not another one. They sound like most rock groups. Ummm. Should be big in Russia, the mid-West and other culturally deprived areas. Go for it boys! Good at what they do, but with big reservations.

4,000,000 TELEPHONES (1 Dorset St, Lincoln, LN2 5NS) have released their own single (French Girls) so perhaps they deserve more than a review on this page. Their music is danceable in a rather frantic way, and you get the impression there are several hundred people in the group such is the feverish height of activity on their recordings. A bit on the arty-side (so what's wrong with that?) but professional and determined nevertheless, so international fame and success is probably just around the corner.

8 8 7 8

THE GATHERING (Anders Drakenberg, Norrgardgatan 14, S-694 00 Hallsberg, Sweden) are said to be a bit 'like U2'. And they are. Opinions varied from 'goes nowhere' to 'no opinion', but being an open-minded and God-fearing institution the reviewing team had to admit that they do what they do with confidence and authority. What else can you say about rock music like this? They play their guitars loud. People will buy their records.

● Rather than litter each issue with a million bland reviews of live shows that'll be out of date by the time they reach your eyes, Underground will endeavour to give you the gen on the live scene, like who's doing what, who's going to see them and what the talk is in the bar. ● In a move to expose the trials and tribulations of live action, we'll also be compiling a monthly league table of miles covered by bands, gigs played and other general stuff on the bands most likely to. ● For example . . . did you know that, between January '86 and January '87, Blyth Power covered a staggering, swaggering, 5500 miles, played 80 gigs and went through five spare wheels, two engines, eight customs stops, one strip search and 27 sets of guitar strings? How about that then? The gauntlet is down . . . beat it.

CULTURE CLASH DANCE PARTY

Seemingly in ever decreasing circles, the live circuit looks to be a little less than the place to be seen of late. With people concentrating on doing mega good releases to impress would-be investors, rather than going for the old scam of seeing the band live, the showcase gig has suffered accordingly. Voice Of The Beehive's recent Astoria shows and subsequent soirées were something of a success, though, with wall to wall A&R men mooching with punters and groaning supporters. Highly rated too are The Wishing Stones featuring ex-Loft bassist Bill Prince. ● Other excited mentions coming in report that Crazyhead (fellow Food act with the Beehives) are the loudest and proudest to come from Leicester at the moment and there's talk about someone with Penis in their name who various A&R persons are seeking out. ● The BAD tour has been playing host to The Pocket Rockets and there's mucho talk about ex-NME writer David Dorrell's outfit Nasty Rox Inc who're following suit in a Clash Pressure Drop period mould. The get up and do it ethic continues with Culture Clash Dance Party where everyone swaps instruments, breakdancers come and go in a BAD pre-programmed beat way. ● More from the highly recommended set include Pop Will Eat Itself (currently scraping the bottom end of the charts) and The Cardiacs whose madcap (wot? — ed) performances are coming to a watershed near everyone. Check the local rag for details. ● Also mentioned in pub extra hours are Frenzy, Scottish excessives Nyah Fearties, and the soulful tail end of The Fun Boy Three in the guise of After Tonight as well as the croonin', much talked about Howlin' Wilf And The Vee Jays. Check them out, tell us who you thought were the biz.

THE PLANET WILSON (somewhere in Hull) include two ex-Red Guitars and sound at their best when they lift the tempo. Four songs included on the tape illustrate sound commercial potential without any of the usual crass drawbacks, and feet were seen to tap accordingly. A rather nice glossy picture was enclosed along with a labourious explanation of what 'The Planet Wilson' means; unfortunately this got lost so we are none the wiser.

8 8 7 7

JASS (c/o Fon Recordings, Sheffield) look to be impressively progressive. Cries of 'yes' and 'alright', and even 'it's quite good this' greeted their three song demo. Indeed, feelings ran so high that a member of the review team picked up a telephone and demanded an interview for the next issue of Underground. Why do we like it? Because, it's the music of the future and because here's a tape that doesn't use guitars or drums in the same way that everyone else has been for the past 20 years. Best song: All of them.

9 9 9 9

So, if you've got demo tapes or ideas, and are bursting to get out of the bedroom and onto the stage, send them to The Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1.

Hey there little insect! whatever happened to Beserkley Records?

Julian Henry scours the streets of West London trying to find out what did happen to Beserkley

And here we go with our first comp this ish ... All you've got to do is answer one question and send it on a postcard to Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead, Road, London NW1 7QZ to arrive no later than April 13 and you could win a 20 track collection of the best of Jonathan Richman's material on CD.

So, here it is, it's easy, so there's no excuses. Which record label has Jonathan most recently recorded for?

Beserkley is back! The American West Coast record label who first introduced the world to Jonathan Richman, The Rubinoos and Greg Kihn is set to return to the fray with an ambitious schedule which will see all of their back catalogue (some 28 titles) re-issued. And, the label returns under the control of its original mentor John Doucas, who is based in London. In addition to re-issuing old material, Beserkley is actively seeking to unearth new UK talent, and immediate releases are already scheduled.

The first new signing is Mrs Green, a west coast American guitar combo, and a sneak preview of their debut album was enough to alert various Underground ears. In early May they're set to visit the UK for the first time, so watch this space for further details ...

The Beserkley re-launch comes five years after their last UK release. John Doucas explains: "After our initial success with Jonathan Richman we found ourselves based in the States, and we fell out of touch with what was happening over here. When the Rubinoos single came out and failed to make the chart we were all completely demoralised."

"We've restarted the label with the idea of keeping Beserkley very much on its original path. We're not interested in working with major labels as in the past — we've done deals with a big company and they've given us lots of money without really understanding us. All the new releases are being distributed through Counterpoint, who will hopefully get our records into places like newsagents and petrol stations (as well as record stores), and we'll be able to do a few unusual things, too."

The peak of Beserkley's success in the '70s came with Egyptian Reggae by Jonathan Richman, which sold over 300,000 copies. Can they top that, or do they plan to re-release it in some format?

"We've had plenty of requests to re-issue the single, both in its original form and with various re-mixes and edits," says Doucas. "The thing they don't understand is that it was recorded in the CBS women's toilets using four microphones, so we haven't really got the capacity to change it too much."

Doucas' partner Brian Leafe continues: "We're looking for new acts to sign and develop on a worldwide basis. It's important, though, that they fit in with the corporate Beserkley feel — we don't necessarily want jugglers and buskers hanging around outside the office trying to bowl us over, but anything that's unusual we'll take a good look at."

In addition to Mrs Green, Beserkley has also signed Eleven Bloody Men and Johnny Gun, two new American acts that Doucas says will be "right for certain territories, but maybe not the UK."

A compilation of the Best Of Beserkley is planned for the tail end of 1987, and the first chance that we'll have to check out the new school of talent from Doucas and Leafe will be in May when the Mrs Green LP arrives.

Meanwhile, any interested parties can contact John Doucas or Brian Leafe at 29 Beethoven Street, London W10 4LG.

New Beserkley boys Mrs Green: Richard Charlesworth (left) sings, plays guitar and writes the songs, Sam Floyd (centre) drums and David Curtis (right) plays bass and sings. The group's debut album is unveiled in May followed by a short UK tour.

A SECOND BITE OF THE ORANGE

A CLOCKWORK ORANGE — A PLAY WITH MUSIC.
Anthony Burgess.
(Hutchinson, £5.95 paperback)

It's been no secret that Anthony Burgess, author of that infamous novella A Clockwork Orange, has been less than impressed with the continuing cult status of his brain-child. So it comes as something of a surprise that he's resurrected it in play form. ● Aside from denying any references that he was the God-father of the punk generation, the prologue by Burgess himself also reveals his objections to Kubrick's adaptation of his work in now banned film form. Basically, Burgess felt that the literary implications vital to the understanding of A Clockwork Orange were left too much to visual bluntness. And, to help rectify his misgivings and redress the balance, he has produced this one and only official script. ● All those theatre groups in upstairs pubs rooms the country over may not welcome this new, approved script, however. Many have been performing a bootleg version more closely akin to the film version, and may be loath to encompass a script in which the hooligan hero "is growing up, falling in love, proposing a decent bourgeois life with a wife and family, and consoling us with the doctrine that aggression is an aspect of adolescence which maturity rejects". ● Other themes of the book remain intact, though the characters do undergo "further development", and there is also a 'guest performance' from a character rather akin to Kubrick himself. ● Whatever, I doubt the more activist sectors who've elevated this tale into legendary status will applaud it. Carole Linfield

PULP NASTIES FROM THE UNDERGROUND

IN THE CROWD

Ever since the days of Maximum Speed, the leading mod fanzines have always exuded professionalism and obsession for detail seldom seen in other youth subculture publications (see Roadrunner, Extraordinary Sensations and Twist for confirmation), Guernsey's In The Crowd is no exception. From the Spock cover through 28 pages of packed enthusiasm, there's even a free showcase flexi that introduces two bands new to the mod scene, The Offbeats and The Pictures. Plenty of interesting letters, articles and interviews with Makin' Time and The Pictures. A must for any budding young stylists. £1.20 from 4 Rue du Pre, St Peter Port, Guernsey. C.I. (that includes p&p).

UNDERGROUND

You know those old incredible-but-true stories about pet alligators and turtles who get dropped down American suburban toilets and then feed on the sewerage and dumped toxic waste happily floating downstream before ripping through the pavements as axe-wielding homicidal maniacs? Of course you do. Now relocate to heavenly springs landmark in the Midlands Leamington Spa and break into the homes of Steve Bray and Bill Davies to see what they're breeding. These two have had the demented idea to drop modern funk, freeform jazz and punk-white noise strategies down the bowl of no return and then feed it film fantasies, urban and sci-fi-prophecy paranoia and personal insight. And why? Just for the hell of making music with a wholly different kind of tension that collars head and body, which attempts to turn convention on its pointed, little head. That's all.

Mutant marauders! Mad scientists! Hybrid hijackers! Category killers! Slab!

There are many people in Slab! Many faces full of expression trying to, er, well, express themselves. Arty bastards? Techno wizz kids? Stylists with soul roots? Or, maybe Slab! are just the tip of an upcoming resurgence in music that utilises all areas and stays faithful to none. Martin Aston speculates over their life and times. Ronnie Randall huddles them all into a cupboard for a mug-shot

"It sounds very po-faced and this is talking off the top of my head," squirms founder, singer and saxophonist Steve, "but I do like to challenge people. Why just like modern jazz? Why just like Boyd Rice, or Sonic Youth and The Swans? Is it not possible to like all things and forge ahead, building something new out of it? Why be so staid? Why not mutate the whole bloody thing and make the most godawful sound that you can, because if you go forward and create this huge sound, you can still strip it out and write an odd pop song or do things like Tom Waits has done." It's been a while since we had some new sensations. You can get too used to what's always getting served up for dinner. Five Slab!'s sit around six cups of tea, poverty-stricken and cheerful, anxious that people should be invigorated by their attempts to be innovative, a touch pissed off that people are snailheads, so unreceptive to a change in the climate. Like when it snows, everything falls apart. When Slab! the beast comes to town, people will be confused. "The aim is to unsettle people, to challenge them from what we feel is their conservative attitude toward music. Everybody's got to go forward and try something. Otherwise you might as well be a pop band." ● Still, Slab! realise that when white boys hunger after the black beat, it's only a matter of time. "When we become SPANDAU BALLET..." ● As I said, it's been a while.

"The bands around today are still in the song-writing rut," says totally-untrained guitarist Paul Jarvis. "They're still searching for that three-minute perfection whereas we'd rather get up on stage and play awesome music that you'd notice rather than pretend to be great songwriters." Slab!'s steamrolling fusion will take some stopping. Not only does the beast chew up pop before it's had a chance to eat itself but it embarrasses the rigid boundaries of the funk fraternity. As they carve out SLABS (had to happen once...) of locomotive funk patterns, cowbells clang, guitars feed back, tapes feed in, brass lines heap in unison piercing, swinging TV-themeland fills (remember 'Mission Impossible?') while a growling muskateer of a bass straddles the surge of drums, voice and sax fighting for the right to party... "I wouldn't be opposed to incorporating another couple of brass players as well, or different kinds of instruments..." The beast marches on. Between the two singles, 1986's Mars On Ice and the new Parallax Avenue, the original six had already mutated into eight: alongside Steve, Paul and bassist Bill, there's Robin's drums, Nellie's trombone, Hugh's trumpet and now Dave on almost-normal-guitar-but-not-quite and Margaret on tapes. Six, eight, or an orchestra of crazed hybrid warriors, it initially made no difference; only Red Flame's Dave Kitson recognised Slab!'s reasoning, gleefully releasing the group on his offshoot label Ink. Lucky, because the other demos landed up with the it's-not-what-we're-doing-at-the-moment brigade.

"I know Ron Johnson had one because they're a fairly local label," Steve remembers, "but honestly it's not a Ron Johnson sound. That's fair enough, people run their own labels and release what they like." But Slab! aren't really that magnanimous. "It was bloody hard getting gigs. It would have been easier if we'd been a shambling band. We spent two years doing nothing because we couldn't get gigs, especially in the Midlands. It's a hellhole to play. We were under pressure to present ourselves in a certain manner to get on, and we don't ever intend to do that."

These days Slab! are following early supports to A Certain Ratio and Hula with their own spotlights while enjoying the patronage of John Peel (two sessions already under the belt). All eight heads and 16 legs of Slab! wish it to be known that the 'Industrial Funk' signpost can be dropped alongside pop politic's twitching torso. Dismissing the obvious comparisons with ACR, Hula, Chakk and 23 Skidoo, Slab! say they'd rather talk about Ronald Shannon Jackson, James Blood Ulmer and Bill Laswell's Material, all New York pioneers who expanded funk's frontiers, injecting harmolodics and fusing jazz sensibilities to funk's primal workout. Or the jazz masters themselves — Ornette Colman, Albert Ayler, Coltrane, the men who became innovators, changers of musical composition and technique. But at least Slab! talk in the humblest of terms. Steve: "We're saying, yes we like the ideas and the attitude but Ornette's been playing for 40 years and you can't expect us to live up to that yet. But in terms of our music, we're going to go so much further. I still think something like Ornette, James Blood Ulmer and The Swans would be goddamn..." ● An adjective was still to be found as I left the Slab! lab an hour later but Steve had no trouble with one to describe his opinion of rock in the '80s.

"I think it's an incredibly redundant avenue — people have been saying for years that rock is dead. There are few stunning 'rock' bands who are really extreme. I have a fair amount of time for the Mary Chain although they're too limited. Most rock records seem to be more and more rehashes of The Stooges circa 1970, without the humour of the flares. What is jazz doesn't limit itself to a certain fashion and to a certain audience. I also feel that there is more feeling in black music." Bill: "Certainly rhythm's body feeling is what's lacking in independent music, or nearly all music in this country." But you disrupt the fluidity of jazz and funk with tapped tape interference and guitar drones, essentially white cultural weapons. Where's the body feeling there? Earlier Slab! had complained that the likes of giants Ornette Coleman and Evan Parker weren't brutal enough — why noise? Why brutality? Steve: "I think that's possible because we're white and we're grown up in a rock environment which is as inherent to us as jazz and gospel and blues was to Ornette in the 1950s. We've all grown up hearing pop songs and played on electric guitars. We want to take that rock element to the extreme and make it do things that it was never theoretically designed to do, to totally abandon the principles of guitar playing in that sense. We called in Paul because we wanted somebody who could play noise, who wouldn't play the guitar in a technically cliched manner." Dave: "Paul plays things that I would never have thought of because he's not stuck in the same patterns I've been learning for years. I'm now trying to de-learn my guitar." Meanwhile Paul, who can't unlearn what he's never been taught, does things like stick knitting needles (size five) under the frets (cries of "we were using them before Sonic Youth got any publicity!"). So before you think Slab! are snotty jazz purists, so hip they can only hop to Blue Note reissues, remember that jazz and funk breed technical proficiency but Slab! prove you can live it without having to learn it. "Anybody can do it!" they chuckle. Remember punk's point? "Noise annoys," Slab! exclaim. Behind the noise is, er, noise. Margaret's noise. She's not saying where the tape noise escapes from but sometimes the rest of Slab! don't know either. Paul: "On Parallax Avenue we used tapes of mosquitos and me and Dave were looking at each other and thinking, Christ, am I feeding back?" Steve: "No, it was the tape of the animals. The most important thing to say about the tapes is that they're not used in the usual cliched fashion, just to have voices and American preachers flitting around the mix.

The tapes are alongside the guitars as noise and hopefully adding different textures of sound. Mars On Ice had children singing on it but we tend to avoid voices as people have done it quite well." But not submarine radar, divebombers, animals and high-pitched, whining insect invasions, so Slab! are safe to move on.

The presence of strangely strange but oddly normal diversions doesn't just stop at the sound, but infiltrates the lyrics as well. You wouldn't by now expect Slab! to follow orders or even give any. Rejecting the choice to be directly political — "It's by and large preaching to the converted" — Slab! instead want to reach out at root level, scorching the imagination. Paul writes the words — "So I'm not even your conventional frontman," says Steve "which is deliberate" — which show definitive stains left behind by a film and literature degree course. Brainscan the boy and you'll find a library of short story Twilight Zone paranoia episodes rooted in present-day settings — a bizarre amalgam of potential coincidences and ambiguous conclusions ...

lyrics inspired by Reggie Perrin and Marc Bolan ("Oedipus T. Rex") or films like Man Of Flowers, Lolita and The Passenger ... lyrics that tell of unsettling people unsettling other people. A good example is Mars On Ice. "It was written deliberately, an attempt to write a short story narrative in 16 lines. It was when Voyager II took pictures of the blind side of Mars and found a huge contour of a human face that couldn't be explained away by erosion. Was it a communication to Earth? The story was reported in a small column in the Daily Mirror — odd when it could be potential world news! There's this man in bed reading the news who gets really scared when he ties in the story with the possibility that a handshake with a stranger earlier that day might have transferred a space virus. I have this thing about handshakes, you see ..." An everyday story, right? Everything is possible ... Which is Slab! all over. They slap the brain and shake the body, the irresistible force against the immovable object of the rest of musical youth, leading us into temptation. Incredible but true. Which is where we came in.

Imagine an 18 year old Billy Bragg, and you'll be close to Rodney Allen. He's already clocked up over 100 live dates at which he has taken the stage naked (metaphorically speaking) except for his Rickenbacker guitar. The songs on his debut LP are about things like beer, unemployment, cups of tea, discos — you know . . . familiar territory to anyone who ever bought The Jam's That's Entertainment — but he churns them out with a freshness that is hard to resist. Happysad is a promising start for Rodney Allen, and it'll be interesting to see if he has the commitment and character to develop a more concrete style of his own. For the moment he passes stage one with flying colours. Julian Henry

I really warmed to this one. The AA's history of the avant-garde left field variety, gives little away and after a brief spell it's really hard to relate the kind of tangents these guys are hitting off at against the accepted preconception of music as we know it. In there I heard everything from the good (New Order, Coltrane, A Certain Ratio, Husker Du) to the bad (Chicago, Colosseum). But each tickle of interest made me want to play it again.

Black Pyramid is a compulsive listen, a deja vu of past fun and fears, and Always August seem destined to grow into something bigger and better than a triple Big Mac. Ciao! Dave Henderson

Any high court judge would deem all this calculated '60s revivalism proof positive that rock music had no new direction to go. Black cap would be placed on skull, and a pronouncement of execution made.

That would be a mistake of course. The all conquering age of the computer is about to unleash a quantum leap in possibilities. But in the meantime who would blame him when boring old muso's like The Bevis Frond keep leading us up dead ends. Miasma has doomy organs, screeching plastic guitars, drum solos, harpsichords and titles like The Earl of Waltham's Flower. Nuff said.

Namechecks for Carlisle, Middlesborough and Hammersmith Broadway here as Blyth Power take you on a journey across Britain's fading, still-feudal countryside. From Cromwell to Caligula to The Bricklayer's Arms, singer and drummer Josef's wordsworth of agitated ideas and gnarled ironies have been underrated, probably because Blyth Power have been hoverers around the independent beehive rather than committed over-workers. They're in a siding all their own, plugging a chugging, basic rock-folk, close to the early Under-tones, fronted by a terse, medieval punk jester. Don't expect anything epic and Blyth Power won't expect you to pay for the ride. Fair exchange, squire. Martin Aston

Bourbonese Qualk have been subverting the minions for some years now. Working in 'art' and video, 'experimenting' with sound — get the habit? Here that sound becomes almost acceptable, even rhythmic. A dislocation dance, both musically and vocally, mostly through the corridors of early Pere Ubu and early Birthday Party, Hee Haw provides the missing link (ha ha). There's no information included bar the song titles and four scraped messages in the corners of the album cover; "Papal Narves", "Chanson La Porte/Mechanic", "Moaning Messages" and "Indistinct Fantaticism of the . . ." BUTTHOLE SURFERS

Locust Abortion Technician

Blast First BFFP 15

Oh my God! There's a book to be written about this band and their "music". If you've caught them live and seen Gibby setting fire to amused punters and generally abusing his body you've got a sketchy outline of what they're about.

^ FULL DISCOGRAPHY OF SLABI: A 12 inch on Red Flame called, er . . . ^

If you freaked with Rembrandt Pussy Horse — their last album — and thought that had set them apart from their more straightforward "rock" roots, then Locust Abortion Technician will totally finish you off.

Now the Surfers have gone even further from the road of normal song construction. Hardcore explosions, mutant scratchings, phone messages, slowed tapes, orchestras, sampled(?) voices, tape loops, it's all here in a magnificent noise that builds to the point of orgasm through some mighty interludes. There are no easy reference points here, for a split second it sounded like Throbbing Gristle playing with Flipper, then again it was Captain Beefheart backed by The Vandals, or was it The Temptations circa Psychedelic Shack being headbutted by some greasy oiks?

This is a disturbing album at times, emotive, powerful and full of wit. If you buy one thing this month it should be this. Dave Henderson

Originalton West 006

(from Lotus Records, 14-20 Brunswick St, Hanley, Stoke-on-Trent, Staffs)

Four serious garlic jugglers stare from the back of this austere sleeve. Orchestrations without orchestras, broken up barrages of chorale effects, the rain dribbling down an adjacent drain, it all goes to make a fitting soundtrack for a film that flickers only in the underworld. Pretentious? No. Enjoyable? Well, yes, actually. The Cam's give new age muzak a good name without really highlighting the boundaries too much. Relaxing, unstructured but reasonably well directed. Dave Henderson

THE CANNIBALS V THE SURFADELICS

Run Chicken Run

Hit CHICKEN 1

What a good marketing ploy. On one side The Cannibals, flip it over and you've got The Surfadelics, and that goes for the full colour sleeve too. The bands, if you're not familiar with them, are two of the leading lights on the garage circuit. The Cannibals, whose first record came out in 1977, have moved on from their days of hardcore trash to a twilight land known as Pebbles. This is their best recorded work to date, you'll throb along from the dreamy Magic Carpet Ride to the bizarre Twilight Zone.

The Surfadelics have changed quite a bit since I last encountered them. A much meaner sound, the added attraction of keyboards, and a few years of experience has made them a very hot property. The lyric end of their songwriting could do with some work, though. Their finest moment here is a surprisingly refreshing version of the much abused Troggs ditty Wild Thing, closely followed by the instrumental Surfadelic Affair. Snakey G

Big Ship

Alphabet Records ALPH 004

Cardiacs look to be a rather wacky set of people. You know, they like 'having fun'. Live, they're said to pull in enthusiastic crowds, and looking at their curiously ugly faces, I can see why. I mean, why do people stop and stare at car-crashes? Why do people go to see Cardiacs? The Big Ship doesn't quite live up to their visual appearance unfortunately, but it is clever, humorous in a jolly titter-titter way and it runs at 45 rpm. There is a difficulty in understanding the LP because there's something "theatrical" about Cardiacs and whatever appalling pranks they get up to on stage, it sounds a bit constipated on record. Julian Henry

CHRIS AND COSEY

Take Five

Licensed LD 874

RRG.

If you like lengthy electro-pop tracks then this is a vinyl paradise. Personally, I find this just a little too sterile. A bit of dirt smeared across music sets the soul on fire and this is clinically tested and germ-free. There are some worthy songs on Take Five, namely Love Cuts, which will be receiving overplay treatment in clubland. The synthesis is only sometimes off-set by a compensating passion in the vocal and it is at those points that Chris And Cosey flourish into grandeur. Send The Magic Down is one such peak; an enigmatic movement with atmosphere enough to prove that what this medium creates can be real. Alex Kadis

RTG..

The renaissance of modern singer/songwriters continues with top New Zealand indie label Flying Nun adding the sensitive and sentimental outpourings of Jay Clarkson to the rest of the folksy minstrels in post-Suzanne Vega boomtown. Her strong voice is effectively supported by the mainly acoustic, sparse arrangements but her real full potential is only realised in one of these eight ballads, the harrowing Some Kind Of Haunting, with the rest passing by in a pleasant enough, low profile manner without leaving any lasting impression. Giving her the benefit of the doubt, it's an engaging enough initial invite that should attract further exploration. Jerry Smith

The opening track shows us where these extra-terrestrials are at; "I'm going to England, but this ain't the '60s..." Oh! but it is, totally. What we have here from Martin Newell and Giles Smith is an old fashioned form of sampling known as imitation. At times uncannily reminiscent of the beat age Beatles, choc-a-bloc with distant echoing harmonies, strumming guitars and constant period namedrops like Emma Peel, Profumo, Ilya Kuriyakin and the like. It's Swingin' London, King's Road Chelsea and all. The only thing missing is mono. Forget your Fab Four CD's, Going To England is period perfect... and it's new! Marvellous. Ronnie Randall

An excellent import from this Canadian group, well produced and veering largely towards the darker side of currently in-vogue folk. Not afraid of openly displaying their influences (The Rose and Hopes & Fears are dedicated to Mr Leonard Cohen), there is also enough originality in Ron Nelson and Mady Schenkel's songwriting to make this a collection well worth getting to know. For trendy sceptics perhaps put off by the band's name, don't be... the feel of this album isn't a million miles removed from much of This Mortal Coil's recent output. I wonder how many of the songs on this record will get rediscovered in 15 years time? Alex Bastedo

THE DELTAS

Mad For It

ID NOSE 11

G ...

This mob have been going since 1982 without really getting anywhere, but their fortunes turned last year when ex-Polecat Boz Boorer (guitar-sax) decided to muscle in. He moved vocalist Bongo from behind his drums, placing him at the front of the sage and wheeled in Ricochet Ray to fill the vacant position. A whole host of other musicians turn up and play now and again — piano, harmonica, accordian, etc — the line ups are never the same twice. The changes have added a bluesy feel to the old, but still lurking rockabilly style.

Gimme The Drugs is the best track by far, with Bongo coming on like Baloo the bear from Jungle Book, with Whip It Up and the down home Sex Therapy in joint second place. Snakey G

THE DOCTOR'S CHILDREN

King Buffalo

Upright Records UPLP 11

M RT C ...

The Doctor's Children have come of age, and this six-track mini-LP is the proof. Nodding appreciatively to Peter Perrett, Tom Verlaine and Mike Scott en route, King Buffalo is a rare sort of rock record; it has all the components of a mainstream rock mega-hit, but it shambles rather than runs. Singer Paul Smith also happens to be a great songwriter and his vocal melodies trip across an unstartling rhythm section in a fashion that is both devastatingly simple and impressively effective. As a live outfit they can be inconsistent, but on record they've got it right. Next stop for The Doctor's Children? The Big League. Julian Henry

Father's House

Twin/Tone TTC 8688

RTS ..

A second generation Athens, Georgia, band produced by REM's Peter Buck, but the buck stops there. Dreams So Real aren't drawn to REM's light like empty-headed 12-string moths but are instead fit to plough a lush Merseybeat grazing-ground of ringing guitars, harmonies and multiplying moments of light and shade. It's heavily Byrds-derived but Father's House is also a Southern paradise found. Dream on. Martin Aston

DUM DUM SCORE

Audio Sheep

NMW 003

RR C ..

My copy came with a plastic wraparound sheet thinly disguising a dodgy Bon Jovi sleeve. Inside the story got even cloudier through 14 excerpts of Cale-esque monotone drone punctuated with truncated rhythm, disjointed noise and the occasional blippy outburst. DDS are from the top right hand corner of England and play as if they're waiting for their moment to come. This is a rock renegade, a casualty of society, and pretty damn good at that. Dave Henderson

ENGLAND'S GLORY

Legendary Lost Recordings

Five Hours Back TOCK 004

RR C ..

Peter Perrett was — and still will be, if he can maintain his recent post-junk recovery after six bad years' addiction — one of our most distinctive singers and songwriters, whose mastery of the crumpled ballad and adrenalin rocker meant that The Only Ones were England's real new wave glory. Out of the archives of oblivion comes the unreleased debut album from Perrett's pre-Only Ones' group England's Glory, recorded in 1973.

Perrett's great debt to The Velvets (especially Loaded) in his adenoidal drawl and affected, world-weary delivery was suitably tempered by an individuality as marked as a Syd Barrett or Bowie; the songs were already strong, if still naive and unrealised (Perrett was only 18) — hear this languid version of City Of Fun compared to The Only Ones' rivetting 1978 album reading — but that's not the point. For fans, this is indispensable, and for others, an opportunity to hear a particularly English school of fatalistic song. Martin Aston

Kodak Ghosts Run Amok (Chronological Singles, Etc)

Cherry Red BRED 73

P..

A singles and classic album tracks compilation that is definitely one for the nostalgia buffs to go all gooey-eyed over, recalling those wonderful teenage lager days and John Peel nights at the turn of the decade.

Always producing melodic yet primitive slices of angry young pop that oozed charm but ultimately lacked 'chart' ambition, Martyn Bates and Pete Becker seemed happier in concert, staging their own versions of the Nights Of The Long Macs for the massed ranks of 'angst in their pants' student brigades.

With another nail in the vinyl coffin, the cassette version of this album also includes the hard to find 1981 Caught In Flux LP, completely free for your further listening pleasure. Alex Bastedo

Twin/Tone TTR 8690

RTS..

For the Figures' third release, Twin/Tone have hired ex-Feelie/Golden Palomino Anton Fier to pull Figures into shape, but in tightening up Jeff Wayne's guitar musing, The Gateway only lights a small fire. Anyway, I reckon it's the songs really; pockets of adrenalin confidence surge in and out but it feels too AOR and limited to swoon over. Hardly a bad record, but disappointing. Martin Aston

FLIPPER

Public Flipper Limited

Fundamental SAVE 15/16

RR C..

Double set from West Coast madmen who spent the majority of their time arguing between themselves and the audience. Live cuts from '80 to '85, featuring tunes which have appeared here and there (mainly on Subterranean in the States) on singles and on their much touted albums Generic and Gone Fishin'.

The double makes for intriguing listening but it's beer sodden, jack the lad style never builds until the latter tunes and fails to reach the clinical tenacity that their studio stuff maintained. Flipper have since split but threaten to reform (they're still arguing about it). Dave Henderson

JEREMY GLUCK WITH NIKKI SUDDEN & ROWLAND S. HOWARD

I Knew Buffalo Bill

Flickknife SHARP 037

Sp..

Take singing Barracuda, two former Swell Maps, an ex-Birthday Party and a founder Gun Clubber and you get this rambling collection of haunting, dust blown tales and mutated rock 'n' roll ballads. Its loose format makes for a rather hit or miss affair with the good points — Jeffrey Lee Pierce and Rowland S. Howard's howling slide guitars, the wild thrashing acoustics and Jeremy Gluck's lonesome moan — set against the long self indulgent arrangements and a general lack of diversity in the material. One to satisfy those that heed the melancholy call of the wide open prairies, from Flickknife's idea of the first indie 'supergroup'! Jerry Smith

HEADS ON STICKS

The Eyes Of The Company

C-O-N Records Con18

(88 Camden High St, London NW1 0LT) ..

Rarely is music so emotive that it becomes frightening. This is. A perfect soundtrack for the next Halloween movie, The Eyes Of The Company is a hellish wash of synth and bile. Black As Sea halts abruptly and kickstarts again as Shadows, Slowworms and Chinese Walls, each a sinister construction which chills the air and raises the hairs at the base of the spine. Very powerful. Very virulent. Don't listen to this when you're alone at night... Alex Kadis

STEVE KILBEY

Unearthed

Red Eye RED LP 1

RTS..

The Church vocalist celebrates the group's dismissal from EMI by releasing a 14 track home demo (4, 8-track) collection amassed over the past five years. Milder and more wistful than the usual Church chime, Unearthed is at worst evidence that Kilbey kept all his best Peter Perrett songs to himself and at best, some charming, relaxed songs recorded under the summer sun. Not just for fans only either. NB — no paisley shirts in sight. Martin Aston

LAIBACH

Opus Dei

Mute Records STUMM 44

RT C SP...

This is a rare type of record. The marriage of thundering metallic percussion, classical orchestration and melodies, and a vile Germanic vocal might at first appear absurd, but this strange record not only works as an original idea, but it also demonstrates huge commercial potential. You could even imagine Geburt Einer Nation picking up Radio One airplay, for God's sake!

Laibach are Yugoslavian and it's a good thing — it would be hard to imagine a British group performing with this sort of freedom and aggression without sounding contrived and self-conscious. Laibach steal from every source imaginable and the result is impressively modern. Give me more of this. Julian Henry

LOOK BLUE GO PURPLE

Flying Nun Records LPGP002

C..

More guitar pop from Flying Nun's import series from down under. The all girl LBGP put CND symbols and hearts all over their product. Very Hackney/Islington, N1, but the sound is remarkable down home country USA. More's the surprise they're from Auckland, NZ.

I don't want to get you too hot and bothered, but if I were to say The Bangles meet the Mamas and the Papas I wouldn't be far off the mark. There's a real '60s West Coast pop sensibility to LBGP with plenty of attractive jangly rhythms and fine vocal harmonies, if occasionally crammed too tightly with lyrical content. Ronnie Randall

MARS

Seventy-Eight

Widowspeak WSP10

RT C

Seventy-Eight is an album of studio and live recordings made in '77 and '78 in New York and recently reworked by Jim 'Foetus' Thirwell. Eleven tracks of painful cacophony best left well alone by anyone with a delicate disposition. This music certainly has aged well, being as abrasive and tortuous as when first performed. Don't go looking for tunes here — there are no easy melodies in this infernal region, more the sound of a damned soul being torn limb from limb. Especially good on The Immediate Stages Of The Erotic, a screeching, toe-curling little number. Rum doings indeed. Liz Evans

THE MEKONS

Honky Tonkin'

Sin/Cooking Vinyl SIN 006

RR C...

This is simply a brilliant country 'n' western album, make no mistake. It's profoundly arresting, both in its musical excellence but even more in its declining, misery-gin atmosphere that carries the best C&W tradition. The Mekons have never been to Nashville but would probably only want to go to see the shrine that sunk a thousand heroes. Their adoption of country, polka and bar-room manners is perfect for their dislocated, vivid commentary on a sinking Britain. Please Don't Make Me Love You and Gin Palace had me taking an early bath but always coming back for more. Oh, and you get a book list that inspired and accompanied each lyric. Gram Parsons and EP Thompson united — three cheers and a double, no ice, for Mekons. Martin Aston

THE FIRST MONTHLY UNDERGROUND RECORD TITLE OF STYLE AND IMPORTANCE AWARD goes to The Claim, and Trick Bag Records (through Red Rhino and the Cartel), for their This Pencil Was Obviously Sharpened By A Left Handed Indian Knife Thrower.

JOHNNY THUNDERS

Stations Of The Cross

Roir A-46

RR C ...

Oww!! Rock 'n' Roll baby!! Recorded in '82 at NYC's infamous Mudd club for the Lech Kawolski film of the same name this is pure, unadulterated rock at its sweatiest. This recording captures perfectly that night of candescent activity. Thunders slaps down his audience only to pick them up again and again. Making savage love and desperately needing a fix, Thunders blunders through several cover versions — of particular note the old Surfadelics/Ventures gem Wipeout. High spots include the ever excellent and classic Chinese Rocks. Torturing song after song, Thunders staggers through to the end. Alex Kadis

Pink PINKY 15

RT C ..

Pink's pop approach has always been satisfyingly off-centre and consequently more durable (see Subway comp). The June Brides have been and gone, and then there's the eclectic, broody Wolfhounds, the jumbled-up brass and brassiness of Jamie Wednesday and the bloodrushing pop sweeter of McCarthy. Add That Petrol Emotion's first single Keen and The Ringing's scraping Caprice and you have a pile of dodgy adjectives, a rugby scrum of Boy's Own experiences and a compilation you should own. Beauty is a convenient self-promotion but it's going for the price of a 12". It's worth £3.29 for The Wolfhounds' Another Hazy Day On The Lazy 'A' alone, one of last year's most dazzling atmospheres. Martin Aston

RT C ...

The compilation album has been a much abused and much maligned format but Food Records have managed to come up with a high quality series of the best indie talent around with Imminent 5 carrying on the tradition in fine style. Providing 17 vibrant and diverse tracks from the brightest up and coming stars of the moment, it places the wild and exhilarating Jack Rubies and the hauntingly psychedelic Shamen along side the ever playful BMX Bandits, the eccentric Stitched-Back Foot Airman and even the spirited chartbound rush of the ever wonderful Primitives. In fact every one has its merits, all deserving a mention as future saviours of the nation's charts in an imaginative compilation that, dare I say, could well prove to be the C86 for '87. Jerry Smith

Cherry Red Records BRED 74

P ...

This is the first album in a series of compilations aimed at showcasing some of the best independent singles released between 1977 and 1984, and the result is surprisingly good. From Fantastic Something's heavenly summer sweetener If She Doesn't Smile (originally on Cherry Red) to Protex's punky pop driver Don't Ring Me Up (on Rough Trade after a spell on Good Vibrations), which is every bit as good as anything their Irish contemporaries, including The Undertones ever produced, this album contains several symphonies of sheer magic. The Sinatras, Hurrah and The TV Personalities are also included and emerge with honours. It ends with The Distractions' Time Goes By So Slow (a long lost classic from Factory) leaves you wondering how only one of these groups, The Marine Girls, went on to spawn a major chart contender in the guide of Everything But The Girl. Julian Henry

Rough Trade RT117

RT C ...

Is there anyone in the world who doesn't like The Woodentops? I can't believe it possible. In addition to the talents of their singer Rolo McGinty, a man with a smile so disarming it could avert a nuclear war, they perform as a group with the kind of demented vigour you can only stand back and admire. Plus, they even have decent songs! It's almost too good to be true.

Anyhow, this live album was recorded last year in America, and collects together almost all the band's singles on one piece of vinyl. It works well, and will serve to satisfy past converts and the uninitiated, despite travelling over the speed limit at times. More importantly it captures the band at a crucial moment in their career — a hit single seems to be just inches away and Live Hypnobeat Live points the way forward for The Woodentops. Children's television never sounded this good. Julian Henry

A HOUSE Kick Me Again
Jesus Rip Records RR C

After blazing a trail across the Irish music scene it looks as if A House are finally fit to set light to our own eardrums with this, their catchiest song yet. Kick Me Again Jesus is uncluttered and tuneful. Combining just the right amount of jingle-jangle with a clarity of melodic vision, A House produce something which is far superior to their many contemporary influences. AK

ALWAYS Metroland e P

The title song and Arcade are a rain of atmospheric colours accompanying an alienated hitch under the harsh yellow glare of the streetlamps lining the road from London to Brighton. Or something. Always' second single has that tugging pop feel that sounds like Absolute Beginners true soundtrack — adventure and disillusionment. Wonderful. MA

Shelfish Records RR C

Six tracks of gritty northern beat, originally recorded for the Peel show, adorn this 12 inch. A bargain buy. LE

THE BUGS Leavin' Here Hit

This ten eyed, ten legged entymological monster delivers a venomous bite in the form of sizzling, psychedelic rockabilly that positively leaps from the beetle green grooves of this offering. Ben Watkins and Adam Peters might only manage one single a year on average but they are always real gems. For Alligator Bait they have transformed the brittle brilliance that marked Walk On Gilded Splinters into a blisteringly intense blend of beat and stylishly dramatic warble that could only have been resurrected from the soul of Marc Bolan. Prudent use of feedback scream sees them walk atop a dynamic wall of sound that's guaranteed to bring the walls tumbling down. JS

HULA Poison Red Rhino RR C

Another quarterly message from Sheffield. Hula are alive and well, their new single was directed by Daniel Miller and features a pop mix that's likely to stimulate interest and a club mix that's as hard as you'll get. Stalwarts will be obsessed, new converts won't be disappointed. DH

THE KING OF LUXEMBOURG Picture Of Dorian Grey el P

The royal maverick continues to colour his blank canvasses of pop with inventiveness and

LAIBACH One Vision Mute RT C Sp

SON OF SAM 1 K BPM
Rouska RR G

Scatched-out disco beats with terror inducing lyricism let free at moments. While Age Of Chance and Front 242 show just how angry they are, Son Of Sam just pops off the listener with some haunting, pulsating music. DH

THE SPIKES A Bloody
Mess Greasy Pop Records
RTS

A 'real' band, with a fan club! Whatever are these review pages coming to? Slow, acceptably intense emotional rock, even if it does slide towards boredom city. They'll fail to dent, like they should, so long as they sound like Mick Jagger's testicles being dusted with pepper. PN

SURF DRUMS Walkaway
Kaleidoscope RR G

With a gush of soaraway guitars and an urgent drum thrash this hits you between the ears and travels voraciously downwards. "Tell the world I'm coming through, tell your friends I'm here" they sing. Irresistibly instant, this second single from Birmingham based Surf Drums is loud, proud and alive. The strength of solidity of Surf Drums is here to make its impact. Now! AK and love every minute of it! Don't stop to think or you'll miss it. This single would sell better in your local confectioners than it would in Our Price. Fast, furious and sporadic, Happy Sad will never make the charts but it has to be a classic in any serious record collection! AK

THE JAMES TAYLOR

QUARTET Blow Up Re-Elect

The President B C

No relation to the You've Got A Friend JT, but rather a smash-and-grab '60s beat outfit consisting of ex-Prisoners and ex-Daggersmen. Blow Up is a Herbie Hancock song torn apart by a quite ruthless Hammond organ work out, and is just the sort of thing you slap on the turntable when morale starts to flag and people start complaining about the current state of music. The Jimmy Smith revival starts here. JH

THINK TANK Home Sweet

Zoo Chapter 1 (through Simon Bennie, 171 Farringdon Rd, London EC1R)

Polite pop that makes no excuses as it meanders through a verse chorus run in of charming proportions. Zoo suggests that there's a lot more to this crew but this slack production fails to bring it out. TT

1,000 VIOLINS

Ungrateful Bastard

Constrictor (import from AM Heedbrink 13, 46000 Dortmund 30, West Germany)

The swearing starts here. Check the Violins sound and soulful delivery which has previously been bracketed with The Smiths and early Orange Juice. On this limited ed 45, they're far more precise... still pop, and just as satisfying. DH

TOY PLANETS Zama Is A

Footstool Nebular Trevor C

Title of the month, hands down. Toy Planets play splurgy-riffy-sax-wave 'n' stuff, kinda like X-Ray Spex, that'll give you a hernia if you try and dance to it. Wrap ear-trumpets around the weird-out 2000AD words; yes, Toy Planets do it in space. All together now... "we are all footstools". MA

TREEBOUND STORY My

Life's Example FON RT C

Wayward guitar, a chorus, a verse, a drum machine, another week and another FON record. Keeping the customer satisfied too, this newbie from the Tree people has a well intriguing guitar line holding it all together. These boys are going to be big. DH

VAZZ Feverpitch CRV

Records FF C

Vazz are a Glaswegian duo who have made a rather nice 12 inch of gentle guitar noises accompanied by a young lady singing. Ummm. What else can I say about it? Er, nothing really. JH

VOICE OF AMERICA I Will Tell Ammunition

Communication P

Well balanced and well structured tunes from an outfit who, with the right hair gel, are bound to adorn the teen weeklies before long. A radio-primed tune with a chorus in tow. DH

VON MAGNET Untitled

Sculptured Record RTS

The good old days of hand numbered limited editions are back, and you're advised to grab this one before everyone else does. Obscure for sure, but a beaty dance track that owes as much to SPK as Ultravox. Nice and doomy with a back stabbing delivery. DH

THE WEATHER

PROPHETS She Comes

From The Rain Elevation

The third single from Pet Astor's mob and it's a goodie. One of these guitar-toting groups are going to come bursting through into mainstream chartland sooner or later, and with Astor's naggingly commercial pen behind them, I'd say the Prophets stand a better chance than most. JH

WEBCORE The Captain's

Table Jungle RT C

Webcore are a warped band, who sound so frantic that you fear that they are about to explode any second, and a sense of relief comes over you when they get through to the end without any major accidents. A mystical, mysterious and ingenious single. Make contact with it. BR

WE THREE KINGS Oceans

DDT FF C

It's a different celtic kettle of whiskey from The Pogues but this is high-octane folk, ripe for hootenanny time, dragged along by its shirt-tails by a rousing violin and stomp-beat. Scotland's We Three Kings sound real to me, which is the right place to start sprouting from. MA

KEVIN WHITE Commuters

Dance Primitive Records

JM C

"This is the sound of the bedroom", proclaims the gushy press release of young Kevin's vinyl debut. Kevin's bedroom must be fairly large, judging from the banks of synthesisers and drum machines he keeps up there. This song was presumably inspired by his days busking in the Tube, and, while accomplished in a Numan-esque way, is as anonymous and pedestrian as the luckless lemmings of the title. NS

WHIRLPOOL GUEST

HOUSE The Changing

Face Summerhouse Records

RR C

Twee boy/girl duets can be tiresome. Ditto for bands with funny names like Whirlpool Guest House. Surprise, surprise, therefore, to spot feet tapping along to this appealing little number; it sort of sounds like a weedy Orange Juice, but the B-side proves to be a lot more manly. JH

THE WISEACRES David

Cherry Red B

They sound American, but are in fact Scottish. David promises to burst into something spectacular, but doesn't quite deliver, despite a rather nice vocal from 18 year old Sharon Bain. A bit too 1979 in a way, but shows strong potential nevertheless. JH

WORLD DOMINATION

ENTERPRISES A Hotsy

Third single from WDE, conspirators of Asbestos Lead Asbestos early last year. Almost rock, perhaps slam, but far from their throbbing live solidity. Yeah, yeah, yeah. MB

THE YOUNG GODS Did

You Miss Me? Product Inc

RT C

Insane Gal Glit cover by the Swedish group who gave us 3 minutes of sadistic ecstasy named Envoye last year. Produced by Rolo of Swans, on new label 'in association with Mute', surefire hit. Gazza Glitter gets fatter, again. MB

THE PAUL BUTTERFIELD BLUES BAND

East West
EDEL ED 212

Variations on a blues theme. East West is their second album, released on Elektra in '66 and on it the Band combine elements of rock, soul, jazz and blues in the way the late lamented Graham Bond did so well. Traditional numbers, like Adderley's jazz classic The Work Song, are dusted down and given the Butterfield once over. A great harp sound with some wicked guitar licks. Check the 13 minute title track for some authentic mid-'60s self indulgence and it's none the worse for it. A real diamond! Felix Adler

COUNTRY JOE MACDONALD

Collector's Items: The First Three Eps

Decal/Rag Baby Records LIK 8

The demo song bites back. With the apparent popularity last year of ex-Shockabilly Eugene Chadbourne and his covers of Country Joe, and other thorns in the side of Americana, it's good to hear these three original CJ EPs revitalised and set out on one album. Spanning '65 to '71, the material never loses its impertinent potency and still rings true (pose-wise) in these days of similar strife. Next up Barry McGuire's Eve Of Destruction, for sure. Dave Henderson

BOBBY DAY

Rockin' Robin

Ace CH 200

Must admit, I've never been keen on the title track, I find it too commercial for my tastes in rock 'n' roll. But there's no getting away from the fact that he had a great voice and was also a Jim Dandy songwriter. Born in Texas, he moved to LA in his mid teens where he and his group The Hollywood Flames played the night club circuit with fake moustaches from burnt matchsticks to make themselves look old enough. Sadly Day's composition Buzz Buzz Buzz isn't included here as he didn't sing lead vocal on it, but his other classics are from Over And Over to Little Bitty Pretty One, demonstrating his power to belt out up-tempo pop-rock 'n' roll. Still, he was equally at home with a ballad, as his version of When The Swallows Come Back To Capistrano goes to show. Snakey G.

EARTH OPERA

The Great American Eagle

P

I'm afraid this Earth Opera album has not worn too well. Beneath the psychedelic facade and whimsy, Earth Opera aren't much more than sub Byrds folk rock but without the melody or same assurance. Superficially pretty, mostly their music is of a dreary sameness and lacks any vital distinguishing spark or depth. Evelyn Court

THE FUGS

Golden Filth

P

For the uninitiated, The Fugs' eccentric wordplay and left-field protest material was pretty hep way back, but today it sounds like hippie dross. Golden Filth hasn't aged well, it's a live album that never gives the feeling of the show in its true sweaty and socially precise meaning. Still, that's r'n'r, and although the The Fabby Fug Bros' hearts were probably in the right places at the right time, in '87 this is as caustic as a Fairports album at the wrong speed. Dave Henderson

THE GRATEFUL DEAD

P

The Grateful Dead, before they turned on to excess, money, drugs, guns, Indian-influenced day-long raga-excursions and hair, were another racy '60s R&B pop sike-adelic band, as fresh as the morning dew, pioneers in a musical explosion. Yippies, not Hippies. Perhaps if people got to hear this, their debut album, then their peer-group pressured opinions might change. Mine did. Fascinating. Martin "Dead Head" Aston

KALEIDOSCOPE

Faintly Blowing

Five Hours Back

Re C

This is the second album from Harrow's psychedelic heroes. Their gentle, blurred music conjours up images of Hammer Horror rural rides in a land of continual autumn mists, the girls are blonde and beautiful, the men strong dreamers with torn white shirts and excessive facial hair. Don't be surprised to find poets riding on dragons as minstrels strum their lyres... It's fabulous English music, completely unnecessary and achingly lovely, seek it out. Hoxton Leonid

KALEIDOSCOPE

Tangerine Dream

Five Hours Back

Re C

Originally released in November 1967, this is their debut album and generally reckoned to be the equal of early Floyd or Soft Machine. A first listen isn't convincing but by the third time you know all the melodies and harmonies and you're hooked. Sure it's dreamy, hazy stuff. Listen to The Sky Children or Dive Into Yesterday and you know it's something special. If you like your guitars phased backwards and your lyrics full of childish wonder and fear then this record should be yours. Hoxton Leonid

JERRY LEE LEWIS

Kickin' Up A Storm

Sun LP 1045

Ch

The last couple of years have seen Little Richard become hip all over again after ten years or so on the scrapheap. Sadly, Jerry Lee has been there with him, but here's hoping that 1987 will see him in vogue again. New York upmarket fanzine Kicks and London's Charly Records are leading the way to this end, and Underground's rockin' department is right behind 'em.

The latest Sun/Charly offering comprises a batch of usually overlooked recordings from the tail end of the 1950s, the era of the pretty boys of pop, when the old school of rockers were ignored by the music industry. Presley was in the army, Little Richard a preacher, Chuck Berry in jail, and Jerry Lee's records banned because he married a 13 year old girl (quite legal in his part of the country). The best known cuts on this 15 track platter are Big Blon' Baby, Lovin' Up A Storm, Bonny B and the instrumental he cut for Phillips Int. under the name of The Hawk, In The Mood. Snakey G

LIGHTNIN' HOPKINS

Move On Out

Ch

The collection of tracks on this album come from a very odd chapter in the life of one of the true blues greats. Lightnin' recorded records for jukeboxes in black bars at a time when he was being hailed as one of the great contemporary folk artists by the honky's up in the North. He'd be touring Europe or playing a folk set at Carnegie Hall to "the smart white supper club set of middle class America" (to quote Alan Balfour's sleeve note) one minute, then, he'd be on a plane back to Houston to record the likes of the included tracks for the down home folks of the South who knew what he was talkin' 'bout.

The time is 1965 to '69 when he was with Jewel Records, having spent a good part of the early '60s owing back rent in slum apartments and moving from one bar to the next in Houston's Dowling Street section. The recordings are very clear, with occasional piano, drums and harmonica accompaniment. A bit heavy going if you're not into the blues, but you could do a lot worse than this if you were looking for somewhere to start. Snakey G

LOVE

Edsel ED218

Reissue of the debut Love album from 1966, and it's a set of material which has managed to retain its freshness over the years. Although this garage surf punk is still some distance removed from the baroque completeness of Forever Changes, those same fragile uncertainties that were characterised with the liaison of Arthur Lee and Bryan McLean on the second Love set Da Capo, are already present here. Evelyn Court

QUICKSILVER MESSENGER SERVICE

Shady Groves

Edsel XED 208

Quicksilver's third and last album still stands as a state-of-the-art acid-rock record but the silver-lined guitar alchemy that rubbed off their classic Happy Trails album (a Marquee Moon for the '60s) had given way to a more florid, frayed mood, smelling of psychedelic tendencies. By this time, QMS were on the way out. But Shady Groves has enough vivid moments when John Cippolina's guitar and the psychedelic flashes grab hold by both labels and jerk out electricity. Worth hearing. Martin Aston

Re-releases, re-issues, remixed, revitalised . . .

JONATHAN RICHMAN AND THE MODERN LOVERS

Beserkley BZCD007

With the re-release of Richman's most sought after material on album, this CD set of his mid to later period stuff makes for fine time gear for nouveau populists who's noo racking system has CD. Clarity too and songs to match as Richo goes through his Rockin' Rockin' Leprechauns and pals phase. A great collection that makes New Jersey a holiday attraction once again. Fine stuff. Dave Henderson

ANN SEXTON

Love Trails

Charly CRB 1143

I must admit I'm a bit out of my depth here. We're talking Southern deep soul from the early to mid '70s from the labels Sound Stage 7 and Seventy Seven. All I know about the lady concerned is that she has a beautiful voice, slightly reminiscent of Gladys Knight, and has been touted as "sounding like a cross between Bettye Swann and Margie Joseph". How she never achieved any commercial success is beyond me. The way she tackles a ballad is enough to melt butter while it's still in the fridge.

Just one listen to You're Letting Me Down, Keep On Holding On or the more uptempo sound of I Had A Fight With Love, and you'll understand what I'm getting at. Snakey G

THE SHIRELLES

Lost And Found

Impact

The Shirelles were the first girl group to make the top in the States, and influenced the early Beatles to such an extent that they (and several lesser Mersey combos) covered a selection of their material. An awesome pedigree, but I can't help feeling that Lost And Found is missing that special something. It's not a dancer, more a collection of unreleased tracks and studio out-takes, so expect no hits. Nevertheless both smoochers and the odd swinger are delivered with the panache and (dare I say it?) soul that one would expect from the pioneers of the girl vocal-group. Felix Adler

SOFT MACHINE

The Soft Machine

Big Beat WIK 57

Released in the UK for the first time, it shows the early origins of ultra hip

Robert Wyatt (vocalist/drummer) and currently not so hip Kevin Ayers (guitar) — the third and final member being Michael Ratledge (organ). Art Rock is the name of the game, owing much to free-form jazz and, in places, The Doors. Occasionally Hendrix comes to mind but that's probably down to ex-Animals-come-Hendrix-manager Chas Chandler co-producing this. Snakey G

STRAWBERRY ALARM CLOCK

Strawberries Mean Love

Big Beat WIK 56

It's very rare that a modern cover version manages to better a '50s or '60s original. In this case, The Adult Net's 1985 treatment of Incense And Peppermints (the song Strawberry Alarm Clock are most well known for) is the better.

The best track here is their earliest recording, the raw edged The Birdman Of Alkatrash — originally the 'A', then the 'B' side to their US No 1 Incense And Peppermints. Rainy Day Mushroom Pillow and Black Butter Present are very pleasant in a dreamy sort of way, the latter being the most psychedelic track included. On the whole though, most of the tracks are a bit of a let down.

The band split up in the early '70s, and original guitarist Ed King went on to join Lynyrd Skynyrd, whose two claims to fame were the hippy anthem Freebird and being wiped out in a plane crash. Deke Wanger

TINA TURNER

The Ike and Tina Turner

Sessions

Kent

Ike and Tina plough on at the same monotonous level, becoming vaguely annoying half way through side one . . . All the respect I had for Tina Turner disappeared the moment I saw that painful Pepsi cinema advert, although faith is temporarily restored here with the magnificent I Can't Believe What You Say. A real footstomper and the high point of the album. Felix Adler

Get Primitive! Vol 1, The

Pebbles

Hit UBIK

Some of the best of the mid '60s US garage punk — the cream of the Pebbles series on one album.

The material bands such as The Cramps, The Fuzztones and The Sting-rays have been taking inspiration from here. There's Green Fuzz by Randy Alvey & Green Fuzz, Primitive by The Groupies, You're Gonna Miss Me by The Spades, and Action Woman by The Electras — the song which was a high point of The Tall Boys set. Other gems are Five Years Ahead Of My Time by The Third Bar-do and the stinging I'm A Living Sickness by The Calico Wall.

I haven't offered any historic titbits on any of the bands, you and the sleeve notes can get acquainted after you've obtained a copy. Which is what I suggest you do, pronto. Deke Wanger

Kent Stop Dancing — The

Kent KENT 066

Starting in the mid '60s garage arena with Ski Storm by The Snowmen (Kim Fowley) and the brilliant Every Night A New Surprise by The Moving Sidewalks (featuring a Z.Z. Top person), before lapsing into the expected '60s soul dance party music, just pop that pill, chew that gum, you're at an allnighter and nothing else matters. Apart from the classic unknowns, ole Horace (the compiler) has slipped in vintage stuff from household names, to boot. There's the marvy Shake A Tail Feather by the pre-gross Ike & Tina Turner and the big band sound of Jackie Wilson on Baby Workout. The Platters and Major Lance are also included here. But while on the subject of Jackie Wilson, there's an interesting version of his Higher And Higher by Erma Franklin who has a sensational voice. Snakey G

Cascade Drop 1015

Picture it. You've spent an hour Brill-creaming your da, slipped on your television-advertised Levi jeans and donned your American high school jacket. The Saturday nite ritual completed, it's time to get in the mini-metro and go bird-doggin' chicks — or hunks if you're a man-eating mama. For this hugely popular pastime, the only accessories needed are a six pack, some gum and these two platters blaring out of the little speakers either side of your nodding dog.

Late '50s and early '60s pop rock 'n' roll at its best. Excellent value at full price, but when you consider these are budget albums you know you're onto a good thing. For an example of material; Volume One contains the likes of the Everly Brothers, Dion, Sam Cooke, Little Richard, Johnny Tillotson and two classic instrumentals in Nut Rocker by B. Bumble & The Stingers and In The Mood by The Ernie Fields Orchestra. Volume Two, which kicks off with Dion's The Wanderer, also contains numbers by Larry Williams, Bobby Day, The Chiffons and The Big Bopper. Excellent value, need I say more? Snakey G

amateur sketch: sespit

Forget the mucho cheap new Yamaha sampler for under a hundred notes. Don't bother getting the cheapo credit card Casio version either. For a mere £2.99 (or less with a touch of bartering), the Mini Piano II (HC-05) can be snapped up. A keyboard that sounds like a bad watch replete with a song book including We Are The World, a rhythm unit that sounds like Trio and a nice pic of Santa on it. Don't miss out, the pocket size orchestra starts here. Dave Henderson

INPUT OUTPUT

For all you groovy fers who are into trendy 1920s Soviet imagery and slogans, here's a line in designer wear especially for you

INPUT OUTPUT have been in operation for almost a year, manufacturing quality clothing for all seasons — strikingly designed T-shirts and vests containing your favourite Constructivist image or logo, hats, leggings and zip-up polo neck jumpers in a variety of colours, complete with tasteful sewn on patch. Personal endorsements on stage and TV have trickled in from the good, the bad, and the ugly — Frankie Goes To Hollywood, Big Audio Dynamite and Billy Bragg — so there should be something in the INPUT OUTPUT collection for everyone (well, almost). If you have problems locating any of Input Output's products, write to them at 100A Clapham Park Road, London SW4 for a catalogue. ALEX BASTEDO

When the 12-inch single was introduced — and eventually developed with remixes, special remixes, ten inch cuts and yet more remixes — it was the perfect marketing tool to push successful 45s even further up the chart. Now, for around the price of a 12 inch, Mute have just launched the first independent CD to further enhance the popularity of Erasure and their It Doesn't Have To Be single. What's more, you get an extra six tracks including the last single, Sometimes, and their cover of Abba's Gimme Gimme Gimme. Neat. Dave Henderson

Ronnie Randall rabbits on about the pros and cons of 'putting '80s style

Home computers will become the essential piece of entertainment hardware. They're the missing link that will allow all media to converge. In a few years everything will be on compact disc which will allow hi-fi sound and video visuals to be mix 'n' matched to suit your own fantasies.

Text based interactive fiction, or "adventure" games are the kind of thing where you type in responses to a given situation or problem. Your progress depends on your mental inventiveness rather than the deftness of your wrist action. Such ideas have been around for years but the recent boost in possibilities is allowing ever denser and detailed creations to emerge. One of the best and funniest is Intocom's Leather Goddesses Of Phobos, a hilarious '30s pulp sci-fi sex comedy spoof which can be played in any of three modes — tame, suggestive or lewd. You play Lane Mastodon, lone warrior in the fight to prevent the Goddesses from turning all earthlings into sex slaves.

OK, so you're bored with the 50 features that people have inked about the Band Of Holy Joy. Well, we haven't bothered to write one. Instead, we thought we'd let the group express themselves properly on some photographs of their good selves as shot by Ronnie Randall. So, what do you think? Comment enough. Holy? Joy?

Animal, mineral, vegetarian! Pratinja selects some late night scanning and recommends we fully support the wonderful work of The Fish Police. Glug!

■ Ever since Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles came to enliven, direct and infuriate the black and white market, there have been many imitators, some good, some positively diabolical, many even worse. A whole bundle of them are chafing my knees even as I type. ■ But first, as you were probably hoping, to those Turtles. Every now and again there appears on Mirage Tales an issue of TMNT, by the crafty Eastman and Laird pairing. These dolts even release one issue mini-series of the four Turtles (Michaelangelo, Raphael, Donatello and Leonardo). They fight for right.

■ Their adventures ooze style and humour with the strangely clumsy characters cunningly manipulated to appear energised in this bleakly drawn series.

■ Limping precociously along in the background is another Eclipse title, the self-declared parody of the Turtles, Adolescent Radioactive Blackbelt Hamsters. A stringier effort this, it nevertheless, features Hamster Clint, who has also made two appearances so far in Dark Knight (the classic future Batman series by Frank Miller and Klaus Jansen) parodies. Spikily, often poorly drawn, these creatures do at least exude some charm among their spotty stories. Generally, though, you'd have to be genuinely psychotic to fall for this.

■ Lee Marr's Pre-Teen Dirty-Gene Kung-Fu Kangaroos, on

Blackthorne Publishing, is only half-successful. The action is bad, the jokes are somewhat addled but the kangaroos are pretty cute. The main problem with any of these irredeemably short-lived ideas is... that the joke soon wears as thin as thin can be.

■ Bypassing Eclipse's much dinkier Adventures of Guerrilla Groundhog, lest you get too anxious, and setting fire to my appalling copy of the ugly Cyborg Gerbils, an ineffectual UK effort from Trigon comics, we begin to actually find some REAL quality! Mouth-wateringly so.

■ Fish Police, on Fishwarp, is one of the finest things around. Steve Moncuse's characters just bleep with life in this alternative cop series; the heroes are heroic,

FRED ASTAIRE tribute part two the humour fiercely sublime, the artwork IMMACULATE!

■ Neil The Horse (Renegade Press) has part two of its Fred Astaire tribute on parade, even if it is nine months late. A thoroughly bizarre comic, this ink-blot-come-horsey wanders through extraordinary hep-cat sequences out on da street, and there literally are cats, dancing girls, sheet music and verse. Plus old Fred of course, but who gives a toss about him? Renegade are a perverse company at the best of time, usually providing the best of times. Quite what we're to make of this, however, I've no idea!

■ Best to just scoot onto Samurai Penguin and forget about it. This artful sentinel who battles against the predatory oafs that would threaten his breed, is a real delight. Deviously simplistic it has you gawping in suspicion at one moment, cracked down the middle the next.

■ Dinosaur Rex, from the Upshot publishers, is hardly an animal comic, even if there is an upright talking dinosaur accompanying Hempsted Wallop and Cousin Flavia. Duubadah, an elegant dinosaur if ever there was one, is all set to help them recover their family fortune. One of the more glorious experiences in the current comic crop, the coyly trim figures and the sumptuous colours rage upon the eye for some time after the initial reading. Quick reminding peeks are the order of the day.

■ So far, I'm being gentle with you. Virtually all of these comics will provide more lasting refreshment than a brace of poorly baked indie singles. Perhaps I shouldn't be saying that (not if you value your reading spec - ed)... but we're talking about evotic quality here, with a four dimensional pull on the mind (wow!). We're talking...

The Muse is the message

Martin Aston goes ga ga over Throwing Muses

→ After the eruption, does the volcano still look spectacular? When the party's over, do you still want to be friends with your guests? Or put another way; when the furore over what was voted best debut album of '86 died down, did the record still sound as startling?

→ Of course it does, if not even better; Throwing Muses' eponymous album is still throwing up sparks six months later. This three girl, one guy group — step forward Kristen Hersh, Tanya Donnelly, Leslie Langston and David Narclzo — from America's North-East coastline (Boston and Newport actually) are sincerely humble but know what we know now.

→ "We always trusted the music," says a demure Kristen, singer, writer, guitarist as well as graduate of philosophy, psychology and motherhood (she's 20), "but we weren't sure if other people would. We thought it might have been just our stories or our band."

→ It was Throwing Muses' American-only, self-produced cassette (unavailable, natch, with five extra tracks than the album) that instigated 4AD mentor Ivo to take the group as his first American signing. David: "He said he liked the fact that he never knew which direction we were going to turn. That always kept him excited." Maybe it was just the extraordinary mesh of folk-rock, post-punk feminism and uncanny tempo changes that did it.

→ David: "I felt that it was going to be rawer than it turned out but then I realised it was perfect as it was because I think we could have alienated some of the audience that we have now who wouldn't have been able to relate to it."

→ The most integral facet to the album was Kristen's personal, cathartic expressions of guilt, claustrophobia and struggle for independence and sensitivity in a society that ordered role-playing and administered exploitative pressures. It was an emotionally committed 40 minutes. A lot of people related to Kristen in the same manner others did to Morrissey. Such exorcisms can be fascinating; Throwing Muses was brilliantly fascinating.

→ Kristen: "I think I look for honesty in music which entails a lot of mystery too because if you're completely honest then there are bound to be a lot of things which you don't quite understand." Does she find it hard talking about such personal songs? "It depends. I think the songs are not me, they're very much beyond me, so sometimes I forget about them, so the songs talk about themselves a lot better than I do."

→ "Yes, it was very life-affirming. If I hadn't done the album, I couldn't have let the baby into all the garbage that was going on, but since we did release it, it was a complete catharsis. I think it's a very joyous album because of that."

→ The new EP Chains Changed — a big clue — has two pre-Dylan songs — Snailhead and Cry Baby Cry — and two post-Dylan — Reel and Finished. Have the songs changed since the baby? "Yes, they seem to be more 'rites of passage' things. I don't have too much dirgeness to leak out any more. It's less personal . . . It's like looking at things now, which in a sense makes it a lot easier to look at what is in right now. Dylan's one of the very best things that ever happened to me. Everyone should have a little squish!"

→ What records have given the feeling that your album has given to others?

→ "I like The Violent Femmes' first album, X's Under The Big Black Sun, The Beatles' White Album . . . I don't like much music."

→ But you'll love Throwing Muses. MARTIN ASTON

Formed in Northampton in mid-86 from the remains of several minor cult bands, Venus Fly Trap consist of Alex Novak (vocals), Tony Booker (guitar), Chris Evans (bass) and Dave Freak (percussion, keyboards) • They have gigged frequently around the Midlands and in London over the past six months, supporting the likes of Dave Howard Singers, Guana Batz and The Jazz Butcher • For those who like their music dressed in fashionable black with winklepickers, there is a live tape available on Evermore Music to bear out inevitable comparisons with the Velvet, the Sisters, The Stooges and Joy Division. Duck! Quick! Jigsaw is back. Last year's sharp toothed Winebars And Werewolves album is finally accompanied by the debut 12 inch and, true to form, Jigsaw Dodd And The Sons Of Harry Cross display their sharp Scouse humour, ripping into many a helpless victim on five grub-stained tracks • The Birkenhead bard goes back to poetic basics on Psycho Nazi Police Cadet in 'Where's Your Muzzy' Shock, and Twist In The Tale Of The Grab-A-Granny Night before letting it all hang out on the full frontal assault of They're A Funny Fin' Crowd Them Student Types, Nightmare At Norman's, and the Liverpool anthem Always The Bridesmaid, Never The Bride. Few are destined for Radio One airplay, and there can be no finer recommendation than that • If the ultimate destiny of their Probe Plus label-mates Half Man, Half Biscuit was to die young, Jigsaw and the boy's more serious concerns point to a real future as the thorn in the side of today's squeaky clean, government-approved pop business • Asked about the follow up album our boy-genius explains that he just needs a few more nights in with the telly switched off to sort out the Last Of The Summer Winos.
RONNIE RANDALL

- The hand that rocks The Cradle is pulling pints behind the bar of The Trafalgar pub in Manchester. Tucked away in a dimly lit alcove, far from the maddening crowd of lunchtime revellers, are five noisy conspirators seated around a large rickety wooden table.
- For nigh on two years this has been the regular watering hole of politico popsters Easterhouse — a place where scores have been settled, tosses have been argued and the world boisterously set to rights. Lead pontificator Andy Perry often engaged in turbulent conversations, nay debates, denouncing political parties right, left and centre and spitting contempt for so-called "political" bands who were never, in his opinion, true to their cause.
- When Easterhouse records failed to translate their hard-earned indie success into chart placings, Andy P tried to moderate the music. The reality is there was never anything wrong with the music.

Ivor Perry could see it coming. Being the musical mastermind behind Easterhouse he knew he didn't need his brother to survive. So now The Cradle rocks and Andy Perry falls on deaf ears.

- Along with Ivor is Gary Rostock (the original drummer in Easterhouse), Lee Bennett (bass player from Soil), Andy Rousley (singer) and Craig Gannon (late of Aztec Camera, The Colourfield, The Bluebells and more recently, the scurrilous Smiths). A unit, I'm assured, that is destined to inflict "tuneful violence" on an unsuspecting public.

● Strewn across the table are three of this week's music press, all of which include a statement from Andy Perry pointing the finger. "A number of members have left Easterhouse after being informed that their personal performance and objectives were no longer compatible with the aims of the band."

- And so, The Cradle is born. The name has no particularly mindboggling connotations and although the band expressed their doubts after seeing it in print for the first time, they defend it by saying it's only a matter of time before the music takes over and the name pales into insignificance.

● The group intend to do their fair share of rocking out (what? — ed), and Gary describes them as the ultimate "classic rock band". Hope that doesn't mean long curly perm wigs and spray-on purple lycra pants. But what will they actually be like?

"The Cradle are going to be a great musical band, not some kind of socialist mega-pop. We're talking tuneful violence here," blurts Ivor. And, of course, It's Too High, their debut 45 for Rough Trade, is the classic rock single. Expect no easy Easterhouse comparisons here, this thunders along ferociously making even Motorhead sound demure. Still, find out for yourselves. The single is due out at the beginning of April.

With the threat of yet another country rock revival looming over us, we at Underground were rather interested when the splendid STARS OF HEAVEN 12 inch dropped through the letterbox (they're so good, they've already headed off from the limited country in the '80s stance). Deciding it was time for a showdown, I attempted to phone Stephen in his hometown of Dublin. Only one problem; no one appears to be at home! Oh well, let's give their new single Never Saw You another spin. Melancholy tunes and softly yearning vocals blend to create real feel and an aching passion — truly a song to make you sigh and so, sighing, I tried Stephen's number again. Ah, that familiar bleep at the end of the line. Unfortunately it wasn't Stephen but his mother was available for comment: "Stephen's gone to the station to collect his girlfriend!". Never mind. Another time eh? (Our intrepid team will try again next month, buy the single while we wait). Alex Kadis

BEAT POETS

The BEAT POETS are a young five piece band from Edinburgh who have made one of the best demo tapes I've heard for years. It consists of four instrumental songs that send my heart racing while my shirt develops strange Hawaiian patterns. The Beat Poets play instrumental surf melodies of their own composition, drenched in an ocean of feedback guitars, galloping drums and a wailing nearly-out-of-control saxophone. If you ever loved the Raybeats, the FleshTones or thought the Ventures a bit safe, try and catch these boys. My tip for 1987. Hoxton Leonid la June Bride spikey pop-style — you know, the post-Buzzcocks school of thought that's been exaggerated and ruined by the likes of The Soup Dragons and Talulah Gosh. Two yers later, Phil makes the decision to change his future and divorce The June Brides, a move he'd been waiting for as he felt that his ramshackle days were now behind him. As a conscious move away from the group sound, Phil chose the excellent, melancholy Waiting For A Change as his debut solo single for Creation, back in its original form. Didn't you realise the pertinence of that lyric, Phil? The change you'd been waiting for? "No, I hadn't thought of it actually." It's a good thing I told him then. Martin Aston

NAMEDROP

Never underestimate the charm of serendipity. Three years ago PHIL WILSON wrote the country & western ramble Waiting For A Change for his group The June Brides. Too boring, they said; and so the song was rewritten a

"In my pipe and slippers, do I look like Jack The Ripper?" . . . MOMUS lets loose the final part of his sex-and-socialisation trilogy with Murderers, The Hope Of Women on Creation during March.

From The Happy Family with Dave Weddell of Josef K in Edinburgh to solitary confinement in London, Momus, aka Nick Currie, has moved from The Beast With Three Backs and middle-class anxiety, to Biblical tales on the Circus Maximus album, ending with marriage and masks in Murderers . . . pausing only for an EP of three Jacques Brel covers. On his journey, Momus has married acoustic bliss with lyrical brilliance in a series of wickedly brooding, emotional masterpieces that are "willing to go to any lengths to penetrate the heart and to deal with any subject." Murderers . . . together with its B-sides What Will Death Be Like? and Eleven Executioners considers death at face value, following his choice of Brel covers which were written in the Belgian's final, aching moments in the throes of cancer. Passionate and intellectual, the very best combination, Momus is presently without peers. Martin Aston

O YUKI CONJUGATE

Now you certainly won't find this bunch of unlikely lads courting Pepsi & Shirly down at the Limestone club . . . O YUKI CONJUGATE, a loose collective from darkest Leeds (whose second LP, Into Dark Water, was recently released on Final Image Records through Red Rhino and the Cartel) would rather sit at home with a mug of tea creating their own brew of hypnotic, atmospheric backing tracks for your every mood. From Morricone to moribund, it's well worth sampling (sic) Alex Bastedo

A HOUSE

A HOUSE are a vibrant Dublin combo who are about to make a big noise. Ireland recently saw them appearing on the much acclaimed Debris compilation with That's Not The Truth — a scathing tale about journalists and the porkies that we tell.

A House have produced some of the most exhilarating and intelligent music to have emerged from this mess. Their new single Call Me Blue due for release this month on Rough Trade is no exception. It cries out above the prevailing mediocrity with its uplifting riff and plaintive vocal. Watch out for A House here in April — well worth a butchers and that IS the truth! Alex Kadis

MASSIVE EDUCATION PROGRAM IN ONE CHAMP SIZED BOX So, you wanna find out about the Sun label? You want to be able to hold your head up in the rock 'n' roll pubs of the world and tell people who Sonny Burgess was? Well, you need this simple survival kit, Sun, The Rocking Years, a box set containing a mere 12 albums. But first, let Snakey G explain what's in it for you . . .

Being handed this 12 LP bumper issue box set to review was a pretty daunting task, made harder by the fact I didn't get to keep it at the end of the day! Going through it track by track, and artist by artist, would make it kinda dull reading for anyone but die-hard rockabilly collectors who'd probably know everything here already. So, let's talk about me.

I discovered Sam Phillips' Sun label in 1975, when I was a 14 year old teddy boy, and heard Billy Riley's Flying Saucers Rock 'n' Roll for the first time (a version of this is included here). It blew me away, and I've been collecting the label ever since.

Everything recorded at the Sun Studios at 107 Union Avenue, Memphis, has such a clear, beautiful sound impossible to describe. One time Sun living legend, Charlie Feathers described Sun studio thus, "Moving from Sun to other labels was going from a Cadillac to a Ford," but sadly main man Feathers isn't represented here. Most of the rockabilly material he recorded at Sun was either taped over or was done at private sessions with Feathers keeping the masters.

Although Charly have made the majority of the Sun catalogue available over the last umpteen years, with this set there is a staggering 82 unissued tracks. There are 51 alternate versions and the remainder previously unissued in any form. As well as the big boys, Carl Perkins, Roy Orbison, Jerry Lee Lewis, Warren Smith, and Charlie Rich, there's a whole host of lesser known hep cats such as Jack EARL, Rudy Grayzell, Malcolm Yelvington and the magnificent Johnny Carroll. To just skim the surface, my personal fave tracks, on the rock 'n' roll side, are After The Hop by Bill Pinkey (originally a Phillips Int. disc), That's The Way I Love by Johnny Carrol (again Phillips Int.), Flatfoot Sam by Tommy Blake, and Rosco Gordon's Sally Jo and Cheese And Crackers.

As for the out and out rockabilly; Dixie Fried by Carl Perkins, We Wanna Boogie by Sonny Burgess, Red Hot by Billy Riley and the equally frantic Come On Little Mama by Ray Harris (included here in two versions). As for what's missing, I found it strange that Johnny Cash's Get Rhythm and Luther Played The Boogie were left off, also Be Mine, All Mine by Johnny Powers, Tootsie by Carl McVoy and Whirlwind by Charlie Rich, all being rather brilliant, but still, there is so much material to compile from.

Side seven is devoted to an, unknown to me, Kenny Parchman. I just don't know how his music has avoided me all these years. His Love Crazy Baby nearly shot my socks off! None of his seven tracks were issued in the '50s, a big mistake to say the least. Another pleasant surprise was Hey Bo Diddly, an instrumental tribute to the squidly one by in-house drummer Jimmy Van Eaton and friends.

I'd be giving you if I was to say every track was a rock boppin' scorcher. This set has its share of turkeys, but in general it's a fine collection and well worth owning. Oh yes, the 52 page booklet is excellent, many newly unearthed photographs and sacks full of information. Compilers Martin Hawkins and Colin Escott spent a long time over this one.

Hold out. The reason Snakey can't prop up his other Sun specials with this tasteful box, is that we're offering it up for a lucky person who can answer three convoluted questions. Just slap it all on a postcard and send it off to Underground/Rockabilly, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ.

Snakey G checks the mirror, shakes the grease and lets the cats into the bag . . .

Naughty old King Kurt (ahem) were back in the tabloids at the end of last month after a groupie allegedly bonked a 15 year old virgin and then went for singer Sweeney (ooo-er). The band and the girlie denied it, the kid and students present at the college gig said "Yes, it happened". The journo we sent out to check into this interviewed a number of reliable eye-witnesses, he even tracked down a tea-total type. All said "Yes, it happened, they did it". Another said "It was terrible, one minute she was drunk at the bar going on about VD, the next she was up on stage on top of this little fella humping away!" Another big fuss about nothin'.

Last year was a good one for ABC and ID Records, with releases from the likes of The Guana Batz, Demented Are Go and The Fuzztones all scoring indie chart hits. 1987 kicks off with an album by The Deltas called Mad For It on ID. ABC spring into action with the compilation LP The Magnificent Seven featuring seven of their bands, past and present, namely The Guana Batz, The Meteors, Demented Are Go, The Deltas, The Sting-rays and Frenzy. This will be followed by an album of new recordings by '70s rock heroes The Flamin' Groovies.

Due to circumstances beyond the label's control, the past five Media Burn releases were so late they got lost in the Christmas wasteland. So to quickly re-cap, you may have missed albums by Nigel Lewis, Bad Karma Beckons, The Surfadelics, The Locomotives and ex-Creation signings The X-Men. Media Burn's first release of the year will be a mini album by the very mysterious Ug And The Cavemen, a group the label is going very tight-lipped about.

Big Beat, once the leading label for current garage/psycho/rockabilly bands, were very quiet last year devoting all their energies to The Cramps and re-issue projects. But 1987, we're informed, will see the label creeping back onto the scene. First new act looks like being Living In Texas, who've previously worked with Chainsaw through Red Rhino.

Quiphola

Middlesex's Nervous Records has had a quiet start to the year so far but all that's changing with the release of a 12 inch EP from Torment entitled Mystery Man, to be closely followed by an album from Southampton's finest rockabilly combo Get Smart. We here have just found out that Nervous act The Sidewinders feature among their number the son of Tony Sheridan who used The Beatles as a backing band on record and at The Star Club, Hamburg in 1961. So now you know.

Scottish duo Nyah Fearties, a band The Pogues took under their wing last year, have their first record out this month on LYT Records. It's entitled A Tasty Heidfu and it was recorded in a barn in their home town of Lugton (that's in Scotland).

There's a new 12 inch just out from Bam Caruso's resident genius, Nick Haeffner, entitled Back In Time For Tea. Equally as interesting is From The House Of Lords, a compilation of new psych groups. We here are glad to see the label, known more for its re-issue projects, are putting money into current artists inspired by the heady daze of the late '60s.

Milkshakes Records' latest offering is the incredible Acropolis Now LP by those Chatham terrors Thee Mighty Caesars. Thee Caesars feature ex-members of the now defunct Milkshakes and Prisoners with some backing vocals from The Delmonas for good measure. Thee Caesars follow this up with another album, Wiseblood, on newly formed Ambassador Records (through Pinnacle).

Hit Records are now coming up to their tenth anniversary. With all the experience they've gained over the years, they are one of the few small time labels who know how to package their product in full colour sleeves and still make big profits. The first release in 1987 is Run Chicken Run Vol. 1 — The Cannibals Vs The Surfadelics, a side each from two of the biggest noises on the garage scene. Also just out is a three track seven inch from newcomers The Bigs entitled Leavin' Here.

GANGO FEVER OVER LUGTON

Nyah Fearties indoctrinate Hoxton Leonid into the genteel art of garbage disposal

Nyah Fearties are not a folk band, they are not caricature drunken Scots, they are not punks, and they are not part of any roots revival. On the other hand, they are all of the above. Live they use an acoustic five string guitar (this will be explained later), an acoustic bass and a dustbin. Stephen shouts and hits the bass harder than anyone, while David shouts at his guitar as if trying to prevent it from climbing up him . . .

The sound they create is extraordinary, it's chaotic, it's loud and it seems to be deliberate. To support this theory they've just released their debut album, and it captures the passionate mania of their live performances. The LP was recorded in a cowshed to be precise, on a small farm in Lugton. It took two days to complete and they are rightly quite proud of it.

♦ And, it all has quite a rural feel to it. Did they intend this as a homage or acknowledgement of their Celtic origins?

♦ "No, no. We were planning to put some chicken noises on, but a fox broke into the hen house and killed them all. What was that about Celtic?"

♦ "Oh, I see. No, not really. I suppose we heard all that sort of stuff as kids, but we're more into reggae, Hank Williams, The Clash, Gid Tanner And His Skillet Lickers . . ."

♦ Who?

♦ "You don't know him? He was brilliant, it was a sort of 1920s country medicine show . . ."

♦ I had to ask David about his guitar or 'ganjo' as he insists on calling it. Why does it only have five strings, and isn't it in danger of falling totally to pieces?

♦ "Oh yes, it's practically in bits now. I don't know what'll happen then."

♦ Buy a new one?

♦ "No, I don't think I'd go that far. One of the machine heads fell off when I got it, so I tuned the strings to a banjo tuning . . . I really think it sounds better like that. Especially when I play slide."

♦ Of course, the dreaded slide playing. Nyah Fearties don't sound like any other band I've ever heard. They're raucous, passionate and quite unsullied.

♦ We should treasure bands like this.

KILLER JOE

Felix Adler checks his reflection and punches out...

So, what have The June Brides, Fantastic Something, The Pastels, The Suede Crocodiles, Vital Disorders, Protex, Hurrah!, Girls At Our Best, Television Personalities, The Sinatras, St John's Alliance, Marine Girls, The Wild Flowers, Big Table and The Distractions all got in common? Apart from having been part and parcel of a pop lineage which brought together diverse labels from the primal independent boom time, they're all featured on the new Cherry Red compilation series Seeds (and that's Volume One, Pop). Pop concentrates on these pouting pop prima-donnas or pretties, and you can win one of ten copies of the album if you get these two questions right and are one of the first ten to be drawn out of an upturned waste paper basket on April 13 (unlucky for some). If proof of the gargantuan greatness of this platter were needed, just check out the raving rave review elsewhere in this ish, then let your mind boggle on...

1 Which label did Protex later sign for (it begins with P)? + 2 The Marine Girls split in two with Tracey Thorn becoming an Everything But The Girl. What happened to the rest of the group (clue — think of fish)?
So, they're pretty easy. Send your answers on a postcard to Underground/Seeds, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ. PS: Those wonderful Cherry Red persons are still searching for copyright owners of tracks for future parts of this wondrous series, so, if you are in contact with AED, Ana Hausen, Bet Lynch's Legs, Boo Hooray, Future Toys, Gods Toys, Grow Up, Greenfield Leisure, Johnny Curious, Steve Miro, Out On Blue Six, Pete Best Beatles, Smack, Suburban Studs, Tarzan 5, Tours, Viletones, Wild Giraffes or Zeitgeist... then get in touch with Cherry Red (sharpish). Bit like Surprise, Surprise, isn't it?

Veteran hard-bop drummer Tommy Chase and his Quartet follow up their noo Stiff 45, Killer Joe, with a compact disc long player. Called The Groovemaster, it sees the unlikely collaboration of Tom with Trevor Horn at the production helm — with no adverse effects, surprisingly — let's hope it opens the floodgates...

Former Prisoner Jamie Taylor re-enters the fray with a rather enterprising new single. Blow Up is a Jimmy Smith-type jazz-tinged blaster taken from the '60s cult film of the same name starring David Hemmings (written by Herbie Hancock and performed in the film by The Yardbirds!). An album from the amusingly named James Taylor Quartet, titled Mission Impossible is due next month... That other former Prisoner, Graham Day has been equally industrious building a new empire with The Mighty Caesars who've scheduled a rather ambitious five LP's in the next six months, the first of which, Wiseblood, is out on Ambassador this month... The Kick, East London's exalted Garage/Modsters, have had the audacity to split this month, in spite of finally securing an Indie album deal. It seems that vocalist Richard Brimcombe and guitarist Rob Adams prefer the life of the street busker, while drummer Chris White has joined The Palaminos...

...Just in case you haven't heard (and you bloody well ought to have!) the new frequency to set that FM dial in London is 94.9... Shock horror! cries of "leave it out, I'm under 30!". Yes, I know, it's Radio London, home of Tony Blackburn, but on Tuesdays (ten to midnight) the enigmatic Giles Peterson spins the hottest jazz waxes you ever did hear on his Mad On Jazz show. Check it out... The Blues Brothers Rhythm And Blues review, or is it The Boogie Brothers Blues Band (or even The Good Ole Boys?) well, whoever it is, their Time single is at last being released through the Cartel for national distribution (on Unicorn). They've already got through 3,000 copies at gigs in the last three months alone... Sad to hear about Topper Headon's arrest recently, that's the first thing we've heard from him since the brilliant Leave It To Luck last year. Meanwhile, his ex-vocalist, Jimmy Helms has been searching through various old soul collections for a new project, as well as recording some demos with songwriter Steve Lironi... Ironic that it may be the recent spate of old Atlantic, and Jackie Wilson singles, that have found themselves in the UK top ten after 20 odd years in the wilderness is a sad reflection on the state of the British 'Music Industry'. I mean, as '60s soul goes they're pretty boring examples. Save the expensive hyped videos and pointless remixes for the plebs. For some real wicked soul check out the latest Harboro' Horace production Kent Stop Dancing: The Sequel which at last throws some light on the legendary Ski Storm Part 1 by The Snowmen.

Guaranteed to enliven the most boring of parties... The Key, that LA christian mod band whose 'religion is reflected in our music' release their debut LP this month, titled (appropriately enough) The Golden Age (on Unicorn)... Issue 23 of the country's top selling, and certainly most professional modzine, In The Crowd is now available with a limited edition flexi featuring The Offbeats and The Pictures, as well as countless features, articles and interviews for the mod minded punter (£1.20 inc p & p from 4, Rue Du Pre, St. Peter Port, Guernsey)... Makin' Time, the hippest thing to come out of the Midlands since The Wanderers (wot? — ed) a hundred odd years ago, are rumoured to be releasing a live 'epitaph' following their split last December... It seems they've turned up an early live performance at London's 100 Club, which will be released as a mini-LP costing a meagre £3.99 under the possible title Time, Trouble And Money... More on that next month... That just about wraps it up from me chaps, so I'll love ya and leave ya with this one: Just who was Maxwell Smart and what car did he drive...? Answers on a postcard, and the first one'll receive the album of his choice from i'll ole Felix...

1 The three members of Hurrah!, Paul, Taffy and Dave, have known each other since they were at school! "When we were 19 or 20 we formed the band, and played in pubs and colleges. Then, four years ago, we released four independent singles on Kitch-eware."

2 Hurrah! signed to Arista on the strength of the tracks which have been recently released as their album, Tell God I'm Here! "Originally, the album was recorded on a low budget, and some of the songs are two or three years old," says Paul.

3 Hurrah! are no strangers to the rigours of life on the road! "We've done numerous support tours," they sigh, "and we're shortly going to be on tour as support with The Stranglers."

4 Their previous single, Sweet Sanity, was not originally recorded as a single! "So we were over the moon when it got to number 75 in the charts," they say. "It's about getting old, and the paranoia you go through, which we all seem to be going through right now. After all, we're 25 now..."

5 Hurrah!, for those who don't know, are a gee-tar band in the finest tradition! "My guitar hero has always been Jimi Hendrix," says Paul, "ever since I was a little kid, though I don't know whether that shows in the music."

6 Hurrah!'s music is rock 'n' roll 'n' melody! "Musically, I couldn't say what our influences are. We never try and analyse what we do, because we don't want to spoil the intrigue for ourselves. We just want to let it develop by itself."

7 Their latest single is the excellent If Love Could Kill, and it's about infidelity! "We write our songs from personal experience," says Paul, but adds that he's "not at liberty to divulge exactly what that was all about, because certain girlfriends are still in the dark about it all".

8 Their songs have a common theme! "Most of the songs are about honesty and dishonesty, and the contradictions between good and bad."

9 Hurrah! are Newcastle bonnie lads, and proud of it! "Because we don't live in London, we've developed without any sense of what's hip. We actually live in a small pit village north of Newcastle, so we're kept very down to earth — nobody there would stand for any of that big headed rock 'n' roll shit. We'd never move away from the village, not if we could help it. It's a cliched thing, but the people are more friendly, and they have more fun, even if they are all on the dole. But it is bleak, because there is nothing there, and musically it's a dump."

10 Hurrah! loved Auf Wiedersehen, Pet! "It hit home, and it showed the Geordie sense of humour brilliantly," they say.

11 But Paul says he no longer gets time to watch the soaps, his favourite being Brookside! "Though I never got to grips with Coronation Street, I'm afraid."

12 Hurrah! aren't big on the ambition front! "Our ambition's always been just to be in a position to record what we want. Obviously, the record company want some commercial success, but that's not our goal. It's only an aim insofar as we need some success in order to keep them happy."

13 Outside Hurrah!, Paul's personal ambitions are "absolutely nil"! He's a pretty singular minded chap — he also says he has no other outside interests. How does he spend his spare time? "Writing songs."

14 Hurrah!'s mams and dads aren't too sure what their lads are up to! "They've been a little bit confused as to what we're doing with our lives. I think they're just beginning to understand what it's all about."

15 Hurrah! say Red Wedge, no thanks! "I find the left wing groups very unsatisfactory. In theory I agree with Red Wedge, but in practice it lacks appeal. It's so depressing, it should be called Grey Wedge. It needs a few more superficial bands in it to liven it up."

16 No, they're not anti-religion, despite the album's title! They called the album Tell God I'm Here because "It's taken so long to get this far that it feels as if we must have died and gone to heaven, and we've been doing purgatory for the past five years."

17 Hurrah! say they don't read their press cuttings! "We don't pay any attention to bad reviews, so we feel if we have a good review we should treat it the same way." And yet they could be the biggest thing since, um, Dire Straits... "We don't think about it. We'd hate that if it spoils the group."

18 They don't think they're the most accomplished of groups, which is part of their charm. "Hopefully our music's got a human element to it — four people fing up a lot, trying to avoid being professional without being contrived. The records are always flawed, and we always f up a lot live."

19 Hurrah! do have their doubts about supporting The Stranglers! After all, Cornwell's mob have been around a bit. "So we've been putting '1977 meets 1987' on our press releases. But they were the first live band I saw. And I like the way they've stayed outside of it all and continued their own way despite trends. I have no idea what the Stranglers' audience will be like, though."

20 Hurrah! want to go Stateside! "We've always thought we'd be better appreciated in the States. About 18 months ago when we were at our lowest ebb, we thought about selling up and going out there to see what happened. Luckily we made a last ditch effort here, but we should be going over there soon to play. Yeah, I know stadium rock is a worrying term, but I think American audiences are more open minded. I think everywhere outside Britain is — we supported Prefab Sprout in Italy and the audiences were much more natural. Over here it's too dependent on things other than the music."

MASTERMIX

Wildman DJ Paul Howard surveys the latest dance beats from both sides of the Atlantic and, with the demise of Streetwave, tries to explain where all those def sounds are going to come from

This month, I'm pleased to say, what's really moving is entirely British. The best groove so far this year is from Scotland and it shows London and New York exactly how it should be done, a one sided, one track 12 inch (it doesn't need any dub or instrumentals), All You Need Is Love by The JAMS is more than rife with a bit of The Beatles (with a dash of MC5 and Samantha Fox). It seems to be anti AIDS, but as I know nothing about the band it could easily be a piss take.

Either way this is a superb jam, if you can find it, buy it (it's so dodgily constructed in legal terms that no distributor info is given).

Moving on, look out for the Wild Bunch's The Avenue and The Look Of Love on Fourth And Broadway. And another crew set to take some red hot coals back to NY are Renegade Sound Waves (formerly The Jackal). Their track due out on Rhythm King in late April is called The Kray Twins and is about everybody's favourite, Fasteners. This track is destined to be very large.

Three demos doing the rounds that look promising. First one is from the Cookie Crew And Beatmaster and it's called Rock The House. It's a raw house track that reminds you just how good all the early TRAX things really were.

Adrian Sherwood's World records are currently hawking around a tape with both Tackhead and Fats Comet on it. Tackhead with vocals by Ronnie and Maggie over crashing guitar and Walk On sung by the Kop. The Fats Comet track is their strongest yet called My One And Only One and it drags Wolfman Jack screaming into the '80s over a backing of Chiffons' type harmonies and power drums.

The last tape is from Newtrament who did London Bridge Is Falling Down, Britain's first real hip hop record way back on Jive. Newtrament himself was so pleased with the way that Jive handled the rumoured 400,000 sales worldwide that they gave up in disgust, but, three years later he's back with some new and very strong material, that surprisingly may not be handled by Jive. Meanwhile, in New York it's war again. As the Zulu nation falls apart, New Jersey and the Bronx are as busy as can be shooting each other in record stores and clubs. Why? Well apparently the New Jersey boys have taken offence to The Bridge Is Over by Scott La Rock (on South Bronx), the track being the latest in the Bridge South Bronx saga.

On import at the moment and well worth shelling out for are Scott La Rocks' The Bridge Is Over on South Bronx Records and The Storm by Double Image on Aleem's NIA label (which manages to make the Monkees' theme sound threatening — I love this record but no one seems to be playing it, so you'll have to search it out for yourself).

Also worth checking is The Fly Boys, on Beastie Records, with The New Style (Fly Style). Unbelievably grubby and not for the sensitive.

Over here Flame Records have recently released Schooly D's Saturday Night, so if you didn't get the import get this now. The same goes for Toney Rome's immensely underrated Rock This Way on the ever vigilant Rhythm King label.

There are five 3 Wise Men.

Can you count? "Sarf Landen" they cry at the outset of their Refresh single. Can't they spell? Ask about the music and Fil Chill admits to programming it all on a home computer. They don't play instruments? Well, apparently no, no and no, but who cares when the resultant sound is meaty, beaty, big and bouncy? Hard hip-hop from an inner city hell. The message is serious, not for them the fashionable macho man image so dominant on the rap scene. The Wise Men have a conscience and with it create the hardest hitting home grown hit-hop yet. The sound and subject may be gruff and gritty, but the method is distinctly hi-tech. The computer is the future, they claim. A new musical revolution is breaking, one with byte, threatening to chew up all existing forms of melody making. This is the sound of the suburbs — '87 style. A vicious blending of new technology and old tyme vocal chords. Fil is the Atari ST buff, while Jemski forms the rhythmic foundation. "We're into technology, it's the new frontier. A Synclavier costs £50,000 yet you can do all the tricks and much more on an Atari with all the extras for a couple of grand. Anyone with a home micro can have a 24 track." The 3 Wise Men are self taught, and limited to existing software, but computer literates will be able to create their own programs, not to mention recording, producing, marketing, distributing, designing, artwork, typesetting, video animation and all the other tricks you can get up to. The bedroom record company will never be the same. "We lay all the sounds into the ST then chop 'em up, slow 'em down, turn 'em upside down, back to front, whatever... We don't manually edit anything, everything is digital — sampled sound apart from the vocals. Drum sounds might be slamming doors, broken glass — the sounds of urban life. You can change any individual note at will. It's user friendly, a computer tells you when you make a mistake. Non musicians will become musically creative, the possibilities are staggering, total musical freedom." People love the animation, the graphics, the games. Now they want a music to suit and they're starting to create it themselves. London will cease to be so dominant in this brave new world of technology and simplicity. The punk slate will be wiped clean. 24 track studios will become obsolete, buggered, mere editing suites. Really cheap personal systems are arriving by the day, opening up the possibilities to everyone. Firebird produce a passable drum synthesizer for £1.99! And the 3 Wise Men? Peckham? South London? — "We're not angry young men, we're just making a statement about our lives, echoing the opinions of those around us. Computer music isn't cold Kraftwerk anymore, we're programming in real feel and dynamics. Refresh is a combination of everything we stand for. We are a real band, a human sound. We just employ the best and cheapest method of proving it." RONNIE RANDALL

Who remembers the hard rap 'n' rhythmic attack of Basement 5's classic Silicone Chip or Last White Christmas? A band ahead of their time I hear you cry, and you'd be right. Well, welcome back into the fray their founder and mentor Dennis Morris, a man also known for his skill as a lensman, with more fresh, urban rhythms, four sharp haircuts and a penchant for cycling gear (the pedalling kind) collectively known as BOSS. The Boss beat is well wicked, the Boss vibes hard, and the Boss groove a sure fire cure for static feet! Watch out for the Boss party appearing on a dance-floor near you very soon. Jerry Smith

Big Black assume the position, rip up their guest list and tell Martin Aston about the secret art of audience taunting

Steve Albini, bad wolf journo for Chicago's Forced Exposure, never went out of his way to win friends. Big Black, punk-brutal guitar-metal trio from the same windy city, starring Albini and cohorts Dave Riley and Santiago Durango, aren't the types to invite all the A&R men in for free. On a return visit to London to record their follow-up to 1986's white-hot Atomizer, a quick gig saw their record company Blast First compile a guest list of 227. Albini whips out a fan letter that's just turned up: inside, a girl who announces she's already tongue-lashed Albini in print starts accusing Steve the journo of being a "dancer-on-other-people's-graves" before ordering a place as No 228. Hmmmm . . .

Steve: "When you're a secret, then the only people that come to see you are those who honestly have got some idea of what's going on, and now there's this hip element that's really repulsive."

So what's your ideal audience?

Steve: "Just guys, just people. Imagine the calibre of the people who come to see us now! A lot of haircuts, a lot of beards, even worse! I also hate those people who show up in their dyed black cheesecloth from head to toe

BIG AND LOUD

San Francisco must have been good then.

Steve: "We decided to make the show as much of a bummer as possible for the love children."

Dave: "It was the first time we had tomatoes thrown at us. Broken bottles and glasses too."

Headache is BB's new 4 track EP on Blast First. It's still fast-ball metal noise 'n' stuff, and Steve and Sant still wield their guitars like filed-down baseball bats, but it doesn't hang out on the precipice like Big Black can.

Steve: "It's mostly pretty good but I don't think it rages enough. It's not as melodic but it's really noisy and aggressive. Atomizer was more songs."

Dave: "We went to a different studio to write and put Headache together under different circumstances, so that might have contributed to the end thing."

Steve: "When we were working on Atomizer there were different ways to build a density in sound. One of them is everybody playing the same thing all the time at maximum velocity. This time each song has got a different approach to volume. Some we tried to make intricate and some we kept simple. All of our records are basically shots in the dark. The record we're working on now kicks the shit out of Atomizer and Headache.

What do you want people to feel when exposed to Big Black?

Steve: "In a perfect world, it would make the same impression as it makes on us. When I put the needle down on one of our records, I just want to be enveloped by it. Whatever the mood or the sensibility. I want it to be all-encompassing, to knock people over."

Atomizer flattens you; Big Black's first two EPs, Lungs (Albini solo plus a drumbox-with-a-filthy-temper from Dec '82) and Bulldozer (Dec '83) have been released together as The Hammer Party on Homesstead. Lungs pushes in comparison, Bulldozer, er, bludgeons.

Big Black's records are fine guitar noise, coiled up in all the right places. They are records you can dance to till you drop.

NEW BIG BLACK PRODUCTS IN A THREATENING POSITION NEAR YOU SOON. This month Blast First spread rumours of a CD release. April should see the band's new album out and, if you say your prayers right, Albini and the boys might come over to your house and gig out in your garage.

with some satanic tattoo on their foreheads who think they're really in tune with you."

After Atomizer's exhilarating protest-and-survive onslaught — with child-molesting, wife-beating, pyromania, abattoirs, and kerosene as a solution — are Big Black getting distracted?

Steve: "Lately we're just protesting about the kind of audience we're getting. We cultivate it into our set."

Sant: "We get up there pretty disgusted which infuses us with a sort of disgusted energy."

BIG BLACK'S IN THINGS 1 Funhouse album, by The Stooges 2 Will Durant, historian and bookworm 3 Barbecues 4 Michael J Pollard, an actor 5 The Land O' Lakes Butter Lady's Tits 6 The Lotus that Patrick McGoonan drives in The Prisoner

Alex Kadis takes their blood pressure. The Rose Of Avalanche have suffered a series of indignities where press representation has been concerned. Charged with harking back to an age where 'hippy' wasn't a dirty word there have been pointed allegations of plagiarism. Nevertheless, they have soldiered on disregarding the relentless onslaught of those who like to categorise. They've notched up three covers to date, the latest of which being The Doors' Waiting For The Sun. Deciding it was time to sort out the Roses from The Doors I met vocalist Phil and guitarist Glen and endeavoured to reveal the true identity of The Rose Of Avalanche.

The band are steeped in musical history. Phil, a dead cert for John Lennon, explains: "I don't mind that people say that I look like John Lennon 'cause he's OK. The Beatles were the reason I wanted to be in a band. They touched me somehow. I always felt that I was different to other kids. I know why now — it was because I was shy. The Beatles tied in with that. I wanted to get famous and rich and overcome that feeling."

Glen further clarifies where their hearts lie: "We do go on about '60s music a lot because we all happen to think that even the pop songs in those days were good songs. They were arranged and presented in a way that made them accessible to a lot of people but they were good. Whereas nowadays the top ten singles are just naff songs with great production. It is production and videos is important and last on the list is music."

Not a visual band, their interest lies within the music although they aren't totally opposed to making videos as long as it remains 'a bit of a giggle'. Phil doesn't mind that journalists have picked up on the band's influences. What he does object to is the fact that they have failed to recognise how those influences are working for the band.

"Of course we have influences, The Doors, The Stones, Jimi Hendrix — he's a good guitar 'ero. But they influence nearly every rock 'n' roll band. You know, these bands that say they are totally original are talking rubbish. You can't listen to them 'cause they're so bad. And they're liars if they say they don't have influences."

Glen, agrees, adding, "It's not that they're bad, it's that it isn't music anymore."

ROA were genuinely shocked when I suggested that their own music is so much better than the songs they cover. Still, these covers haven't worked to the detriment of the band and neither have their influences. The Rose Of Avalanche have proved their versatility. They range from the deep melody of LA Rain, with its lilting sadness and its portrayal of a futile existence to the powerful rockiness of Too Many Castles In The Sky.

They have finally surpassed even their own talent with their latest single, Always There. Originally to have been the B-side of Velvetten, the brains at Fire Records felt that the song was good enough to claim its status as a future single. Always There is a realisation of the talents of The Rose Of Avalanche, pulling their collective soul out of its latent form to manifest a fine masterpiece... and possibly a future classic.

Ex-Barracuda Jeremy Gluck meets up with hip slinging Hoxton Leonid for a jaw about his tie up with Nikki Sudden and the rest of the gang

Shoot Out At Gluck Creek

GLUCK: A MAN WITH A VISION

Question: When is a country album not a country album? Answer: When it's made by ex-Barracuda Jeremy Gluck and ex-Swell Map Nikki Sudden. The album in question is I Knew Buffalo Bill, out this very minute on Flickknife. I was impressed, not only by the personnel on the record. We arranged to meet and all was revealed ● It turns out that Jeremy and Nikki had been in touch since the late '70s and by 1983 had decided to make an album of some sort. The next stage was getting someone to put up the money and then, with both being hideously busy with other projects, finding the time. Finally it all came together and the pair found themselves in Fairport Convention's Woodworm studios in Banbury ● The line up for the sessions featured guitar-player extraordinaire Rowland Howard and fellow Crime And The City Solution person Epic Soundtracks on drums, and that was only the half of it. While the tracks were being mixed ex-Gun Clubber Jeffrey Lee Pierce was in town and was roped in to add some of his spine-chilling slide guitar work. ● So, Jeremy, what was it like working with these people? ● "I'd always admired Rowland's playing, he's a very emotional performer and I knew he would be just right. We purposefully didn't agonise over the songs, and I think that's why it sounds so fresh. And, of course, getting Jeffrey was a real bonus, his playing was the icing on the cake" ● With Jeremy on a year's sabbatical from writing and playing prior to the LP, did he think this was a factor in what is a drastic change from his Barracudas' days? ● "Yes, definitely, I think I'd achieved all I set out to do with The Barracudas. In retrospect, they were important, they influenced a lot of bands, but things like that only stay interesting for so long. For me, there has to be something original going on, and my musical tastes at that time were changing, I was listening to more ethnic things, especially country music" ● Ah, country music. There are definite elements of that in Buffalo Bill. Was that deliberate? ● "Up to a point. It's more influenced by the ideas and methods of country. I mean, things like the telling of stories, they don't have to be true — in fact most of them aren't, are they? Take the Bible, for example, it has to be the best book ever written. People base their whole lives on it, but is it true?" So, who actually wrote the songs for Buffalo Bill, was it a joint effort? ● "Mostly. I wrote the lyrics, Nikki wrote the basic music and Rowland, Epic and Jeffrey added what they wanted to add. I think it worked out really well, I'd love to do it again." ● The album isn't quite what you'd expect from any of the individuals involved. It's acoustically based, and harks back to a time of gunfights, dust and wide-open spaces. Jeremy Gluck has made a classic album, it's been a long time coming, but it's well worth the wait.

Following the Boops banter of last year a new set of question and answer chatter surrounds a set of top sides. Evelyn Court traces the story

★ There is a standing tradition of thematic bias in much reggae music and never more so than at present. Only last year saw the long running One Dance saga set to the classic Pressure And Slide rhythm and this was followed by the Boops controversy with a score or more artists passing comment, the majority of them over a reworking of the rock steady Whip rhythm. More recently has seen a good deal of dissertation of Echo Minott's exposition of marital strife What The Hell... and now the latest subject to occasion remark centres around the apparently unwanted pregnancy of a sister named Sharon, who looks set to be mythologised in reggae in much the same way as was Hank Ballard's Annie according to R&B lore. The original theme was voiced by one Screwdriver on a tune entitled Don't Hide It (Sunset pre) and this has been answered in recent weeks by such as Little John with Yes Mama (Live & Love LLDIS 0030), toaster Peter Metro with Yes Daddy (Powerhouse pre), as well as a follow up from Screwdriver again called No Mama (Volcano pre). A tune out this week from Lovindeer — who incidentally provided the definitive What The Hell... rejoinder with Babylon Boops — now claims Me Do That (The Sound of Jamaica disco). In addition to the latest Little John title mentioned above, there is a slew of new discomix issued on the recently revived Live & Love label, all Jammy productions put out by Count Shelley via his newly Considering just how long it has been established in this country, reggae has continued to remain ill served by the media here, with information regarding the music scant and sketchy at best. On the other side of the Atlantic, however, where reggae is still a relatively new phenomenon, the situation is quite different and there are already a number of periodicals wholly devoted to the subject.

The best of these is the Canadian 24-page glossy Reggae Quarterly, which provides probably the most in-depth read on the contemporary dancehall scene. The latest edition #7 is touted as a "special raggamuffin issue" and features a cover story on the 'Greetings' man Half Pint, interviews with singer Michael Prophet, producer Winston "Techniques" Riley and veterans Clancy Eccles and Larry Marshall. In addition there is a piece on the King Sturmar sound system stars Nicodemus, Super Cat and Danny Dread, plus profiles on Youthman Posse acolytes Chris Wayne, Casseyman and Lloyd Hemmings and upcoming artists such as Don Angelo, Ken Bob... and more. Also new is Vol No 1 of the more eclectic The Reggae & African Beat out of Los Angeles, a 52-page glossy with articles on Sugar Minott, Frankie Paul and The Twinkle Brothers, as well as African artists Youssou N'Dour and Fela Kuti and the usual sprinkling of esoterica such as 'The Magic Music Of The French Antilles', 'Nyabingi Drums Against Apartheid' and excerpts from a Haile Selassie I speech. Also still available is the special 76-page double issue of the same publication featuring pieces on Leroy Sibbles, Joe Higgs, Half Pint and much else.

Both Reggae Quarterly and The Reggae & African Beat are £2 each and £3 for the double issue of the latter and are available, along with back issues and other reggae literature from Muzik Tree, PO Box 11, London E16 3UA. Enclose SAE for full catalogue. EVELYN COURT opened one stop in Harlesden: Coco Tea, Come Again (LLDIS 0028); Pad Anthony, Dangerous System (LLDIS 0027); Admiral Baily, Punanny (LLDIS 0031) and Cornell Campbell, Nothing Don't Come Easy c/w Super Black, Bad Boys (LLDIS 0022). And there is also a Super Black LP circulating on the same label, We Ready Fe

Them (LALP 008). Other new reggae discomix include two titles on the C&E label: Michael Prophet with Loving You (CED 110), produced by Denzil Bowford; and Horace Ferguson, Touch The General (CED 111), a Prince Jazzbo production. While on Jah Shaka label, Vivian Jones inveighs with Red Eyes c/w Got A Light (859).

Doctor's Children: herd it through the grapevine

After the success of last year's Rose Cottage EP, The Doctor's Children re-emerge with yet more in the way of popular popisms. Julian Henry ponders over King Buffalo while searching for what makes rock into pop

For those who declare that rock music is a lifeless beast, The Doctor's Children are the perfect anecdote. After the fleeting affection loosely thrown towards their debut Tomorrow I'll Die, the glorious exultations heaped on last year's exquisite Rose Cottage EP, it's hardly surprising that their new mini album, King Buffalo, has been greeted with such enthusiastic shouts of glee. A journo was heard to shout: "The Children are the greatest band in England... only death by drowning can stop them" Only a strait-jacket ended his outburst. So, will this new release enhance the Doc's reputation enough to boom them into the artistically/intellectually acceptable market? A beefy John Leckle production has given the songs the perfect platform from where the band can bear down on the listener. It could be an album to put the group on the map too (but, which map might that be?). A map of difficult to explain rock structures, perhaps. But is it rock? I mean, how seriously do The Doctor's Children take rock? "Not at all seriously," claims Paul singer/songwriter/Doc's Chillun person Smith. "The titles on the record, like Rock 'n' Roll Jesus and Born To Wander, are just piss-takes. How can anyone take rock music seriously?" "I've always hated Pete Townshend," he continues in an off-the-cuff quip, "But I've always wanted to play rock 'n' roll. I haven't stooped to the level of writing a song that says "Oooooooh baby", but there's still time." Next stage for The Doctor's Children is to do a short support tour with Green On Red, while their company, Upright, put the final touches to international deals in West Germany and France. As ever, it seems that the UK is going to be one of the last places for people to turn on to one of our homegrown talents. But, still, we can always say we told you so. . .

CHILD STAR FOCUS
SPECIAL SIMON TURNER:
Yes, the former The The and Jeremy's Secret person, and latter day composer of Derek Jarman's Caravaggio soundtrack, began life in Tom Brown's Schooldays, eventually playing opposite Robert Mitchum in The Big Sleep. One of the early victims of cheque book journalism due to an "affair" with Britt Ekland, Turner also had several near hits in the '70s as part of Jonathon King's UK stable. Most notable was a cover of David Bowie's Prettiest Star. Salute the prince of pop!

The Railway Children: next stop Blue Jeans

"We'd like to reach a lot of people without becoming a Blue Jeans pin-up," states Gary Newby of the Railway Children flatly. We're sat in a rare cultural corner of Manchester surrounded by hordes of flattopped studenty types wearing black anoraks and polo necks, sipping cappuccinos with their heads buried in this month's copy of The Face. Gary Newby doesn't really fit in. Then again he doesn't look that much out of place either. Having never seen a picture of The Railway Children (a deceptive Factory marketing ploy) I was curious. And surprised. This railway child sitting before me shows no evidence of being a fashion victim. He looks like the proverbial boy next door, in a mischievous sort of way, and funnily enough, would probably make a rather attractive Blue Jeans pin-up.

The Railway Children aren't interested in selling out to the masses, although I'm sure they wouldn't object to mass appeal but inevitably, on their own terms. Signing to Factory and avoiding the majors like the plague seems to have suited them well.

"We were on the verge of signing to Ten Records at one time," explains Gary, "but we just didn't have any control. We were 19 and they wanted to mould us into a pop band. They had no idea what we could do. Eventually we signed a publishing deal with them. When Factory started taking an interest I couldn't have been more surprised. Our music didn't exactly fit in with their corporate image but they seem to be breaking away from that. The good thing about Factory is they're easy to communicate with and they don't push you into things like having your picture splashed across the cover of your record."

Which is all very fine and dandy but what happens if you want to start reaching more people than simply the student fraternity of inner Manchester? Factory's policy of not over-promoting bands but leaving them to "evolve" often results in the band going nowhere very slowly. But than again, it depends on where you want to go.

"We plan to get noticed but through the right channels. New Order are an example we'd like to follow if we had the chance. I think sometimes if the music's good, people are interested in that alone and not in the Smash Hits media side. If you're not immediately in the limelight you can make mistakes, experiment and do your own thing to a certain extent. Swing Out Sister are a classic example of what might've happened to us and what still might. Trouble is once you've had a Breakout you need to keep following it up or people just ignore you."

At the moment the Railway Children are going through their teething stages. They've had two singles out on Factory. The first, A Gentle Sound, was precisely that and seemed far too delicate to grab the ears of the discerning public. Their second offering Brighter is a decidedly more jaunty affair with some feverish bursts of percussion and a sturdy tune.

"Our music may not be that wild," muses Gary, "but we've made big jumps between our singles. After a while you start to lose your inhibitions and become more adventurous. The music in the charts at the moment just leaves me cold. It's just watered down rubbish."

"Tony Wilson was saying the other day how some bands absorb influences and just regurgitate them. Others, though, are able to digest them and make them their own. I think this applies to us. Maybe the sounds of traditional guitar, bass and drums doesn't differ much, just the feel. I'm interested in rhythm and being more experimental although still sticking with a good tune."

Top Of The Pops doesn't yet beckon The Railway Children but Gary's unperturbed. He's got plenty on his plate at the moment. Besides being the singer and driving force of The Railways, he's also doing a degree course in graphics at Stoke Poly and has to juggle his time accordingly.

"I'm constantly up and down the motorway but I really enjoy it. Other people have tried to persuade me to jack the course in but I won't. I don't like starting something I can't finish. I suppose I am holding us back though, by doing it."

The Railway Children are a band who want to offer music lovers of their own age something to fall in love with. They chose their name because it was "cute and meaningless" and they (supposedly) weren't. They hate the fact that everyone and his dog are making records — "Nick Berry just makes life miserable". They detest the ageold "rock and roll lifestyle" adopted by many bands including fellow Mancunians The Bodines ("to the point of parody") although will admit to delving in and out of it themselves. They hate having their pictures taken and prefer to look at artwork rather than smiling popstars on the bedroom wall. In fact, Blue Jeans would probably love them.

Are your ears bleeding? Are there spots in front of your eyes? Can you dance when the music is so loud that it makes the speakers fall off the table? If your answer to any of these questions is yes, read on, and let Whiplash tell you the why's and wherefore's of whatever.

If we're talking very loud, then what about this month's top 40? With Anthrax and The Beastie Boys both charting, does this mean the nation has opened its ears to noise? ■ While we Brits are slowly getting things together, it's from the US of A that the real racket is being made, such as the new album from Agent Steel, Unstoppable Force (Music For Nations), and the capital is still reeling from recent visits from Anthrax and Megadeth. ■ Watch out for hardest-of-the-hard Slayer, due over here in the next two months — their Rick Rubln produced album Reign In Blood (on Def Jam in the US) still has no release over here, but rumour has it that London Records are taking the risk... ■ The Cult's Electric album (Beggars Banquet) is due out in April, while Leicester loonies Crazyhead have their first single released now and are undertaking a nationwide tour — including three support slots at London's Town And Country Club in eight days (Pink Fairies, Tom Verlaine, X Mai Deutschland). Cow-punks The Straw Dogs mix harmonica with prime metal riffing to make their LP We Are Not Amused (Rough Trade) an essential loud purchase (thrash country and western, anyone?) while Swedish biker-vikings The Leather Nun have a new 45, I Can Smell Your Thoughts out soon on Wire. ■ New York hardcore outfit Crumbsuckers had to turn down the offer of a support slot to Megadeth's London show be-

You lot are bloody weird!

Alex Kadis shares a pint of chips with Crazyhead Crazyhead? Errr... I'm not sure, actually. Crazy mouth? Yes. Crazy attitude? Yes.

One of the few bands to go through with the ICA Dotted Line affair recently, Crazyhead are far too shrewd to lose their minds. An interview was going down, and amused and excited they congregated with friends, roadies and manager to make as much noise as is humanly possible.

Crazyhead are Anderson, Pork Beast, Vom, Super Fast Blind Dick and, somewhat incongruously, Kev. After ten months of suffering each others company they have just released their first record — an irregular sort of ditty entitled, What Gives You The Idea You're So Amazing Baby?

Vom: "It's good and sexist."
Dick: "It's not sexist. It's the type of record you could listen to and really get down to things — you know — THINGS."
Kev: "I wrote the lyrics and it's completely unsexist."
So, are you addressing anyone in particular?

Kev: "Yeah, me mother."
I'll refrain from going into this any further but needless to say there was a well timed plea from Vom to do this properly. He is the most communicative member of the band.

Vom: "It's not sexist. It's sexy. Our sex appeal isn't contrived. Sex is ail to do with excitement and I don't think there's a lot of that around. There's very few bands that actually get up on stage and sweat nowadays."

There may just be substance to this feeling.

During their live act Crazyhead show off an incredible machismo. As they swear and gesticulate, Anderson's cute little bottom peeks seductively out of a strategic hole in his well worn leather togs. If they're not demanding that you buy them a drink they are spraying you with beer and showering you with abuse. Is this all there is to these maladjusted acid-rockers?

Vom: "We're not harking back to the heavy rock attitudes of the old days but I think it's necessary to have a bit of venom. We're breaking away from the tried and trusted formula."

Sure, there's a lot to that but, while trying to flog me a knocked off sweat shirt, Pork talks about philosophy and religion. On stage he is a wild animal. Anderson, shy and serious in conversation, becomes antagonistic and magnificent.

Essentially, Crazyhead are an intelligent group who have standards both morally and musically. So where do they really stand?

And: "We're into getting on stage, working hard and giving a good show!"

Vom: "At the same time we want people to think. We want to put shivers up your spine — that never happens to me at a gig anymore. OK, our music is saying something but why can't people just enjoy it? Why can't something be serious and yet still be entertaining?"

No reason. That's all.

cause they couldn't get time off school. Have they never heard of skiving? ■ There are dark mutterings about a new Zodiac Mind-warp release, but who knows what's going through the great man's mind? ■ Back to Music For Nations, and British thrash hopes Onslaught have a double album due in a few months, and in the meantime, the Bristol based band are supporting Motorhead on their European tour, the latter having regained their former insane drummer Philthy Animal Taylor. Last mention goes to the Yanks again, and an album called Skate For The Devil by The Boneless Ones (on Boner, of course). Their motto is apparently 'It is said that when one crosses heavy metal with skateboarding, the resulting unholy union is something only the Devil could love'. Very Loud agrees wholeheartedly, and until next time, as Metallica would put it, Bang That Head That Doesn't Bang...

With their self-produced second album Horse Rotovator now out, and possible live action beckoning, ex-PTV boys Peter Christopherson and John Balance look set for another spell in the upper echelons of the independent chart.

So how does John Balance see the new LP in comparison with their Scatology debut of 1985?

"We prefer to think of it as the second in a series of continuous steps. We like working with recurring themes that can be linked together from record to record."

With Horse Rotovator they have chosen to home in on mankind's death trip and lead us on a morbid metaphysical journey down history's cruel staircase of despair, in a search for whatever it is that lurks in the cellar.

There isn't a lot of fun to be had in listening to Coil's music. But then the films of Ingmar Bergman weren't much fun either (uh? — ed). Like Bergman, Coil at least manage to supply creative values to balance the dark fears their powerful images set loose.

In these days of the third (or is it the fourth?) coming of austere industrialism, only The Anti-Group (featuring ex-Clock DVA front man Adi Newtin) among the current crop of pretenders have their attitude and aims as well thought out as Coil's. It comes as no surprise therefore to learn that the two plan to work together at some point in the future.

"It's really surprised me how much our ideas have meshed, especially just recently. It seems to me that we are both moving towards the same ends, the nihilistic truth at the centre of the cosmic ball, or whatever."

Coil as dark angels searching out their own heart of darkness? Listen and decide for yourself.

Coil's progression from murky waters to orchestrated melodic sounds still seems to be shrouded in depressive veils. Whether they intend to elevate their status to the press hungry industrialists of old is in doubt, but their recent album has increased the possibility of imminent success. DEATH DISCO

Briefly, the current story of Ausgang A-Go-Go is told by three survivors, Max (vocals), Matthew (guitar/flower arranging) and Stu (bass). Iba (drums) has sloped off.

Clearly the most obvious question revolves shakily around the name change.

"There's a song called Itchy Fingers-A-Go-Go," Matthew informs, "and a friend of ours puts Ausgang-A-Go-Go on the back of his jacket for some reason and that was the first thing. We thought we'd use this because we've got this feeling that a lot of people in the media get hold of records by us, see the name and refuse to listen to them because someone told them three years ago that Ausgang were a Gothic band."

The audaciously bright challenge to such foggy notions comes with a new record, following on from the slick vigour of their baking King Hell single. Six songs at 33 1/3 and one at 45 tell a new tale of disco-band.

In truth, you can almost feel yourself rebelling over the chintzily obvious Tumbleweed, feel your neighbour's pulse during the static rampant attack of Wasted Land, with its haemorrhaging guitar, and feel like a Tube presenter on a 10 test as Iron And Clay rams a hot iron down your throat.

But are record companies interested? I mean, they can sell ANYTHING. That's their job. Ausgang have been nine years in this biz, three actually as Ausgang (now Go-Go-ing, but not gone) and not a penny to show for it! Not in it for the money, but man or woman cannot live by dole alone. "Oh sure, we're in complete control at the moment," he shrieks in torment, "but all that means is that we have 100% of NOTHING. Maybe 10% of SOMETHING wouldn't go admiss." So, can the Go-Boys be big, Big, BIG in '87 or... well, who can say? Should be, though.

The Ace group of companies have an extremely varied batch of albums for us this month. Starting with the Ace label itself, there's The Memphis Label Story, '50s r 'n' r and rockabilly; plus a white-boy doo wop compilation from the Laurie catalogue titled Street Corner Memories, Now on Ace CD is The Ike & Tina Turner Sessions and Three Hours Past Midnight from Johnny Guitar Watson. The budget label Cascade, which has given us some great blues, rockabilly and country compilations over the past few years, zaps us with two volumes of 20 Great Cruisin' Favourites — for people with Cadillacs (it says here), a good selection of '50s pop r 'n' r. It will be available in cassette form as well as disc, so you can play it in the motor.

Big Beat steam in with Soft Machine Vol. 1, the record's first UK release featuring Robert Wyatt and Kevin Ayers. There's a best of Strawberry Alarm Clock entitled Strawberries Mean Love to add to the already issued Big Star LPs No. 1 Album and Radio City. On the Northern Soul front, Kent Records offer the compilation Kent Stop Dancing — The Sequel and finally, Contemporary issue the bluesy jazz Ain't Nobody's Business by Helen Humes.

Over at Charly Records, a busy January saw fine r&b releases from the Jewel/Paula/Ronn labels with material from Little Joe Blue, Jerry McCain, Lightnin' Hopkins and a compilation titled Rough Dried Blues. In contrast they have also released LPs by Milton Brown & The Brownies (Western Swing 1935-36), Wayne Raney (Country Boogie 1947-53), Jimmy Donley (Swamp Pop '57-'60), Ann Sexton and Roscoe Shelton (both early '70s Deep South Soul). Plans for March continue in Deep Soul with an Ella Washington LP and a compilation Testifying, featuring great unknowns Charles Smith, Charles Armstrong and Ted Ford. Plus, girl group fans will be over the moon to hear, there's a double LP set, The Red Bird Story, on the horizon which will feature The Shangri-Las, Dixie Cups, et al.

Those charming people at Edsel Records are releasing the soundtrack which The Electric Flag did for the Roger Corman film The Trip, so let's get the medicine cabinet open! In addition there's waxings from Commander Cody, Cody Returns From Outer Space, John Fahey Rivers And Religion, Otis Rush Right Place, Wrong Time and The Flying Burrito Brothers Dim Lights, Thick Smoke and Loud Loud Music.

Detour release two new authentic tri-centre singles this month in extremely tacky printed wrapping paper bags. Representing r&b there's Crawfishin'/Route 90 by Clarence Garlow, two hot Flair recordings from 1956. T'other is Be-boppin' Daddy by Les Cole & The Echoes/You Gotta Pay by Benny Barnes & The Echoes, both being great rockabilly from the Starday/'D' stable. The label's motto is Detour don't have time for 'B' sides — each one a winner!. Get the picture? (Distribution by Backs/Cartel).

Undoubtedly the best release of '50s recorded material last year was The Legendary 1956 Demo Session by Charlie Feathers, a wondrous disc that we played day and night, and still keep close to the record player in case of an emergency. The label was Zu Zazz Records (distributed through Charly), and they inform us that their second release is Don't Put No Headstone On My Grave by Charlie Rich. As well as the un-issued title track, the rest of the LP is made up of publishing demos and re-mixes of original Phillips Int. master tapes. No additives, but all the overdubbed clutter of girl choruses and string arrangements have been removed so it's as Rich originally intended it to sound.

'The World's leading psychedelic label', Bam Caruso have another batch of hallucinogenic inspired '60s paisley platter compilations. Staircase To Nowhere (1967-9), The Electric Crayon Set (more stupidly rare 45s), Adventures In The Mist (yet more rare 45s), The Clouds Have Groovy Faces (soft sike at its best). Then there's ex-Left Banker Mick Brown's '69 band Montage, titled rather strangely Montage, plus '68/'69 Detroit acid guitar group SRC have a self-titled album issued.

If your reading glasses are back from the opticians you're in luck. There are some good publications about just now, too. From the USA, the fifth issue of Kicks has arrived, one hundred pages thick, mixing the best of the '50s and '60s sounds with black humour and plenty of photos and period ads. Main features include Hasil Adkins, The Rivieras, Jerry Lee Lewis, Dale Hawkins, The Pyramids and Joe Clay.

On the horizon, believe it or not, is a new edition of New Kommo-tion in new A5 size, more on that next month. And let's not forget Now Dig This, the most regular rock 'n' roll fanzine of all time. February's issue featured articles on Carl Perkins, Jerry Byrne, and Ricky Nelson to name but three.

The Compendium Bookshop in Camden High Street, London, stock all three, and most good specialist record shops around the country should do so also.

HDH PRESENTS THE HITS OF HOT WAX AND INVICTUS RECORDS

(HDH CD 502)

Indie CD soul? You bet! This is a rundown of the Hot Wax and Invictus labels who set out to compete with Motown, and all comes complete with an informative booklet. Set up by legendary writing team Lamont Dozier and Eddie and Brian Holland after their acrimonious exit from Berry Gordy's stable, these sister labels illustrate another dimension of the Detroit story; of motor city soul sensations now often confined to the rarity rack • Best known track, in the UK, is Freda Payne's tale of wedding night impotency, Band Of Gold, but it's more than matched by the less obvious entries. Glass House's Crumbs Off The Table is a tale of sexual infrequency, too, while Honey Cone pre-empt much of the Three Degrees' tack. Other lesser knowns include the intriguingly named 100 Proof (full moniker, 100 Proof Aged In Soul), whose Somebody's Been Sleeping In My Bed is a vigorous, brass laden stomper • But the icing on the cake must be the inclusion of six Chairmen Of The Board tracks, all of which seem to ooze sweet '70s nostalgia. Give Me Just A Little More Time deserves Levi's inspired immortality, even though it would mean a return to 20 inch flares, denim waistcoats and three foot high Afro haircuts (owners of which, way back when, inevitably chose to sit in front of me at the Harrow ABC).

But who could imagine the sweet memories of their gospel inspired I'm On My Way To A Better Place, which at the time severely flunked in the charts?

Well, you can relive it all, thanks to laser technology. And before you can reach the first compulsive chorus the waft of musk oil will be with you again.

The Holland, Dozier, Holland axis of songwriters who fuelled and fired the Motown stable in their earlier years went on to unleash an even more colourful, glitter-studded, bare-chested-medallion-toting sound with Invictus and The Chairmen Of The Board. The story was further enhanced with Freda Payne and associate label Hot Wax's emergence onto the scene with an even wilder selection of flares and brightly coloured crimplene. Some years later, HDH Presents, an Edsel/Demon associate, have come up with a catchall CD package covering both labels' greatest cuts. Carole Linfield sinks down on the sofa and recalls the past . . .

GLOBESTYLE RECORDS → WORLDWIDE YOUR GUIDE

Paul Simon's exploits reap mucho press, expose new forms of music to a wider audience and gain attention for styles and sounds previously unheard. Ben Mandelshon and Roger Armstrong of Globestyle release a compilation album, Worldwide Your Guide, which showcases the wide ranging music that the label has so far unearthed. John Lewis tries to find out more, gets enthusiastic and generally enthuses...

This introduction to the Columbian compilation album Fiesta Vallanata is an appropriate manifesto for Globestyle Records, an Ace subsidiary, run by Ben Mandelshon, a man acclaimed as "a very good friend of 3 Mustaphas 3". Partner in tune Roger Armstrong explained some of the Globestyle activities which have led up to this exquisite compilation, activities which have centred around the release of a steady series of pop records from the world direct to the discerning living room. It's been a slow but brave project given what Roger describes as "the xenophobia of the Brits," which enlarged reveals that "if they hear a foreign language they just don't want to listen."

Globestyle are happier with their progress in Europe outside of the UK, and are on the West Coast and attribute that to the fact that 'worldbeat' or 'ethnobeat' is an established concept in other countries.

"In this country, people are too used to assuming that the best music comes from this country," reckons Roger, and as rock, swing, blues, latin, jazz, ragtime, reggae and soul all have African elements, this is a fair criticism. But this suburbia of the inner ear which afflicts the British is a classic complaint.

Things improve though. Roger says he received more mail (interest and encouragement) about Globestyle records than anything else released under Ace auspices and over its first two years it has proved itself viable with the current catalogue of about 20 including Ofra Haza, whose 12 inch Galbi also gained wider commercial appeal. Galbi has turned more than a few ears (as well it should), and a few more may be turned by this new Globestyle compilation, Worldwide Your Guide, their modest slogan.

The album starts with state-of-the-art New York rumba from Cuban Virgilio Marti and dances swiftly across the Atlantic to the Yemen. Ofra

First of all, this is not difficult music. It is not just for ethno-musicologists, or for those who take pride in the obscurity of their musical tastes... this is pop. That means songs of love, partying and social comment; of local heroes and histories. Most of all this music is about dancing.

Haza's voice is one of those that make you shiver. Puseletso Seema and Tau Ea Linare from Lesotho follow with that elastic bass and stomping accordion (a little weakness of Ben) which really makes Paul Simon's Boy In The Bubble. This is the real thing and the vocals are just a bit harder.

Dissidenten, from Berlin and Lem Chareb from Morocco share a track. Inshalla-Kif Kif, from their Sahara Elektrik LP. Little of the dust and bells of a herber festival is lost in the translation. From Mali, The Super Rail Band Of The Buffet Hotel De La Gare De Bamako present tumbling guitar and rumbling vocals and are a near relation of Manding Koré music, one of the most elegant musical forms on one of the most bulbous instruments. For the last track from the African mainland, from Zaire, there's the glittering, irresistible, hypnotic mbukous from Kanda Bongo Man. Back across the Atlantic Come Back from the Lesser Antilles, have the most uptempo track on the compilation with a musical diversion which is one of the many multi-influenced musics with audible Spanish, Latin and West African elements.

Two more tracks represent the two albums of Madagascan music which have graced Globestyle, and these hold a special place in Roger's affection as he and Ben went over and recorded the sessions themselves. They are hoping to return and record more, including the wealth of politically repressed music in Madagascar.

The Globestyle train picks up speed again and future releases which are mooted include Francisco Alloo "very hip in certain parts of Columbia", then the G boys are hoping to head East.

"Eventually we would like a catalogue with a reasonable representation of world music," utters Armstrong the adventurer. An impossible task, he acknowledges, but they'll try.

The criterion for selection is "taste based, a mixture of grass taste, mine, and knowledgeable taste, which is Ben's."

But most important, the music in each case is vibrant. They don't mind putting a bit of information on sleeves, even a map, but they refuse to have a "museum attitude". No dry academicism here. Now that's a good attitude.

Hamdoul'lah. May he speed the camels of their distributors.

If you want to sample some of this tasty music, Underground has nabbed ten copies of the Worldwide Your Guide album from the vaults at Globestyle. All you've got to do to win one of these is answer this 'Q' level Geogers question and send it on a postcard to Underground/Globestyle, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ. And here's the question... In which continent is Lesotho (home of Puseletso Seema & Tau Ea Linare)?

Go to it adventurers!!

THE SOUND OF A DISTANT ACCORDION

48 UNDERGROUND

Michael Gira and Jarboe of Swans are in Cornwall. They are about to enter a thousand living rooms and personal hi-fis in the guise of Skin. Marc Issue donned his sports shirt and roller skates and headed down there too. His notebook and dog eared Filofax at the ready, he heads deep down into the lowlife

It may surprise you to learn that it is more economically feasible to ship the entire Swans organisation over here and out into the wilds of Cornwall to a splendidly isolated residential studio for a month than it is for them to stay home and record their new (double) album in New York. This probably speaks volumes for the economic significance of the Thatcher-Reagan "special relationship", but for the moment the Swans are not complaining, and neither, for the moment, is your reporter as he trudges, one chill March afternoon, down a railway track on the banks of a Cornish fjord.

Last November and December Mike and Jarboe, two fifths of Swans, recorded a prodigious quantity of music which will be released over a fairly short space of time, starting now. Blood Women And Roses is an album featuring Jarboe as singer, and Shame Humility And Revenge features Michael. The first release, a vast and unfolding 12 inch titled One Thousand Years is from Jarboe's album. This more intimate musical association goes under the title Skin.

We find our American in high spirits, full of the fresh beauty of the place, well-versed in local history and mythology, and working hard.

We get down to it.

WHERE DOES SKIN MUSIC COME FROM?

Michael: "I don't know what to say to that! My heart? Whatever I say would be a cliché. From the guitar, from the cliché, from the keyboard, where does it come from, Jarboe?"

Jarboe: "Musically? Is that what you mean?"

PARTLY, IN A SENSE, BUT PRINCIPALLY: WHY DOES IT HAPPEN?

Michael: "Basically, you know we set out to write simple songs, albeit not pedestrian, but simple songs. That was the impetus, and the approach was to do songs that you could remember a melody to, that you could remember a line from, after you'd shut it off, so that it wasn't based just on sound but with certain melodic ideas and a certain insistence on us as singers."

ABOUT THE COVER VERSIONS. WHY CRY ME A RIVER? PLEASE DON'T JUST SAY IT'S A BEAUTIFUL SONG.

Michael: "But it is, it's a beautiful song! Such an incredibly sad song!"

Jarboe: "I know it sounds like a cliché, but I see my album as the different emotions of a woman, of what a woman feels. And for me, every song is touching on a particular character that I've thought about or read about or felt myself, they're all sides of that, and that particular song represents a very pure and deep emotion, and I tried to interpret that song rather than do a copy version of it. Which is to say that I was gripped by her crying rather than the coy kind of attitudes with which it's been interpreted before."

Listeners may care to note the sobbing musical arrangements on this recording. Skin makes the gentle music peep out from Swans' armour. But more to the point, Mike and Jarboe are making a different kind of poetry, and tension here. There is controversy over the next cover version, though.

THE MAN I LOVE ...

Jarboe: "That was written by George Gershwin."

LYRICS BY IRA?

Jarboe: "That's right."
WAS IT AN INTENTIONALLY IRONIC DELIVERY?

Jarboe: "No, not for me."

I sang every song with total sincerity. It's perfect for me, because that's one fantasy which comes on the record after another fantasy, among the top three to five sexual fantasies of all women, which is to have sex with another female, so the two songs sort of go together for me. One is the ivory tower woman, with the man taking care of her and building a home for her, and the other is a savage kind of song about lust. The two seemed to go together. Musically I've always liked the song. The piano playing is over the top, but that was great, very Rachmaninov at the end ..."

Michael, standing at the window, watching the water outside, adds that one of the reasons they wanted to do the song was because of the strong melody. Irony retreats to the depths.

Skin are a significant departure, operating within a narrative melodic structure — a structure with a lot of time invested in it, in all sorts of senses. Accordingly, Skin need time invested in them, to appreciate the intricacy and subtlety of what is put in.

So far as accessibility is concerned, Skin signifies a step sideways into a music which is superficially 'easier', but which requires some application before it yields its undoubted rewards. In this respect One Thousand Years, the first of the many Skin releases that will rain down on us over the next few months, is an intriguing, but not ideal, taster. It is one of the sparser specimens of the crop, with recognisable Swans' atmospherics churning fitfully in the background when things start to liven up a bit.

Strong though it is, One

FIVE NASTY DISEASES THAT CAN AFFLICT YOUR SKIN

1 Psoriasis — The Singing Detective got all crusty about this one. Sufferers get varying degrees of scaling skin and it can be disfiguring. On the other hand (or rather scalp) it can disguise itself as dandruff.

2 Ichthyosis — You get born with this, and basically it's a malfunction of the oil and sweat producing glands. Sufferers' skin is all dry and scaly, like that of a fish (hence the name). The only remedy is to scrape the scales off every so often and lather up in Vaseline Intensive Care lotion.

3 Scabies — Rat's inspiration; in fact, it's caused by mites which burrow under the skin, particularly on the hands and wrists, and itch like hell. You have to paint yourself with a lotion and disinfect everything. Similarly with lice, who particularly like hiding out in the seams of clothes and passing on typhus fever. All that scratching making you itch? Well, the jumble sale will never have the same attraction ...

4 Rosacea — Also known as boozers' nose, although the red blotches can be brought on by too much tea as well as alcohol, much to the horror of maiden aunts everywhere.

5 Penphigus — Debbie Harry's boyfriend Chris Stein got this rare complaint, which makes your skin dissolve. It can be fatal, but treatment with steroids led to his slow recovery.

American label Fun Music (171 South Park, San Francisco, CA 94107, USA), have in the past wandered through the avant-garde ozones with releases from David Ocker, 'Blue' Gene Tyranny and Scott Fraser. Their latest two cassette-only things come from Phillip Perkins who gets explorative with a megaphone and some reverb effects on The Rosetta ● Legendary Pink Dot Edward Kaspel (now resident in Holland) has his two China Doll albums jumbled together on CD through Torso (with extra added tracks too) ... And, in the States, at After Hours, Ceilings Below release their debut self-titled album which is acclaimed as a real spine-tingler. You can get hold of it through After Hours at 14821 Lakeshore Blvd, Cleveland, OH 44110, USA. They'll also be handling The Sharkbites' album Nowhere Fast on Minor Details which is lauded for "never sacrificing raw energy for a high gloss finish." Wah! ... And, then we went to Germany. Matador, featuring ex-members of Malaria have a mini-LP scheduled on What's So Funny About? (that'll be available here through Red Rhino), and on the same label you'll also be able to get a new album from Kastrierte Philosophen entitled Between Shootings ... On Red Rhino's own Ediesta label, Belgians Eton Crop offer the comment A Bundle Of Bucks For A Dead Dog Is A Bargain and West Germans FSK opt for Continental Breakfast ... Also coming soon from Ediesta is the new LP from New York popularists The Silos, following last year's classy import-only gem About Her Steps. The new album is called Cuba ... And, from Fundamental, JFA (which stands for The Jodie Foster Army) have an album called Valley Of The Yakes and Black Flag front person and lead tattoo exponent Henry Rollins has an album called House Animal Machine ... Spaghetti. Bolognese. And, Italia! The Birdman Of Alcatraz have a mini album called Gliding Off on Electric Eye due, while Sick Rose have an album called Faces scheduled. Still on the land of learning towers, Materiali Sonori have an LP called Africa from Embryo (who feature band members of Dissidenten who caused a flurry last year with their eastern-ethnic meets western-techno music).

Stone and The Flame Of Ambition ... Great names spotted in the Radio WJUL chart list from Lowell, Mass, USA. Who are Screaming Broccoli, Lemonheads and Gas Babies? Good to see The Hafler Trio up at number one in the experimental chart there too ... Much talk and phrases like, "a cross between Human Sexual Response, Throbbing Gristle and Metal Box PIL" about US combo Children In Adult Jails, an all-girl outfit whose debut album can be found on Buy Our Records, PO Box 363, Vauxhall, NJ 07088, USA. Meanwhile, did Swedish band All That Jazz (from the Wire stable) impress enough Virgin staffers to get a deal from their two London shows recently?

● Play It Again Sam, from Belgium, will have a Skinny Puppy CD (they're from Canada and have recently toured Europe to good response), and there's a new Trisomie 21 12 inch on PIAS plus a 12 from fellow Belgian label Antler by Poesi Noir ... And then there was The Chadbourne's, featuring ex-Shockabilly Eugene Chadbourne plus his wife and kids. They'll have a double called LSD CNW on Fundamental soon and around the same time Euge teams up for a vinyl clam bake with Evan Johns called Vermin Of The Blues ... Yet more news from Fundamental says that Savage Republic (those original independent pioneers) will have their Savage Republic and Ceremonial albums released, while there's a mini album from Shock Therapy called, remarkably enough, Shock Therapy ... Last up, Norwegian maestro's Holy Toy release a new album (we thought they'd disappeared, but obviously not!)

Descendents get pensive about Monkees and Beatles references

March sees the release of what promises to be a mighty album from the SST roster. After dishing out the Meat Puppets, Hüsker Dü, the late lamented Minutemen and much more, the pop rock and post-punk fraternity will thrill to the sound of Descendents on their debut album, All, which will be out by the time you scan this paragraph. ● Neat assaults on the nerve ends that count, melody lines that really move and songs that're close to The Beatles/Monkees axis while retaining the aggression that's necessary to last out today's debacles. ● Similar in assault, but more rocky (perhaps), Crazy Backwards Alphabet also have plans with SST, including a version of ZZ Top's La Grange sung in Russian which has been touted as the absolute antedote to the dodgy US TV spectacular Amerika, which us Euros have heard so much about recently. Anyway, plans for the album are being finalised and band members include Henry Kaiser (who's collaborated with everyone from The Golden Palominos to Herbie Hancock in the past) and part time drummer John French, who has seen time, as it were, with Cap'n Beefheart. ● SST can be found at PO Box 1, Lawndale, CA 90260, USA.

WHITELINE

MUSIC VIDEO PRODUCTION

THE WHITELINE vid company from Leeds have garnered mucho support and praise for their ideas about bands sharing costs and facilities in putting together quality videos for broadcast. In the past they've worked under a variety of problematic situations with Red Lorry Yellow Lorry (the band weren't actually there so they had to edit stock live footage to use on a song that the group weren't actually singing), Age Of Chance (they had about ten minutes to actually get a TV quality promo together) and The Mission (it was cold).

Further enhancing their reputation, they now plan to compile a series of clips from various bands and put them together as a series of 30 minute spectacles. The first of these little treasures features Brendan Crocker and The Five O'Clock Shadows, The Mekons, The Moodists, the Lorries, Sally Timms, The Batfish Boys and O Yuki Conjugate. Interested parties can get further details of the product and services available from Whiteline at The Colosseum Production Centre, Portland Gate, Leeds LS2 3AW. (vid price is £12.50 incl p&p.)

But for five lucky Underground readers, there's a chance here and now to win a copy of Whiteline's first 30 minute compilation, and all you've got to do is answer the following question correctly, and mail your answer to Whiteline/Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 to arrive no later than April 13.

So, here's the question ...

Red Lorry, Yellow Lorry released an album entitled Paint Your Wagon on Red Rhino last year. They took the title from a film starring Lee Marvin and ol' Lee had a bit of a hit with a tune from the film, that your ma and pa may recall (it went to number one). What was it called?

VISION (Flat 8, 386-388 Park View Mansions, Green Lanes, London W4) A sultry blend of down tempo reggae from a new outfit based in South London. Changes is somewhere between a full-blown aggressive work out and a sweeter, more lovers rock feel, but it stands as an impressive debut nevertheless; apparently it will be available as a single in the not too distant future, place your orders at Daddy Kool ASAP.

7 8 7 8

THE UNEVEN PLANET (Tel: (0602) 830798) They look a bit, er, odd on the cassette sleeve. Who are these long haired people and what do they want? One vexed member of the reviewing team was heard to mumble "a psychedelic U2" as the tape progressed. Then it all started to get more and more '60s, so we got spaced out just to get in the mood (man!). Unfortunately life goes forwards rather than backwards so we can only wonder at what fate has in store for The Uneven Planet.

SAM SAM SAM (Tel: 01-881 4864) Popsox, this group's first song, runs along at a "jolly" pace. They seem to be trying to lift the mood. They don't really succeed but it's interesting enough to keep your attention. Then, suddenly, completely without warning, something strange happened — we started arguing among ourselves as to the magnitude or failings of this combo. We couldn't reach an agreed corporate opinion, which must mean something. Competent, clean pop with a little more (or less) than is needed to succeed, depending on your viewpoint.

6 8 7 8

THE MIRACLE MILE (clo Trevor Jones, North London Squash Club, Muswell Hill, London N10) Ah! A tune! A melody! These people must have been busy practising because they actually sound like they know what they're doing. Who remembers Al Stewart? The Miracle Mile do, although they may not want to admit it in public, but they don't seem too embarrassed to pull out their guitars and strum away in a most impressive fashion. Have they got a record deal yet? This wins the coveted 'Tape Of The Week' award (have we got one? — ed).

Edited by Julian Henry • each month in Underground we'll be wading through the box of demos and threatening letters in an attempt to see who is coming up, who the A&R men are being subjected to, and who are going to be worth watching. Each month a panel of guest reviewers, featuring journalists, DJs, producers, A&R men and the like, will be assembled around an unsuspecting tape deck and their reactions will be systematically taken down and rated. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential.

WONDERS OF THE DEEP (clo Notion Pictures, 38 Park Road, Coventry CV1 2LD) Only a four track demo, but there are some expensive ideas rumbling around here. Have these people been off to the Canary Islands for their holidays, or have they just been listening to Club Tropicana for the past few weeks? Whatever, she sings nicely, and the band motor in a relaxed fashion. Give them an enormous record deal someone.

6 8 8 7

THE DUBIOUS BROTHERS (clo FFY Music, tel: (07373) 55990) Why did they have to call themselves The Dubious Brothers? I mean, we've already got the Reverb, Everly, Faith, Warner, Pontiac and hundreds of other brothers. Unfortunately the music demonstrates a similar lack of imagination. It's what some people would call 'pop', but it's hard to imagine this getting much further than the starting post.

THE ONAN BROTHERS (clo The Blue Room, tel: 01-724 7435) Didn't these people hear what we said in the last review? Change your name boys. Do something radical. The music was good, yes we like it fast, the way it runs about like The Woodentops. Gets a bit close to the headless chicken at times, but what the hell? Best song is Mice & Men.

ROBERT POSS (clo True Elements Records, 72 East 4th Street, Suite 11D, New York, NY 10009) Warning: This tape arrived in a rather nicely presented cassette case; it looks professional. We are suspicious. Rather pleasing therefore to discover some primitive guitars and drums grinding away in a fashion that is neither boring nor unapproachable. In fact this cassette opened its arms and welcomed us to such a degree that one Underground person was immediately despatched to NY to find out more about Robert Poss and what exactly he's up to (well, he was allowed to call Robert on the 'phone).

8 8 7 8

VIRTUE (clo The Lodge Studio, Claret Hall Farm, Near Clare, Suffolk) Thank God! Some bloody good, non-nonsense hard-rockin' metal! Blimey! Alright, so they worship the devil. OK, so some of them beat themselves up. And there's no telling what they get up to with all those chains ... but let's face it, at least you know where you are with good old fashion cock 'n' roll. This cassette ended up in the dustbin.

So, if you want your demo tapes given the attention that they no doubt deserve, send them along to Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1.

SHEET

WHAT'S HAPPENING to the live circuit these days? Our scribes went in their best togs to see Miaow, Age Of Chance, The Wallflowers and The Stupids, and also recommended a whole lot more that they thought were worth seeing. Have you got any better ideas? Write us at Underground . . .

The Astoria in London suddenly becomes a rather good place to be on a Friday night. First it was Voice Of The Beehive, The Wishing Stones and Microdisney, and then another trio of new(ish) talent parading their wares. Unfortunately not many people were present to witness The Wallflowers jangling and posing moodily around the stage, though their cover of The dB's Big Brown Eyes was enough to raise a few eyebrows. Miaow were, well, Miaow. They've sprouted another guitar player since the last sighting, and also have an ex-Higson blowing what looked to be a clarinet or oboe or something; are they becoming a bit Latin, or is it my imagination? Age Of Chance appeared in an enormous explosion of colour (decked out in customary biking gear) and noise. They're aggressive, confident, and definitely 1987's answer to The Glitter Band. People will buy their records.

At the IGlo in West London the mood is different. So what's the IGlo about?

"A kindred spirit. It's the music and attitude we care about, not individual bands."

Indeed, individuality seems at a premium inside the club. Apart from the uniformed punk punters, all three groups on this (or any) night are expected to provide two, 15 minute sets in strict rotation and using the same basic equipment. Fast and furious is the aim, hardcore punk is the game.

There's a decaying scruffiness about the atmosphere, and yes, that is Peel and Walters quietly sipping lagers in the corner. A French girl catches my ear.

Tommy, The Stupids, drummer ambles over clad in a Beastie Boys T-shirt, skateboard firmly clamped under a sweaty armpit. A hip-hop look, yet a hardcore sound?

"It's a New York aggressiveness, we're not ashamed to be called punk rock. I'm against labels and fashion."

Around and about on the old live circuit there're tips and touts pointing fingers at all sorts of dishevelled music ● For instance, Toxic Kangaroo Babies have been impressing all and sundry with their poppy quasi-psychedelic sound riddled with great tunes. What's more, they're very young ● More loud and threatening are Scots outfit The Hook 'n' Pull Gang who centre around a hollering girl drummer-come-vocalist who puts Phil Collins to shame. It's an aggressive shock-rock sound that's fearsome and really not the kind of stuff you want looming behind you down a dark alley ● Meanwhile, up in Birmingham something stirs; they're called Wonderstuff and apparently they're a 'band of long-hairs who play short-haired music' with someone who sounds like Pete Shelley on vocals. Several major labels are reportedly sniffing around ● New York hot-shooters The Smithereens are back in the UK for an appearance on Saturday Live and a solitary gig at the Mean Fiddler on 23.3.87, though they make the trip without Suzanne Vega who sang on their last single ● Rough Traders The Apartment scored an impressive showing supporting The Weather Prophets at London's Kings College recently — on the same night, mob warfare was breaking out at The Astoria as thousands clamoured for admittance to BAD's second London show. Rusty Egan was one of the unlucky ones who unsuccessfully tried to blag a free entrance. And, the entire staff of Virgin Records are rumoured to have turned out to see their new signing, All That Jazz, at their date supporting Berlin at The Town & Country Club ● What are the odds on Scandinavia being this year's Sheffield/Liverpool/Glasgow? Apart from the Jazz, there's The Leather Nun, Gangway, The Water Melon Men ● When will it end? And what's this we hear about The Primitives going 'round record companies asking for a £200,000 advance and 19 per cent of their record sales? ● We've Got A Fuzzbox look to be trying to do something different — their repertoire at The Camden Palace included accapella versions of How Much Is That Doggie In The Window and Tutti Frutti ● One time High Bees person Ollie seen resurfacing at the Albany Empire with a new seven piece combo O-Oh Chongo — they're reported as being 'sort of Postcardy' and feature two young ladies blowing clarinets ● London's most determined live act, The Larks are finally beginning to encounter the taste of fame and fortune — their latest acquisition is a huge Mercedes van in which they travel the length and breadth of the country carrying fans, roadies, band members and other assorted well-wishers. Other hot tips include Boss (whose recent Delirium show featured go-go dancers, Apocalypse Now) and Breathless, featuring This Mortal Coil's Dominic Appleby, who certainly wowed them with a cram packed soiree above a pizza house. Several A&R men were seen to collapse from the heat and the collected weight of their wallets. Till next month, salut, and happy slam dancing.

GREAT MOMENTS IN ROCK 'N' ROLL HISTORY NUMERO UNO

Oh yes, oh yes, oh no. Grrrrrrreat momentos in la histoire rock 'n' roll . . .

Witness here, the, yes the The Person Matt Johnson beating hell out of an unsuspecting tin sink with the aid of Clint Ruin (also of Foetus Uber Frisco, Wiseblood, You've Got Foetus On Your Breath, FAT, Foetus Foetus Madrid etc etc). This epic metal meets drumstick barrage took place a couple of years back when Matt presented the "history of rock 'n' roll" at the Marquee. Other guests included a King Of Luxembourg, a Marc Almond, a Weatherman, a Colin Lloyd Tucker and other strange people.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR PATRONS 1 CAMPER VAN BEETHOVEN

54 UNDERGROUND

David Van Beethoven was forcefully cajoled into writing this missive as the Campers entered the UK for their first ever visit. You want to get the original, framed? Then for all you fact fans, noting that the group have just had their classic Take The Skinheads Bowling single re-released, which band, who originally dressed as skinheads, later went on to get really old and boring before having a hit with Merry Xmas Everybody? Answers on a postcard to Beethoven/Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 7QZ, to arrive no later than April 13.

The scribble on the pic sez: Hello, greetings to readers of Underground from top wrestling championship & Roller Derby band "Camper Van Beethoven". We are very excited about being here in the UK and look forward to playing for the cheering masses here as we do from time to time in the USA. Victor and Jonathan are particularly excited about being here as they want to watch the pagan ritual you call cricket and have spent many afternoons wearing fezzes in the hope of getting true and pure feelings and because it helps to keep the plague of flying saucers in check — David.

The place where all roads end, the place where everyone gets a chance to have their say. • This month Sudden Sway give us their first paragraph of, er,

Story of the Theory of 622 Worlds (In 622 Words)

Papkids! Here comes a pap-kid, only 622 words in his mouth & is that a theory about worlds tangled up in his nuts & bowels? It is.

"Worlds" it goes — well that's one word for them (Belief-space is another two) "Everyone's got ONE small private one while the world's got ONE big public one". All very well pap-kid but as with any theory, either people can't see its 'applications' yet — like that bloke who invented the computer 150 yrs too early — or else they get phased & retreat back into that private world.

"Your world is always the easiest" you see "its demands are the same as your expectations" you dig?

• Meanwhile, back in the libel courts, Slaughter Joe attempts to expose the world and its shortcomings with mentions of Dan Treacy, creative accounting, men in suits, scabby moustaches, business lawyers and suchlike. We might have been able to print it if we could have afforded a million dollar defence budget for ourselves. Still, that's journo roll and this column is for you to tell us why you think. . . oh, you know.

Overend Watts, the semi-mythical figure who laid down the bass-lines for Mott The Hoople during the '70s, has been out of the spotlight for some years now. Until the Underground research team unearthed him in West London, that is. We leave no Stone (sorry, Mott) uncovered ••• Now known as Peter Watts, Overend spends his time running a second hand shop — The Duke Of Bedford Park — in Southfields Road, Chiswick. Customers can rifle through scores of second hand and/or rare records, Star Wars toys, old wireless sets and other such collectables. And, there's more • Hidden in the back room lie objets d'art. One such is the huge hand-made 'silver bird' bass guitar that he would manhandle throughout All The Way To Memphis, not to mention a pair of six-inch platform boots that rise to the hip (sorry, I didn't mean to mention them) • Nouveau celeb Billy Bragg, who lives nearby, is a regular caller to Overend's emporium where ambitious schemes to build a studio on the premises, and numerous fishing expeditions around the UK, are discussed in demanding detail. ○In the hogwash and confusion of '77 when safety pins became jewellery, gossip became news and the rock press was given a kind of spasm-inducing mouth to mouth, the independent label syndrome was born in a bedroom just south of the north. There were no particular reasons, plenty of specialist patrons were suggesting the idea, bootlegs were hip and both reggae and soul were undergoing a pressing boom that was lining the pockets of the few who'd secured the addresses of studios, cutting rooms, sleeve printers, and record pressing plants.

Pose: Spizz & Pete Petrol pump it up

Pose: Vic Godard in early sect daze

○With the birth of punk, the fanzine, the get up and go regime entered the garage, turned the exhaust on full and didn't come out till they were blasted. Though purists might reckon that the reggae obscurists, Island and eventually Virgin were the first "independent" labels it wasn't till the birth of Stiff, Chiswick and eventually Rough Trade and its many bastard sons that the independent network that we know and love today was panting its first howling breaths.

The revolution would not be televised, but the "scene" soon produced its heroes and the bigger companies snapped them up, cleaned them up where necessary and taught them that all important business sense.

Dave Henderson clears away the cobwebs and attempts to draw some kind of parallel between the independent label explosion of '76-'78 and the current resurgence and general profile raising that is wending its way through the independent network.

As it is now, as it was then, the A&R departments are hounding the smaller labels, but this time the independent businessman has a bit more brainpower, a tatty Filofax substitute and a huge 'phone bill. Let battle commence.

AND OTHER ROCK 'N' ROLL HABITS
FOR PINHEADS AND SURFERS! (7) FEB '77

ADVERTS - DON LETTS - GORILLAS

Pose: The Bible of the Beat, then...

In the autumn of 1978, the independent label boom was making glorious headway. Into the valley of the overdraft, and VAT added later, a plethora of strangely named companies were registering as business partnerships, opening bank accounts and generally living on credit of 30 days for everything from artwork and pressing, to sleeve manufacture

The smaller operations, like sleeve and label printers Delga, and the pressing plants at places like Island, were soon to get into some sticky financial problems through many of the labels' inability to juggle a calculator, but the spirit of adventure was rife and some of those earlier 45s made enough money for even more strange sounding outfits to emerge

Skimming through Zig Zag's Small Label Catalogue for '78, which came in at a measly 28 pages and covered everything that lived and breathed at that juncture, there are some long forgotten luminaries from that great no fixed abode in the sky (as well as some heady overtures that later would develop into cash certs for the larger companies)

I mean, who can forget High Society's Three Hippies In A Gas Chamber on AFC, The Art Attacks' I'm A Dalek on Albatross (a rousing gruff outburst with lead crooning from Savage Pencil, which changes hands for a fiver these days), The Angelic Upstarts' controversial The Murder Of Liddle Towers on their own Angelic Upstarts label, Joy Division's very valuable first 12 inch, The Ideal For Living EP on Anonymous or Enigma, The Lurkers' early outbursts and a thinly bleached Gary Numan as Tubeway Army on Beggars Banquet. There was Jonathan Richman and other bezerk Bezerkley tykes from the States, the manic violin-driven punk of Bethnal . . . and we're still only up to page four. It seemed every town had its fave band and every would-be entrepreneur was calling collect to find out if he could press 1,000 records and charge it to Access

It was Stiff who really captured the initial independent spirit and somehow an endless string of post punk songsmiths emerged from the death throes of pub rock to give the label a reputation that looked ever profitable. Their first 10 records might have been a little hit and miss — with contributions from Nick Lowe (later to be cred fare in coffee table position), The Pink Fairies (cult rockers with interesting hairstyles for the period) Roogalator (a four piece revolving around simple pop and interesting keyboards who signed to Virgin and disappeared after Love And The Single Girl), The Tyla Gang (Sean Tyla's rockin' boogie bozos), Lew Lewis (a harmonica-totin' Canvey blues person), The Damned (pub rockers on speed and dandruff), Richard Hell (ex Heartbreaker, Television), Plummet Airlines (the country rock revival that came too soon) and Motorhead (hmm).

Number 11, however, was the start of the label's big boom with Elvis Costello's Less Than Zero. Who would have thought that this spotty, bespectacled non-image would have captured the hearts of a confused punk generation who were discovering puberty through Johnny Rotten's Pistols departure (and scraping the egg off their collective faces as McLaren revealed it was all a scam)? Well, they had me fooled

Hot on Costello's heels came Wreckless Eric and Ian Dury in a return to raucous vaudeville good time music. The Stiff nationwide tour coupled Costello, Dury, Eric and Nick Lowe with ex-Pink Fairy Larry Wallis in a beery show of bravado. No sooner had it returned than the focus of attention switched to Akron, Ohio, of all places, and the Stiff team unleashed the impressive Devo (later to sign to Virgin), Rachel Sweet, Jane Aire And The Belvederes (also later to sign to Virgin) while Mercury picked up on Cleveland, Ohio's Pere Ubu, who Stiff had passed upon

During the past eight years the fall and rise, rise and fall of Stiff has seen them rubbing shoulders with The Members (they released their first single Solitary Confinement before signing to Virgin), Madness (scooped from 2-Tone in their prime and motivators of some of the best things in video), The Yachts (whose Henry Priestman later became an It's Immaterial and more recently resurfaced on keyboards with The Christians), The Belle Stars

(gak), Tenpole Tudor (hooray) and Any Trouble (wah). You see, it's not easy picking a winner

Around the same time as Stiff were slipping into gear, Ted Carroll's Rock On record stall became a lucrative empire fuelled on discarded Dylan EPs, obscure oddities and the kind of collectables that most vinyl junkies would give their Dansette for. Rock On relocated to a shop in Kentish Town Road beside Camden Town tube and at the drop of a stylus shop regulars turned out to be would-be pop personalities in a time when the legendary "get up and do it" attitude still ruled the roost. Initial releases on Chiswick varied from obscure rockabilly classics that were changing hands for vast sums plus anything from the bastard sons of rock 'n' roll to the tempered also-ran commerciality of acts that could almost make it to the radio but were being dubbed "new wave" by pundits who didn't want to soil their hands with punk

The catalogue was erratic in those days. Vince Taylor And The Playboys kept the quiphola crew happy, while The Gorillas played latter day r 'n' b, never really catching their manic on-stage neo-Hendrix-meets-Slade antics. More palatable, perhaps, were the restrained tones of The Radio Stars, the Irish punk of The Radiators From Space, Johnny And The Self Abusers (who would go on to become Jim Kerr And The Simple Mind Abusers), the silky sweet rockabilly authentication of Whirlwind, the extrovert Johnny Moped, Strummer-powered 101'ers and the omnipresent Motorhead

Since those early days, the Chiswick catalogue has expanded to cover a vast array of styles and genres with a collection of well stocked rosters including Ace (everything from the Elvis Presley Interview Tapes LP through to Frankie Ford's Sea Cruise album, BB King on CD and more), Kent (soul compilations spanning the late '50s through to the mid '70s, with special collections of Ike And Tina Turner, The Impressions, Maxine Brown, Bobby Bland and Tyrone Davis), Big Beat (mixing current sounds as diverse as The Cramps, The Stingrays, The Del-Monas, The Damned and Shark Taboo), Globestyle (featuring 3 Mustaphas 3, accordion music from the far flung corners of the world and general ethnic madness), Boplicity (jazz of all types), Del Rio (catering for a resurgence of interest in roots country music), Off Beat, Impact, Crown, Contemporary and Cascade

Over recent years the Ace axis and their obvious success, through coupling re-issues with new product, new mixes, previously unobtainable and very rare material, has been taken up by others too. From Demon, mixed among current issues by US outfits like The Connells and UK funsters That Pet- rol Emotion, they have a US label, Zippo, working on acts like Green On Red, Dream Syndicate and The Rain Parade, plus a massive re-issues programme on Edsel which touches all corners from Grateful Dead, The Paul Butterfield Blues Band, Love, Earth Opera and Van Dyke Parks. There is also currently healthy activity with soul repackages from Charly (who also cover r 'n' b and rock 'n' roll), See For Miles (whose catalogue covers diverse people from Andrew Loog Oldham to The Troggs) and Bam Caruso (who mix the current wave of psychedelic music with classic '60s material from the vaults of Decca, EMI or wherever)

So, how can these small labels manage to access big labels' catalogues? Well, with such small runs of product and sales building over a long period rather than in one initial rush it makes it impractical for the larger labels to concentrate their efforts on such schedules and, with the exception of Stateside, most have opted to let specialists like Ace, Bam Caruso, See For Miles etc work their material and pick up a royalty on the tracks

YOUNG MAN SEEKS AN INTERESTING JOB

● With the Stiffs and suchlike taking the initiative, it wasn't long before every nook and cranny was fostering their pet project. Record shops were a prime point of activity (especially those who couldn't fake admittance or a backstage pass to the clubs — save Eater whose Roxy exploits smacked of Dickensian irony). In the Midlands, Graduate picked out the local punky reggae combo — a multi-racial conglomerate called UB40 — whose stance and politics were sound (and whose music wasn't far behind) ● Just prior to that outburst, the major labels were revolving in ever-decreasing circles as eastenders Small Wonder and Notting Hillbillies Rough Trade began to grab some of the scruffy elements of the new wave. The Beatles' clean cut mop top image was a thing of the past (until about a year later that is, when power pop and The Pleasers raised their pimply brow) ● Rough Trade had started distributing the smaller labels through the back of their shop (as had Small Wonder), both were operating mail order services and both were inundated with potential Pistols, left field weirdos and commercial comrades all bursting to introduce their talents to plastic ● Rough Trade had kicked off with the Iggy influenced guitar barrage of the drum machine powered French outfit Metal Urbain on Paris Maquis, but, in truly international style, they followed it with discs from Mister Bassie, Cabaret Voltaire, Stiff Little Fingers, Subway Sect, Spizz Oil and The Angelic Upstarts. Small Wonder's dive into the market was a little more heads down and straight forward and they introduced the world to Puncture, Zeros, The Carpettes, Leyton Buzzards and The Cravats in quick succession. They were soon to diversify, however, with releases from Bauhaus, The Cure, Crass and Patrik Fitzgerald, while Rough Trade kept everyone guessing about policy with a wide range of delights varying from The Monochrome Set to The Raincoats, The Blue Orchids to Delta Five and Red Crayola to Robert Wyatt. (And the variation in their product is still present.)

Almost immediately the first signs of confusion about independent availability began. It was hard enough to track down some of the labels, difficult to read about releases and sometimes it was impossible to obtain some of the more limited pressings. (At this point we were a long way from the Cartel distribution network and major league success for any band on a small label.)

Deptford Fun City's debut fuelled by Sniffin' Glue enthusiasm brought the scene into perspective and also introduced 12,000 readers to some new sounds through the DFC pressing of Squeeze and SG editor Mark P's band Alternative TV. Sister labels Illegal (The Police) and Step Forward (The Cortinas, Chelsea and The Fall) further coloured the picture, but it was the real obscurity, that one record only label, that often made the tackiest, tinniest or most desirable discs.

Scotland's Sensible label introduced the world to Fay Fife and The Rezillos on their Can't Stand My Baby; New Hormones offered the world The Buzzcocks; Braik (managed by Bernie Rhodes) came up with Subway Sect; Rabid from Manchester had Ed Banger And The Nosebleeds, Slaughter And The Dogs and John Cooper Clarke, while Raw Records had a riot of confusing styles including The Killjoys (later to become Dexy's), The Users, The Soft Boys, Some Chicken, Acme Sewage Co and more.

In Ireland, the Good Vibrations label was already in the market for producing quality pop and they displayed this with cuts from The Undertones, Protex and X-Dreamysts. To press the point home even further, the label also compiled a limited edition double 7 inch set called Battle Of The Bands with a side apiece from Rudi, Spider, Outcasts and Idiots.

The formula continued with Zoo (The Teardrop Explodes, Bunnymen); Industrial, (Throbbing Gristle); Safari (Wayne County, Toyah); and The Label (Eater, Bombers). The music was, obviously, varied, it was always dynamic and hugely saleable.

GO FOR YOUR LAYOUT SHEET

With more and more labels arriving on the over-populated counter something had to give. There were just too many singles and inevitably labels, printers, pressing plants and record stores ended up going under. Image had always been an individualistic point within the independent world and, around the turn of the '80s, it became even more plain that it was the labels who'd developed their own distinct look and cult following who were going to survive (as well as prompting new labels that the look of their discs was just as important as the sound).

MUTE

Set up by Daniel Miller, the label's first release presented the world in an electronic box. Miller, thinly disguised as The Normal, did the ultimate in noise generation disco on TVOD/Warm Leatherette (later covered by Grace Jones). Messy and perfectly aggressive, the Mute stock Lebasel graphics, follow ups by uncomfortable bed partners Non, Fad Gadget, Depeche Mode and Smegma, couldn't have even hinted at the mega-Mode wave which was to follow. Electronic disco took off, and the label's future was secure when Depeche Mode hit the charts.

Since that deserved success, Mute have been able to take more risks with Liaisons Dangereuses, Einsturzende Neubauten, develop talent (Nick Cave), provide a service (re-releases of the old Throbbing Gristle material) and managed to break several new Vince Clark projects from The Assembly (with Feargal Sharkey) and Yazoo to Erasure. All this with an electronic/secondhand computer image... not bad, huh?

FACTORY

With noisy designs, Peter Saville in tow from the early days at Factory, the label's cult following was rapidly increased through a series of ingenious graphic techniques, the odd Futurist copy and a style of clinical — almost architectural — design that devotees devoured with rampant delight. Through a great industrial mine of angled lines, subtle colours and traced overlays introduced a kind of coffee-table meets library-bookshelf collectability. Each individual act was presented with its own unique image and there've been many copyists. A look at any Factory artifact — from A Certain Ratio, Section 25, New Order, The Names, Joy Division, Durutti Column — will soon bring that home.

FAST

With a huge wide variation in musical style on the initial Fast roster it's quite surprising how the label's post-kitsch, scratch graphics managed to pull all the elements together. In its heyday of '78, it soon disappeared with the major players now moving to the big league. Later exploits seemed to go under the Punk banner, but it included releases from The Fire Engines, Fish, Siobhán, The Human League, Gang Of Four, U2, The Scars and The Mekans, all gloriously breaking new ground in their adventure into music. The label even offered the first disc as a magazine with the Earoom series which featured musical contributions, over time, with artists from forces as diverse as Joy Division, Thursdays, The Prati, DAF, Stupid Babies, Non-Mercy and more.

POSTCARD

As a kind of muted reaction to the techno design ice age around them, the Postcard label — with its close knit family of acts — Orange Juice, Josef K, The Go Betweens and Aztec Camera — totally discarded the over-designed threat by introducing sketchily penned cats, badly drawn Scots people and general smoky beermat type imagery to their sleeves and labels.

Whether it had been a positive move to alter the flow of slicko Brit art isn't too clear, but a host of third generation Josef K and Orange Juice grandchildren in sound have a distinct regard for the bizarre in their sleeve artwork and general presentation.

A late starter, compared to Fast and Mute, 4AD is the brainchild of Ivo and shares space in South London with Beggars Banquet. Masterfully designed sleeves, postcards and general paraphernalia (courtesy of 23 Envelope) have given the label a moody, broody image that's perfect for the likes of label faves The Cocteau Twins and This Mortal Coil. Others wrapped and distinctive in 4AD finery include Colourbox, Dead Can Dance and Dif Juz for whom 23 Envelope have created personal, quite different images while still keeping within the label guidelines.

In something of a show of design strength, 4AD released a set of postcards featuring the work of 23 Envelope. It was such a huge success that the label's first release for '87 is a set of 12 postcards featuring their work.

★One of the first noted 45s to emerge from the home-made department came from The Desperate Bicycles. Not musically aligned to the punk/new wave movement (in fact not musically in sympathy with very much at all), the group's Smokescreen is something of a Van Gogh among vinyl valiants.

★For the record, they had four releases all on their own Refill Records from East London. They were Smokescreen (RR 1), The Medium Was Tedium (RR 2), New Cross New Cross (RR 3) and Occupied Territory (RR 4).

Actually, these 20 delicacies are a standard test for people with amnesia. Do you recognise any of these titles? Have you been in the vicinity when one of these underground overtures has been performed? What were you doing during the years mentioned? All this, and, more...

●Yes, there actually was a label called Underground Records back in '78. Their first, and only traceable 45, came from The Jerks and was called Get Your Woolfin' Dog Off Me.

● Edwyn Collins's journey into immortality started in the wee small hours with Alan Horne's Postcard label. Eventually his brainchild and whipping post, Orange Juice, were snapped up by Polydor. Horne went onto some rather unimpressive outings on a new label, Swamplands, and the Scottish scene seems only recently to be returning to some semblance of normality.

Julian Henry's love of pure pop was born with Orange Juice and their many latterday cousins and it was with some trepidation that he took his four prized Postcard 45s to the house of Collins to gain Edwyn's wit and wisdom on the sides in retrospect.

● That was just part of the story. Collins claimed to have a hangover and his stereo was broken, but he warmed to the task and revealed a few other secrets about the Postcard label and some of the records that nearly got released . . .

S. Daly E. Collins D. McClymont J.Kirk

Felicity, live version "The first Orange Juice record was actually a flexi-disc that Malcolm Ross recorded on a tape recorder, and was of a gig we were doing in Cheviots Row in Edinburgh. We had this idea to start a fanzine called Strawberry Switchblade (named after one of James Kirk's songs) and intended to give the flexi away with it. The fanzine never appeared because it was shit."

Falling And Laughing "We recorded this in eight hours in a small 8-track in Paisley, and when we finished it, we felt, well, that it was rather good. The reason it sounds a bit out of tune is because we couldn't afford a guitar tuner; anyway, James was convinced that he had perfect pitch, so it's understandable that the tuning was sometimes a bit out." ● "We all came down to London to see Rough Trade and John Peel. Alan marched into the foyer in Broadcasting House and just demanded to see him. Alan is a bit arrogant, and when Peel appeared he just said to him, 'All these Liverpool groups you're playing are shit, Glasgow is the next place where it's going to happen!' Then we heard Peel on the air saying how he'd just been confronted by a 'truculent youth'! who said that the Liverpool thing was over, and then he proceeded to play Echo And The Bunnymen. Peel didn't like our record, he only played it once."

Blue Boy "Once we'd recorded everything, Alan and I went down to London to try and arrange a deal for Postcard through Rough Trade, but when we got in to see Geoff Travis he told us that the songs fell in between punk and professional pop and that he didn't think Rough Trade could become involved. We left the offices very downhearted and Alan seemed to go into a crazed depression and started wandering about in the middle of the road saying, 'Let them run me over, let them kill me'. I said, 'Look Alan, give me the masters, I'll phone around some of the major record companies and see if I can get us a deal that way'. So Alan said, 'Take the masters. Betray me. But that'll cost you £25,000". He was insane ● "Anyway, in the meantime Dave McCulloch from Sounds had written a big double page spread on Postcard, and when Geoff Travis saw it he miraculously changed his mind! So we got our deal with Rough Trade."

Simply Thrilled Honey "I remember that we were getting phenomenally good press at this time, and when we went on tour supporting The Undertones things were starting to go well. There were major record labels hovering about, but we didn't really see any point in signing then" ● "The Postcard office up at 185 Princes Street was getting hundreds of tapes sent in by all the would-be hopefuls at that stage, and there were always the same characters hanging around — Hodgy from The Bluebells, the guys from Love And Money, and Lloyd Cole who, incidentally, was in a mod group at the time. Hodgy was always trying to impress Alan in the hope that they'd get signed up, but Alan would just play him along. Also I think that The Bluebells never joined Postcard due to pressure from Josef K and ourselves, we thought they were shit."

Pour Old Soul "We thought this was a bit like a Chic song, you can imagine how moronic we were. I really saw it as a contender, and there were arguments with Rough Trade over whether or not we should use a strike force to help promote it; they had this hippy mentality and said no, but Alan was very ruthless and had no scruples about bribery or corruption. It ended up selling about 20,000 copies I think" ● "Alan was still behaving very eccentrically. He would go around with huge cat's whiskers painted on his face saying, 'I'm catman and I make purrrfect records'."

Wan Light "This was set to become our sixth single but it never actually came out since we decided to make the move to a major company. It was a mistake in retrospect, as we had these huge expectations from Polydor and nothing actually seemed to happen. Postcard now seems to be like a hobby that we became obsessive about — you would have to be either very foolish or very generous to call it a business. My own motivation has never been money though, and I feel that if we'd stayed in the independent sector of the market we would have become much more important. We were naive then, and were stupidly tempted by a major label."

With the current cost of Orange Juice Postcard 45s well into double figures, Underground has managed to put together a meagre £6.29 to buy a copy of Orange Juice's, sort of, Greatest Hits, In A Nutshell. Plus, we got Edwyn to scribble some message or other on it. So, the album, now defaced, which features a few of the tracks that Edwyn's been talking about (and some later Polydor things) can be yours for a mere postcard with the correct answer to the following OJ related questions

● 1 Name the three other bands that were on the original Postcard label ● 2 Label boss Alan Horne went on to set up a second label in conjunction with London, what was it called? ● Answers to O McJuice/Underground Keyboard Mail Room Ltd, Unit 5, Seager Bldgs, Brookmill Rd, London SE8 before April 3.

JOHN COOPER CLARK WHOCCNT'S EP CAT No. TOSH103

1. MUCKY PUP — Puncture (Small Wonder 1977)
On last year's anniversary of punk, the NME put out their Punk-A-Go-Go tape, and, in the opinion of many, leaving this gem off was an act of extreme stupidity. It was the first and best release for the Small Wonder label and, as far as independent releases go, was arguably the best of its year. In 1981 the song was covered by The Exploited on their first album, Punk's Not Dead.
2. BIG ROCK CANDY MOUNTAIN — Brent Ford & The Nylons (Brum Beat 1978)
Those not from West London probably won't find this as amusing as those that do. Brentford Nylons is a factory come superstore for people to buy nylon sheets and so forth, a prospect as horrendous as the TV ads the company perpetrated in the mid '70s to promote it. Big Rock Candy Mountain was in fact the flip side, but is much better than their cover of 19th Nervous Breakdown which was given A-side status. Good wacky pop music.
3. WHAT A SUCKER — Le Ritz (Breaker 1977)
Like the above, the record company hailed from sunny Birmingham. The tune itself is God awful, but deserves a mention for its classic intro. Instead of the standard punk 1-2-3-4, vocalist Steve Midnight shouted 'Hugh, Pew, Barny, McGrew, Cuthbert, Dibble, Grub' — the firemen from good old Trumpton, the toy town later immortalised by Half Man Half Biscuit's Trumpton Riots EP.
4. BOSS MAN — The Mutants (Rox 1977)
DON'T TAX ME — The Exile (Boring 1977)
Again, God awful records with just as dire picture sleeves, but the bands look brilliant. Both from 1977, punk rockers with early '70s hair styles, moustaches and flares — marvellous. I haven't a clue where The Mutants (who featured Roddy Rodent on guitar and Al Sation on bass) were from but The Exile were Glasgow lads.
5. BEING BOILED — Human League (Fast 1978)
WARM LEATHERETTE — The Normal (Mute 1978)
IN THE ARMY — Blah Blah Blah (Absurd 1979)
All similar in style — Gary Numan type musak without the unpleasantness. I was interviewing The Cramps for a fanzine when this style of sound was hip, and the DJ at the club we were in was blasting us with it. I asked Ivy Rorschach what she thought of it. "It's Nazi musak," she replied. I wouldn't put it so strongly, but they do kinda conjure up images of final solutions.

• 2-Tone was the first label to dramatically bust out of the post punk/new wave/power pop glut. In '79 the air of inventiveness had grown rather dank and it took The Automatics from Coventry to break the mould.

• Touted in the Midlands, their early shows mixed reggae and punk in an uncompromising and most times uncomfortable concoction that remained slightly less than volatile.

• With another combo of same name inking a deal with Island, The Coventry Automatics eventually begat The Special AKA The Automatics, The Specials and The Special AKA. The music, through all this time, developed. Ska was a name bandied about, but there was more to this multi-faceted crew than that and, after a debut 45 produced independently through Spartan, Chrysalis took up the label. The rest is good listening.

The Selector

• Points of interest are mainly that Elvis Costello originally allocated the number CHS TT7 for his I Can't Stand Up For Falling Down but contracts got a little too hot to juggle. Advance copies only were pressed and they're, er, a little expensive. • The label is still in theory a go situation, but the Jerry Dammers quality control unit gives little away in the region of availability or regular releases. Still, pretty nifty collection all round, huh?

As a special bonus, the 2-Tone label have found half a dozen brightly coloured copies of the This Are 2-Tone retrospective album and they've given them to Underground to offer as bait to anyone who can answer the following very simple question. • Three members of The

Specials* went off, after Ghost Town, to form their own combo The Fun Boy Three. What was the title of their first single? •

YELLOW PAGES

A gloriously incomplete list of names to drop. These are the acts who've wrestled with their conscience and straddled that difficult fence between major and independent status. Credibility still intact?

ADAM AND THE ANTS got leather and whips a retrial, played live to extend their clique, surfaced in Jubilee and did it on Do It before signing to CBS and attempting to re-design the pantomime

JANE AIRE delivered Yankee Wheels to Stiff as part of their Rubber City package. Signed to Virgin, a pic disc and another disappearance.

AGE OF CHANCE did two singles on their own label, Riot Bible, through Red Rhino. Anrik Rai put them in the studio, bought them some cycling shirts, got them to cover Prince's Kiss and release it on FON. They had a run in with the charts and then signed to Virgin.

AZTEC CAMERA first trod the boards, barefoot, as a Postcard set of renegades. Soon to be manhandled to Rough Trade they released two critically acclaimed ashtrays in the guise of Pillar To Post and Oblivious. Warners awoke, signed, and their eventual confusion and demise was set in motion.

THE BANNED got more than a few rave reviews around mid '78 for their Hey Little Girl single on South London's Can't Eat Records. They signed to Harvest, released another single and mysteriously disappeared.

BAUHAUS, Northampton's chief exporters of eye liner, had their classic Bela Lugosi's Dead released on Small Wonder before signing to Beggars Banquet and poking at the chart with a cover of Bowie's Ziggy Stardust. The group have since split in two. Peter Murphy released a solo LP at the end of last year and the other three B boys became Love And Rockets.

THE BEAT turned up in a box of demos for Jerry Dammers to listen to. Initial success through the 2-Tone explosion and their cover of Tears Of A Clown led to a deal with Arista and their own Go-Feet label. Eventually the group split leaving Dave Wakelin and Ranking Roger to get famous in the States as General Public and their skanking rhythm section to become the Fine Young Cannibals.

THE BIBLE did Mahalia on Backs last year and ex-Mojo-come-A&R person in charge at Chrysalis was impressed. The record was picked up, promoted and nearly made a bigger impact.

BIG IN JAPAN were a co-op of sorts (man) from fortress Eric's in Liverpool. Through the Zoo label they almost released some decent records and shared a 45 on Eric's with The Chuddy Nuddies (who were really the Yachts). BIJ boasted Holly of Frankie on bass, Dave Balfe (Zodiac and S Switchblade manager and former Teardrop Explodes person), Jayne Casey who's now in Pink Industry (formerly Pink Military) and Bill Drummond who released a McScottish LP of ballads on Creation last year. Confusing, eh?

BLANCMANGE used everything and the kitchen sink in their coupling of melody and madness. A limited edition debut disc soon became an embarrassment as the duo flirted with the charts following a deal with London. They split last year.

All you're gonna need is... business sense

Just as independent labels are beginning to wise up and investigate the possibilities of a ready reckoner or even a new calculator, there were labels who bridged the gap and have subsequently proved that there can be life, and possible cash rewards, through an independent company if handled properly. ■■■■

Cherry Red's example of working on a publishing company (Complete Music) has worked well for them in the past. Early publishing conquests included Blancmange and The The and along the way other notable outfits have had their publishing administered by the people from Cherry Red. ■■■■

And they ran quite a burgeoning label at one time — with acts as diverse as Felt, Attila The Stockbroker, Thomas Leer, Piero Milesi, Everything But The Girl, The Nightingales and Quentin Crisp. More recently the label has concentrated on The Wiseacres and Mood Six, while former label manager Mike Alway has set up a subsidiary for the company called EI (after a brief time at WEA and Blanco Y Negro). The EI label has been concentrating on diverse talents like pop stylists Klaxon Five, The King Of Luxembourg and Louis Phillipe. ■■■■

As with Cherry Red, the Red Flame label started in similar fashion with publishing later developing the Red Flame and Ink labels. This has brought wider exposure for The Moodists, C-Cat Trance, Anne Clark, Severed Heads, Scattered Order and more recently Phillip Boa And The Voodoo Club, while another stalwart label from the late '70s, Glass, seems to constantly turn up class material — continually working with The Jazz Butcher and more recently The Pastels (but having seen action previously with Elliot Sharp, Religious Overdose, In Embrace and more). ■■■■

THE BODINES, from somewhere near Manchester, snorted their first through Creation and have latterly been welcomed to the bosom of the Magnet label. Watch the press for pips.

THE BODYSNATCHERS were always awful. The girlfriends of the 2-Tone degeneration they graced the label with a shaky 45, changed their name to The Belle Stars, signed to Stiff and got lots written about them. Danger of actually having to write songs was relieved when they started covering tepid soul hits.

BRILLIANT are the bastard son(s) of Food, Youth (ex of Killing Joke) dusted off his ego, hit Saturday morning TV with a slur and got some accountants to produce the group's most recent record. Food show business sense, WEA never learn.

BUZZCOCKS were in the right place at the right time with the perfect sound. Howard Devoto and Pete Shelley did it all perfectly well on their seminal Spiral Scratch EP on New Hormones. Not too loud and with a hint of melody, by the time United Artists snapped them up Devoto had left but Shelley's songwriting prowess was beginning to glow. A series of pop gems followed and Devoto returned himself some time later on Virgin in Magazine.

CABARET VOLTAIRE first brought their odd disharmonies to the public through their Headkick EP on Rough Trade. Subsequent manoeuvres saw them on a number of labels eventually reaching Virgin in the early '80s (through Stevo and Some Bizzare). The romance didn't last and they were dropped after two LPs. Having temporarily reverted to their own Doubtvision label they've now been signed to Parlophone.

CHAKK got the deal of the decade at MCA with manager Amrik Rai doing a McLaren. Now they've been dropped, have their own studio, and are on their manager's own FON label. Business sense.

CHINA CRISIS turned up on Whistle Test with African And White. Its release on Inevitable was followed by interest from Virgin, a tour with Simple Minds and eventual chart action following a mellowing of sounds and a night in the studio with a Steely Dan.

We Need Eleven Dollar Bills. You Only Got Ten

Throughout the independent rise, fall and circumnavigation, the larger labels have tried to either emulate or assist in their antics. On the bottom line, the chief idea for any large label involvement is to use cash and, hopefully, have it returned in a bigger suitcase. ■■■■■

Radar's primal '78 life was as a major label version of Stiff. Early movers for the label saw the catalogue running with Nick Lowe, Iggy Pop, La Dusseldorf, Red Crayola, Elvis Costello and The 13th Floor Elevators all vying for position. Others came and went, WEA held the purse strings and eventually pulled them tight shut. ■■■■■

Different levels of approach cropped up all over the place — Spandau Ballet signed to Chrysalis but could call their label Reformation, Beggars Banquet came in as an independent registered operation with distribution through WEA and a series of Gary Numan and Tubeway Army releases. This gave them the initial capital to develop into a healthy and successful label which has its own subsidiaries and works with The Fall and The Go-Betweens among others. ■■■■■

As Korova picked up Echo And The Bunnymen they attempted to flesh out the label with a few Residents LPs. But, they flopped. Similarly, Charisma's Pre label tried The Residents again but that didn't work (they did however manage to unearth two mighty immortal sides from Manicured Noise in the process). ■■■■■

The Chrysalis success with the 2-Tone label rode in on the crest of the last real live movement in the UK and diehard label supremo Jerry Dammers actually got a number one with Ghost Town, before the original line-up of the group split. More recently, Chrysalis' relationship with Andy McDonald's Go Discs has proved more than a smidgen fruitful with Billy Bragg and The Housemartins (and His Latest Flame, soon?), and their setting up of Blue Guitar with Rough Trade's Geoff Travis has allowed The Shop Assistants and The Mighty Lemon Drops to reach a much wider audience. ■■■■■

But, once again, it's WEA who've delved deepest into the independent market in recent years. The success of Blanco Y Negro — the Geoff Travis coalition with releases from The Jesus And Mary Chain, James, Everything But The Girl and The Dream Academy — has encouraged further similar experiments like last year's tie up with Vindaloo (primarily for Fuzzbox) and with Creation on the newly formed Elevation label which will feature Primal Scream and The Weather Prophets. They even signed Husker Du from SST. ■■■■■

Whether the small labels need the big labels is something for debate. The independent brown rice ethic clashes with small time business conduct, and the independent music for independent people aspect has its fans and its enemies. It all goes to make an interesting mismatch of ideas and unanswered questions. But, probably the best part of it all of this, is the differences inherent in the whole scene and the possibilities which are continually being expanded. ■■■■■

CLOCK DVA came in the wake of Cabaret Voltaire's cult appeal and lack of commercial success. Fetish singles and albums elevated them to the state of pop gurus. Polydor lapped it up when Fetish went broke, but after one album (their third in total) and general awegasms, it was all over. Some returned as The Box, some later as TAGC, some died.

JOHN COOPER CLARKE was bottled off on his first evening in the punk melee of London's Vortex. The totally unmarketable rant became the thing with some slick backing tracks and Clarke's humour winning through. After an EP for Rabid he signed to CBS, released the state of the art Disguise In Love then watered down the formula and his blood/sugar ratio.

THE CORTINAS suffered a sad end. Their first Defiant Pose single on Step Forward led to them being signed to CBS. They never released a record and rumours were rife that some of the majors were taking out smaller bands so there wouldn't be as much competition to their prime acts.

ELVIS COSTELLO started with Stiff, went to Radar, then F Beat and now finds himself back on his own label Imp/Demon. From preppy punk to country and back through blues and more. And mostly success at his own beckoning.

THE CURE began life with Killing An Arab and 10.15 Saturday Night, a primal independent mover on Walthamstow's Small Wonder label, eventually being picked for superstardom by Phonogram.

THE DAMNED did it their way. Changing their name, shedding characters like Captain Sensible, Bryan James who went to The Lords Of The New Church, and then reforming, re-aligning, and the like. Chart success eluded them through their days at Stiff and Big Beat/Ace/Chiswick but when they signed to MCA a couple of years back that changed.

DEVO were eccentric. Stiff licensed their early records from the States before Virgin picked them up. The first LP was a classic but they got madder and less controllable as they went on.

EASTERHOUSE started life at London but thinly disguised their debut with a hand sprayed Rough Trade EP. The label dropped them and, following a UK tour with The Smiths, the group joined RT. Two singles and the groovy Contenders LP gave them national attention but a split has halved their ranks.

OUT ON A LIMB

Some say the beauty of the independent music scene in the UK is that virtually anyone can get out there and do it. Understandably streams of left-field outfits have therefore found their way onto vinyl through one method or another allowing themselves the room to develop their style.

Even as Stiff and Chiswick were in the first throes of tuning their cash registers, oddball outfits were heading for the independent racks.

Next to Elvis Costello and The 101'ers were Nurse With Wound and later on The Fire Engines (from Scotland) would share space with Foetus (and his many variations) from North London.

Those early Nurse releases were hailed as totally self indulgent by their perpetrators, but a hungry band of regular punters followed their every move. The catalogue (initial releases were all on the group's own United Dairies label) featured albums from The Lemon Kittens (a duo comprised of Karl Blake, later of The Shock Headed Peters, and Danielle Dax), Musique Concrète and more.

Creative freedom was developed with Throbbing Gristle's Industrial label. Their four albums and numerous singles are now collector's items. Through their catalogue, which also released every TG live show on cassette, there were singles from Dorothy (an amalgamation of former Rema Rema drummer Max and latter day Psychic TV guitarist Alex Ferguson), Elisabeth Welch (a strangled version of Stormy Weather from Derek Jarman's The Tempest), seminal SPK, eccentric Monte Cazazza and eventually William Burroughs.

From Derek Jarman's THE TEMPEST

Running at the same time, Fetish gave the world everything from 8 Eyed Spy to 23 Skidoo, Clock DVA to The Bongos, but eventually the packaging got a little too extravagant and the label folded.

Later, attempts to continue the formula fell on rather less positive ground. In the wake of metal beat (circa early '80s) Test Dept and SPK signed to majors while contemporary (weirder) outfits such as Konstruktivits, Bushido and Attrition were left to struggle and scrape with the ideologically sound and well presented Third Mind label.

Some years on, little has changed. There are still Nurse With Wound albums and tapes, Current 93 continue re-releasing obscure gems, The Residents have moved to their umpteenth lable and Some Bizarre survive with The The and Soft Cell providing the cash and dash to allow the label and its subsidiaries to release material and develop the likes of Renaldo And The Loaf, Einstürzende Neubauten and more.

ECHO AND THE BUNNYMEN

started on the Zoo label but after one single. The excellent Pictures On My Wall, they were grabbed by Korova — a newly created WEA subsidiary who have nurtured their appeal through a string of chart (or close) singles.

FRA LIPPO LIPPI were Norway's odd couple whose doomy ballads hit the scere through Uniton. Five years on Virgin clutched their privates and released two singles before a critically ignored album. The UK yawned, but France took them to the top of their charts.

GANG OF FOUR mustered a healthy EP for Fast before taking their bolshie guitar mangled sound to EMI. After the excellent EMI debut LP Entertainment the bass player left for Shriekback and things went downhill.

JOOLS HOLLAND played with Squeeze, did a few solo things on Deptford Fun City, backed The Police and then was arrested for impersonating Bobby Davro.

HOLY TOY were Norwegian radicals with a Polish leader. Early Uniton activity saw them revered and raided. Signed to Sonet for the UK they recorded a coal sack on heat and were dropped.

THE HUMAN LEAGUE began humbly with Electronically Yours, a two tracker on Fast which coupled Being Boiled and Circus Of Death. Sheffield's sharpest played punk niteries with the likes of The Rezillos and Phil Oakey developed a dynamic line in heading beer glasses before being snapped up by Virgin. His compadres later became BEF and in turn Heaven 17.

HÜSKER DÜ were the other thing to come out of Minneapolis apart from Prince. Early releases through the Dead Kennedys Alternative Tentacles label were followed by a stint of some note at SST (LPs included the double Zen Arcade and the groovy Flip Your Wig). Since then they've upped roots and joined Warners. Their first LP, Candy Apply Grey, turned heads, their new double, Warehouse, is even better.

IT'S IMMATERIAL began life on Liverpool's Inevitable label. People took notice when they got themselves in a Sunday supplement's A Day In The Life section (about their love of beans on toast). They signed to WEA but were dropped. Eventually they were picked up by Virgin subsidiary Siren and after a few so-so single responses

The UK isn't the only place, obviously, where the independent label network has seen a new wave of hurried activity. In the States, the country and soul networks have been active for years, and now they've been joined by a host of left fielders whose activities provide music and visuals as varied as their imagination can stand.

For example, check out Independent Projects (PO Box 60357, Los Angeles, California 90060). Their roster of acts includes the exceptionally excellent Savage Republic, Ten Foot Faces, For Against and other such luminaries. They also gave the world Camper Van Beethoven's classic Telephone Free Landslide Victory album. And all releases come in magnificent limited editions with letterpress sleeves.

In France, Illusion Production (15 rue Pierre Curie, 14120 Mondeville, France) whose beautifully packaged singles, cassettes and albums have featured material from DDAA, La Societe Des Timides A La Parade Des Oiseaux, Un Department, The Twins and Craig Burk.

In Germany, Constrictor (AM Heedbrink 13, 4600 Dortmund 30, West Germany) mirror the UK enthusiasm for the independent single, with label owner Uli often enthusing over the quality product of those seminal UK independent singles. As a means of continuing that spirit, Constrictor have released 45s from Phillip Boa And The Voodoo Club (whose recent releases have been licensed in the UK by Ink), Christianhound, The Palookas (featuring ex-Swell Map Jowe Head) and The Membranes.

Everyone decided they'd liked them for years and rocketed Driving Away From Home into the charts.

JAMES were much talked about ages before they released their first couple of singles on Factory. Having gone through a beards-but-no-interviews phase they signed to Blanco Y Negro and did it with Lenny Kaye.

JILTED JOHN and his Mancunian humour, was first revealed on Rabid. Signed to EMI, the resultant album of similar pre-pubescent in-talk bombed and John later turned up as a speaking extra on Coronation Street.

LANDSCAPE kicked off their robotic jazz gyrations with two obscure offerings on the Event Horizon label before going major with the quirky (ahem) Einstein A-Go-Go. After several albums they split with drummer-come-computer person Richard Burgess opting for the production stool.

THOMAS LEER straddled the experimental fence with tie ups, through Throbbing Gristle with Robert Rental and Mute supremo Daniel Miller. After a long silence he turned up two years ago on Arista with a selection of techno Euro pop that's probably best forgotten.

MADNESS took the north London nutty sound from the terraces through 2-Tone to Stiff. Vid success led them to the charts and eventually to their own Zarjaz label through Virgin.

THE MEMBERS did a one-off for Stiff with Solitary Confinement. Live action saw them signed to Virgin, the first LP was great but then they ran out of songs and split up.

THE MISSION were half of The Sisters Of Mercy who grew their hair even longer and rocked out on Chapter 22. An impressed Mercury label snapped them up and they hit the national charts at the end of last year.

THE MONOCHROME SET took their early wares to Rough Trade and ended up signing to Virgin subsidiary Cindisc. After two great albums and numerous singles they left the label for Cherry Red, eventually splitting up a couple of years back.

SO. WHERE TO NOW?

Just like way back when, you know, when the independent label scene first gulped for air, there is confusion and mass uncertainty within the larger record companies.

• Now that the new breed of businessmen have established themselves, spent out on a dinky calculator and waded through the complexities of VAT, the MCPS and the PRS (what?), then they might just be able to keep hold of some of the newer talent that's bursting to escape to a wider audience. If you hear some bozo constantly putting down what's happening on the independent scene, or in the independent marketplace, don't worry... they don't know what they're talking about. If they carry on, just roll up your copy of Underground and thwack them on the back of the head*. That should slow them down a bit. • If positive proof were needed of the current state of play, just search out some of these recent releases and see just how good the music of today really is. All of these have arrived at Underground this week.

MY BLOODY VALENTINE Sunny Sundae Smile Lazy Records RT C
Another piece of twangy fuzzed-out pop from the would-be Monkees of the '90s.

URBAN COWBOYS Broken Promises Denbeat RR C An almost ballad-esque affair with a pop veneer and a '60s tinge which transcends the trashy inadequacies of their contemporaries.

DATBLYGU Hwgrgrawthog Anhrefn Re C Brilliantly structured piece of aggressive pop with an evil streak through the heart. Sung in Welsh too.

MY BABY'S ARM Hung In The Playground Kasper RT C. This one's absolutely... A deep driving voice, funky bass and a brittle guitar glueing it all together. The end result is much more than a choral collage and a catchy chorus, too.

JIH Big Blue Ocean Jungle J C A David Ball (Soft Cell) production job that's brimming with style, a string quartet sound and a neat melody line. Moody.

THE REVOLTING COCKS You Often Forget Wax Trax RT C Loud and pulsating psycho dancefloor stuff from a name worth quoting.

BIFF BANG POW! The Whole World's Turning Brouchard! Creation RT C The return of the spy thriller with squidgy organ and a noisy guitar. Surreal.

OMD did their earliest bad dances as Factory technos. Electricity was a tasteful debut and after developing nicely through Dindisc they hit a rich vein of popism and increased their bank accounts (more recently with Virgin).

THE ONLY ONES' drugged-out confusion first came to light on Vengeance with their classy Lovers Of Today single. Signing to CBS they became a real rock band.

ORANGE JUICE twanged with the best of them on Postcard. Salty singles and mass exposure for a new guitar generation attracted Polydor. The group signed, the relationship soured. The OJ's phase one through Postcard had four fine 45s. Through Polydor they had even more, but in a different, er, stylee (courtesy of Dennis Bovell).

THE POLICE were mainstays of Illegal (a brother company to Step Forward and Deptford Fun City). Their first single, Fall Out, didn't feature Sting — and even with the educated one they did little until Miles Copeland came up with the magic business combination. The rest of the story is...

PRIMAL SCREAM centre around Bobbie Gillespie, who saw time as stand up drummer for the Mary Chain. With shades in place and after a brief selection of tracks on Creation, the Screemers are one of the first signings to new WEA label Elevation.

PSYCHIC TV came in with silly haircuts after Throbbing Gristle split in two. First two albums, both for Some Bizzare, through RCA then CBS, didn't get the sales they warranted and the duo of Genesis P Orridge and Sleazy Christopherson headed back to the independent marketplace. Gen's hyperdelic Brian Jones fetish finally hit the charts on the group's own Temple label, but meanwhile Sleazy had left to join Coil.

THE RED GUITARS had four or so singles, cut a neat album called Slow To Fade and always looked set to do something. Eventually Virgin took the plunge, there was a slight line up change, a sound redirection and a close one with the charts. The latest scam is that the Hull renegades have returned to the Humber and have split into at least two.

ROOGALATOR wore matching boiler suits, did singles for Stiff and Do It before signing to Virgin. There they did the classic pop of Love And The Single Girl before splitting up.

THE BABYMEN For King Willy One Little Indian NM C Treacherous treason about kings and things given a gruff horror flick treatment with a pop overtone and a story to behold.

WE FREE KINGS Oceans DDT FF C Weird Celtic rock sound that makes Dexy's sound like a naff pop band. Oh, they are. Folk meets soul and a fiddle gets strung out.

LAST PARTY Mr Hurst Harvey's Re C Brooding melodies over a downbeat echoey guitar/piano mix. Bustingly beautiful and bristling.

MIAOW When It All Comes Down Factory P C Destined for mass exposure, Miaow's messy discordant twang are a neat foil for Cath Carroll's exquisite vocals.

FELINE JIVE Kiss 'n' Tell Massive Re C Mellow new pop sounds that could easily be cleaned up and ruined on such and such a big label. This is massive enough.

THE HOOK 'N' PULL GANG Pour It Down Yer Throat Bitch Hog FF C Loud, nasty, dirty guitars and a chant-a-long death threat that's really something good. Out of, er, control, I think.

PHIL WILSON Waiting For A Change Creation RT C A June Bride heads into the Burritos country-esque-I-knew-Gram-Parsons revival and comes out smelling of Texan roses.

VOICE OF THE BEEHIVE It's Just A City Food RT C They're gonna be bigger than The Bangles and there's only two of them. Americana pop with heart and soul.

So there we are, just 14 reasons why the independent market is on the up (and that's just this week's fodder). What with all this activity and upturned mouths a cert, expect some rallying from the majors and a healthy report on it all from Underground each month as it all neatly unfolds.

* Ah yes, a warning, hitting loudmouths over the head with Underground can be dangerous... so don't let them know who did it.

THE REZILLOS rampant Peel-provoked guitar music coupled kitsch Thunderbirds dress sense with raucous punky muzak. First releases on Sensible led to national tours and an eventual contract with Dindisc. After disappearing, they came back as The Rezillos and The Revillos. Some of them went onto join the Human League too.

SHAM 69 made a skinhead-infested debut in '78 and never really shook off their dodgy image. After releasing a three track EP on Step Forward they signed to Polydor, pre-empted Chas And Dave with Hurry Up Harry and then lead Sham Jimmy Pursey embarked on a faltering solo career.

THE SKIDS' Scots bravado led Richard Jobson and Stuart Adamson to London after just one single, their best probably, called Charles, on No-Bad. Signed to Virgin, the sound developed but they never got the big hit (although Charade and Masquerade came close). Neither did they get the ultimate Skids sound to flow on an album. Adamson later became a Big Country while Jobson split his time between deep poetry and The Armoury Show.

THE SMITHS flaunted with flowers and a groovy twang coupling Morrissey's sexless(?) / sexy(?) vocals and Johnny Marr's pop guitar ballads. Through Rough Trade they released a string of excellent singles, resurrected the career of Sandie Shaw and have most recently signed to EMI. Shoplifters of the world rejoice.

SOFT CELL had Leeds at their mercy with their debut tacky EP on their own label. Through Stevo's enthusiasm they hit the electronic boom at the right time, got into leather straplettes and nearly top tenned with Memorabilia. Their on-off scandal romance with the press served them well and pop music and tales of bedsits resulted. Originally a duo, Dave Ball was finally ousted — or left — after Marc Almond's solo Marc And The Mamba's tour. The show goes on...

THE SPECIALS were always wavering on the edge. With so many in tow it was only a matter of time before personnel changes or arguments happened. On 2-Tone they made some great records (and occasionally still do). In the meantime, they've spawned JB's All Stars, The Fun Boy Three, Colourfield and more recently After Tonight.

£ With independent singles being pressed in such small quantities, it's hardly surprising that some of the rarer items from acts who've gone on to develop their careers with larger labels can see their earlier exploits changing hands for pretty ridiculous sums. Even cult outfits like The Cramps and New Order, who haven't succumbed to the clank of the chequebook, can't avoid the overpricing, rarity and collectability of some of their material.

Of course, this collector's chart doesn't include the rarer than rare gem (?) by The Moors Murderers (who featured Chrissie Hynde and Steve Strange, pictured above), more obscure sides from the Postcard school or the Snivelling Shits, whose vinyl outings have been rumoured to change hands from anything ranging from the price of a Chicken Tikka (main course) to in excess of £100.

As the mid-'70s boom for obscure rock 'n' roll and hard to track soul music brought a new generation of enthusiast to record fairs, the punk boom and subsequent independent label explosion saw a million other unlocatable oddities racked in all the wrong places. Maybe would-be label owners couldn't shift initial quantities of their tried and tested product but little did they know that the left-field catalogue number propping up their wonky settee was fast to become a collector's item in name, number, size, colour and quality/quantity. Camden Town's burgeoning weekend trade centre for period vinyl was seeing vast sums changing hands for Zappa originals, Orange Juice 45s, Vince Taylor white labels, Stones' bootlegs and the like and in the latter '80s it's not surprising to see punters with a pocket full of Bogshed and Loft live tapes parting with more than a fiver for Kevin Rowlands in his earliest incarnation as a Killjoy on the Raw label. Rhythm Records trades in all areas of music, but their top five most sought out names are Joy Division, Elvis Costello, Foetus, The Fall and The Teardrop Explodes...

SPK got primal way back in '79 through Throbbing Gristle's Industrial label, but it wasn't until the metal-bashing incarnation of a couple of years ago that they got the big cheque. Signed to Elektra in the States, Warners serviced their LP in the UK and after minimum glitterati attention the group were dropped.

THAT PETROL EMOTION are drawn out godsons of The Undertones. A couple of independent 45s, one on Pink, led to a critically acclaimed debut LP, Manic Pop Thrill, on Demon. Since then they've signed to Polydor.

THE TEARDROP EXPLODES were Liverpool refugees who got serious. Two 45s on Zoo led to a deal with Phonogram and a sporadically inventive career for Julian Cope. Recently returned as The Julian Cope Explodes.

THE THE tried and tried again. Matt Johnson changed line up and sound and earliest traces can be heard on Cold Spell Ahead on SBL (the Some Bizzare label). A disjointed version of Uncertain Smile, it bombed as did the first release of his debut solo album Burning Blue Soul on 4AD. Eventually Steve sold him to Epic and after a couple of years of US interest the deal was clinched with cross channel excitement, leading up to his second The The album, Infected.

TEST DEPT came from a garage in New Cross. Bashing metal they were likened to Stockhausen and the dustbinmen. Through Some Bizzare they signed to Phonogram, did an excellent dance 45, a box set, and were dropped. The sound of the car spring can again be heard on independent corners everywhere.

THE TRIFFIDS' Australian backwoods sound has been cult and classic for some time in the UK and, following their most recently raved about In The Pines LP, they've signed to Island to bring you more of the same. (Or better.)

THE UNDERTONES strolled into the hearts of millions through John Peel's undying love of their debut Good Vibrations EP Teenage Kicks. They inked it with EMI and released a string of would-be hits but it wasn't until Feargal Sharkey shook off his cohorts and went to Virgin that mega success, mentions in Rolling Stone and a divorce was on the cards for the wee Irish man. Other Undertones became Eleven then That Petrol Emotion (see supplementary entry elsewhere).

FAMOUS FIVE: most desirable acts

JOY DIVISION. Most requested cuts from the Divvies vary from their Sordid Sentimentale limited pressing of Atmosphere/Dead Souls, Earcom 2 — the group's contribution to Fast Records' Earcom series (with other tracks from Basczax and Thursdays) — plus their side of the Factory double 7 inch package, a Factory Sample (for which they contributed two tracks, Glass and Digital, sharing the package with tunes from Cabaret Voltaire and John Dowie).

ELVIS COSTELLO. Early Stiff 45s, Less Than Zero (BUY 11), Alison (BUY 14), Red Shoes (BUY 15), Watching The Detectives (BUY 20) and the Radar sides Chelsea (ADA 3), Pump It Up (ADA 10) and Radio Radio (ADA 24) are all pieces of precious plastic.

FOETUS. Early singles under an array of nom de plumes through Clint Ruin's seminal Self Immolation label include OKFM by Foetus Under Glass, Wash It All Off by You've Got Foetus On Your Breath, Tell Me What Is The Bane Of Your Life by Philip And His Foetus Vibrations and the 12 inch Custom Built For Capitalism from Foetus Over Frisco.

Other much mentioned combos murmured in hurried slurred sentences by quaking tourists visiting Rhythm in Camden Lock, include The Soft Boys, The Boys, Killing Joke (their primal 10 incher) and all manner of even more obscure material from the Zoo catalogue ... especially the catch-all LP

THE FALL. Extra special mind-numbing collectability surrounds the Mancunians' earliest singles. Their many line up changes and label swaps make the story even cloudier. Due for special attention are Step Forward sides Bingo Masters Breakout (SF 7) and It's The New Thing (SF 9) plus their latter day Rough Trade offerings Rowche Rumble and Fiery Jack. All the tracks from these 7 inch delights can be found lurking on Early Fall 77-79 on the Step Forward label. After that the story switches to the soon-to-go-walkies Kamera label before the group found their current abode down Beggars way.

THE TEARDROP EXPLODES. With the 13th generation's discovery of Julian Cope's eccentricities and pop potential, The Teardrop Explodes' first two singles have hit paydirt. Both on Liverpool's Zoo label, they were the group's first waxing, a three track EP featuring Sleeping Gas, Camera Camera and Kirkby Workers Dream Fades, which first appeared in a red and black sleeve (later to change to blue and black). Both colourings will set you back around a tenner, while their second single Bouncing Babies goes for around a fiver (flipside of that one was All I Am Is Loving You).

documenting the period, From The Shores Of Lake Placid, with its contributions from The Teardrop Explodes, Echo And The Bunnymen, Big In Japan (featuring Holly), Those Naughty Lumps, Lori And The Chameleons, The Turquoise Swimming Pools and more.

WAH featured Pete Wyllie and had many versions of their name. Early Inevitable sides suggested they'd blown it before they found the gear lever but Story Of The Blues and major label support cemented the eccentric's career.

THE WEATHER PROPHETS came from the ashes of The Loft and are powered by songwriter Pete Astor. After two singles on Creation they've just signed to WEA's new Elevation label.

WE'VE GOT A FUZZBOX AND WE'RE GONNA USE IT did it. Total averageness in the extreme made teeth braces and X-Ray Spex revivalism a strong possibility. The Fuzzies' Brummieness was cute and their Vindaloo EP impressed WEA. Inept performances proved that many journalists had grooved but few had listened. Longevity is in the lap of the gods.

YACHTS' brief encounter with Stiff on Suffice To Say led them to Radar and eventually Polydor. The big punch with exotic packaging and cover versions didn't work though.

ZODIAC MINDWARP AND THE LOVE REACTION are crap. But, Zod is brill. The group that couldn't entertain a hamster in a rabid fever have a trump card in Zod, a punky unshaven wretch who could cover for Wogan at the drop of a Durex. The group, however, suck. Start at Food, wobble, go to Phonogram. Don't release another record.

So, who'll be next to make that drastic move to megastardom? Even as we speak (sorry, even as you peruse), cash is being talked about in a dozen or so boardrooms. The Voice Of The Beehive is a name to juggle with, there's general enthusiasm about SST's The Meat Puppets (which will be further increased, no doubt, if former labelmates Hüsker Dü get good sales figures for their Warehouse double). Talk too, and mucho press for The Band Of Holy Joy. Early interest about Slab. The Wedding Present (of course, or again) and Crazyhead and Portion Control (now managed by Tom Pet Shop Boys Watkins). Hey... it's just like a rock 'n' roll supermarket. Know where I'm coming from?

TOTAL MULTIPLE SHAG PILE UP

Stump spit cereal

Stump bin their day jobs

"A lot of people wanted a cassette because they don't have record players," is Kev's answer. But I thought Stump really disliked Mud On A Colon's production. Why re-release it to new buyers?

"It was a chance to re-cut the record as it was really distorted when it was first pressed".

When I spoke to a cereal-free Rob McKahey (drums), he added, "The four songs on the EP were all good but the production was a joke. We thought of re-recording them but then decided not to, although we have re-recorded Ice The Levant as a B-side for the worldwide release of Buffalo (everywhere except Britain). We thought we'd use the EP as a passing shot, a bonus for the cassette, and that would leave the songs once and for all".

That closes Stump's strictly independent chapter, but what about their major days so far? Any disappointments? Kev: "Yes, they don't like you to talk about decisions and advances in public. We've got into trouble already. It's stupid really. The most annoying thing about the music business is that you can be treated as naughty schoolboys. You know, the decisions are made by real men".

Any artistic suggestions?

"Well, we had our first meeting three weeks after signing, with the manager, Hugh Jones, everybody. I got there late and the first thing I heard them discussing was changing the bass line to Buffalo! They were asking me to funk it up! I thought it was a really bad omen. I was terrified, but it was never changed. I was really hurt at first but I was more worried about the band because they were saying, go ahead and change it!"

"Don't worry about Kev," says Rob. "He's a purist. He's the conscience of the band!"

A fear of majors then, Kev?

"There is more . . . none of us like the music business. But we aren't going to compromise at all. The stuff we're doing for the new record is stranger, more inaccessible, less palatable than stuff like Orgasm Way or Grab Hands. I don't know what Ensign have let themselves in for!"

By now, most everybody's learnt to Quirk Out but those who haven't might still get the opportunity. 1988 sees Stump shifting into a higher gear with one of those Year-Planner chart stuck on those big bottoms of their while that debut mini-album gets re-released on cassette with their first EP, Mud On A Colon, tucked on the end. The cassette is still distributed by the group's own Stuff label (through The Cartel) but their new organised schedule comes courtesy of Chrysalis-affiliated Ensign. The major deal means Stump can give up those day-jobs. "It's very different from indie-land," bassist Kev Hopper chortles down the phone through his cereal, too early on a Monday morning. "We used to get up and go to our part-time jobs and practise when we could." And now? "Well, it's more time-consuming and we have to plan everything, but we're earning a living from it".

Plans, plans, plans . . . Stump have lots of them. They'll have begun a 17 date tour of Britain by the time you read this, before supporting Hüsker Dü in Germany and Holland in June. On their return, they'll hopefully start recording a new album. Hugh Jones, who produced Quirk Out, is shortlisted, but no name has been confirmed.

Talking of Quirk Out, why the new little package? A little touch of the marketing ploys?

→ GREAT MOMENTS IN ROCK 'N' ROLL

The Buzzcocks, the band that everyone wants to be, have an LP and cassette called Total Pop set for release on German label Weird System (through Revolver and the Cartel). It's a 14 tracker with some rare things on it including two live ones. And name of the month must go to Weird System's gloriously dubbed Neurotic Arseholes who have an album called Live/All Die Jahre hot off the presses. Get this, Thomas The Voice . . . Welsh people with folky hip hop variations, a connection with Steve Beresford and David Toop and Rhythm Recs in Camden. Don't worry readers, it's weirdness and we've sent a bedraggled scribbler off to get the scam. OK, let's recommend some things to read. Yeah, well there's the intrepid and intriguingly well researched Tongue In Cheek number seven (10 Manse Crescent, Burley-in-Wharfedale, Ilkley, West Yorks, LS29 7LA) which has things on The Psycho Surgeons, Fire Recs, Live Skull from America, Nick Cave and a whole lot more. A good one to wrestle with after an Indian curry and during Throbbing Gristle's five album box set. Similarly Blah Blah Blah is a neatie with humour thrown in for good measure as ish three looks at Millwall's ground (been there, mate), Wedding Present, the Bunnymen, betting on the dogs and the soaps. Hey . . . a real lifestyle read from 33 Green Lane, Penge, London SE20 7JX. It also comes with a rather splendo flexi from the fabby I, Ludicrous. And garage/thrash rears its spotty forelock again with the news that pirate station Laser will have a garage goodies show broadcast every Friday from midnight to one. The show will be put together by Hit Records of London and will reach the whole country as well as the west coast of Europa. There's some confusion here though as air time can actually be bought (Tel Wogo would never have a word for this). But, let's phone up Hit and find out what the score is. Click, dial 01 . . . 670-2642. Hmmm. No answer. Well, it is three in the morning. Still. Groin mag from Leeds is pretty unreadable isn't it? And you thought Underground was bad! Hum. Ha. But Perturbed is funny, fanny and rather enjoyable. The last ish has something on ol' J Cope Esq and some other things that are good. Humour is at a premium here, so get to grips with this essential visual at 14 Overlea Avenue, Acocks Green, Brum, B27 7UN. (Why, it's only 25p including post and packing). Aspiring stars ready to shake it in Europe should contact Geert Stadeus (who has a show called Demo Revue on Radio Stadeus) and the address there is Zandakkerlaan 8, 9210 Heusden, Belgium. And more, there's good news from abroad as SST plan to strike a deal with Pinnacle thus bringing down the price of their releases within the boundaries of UK prices. Also on the cards are UK and Euro dates quite soon from Bad Brains, Firehose and The Meat Puppets (finally), who also have a brill LP, Mirage, reviewed here in this ish. Don't be square. Colonso Parade, those Irish eyes who did it on Fire before, look set to sign a major deal. Suspected people who will party include EG and WEA. Oh yes, Voice Of The Beehive are now on London (but you know that already). The Smiths' new LP, provisionally titled Strangeways, Here We Come is being recorded at Tears For Fears' studio in Bath. And Can are back. Yes, the seminal crew from W Germo are back together in their original form for a Euro tour this year plus an LP. To co-incide, the group's own label, Spoon Records, make their back catalogue available again through Recommended, while fellow eccentrics Faust will also be another groan from the grave set to resurface (in vinyl form that is) through the Rec axis. Zodiac Mindwarp rolls over Europe . . . well, the man with a tattoo for every occasion partly shot his new vid in a Panzer tank and the director of the show fell somewhat awkwardly beneath the machinery. Hmmm. That's pretty mean, Zod old man!

So, if that's yer bag, and you can't pick it up at the news stand, then write to the paper at PO Box 73, Farnham, Surrey, GU9 7UN + if all that weren't enough, Folk Roots now branch out into the record and tape biz with a selection culled from the pages of the mag, sleevenotes by Andy Kershaw and audio contribs from The Oyster Band, Billy Bragg, June Tabor, Ted Hawkins, The 3 Mustaphas 3 and a lorryload of others. THE ONE THAT GOT AWAY

NUMBER 43: Ada Wilson

OK, Ada, stand up, your time has come. The world's first exponent of neo-classical oompah-punk, as he has been touted, this Northern person with his finger on the pulse of, well, something or other, was trailed to release an album, under the title What The World Wants, for about a year, and finally a battered copy has been flung onto the Underground desk. + With external postmarks covering the length and breadth of the country this re-directed gem (still distributed by Red Rhino and the Cartel) is on Native and features Ada, the man, in strange pose and prose. Fairground doodling and the kind of off the wall outburst that's closer to Nilsson than the New York Dolls, this platter is no let down. From tacky sleeve to tuba toting encore, a gem in the extreme. Triv Tel

Now, this is an interesting piece.

All the tell tale signs are here; the mention of censorship, the in-joke, the Virgin name, the face of a bedraggled Johnny Lydon (nee Rotten) peeking from the sheet. Of course, this is the wraparound newspaper that came with PIL's first 7 inch for Virgin, the excitedly thrashy Public Image which was backed with the audibly distasteful Cowboy Song. Alas, without the record this is pretty much valueless — even if it is a good insight into '78 period humour and in good condition. With the vinyl artefact, with run out groove inscription and green and red Virgin labels we could have been talking big mazuma. TRIV TEL

CHAINSAW WARRIOR

(a new game for Rambo-crazed crazies)

Just received at Und mansions, from Games Workshop, a new solo board game called Chainsaw Warrior. First impressions are of something gorily good with the game superbly designed with loads of cards detailing the ultra-violet, high-teeq equipment and devices necessary to play the game. Full review next month. Dr Whybrew

UNDERGROUND

Rummaging through the mountains of demo tapes submitted for our Tip Sheet section can be a pretty humdrum affair. This month though, one package in the pile leapt to our attention as it fell to the floor. It was from a group called The Trudy from Worcester Park, Surrey.

Not only was their first single, Captain Scarlet, enclosed, but a strange and wonderful selection of goodies: one set of Trudy live-beads, one cardboard stand-up Captain Scarlet, one packet of Trudy funny tweets, lots of stickers, some Trudy 'bubble blow', badges and "bits of paper which tell you how to build your own Thunderbird One model" — in other words a pile of totally useless junk that would only be of interest to a half-wit or a three year old. We loved it all. But who are The Trudy and what do they want? "We intend to mass produce this stuff in an attempt to get famous," says Trudy drummer Richard Targett. "Then we'll build a space rocket and return to the planet Miron where we normally live". Future plans for the group include the Interstellar Hypnotic Space-Ray game, and the production of more Trudy toys to promote their record. IT'S A CRIME UPDATE

Yeah, the 'puter game that lets you get tough continues. Dr Whybrew plots the Electro Youth Corps rise to infamy...

The New York of computer game It's A Crime is represented by a massive grid comprising of 20 x 20 squares. Up to 500 gangs, including our very own Electro Youth Corps, are dumped in various starting positions/blocks.

Each block you gain yields 'cruits and pays protection money, so, the more the merrier. Expansion by violence.

Soon, the Underground turf was increasing as gang members fought for block domination. Any vigilante residents were swept aside. Street dope deals gained money that was immediately channeled into arms deals.

Our notoriety increased as a couple of the gang lobbed bricks from the observation platform of the Empire State Building and shoved stolen cars onto rail tracks. Just like real life, huh?

Morale was soon as high as my Electro Youth Corps squaddies, who continued to add blocks to my pitch until the inevitable happened. Another gang, The Deaths Head Deviants, made a successful control attempt in one of my blocks!

When your turf reaches an enemy gang's turf you receive their address on your turn sheet. Realising an all out war would spell disaster for both gangs, we promptly mailed a letter to the Deviants. I hope peace can be reached.

The Electro Youth Corps, and Deaths Head Deviants, would make a formidable alliance!

R.E.M. . . .

SUPERMAN

SUPERMAN IS THE NEW R.E.M. SINGLE, BACKED WITH 'WHITE TORNADO'. TAKEN FROM THEIR ALBUM 'LIFE'S RICH PAGEANT'. TWELVE INCH FEATURES LIVE VERSION OF 'FEMME FATALE'.

Hands up Shogun showdown

Pratinja meets The Fat Ninja

... BUT ONLY FOR A MOMENT.

So the door pushed open reveals a little girl about six years old, one hand playfully resting on teddy's ears. The picture of infantile perfection. The bullet rips a hole in her skull, and the two heroes move past. The little girl wasn't the only zombie in their way, the whole town was crawling with them. And Deadworld, on Arrow comics, is much more than the Living Dead gore-splatter-spine-shattering tale you might expect from glancing and wincing at the rather feeble provocative cover. It's a hybrid of Stephen King and Hitchcock (with his trousers down). Conceived in frothy black and white, smelling strongly of whimsy, action and containment.

● Thus, in the mood to be a trifle terrified I opted for Eclipse's Tales of Terror, drawn solely by the cover again, as these collections of short stories usually bore. Instead of getting the jitters I giggle a bit and then drift off. The sting in the tales operates on a tiny dose of humour – like the mad axeman who cooks his victim, then finds a letter from her doctor amongst her clothing regretting to inform her of her leprosy test proving positive. Or the shipping magnate who made his money out of a scientific breakthrough which shrinks his parcels. Also shrinks his employees and he eats them in the restaurant he owns. Two good stories out of four? Bad deal.

● Continuing with the funnier side of the comics available you'd be a complete fart to miss Ninja Highschool, flapping about madly on Antarctic Press. Jeremy Feeple, just your average weakling highschool twat, suddenly finds two attractive new arrivals literally desperate to take his hand in marriage. Little does he realise this is because they come from strange backgrounds that, even more strangely still, decree this must be so. Jeremy seems quite contented, but the mad professor at his high school has suggested the girls battle it out for dear Jeremy's charms. "I've got nothing to hide!" Jeremy snarls when interrupted in the shower. "Are you sure?" asks Itchy Koo, as his towel falls to the ground.

● Pretty disgusting stuff really.

● Fat Ninja is a true giant among lesser titles, it's the finest comic currently in existence. You'll find it on Silverwolf Comics and you'll need to look pretty hard to get copies. A bulbous and phlegmatic creature, he takes the beatings and fights he has with his evil adversaries in the finest stoic tradition. Besides which he's too busy thinking about where the next meal's coming from to worry about anything else.

● The series is beautifully drawn and brilliantly written. In fact, if Alan Moore had his name among the credits you wouldn't be at all surprised. Instead it's three bastards by the names of Kris Silver, Gary Amaro and Emilio Soltero who have me scared stiff that I might be unable to find the earlier issues. Everything is so calmly understated, so smoothly insidious. SO BLATANTLY UNFORGETTABLE.

● If you don't buy it, I'm going to have to put something nasty in your pillow case.

With heartfelt hatred of the CD medium, the independent network have been less than quick in rushing their musical delicacies into the format. Factory are talking about transferring all of their catalogue to the unproved Japanese DAT medium already and Mute have packaged their wares into the CD medium right away. With plans to release the five initial Throbbing Gristle albums on CD, Mute precede that outburst with TG's CD1, almost an hour long piece of previously unavailable dirgeness that'll retail for less than a tenner.

Isn't this a nice photo? But what's it all about? Dr Whybrew checks the function junction and questions an unassuming Steinberg Pro 24, in between pressing his joystick gingerly for the It's A Crime tournament (latest blood boiling episode next ish) ● Ern, (scratches head), well, the Pro 24 allows you to record midi info in 24 track more in the style of a tape recorder than a sequencer. So, once you've plugged it into an Atari ST micro-computer, away you go. With midi compatible keyboards and drum machine you can record up to 24 tracks then trigger and play back as you please providing a mega brill sequencer and a halfway house to a 24 track studio that you can actually fit on the old sideboard. Ahem... it's a versatile tool, and with the recent Atari price cuts you can grab an Atari ST 520 'puter and a Pro 24 for as little as £680. But bear in mind, future technos and label under the stairs compadres, technical improvements should provide a 24 track system the size of a matchbox before the year is out (well, hope so anyway) ● Pro 24 information from Steinberg Research, The Spendlove Centre, Charlbury, Oxford OX7 3PQ Atari information from Silica Shop, 1-4 The Mews, Hatherley Road, Sidcup, Kent DA14 4DX

Hold on tight to your beverage, climb up onto the back of the settee and . . . dive! As the shagpile rushes to meet you, two brand new, fighting-fit videos are slam-dancing their way towards the intake of your recorder; slipping and sliding, it's a close thing but we have a winner. Click, whirr, here it comes . . .

Idle Gossip is a fab collection of Toy Dolls' greatest moments. Filmed on exotic location (the local park and some back streets after sundown), and intercut with live footage from the Klub Foot, the three lovable spikey tops mime their way through the songs and into your heart.

The "gorgeous" Olga (he of the supersonic guitar and strangely-pitched vocals) dribbles on the microphone at Hammersmith, throws his emaciated frame around the park and, with his two punk partners, goes spazzy in the alley during the brilliant PC Stoker. Fourteen visual lumps that are much nicer to swallow than the abundant phlegm at a Toy Dolls gig. Choreographed epilepsy - for you!

Secondly, in this month's video choice for the psychotic, we have Still Sweatin' After All These Years from the Guana Batz. A completely live onstage collection, we first find the demented psychobillies at the Klub Foot in 1986 and it's a shambles, but that's what it's all about, right? Yeehaw! Go! Yeehaw! Go Again! The sole complaint is that the double bass player is giving it plenty, but can he be heard? Can he f.

The Nottingham Palais, circa 1984, is the featured venue in part two, and this time the sound is beautifully balanced (which means that every band member in tthis earlier, different line-up is making an equally foul noise).

Both videos cost £17.95 each and are released by Jettisoundz Ltd, who can be contacted at: PO Box 30, Lytham St. Annes, Lancashire. For Batz fanz the choice is clear. As far as value and entertainment are concerned though, Toy Dolls take first prize. Daz Igymeth

ROLANDO ALPHONSO

Wackies W2451 Je ●●●

There is almost something of a sombre tone about these recordings of tenor saxophonist Rolando Alphonso. Certainly there's not much here of the bon jivre associated with his work with the Skatalites, while the sessions share little with the minimalist brushwork of his Studio One solo sides either. If he's left these behind, though, then a deeper, more brooding spirit now guides his playing which is equally impressive. And whereas in The Skatalites he competed for solo space and was bolstered by equally gifted musicians such as Don Drummond, Tommy McCook, Baba Brooks, here he carries the whole burden of each piece alone and in his own wistful way. It does not make for the same exuberance but provides amply where reflection is required. Evelyn Court

Shakedown AUS MLP 002 NM C ●●

A mini album with a difference from Brummie guitar-wielding outfit whose latest musical tangent sees them crouching and gesticulating in a bizarre middle ground that merges New Order dance styles with rockabilly strumming and latter day punk aggression. But, far from being diverse and drab, this musical concoction makes for a tasty burrito — fully displaying the band's power on the six tracks running at 33 which make up one side, and their potential, on the seven min plus burn out called Turn On Tonic. Not to be missed. Dave Henderson

BLACK ROOTS

All Day All Night

Nubian NRLP 01 C Je ●●

Reissue of the Bristol band's Mad Professor produced album from last year to coincide with their current national tour and new distribution deal. The fare is very much what might be anticipated from a UK roots reggae outfit: slightly dated but pleasantly executed chants set to sturdy rhythms and with stately horns and protest lyrics, the latter even poignant on a song like Poor Children. Somewhat fuller of sound than many but missing that vital spark of their Jamaican counterparts which makes reggae so exciting. I imagine it's records like this one which prompts John Peel's famous quote about being unable to listen to a reggae album all the way through without becoming bored, though in fact it's a record that improves with playing. Evelyn Court

Dragging the beards and duffle-coats of the trad jazz set into 1987 chart land might seem like a hard task, but Tommy C, kit-clobberer of some repute, is well up for the job. Armed with a Stiff record deal, Frankie-producer Steve Lipson at the controls, and fronted by a band of sharp-looking kids, the TC Quartet look set to break into the chart just as easily as they breeze into the Wag Club on a night when everyone else is queuing in the rain. This is music with the correct trousers in every sense of the word. Julian Henry

Post Throbbing Gristle live out-takes from the two who didn't go psychic. The story here, as always, is electronic, European, and riddled with sweat-soaked sleaziness. In most parts, it works, but at times the live electricity and flickering visual stimuli is lacking. Dave Henderson

THE COOLIES

Dig . . . ?

DB DB 83 RTS ●●●

Does Paul Simon deserve this? Easily. Will he dig it? Why, sure. Can the joke last long enough? No problem. Dig . . . ? is a clutch of fine Simon And Garfunkel songs — you think of it, it's here — turned upside down so that the contents of Simon's trousers are tipped out on the pavement and then a little Coolie taxidermy applied.

The Coolie touch is slouchy, groovy, snotty, casual, smirking, reverent, irreverent, glorious. They play Paul Simon like a garage-trapped Rick Rubin — black beats appropriated by white trash and shunted into rock, metal, funk, rap, doo-wop, surf, punk and pop, often three styles at a time. There's also a bonus of Having My Baby played as solemn as only The Coolies know how. Like current hip-hop kidnaps the rock guitar beat, so The Coolies mug Greenwich Village bohemia for its curvaceous chords. Martin Aston

CRASH

I Feel Fine

Remorse REMLP2 Re C ●●●

Their single, Almost, was almost a classic and this album is either facile pop or pure genius. I've a feeling it's the latter. Often reminiscent of the ever potent Doors-y feel, Crash are apt to surprise you sometimes by taking a nosedive off their platitude into a pool of rare melodies, beautiful because they are so simple. I Feel Fine is a frantic collage of T Rex, Mary Chain and The Monkees. Standard rock, neo pulp and an indefinable quantity which lends itself to the unique post of becoming a living anachronism, serving its forefathers and seeking out its own future. Worth cherishing for the duration of the record and perhaps beyond . . . Alex Kadis

THE CREEPS

Enjoy The Creeps

Re-Elect The President. NIXON 2 B C ●●

In they flood, day after day after day. The good, the bad and the ugly, '60s imitations all. Covers, pastiches, regurgitations. The whole wide world wants to be in Wardour Street circa '65-7. It's back to the future and The Creeps are no exception. They freely admit, boast even, to borrowing "from the mid-'60 school of rock". The strange thing is, they're Swedish, yet in they steam with the most raucous R&B this side of Georgie Fame And The Blue Flames. Vocalist Jelinek's command of the English lingo is rather bloody hot, Charlie, and the back up is stompin', blood boiling, sweat stained mayhem. The squealing mouth harp, Hammond organ and all that jazz are pretty ummm! . . . dynamic. Ronnie Randall

Meantime Wrecords COX 002B RR C ●●

Drop those plectrums and reach for your pan scourers 'cos ThrashPop has well and truly arrived. Scrub that guitar and race the bass against the fastest boom boom ka-chik stickman in town, boys. Two girls share the singing duties and tell us of discontent, attitudes and other heavy, but hip, stuff.

Things slow and sweeten for I Think I Should but for the remainder of this, it's large amounts of ass-kicking, riffing and scuz-metal licking. Those meaningful lyrics ride in the cab of a runaway, turbo-charged racing tractor that's headed in your general direction. Pay no more than £3.50 and get splattered all over the tarmac (or remain uncool forever!). Daz Igmeth

DC3

You're Only As Blind . . .

SST SST 083 (import from SST at PO Box 1, Lawndale, CA 90260, USA)

Something rather strange is occurring at SST HQ. The diversification of their acts, a horde of new signings, and DC3, at first dead ringers for Steppenwolf, then briskly poppy, rocky, gravelly and generally uncontrollable. DC3 seem lost and found at the strumming of a chord. Hardly a classic with more left unanswered than completed, it does make for compulsive re-listening. Dave Henderson

DOA

True North Strong And Free

Profile/Rock Hotel Records PRO 1228 (Profile Records, 740 Broadway, NY, NY 10003) ●●●

Ten tracks of power, aggression, and passion from Canada's leading exponents of no-nonsense hardcore. The fact that they are slower in delivery than some of their contemporaries works in DOA's favour, as the quality of the songs is made that much more listenable, and should therefore appeal to a wider audience than the sometimes limiting hardcore sect. Mark Brennan

DUB U5

World Beat

CEC WRC1-4939 (CEC Productions, 5404 Park Avenue, Suite 2, Montreal, Quebec, H2V 4G7, Canada) ●●

Palatable club sound with soft rock harmonies pinned to some approximation of a reggae backbeat. Dub U5 are a Montreal outfit seemingly centring around the person of one Charles Biddle Jr who wrote the music, co-wrote the lyrics, co-produced the album and provides lead vocals, guitars, keyboards and the programming of drum patterns. The vocal mix on one side of the album is pleasant enough but in true dub style it is the instrumental versions of the same on the other where all falls into place. Evelyn Court

Renyard's Grin

Rouska Concord 9 RR C ●●

'Tis a little known fact that a dustdevil is a kind of tornado/volcano, apparently spunky enough to rip a house to shreds. Obviously Renyard's Grin isn't a Dustdevil at its most powerful as my bookshelves didn't even quiver. Vocalist Jaqi is wordly wise by all accounts, being lyricist, guitarist and cover artist. She hails from down under, used to work with Madonna (collecting glasses in New York) and looks the spitting image of Debbie Harry. So, what's she doing in Leeds? Well, creating some heavily Banshee influenced soft-goth-rock-pomp with occasional Pretender overtones. Perpetual thundering percussion and echoing jangly guitar punctuate Jaqi's faintly folkie, eye of newt, toil and tarot vocals and sweetly sketched melodies. Intense and interesting if not fully inspiring. Ronnie Randall

Mute STUMM 35 RT C Sp ●●●

Now that everyone's stopped giggling about Vince Clarke's hair and the fact that Andy Bell sounds just like Alison Moyet (only he's got more emotion, if you ask me) it seems Erasure have been able to get down to the serious (and rare) business of being worthwhile chart toppers.

To add to that, this LP produces a useful collection of tracks, all performed with vigour and a certain gentle insistence. The feeling I get is that Vince is now more wholeheartedly involved; that the liaison with Andy has produced a less schizophrenic and more humorous pairing.

Not that it's lightweight. Despite the uptempo beat, lyrically it touches on confessing homosexuality to the family (Hideaway), the disillusionment and personal tragedy of unemployment (Circus) and there's some obvious connotations to add to the unrequited love song Leave Me To Bleed ("Leave me to bleed, love can be fatal").

Vince adds the musical depth and deliberation, and Andy adds vivaciousness. Truly, top ten stuff that deserves to be so. Carole Linfield

FIREHOSE

SST SST 079 RTS ●●●

Firehose is the way Minutemen George Hurley and Mike Watt have recovered after last year's tragic death of singer/guitarist D Boon. Boon is replaced by one Ed from Ohio, and Firehose are a hardened beauty of a new group. They're fringed by a winking jazz sensibility — pushy bass, sneaky percussion, tweaking guitar, underplayed tension — and come on at times like a Sugar Ray Leonard/Gang Of Four clash — rhythmically spright and lean, springing around a ring where The Meat Puppets, Minutemen (obviously but not obvious) and even REM and The Miracle Legion have sparred. Ragin' Full-On is just a fantastic record which will get a UK release quite soon through Pinnacle. Maybe this will shut down all this talk about the impotence of white guitar music, leastways it should. Martin Aston

FRONT 242

Official Version

RRE Rrelp 5 RR C ...

This is some album. From a direct line straddling Cabaret Voltaire, Hula, DAF, Yello and a host of others, Front 242's Official Version is a prime time hot bed of noise that's destined for electronic war parties the world over. After the post-industrial muzak debacle, the interest in Front 242's live shows, which mix TV imagery, taped and sampled sounds and a punk bravado that has impressed all comers, they almost signed to ZTT. Saviour and saving grace, they plumped for RRE and Official Version is their first release of powerful new material following the re-releasing of their back catalogue by the label.

Sequenced and stimulating, it's enough to make your ears bleed. Get it. TC Wall

HOLY TOY

Pakt Of Fact

Tatra TAT 001 RR C ...

Back to independence after major misery, Norway's Holy Toy still reverberate with the horror of the machine and the dignity of human resistance. If Laibach are the sound of military rallies and Neubaten the echo of collapsing new buildings, then Holy Toy are a spinning fairground wheel — welded pieces of electronic metal, buckled and flared, spinning 'round in a blur of rhythmic colours. Some are songs for disco-dance, others just writhe and despair and mock your hips. Imagine Depeche Mode after three months solitary confinement.

What elevates Holy Toy is first, their beautiful Eastern/Arabic tinges of melody, and second, that the throb of their machinery is still their own heart-beat. The human sensations make all the difference, and causes Pakt Of Fact to resonate long after the record has ended. Martin Aston

DEMBO KONTE & KAUSU KUYATEH

Tanante

Rogue Records C ..

The Kora is a picturesque harp or lute-type instrument with a large gourd sound-box. It is plucked, strummed and occasionally percussed. Konte and Kuyateh are musicians by birth; they are village people who had never actually played together before this recording session (Kausu Kuyateh is from Senegal, and takes the part of visiting celebrity in this Gambian location). Tanante (meaning, no problem) is a kind of traditional folk jam. You wouldn't guess it to hear the music, but the lyrical preoccupations of this exquisite album are the military prowess of great Mandinka kings and their extraordinary goodness in patronising the Jalis, or caste of hereditary musicians. Played, however, on the sort of dusky summer night they don't actually have in those equatorial parts, this record should provide an unimpeachable soundtrack to getting a little drunk and falling in love again. Marc Issue

LE RUE

Le Rue

Unamerican Activities BRAVE 4 RR C ...

In the land beyond goth's black acre, this first offering from American band Le Rue was born. Taking Cajun music for their own, the brothers Le Rue cook a crazy mixed up Jambalaya Cajun. Come on you swamp freaks, get PSYDECO!

Forget magnolia blossom. Side two of this album really stirs things up. Irish/folk rock reaches New Mexico via a Leeds recording studio. Poteen swilling cowboys ride into your psyche.

At times it's hard to remember that this is a live recording, so crisp is the playing. Le Rue sure are one crazy bunch of musical demons. Sauvez mon ame. Mike Hirst

LOWLIFE

Diminuendo

Nightshift Lolif 4 FF C ...

Simple and sad, Lowlife bring to mind an exemplification of Richard Butler's finest moments of melancholy. A paced and brooding album, its pensive guitars and hollow vocal concoct an intense emotive quality. Diminuendo isn't completely devoid of an upbeat feel, but it soon curves downwards as it swells and swoops once again to achieve a soulful refrain. Dreamy and bittersweet, this LP is mellow and even more than complete. Alex Kadis

LYDIA LUNCH

Hysterie

Widowspeak WSP 8 RT C ...

A double retro from Ms Lunch for Lydia-o-philes everywhere. Mean sample of the lady's talent and taunting, through her earlier exploits with Teenage Jesus And The Jerks, Beirut Slump and the near legendary Eight Eyed Spy, to her collaborations with Birthday Party person Rowland S Howard, Sort Sol and Die Haut, on the rambling sub-Duane Eddy gem Der Karibische Western.

A buy or die collection riddled with the usual sex, violence, love and blood. Don't miss. Dave Henderson

MAD DADDYS

Apes Go Wild

New Rose ROSE 110 RT C ..

Raw, filthy and reeking rockers, the Mad Daddys have an appeal similar to that of The Cramps; maximum distortion levels and some of the dumbest, most wonderful lyrics straight from the Bible Of The Church of Rockin' Excess. I wanna be Stoned For The Rest Of My Life but, hey, That's The Bag I'm In, says stinky singer Sono Buoni and that's telling you straight, baby!

Things start to get a little claggy by the middle of side two; we're getting stuck in a quicksand of primordial sludge rock but just as the scummy surface reaches neck level there's a fade out and the next fuzz bassline whips out and yanks you by the throat into the next number. Gurglingly good. Daz Igmeth

RORY McLEOD

Kicking The Sawdust

Forward Sounds International NM C ..

There was a time when folk music could almost be defined in terms of its locality. Folk form was (in an earlier but not necessarily more "natural" state) the stuff of which ethnomusicologists made their peculiar contribution to human knowledge. The new folk, being folk of the global information brokerage, extends and interweaves folk sounds as ideas in themselves, while it continues to carry its various ("progressive" or "reactionary", sentimental, right-on or redneck) meanings.

This here is a double album of recordings made over a ten year period, some of them on a domestic cassette machine. Folk isn't supposed to sound dated (is it?) but some of the (presumably) earlier effort are a bit forward in betraying their age. There are enough interesting bits scattered over the four sides to suggest that McLeod will make better records in future. Promising. Marc Issue

THE MEAT PUPPETS

Mirage

SST SST 100 RTS ...

The all singing, all laidback desert boys present 12 tunes of great style and power that spit out sand and gravel, tip a nod to countryfied Byrds, and eventually throw themselves naked into the rock 'n' roll arena. The Meat Puppets have never been predictable (successfully changing from LP to LP), and they'll never be boring.

So, the Pup's Mirage trades on all previous excesses, neatly moulds itself into a prime hunk of vinyl and stands proudly alongside other SST newies, like Firehose, as proof positive that the label and band are well worth your cash. Get your company shares now. TC Wall

THE NOMADS

Hardware

Wire IL WILP 003 NM C ...

Swede psyche-popsters further develop their loud and vitriolic guitar barrage with the help of more than a few neater than neat tunes. Usual shock-horror prose punctuates a flailing collection of tennis racket rock 'n' roll histrionics that should let a new legion of would-be rockettes practise posing. And why not? This is real meaty fare that still has its ventricles pumping.

The Nomads play with all the verve and charisma that Thunders and his downbeat compadres still fail to emulate. This is leatherette power noise with a commercial twist that'll have the dandruff kids lapping it up out of rusty hub-caps. "Too melodic for The New York Dolls," shouts a voice from the back of your brain, "and too on the beam to be off the bone Cramps." The Nomads have a niche of their own, carved delicately with a seven inch switchblade replete with ivory handle. Stick with it. Dave Henderson the years, and it must be to The Railway Children's credit that they find an (almost) new way of doing it. Their melodies are restrained but powerful, and there is a certain low-key intensity in Gary Newby's voice.

The further The Railway Children explore away from traditional guitar pop, the better they will become. This is a great start, and for the moment though, this'll do nicely. Julian Henry

RENALDO & THE LOAF

The Elbow Is Taboo

Some Bizzare RDS RT C ●●

Think of an idea, distort it, double it, take some of it away and chew up the rest, and you're getting somewhere towards Renaldo & Co. Never ones to be fainthearted, this is a whole sandwich of their work which stuffs in a whole counterful of fillings.

If I said recorders, Andes pipes, Malaysian sauces, rhythmic jigs and the occasional rabid vocal, would you get the drift? Even the recent single, Hambu Hobo, exumes the corpse of T Rex and desecrates it, dancing with the bones of a melody.

Are they serious? Are they laughing at us? Why is there a track called Extraxted The Re-Re? (Which, incidentally, includes a garbled vocal not unlike that of a song called The Auctioneer, or something, much loved on Junior Choice).

Well, I neither know nor care; take with a pinch of salt if you like, but either way, this is full of stuff to chew on. Carole Linfield

THE RUTS

Live

Dojo Records DOJO LP 52 NM C ●●●

Dojo Records have flirted with all things punk for quite some time now, but this LP sees them breaking new ground. It's not a re-hashed compilation, but a quality live album. Apart from The Crack LP, The Ruts were more about live mistakes than studio wizardry, and this album captures that spirit intact and untampered. It Was Cold and Jah War are particularly venomous, and only leave one to imagine just what The Ruts might have gone on to achieve if Malcolm Owen had not died. Mark Brennan

SHELLEYAN ORPHAN

Helleborine

Rough Trade Records R97 RT C ●●

This is an important record for Rough Trade. The Bournemouth duo were "discovered" by Geoff Travis while they were supporting The Mary Chain, and have since worked with Anne Dudley from The Art Of Noise. Their first single, Cavalry Of Cloud, alerted various critical ears — as well as a few deaf ones, apparently Simon Bates liked it — and now here comes the debut album.

If I tell you that they work almost exclusively with a string trio and oboe, and take inspiration from Shelley and Mervyn Peake, you should get the drift.

Musically, they occupy an area close to The Cocteau Twins, or maybe even Everything But The Girl. These are nice songs, carefully performed, but without ever becoming too heavy handed, only closely averting becoming a trifle dull at times. Catch them in a lighter mood — Southern Bess or Anatomy Of Love for example — and Shelleyan Orphan are an extremely attractive proposition. Julian Henry

SKIN

Blood, Women And Roses

Product Inc 33 PROD 4 RT C ●●●

Not merely a strange collaboration, nor a sordid love affair; the coupling of Swans' Jarboe and Gira for the onslaught of encroaching Skin releases is more a predictable diversion. Accounting for Gira's observations on morality and his fetishistic style of writing, a parallel opposition to Swans must surely be seen as attractive, and equally, extremely bare and approachable.

Proof lies here in the stark nakedness of Jarboe's interpretation of Julie London's Cry Me A River, or the sparse beauty of their single 1000 Years.

A penetrating scalpel, opposing Swans' blunt machete, Blood, Women And Roses could seduce an unsuspecting audience into the sublime, the pleasures of S&M, the ecstasy of submersion in depravity, possession by insanity. Through such revelations, Blood, Women And Roses can be seen as a rare and timeless beauty, or more attractively, as pornography, in its most alluring and purest form. Mark Balmer

A skateboarding thrash band? Whatever happened to the chopper bike as the trusty steed of yer average bad assed MUTHA? Perhaps it's his death defying bravado that inspires the skater's predilection for lad's music. The early skater existed on a diet of Stairway To Heaven and Silver Machine, and Suicidal Tendencies do bear all the hallmarks of this heritage. But this lot seem to have skated through the pain barrier and emerged with a bag of goodies, rich in energy, life, and a large dose of humour. With Virgin expressing rather more than passing support, it might be wise to catch this band in its full garage glory before a certain flexible friend entices Suicidal Tendencies off the streets and onto the marketing table for the imminent skateboard revival. Ian Dickson

SWELL MAPS

Train Out Of It

Antar ANTAR 4 Re C ●●

Nikki Sudden, arch Jacobite and one time renaissance man of the West Midlands, has gone sadly off the boil since he packed his spotted handkerchief, bade the Swell Maps a fond farewell and set off to become the new Rod Stewart. Train Out Of It, Revolver's bold attempt at inspring some posthumous success for Swell Maps, is notable because of its Englishness. It serves as a vivid memory that the mid-seventies' revolution sired some notorious wits and eccentrics. The young Nikki Sudden, AKA Sir Adrian Godfrey, displays all the vitality and unashamed expression that appear to have disintegrated over the years as reality has been nudged out of the saddle by lame fantasy. Let's hope Nikki Sudden rediscovers the true worth of his earlier material. Perhaps then we will have reclaimed a great British eccentric for posterity. We need them, if only to lure back the tourists. Ian Dickson

THATCHER ON ACID

All the Madmen Mad LP 007 C ●●●

This is the only record I have ever heard that has been stuck in about three different time warps at the same time. While clearly displaying late '70s punk, '80s peace loving attitudes and post '79 anti-Thatcher rants — the whole album is more or less a 40 minute rant — it's a rock based assault that's pretty damn angry.

The lyrics, bled from the pen of Ben Corrigan and spat out by himself and the rest of the band, make for powerful stuff. Raucous guitars, bubbly bass and pounding drums give this album the sound of soft late '70s punk rock and an early '80s Jam a la Setting Sons. This is a damn good album. Andrew Bass

Ambassador P ●●●

Imagine, if you dare, the fusion of two of the loudest, most raucous and inspirational rock 'n' roll bands of the '80s. What possible bastard could be spawned from such awesome stock...? Weaned on punk rock in the true Thames Delta tradition, Thee Mighty Caesars spent their adolescence playing in The Milkshakes and The Prisoners, finally maturing into the manic trash Empire builders that assault your ears with the desecration of all things Radio One.

Wiseblood is their fifth album, and with five more planned. All the material is home grown (written by Billy Childish) with the exception of a version of Mark Perry's Action Time Vision. This record is raw and irreverent, positively exuding excitement and vitality. Felix Adler

As recently evinced by their disciplined performances backing Culture during the Jamaican trio's Christmas tour, Undivided Roots have made enormous strides since their inception a couple of years back. And it is since coming together under their present aegis that this quintet of seasoned musicians have found their musical feet. Their Party Nite occupied a place in the reggae chart for the greater part of last year and the rest of this accomplished debut LP is in similar tuneful vein. Evelyn Court

As the apt title suggests, four groups are allowed two or three tracks apiece to strut their funky stuff. A taster and an after dinner mint that leaves you hungry for much more.

The Royal Family And The Poor just nudge ahead in this startling collection of goodies. Their gliding and mesmerising dreamscape reminds at times of the Cocteau's own We Love The Moon though they move aggressively away for the doomy Dog Star.

There are three mysterious, though eminently danceable sci-fi instrumentals from Intimate Obsessions, while Bushido and Chama Meets Dania provide their own jazz-perversed hotspots. It's unjust to elevate any track from the rest of the pack, such is the immaculate blending of folk-tainted mystery. Many peaks and absolutely no troughs, this is original and occasionally inspired melancholy dance music. Ronnie Randall

Joy/Strange Fruit have compiled 20 "full length" hot hits from the independent charts to tickle the lobes. The choice is catholic enough to satisfy the indie scholar, from Joy Division from their Peel sessions to BMX Bandits' The Day Before Tomorrow.

The biggest plus of this collection is that it should encourage more pop casualties to sample the delights of an alternative vinyl lifestyle, discovering the likes of Pop Will Eat Itself, Mighty Mighty and the gone but not forgotten Half Man Half Biscuit. Golly, there's even a genuine TOTP's chartbuster, in Erasure's It Doesn't Have To Be, to please all comers. Pot Pocton

A tasteful compilation of not so tasteful current rockin' combos from all over the United Kingdom. Twelve acts covering swing, hillbilly, rockabilly and R&B styles quite admirably under the supervision of producer Boz Boorer, who also contributes the track Demolition Man. Other high points are the tracks from The Lonestars (who grew into Howlin' Wilf & The Vee Jays), The Wigsville Spliffs, The Jumpin' Jacks . . . well, to be honest there isn't a duff act here. But the ones I've mentioned have more imagination when it comes to song arranging, plus, living in the years of the cover version, it's nice to see that all the songs here are newly penned. Snakey G

Seeds II: Art

Cherry Red BRED 75 P ●

The second instalment in Cherry Red's Seeds series, designed to make those long-lost post-punk classics available again. However, despite a genuine desire on my part to wallow in the nostalgia of it all, my tastes have obviously changed over the years as I found a lot of the 14 selections virtually unlistenable and somewhat tedious. Obviously played and under-produced in the traditional punk style, a lot of that freshness and naivete has been captured in the recordings.

A list of contributors here include Punilux, Blurt, the Dragees and Bone Orchard, but only the Go-Betweens' charming World Weary, Patrik Fitzgerald's Trendy, The Nightingales' Urban Ospreys and the fabulous Higsons' Conspiracy (whatever happened to them?) stand out as acts with any real talent. Unless you're an inveterate collector of punk memorabilia, this collection, released I'm sure with the most admirable of motives, is not really a value-for money one. Karen Kent

Jah Shaka LP 857 NM C ●●

Jah Shaka's own brief sleeve note says it all really. "This record is a small compilation of hits from the Shaka stable, featuring a few of the most popular of 'warrior' vocals. So for lovers of roots and culture music I and I sincerely hope that the selections here will add, both to your musical pleasure and spiritual inspiration in this time." The honours on the six extended tracks featured include two from Shaka himself and one apiece courtesy of Bim Sherman, Junior Brown, African Princess and Still Cool and is message music in the Shaka tradition with dense, busy rhythms and inventive use of horns, especially effective when the vocals give way to the dub. Outstanding tracks are Still Cool's fluting To Be Poor Is A Crime and Shaka's own Revelation 18 adaptation with its naggingly familiar horn phrase. Evelyn Court

Fever FEV 007 RR C ●

A weird cacophony of tuneless guitars, brass sections, and vocals that are nothing more than shouting, emanating from people who seem to have been fed on a diet of raw razor blades, is what makes listening to this album a very painful experience.

This five band compilation from Fever marks the end of their first phase, from which only My Bloody Valentine emerge with any credit, with sparkling geetar-based tunes that shine like a diamond through the musical black hole that is the rest of the record.

Best of the rest are Kill Ugly Pop, Gasrattle, Cat Wax Axe Co and Barton And Harry will have the invitation to turn off accepted. For owners of warped minds and finely tuned ears only. Andrew Bass

The Times set the pace with an intense and dynamic mini-rock opera about the demise of the Western World.

Powerful stuff. The Pictures are refreshing and cast not just a passing glance at Billy Bragg. Sharp prove that there's no need for Bruce and Rick to sign on at the DHSS after all, ex-Polydor solo star Jimmy Edwards fills the shoes vacated by Weller admirably. The low point arrives however when The Gents embarrass themselves with a Bill Oddy blues number. The New Breed play mellow lovers rock, while The Toasters skank away at the other end of the reggae spectrum. An extremely diverse and interesting compilation that deserves to transcend any labels. The Ideal Copy

Mute STUMM 42 RT C Sp ●●●

Hobnailed artfrenzy! A longcome LP from the four pop wags whose output may be deliberate and mannered (often a plus point) but it's music without beastly rock conceits. Their acute melodic awareness has not waned — previously shown in their brazen tapping of the power of songs written on one note (Outdoor Minor) or, more flamboyantly, two notes (Dot Dash). This awareness, however, is manifesting itself more complexly.

There are two major vocal moods on Ideal Copy. There's the Bagpuss-Sings-Scott Walker anguish typified by the delightful Feed Me, a strange mutant thing that grimly hauls itself into a Little Shop Of Horrors scenario. Over Kieirs is a tough, unbridled celebration of sampling technology and metal doors slamming. Caught in the middle of this sub-group is Ambitious. It's laps ahead of most competition but less winsome than its groove-mates, more an exercise in butch binky-bonk.

The other half of the collection is given over to upsome bouts of harmonised overdrone in tones variously pastel and mungent, all born aloft by pulsing and fluttering banks of sequencers. Our heroes' keen ears have kept these highly commercial outpourings free of vile pomp and circumstance. The new single, Ahead, works primarily as a determined reference to the Euro-bop side of New Order. Myrna Minkoff

THE WOLFHOUNDS

Unseen Ripples From A Pebble

Pink Pinky 19 RT C ●

They may be Wolfhounds, but they sure are faithful hounds, bringing us here the pipe and slippers of the atrociously self-satisfied "shambling" generation: the tautly jangled guitar and the voice of an unsinging (as opposed to unsung) hero.

Only when they get tetchy, on Anti-Midas Touch and (far and away the best track) Me, do they do anything that it's possible to feel more than flatly blank about. Maybe this'll up their hatred of cloth-eared journoes, and they'll write another good song. Till then as they say, in probably their finest insight, "in your mind you fly but you can't flap your arms no matter how hard you try".

Ride The Tiger

Shigaku Presents SHIG LP 2 Sh ●●●

The name has been rebounding back and forth between rock clairvoyants much as REM did before them. Finally, Ride The Tiger is released here, and guess what, it's American College Radio Rock in excelsis — definitely post-Feelies (in America, both bands share the same label, Coyote) who in their time were post-Television (post-Velvets etc) and definitely on a wide tangent to the REM tangle.

Parts of Yo La Tengo's guitar trail is simply trustworthy, but other parts reach dizzy heights, widening the fine form of twin-guitar introversion to different musical tensions, stretching the lines to allow for gorgeous, fragile figures (Screaming Dead Balloons and Alrock's Bells especially). Too much of their personality plays muted servant to the physical efforts, producing a curiously flat feeling, but still it works. In the wake of the Tom Verlaine renaissance, Ride The Tiger is an essential purchase. Martin Aston

THE WEATHER PROPHETS

Mayflower

Elevation ELV 1 ●●

The best word applicable to The Weather Prophets is fundamental. There's no idle pose or towering sub-text or image to Mayflower unless you call writing songs some kind of faddy stance. No, this debut simply follows a golden tradition of guitar-band-framed rock — very square, 4/4, strong melodies, little decorative frippery — whose attitude is centred deep in the music and Astor's personal world.

He manages to avoid paying homage to his tradition; there's an obvious crafted reverence at hand but no jangle or copyright blot. Ex-Patti Smith guitarist Lenny Kaye's production capitalises on the group's subtle, probing style, but beware, nothing rocks out or provokes like post-punk ideals demand. From the opening Why Does The Rain (The Loft's first single, revised) through the two singles, Almost Prayed and Naked, to the closing Sleep (God, how traditional, Pete!), The Weather Prophets are rock romantics, spilling out Astor's stories of love, faith and the elements. Now you can't get more fundamental than that. Martin Aston

Ace CH 207

Your Jacks Wilsons, Sam Cooke and Ben E. Kings are OK, but none hold a torch to the greatest soul daddy of them all, Arthur Alexander. I can't begin to describe how excited I got when I heard this platter was on the way! Taking up the story from where the merry A Shot Of Rhythm And Soul (CH 66) left off, the man who gave the Stones and the Beatles Soldier Of Love, Anna and You Better Move On has a go at some songs that were hits for other folks. He's taken on Hey Baby and Love Letters which were on his Dot LP, and soul pervs will also be over the moon to hear there's an alternative take of the title track. Sneaky G

Cody Returns From Outer Space

Having always believed Commander Cody and his cohorts were some laid back, hippy drivel from yonks back it was some surprise to find this compilation from their first, self titled, and second, Tales From The Ozone, studio albums contains a wide selection of reckless, country fuelled, rhythm and blues! But then that is what this legendary Edsel series is all about.

The good Commander manages to touch on boogie woogie piano, rockabilly and even Hawaiian blues as they deliver everything from Cab Calloway's classic Minnie The Moocher to Lieber And Stoller's The Shadow Knows via some real down home country blues, with its characteristic pedal steel guitar licks and frenzied fiddle play. Jerry Smith

THE FLYING BURRITO BROTHERS

Dim Lights, Thick Smoke And Loud, Loud Music

Edsel ED 197  ●●●

This is material gathered from the vaults of A&M, and basically consists of all the Brothers' wealth of melody featuring the influential Gram Parsons, which didn't make it to the group's first two LPs, The Gilded Palace Of Sin and Burrito Deluxe (both recently re-released by Edsel and a good job too, judging from the prices the originals were fetching).

Musically, the latter half of the title is misleading, since this is mainly slide guitar, head on the table in a puddle of tequila music; country rock without the roll, but with plenty of lilt and emotion. Even their rendition of Honky Tonk Women has never been near a Stones' record, and Green, Green Grass Of Home practically grinds to a halt midway.

Not just for collectors, but one to sit out on the verandah, dust off the spiltoon and enjoy. Carole Linfield

HEARTS AND FLOWERS

Now Is The Time For

Bam Caruso KIRI 040

The cosmic cowboy era in the mid to late 1960s produced a lot of bad folk-rock records. This lot made the grade, though. Not an album you can have playing away in the background while you colour in your latest issue of Underground, this one demands your full attention. Great musicianship with banjos as well as guitars, and even mandolins creeping in. The tracks that really cut the mustard are Try For The Sun, Rock 'n' Roll Gypsies and 10,000 Sunsets, the latter having some great fuzz guitar buried in the mix. Deke Wanger

PRINCE BUSTER

The Fabulous Hits of . . .

Spartan Records SPLP 007 Sp...

A straightforward re-issue (in a terribly cliched sleeve) of this 1967 compilation annoys because it could and should have been much better. Few of the Prince's well known songs are included (where is Madness, Big Five or One Step Beyond?) And, the sleeve notes should be better too. They're fine if you want to know what The (Real!!!) Prince was doing 20 years ago, but not too informative on his activities of today. However the 12 tracks on this album do serve as a reminder of the immense talent of Prince Buster, and one can only hope any future releases will show it off with a bit more character and style. Mark Brennan

Don't Put No Headstone On My Grave

Zu Zazz Z 2002 Zn

The previously un-issued title track was described by Sun boss Sam Phillips as 'the greatest blues ever written', and his opinions mean a hell of a lot to die-hard rock 'n' roll fans and are rarely questioned. As well as cuts from the same session on side one, side two is made up of re-mixed versions of some of his early '60s Phillips Int minor hits. By re-mixed I don't mean with added disco beats, perish the thought, but that Zu Zazz engineers have taken the tapes back to their original formats, as they were before Mr Phillips (in a lapse of weakness) overdubbed strings and over the top girl backing vocals - which swamped the whole soul of the songs. Here the likes of Lonely Weekends and Finally Found Out are as they were intended to be. Snakey G

What's new pussycat? Whoah, whoah, whoah. This might now be a retrospective of mid-'60s experimental pop that sounds like a lick of Hush Puppies, but back then Decca subsidiary Deram was harnessing the Shock Of The New. Ranging from Cat Stevens' ode to Portobello Road to Neil 'Colin Blunstone' McCarthur's breathless She's Not There, and from The Warm Sounds to Bulldog Breed, The Pyramid to 23rd Turnoff, Deram Dayze is document and eyewitness, precious pop that was so innocent and clean that it sounds more promiscuous and hungry than a horde of dirty Zodiacs. Muleskinner - A Potpourri Of Bluegrass Jam

Edsel ED219 E...

Hell, yeah! And any other moonshine sodden cliché you care to think of will apply to this great album. It's a mighty fine collection of finger pickin' and toe tappin' tunes that would grace any riotous square dance.

Side one kicks off with the frantic Mule Skinner Blues and one's country ass is left well and truly sore after this one. The more traditional Blue And Lonesome lowers the pace for a while, and more breath is caught during Footprints In The Snow.

Side two features the kind of country style that followers of Neil Young's straw hat days won't find unfamiliar, as these Stars 'n' Bars-style tunes are split up by the fast 'n' furious Roanoke and Soldier's Joy, which leave necks and fretboards burnt to a frazzle. Scorchin' stuff indeed. Andrew Bass

GENE VINCENT

Lonesome Fugitive

Magnum Force MFM 027

The black leather rebel from his 1966 period at Hollywood's Challenge Records. Mixing his 'n' r roots with the go-go beat sounds of the day, he came up with some marvellous material appealing to both '50s nuts and garage band enthusiasts alike. Bird Doggin and Ain't That Too Much are the cream of the crop (would you believe Glen Campbell on guitar?), with Lonely Street not far behind with some orgasmic fuzz twang guitar. Vincent's voice is one of the most haunting and disturbing of his generation, whether on ballad or rocker, a true legend.

With this, most of his '50s and '60s recordings are readily available, so when's someone going to re-release the album he made for John Peel's hippy Dandelion label in 1969? Deke Wanger

GOATS DON'T SHAVE

Omar Sharif's Moustache Go Go Goat NM C

The secret life of bridge, the game, revealed by Goats Don't Shave, who back up last year's initial press interest by releasing a record to enhance their name, reputation and bank balance. Fun pop with melody, charm, and a five o'clock shadow for sure. DH

PAUL GROOVY AND THE POP ART EXPERIENCE

Andy Watch Out! Bite Back Records BB012 B C

Modern guitar stuff from Portsmouth in a smartie-orange sleeve that looked so tasty I almost ate it. The music was equally appealing, and refers to the shooting of Andy Warhol, in the '60s, by a woman from SCUM (Society For Cutting Up Men). JH

HAPPY MONDAYS Tart

Tart Factory C F

Scruffy dog-eared funk from Mancunian growlers. Their third epic, this time produced by John Cale, acts as a tasty prawn cocktail to a giant burger with relish, album just coming over the horizon. Vegetarians please insert nut outlet. DH

HOLGER HILLER Whippets

Mute C S

German overture specialist, Mr Hiller teams up briefly with former Associates main bod Billy McKenzie for a touch of mindless hollering backed by orchestral explosions and terse harmonics. This is a love or hate situation. Not pop radio but great with it. DH

THE HIT PARADE I Get So

Sentimental JSH Records RR C

More painfully poignant pop from the bard of West London. Lovesick and writhing, the collision of Cath Carroll and Julian Henry's vocals make for intriguing listening, but the real meat is scraped clean on the sorrowfully sad Sue, on the flip. Eh-huh-huh-huh-huh. DH

THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN

April Skies Blanco Y Negro

Here comes the Mary Chain again - the second coming, same as the first. The A-side is a Ramones-at-33, under a sweet Spector sky - no feedback, just fat guitars, and stupifyingly predictable MC at that. It's a great pop hook, and if that's all they want to be, then fine. Flip it and Bo Diddley's Who Do You Love has none of the original's sexual thrill, while their own Kill Surf City is EXACTLY AS BEFORE - Beach Boys '63 fuzzed and scuffed. The Mary Chain used to dismember pop iconography; now they just tag onto its coat-tails. Watch a threat turn into a pet. MA

JOSEF K Heaven Sent

Supreme International Editions EDITION 87-7 FF C

An absolutely essential post-script to the Postcard era with the spikey brilliance of this '81 John Peel session track conjuring up all that was special about the whole Scottish pop thing with the help of a demo version of the classic Radio Drill Time and two tracks from Josef K's legendary unreleased LP. What more could you want, eh? JS

ED KUEPPER Not A Soul

Around Hot RT C

This twists andbrakes like current Kuepper, but proving that Soul is as commercial and as poppy as Ed'll ever get. It's certainly no sacrifice by any means, just instant, being a stamping, horn-driven thing, as bright as brass. Blare it out your window for Spring. MA

THE MAN FROM DELMONTE

Drive Drive Drive EC Ugly Man RR C

Neat name for neat pop which goes folky and frolics in a Peter And Gordon neverland before Jake Thackery-ing to a halt. Early evening rad fare, close but no cucumber. DH

THE MIGHTY LEMON DROPS

Out Of Hand Blue

Guitar Records AZURX 4
The third single from the Drops sees a further excursion into '60s psychedelia territory. There's a Searchers' riff buried in there somewhere, too, so revivalists and modern "shambling" types should find this record a rewarding purchase. JH

PERFECT DAZE

Bubblegum Vinyl Solution F

Rock 'n' roll high school daze from Ipswich (the next hot city?!), Messrs Scruff Petty, ex-Stupid Wolfe Retard, Dazle, Col and Lorenzo slash mod, pop and rock with East Coast guitars and teen-age ramp-age melodies. All five tracks wipe away obvious stains of influence with an exhilarating, loose breeze of adrenalin Dull-Town Delirium. MA

POESIE NOIRE Radio

Active Flood Antler RR C

Belgian oddity that starts quite amicably and then builds into a torrid semi-pornographic dancer. Overdubbed with politicians and extras from Debbie Does Dallas. Neat street, with a melodic guitar line too. DH

THE RAW HERBS She's A Nurse

Medium Cool RR C

Excellent hard vinyl debut from these country-esque teamsters, who surfaced with a flexi last year. Harder and more to the point than most, it does a neat shoulder charge on the Green Syndicate Paraders of this world. Neat and desirable. TCW

REPTILES AT DAWN

After The Plague New Rose RT C

Typical Australian grungy-garage grunts and groans that bend from a Stooges Detroit bastard beat to a steamy Black Sabbath grind. But like a reptile, this four-tracker crawls along the ground when perhaps it should be prowling the rooftops. Something smoulders, but in the wake of Crazyhead, this stands a danger of disappearing. MA

Sing come from Malmo in south Sweden, and this single is an impressive debut, sounding vaguely like a modern, commercial version of The Velvet Underground. JH

BOBBY SUTLIFF Another Jangly Mess EP
Tambourine Records URINE 2

Bobby Sutliff used to be half of The Windbreakers, and this five track EP was recorded partly in Jackson, Mississippi (where he lives) and partly in Winston, Salem, where REM knob twiddler Mitch Easter took over production duties. The result is as the title implies, though not as much a mess, more of a promising appetiser. JH

TELL TALE HEARTS The Eight 'Till Late Edens
Doorbell EDD 1

Plenty of whimsical doodling here as Tell Tale Hearts conjure up a spine tingling tale with its icy cold delivery offset by layer upon layer of warm atmospherics. An insidious little number that will sneak upon you just when you're not looking and then mug you with its beguiling innocence. JS

TENDER LUGERS Enjoy Yourself EP Ugly Boy KIK 2

Ipswich's finest deliver a fab 'n' groovy four tracks of sharp frenetic thrashing topped by the most beguiling, disturbed vocal since Peter Perrett hung up his larynx for a needle and spoon. Swinging along with a belief in their own narcissistic grace and beauty, even the clumsy couplets of Teenage Cream can't fail to bring admiration for the wonderful audacity of it all. JS

THAT PETROL EMOTION
Big Decision Polydor

A harsh, hacking guitar sweetened by saccharine vocals. Melody? You bet! Crisp? Not 'alf. Yet, most notable for a wimpy lyric break, totally devoid of conviction or emotion that pronounces, "You got to agitate, educate and organise..." RR

TORMENT The Mystery Men EP Nervous

Psychobilly music is basically a live experience and very rarely works on vinyl. The Mystery Man track, despite some splendid guitar work, is no exception to that rule. Rock Strong is though, and it has the feel of the early Stray Cats (don't cringe!) at their peak. The main thing wrong with this mob is that the songwriting isn't up to scratch. SG

TREEBOUND STORY My Life's Example Fon Records
Elm 8

This is rather grand. A new record from Sheffield by a group some people haven't heard of, and it's pleasantly backward, poetic and accessible. Do they play live? I hope so. The world should hear more of this type of music. Now! JH

VARIOUS The First Cuts Are The Deepest World Of Warning WOW 2

At last Wales has redeemed itself for ramming Max Boyce down our throats. With this six track, six band EP all is forgiven.

Kicking off - and I mean jackboot to the groin kicking - is Classified Protest with I Remember, featuring some of the most furious drumming I've heard since the last Slayer LP. An instrumental cut from I Mobster and the down 'n' dirty Bugs close the opening side (as it were) with an almighty crash!

The "hard rockin'" Yr Anhrefn and Elfyn Presli transcend the language barrier with their Welsh tongue and universally heavy chords and it's left to The Heretics to rant and rave, in English for a change, to bring a highly recommended record to an end. AB

THE WALLFLOWERS

Thank You Mantre Records
MANT 98/4

More '60s drenched guitar music along with tamourines and summer harmonies a go-go. Produced by Andy Partridge, this is a pleasing record, despite looking backwards into the gloomy past. JH

THE WOLFHOUNDS

Cruelty Pink Records PINKY 18

Hopping around somewhere between the Wedding Present and Stump, the new Wolfhounds single is impressively assertive and collars the listener without any polite introductions. This group are potent, exciting and quite obviously eat their can of Pedigree Chum each day. JH

YARGO Carrying Mine Racket RTL 2

Superb moody jazz number that has been lifted straight from the dark, smoke filled confines of twilight club land with its achingly melancholic vocal resting on a sinuous double bass line and accompanied by the obligatory smouldering sax. Just the sort of thing to accompany a bottle of Scotch as you while away the wee small hours. JS

pix by Meir Gal

< NOISE OF THE MONTH: Laibach live >

“Most of the music I listen to is a true reflection of the world because it’s crap . . .”

Jarvis Cocker, diplomat, playwright, crooner and NH spex wearer, this is yer page. Martin Aston . . . come on down ➡ Pulp is a soft mush of nerves in the interior of your tooth – probe it and you’ll wince, feel a slither of fear, or possibly the worst pain imaginable.

➡ I’d say that Pulp from Sheffield sing about love in much the same way. Then again, when they’re in contact with the outside world, Pulp are as close to the humorous – the funny bone to you – at that moment when you don’t know whether to laugh or cry at your depressing, painful tangle of affairs.

➡ “So just lie back and enjoy it and save your tears for when the kissing stops, oh you know it’s got to stop” (Don’t You Know)

➡ It goes like this. A human climbing frame stuffed inside a third-hand suit behind NH glasses and perplexed eyes. Jarvis Cocker is the voice and core of Pulp. Through eight years and three difficult incarnations, Pulp have had just the one Peel session (scored while still at school in 1981) and the mini-album, It, to show for it. Pulp’s fondness for theatrical gestures on stage, songs that veer from Radio Two to Radio Five, past the point of Peel programming, and a disposition that can hardly be contained in the expression strange, has meant Pulp are still marooned.

➡ Not that their songs ever scream ‘rescue me’. Instead they rub shoulders with the emotionally crippled while trying to touch and bleed the MOR pop classicism of a Jimmy Webb or maybe even a Burt Bacharach.

➡ Later on, the story got even more confused. There will never be a more perfect example of a band’s clash of desire and realisation than Pulp’s Little Girl (With Blue Eyes) which signalled their return from the wilderness after It in 1985. This was a new Pulp, with Candida, Russell, Manners and Magnus, and the year’s most unloved, unrecognised single – an epic, sparse ballad, haunted by piccato violin, swelled by that chorus: “There’s a hole in your heart and one between your legs. you’ll never have to wonder which one he’s going to fill despite what he says . . .”

➡ Little Girl is a sign of the way Pulp take notions of love, vulnerability and dependency and then expose it. Beautiful ballads are equally ripped and torn by drones, crescendos and thrashes.

➡ “I like aggressive music, say The Birthday Party, but in any type of music, I don’t like to stick in into different categories of how I feel.” Fair enough, Jarvis, but Pulp sound more at home on a stage than in a rock gig. “Probably, but we’re in the rock ‘n’ roll market so we have to play those places. Do you think we’re more refined than that?”

➡ Pulp have strands of Sheffield factories and London bedsits, but mostly Parisienne folk clubs, Frankfurt nightclubs; Jacques Brel, Berthold Brecht . . .

➡ “I can see that, but I don’t like this idea of this ‘singer-songwriter’ idea. I don’t mind having been compared to Webb and Bacharach, but the more wimpy types like Donovan . . .”

➡ Jarvis looks hurt.

➡ Those people probably have enough problems of their own. All those doomed relationships, all that self-torturing. Pulp can’t help but satirise the fatalism, but are they entertainers, spectators or commentators as they interfere with our daydreams?

➡ “I’ve wondered about this sometimes because I don’t want to appear as if I’m looking at the world and moralising and pontificating. I would just hope that we don’t contribute to the problem. Most of the music that I listen to is a true reflection of the world because it’s crap. Hopefully Pulp can make music as a soundtrack to the world as I’d like it to be, as perhaps it could be.”

➡ Both the last two singles, Dogs Are Everywhere and They Suffocate At Night, two bulging ballads, failed to sell. It’s going to be hard for Pulp. The new album, Freaks, walks by a fairground, gets followed home, jumps in and out of bed and tries to repair the irreparable. People hate each other. People love each other. People are their own worst enemies. Guitars are strummed for sadness and violated for desperation. Imagine a Roman Polanski soundtrack to a Phil Spector movie. Collapsing new feelings.

➡ “Sometimes truth is very ugly but if it is true, then it can’t help but be beautiful. It’s certain realisation. You either get depressed about then or you see a funny side to it. Just to realise what things are.”

➡ “As the signs outside proclaimed, nature sometimes makes mistakes”

➡ One last question: Jarvis, you said It was “very innocent and naïve, trusting love and romance. I suppose I’m a bit more realistic now.” But have you been in love since?

➡ “I don’t really like to use that word anymore. I don’t know what it’s supposed to mean.”

CHILDREN OF A LESSER TUNE?

► Shelleyan Orphan ruffle their ruffles and tell Alex Kadis about songs and romance.

Jemaur Tayle and Carolyn Crawley were discovered in true romantic style at the end of last year when they played a baffling support to The Jesus And Mary Chain. Their classical ensemble shocked the assembled crowd and won them a contract with Rough Trade. A single followed, the sweet and Shelleyan Orphan shock!: not featured in Ken Russell's bio-pic of Shelley entitled Gothic!

Yes, yes, yes... catch this. The Dead Kennedys live and in their prime at DMPO's on Broadway, San Fran. Mean-time mime, slam dancing drongos, stereo sound and a rowdy crowd. Check yer eyeballs as the Ken's close the West Coast niterie that became legend between '75 and '84 with shows featuring diverse acts as Snotty as Black Flag, as arty as Devo, as operatic as Diamanda Galas and as nutty as Madness. Phew! • And you can win it! Yep, the Underground undercover terror squad donned brown bags and camouflage in a bid to secure ten of these smelly VHS delights. All you've got to do is send us the answer to one simple question (along with the finger print of your left hand index digit) on an inky postcard, or the back of an envelope, before May 7. • The question is, what instrument does Klaus Flouride play in the DK's? • Send your despatches to DK/Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London Hse, Hampstead Rd, London NW1. Go for it, pinko!

mellow A Cavalry Of Cloud, and an album in similar vein is coming out this month.

Live, they prefer art galleries as their venues while Millree the painter creates his medium as they sing. Initial impressions can be misleading; looking like a pair of pre-Raphaelite beauties lost in their cloud of creativity this cheerful couple aren't as precious as their critics would have them be.

Carolyn: "We like what we do to have a rawness. People think about what we do too much. Our music is being put on a pedestal and I don't think it should be there."

Jem: "I think there's room for what we do because it's never been done before. It's a very delicate thing though. Journalists mention the Shelley thing frequently but our music would be poetic even with his influence. We like him simply because he mixes romanticism with politics."

Will Shelleyan Orphan bring about a renewed interest in the forbidden classics?

Jem: "We could, as long as we aren't categorised as high-brow intellectuals. We haven't been to college or studied music, we can't read or write music — our songs are conceived in our heads. People tend only to touch the classics at school and that's usually a very stuffy approach. At least this way you can discover things for yourself without being told what to think." While far from dogmatic, Carolyn and Jemaur have an impenetrable depth. They share an implicit understanding which serves not only as a personal bond but strengthens their music.

Jem: "We feel the same about most things so we easily agree on the subjects for our songs. What we do happens very naturally, we never know what's coming next, sometimes we surprise ourselves!"

Altogether now, aaah...! But seriously, I was convinced. Shelleyan Orphan aren't lost within the realms of an irrelevant past. Historical grandeur has found its home within their soft hearts but they are children of today and very much alive. These Orphans are invigorating and complete.

Bhundu Boys Jit Everywhere

The Bhundu Boys are Shona, (bhundu is Shona for bush) with a guitar, bass, keyboards and drums line-up. No mbiras – a Yamaha DX7 does the job. It is a fine thing that The Bhundu Boys use such a hi-tech piece of the latest technology to simulate the ancient instrument 'to make you thoughtful'. It is the most alive I have heard a DX7 sound. Like other bands from Zimbabwe, the guitars reflect mbira playing which is why people always write things like 'cascading guitars'. It is exhilarating music though, played in rhythmic fast, threes, 1-2-3-1-2-3, all across Africa from Morocco south, and a change for people here to dance to after our teutonic 1-2-1-2.

The political comment has become more strident since they have been here. It is received with enthusiasm and sometimes it must have a more personal impact than Sandy Gall. They get to like Biggie and the rest of the Bhundus. They shout ururururu! when he does. They clap and dance in fast threes to the Bhundus playing jit at beer places, and so they cheer when he talks about freedom. And that is one of the few things a musician can do, try and draw people's attention to things that they think are important. And Bhundu Boys do it by playing 'jit' they call it, their style.

Having grown up in the struggle to change Rhodesia to Zimbabwe, they try and draw attention to that struggle in South Africa. They do it in person, not being much on TV, and have jitted around the country since last summer. Bhundu Boys have played and played, everywhere they could, and it seems to have worked. They have established late night radio patronage and have jitted Shabini up the independent charts. In their case it seems to be down to the quantity of gigs, persistently moving people with their exuberant fast threes jit and mbiring guitars (I won't say cascading). Now they are back in Zimbabwe but will soon be back. Ururururu! John Lewis god's work?

The most famous sons of Trbovlje, Northern Yugoslavia, are with us once again. Laibach have gone and made another record, perversely titled Opus Dei. They have also broken with their policy of not giving interviews, and this is how we come to be sitting in Freud's coffee bar in Shaftesbury Avenue one icy sub-Yugo afternoon, going through the motions of a conversation. We have been supplied with just one Laibacher, whose name we didn't catch. For the sake of argument, let's call him Rudolf • Rudolf, as it turns out, has been dispatched from Yugoslavia to make a few appearances before persons of the music press, prior to the release of the record, and the appearance of Laibach on the South Bank on April 1 (both events which will have long since gone by the time you read this). Whether the date has any significance to the Yugoslavs is unfortunately not recorded. Indeed, very few of Laibach's thoughts on any subject but Laibach are known to us. Laibach appears to doubt the reliability of individual expression, and so Laibach makes this or that pronouncement, and Rudolf, bless him, doesn't say very much at all • Rudolf doesn't like tape recording, which is a pretty strange way for a recording artiste to feel. He asks not to be quoted directly, and that we use quotes from the famous Laibach texts wherever possible. The famous Laibach texts are the stolid politico-cultural riddles which Laibach are apt to offer in reply to written questions from interested parties. Here is an example:

Q How do you justify the violence you inflict upon the public – aggressive sound, tiresome repetition, blinding reflectors directed at spectators' eyes, big black placards and posters that strike one's eyes . . . ?

A. When in political and economical crises the antagonism of society comes to a head, there remains only force as the sole 'ultima ratio' of the social integration. The force must adopt the form of systematic (physical and psychic) terror, organised in compliance with the social relations: terror obtains the function of production power which extorts discipline and the adaptation of the masses to the existing productional relations and apparatus. Systematic terror becomes a constitutional instrument of authority. ■ To us violence is neither a system nor aesthetics, and least of all fun; violence is a cruel need to which we submit ourselves.

So there you are. Apart from noting that their violence occurs in grammar and syntax as much as on stage, screen and radio, there is quite enough in here to keep the happy smiling structuralists beaverfing away for a few chapters at least. Careful inspection, however, shows that this text tells us nothing about Laibach and violence. Their totalitarianism remains unspecific: they stress "adaptation to the existing productional relations and apparatus" as though relations were global and immutable, making no account of the diversity of conditions and contexts into which they project their almighty vision. They are a party without an apparent programme. What they do have, however is a dramatic texture to their inscrutable meta-political posturing which throws the conventional ideas about culture as entertainment into stark relief. Their recent experimentation with Queen pomp-pop anthem One Nation (Laibach title Geburt Einer Nation) makes their gimmick (not in the perjorative sense, we hasten to add) more obvious than usual: they are playing at mad people in a mad world. This is a routine pre-occupation of pale and spotty western youths in doomy pop groups, but it works so well here because Laibach connive a total spectacle (or they are totally sincere: the spectacle, remember, is in the eye of the beholder: the question is – how did it get there?) •

The interview was finished. It was like spending an hour with 20 per cent of the Pope and hoping that it would produce some infallible edict on matters of faith or morals. Rudolf is tired of interviews, but Laibach must obtain press space so that people will buy their records (which are mostly very good records): it is part of the scheme of things. We say our goodbyes, and Rudolf trudges off to Moscow. The drinking club, not the nerve centre of the Evil Empire. •

You wanna know something funny about Laibach? Laibach ties (like George Darling's tie in Peter Pan, only different) do not tie; they are elastic, and they fasten with a hook and eye at the back of the neck. They are therefore uniformly knotted and identical in every way, until you spill coffee down them. •

Well, we thought it was funny. •

There was once a band called Skeletal Family. Whenever someone would wave their records in the air, dozens of others would immediately doze off. They were bad news, and incredibly unhip. Well, the bass player of that crew was Trotwood. He, with drummer Kevin Hunter, buried the Skeletals midway through last year and formed a new band that takes much of its inspiration from Jon Bhowmick's guitar, if not his peculiar surname. They then reap much attention for their singer's voice. Tony, although he prefers to puff out his pectorals, ruining his best bra, and be called 'Derk', is a rare find. A chap who might reliably be described as Aled Jones after they've dropped, with a wealth of seamy experiences behind him. As yet unsigned, SAY YOU possess quite a few strong songs which wobble across subterranean ethics and lyrics which ping-pong around inside your mind. A classy little outfit. And mad as hell, especially if you mention the Housemartins.

Trotwood: "We hate the Housemartins!" Pratininja

SON OF INA

SON OF INA are bloody weird. They are also Scottish and are comprised of a rather blurred David Ness. Previous bands for Aberdonian Ness have included No Human Eye (who had a single out some time back), Burnt Remains and Electric Soup. Those names should have been warning enough, but as Son Of Ina the noise of distorted bedlam has made vinyl in the shape of an album called Delirious on Reactor (through Fast Forward and the Cartel). What's more, it's great!

A punishing overpowering poptone shrouded in feedback and tinged with distortion, it grinds with the best of them. New projects include writing material for "alternative" comedian Syd Ozalid (can't wait for that), a track on an upcoming compilation and general mayhem and musical madness throughout Europe. Support this man, he deserves it. TC Wall

CHORCHAZADE

So, pronounce this name and live. Get your tonsils around that one daddy-o. CHORCHAZADE are a testing bunch. Their album, Made To Be Devoured, is a giant acidic flashback through musical styles old and new. Moulded into a forward looking noise it reminds one of heavy metal folk punk with country roots (in a strictly balladeering mod/psychedelia goes ska mood, you know). • Still the album came out at the tail end of last year on Get Ahead through Revolver. Check it. And look out for a track by the group on the new Hits And Corruption album plus UK dates, followed closely by a Euro jaunt. TC Wall

Now here's something. Just like the record sleeve of their (untitled) debut single, black duo A R KANE present a recognisable image and then obscure it with chaotic disturbances while still leaving a sense of beauty behind (you'll just have to buy the record, won't you?).

As Slab! do to modernist funk, so A R Kane do to hip-hop - hijack it, harden it, add to it, blur it, anything but keep it clean. The first track is pure "Psychocandy" talking, in terms of a Mary Chain hybrid of worrying guitar noise hum and sweet, sweet melody, with lyrics that dangle in between ("the hair on your neck forms a noose around mine...").

It's probably too close to the Mary Chain pattern, but actually way better. A R Kane sound more affected, more sensational and involved.

Not just that, but the flip is the formulae improved beyond belief. If Upside Down was a huge independent hit, then A R Kane can be New Gods. But will they turn out to be a pose like The Mary Chain did? Already press promises of "Miles Davis-meets-Jimi-Hendrix" have been made, so there's no turning back. But what a debut. MARTIN ASTON

O-OH CHONGO's main laughing man, Ollie Howard, prefers to channel his creativity through music, claiming that lack of communication forces him to fully explore his imagination. But why does a talented illustrator choose instead to hack out a musical career? "Well, it's the girls, innit. There's a lot in the band, harr-harr-harrgh!"

Ollie's croaking wail does little to disguise a masterful pop sensibility, a sound as distinctive as it is different from the Prefabs. Having just completed a successful stint at Deptford's Albany Empire where they gave live accompaniment to an adapted Bertold Brecht play on racial tension, the Chongo's are out and about. But still, no pics.

Ronnie Randall

O-OH CHONGO

Since their genesis as a no-nonsense guitar based pop group in late 1985, THE BIBLE have sprung from obscurity to chart contendership remarkably quickly.

Following their classy, if flawed, Bringing The Ghost Back Home debut longplayer last summer on Backs, which yielded a brace of fine singles in Graceland and Mahalia, they signed to Chrysalis at the end of 1986.

How come it has all happened so quickly, I asked singer Boo Hewerdine.

"I don't really know. It's surprised all of us. I remember when I saw the first bad review of the album, I thought that's it. My career was over in one easy move. After that though we started picking up a few good reviews and that got the ball rolling . . ."

Were you embarrassed by how good some reviews have been?

"A bit. You think, 'steady on, we've only just started. We're going to get a lot better than this'."

Certainly, most great 'real' bands don't come in a jiffy but, like Stella Artois, they mature manfully over a period of years, albeit under Joe Public's watchful cynical glare. Having said that, Bringing The Ghost Back Home is a very good record, very English but tinged with many allusions to America.

"I'm still proud of it, with the exception of one track. The whole thing was completed in four days. We recorded and produced it ourselves and had to pay for it. It was very much a case of getting it done as quick as possible as I was running out of money!"

Pigeon-holing time I'm afraid, so what are The Bible about and what will they do? I for one can see them carving out a unique niche for their own work, combining the very best in technology with top notch ability to wrap up a sweet soulful confection. Perhaps not as giant sized as U2's Mars Bars maybe, but certainly more than two bites big. Alex Bastedo

Live at the Roxy circa '77

£35! There was a prospect of coming out with a couple of quid each. We weren't invited to play on the record though we were aware of it being recorded. Our main concern was that we had two dates."

Graham: "We'd been rehearsing 12 tracks in three weeks so we were pretty excited to see what people made of it and if we could get through it. Andy Czowaeski, who ran The Roxy, said we were dreadful last time we played, that we couldn't play, and we said, nobody else can either, what was the problem? Already things were getting really traditional — Generation X were playing all this R&B rocking stuff. We weren't very interested."

piece which came along in the early summer. There was a great feeling of being right at the point. We only knew that it wasn't going to be a punk record."

Graham: "We knew what the image for the cover was going to be, and then we found the place where it existed, which was Plymouth Ho. The night before, we'd all been out and Bruce and I stayed at the club and had a fight with three bikers because they said we were punks! 'Have you got a bike?' we said, because most of them we saw were on the bus . . ."

Wire are here, again, to haunt you for good. A new studio album of new material on Mute, a new further developed sound, and new directions mooted. First, though, Martin Aston takes Colin Newman, Graham Lewis and Bruce Gilbert back to a time of spit and sawdust, back to the Roxy dive in Neal Street. Let the spittle hit the fan, let the story unfold. Kachung . . .

The story so far; the last we heard of Wire was Document And Eyewitness, a catalogue of the group's last live foray at London's Electric Ballroom in 1980 as they tunneled their way out of EMI's headquarters. At the same point, all four members burst out of the restrictive band cocoon and into a greater freedom of choice. Robert Gotobed carried his drums to accompany singer Colin Newman's solo explorations while drumming for Fad Gadget and then temporarily exiting music-biz-ness, while guitarist Bruce Gilbert and bassist Graham Lewis grabbed their collective need to take their situation into more uncharted, experimental fields, together and alone.

Essentially, Wire were four men ravaged by ideas. Their emergence on the crest of punk, vintage '76, lent the group's anarchic nature and initial speedball delivery — their debut Pink Flag held its breath over 23 ricocheting songs — a comfortable 'cult' tag, but Wire's scouring of stereotypical approaches soon dissolved the media-ocriety of labels. Yes, there were art-school ideals in Wire, as well as the purest pop chemistry, new wave signposting and rhythmic collations that recalled the mid-'70s German wave (Faust, Can), all suggesting that Wire were originators in a climate of their own reasoning.

Now four lives have swung back into line again, and Wire are back with us. Following sporadic live appearances since 1984 and the recent EP Snakedrill, the new album The Ideal Copy is as startling as before — electronic undertones, slashes of guitar quartz, the usual horizon of unsettling moods, the usual melodic loops and smears and the usual provoking urge to articulate sensibilities out of incredible hulks of experimental possibilities. A positive reformation then!

Graham Lewis: "I don't think reformed is the right word. We've been on hold since February 1980 because we all did other projects."

Colin: "We had to find new ways of working within the limitations of a four piece — we'd run up against conceptual problems and people wanting to do things in different ways, which is healthy because you get more than one input, but we all had to go and learn how to record in a different way, which is what we've been doing for the last few years. I think those experiences have been brought to bear on the new record."

Individual projects and demands were straining for release — "everyone started to feel we were being fungeiled into one album a year and at the time of 154 we had 60 pieces," says Graham — so it wasn't until 1983 that the thought of Wire reoccurred.

Graham: "We thought we'd do something but then Colin got a grant to record in India, so it didn't happen. When he returned, he contacted me. Bruce and I had been offered an evening at Oxford's Museum of Modern Art in June '84, so we had a date to aim for. We gave ourselves three days to see if anything would happen, if there was a group sound. The first two days were dreadful . . .!"

But on the third day, God created two pieces, A Serious Of Snakes and Drill from the recent EP, and a Wire for the present age.

Graham: "There was a sound that everybody felt they could be involved in, with rhythmic possibilities that were different to the way we had previously worked."

Colin: "One thing we were talking about was Year Zero, which is the idea that at the starting point again, everything from the past in Wire's history becomes null and void. We wanted a clean start. How everyone could be in it given the diversity of the group seemed impossible, but it's probably the key to the way Wire works. That's what we liked about it before, that something could be achieved."

But now, before the Wire takes us all by the scruff of the neck, let's look back at Wire's vinyl collection.

● Live At The Roxy (two tracks — 12XU and Lowdown, on Harvest, re-released this month).

Colin: "We were offered two shows for

we'll keep the pink flag flying high

Do Wire realise they're the only band still in existence from this gallery of punks? Wherefore art thou, Johnny Moped? . . . Slaughter And The Dogs, remember, remember? . . . Eater? Bring on The Unwanted.

Graham: "No, we weren't punks . . ."

Colin: "That was the year before, in '76. It was all over by '77. We were very new. It wasn't punk, and it went down like a lead balloon."

Graham: "The audience were pretty silent. They were very wary of us because we didn't play for ages and ages so that they could pogo all the time. They felt what we were doing was too short."

Colin: "When we did long songs, they were too slow. They couldn't get a good pogo going."

● Pink Flag on Harvest, recent re-issued in CD format. Colin: "From The Roxy in April to Pink Flag in September, we'd gone from relative obscurity to signing to a major (EMI). New directions were starting to emerge which were hitherto undreamt of by us. The approach was to make it as direct as possible. A lot of the vocals are live with backing tracks."

Graham: "I remember Mike Thorne (Wire's producer) being very nervous because he thought we were going to drop pieces because we were getting bored with them. It was a case of getting it down as quickly as possible."

Colin: "Reuters was a real marker

Pink Flag perpetrators

● Chairs Missing, on Harvest, and again recently re-issued on CD. Graham: "A lot of songs about sea and water . . ."

— Colin: "In between Pink Flag and Chairs Missing we went through an interesting, radical upheaval. We had all this material that was looking towards Pink Flag and then along came Practise Makes Perfect, and we thought, 'Wow . . .'"

— Graham: "It was nothing to do with us at all. Everyone went 'that's one, that's one . . .', let's build on that."

— Colin: "It's very close to the Wire spirit that any direction comes from the material itself. I think there was a feeling of 'oh, they've decided to go in a new direction', a bit like having a new haircut or image. We started playing with new tools. There's early sequencer on Another The Letter, and it was the first time we started to use synths and different kinds of textures. New guit FX were happening . . . new sounds! The rhythm guitar that had been so dominant on Pink Flag was increasingly dropped."

— Were you angry that EMI ordered a middle-eight piano section for the single at that time, Outside Miner?

— Colin: "In days of yore, they used to say to groups, it's too long for a single (1 min.45 secs actually). For the first time ever, a record company said it's too short!

Something had to be constructed in the bridge to make it long enough. It's dead corny. Then they released it on white vinyl which was horribly tasteless."

— "In hindsight over these three studio albums, this is the one we all like the most. So much happened. It was very moving — not to tears, just new ideas all the time."

● 154. Colin: "A logical progression from the last, stripping out all the rhythm elements and replacing them with other things. In a 24 track studio, we could arrange more than before."

— "This was touted as the album to break Wire — you know, third album syndrome, with talk of respectable money from America, but on a 25 date tour with Roxy Music, we saw what it was like to be a famous rock group who were once very, very good, and we knew we didn't want this."

— Graham: "We learnt how to play in front of people who weren't very happy about it. We compressed the material so that it just ramped severely. It started at a million miles an hour and went uphill, and then we put in Heartbeat which was the slowest, quietest number. Every night 8000 people whistled in the same place. They thought it was the middle of our set."

— Bruce: "154 was a very symptomatic album, when we were very fidgety about Wire as the outlet for activities that were expected to be supported on a small EMI budget."

— Colin: "154 was a bit like water dripping out of a tap. We hoped, naively in hindsight, that because EMI had been overtaken by new independent labels and Wire had independent credibility, EMI would be into small budget projects and EMI could buy a bit of credibility with it. They just couldn't see it at all."

● Document And Eyewitness. Graham: "This was a symptomatic album as well. In January of 1980, we'd had enough of EMI and had found a get-out clause in the contract so we said goodbye. What was expected of us was that we'd play the Electric Ballroom and present our greatest hits that we'd never had; the most popular numbers, and some record companies would come along and give us another deal and we'd go back to the same thing. We'd had three years of that, and didn't want more."

— "We made everything up in five days specifically for the show. It was a much more anarchic version of the Jeanetta Cochran show from November '79 (when all four presented a solo piece before regrouping for the second half; Wire's only 12-inch release Crazy About Love, released from a Peel session, was an excerpt from the show.) I remember one eyewitness present saying he thought it was an incredibly violent event, as if we were pulling it out. There was that intense edge."

— Colin: "It was very much of its time to do something like that, to reject certain formats. People were talking about it, anyway, but not really doing it. We've always taken the time as it were."

— Graham: "At the time, it was a lot of people spouting a lot of alternative politics and building healthy careers out of it."

— Colin: "In hindsight, it was a farewell concert of a kind."

— Bruce: "But certainly around the time of Document we hadn't had it in mind not to make any more Wire records. It was a time for people to get things off their chests and fulfill projects, and we were very supportive of each other in that happening."

— I could ask you about your solo records (Colin, four albums; Graham/Bruce, eight albums as Dome, Mzui, Duet Emmo and P'o; Graham alone as He Said, one album; Bruce alone, one album . . .!) if you'd like. You might need your sleeping bags.

— Graham: "That's what I was thinking this morning — I thought, 'no, no, perhaps not!'"

Quiphola

Snakey G lends you his ears and maybe even his Brylcreem . . .

One of the best gigging bands on London's pub circuit is Thee Mighty Caesars. Big Beat has their new album Live In Rome, and it's pretty damn good. Punk fans may be impressed to know that there are cover versions of '77 classics Neat Neat Neat and Submission, and they're brilliant - order yourself a copy now!

Thee Caesars, as you probably know, features ex-Prisoner Graham Day, but what of those other lags? Jamie Taylor and Alan Crockford have shown up in the James Taylor Quartet which also features Jamie's brother David on loan from the constantly improving Daggermen. Their debut 45 was reviewed last ish and there's an interview with them in Get Smart. The record has got DJ John Peel worked up to a frenzy, listen out for a soon to be recorded session.

The Long Ryders, now signed to Island, have their much celebrated debut EP from 1983 re-released on Zippo. Titled 10.5.60, it includes an extra track The Trip which wasn't on the original U.S. release.

Nervous Records, who've just stuck out The Mystery Men EP by Torment, have another batch of rockin' recordings about to be un-leashed. The Get Smart LP mentioned last month has been held up, but should be out soon. There are also albums by The Pharaohs and Skitzo to follow and The Pharaohs' LP is preceded by a 12 inch. There is also talk of a compilation of current US rockabilly acts (including The Jackals) for later in the year.

Media Burn seem to have fallen out with their distributors. Although their back catalogue will remain available through Rough Trade, all new releases will be with Red Rhino. First release under their new deal is the mini album by Ug & The Cavemen. That will be closely followed by a 12 inch single and the debut album from The Purple Things - which has been described as awesome by those who've heard the tapes. The much-prized, lost The Milkshakes Vs The Prisoners LP, recorded live in 1984 (in the studio) with each combo taking a side, receives an official release. Test pressings, of which only 25 were made before the album was withdrawn in its first incarnation, have been selling for £30 each but now Media Burn make it available at a price that everyone can afford.

Finally from Media Burn, I hear that cave-teen band Ug & The Cavemen may be teaming up with long time fan Screaming Lord Sutch to do some recording. Should be interesting to say the least!

Apologies to The Bugs whose name was spelt as The Bigs in last month's Quipola. If you haven't yet got hold of their debut single, Leavin' Here on Hit Records, I suggest you do so, sharpish.

Hottest new band I've seen this year is the three girls and three guys set up of The Grizzelders, who played on a bill with the thaumaturgic Nigel Lewis and The Purple Things recently. Expect a feature next month.

The old Sting-rays have been a bit quiet of late, I thought, so I rang Bal and asked for the lowdown - but he had a bad back, so I settled for a chat instead. He tells me their new LP Coffee Time In Cryptic should be out on Kaleidoscope by the time you get around to reading this. Also, they've been having talks with Big Beat Records about a Best Of album for the autumn.

ID Records slipped out a crafty compilation album at the beginning of the month when nobody was looking. It's titled The James Deans Of The Dole Queue (A Rockabilly Revolution). There's 20 tracks by, among others, The Caravans, The Lonestars, The Wigsville Spliffs and Boz Boorer (incidentally, Boz produced the whole thing as well as having a track on it, what a trooper).

Stop press: Big Beat are releasing the new Living In Texas album in June.

I have a small pile of t-shirts here that have been sent in as promotion items, and I want to give them away. They include Torment, The Meteors, The Milkshakes (etc). So let's have a Competition! The best drawing of a Quipola type band or band member wins the artist the parcel of goodies. Send your etchings to Snakey G's Quipola Competition, Underground Magazine, Spotlight Publications Ltd, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ. Competition ends June 1, winner announced in the July issue.

AAAAAGH! CHAKK. CHAKK. CHAKK. CHAKK

So profoundly cosmic and ultra-trendy is the FON label that they've released Chakk's latest thang, Time-bomb, in about 50 different formats. Actually, there's a seven inch (for people with small record players), a 12 inch (called Jack The Bomb, because Jack rhymes with Chakk), a 12 inch remix (because they got it wrong first time around) and a spesh multi-track which has all the usual cuttin' bits so that you can "get loose" to it (it also comes with Mozzarella and extra mushrooms, I think).

Anyway, so well off are FON that they have five sets of Chakk Time- bomb to give away absolutely free if you can answer one simple question on one simple postcard (or on the back of one simple envelope). Having wisely called the label FON, managing director and style "guru" Amrik Rai forgot what those three little letters stood for. Does anyone out there know? We here at Ug! believe that one of the words is a swear word. Still, that's rockin' roll. Innit? Send the solution to this funky teaser or suggest what FON should stand for to Underground/FON, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 to arrive no later than four o'clock in the morning on May 7.

those perfect popsters with groovy vocals

MEET

those imperfect strummers with skeletons in their closet

After months of speculation over journalists being in groups, like Ralph Traitor being a Barracuda, like David Swift being a Razorcut, Underground teams up with Frank Worrell Boxing Promotions and brings Cath Carroll of Miaow/NME fame into the arena to interview The Hit Parade's Julian Henry, while Henry, a writer for this fabbo mago, replies by interviewing Cath in her guise as Miaow. Confused? Then read on . . .

Tell the readers who you are Cath – free-loading pop hack or millionaire recording star? “Ummm, neither actually, but Miaow are about two thousand times more important to me than rock journalism is, if that’s what you mean. Writing for the NME is something that I do for a living, and it’s quite natural if you think about it. If you love music it seems an obvious thing to do, to write about the groups you come across.” Has it been helpful to you as Miaow? “Definitely not. People might think that there’s an advantage and that doors mysteriously start opening if you work for a music paper, but that’s not the case. People come to our concerts because they’ve heard the single, and DJ’s like John Peel support us because he likes the record, not because I work at the NME.”

“I sometimes get comments at gigs like ‘NME hack – tosser’.” How many fans do you have? Are there such things as Miaow groupies? “We get people coming to talk to us, but there aren’t many who do things like fling their knickers on stage which is a bit unfortunate as I’m a bit short of underwear at the moment – I’m medium by the way readers.” But, really, Cath, do you think you have a right to foist your opinions on to punters in print? “Most certainly. If you have a space that people are going to read it’s important to fill it with your world view. I do regret giving some people bad reviews though, I’m sometimes ashamed of being so flippant. I look at some of my old reviews from when I first started writing and I feel quite embarrassed at how childish and pathetic they were, like I used to really slag off Factory when I was writing for a fanzine in Manchester, and now Miaow have signed to them. In hindsight, it feels so stupid to have written those things without being completely aware of the people I was criticising.”

Sentimental: it’s not a flattering way to describe a romantic flipster. It invites visions of decrepits trundling amok in bathchairs, their needles stuck in the groove of rheumy-eyed ramblings about a past gilded and rosy. Meet Julian Henry . . . ha, ha, ha. Hey, come on, oh life and soul of The Hit Parade, give me some attitude. “Hello.” The release of Hit Parade records seems to be locked into the same cosmic programme that relentlessly releases the seasons (pre-Chernobyl, that is . . .). One’s past always catches up with one. I Get So Sentimental was recorded a year ago, the sixth self-financed single on Julian’s own JSH label, with, thankfully, Master Henry doing most of the warbling. It had seemed a contender for a place in some dusty vault but then Red Rhino came to the aid of JSH records and catapulted the darn thang into the lap of your local indie dealer. ● Sentimental is an uptempo toe-tapper – jaunty even – belying the nature of the song . . . the abandoning of the self to a mindlife of bygones. And that past has been coloured by a particular obsession. Joanna, yes, six seven inch outbursts fawning over a young lady, Julian, are you still whinging on about this Medusa of the soul?

“Ah, all things come to an end. The new songs are about different things. The easiest thing in the world is to write songs about such an obsession, it’s much harder to write about less personal matters.” Hit Parade compositions strike a sort of semi-detached Scott Walker mood, coloured by the pathos beloved of singer-songwriters who compose on an upright piano. Julian has endured years of pining away in a lonesome bedsit but has decided it’s time for a change. I was pulled in off the street and made to talk to him. The penalty for non-co-operation? A weekend in a cramped cell with all his ruddy Jam LP’s. ● But Julian, I hear you’re writing songs with an ex-member of Serious Drinking; albeit the one who wrote Carmel’s More, More, More. “Indeed, and it’s a great honour. I met him at a club in Frith St. The first words I wrote for him were rejected because they were too Gilbert O’Sullivan-ish. It was going to be a song for Wendy May to sing, something more aggressive, along the lines of Get Your Feet Out Of My Shoes.” And why did you decide to have a female singing on your own records? “On certain songs, the feel was better. If it hadn’t been a female, maybe a man with a foreign accent.” It’s obvious the JSH backbone is Julian’s songwriting, and various musicians and vocalists have been brought in to work on releases. But which is more fun, The Hit Parade or journo-dom? “There’s no contest! It’s down to what comes naturally. Songs come much easier than reviews. When you’re writing you have to be tactful and constructive plus you have some bastard breathing down your neck!” Don’t expect to be in a job when some bastard reads this, then. (Henry . . . you’re fired – ed)

FACT FUN: The Hit Parade’s sixth single, I Get So Sentimental, is out now on JSH (it features Cath Carroll on vocals), Miaow’s second 45 When It All Comes Down is scraping the bottom end of the big boy charts and it’s on Factory (it doesn’t feature Julian Henry on anything). This has been a public health warning. H Carpenter

Spring may well be here, but that, nor reputed mass major interest, is enough to stop Keith Shepherd of mega blues wailin' HOWLIN' WILF AND THE VEEJAYS from swanning off to sunny Antigua for a month's break from the band's hectic live schedule. They'll be back with a bang next month...

It seems like Sixties Soul is definitely going to be the sound of the summer. What with countless reissues clawing their way up the national charts and some rather embarrassing covers by the likes of Boy George and Nick Kamen, it seems rather appropriate that there is a soulful slant to this month's column... Peter Young's popular Soul Cellar programme is back on the airwaves every Sunday night from 9 till 10. On London Capital Radio's medium wavelength, it features a selection of rare and enjoyable vintage Soul sounds.

Guernsey highly acclaimed modernists THE RISK, whose album Loud Shirts And Stripes was released on Unicorn in March, have split because frontman Mark Le Gallez is going to live over on the West Coast. The band toured California last summer and he was so taken by it he's decided to quit blighty for good!... THE JAZZ RENEGADES, the highly acclaimed combo based around former Style Councillor Steve White and ex-Tommy Chase tenor man Alan Barnes, have split recently to enable Whit to re-join Weller and Co on the Council's tour of Japan. The Renegades, whose Tokio High album was recorded on their own Japanese tour earlier in the year, are fretting over the fact that it's not to be released in the UK. Nevertheless, import copies should hopefully become available...

The strangely named Re Elect The President label are following up their recent Smashing Time compilation with another collection of mod/garage faves. This one, titled For Your Ears Only, features THE DAGGERMEN, MAKIN' TIME, THE CRAWDADDYS and THE CREEPS (who had their own album Enjoy The Creeps released this month) among others, and is set for release on the 5th of May.

The 6T's Rhythm and Soul Club, London's premier patron of the Northern Soul allnighter, has announced massive queues and record attendances of late, the biggest in fact since the Club was formed some eight years ago, and has had to revert to a 'members only' policy. For membership details and future swingin' allnighter dates send an SAE to Flat 5, 52, Langham St, London, W1... THE JAMES TAYLOR QUARTET are back in town for some gigs and a Peel session to promote their forthcoming 12" mini-album of TV and film themes. Among those rumoured to get the Taylor treatment are Alfie, the Parkinson show, the Money Programme, Sale of the Century(?) and the title track Mission Impossible. Catch them live if you get the chance! Those charismatic Jones brothers, Mike and Nick, who have been out of the public eye since the split of THE PLAYN JAYN over a year ago, have at last got a new band together. Called, surprisingly enough, THE JAYN, they are a five piece with the same kind of sound as their predecessors and will be gigging soonest...

Feelin' groovy

The James Taylor Quartet play liquid organ, Julian Henry breaks into spontaneous jiving...

The current headquarters for The James Taylor Quartet is Stockholm, where JT himself is hunkered down at his Hammond organ, slogging his way through a jazz music course at the Swedish University. Why so?

"Well, they seem to have really good jazz clubs here, and it gives me a chance to play and work at music that I really enjoy."

JT used to be in The Prisoners. "That was good fun, but after a few years you start to wonder where you're heading."

The debut James Taylor Quartet 45 is Blow Out, a paint-peeling instrumental that has "hit" written all over it in big letters. "We recorded it using five microphones, it took just one take, so it's got a good feel," recalls James. "We had all these engineers around saying we should have digital delays on this, and extra tracks to overdub that, it didn't need any of that."

UK dates for the Quartet are currently being arranged by their record label and a recently recorded John Peel session is soon to be broadcast on Radio One. What's more, the combo will have a mini-LP out on Re-Elect The President later this month, further details from Re-Elect The President Records, PO Box 35, Woodford Green, Essex. IG8 9BA.

Well done to Jimmy Cannon from Maida Vale, who entered the first correct answer to last month's little poser. Yep, Maxwell Smart (whom this column was named after, incidentally) was an American secret agent in the '60s cult TV show Get Smart...

Jimmy chose Acropolis Now by THEE MIGHTY CAESARS for his free LP. This month's question has been set by Harboro' Horace and is appropriately soul orientated: Who was Maxine Brown's male duet partner? Answers on a postcard to Felix c/o Underground, and the first one gets the Kent LP of their choice.

Signing off on a lighter note this month, Eleanor Rigby, the 'Queen Of The Mods', was recently offered a cool million pounds by a seedy Japanese paper to remove even more of her clothing. An embarrassed Miss Rigby (that is her real name actually!) turned down the offer point blank and released a new single instead... A jolly good thing too!... Bye for now, and don't forget to keep those letters pouring in...

The King Of Luxembourg, that royal rock person, releases his debut LP Royal Bastard on El Records this month. We sent his holier-than-thouness back to school to answer a simple exam paper on pop (and other associated diseases).

Examiner: Carol Linfield

PAPER: THE ROLE OF THE LUXEMBOURG MONARCH WITHIN POPULAR MUSIC Part 2.

Answer all questions clearly and precisely. You have one hour and a half after turning over the paper. Begin.

1 "The role of the cover version in pop music is of limited value and restricts new development." Discuss.

I suppose the only really good reason for doing cover versions is that it saves me from writing songs myself. I just can't be bothered. Clovis (my chauffeur) and I spend a lot of time travelling abroad and, to be frank, I haven't the time. I mean, that George pop person has got time on his hands, he doesn't need to sing old stuff. Lazy sod. ● I suppose as well it's an excuse to meet the writers. I haven't met Brian Jones yet, but then I haven't recorded any of his songs. I have met that Rotten chap though. Met him in a Casablanca back street. We had a riot. Charming man. Interested in property, like myself. ● Also, of course, the cover version gives one a good excuse to bugger up someone else's song, which is nice. Rip it to shreds, I say. Turn it upside down. Ruin it.

2 Poptones by the King Of Luxembourg and by PiL are different treatments of one song. Compare and contrast these two versions.

PiL's rendition of Poptones was a perfect example of a good song changed dramatically by the musicians, who had obviously imbibed huge quantities of lager. My version was recorded under the delicate influence of the finest champagne, with a string quartet and large selections of cheeses from France. I've always admired Keith Levine, too. We once exchanged glances over a supermarket shelf in '77. ● I nearly did Carreering by PiL, but the lyrics for Poptones are, quite frankly, wonderful, and sum up a lot of feelings I couldn't even begin to describe. Also, there is a tune in Poptones. I know, I found it.

3 John enters a branch of W H Smith to purchase a single. He has 42/6d. A single costs 18/5d, unless it is an extended remix 12 inch, in which case it costs 21/11d. John would like to buy mostly 12 inchers, but wants maximum singles for his money. How many King Of Luxembourg singles can he buy, why should he buy these over and above other singles, and why is he using old money?

Who the hell is John? Clovis deals with all my day to day finances, so I'm afraid buying singles comes under petty cash. I never carry it. Plastic yes, or gold, or if pushed, I suppose diamonds. ● I can however always recommend that people buy 12-inchers, because they always contain extra goodies. My Dorian 45 had no less than four extra tracks, unavailable anywhere else, too. I tend to use up the space with brilliant instrumentals, and more cover things. I always give value for money. ● I have shared a 12 inch before. A rarity! That was Straits Of Malaca and it was on the innovative pop label El. Anthony Adverse was the other chap. I did a Bid song (whatever a bid song is) and a Betjamen poem, How To Get On In Society. Brilliant Man. I did meet him at the Chatsworth wedding yonks ago. ● Valleri, my last 45, was similarly brilliant, with a jolly decent b-side, too. But don't bother to get it. You can't. Sold out. Millions. Big in Brazil, I hear. ● The Prince 12-inchers are always a lot of fun. They're very similar to mine, always extra tracks. He's one of us, you know.

4 $7x + 53 - y = 72$ Find the value of x , y , and pop music.

Clovis tells me the first part of this is a red herring. Maths and algebra just aren't my forte I'm afraid. You'll be asking me how much is in my account next or whether I know any heiresses. (The answers to that are I don't know but there are a lot of noughts, and yes, of course I do.) ● What pop isn't is this. Mel And Kim, Bowie, all bands on thrash-thrash guitars with hopeless or no tunes, and none of this bonking, out of tune mess. Bad haircuts don't help, either. ● What pop is is this. Harmonies, production, first takes, decent tunes, lyrics. You need to have class, breeding, and stunning musicians on huge wages. Prince and I are pop. That's the rub. We're both handsome (essential), talented (vastly) and rich (fact). A Tall One from Australia are good as are all my colleagues on El. Pop is playing a record over and over again, never getting bored, always being thrilled and excited. ● Clovis, the door.

FAST FIRM IX

Def? You will be. Wildman DJ Paul Howard guides you through the latest irritating Mahesh compilations and other new releases from both sides of the pond.

The question of the month, who are the JAMS? The current favourite in the rumour stakes is a certain manager of Echo And The Bunnymen, whoever they might have been. King Boy D, time to stand up. As a DJ I tend to find compilations irritating, and the more up to date they are the more irritating they are. You hack around the record stores, spend fifty quid on ten imports and then a week later you can get them all in Woolies for £6.50. The desperate drive to be hip gets more expensive every week.

Morgan Khan's efforts never really used to bother me as Streetwave was never really up to date. Then came Mahesh, who was irritatingly up to date with his Up Front series. Serious Hip Hop 2 was pretty good, though you could safely be smug about it. Saturday Night by Schooly D has been out since late November and Scott La Rock's The Bridge Is Over, DJ Polo's It's A Demo and Sugar Sugar's New Girl In Town have all been around for at least two months. It's very nice to see something English on that album, too. Junior Gee's Terminator is a prime track, and it's especially enjoyable to hear The Hard Rock Soul Movement back with an as yet unreleased track, Elaweaser Just A Skeezer.

As I say, all very irritating, but not half as irritating as the new compilation Def Beats 1 from Music Of Life. I hate it when I'm forced to buy a record, but as five of the ten tracks haven't even been released in the States at this time, this is a fairly essential waxing. Even the old stuff is hot, like The Vicious Rumours Club's Zep cover Whole Lotta Love, which gets a lateish release in the UK as a single in its own right at the same time. I even heard it on Mike Smith's normally ultra-bland, sorry groovy Breakfast Show, so there's hope for us all. The Microphone Prince's Who's The Captain? is the other essential oldie. If you haven't yet heard it, it's the kind of thing you either love or hate. I love it.

Slyder D's My Whole Life Flashed is hot, out three weeks on import by the time you read this. And good to see Derek B's Rock The Beat, another English boy making good by making good records. Other favourite tracks at the moment have got to be The Bluz Bros (by The Bluz Brs) and the excellent My Beat by James MC, which slyly reworks the bassline from Razze's Jack The Groove. This isn't even available in the States yet, so if you want it, this album's the only place to be.

As this seems to be album month, here are a few more to be going on with. The new Sly Ann Robbie Rhythm Killers LP is a heavy contender for record of the year, with Bill Laswell, Bootsy, Shinehead, DST, Half Pint and Rammellzee. I'd need a whole page to do this justice, but suffice to say, there isn't a dull moment. My only criticism is there just isn't enough of it. Time for the first 20 inch.

Still shifting units in New York is the Slatsalonic album On Fire, it's been out three months, but it's still moving. Newer and hotter out from the US Def Jam label is the MC Chuckie's Public Enemy Jam. This should be due for a UK release soon, though I've no confirmation of this. Why do Def Jam have their stuff on import for so long before releasing it here? It can't do their sales over here any good.

I'm running out of space now, so take my word and check these — Charlie Rock And Darnolds Rock 'n' Roll Dude, on Select (also on Serious Hip Hop 2), the excellent Chrical 2's New Generation with romantically dubbed flip She's A Freakdog, and a three track EP with Wanda's Chalice. And finally, everybody's favourite boot of the moment, Cold Cut's Hey Kids, What Time Is It? is easier to get here than in the States. Why? Because it's by a London club DJ. Well done that man.

Renegade Soundwave: spotlight

the sound of fists exploding

Renegade Soundwave came from the much touted Jackal of last year. Their first single for Rhythm King is nasty and reasonably controversial. Backbeat grinding noises and the story of the Kray Twins. Ronnie Randall finds out about the second East End rise.

The Kray Twins were Britain's first, if not only, designer criminals. Their cultured violence and powerful stylish image soon became promoted and packaged with pop star, celebrity glamour. So why not a song about them? • Renegade Soundwave's Kray Twins on Rhythm King is a fast action cut-up TV documentary thang with a throbbing beat.

It would be easy to class them slowed down Beastie Boys, but the sound is far harder and genuinely threatening. The trio are toweringly proud of their London upbringing and won't listen to insinuations that their sound is anything other

▽ B SIDE OF THE MONTH: She's A Freak Dog by The Classical Two ▽

Last month, when Underground One hit the streets, Tackhead had a demo they were touting around; by the time you read this their single, The Game, will have been out for a fortnight. In a business where it customarily takes up to three months just to get a contract out of the hands of the lawyers, it is a measure of the excitement that this outfit have created and the hunger for their product that The Game has reached vinyl so quickly. If they had the same kind of objectives as, say, Curiosity Killed The Cat they would probably rule the world. Unfortunately their background only involves producing superb dance records rather than poncing drinks and brown-nosing in the Soho Brasserie → Tackhead are a lot more than they seem from whichever way you look at them; who's doing the vocal on The Game? Brian Moore, he's hardly the king of hip-hop, but then again does an electro go-go beat with crashing heavy metal guitar and the whole of the Kop chanting "You'll never walk alone" sound like an average dance record? → Then there's the band itself. The name Keith Leblanc probably rings a bell – he did the epoch making Malcolm X, and with other Tackhead members Doug Wimbish and Skip Macdonald he was the kingpin of the Sugarhill house band, doing the difficult bits on records like Rapper's Delight, The Message and White Lines. → While Adrian Sherwood's On-U Label has been responsible for releasing a host of minor classics – Oh yes, he's Tackhead – the Tackhead tentacles spread far and deep. → So, what does the future hold for Tackhead? Their first album is on the way, it's called Friendly As A Handgrenade. They are playing live at the Astoria on April 30, that's their first ever live outing as a "band", where they'll be supported by the ultra weird Mark Stewart And The Maffia, and if the two bands look similar, don't be surprised, the Maffia are the radical manifestation of, yes, you guessed it, Tackhead. Small world innit?

than totally original. They have a point. • "We're a by-product of punk. It forged the way we think, though the sound is nothing to do with it. It's the attitude that's still relevant. You live your life by it. Punk was an attitude beyond the music. Those who later claimed the image didn't understand that. The uniformed haircuts of today are yesterday's hippies. New music is always about youth culture, and currently that's all relevant to computer technology and imagery. There's a new revolution on the horizon and hip-hop is its birth. • Hip-hop was happening in New York while punk was at its height here. What we're getting now is a clash, a blending of the two. In New York they're much more open to other forms of music. It isn't ghetto-ised. You'll hear metal at a rap club, Jim Morrison at the disco." • So are you a New York sound? But evolved in London? • "No, we don't close our ears to the world of music, we gather sounds from all over. It's a world of instant communication, how can you ignore it? If we just listened to what was happening in London we'd be turning out nothing at all. • But what we end up with is essentially the London experience." • And Kray Twins emphasises those roots. A fine London subject. "Kray Twin terrorising, television's plugged in/Reggie's lost control/I wouldn't tell you lies/No-one questioned me since 1960." • "It's not just about the Krays, it's about us, which is more important. The music speaks for itself, we don't need a gimmick to get attention. The Krays are just subject matter, an important element in our make up. We're not attempting to condone violence, but at the same time we realise that it exists in all of us. We're London boys making hardcore London music, nothing to do with anything that's gone before. It's here and now, the sound is fresh, we use the tools of the trade to create the atmosphere of the subject." • Bullets, breaking bottles, explosions.

The whole is a collection, a collage of cross references and flash freezes. • "We're reflecting our identity and capturing it in the music. A violent sound for a violent situation." • Seductive too. • East End Rise – check their debut 45 on Rhythm King. Kray Twins terrorise, gets categorised and spread the word. Already the big boys are shrieking at the Soundwave potential. Don't miss this one.

We're back and full of news and rumours, some good, some not so good, some just downright puzzling... For example, how come arch-bore Huey Lewis is up in the US singles charts with Jacob's Ladder? I thought that was a non-charting classic by the late and much (etc) Monochrome Set, odd... On the subject of the M Set, it should be noted that ex-Settie Lester Square is about to release an album with his band The Invisible on the Midnight Music label, one to watch out for... Highly rated contemporaries of the world's finest psych/surf band The RayBeats, The Fleshtones have a new album Fleshtones Vs Reality out on Emergo Records, and that's well worth a listen... Already reviewed but now really and truly available is the album Guitars Of The Ocean by the Honolulu Mountain Daffodils, a very odd and very fine record indeed on Hybrid through Pinnacle. Definitely surf, but rather more angst-ridden than one might expect, and why not? There are a couple of interesting items from the Decal label (catalogue numbers begin with Lik, for all you Beefheart fans). They've collected the first three Country Joe EPs onto a single album with other collectors' items and put out a Nuggets/Pebbles style compilation of '60s Deram recordings. Not to be outdone, the boys at Bam Caruso have taken the odd step of issuing an LP with one side by The Chicaynes and the other by The Patriots. Good idea really... My faves, The Beat Poets looking likely to sign to a leading Scottish indie very soon... Robyn Hitchcock has completed a highly successful tour of Europe so now will play a proper British tour? We hope so, but don't hold out much hope. The Droogs, America's greatest garage band, look likely to come over this summer. They played one date last summer in London, it was a glorious occasion and should be repeated, preferably on a daily basis... In the meantime they have an album available on the German Music Maniac label (which is traceable through the Cartel in the UK). That's about it for this issue, more news and innuendo next time...

Bambi Slam flaunt their trusty crowbar, Martin Aston holds the fuse wire

● There's a good story that climaxes and goes BAMP! BAMP!, so stick around. Then it asks, Don't It Make You Feel?

● It begins in Pickering, a suburb of Toronto, Canada, with Roy Feldon. "Pickering's a bedroom community, all the parents go out to work, so there's a mall, a Burger King, and a McDonalds and that's it, nowhere else to work."

● "All the way through high school, I tried to get a band going. There was one bass player but he played like Japan, and all the drummers were like 75-piece Van Halen roll guys, so I left home when I was 18 and went to California. It was skateboarding heaven there."

● "I had a bunch of songs all this time. I figured I'd go to England because I was born in Ashton-under-Lyme, near Manchester, so I could work there. When I got here, I didn't know anybody, I had two bags and two guitars, and it was hell."

● Cue violins. Get out your Kleenex.

● "I found a squat two days later, and Nick lived next door, he could play drums — well he had played when he was little, but we couldn't find a bass player so I just phoned Natalie who lived across the street from me in Pickering and said 'Do you want to come over to England and learn how to play bass?'"

● So it was as simple as that. A love of classical music led to an ad in The Royal Academy for a cellist, Linda answered: "She was obviously looking for something else in her life."

● This was April 1986, and Bambi Slam was born. Few gigs at first due to a lack of enthusiasm for the five bands on in two hours with a crappy PA syndrome, eventually led Roy to the old Dickie Dirts building which was derelict. "It used to be the old Camberwell Odeon, too. I don't know why I was there but I was blown away! It was bigger than the Hammersmith Odeon! The sound was so beautiful."

● "I needed a band who had a single out who could bring some people down because Bambi Slam had never played and nobody would have come, so I was given a number and I met World Domination Enterprises and they were into things like that. We had to get a generator, PA and lights and then we did 2000 handouts and we got about 300 people. We played there three times, they were just the most amazing shows." So, enterprise is not dead.

● "The police came down once at about one o'clock and the disco was on the PA, we said 'all the bands have finished, we're almost done' and they were pretty cool because everything else around there is so heavy, and this was nothing."

● Eventually, though, they boarded it up again.

● So is that what Bambi Slam exist for, Roy? Why are you doing this?

● "Why am I doing this? Because I didn't hear anything at all, up until the Mary Chain, that I wanted to hear. I wanted a big beat with guitars and melodies and there was nothing like that. There were melodies with synths, drippy-dross things, or heavy metal which hadn't progressed from Led Zep or Black Sabbath. Nobody was taking guitars further than The Clash and The Sex Pistols had done."

● "What we're doing is trying to take a lot of risks, that's why things have gone so well. I think risks are excitement and excitement is interesting. Our first gigs at Dickie Dirts, the generator would go out and there'd be 300 people in the pitch-black, it was insane, and Natalie, she's only been playing bass for ten months. Nick's only been drumming for a year, so it's really shaky live. It could fall apart."

● And the climax? Well, part one snook out on Product Inc and lodged itself at the right end of the Independent chart. That was Bamp Bamp. Hot on its heels is Don't It Make You Feel?

● Do you need any more excuses to go and crank up the generator? I think not!

Andrew Poppy

But is it art?

Andrew Poppy's guide to noise as dictated to Alex Bastedo.

TV, to his solo work since 1984 for those flash yet exquisitely tasteful buggers at ZTT Records.

He also reaches a million homes a week with his theme piece for The Tube.

March saw the release of an entertaining electro romp of a single in The Amusement, while April brings his second solo LP, A Mystery Dance. Both are fine examples of Poppy's considerable musical skills, suggesting a careful yet still truly experimental approach to his work.

In interview, his is the voice of Trevor Brooking-like methodical reasoning, in contrast to the Mike Chandonnesque madness of too many of our brash pop kids. But for a change, let's wander through the musical no-man's land of namedrop city and find out what these odd names mean to him in terms of fave LPS.

GUSTAV MAHLER: All symphonies and song cycles, but especially Kindertotenlieder (Song Of The Death Of Children).

PHILIP GLASS: Music In Fifths and everything up to and including Einstein On The Beach.

KARLHEINZ STOCKHAUSEN: Particularly Song Of Youth, an electronic piece from the late 1950's which is based on one boy's voice, and also a piece for three orchestras entitled Gruppen.

STEVE REICH: The early pieces like Piano Phase and the later Tahilim.

CHARLES IVES: Apparently the most successful insurance businessman at the time of the Wall Street Crash who wrote music as a hobby. A lot of his music is crazy but brilliant.

THELONIOUS MONK: His individualistic piano style and technique is simply amazing.

CHARLIE MINGUS: I find him more interesting than someone like Ellington with his arrangement and relationship between composition and improvisation. One favourite is Black Saint Sinner Lady.

FELA KUTI: If we're talking 'jazz' then I have to give him a mention as well.

The 1980's have seen many examples of ANDREW POPPY's work on record, from being a founder member of Euro-avant gardists Lost Jockey, to arrangements for rock renegades such as Psychic

Someone who has been around the reggae scene since at least the beginning of the present decade but only came properly into his own last year is singer Echo Minott (Noel Phillips). During 1986 he enjoyed popular success with his recordings for the Black Scorpio label like Lazy Body and Bubbling Style, as well as the memorable Uncle Sam Country for Harry J, all culminating in his big hit towards the end of last year with What The Hell . . ., a song which provoked a spate of answer records on the same theme. Now he has rejoined his first producer Prince Jammy for a latest title Emanuel Road (Live & Love LLD36), a reworking of a ring tune popular among generations of Jamaican schoolchildren. When top North London sound Unity played a slate of this at a dance a couple of months back, it tore up the session like no other tune that night. From the same stable upcoming artist Pinchers follows up his recent reggae chart topper Agony (Live & Love LLDIS0029) with a further slack reflection Sit Down Pon It (Live & Love LLDIS0032). And issued on disco for the first time is that singer's Me Love Me Like Me Enjoyment (John Dread JDPD007), previously available only as an LP track. Another Jammy's production that has been garnering steady sound system interest, particularly among the Coxsones massive, is Super Black's melodic Rambo which is now issued coupled with Don Angelo reworking Delroy Wilson for Can't Conquer Me (Live & Love LD1T). Also from Jammy's busy studio comes two titles on the new Super Power label: Little Twitch, Were You Size c/w Devil Send You Come (SDP 01) and Johnny Clarke, Rock This Yah One (SDP 02). Further grist to the mill in the propaganda war currently being waged by the African National Congress is provided by Carlene Davis on a paean to Winnie Mandela (Greensleeves GRED 210) and Hugh Griffiths who insists Free Mandela (Coxsones pre). Also new from Brentford Road is Dobby Dobson with All I Can

Echo Minott in customary hoe-down pose

Say Is Goodbye (Studio One pre) and Frankie Paul riding the Full Up rhythm for Rub A Dub With Feeling c/w Jennifer Lara, I Can't Take It Anymore (Studio One disco pre). While on the Ottey's disco imprint Mr Paul is joined by Joe Lick Shot for Dance Caan Nice Wid-Out Wi. Other new discomix include: Sugar Minott, Seven Times Rise And Fall c/w Flick Wilson, Water Shortage (Legal Light LL007); Conrod Crystal, True Love c/w Triston Palmer, Good Looking Baby (Legal Light LLD008); the follow-up to her Knight In Shining Armour hit from Deborah Glasgow with a version of the Phyllis Dillon rock steady tune Don't Stay Away (UK Bubblers UKMC 23); and in response to Boy George's recent Number One, Trojan have issued a three track Ken Boothe disco in their Reggae Classics series featuring Everything I Own, Crying Over You and (It's The Way) Nature Planned It (CLASSY 3). EVELYN COURT

Out this month is the latest edition of the longest established reggaezine of them all, Small Axe. Issue 24 is billed as a Seattle Special and features a series of interviews conducted in the city with The Gladiators, Ini Kamoze, Yabby You and Don Carlos during their package tour of the States together last year. The Yabby You interview, in particular, is one of the most revealing he has ever given. Also included in the 44-page booklet is the usual comprehensive guide to the current crop of dancehall and roots albums with some 40 odd reviewed in all. Price is £1 inc p&p from Muzik Tree, PO Box 11, London E16 3UA. Evelyn Court

VINYL LUST WITH A DANCE BEAT

Evelyn Court fills the Factofile on behalf of seminal Brum reggae label Black Wax and traces its formative days.

THE REGGAE renaissance of the mid-70s wrought a significant change on the industry as a whole. It was during this time that the stranglehold of B&C/Trojan and Pama—who between them had up until then more or less controlled reggae music in this country and exerted much influence on its direction — was effectively challenged by the more vibrant roots sounds issuing from independent one man operations like Magnet, Count Shelley and Dip.

★ One such was Black Wax operating out of a record store in Lozells, Birmingham. During its brief existence between 1975-6 the outlet was responsible for releasing some 60 titles on its Black Wax and subsidiary Locks and Mango labels, a number of which are sought after still.

★ Of course anything by Junior Byles is worth at least a hearing and his two Black Wax titles Chant Down Babylon (WAX15) and Pitchy Patchy (WAX17) resulting from his brief intercourse with the Ja-Man people are no exception. The ineffable former topped the Black Music reggae chart in June 1976 and was a benign slant on his own earlier Beat Down Babylon, Byles' first hit in 1973. This was not a mood he could seemingly sustain for long however and the other effort sees a more readily identifiable Byles living close to the edge, a characteristic it shares with other contemporary titles from the singer like The Long Way, Bur O Boy and I Wish It Would Rain.

★ The two tunes on the Black Wax label from The Mighty Diamonds are similarly admirable. One of the earliest of their Channel One sides, Country Living (WAX5) remains a poignant utterance and it was the Diamonds' adaptation of this song that was used as a model by Sandra Cross when her lovers rendition topped the Black Echoes reggae chart a year or so back. This was indeed The Mighty Diamonds' most creative period to date and their I Need A Roof (WAX13) for the same studio further consolidated their growing reputation for heartfelt harmonies.

★ Also well into his stride by now was Gregory Isaacs. His Sunshine For Me (WAX9) — also sometimes titled The Salary Is Thin (Roots From The Yard) — was a world weary Channel One production later toasted by Dillinger. Equally moving was the singer's Alvin Ranglin produced The Philistines (WAX19) pursuing familiar Isaacs themes.

strumental from The Rebels called Rhodesia (WAX16); Clive Hunt operating under the nom de guerre Lizard for his seminal Satta I (WAX14) and a stylish Delroy Wilson side Mother Nature (WAX20).

★ Perhaps the most popular Black Wax recording of them all though was Carl Malcolm's big novelty hit of summer 1975 Miss Wire Waist (WAX7), but which has not worn too well in the interim.

★ The Locks label engendered equally good if not even better material. The two Channel One titles which really brought The Mighty Diamonds to wider attention were both released on the imprint: their purposeful Right Time (LOX4), later the title of their first album released by Virgin, and the hard edged Back Weh (You A Mafia), also included on the same set.

★ There are in addition two interesting Levi Williams titles on Locks, Peaceful Rasta (LOX1) and the tuneful Come Mi Breda (LOX5); a pair too from dual voiced DJ Jah Woosh, who toasts Carl Malcolm's aforementioned Miss Wire Waist to hilarious effect on Shine Eye Girl (LOX7) and also turns in one of his most rabid performances ever for Natty Baldhead (LOX16).

★ Another powerful DJ tune on the label is Tapper Zukie's pious Judge I O Lord (LOX8), a cut of the Ronnie Davis chant Jah Jah Jehovah, itself a version of the Soul Vendors' celebrated Studio One rhythm Drum Song. There is also Jah Stitch toasting a typically gruff version of Errol Holt's Danger Zone for Danger Zone Chapter 3 (LOX13) and one from Errol Holt himself, Shark Out Deh (LOX17).

★ Also worthy on Locks are Leroy Smart's powerful message lyric Black Man (LOX2); Jacob Miller's adaptation of Bob Marley's Soul Rebel from I'm A Natty (LOX6); a brace of Upsetter sides, including the spirited Freedom Fighter (LOX11) from Bunny & Ricky (ie Bunny Maloney and Ricky Grant) and Devon Irons with When Jah Come (LOX14). Plus of course the record which remains perhaps my own personal favourite of any released via Black Wax, Silford Walker's blistering Burn Babylon (LOX9).

PAT KELLY: debut Black Wax 45

THE MIGHTY DIAMONDS: their most creative period to date

★ The most popular title on Black Wax's other subsidiary Mango and probably the company's biggest seller of them all was Madness (MAN1010) by The Mighty Maytones, the charm and rock steady overtones of which song belied its disturbing lyric from the country style vocal outfit long associated with producer Alvin GG Ranglin. The success of this enabled the group to release their first ever album also called Madness (Burning Sounds) and would likely still be a steady catalogue seller today were Black Wax still in existence.

★ Another vocal group effort on the Mango label which in my opinion surpasses that even of the Maytones recording is The Royals' memorable repatriation lyric Peace And Love (MAN1007), a superb song highlighting leader Roy Cousins' uncanny instinct for melody. Also of passing interest are Boston Brothers' Leave The Studio (MAN1001) and The Mello Lads with Chatty Chatty Mouth (MAN1003) from two vocal groups unheard of before or since.

★ The label was also responsible for introducing the debut recording of Yabby You protege Wayne Wade piping Black Is Our Colour (MAN1005) and resuming the career of Justin Hinds with Prophecy Must Fulfill (MAN1004). Another rock steady veteran with a title on Mango is Larry Marshall with Brand New Baby (MAN1006).

★ As with the Locks label, there was also a number of Upsetter recordings on Mango.

Two versions of Max Romeo's super-charged Sipple Out Deh were issued thus: James Brown's toast Stop The War In A Babylon (MAN1011) and Max Romeo's own reworking of the lyric, Fire Fe The Vatican (MAN1014). Also from the Black Art studio was issued Winston Heywood's Long Long Time (MAN1013).

★ Finally, there were two albums released on Black Wax: Prince Jazzbo's rare Upsetter set Natty Passing Thru (WAXLP1) and Jah Woosh's Psalms Of Wisdom (WAXLP2).

"This is what we call music"

Available from HMV, Virgin, Our Price, W.H.Smith and all decent record shops

Kirk Brandon has steered Spear of Destiny to Ten Records, has a new album Outlands out, and by the time you read this he'll have completed a rather large tour of the country. The new album shows a different side of Spear, some love it, some don't (check the reviews page). Is this the real Kirk Brandon emerging from behind the potted palm trees? He sips a glass of afternoon champagne and tells Alex Kadis a little bit about the world and its doomy future.

So, are you more together as a person?

"Yes, I think I probably am."

Paradoxically, Kirk's buoyancy is shrouded by the prophetic calling of Outlands. Vain hopes of Utopia are ruthlessly dashed, replaced by a harsh reality which offers small promise for the survival of humanity.

Why is the music so doomy?

"You know, sometimes, when you're writing, you step into the dark and as such it appears that you are writing from the dark. But it's strange because for some reason most of the music I like is such sad songs."

I spoke to an ex-Theatre Of Hate pal of yours recently. He says that you're too obsessed with thoughts apocalyptic. Is that true?

Kirk gets serious and pensive, a touch of melancholy replaces his usual grin.

"Well, I do genuinely feel that society is running away with itself. We're losing touch with our sense of humanity."

Do you feel that we're becoming too modernistic for our own good? "Definitely. Nothing is considered important if it exists beyond the city of London. London has become England."

Was that the impetus behind Land Of Shame?

"Yes, initially, but it moved on from being a comment on our society and government to something which I now believe is a far more worldwide issue."

Certain images on the album will surprise and shake people. For example, Whole World's Waiting depicts a woman squatting in a field giving birth.

"I know a lot of people will find that a horrible image. But it's natural. I wrote that to get that gut reaction out of people. We tend to be frightened of those things."

More now than ever before SOD's music is crammed with powerful and frightening concepts. Kirk's lyrics have taken the shape of a roving TV eye. Honest, if not a heap cynical, they scan the landscape of mankind and pay fleeting but effective visits on scenes, situations, relationships and experiences. A true change of direction or simply growing up? Whichever, the result is astounding. While arrogance has turned to a tender despair the old venom has re-emerged as the thoughts of an intelligent and studied character. Welcome to reality.

END IT ALL!

DROP THE BOMB!

Batfish Boys extol the virtues of Batfish Boys to Alex Kadis

"We're state of the art screaming metal."

So says Simon D, ex-March Violet, appropriate and present Batfish Boy. Drawing proudly and indiscriminately from a host of comparatively meagre influences, The Batfish Boys look set to rearrange the face of avant garde trash metal as we know it! Swallowing dust and coughing up razors they slice the nose off anarchy and pocket the switch-blade to boot. Vocalist Simon, bassist Bob, the guitar man Johnny and drum skelper Bomber undergo analysis.

You're not what I was expecting.

Simon: "You mean we're not all sleeping in the dressing room?"

Point taken. But let's not deny there is a contention between the pestilent screech of flayed guitars and lyrics that are... well... poetic.

Simon: "Our lyrics are intelligent and poetic but that's what we're about. We're not into singing about drugs, drink, women, bikes and more women."

On hearing this revelation drummer boy Bomber hands in his resignation. Do the BB's add another dimension to the concept of heavy rock?

Simon: "In a word, yes. People with brains like attractive lyrics and strong imagery. People with no brains like words that repeat themselves."

So do you attract the thinking element then?

Simon: "No, because basically there is no such thing. The record buying public aren't as dumb as the major record companies assume. There's a lot of discerning palates out there."

The BB's have a sense of humour as their latest single, The Bomb Song, a tongue in cheek representation of a serious issue, verifies. The group have been very productive in the past and for the gentle giants of ripped leather and dirty denim, the future's looking pretty good. They embark on a tour of Europe this month and return to raze the home turf thereafter.

Johnny: "And we may be involved in quite a legal dispute too..."

Simon: "Ah, yes, the next single. Can't say too much 'cause it's meant to be a secret except that it will amaze and astonish and kick certain people in the head - people who have been asking for it. It will make history!"

Whether they're making history or footprints in unsuspecting temples, The Batfish Boys are formidable adversaries. Prepare to splatter your brains whoever you are! Officer, pass the handcuffs.

Slayer prove just what nice boys they are. Can't really understand why they've had so much trouble getting a deal, really.

CARDBOARD BOX: [04] Terry And Gerry received an LP last year, complete the title From Clintwood To Lubbock...

It's reigning again. Slayer hit town and cannibalistic European barbarians release a record. Wanna know more? Then read on with weapons and get into some serious head removal.

► Bleuurgh! Let me introduce you (if you haven't already read the rest of this page) to The Batfish Boys, whose new single The Bomb Song (Batfish Inc) growls, spits, bumps and generally grinds out of the speakers in a completely dirty biker grunge sort of way. Yum yum!

► You want Verbal Abuse? They're back after a three year gap, the US hardcore quartet having just released the LP Rocks Your Liver (Boner), a wild 12 track party including a ridiculous version of Elton John's Saturday Night's Alright For Fighting. Can rent boys mosh?

► If you want to hear pure, filthy noise then you could do no better than shell out for the Heresy/Concrete Sox Split LP (Earache). Each band has a side of the LP, both hail from Nottingham, and both are absolutely and utterly crazed, certainly putting British thrash on the map. Where on the map is another question...

► Welcome to this month's Music For Nations paragraph. The subsidiary label Under One Flag has just released Onslaught's first LP Power From Hell, a classic gonzo slice of death metal. A dirgy production cannot, however, fail to hide these boys' brain-busting appeal. How can they lose with tracks like Thermonuclear Devastation? MFN are also to release new LP's from GBH and Death Angel, the latter being a thrash outfit whose members hit an average age of 16... make way for toyboy mayhem, please...

Yes, it's happened - London Records have signed up the previously untouchable Slayer, and will give the controversial Reign In Blood album a proper UK release in time for the band's April tour. See you down the front.

► Volvod take their name from an ancient European horde of Barbarians who used to destroy villages, impale the inhabitants on sticks and drink their blood. If they were around today they'd listen to the band's latest album Killing Technology while they were guzzling. This German bunch, whose last LP was entitled Rrrroooaaarr, take this month's village-pillaging award. Brilliant, manic hi-fidelity techno-thrash. The band should be over to play in the summer, with another bunch of European nutters, Kreator, as support. Feeling thirsty already.

► Check out a band called The Freeze, whose LP's Rabid Reaction and Land Of The Lost (Modern Method Records) are highly underrated hardcore punk at its best, the band having been sorely neglected while Hüsker Dü, Black Flag and the like steal the glory. Go for it!

► Last but not least, a mention for the drummer of The Parasites who insisted on playing a demo to me down the telephone, and mighty fine it sounded too. Meanwhile, names, we got 'em... read on next time if you want to find out about Bathory, Bulldozer, Sodom, Possessed and Destruction, the first up consisting of one Swedish chap who breathes fire...

WIN OUT!

OH LYDIA, OH LYDIA... THAT EN-CY-CLO-PEDIA

Sex glam queen Lydia Lunch has unleashed more than a few skulls from the clos with her Hysterie double on Widowspeak. A mighty distasteful set, it features croonin' delights of poetic poison following the lady through her daze in Eight Eyed Spy, Beirut Slump, Teenage Jesus and Slow Choke, plus a handful of collaborations with ex-B Party Rowland S Howard, Sort Sol and Die Haut. And Underground have five copies, plus five awegasmic Lyd T-shirts (sub-titled "F+++ The World, Feed Lydia Lunch") for the lucky, lucky, lucky honchos who can come up with the answer to the following question.

It goes: Die Haut are from a country that is not the UK or the USA. Where is it?

Send your answers on a sexy postcard or on the back of a plain brown envelope to Lydia/Underground, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London, NW1 to arrive no later than 8.02 on May 7.

Back from the dead, risen from the grave and here to haunt you. Snakey G rips the lid off the latest re-releases and explains just why these cobweb covered masters have been dusted off...

Good old Ace Records made my month by releasing a second Arthur Alexander album, Soldier Of Love. It's made up mostly of un-issued cuts and alternative takes (including the title track). As coincidence would have it, I received it the same day I got my grubby mitts on a copy of his ultra rare London (Dot) LP. Also on Ace, Alakazam is an album of un-issued late '50s recordings by Larry Williams. Tracks include versions of Beeby Jeebies and Rockin' Pneumonia And The Boogie Woogie Flu.

In more of a pop vein, Ace have issued a collection of Terry Stafford recordings titled, surprise surprise, Suspicion, and that song, his biggest and best hit, is included. Zydeco pantsers will be interested to know that Boozoo Chavis' debut LP gets a UK release. Titled Paper In My Shoe, it includes his last single (same session) which wasn't included on the LPs US release. The Elvis Tapes, a pre-army Presley interview album gets a re-release and a new package. And Harlem Hit Parade (Old Town Blues Vol.2) featuring Hal Palge & His Wallers, James Wayne, Urmola Reed, Bob Gaddy, and Larry Dale, is the only compilation this month.

To celebrate the success of the hilarious TV series Tutti Frutti, Ace is sticking out the original Little Richard version (as used as the theme tune on telly) on a three track seven inch single in a tasteful pic sleeve. On the Big Beat front, the only release (not mentioned in last month's column) is a Big Star CD. It's made up from the two LPs No. 1 Album and Radio City, running a staggering 70 minutes. Label director and all round wine fiend Ted Carroll has informed me that there's soon to be a mid-'60s Texas punk album, titled The Fort Worth Teen Scene (The Major Bill Tapes Vol.2), featuring Electric Love, The Elite, The Rondels, The Livin' End, The Jades, The Crystals and The Blue Notes.

Soul/Pop flavour of the month Terence Trent D'Arby cited Johnny Cash's I Walk The Line (available on Charly LPs CR 30005 and CRM 2013) as one of his top ten favourite records while being interviewed on Radio 1. When DJ Paula 'soxy pants' Yates poo-pooed it, young Ter got right miffed and stood up for the man in black. Right on bro.

Other records he chose, in addition to the expected token Marvin Gaye and Stevie Wonder 45s, included Crazy by Patsy Cline and Mannish Boy by Muddy Waters. We're talkin' good taste here!

Thanks to Andy Kershaw's radio prog, and Hank Wangford's brilliant Channel 4 TV series The A To Z of C 'n' W, there's been a lot of record buying interest in the various forms of country music. Edsel Records, never one to miss a trick, release Muleskinner (A Potpourri Of Bluegrass Jam) from the collective musicians Rowan/Griaman/White/Keith/Greene/Guarin/Khan, dating back to 1974 (which is reviewed this ish).

One of my favourite Gene Vincent recordings Bird Doggin shows up on the Vincent album Lonesome Fugitive on Magnum Force. The recordings date back to 1966 when he was signed to Challenge Records in Hollywood.

Don't Put No Headstone On My Grave, the Charlie Rich album on the extremely credible Zu Zazz label is now well and truly out. If you're a Sun/Phillips Int. Records enthusiast get it quick. Then strut around with it under your arm at the local record shop or coffee bar and be the hippest cat in town.

One the 'zine scene, Britain has a new work of brilliance in Be A Real Teenager. There's so much in it I'm not sure they'll be able to keep it coming out yearly let alone on a more regular basis. Similar in style to Kicks magazine, among the 70 odd pages there's articles on Screamin' Jay Hawkins, Larry & The Notes, San Francisco '66, Nervous Norvus, The Phantom, The Legendary Stardust Cowboy, Buford Pusser, Hasil Adkins and the Ausie and Kiwi garage scene of the '60s - and that just touches the music content. Plus there's fan-gore types articles including a piece on The Man From U.N.C.L.E. and Roger Corman's '60s biker flicks. If you have trouble locating a copy (Rock On in your manor, Camden, stock it) send a SAE to (How Can I Get Your Mag, Bal?), c/o 48-50 Steele Rd, London NW10. Oh yeah, wait till you see the pin up of the genuine Crusher!

NEXT MONTH WE DO SOMETHING THAT'S REALLY WEIRD.

WE GO LIVE.

★ Yes, the mag that doesn't do live reviews goes "on the road". ★ TWICE. We do it with Pinky loves The Wolfhounds and McCarthy in Europe and we also follow Erasure around to see what they're up to and into. Plus loads and loads and lots of other things that we're not sure about yet. ★

★ We'll call you on that one.

W I N O U T !

Oh God. It's another bleeding compo. What's it for this time? Eh? "Well, er, Front 242 actually." "Who?" "Er, well, they're foreign." Yeah, yeah, yeah. Just what the world needs... another A-Ha. • "Actually they're rather different. Rather loud. Rather damn noisy, aggressive, electronic, punky, leather be-jacketed, snotty, screw-loose, oddball and, well, different." • Oh, that's alright then. • Yes. Friends, let me tell you, Front 242's new LP, Official Version on RRE, comes in a rather erotic bin liner and it's fab gear. Our leather clad shoe fetishist nabbed five copies which he kept pressed against his manly chest for two days (we have been trying to get rid of the smell in the office for a further 10 days.) • Anyway, you can help. Just answer one simple question and you could win a copy (providing you get the answer to the question right of course). OK, here it is... where are Front 242 from? Hmmm. We'll have to check up on that one, too. Send your answer on a postcard, or on the back of an envelope, to Front 242/Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London Hse, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 to arrive no later than 2.42 on May 7.

TAP

● Edited by Julian Henry. In time honoured (hey, we've done nearly two issues now) fashion, Underground goes way beyond trad and gets in an actual A&R person to sample the delights of the tape mountain. Stephen Edney is the first person to undertake the monumental task and I think you'll find that he comes out of it pretty well indeed.

(Stephen has worked at London for four years, and sometimes he makes it to see four or five bands a night. Fave group of the mo is Stars Of Heaven but he doesn't think they're quite right for London).

The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential. Er, well, let battle commence . . .

DEAD MAN'S JIVE (22 West Cairn Crescent, Penicuik, Midlothian, Scotland) made a terrible mistake in not actually writing anything on the cassette they sent us. It could have been lost. We could have accidentally taped over it. London Records get over a hundred cassettes through the post each week apparently, so Stephen says make sure and scribble things on your tape in future. Anyway, the music: Thumb's down I'm afraid, despite being Scottish. It sounds too gothic and gloomy you see and we both agree there's quite enough of that sort of thing around already.

WHITE SPEED (c/o Tim Lane, 110 Mount St, Reading, Berks) made Stephen laugh because they've drawn a funny picture of themselves on the cassette sleeve. But does that mean they get a recording deal with London Records? No, I'm afraid not as their music is a trifle on the loud and raucous side; their press cuttings liken them to Zodiac Mindwarp. Cor. Wasn't this sort of music once very popular in the 1970's?

TERRORPLAN (2 Seymour Road, Godalming, Surrey) is in fact one person who is so talented he plays all the instruments himself. He writes to tell us that he likes Underground so much he has taken out a subscription. Despite dearly wanting to return the compliment, Stephen could not be persuaded to sign Terrorplan, saying that the music was not commercial. Ambient music for people that can't sleep was his exact description.

THE DILEMMAS (67 Farnham, Blandford, Dorset DT11 8DE) demonstrate how you don't have to be a terribly good guitar player to make an attractive noise. Despite some rather cryptic lyrics about "still drinking my wine", the Dilemmas impressed Stephen because of two reasons — they sound like a group and actually write songs. What's more he even has some words of advice for them: "Full marks for getting your group together boys! Keep it up!"

5 7 1 7

BLOOD BROTHERS (c/o 7 Narcissus Road, London NW6) are terribly organised. Why they've got glossy pictures, a real-live "manager," and have even turned down "Indie" record deals because their manager apparently decided they weren't ready for it. But are London Records interested in them?

"No." Andy, why's that? "They do everything right," says Stephen, "only nothing comes through and grabs you."

GAG (44 Lace Street, Off Beeston Road, Dunwirn, Nottingham) succeeded in making Stephen very uncomfortable. "I don't like this sort of nightmare music," he said. "I like songs that uplift, and this certainly doesn't do that."

Gag's biography describes theirs as being an "art which no-one could decry" which suggests confidence if nothing else.

BOYSDREAM (69 Crown Street, Peterborough, PE1 3HX) look like a rock group. They have long hair and sound a bit like The Cult, and Stephen was surprised that so many people still seem obsessed with flogging these old ideas. What about some constructive criticism though?

"They have the basis of a melody here but the singer's voice is monotone and a little flat." Any advice to give? "When they're recording they should pull all the levels down and listen to the voice by itself and see if it's flat . . . I suspect it is."

TIER GARDEN (c/o 115 Salthouse Road, Barrow In Furness, Cumbria) were the first group to arouse Stephen's interest. Indeed, within moments of the tape being on he was scribbling down their telephone number and tapping his feet excitedly.

"Good lyrics, catchy, modern, overall there's enough here to make me want to find out more about them," he said. So does this mean international fame and fortune for Tier Garden?

"Well, we'll go and see them live and take it from there." No Pasaran was the best song on the tape, and we listened to it twice just to make sure.

8 8 6 7

BASTARD KESTREL (50B Cricklewood Broadway, London NW2) managed to evoke two words of criticism from Stephen: "Meaningless trash." Then he went further: "This sort of music upsets me. I wouldn't want to waste the band's time, so I'll just say I don't like it." Happily for the group Underground takes a more sympathetic attitude concluding that fans of The Dead Kennedys would probably find Bastard Kestrel an appetising proposition.

A HAUNTED SAWMILL (6 Pathwhorlands, Alexandria Road, Sidmouth, Devon) are evidence of the cottage industry that's sprung up in this country since people started buying Portastudios and trying their hand at becoming pop stars. Everyone's doing it. Stephen was not terribly impressed by AHS's two cassettes though, quoting monotonous singing, lack of character and too much technology and too little talent as his reasons for not wanting to pull out his chequebook.

MASQUERADE (10 Elmshaw Road, Putney, London SW15) sent their tape in an envelope saying "Very Urgent." We could barely control our excitement. Was this tape going to be "The One"? In a nutshell . . . maybe. They play what Stephen describes as Formula Rock, and are led by a person with the intriguing name of Alex Puddlesfoot. "It's a bit," said Stephen sadly. "I don't like it particularly, but he has written a song, Harry O, which sticks to the old pop formula and he's got it 90% right. I shall phone them up."

Underground verdict: bland.

7 8 4 8

DON'T PANIC

The Panic Station in league with Underground magazine scandal. Yes, here's the scam on how these two less-than-shaven outfits will attempt to put on the bands that sound neat and have the best names.

At Dingwalls dance hall every Monday from May 4 onwards there'll be bands of the calibre of The Jack Rubies, The Blue Aeroplanes, The Stitched Back Foot Airman, The Shamen, Mighty

SHEET

FUEL TO THE FIRE (3 Freshbury Avenue, Snelton Dale, Nottingham) committed the cardinal sin of forgetting to rewind their cassette to the beginning. Oh dear me. Look boys, important music business execs don't have the time to start rewinding and fast forwarding tapes, (you pretentious bastard, Henry, get on with it — ed) so make sure you don't do it again or we'll be up there to smack your bottoms. Anyway, what did we think of your music? Professional, competent and predictable. Stephen says there's a lot of this sort of thing in Nottingham, and he puts it down to "The Rock City Effect". This cassette is available for sale via mail order from the above address for £1.50.

CATCH THE BOMB (2 Romway Close, Sleaford, Leicestershire) have sent us another cassette (theirs appeared in an earlier ish, too) with a rather apologetic letter telling us how rough it is. Stephen agrees. "Too rough," he says. Despite that you can detect something young and excitable about this group, and a smile was seen to appear on Stephen's face. Could you sign them up? "No, because they're too shambolic to go out and see them play live though and would probably really enjoy it."

A-10 (c/o Saatchi & Saatchi, 80 Charlotte Street, London W1) sent us a rather unusual package. Not only did it come from an "Advertising" agency, but the front of the tape featured a picture of a woman baring her bosoms. The music sounded like punk rock. Stephen and I were outraged.

A phone call to guitar player Jeremy revealed that, yes, he exists, works for Saatchi And Saatchi and is a reasonable person. The news that London Records were not incredibly impressed by his tape did not seem to worry Jeremy unduly. He laughed. A-10 are playing concerts in London during April.

0 0 9 0

TRIGGER TRIGGER (24 Machise Road, London W14) are made up of people from other groups like The Speedometers and The Invaders. Stephen nodded his head knowingly. "You can tell," he said. "It sounds polished and is recorded well, but there's no real character or personality that comes through."

So it seems like a deal with London is not in the offing for Trigger Trigger.

"Too much sax," added Stephen, though a perusal of the biography revealed that the blower was none other than David Winstrop, a horn-man of some note.

TUNES DE BOES (c/o 01 27.2792) took the tempo down a bit. Gentle. Moody. Blue. These are all words that apply when listening to My Intention, though a weak voice let the song down a trifle. Stephen was sympathetic. "He sounds like an artiste — his voice and guitar should be together because he's singing and playing from the heart. It's unfortunate that he hasn't got a slightly stronger voice."

6 6 4 5

MIRRORS OVER KIEV (c/o 02571 42857) were already known to Stephen but we played their cassette anyway. And rather interesting it was too. Lots of jangly guitars and a sound that is not a hundred miles away from The Smiths or Eastern House gives you the impression that Manchester must be responsible for more sales of Bickenbaker guitars than anywhere else in the country. If you want to know more about this group you can telephone them on their very own ansaphone.

TR 28-20 (c/o 091 246 2133) attracted us to their package by some very eye-catching yellow Sellotape. We felt sure that something exciting lay inside their boldly designed jiffy bag. A little disappointing, therefore, to discover some adequate but unspectacular Ruts-sounding music along with the usual mean moody band photo. Stephen wasn't knocked out by the sax playing. They should be much more sparing with it and realise that a sax is a flavour and not a main course," he said, revealing an impressive ability in journalistic rhetoric.

SECRET PEOPLE (c/o 091 514 5107) have a head start in the race for chart honours having appeared on The Tube with their own song China. Stephen knew of them and likes them, though he said that no-one else at London was particularly taken with their music (so a vast recording contract was not terribly likely). That said, the singer most definitely has "A Voice" in the current mould (Erasure) and Stephen pointed out that this was ideal CD music. Perhaps their manager should send us both CD players so we can discuss this point further.

THE BIBLE FOR DOGS (78 Colney Hatch Lane, Muswell Hill, N10 1EA) sent us a tape of funny background noises. Stephen and I could not reach an agreed opinion on it, as the absence of a recognisable song meant that it fell outside the usual parameters of criteria for record company acceptance (ie: Good song, lip image, ideas, character).

Stephen said: "Kraftwerk," but then got very upset by reading in the band's letter that they could only afford to record new material by taking medical research tests. We are impressed by such dedication, though not quite to the point of wanting to give them all our money.

THE WARHOLS (c/o 81a Chesterfield Road, Woodseats, Sheffield S80 0SQ) achieve maximum points for their package which included rants from all the group plus their manager. They look rather natty too, in a fetching line of leather and denim but sadly their music did not cause the earth to shake. What does one call it? Guitar pop? Rock? Their manager says that London "the city" pisses him off" because all the DJ's get bribed and real talent (I suppose he means The Warhols) get overlooked. Our bank account number is...

MARBLE ARCH (32 Marcos Road, Canvey Island, Essex) appear to have been caught in some dreadful timewarp which has left them with Kajagoogoo haircuts and a frighteningen clothes-ense that would put Ron Atkinson to shame. I'll be honest, we only listened to 30 seconds of this tape. Our vile prejudices will no doubt be punished in some shape or form, but it was simply not possible to endure any more. Perhaps EMI will offer them a recording contract.

2 3 1 3

G SWING (c/o 16 Westbury Court, Nightingale Lane, London SW4) sent us a cassette that arrived broken in the post. Still, we forced it into the tape player and were rewarded by some rather appealing swing music that had just the right amount of '60s beat. After a few songs we got a bit bored of it though, and so Stephen passed on the following words of wisdom: "Why not release Over And Over, (the best song by far we thought) as an indie single?"

7 8 4 4

BRADFORD (c/o 0254 61235) use manly images (a skinhead and sharp copy (phrases like "Smart And Sound") to good effect. They look like they mean business, and singer Ewan Butler bears this out with a strong vocal delivery. We both like the name, the look and the skinhead's haircut, though Stephen was mildly critical of the lyrics — "too Adrian Mole" — and the instrumentation — "too Toytown" — but apart from that it sounded jolly good.

8 6 8 7

LOVE'S ALL RIDICULE (44 Milroy Street, Wavertree, Liverpool L7 1PT) do not do themselves any favours by enclosing a set of mugshots that look like something out of the Chamber Of Horrors. A glossy picture of some glamorous '60s star like Chris Montez would have been more appropriate, because their music is really summer beach stuff. I closed my eyes and floated off, only to be brought back to earth by Stephen's business-like critique: "Only half a song. They go on too long. Not enough originality."

5 3 1 4

THE GO HOLE (c/o 79 Erlanger Road, New Cross, London) sent us a nice friendly letter and a cassette that Stephen felt would have been more warmly received in 1965. "Too revivalist for London I'm afraid, but it has undeniable spirit. A case of Ready Steady Gone, I think." One of their songs sounded suspiciously like Let's Spend The Night Together by The Rolling Stones, whoever they are.

Mighty, The Doctor's Children, The Chesterfields and The Close Lobsters rubbing shoulders with new bands who've been selected after sending demo tapes to Simon Bennie, at 171 Farringdon Road, London EC1 3AL (tel: 278 0450). And, all those names are just in the first four weeks. Names to juggle with who'll be doing their thing, alongside already established independent combos, include Taming The Outback, Jonestown, Company Of Cowards, North Of Cornwallis and Papa Brittle. All highly recommended, and from as far afield as the human eye can see. What's more, future recommended tapes from the Underground tip sheet will be forcefully waved at Mr Bennie and, hopefully, live shows for top acts will follow. Success? It's jes' around the bend.

AHOY MATEY!

So who are the pirates? The Hit label, who've been buying time on Laser radio to have garage and trash music played on an hour long show, starting at midnight on Wednesdays, have organised a benefit gig to raise funds for the prog. Seems each punter that enters the Trashcan at Hammersmith Clarendon on April 30 (from 7.30 onwards) will be subsidising the show to the tune of 32 seconds worth of airtime. In typical celebration style, a host of ne'er-dowells will attend and perform in no particular order. They'll include The Purple Things, The Cannibals, The X-Men, The Surfadelics, Bad Karma Beckons, The Grizelders and more.

The Shamen look on in fear at the thought of playing at The "Panic" Station

COMPETITION WINNERS SCARE!

We were Goddam overwhelmed at the collected hi-brow intelligence of our comp entries, and the number of them, too. Beats Blue Peter any day. Here are the lucky Underground readers who've snabbed it.

John Holmes from Bury St Edmunds checked in revealing that Jonathon Richman's most recent UK label is Rough Trade and he wins a CD of the Modern Lovers' finest stuff from Beserkley.

G McAlea from London revealed that the boring skins from way back were Slade and G wins the disfigured Camper Van Beethoven for his crimes.

Kirk from St Leonard's-On-Sea scored high with Snakey G's Charly Sun box set comp with the correct answers that it was Peanuts Wilson who released the Cast Iron Arm on Brunswick, that Johnny Cash was one of three artists to have EPs released on Sun, and that The Little Green Men were Billy Riley's backing band.

There were ten winners for Cherry Red's Seeds 1 LP. The answers for that were, Polydor was the label that Protex later signed to, and the half of The Marine Girls that weren't Tracey Thorn went on to become Grab Grab The Haddock. And the winners are... A Johnson from Choppington, Iain Mackintosh from Edinburgh, Duncan Fletcher from Barton-on-Humber, Paul Furniss from Derby, K Godfrey from London, Julian Rose from Nether Poppleton, Rory Manchere from London, Ian Middleton from Manchester, David Huitson from Dumbria, David Goose from Hanwell and, er, that's it.

There are five winners of the first Whiteline compilation vid (with tracks including Red Lorry Yellow Lorry - who're now known as The Lories just to confuse everyone) and they revealed that Lee Marvin had a "hit" with Wandrin' Star. The winners are Steven Boulby from West Yorkshire, RJ Batchelor from Egham, Linda Barrett from Chichester, Steve Drury from London and IR Jolley from Lewes.

There were six winners of the remaining first ten Blast First LPs, and this one was a biggie in response terms, with around a billion postcards and drawings of Madonna in improbable poses. The answer to who Ciccone Youth were parodying was, of course, Madonna and the winners are Gordon Hope from Leeds, Isaac Topple from Staines, Mark Tait from Aberdeen, S Hartnup from Sheffield, Peter Wright from Halifax and Ian Bryck from Gourack which is in Scotland.

The Mark E autographed lyric book special comp reaped three winners who spotted that Mute, from the list of labels given, is the only one that The Fall haven't been on. The winners are Morris de Cony from Ealing, Graham Hughes from Loughborough and Steve Makin from Leighton Buzzard.

And, finally the ten lucky winners (yes, lucky, lucky winners) of the Globestyle comp - who spotted that Lesotho is in the African continent (atlas frenzy) - were Neil Anderson from Brighton, Karen Pudner from South Glamorgan, Colin Harrison from Bristol, Andy Collier from Manchester, Kevin Grady from Dundee, Steve Hambleton from Buxton, Chris Davies from Ilford, Steve Rowling from Nuneaton, Mat Astrop from London and J Davies of Fareham, Hants.

STOP PRESS ... nearly forgot the two camps in the supplement on ish one. Read on ... So, who won the Orange Juice autographed copy of In A Nutshell? It was, da doo da doo ... Michael Alston of Strathclyde, that's who. He fed us the correct answers, that the other groups on Postcard to release singles apart from the OJS were Josef K, Aztec Camera and The Go-Betweens and that label boss Alan Horne went on to run Swamplands.

And, finally yet again, the six winners of This Are 2-Tone, who correctly stated that The Fun Boy Three's first 45 was The Lunatics Have Taken Over The Asylum, are Steve Wurst from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Colette McGee from County Donegal, Paul Hartshorne from Mansfield, Mr T Russell from London, P Edwards from Merseyside and Rob Payne from Leeds. So there.

A group fail to write in and get themselves featured. Instead, they offer something about their life flashing before their eyes. What does it all mean?

WIN A CARDBOARD BOX

WIN IT OR DIE! Yes we have a cardboard box... and it's going cheap (er, and it's just about s... on its way to you if you can answer five questions hidden within this ish and the five that'll follow next month). But what's in the box? Only 20 independently groovy discs from recent times. Check this.

- CUT DOWN Red Lorry Yellow Lorry Red Rhino 12 ● MARIMBA JIVE The Red Guitars Self Drive 12 ● BANKING ON SIMON Terry And Gerry In Tape 12 ● AGAIN AND AGAIN Tools You Can Trust Dynamo LP ● SONGS OF LOVE AND FURY The Membranes In Tape LP ● CRIMINAL REMIX 1,000 Mexicans Play It Again Sam 12 ● LUCILLE Fatal Charm Native 12 ● VIOLENT BLUE The Pasmore Sisters Sharp 12 ● YOU Chakk FON 12 ● VIETNAM Shockabilly Fundamental LP ● THE TWILIGHT-WORLD OF SONIC DISCO Age of Chance Riot Bible 12 ● BUDGERIGAR Christianhound Dead MC LP ● THREE WAYS OF SAYING TWO The Hafler Trio Charm LP ● WALK ON STALKS OF SHATTERED GLASS Shattered Hula Red Rhino 12 ● THE PICASSO'S The Picasso's Technical LP ● THE HOLDING ON EP The Pleasureheads Ediesta 12 ● SHE GOES TO FINO'S The Toy Dolls Volume 12 ● MY FAVOURITE DRESS The Wedding Present Reception 7 ● JESSICA IN THE ROOM OF LIGHTS John Avery Technical 12 ● SEE YOU IN HAVANA The Hit Parade JSH Records 7

So, if you're impressed, write down the answers and keep them handy until next month when a further five brain massagers could enable you to win something (or other). Just think, you could always melt down some of the records and make earrings or you could keep yourself in sounds for some time (so, come on down... the cardboard's hot).

UG: GIFTED AND LOUD

Question: Which group lives in a small crofting village in Aberdeenshire, is barely known in the UK, but after several US trips (one to support James Brown) is one of the hippest bands in New York nightclub circles? APB, that's who.

A phone call to singer Iain Slater's home in Ellon, deep in the heart of Scotland, revealed their current whereabouts. Iain's mother, Mrs Evelyn Slater, was only too pleased to answer our questions. ● "Och, Iain's off away in America at the moment," she said. "He's flown off with his group for six weeks of concerts I believe". ● Any news on how the concerts are going Mrs Slater? "Well, by all accounts, extremely well. Iain telephoned from New York to say that 2,000 people came to see them there, and that their new record, Missing You Already, is being played on the radio so we're all delighted with that." ● Telephone line crackles then disintegrates. Er, well, thank you, Mrs Slater! Julian Henry

The Bevis Frond received a thwackful review from Ronnie Randall last month. He now gets his chance to say what he thinks about "rock" and "rock reviewers" ... Reviewers! Where would we be without them? We'll never know, will we? ● Fair enough I guess, if somebody makes their work public, it's there to be criticised and they just have to accept what's written. But should they accept a criticism based on total inaccuracies? ● Ultimately it makes little difference whether the review was fair or unfair, because the damage has been done. And there you have the hideous power of the reviewer - we've lost sales, we've been branded as garbage, a distribution deal has collapsed and I'm reduced to writing a sour justification of what people are calling "the best UK psych album of the '80s" (Crash Landing). "wondrous garage psych" (Funhouse), "enthraling" (Zippo), "fing brilliant, massive future rarity" (Plastic Passion), etc. etc. ● Though, when all is said and done, the only way you'll really be able to form an opinion is to hear the album yourself. Happy drum solos.

SURF'S UP Wreck is a white musician from South Africa, who performs in The Kalahari Surfers. In the UK for a short time to promote his third album, Sleep Armed? on Recommended Records, he spoke to Alex Bastedo about what lurks behind the press curtain.

- It must be difficult being a white musician, protesting on behalf of blacks.
- "Yes, but it's not an impossible situation. There are still bars you can play in, depending on which territory you are in. It also helps to be a bit subtle about these things, although there are some blatant punk bands. Great records like Free Nelson Mandela can also still filter through and are big favourites at the colleges and at student parties. Unfortunately, that record was banned immediately from the airwaves or else it would have been a certain number one."
- What do you think of the British protests being made, such as Artists Against Apartheid?
- "It's great that these efforts are being made although I can detect a certain amount of naivete in some people's words and actions. Also a few cases of bandwagon jumping . . ."
- How about Paul Simon?
- "I'm sure his motives were honourable, but again maybe just a little naive."
- "My perennial favourite groups, such as Faust, Can, Captain Beefheart, Residents, Henry Cow, Slapp Happy . . . they all had a very eclectic approach to what they did, and I think these influences probably reflect in my own work. I also think it makes for more interesting listening."
- It does, but going through the usual independent channels, and especially Recommended Records with their small, clearly defined network of friends and contacts, don't you feel that you are just preaching to the converted?
- "It can seem like that, but it's important to keep plugging away, to continue to try, to reflect the major issues that are going on all around you."
- The Kalahari Surfers know that you can't put a better bit of Botha on your knife. Their particular knife through necessity just needs to cut very subtly . . .

Where art meets muzak? Where life meets death? Oddball performance and multi-fun outfit Club Moral (from Belgium) have the latest issue of their Force Mental mag for your perusal with the usual mix of smart-ass prose in many languages. Excerpts from Etant Donnes, a feature on mass murder and rock 'n' roll, Distraktor, mail art, Con-Dom and the usual stuff that'll terrify your kin folk. ■ Sick bag at the ready, contact Club Moral at PO Box 60, 2200 BGHT, Antwerpen, Belgium for details.

years, arousing some interest with a debut album, The Evening Visits, which was released last year on Rough Trade. ■ More recently the band have recorded material for the soundtrack to a new John (Pretty In Pink) Hughes movie, called Some Kind Of Wonderful, and set for release later this year. Other acts included on the soundtrack include The Jesus And Mary Chain and Flesh For Lulu. The Apartments, meanwhile, are between recording contracts as several major companies hover on the horizon.

Three to go!

Children In Adult Jails' LP Man Overcome By Waffle Iron on Buy Our Records (PO Box 363, Vauxhall, NJ 07088) still hasn't got a UK deal but it's well worth tracking down. Mad in its construction and crazed in its funky/jazz/punk/sleaze delivery, it's a seminal work of some note. • From West Germany, some former members of Lost Gringos turn up as Thirteen on Ata Tak (the label who bring you Der Plan and Die Todliche Doris), with a quirky off the wall LP called Can That Be True? Again, well worth a listen and you can get details from Ata Tak at Medien GmbH, Markischestrasse 16, D-4000 Dusseldorf, West Germany. • Finally, US eccentric Craig Burk has an LP's worth of clinically diverse sound bits and bobs that make The Flying Lizards sound like Queen. The man's The History Of Decency/Out To The Various Edges is like caustic blues and soul over a broken computer rhythm. More details from Illusion Productions, 15 Rue Pierre Curie, 14120 Mondeville, France. • Dave Henderson

EYE BALL ON THE world

More sublime, unknown New Yorkers, all I really know about NOTHING BUT HAPPINESS is that the light pours out of their debut album Detour and that they'll be in England between March 11 and 25. A three-piece led by David Maready, you'd have to go back to the heady days of The Velvet Underground's third album or The Smiths' most wounded moments to hear such melodies of such lean, mesmeric fragility and yet invested with a brute strength of character that happily lives in and draws on it's own world. The singer intones the most banal and disconnected phrases, making them sound like the recipe for freedom. Acoustic and electric, pop music can be this good. Detour is nothing but perfection. MARTIN ASTON

Early comers to a recent Weather Prophets' London College date were impressed with support group The Apartments, a decidedly guitar-flavoured combo hailing from all manner of cosmopolitan origins as diverse as Germany, Australia and Wales. Singer Peter Walsh has led the group for a couple of

CHESTERFIELD HIP-HOP SHOOT OUT IN CRAMPSVILLE

LIVER THAN LIFE

The Chesterfields, perhaps the greatest pop group ever to have graced the West Country, are about to move up into the big record racks with the release of their debut LP Kettle. Containing 12 tracks, including their latest hit single Ask Johnny Dee, the LP is released on the Subway label later this month. Kettle coincides with a generally more professional outlook from the band which has resulted in various publishing and agency deals and has also seen the first Chesterfields casualty, with the departure of guitarist Brendan. Bass player Simon is understandably reluctant to discuss Brendan's departure but he agrees that the band are certainly at a watershed in their career. "We've slowly realised that we have to take everything to do with the band more seriously," he tells Underground. "Davey gave up his job and Dom's decided not to go onto college after his O Levels, so from July onwards, we ARE the Chesterfields. I think people around us saw what was happening, how the band was beginning to do well and be successful, before it occurred to any of us in the band." It's an unusually early decision to record and release an LP given the band's infancy, but Simon, Dom and Davey were determined that these dozen songs should see the light of day now. Now, UG! knows what you're all asking out there. Why call an LP Kettle? It all makes sense when Simon explains, (well sort of) "Well, it's a word that pops up in Two Girls And A Treehouse, a track on the LP, and I thought it was a good word to have in a pop song. Not only that, but if you watch Coronation Street, Rita's always telling Mavis to 'Go put Kettle on' because she drops the 'the'." It seems inevitable that the Chesterfields will soon be moving onto bigger and more lucrative pastures possibly they'll even have Kettle in the racks in Rita's shop. Well, isn't life just wonderful? Andy Strickland

FIELDS OF FIRE

A Cramps 'official' bootleg is being released and our very own Snakey G is the only journo with the upfront info — yo!

To promote their last album, A Date With Elvis (Big Beat), the group had set off on a lengthy World tour and, after many months on the road they were pretty tight music-wise. As luck would have it some bright spark at the mixing desk decided to tape the last date and present it to Lux as a gift. Mr Interior played it as the band were relaxing backstage after the show, and "Holy Shit! What quality!"

When they heard this ferric onslaught, containing 7 tracks from Elvis, they thought it complimented it perfectly and should be released to counteract the 1,001 dodgy bootlegs already being sold at high prices. This could be the real thang at a regular price.

The tracks run: The Hot Pearl Snatch, People Ain't No Good, What's Inside A Girl?, Cornfed Dames, Sunglasses After Dark, Heartbreak Hotel, Chicken, Do The Clam, Aloha From Hell, Can Your Pussy Do The Dog? (at its most sexually explicit) and that old chestnut Surfin' Bird.

Release date is set for late June/early July, so get yourself a copy while it's hot. We're talking a limited edition of 20,000 here. Snakey G

UNDERGROUND IN SENSUROUND

HIPPER THAN A DEF HOP

Much movement in soul's ever increasing circles with news of things. Y'know... things. Music Of Life were sent a natty letter from CBS asking them to stop using their Def Beats title for comps as it was very close to Def Jam. But the CB's were thwarted when Music Of Life mentioned Def Leppard among other things. * And The Justified Acients Of Mumu. JAMS to you Jack, have their All You Need Is Love in a clean cut version in the shops via the Cartel without being legally disembowled for their "criminal" assault on Sam Fox and The Beatles. Nice when things like that happen isn't it? * Finally Morgan Khan, the man who acts like a soggy sandwich (South of Watford '86) returns after going bankrupt with around 50 new labels that'll continue the Streetsounds Hip Hop series, and also work on a Breakbeats series of limited edition DJ style percussion breaks tacked on to "hot" tracks. * More news when it's hatched. And what about Bi-Joopiter (2, Wentworth Rd, Hertford, Herts SG13 8JP), a set of music freaks who have a flexi from The Maxells and a huge catalogue of excellent tape and record releases. Write for a catalogue. Meanwhile, just nearly close to the charts and mass acceptance (we hope for God's sake kill Curiosity Killed The Cat), The Pocket Rockets, who've just toured with BAD have been touting a demo that's pretty neat, and have inked a deal. Watch out. Pop for sure that makes Sputnik even more laughable. The top side is Video Kid KO

REVIVAL OF THE MONTH: Do It Again by Wall of Voodoo ^

UNDERGROUND

READ ME

Wow, look at the crazy pattern on the front of Can't Be Beat. Wy . . . uld. And features in there too, written in English, it's great and has "bits" on Died Pretty, the ever lovin' hunky Shamen, Ed "I used to be in The Saints, Laughing Clowns and, er, well, lots of other groups" Kuepper, Giant Sand (great name), Dream Syndicate, lots of guitar reviews too. Of course, by the time you read this, it'll be a bloody collectors' item, or you could pester Ian Hearnden at 69 Springdon Rd, Lordswood, Southampton, Hants SO1 6HX, he might have a few copies holding up his sofa. Triv Tel

Yes, another fine specimen that brings the memories of a bygone age grimly pressing their way into unsuspecting brain tissue. It is quite clear from the scrawled hallmark on this piece that it was one of two "objects" that accompanied the first exported copies of that seminal art-classique, EINSTURZENDE NEUBAUTEN's first long playing drill solo, Kollaps. Emanating from Germany, it's wracked with the kind of graffiti and poise that later went on to influence a bevy of UK contemporaries and, eventually, the advertising dept of Heineken lager. Hmhmhm. Triv Tel.

NUMBER 15.97: The Zarjaz

So, thee classiques are here again. Actually The Zarjaz began their brief existence as Les Zarjaz with a 45 of some style on a then fledgling Creation label. Titled My Ladye Owns A Falle Out Shelter it could very well have been an Alan McGee stab at novelty success (as closely followed, nearly, by Babes Amphetamine). But no . . . 'cause Zarjaz swapped labels and, in true Moon-dog (a blind classical composer from the '60s who was on CBS and had a long beard) style, he released a magnif album on Basilica entitled La Legenda Del Block. Probably gathering dust as we speak on the shelves of Rough Trade's warehouse 'tis but a gem, with harpsichord and all and no doubt would have appeared on el eventually (all things being equal that is). Gette it. Triv Tel

(novelty stuff that only really reveals their potential on the 12 inch version), best bit of all is the Biog Rap Mix, though, which is just geeetar and drums. Are there supposed to be some words here, guys? Edwina Curry (boo hiss) and her holey jiffy features heavily in the much-popular-in-Mexico fanzine Turtle Breeder which is full of yuks and bits on Stockholm Monsters, Ted Hawkins and Bhundu Boys. Gerrit from Dez at Flat 5, 58 Dafforne Rd, Tooting SW17 8TZ. I say, though, whatever happened to that rather nice Andy Strickland character who used to be in Janice Long faves The Loft? Now that other ex-Lofters have re-appeared as Weather Prophets and Wishing Stones, the man with the uncontrollable guitar style comes out of the woodwork as part of Caretaker Race and a hot three track demo of his stuff has impressed Ug persons. But who are Wiggle-pig? And with a name like that, shouldn't Edwina Curry cabin be into them? Well they're loud and industrious and they're from Ontario, more news as the bacon comes home. Nun but the brave, as they say. Leather Nun's new single, I Can Smell Your Thoughts, will be followed by a brand spanking new album in the autumn plus their Jesus Came Driving Along has been made filmic and celluloid-like as it'll appear in a new Hollywood brat pack flick entitled Dudes. The excellent Vague magazine is back with us again and this time it's in a kind of commemoration of the 23rd anniversary of Kennedy's death. Classier book stalls should be able to help on this one or try Rough Trade shop's mail order (address on Revolution page). And, who shot Kennedy? A moot point, but let's recall that Jack Ruby shot Lee Harvey Oswald, then we can tell everyone quickly that The Jack Rubies (neat lead in, huh?), are currently touring with The Blow Monkeys and they're damn fine. They have a single out too, called Be With You, on the label set up by publishers Chappell. Other releases for the new label, which is called Idea and is going through Pinnacle, include Playing At Trains (described as Norman Wisdom meets Scritti Politti) and The Chain Gang. Interesting A&R notes come from Magic Moments At Twilight Time whose demo was greeted with hails of very little until they sent a tape to All The Madmen. Those "wacky" Mad heads sent a note back saying 'Dear Magic Moments At Twilight Time, My name is not James, Sean'. Now that's what we call daDa. In the Homestead home camp, there's some activity. Live Skull are set to have a live album released, and there'll be a label compilation featuring Big Black, Breaking Circus, Naked Raygun,

Death Of Samantha and more. The label boasts two new signings too. GG Allin is, er, strange, and Nice Strong Arm feature ex-members of Vertibeats and Neat Joy. Talking of dada, as we were briefly, Liverpool's Ark label (through Probe and the Cartel) follow up last year's successful Dada For Now cassette of original Dada recordings with an album from Popular Mechanic, a Russian based conglomerate founded by Sergei Kuriokhin in 81. The LP, Insect Culture, features their strange hybrid sounds which fuse a group of physicists, an industrial section, a folk lore group and several other luminaries. Huh? And you thought the Ruskies were just into Elton...

Fact fun: The Warhols from Sheffield feature Pete Morton who once dated the Ladies World Screaming Champion. Phew! I SHOULD COCO. And more 'zines hit UG central, claiming they deserve max coverage (and mostly they're right). Ten Years On from Graeme Price, 26 Main Rd, Trimdon, Co Durham, TS 29 6QD, is soon to be 11 years on and ish eight features raucous stuff, presented and printed nicely enough, about Blood And Thunder, DRI, Oi Polloi, Rhetoric and more. Less loud but just as charming, Sowing Seeds issue two (from Paul May, 12 McLeod Close, Grays, Essex RM17 5RD for 40p plus a sae) has vital parts on My Bloody Valentine — did you know they'd shed a singer now? — Primitives, Pop Will Rape Itself, Bambi Flatmates and more (get the drift). Wayne from Crud claims to have a flexi from Anhrefn set for ish 4 and his Welsh 'zine covers local essentials and can be had from 1A Grove Park, Colwyn Bay, Clywd. Wayne also demands we "do" the Butthole Surfers. No prob, M Issue already despatched for the task. Allen Sex Fiend also have an info pack, 'zine and collection of prose and pix. Penpals and all that gear from The Fiend, c/o FO Records, 97 Calendonian Rd, N1 9BT. And yep, a Fiend feature in Ug! pretty damn soon too. Finally Outlet mag, a kind of pot pourri of excessive reviews reaches issue 35 (get it from Trev Faulk, 33 Aintree Crescent, Barkingside, Ilford) with scam on Unovidual, Venus Fly Trap, Dave Howard Singers, Die Form, Zoogz Rift, Dogman And The Shepherds, Polkaholics, Ten Foot Faces, Black Flag, Dick Dale and a million more.

MODE UP

Mute go further into the packaging and presentation history books as their French arm flexes its muscles with a handful of mini-compact CDs featuring Depeche Mode. The tracks which appeared on Mode 12 inchers in the UK are here — usually the seven inch version and an elongated remix plus three or four live cuts — the French counterparts get mini sleeves, and blow the cobwebs away with new found clarity. ● The five packages which Underground managed to whisk from Mute were Blasphemous Rumours, Get The Balance Right, Love In Itself, A Question Of Time and the classic Everything Counts — with live cuts of New Life, Boys Say Go!, Nothing To Fear and The Meaning Of Love from Hammersmith Odeon circa '82. Classy stuff that you'll have to search out and save up for, as each set costs around a tenner on import. Dave Henderson

STRANGE. Yes they are! Those champions of garlic do the, er, silliest things. Especially when they're called X Ray Pop. You see, it all started when an X Ray Pop person sent us three copies of the group's two singles. They're brill, they're on coloured vinyl, they've got wack sleeves and we don't know what to do with them. ● So three bright sparks who can answer the following question, and submit it to postcard to arrive chez Ug! no later than Friday June 12, will each get a pair of brightly coloured Frog masterpieces ▶. The question is, which French band launched the Rough Trade label with the single Paris Maquis? Answers swiftly to French Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1.

WAH! PHOTON INVASION OF EARTH

(well, London)

Photon phasers and a new form of "street" lingo, which sounds more akin to '30s Hollywood pirate dialogue, is being sold to the nation's youth as it trundles hotfoot from the States. From between 40 and 140 notes you can get a pair of guns (sorry, phasers), crash hats and ID cards (and probably look a right prat). Billed as "the game for kids that adults play", it'll no doubt change the channel on your TV too. It's a pretty expensive remote control though. Still, wouldn't you like to zap Kim Wilde and Junior. Yes, I thought so. Triv Tel

UNDERGROUND: AS HARD AS LARD

VAGUE has grown into a troublesome tome that's a riot of over printing and imbalanced rhetoric fit to topple governments. Issue 18/19 is another whacking big effort that's based around Programming Phenomena And Conspiracy Theory. All the by-words are there, Techno Fear, Handshake Tendency, Weird Shit et al, and it's all lovingly assembled by a bleary eyed Tom Vague. At £2 a throw it'll get you even more confused than Underground and may just supply you with a few answers too. Don't miss, check it through Rough Trade Shop, Compendium in Camden and some Cartel outlets. TC Wall

Full On Aggro ... no less. The BMX Action Bike magaroon back in April had an intriguing scan at Rad Scoots, a kind of souped up wheelie attaining scooter that's as lethal as a 'board or BMX bike in full flow. What next? After the initial furore surrounding the EMI-sponsored rock week at the ICA in January, every-one has probably forgotten that there's an album to commemorate it. In fact, there's two. On The Dotted Line (Here) is released on June 15 with On The Dotted Line (There) following a month later. The track listing for There is still being finalised but the first album is as follows...

Side One: Redbury Joy Town The Wonder Stuff; Round And Round The Crows; Motorcycle Rain We Free Kings; Sorrow Floats Voice Of The Beehive; In A Song The Favourites; The Murder Of Your Smile and Plastic Horse The Dave Howard Singers.

Side Two: Rub The Buddha Crazyhead; Parallax Avenue Slab!; Tolerance The Blue Aeroplanes; Everything I Ever Wanted Brilliant Corners; The Hunger Asian and Dallas Blues The Jack Rubies.

"You know we got a lot of flak for this rock week, don't you?" said an EMI spokesperson. "I think it was unfair. Did you go to the concerts? It was an open forum — wall to wall A&R guys every night. It was a chance for new bands to play on a well distributed and well backed-up rock record... I think it was quite altruistic — I don't think we're going to see any profit from this!"

Click, click, brrrrrrrrrrrr!

■ Mazing Man is BACK! One of DC's most adventurous little characters, the dumbest non (but definitely super) hero on the block, his life and times, along with those of his tolerant friends, lasted long enough for a short series which ended last year due to poor sales. But, a "Special" is currently enlivening comic racks, and it's the last chance to resuscitate him.

■ Jubilant scenes abound as the neighbourhood welcomes back its infernal pain in le derriere but he still doesn't get round to actually doing anything, which is the main reason for DC's problems with this title. A nicely toasted set of 'characters' are not what the American youth have been bred to believe in.

■ Bastards.

■ Reid Fleming (World's Toughest Milkman) is also BACK! Issue two of his adventures has just been blasted into our faces by Eclipse Comics and if you've read nothing else for weeks, read this. The man with the square head, who tells his lady customers to "wear a negligee, or else" is as mean as ever, and I suspect his underpants are in a notorious state. His employers have never heard of Eraserhead, let alone considered changing their hair-styles. It's a scary world they've created here and if only we actually lived there. My milkman never says a word.

■ The post-apocalyptic Bilko stance, the wirily devious drawing and the superb jokes make you look embarrassingly stupid reading the thing on the train. I'm only hedging my bets here but I'd say you are daft enough to enjoy it. Or, as the great man says, "Knuckle sandwiches kinda makes a guy hungry".

■ Completing this month's trio, there's Codename NINJA, a black and white comic with a taut little story, somewhat rushed in its composure, of an American Ninja caught up in troublesome matters. Fortunately all the 'early days' drivel is dispensed with fairly swiftly and it looks like being a promising series.

■ Full marks (he said in his finest patronisingly prominent way) and brief mentions also go to The Question (DC) for building up a character with style and verve in the way that The Spectre (also DC) hasn't quite managed, and to Grimjack (First) for salvaging some of its former pride. Any of these series are trusty steeds which won't let you down and deliver the occasional cracking blow to the temporals (sic).

■ All comics are available from Forbidden Planet, 23 Denmark St, London WC2. Send large s.a.e. for details.

MARY CHAIN OBSCURE DISCETTE SHOCK!

Just when you thought you had all the records by The Jesus And Mary Chain so that you could say, 'oh yes, I've always liked them, even before everyone else did with their new single, er, April Skies', the legendary Riot-London Uni March '85 package is on the streets again. A limited edition for a five spot at one time, it features a one-sided record with the post match violence, plus a badge, a bit of tartan (purporting to be from Bobbie Gillespie's shirt), a syringe, a J&MC LSD bar and other such junk. And now, with the lads' "success", the whole shamuck is going for 15 quid plus. Still, some of the bits litter this page... see if you can spot them. Triv Tel

GROWLING MACQUANDRIES OVER EUROPE

The Wolfhounds and McCarthy take the "house" sound of Pink through Europe. Martin Aston samples some intriguing floorboards and asks the riever easy question, But what's it all about? Holiday snaps by Martin Aston and Richard Asters

The van breaks down ten miles outside Dover, it's business as usual. All the equipment is loaded into the back of the minibus, leaving one driver, one soundman and four spotty musicians from Romford sleeping overnight in the back, waiting for the AA, the next available ferry, and European mega-stardom.

No Sleep Till Antwerp . . . I can see the live album already. The van makes it over just hours before the concert begins. Then it's business as usual again.

Or maybe it's business unusual. First, because from under the smothering cloud of that convenient shambling tag, these might be two — very different — groups who actively disprove the generalisation; two groups who record for London's The Pink Label; two groups who are rejecting the familiar as well as the careless pop careerism of their peer group, hoping to refurbish the House Of Pop on a meagre housekeeping budget — to add a literacy and room for afterthought. This is what their music's for. McCarthy and The Wolfhounds then.

"Sunglasses off, everybody, we're at the border." (Paul of Pink)

Second, this busy trip is also both group's first foray abroad, which neatly marks something of a comma in the development of their careers. For The Wolfhounds, they have to decide whether or not — or really when — to plunge ahead full-time, meaning Dave, Andy G and Paul giving up their jobs. A Scottish tour is turned down because of those jobs while this European 'holiday' isn't even long enough to stretch to 12 dates in Germany where McCarthy will play alone.

elves going on after two local supports — "shit pub rock bands," according to Wolfhound Dave — at one am and The Wolfhounds at three.

The French don't dance, but they enthuse, and in Morlaix, the next night, Dave gets a chance to DJ. "They had our records in their collection along with the June Brides, even The Birthday Party's Prayers On Fire. But the French still like to dance to their Europap."

Meanwhile, the Paris gigs have been wrongly booked by the French promoters for May, not April, and of course The Wolfhounds will be back at work. Business as usual then?

"In the rain/to the offices/going down/town/again/everyday/dragged through the gates/the damned in the rain" (McCarthy's From The Damned)

Sitting in Brussels' Pizza Hut and sleeping in YMCA bunks may well make the folks feel fondly for Romford and Barking, but every Wolfhound and McCarthy unanimously rejects the work ethic as a waste of creative space.

"From what I knew of working, I really resented it, giving my time to someone in some pointless job," says Malcolm. "I don't think I could do that, whereas I really enjoy this. I think I'm using all my creative potential, such as it is."

Every night, Malcolm's allegorical, bitter-pill lyrics are swallowed by the PA, leaving behind Tim's intricate, tumbling melodies and delicately picked guitar figures. McCarthy play more vigorously when there is more of a responsive crowd, such as Eindhoven on their second night in Holland, but otherwise, with Tim, John and Gary's eyes on the floor, on their instruments or in the air, the effect is one step removed, almost frozen. Malcolm has to concentrate hard on singing and playing guitar. There's little presence.

"But I think that's good," drummer Gary tells me. "I don't believe in all this showbusiness ethic. I think it's pointless, and it's important that the audience know it's a band up there, and all we can do is hope they'll listen and think about our lyrics."

The emphasis McCarthy place on thought is probably expecting too much of pop and its audience. Then again, Morrissey's lyrics are revered in a wave of solidarity.

"I'm the exact opposite of the way Morrissey writes," Malcolm goes on, "where he's aiming to get people to identify with what he's saying. He wants people not to feel alone, or some such idea. What I'm trying to do is the exact opposite, which is to get people to think about things more, to be shocked by what I'm saying. I don't like the idea of people identifying with pop lyrics — I don't think it makes people think but leaves them exactly as when they started."

"I think the mistake a lot of political groups make is that they're very narrow. They just understand politics perhaps, and not that they're in a group and that there are artistic criteria as well. Groups like The Redskins or Easterhouse. I hope we'd combine art and politics a bit more successfully."

Art, politics and POP, to be more precise. Tim's present preference for pop as opposed to what he calls "rock's expressionistic leaning — the musician is expressing himself in his solos and that kind of thing and we don't want to do any more than is necessary in the song" means that McCarthy are furthering their use of irony.

"With a melody like Peregrine Worsthorne," (about the Sunday Express editor receiving an angelic vision, telling him how to put the world to rights), "which you can imagine people looking all dewy eyed and sad to, I'll put a pretty nasty lyric to. The lyric here is a criticism of that mood, destroying that illusion." There's little room for sentiment in this renegade's book.

When McCarthy visit the Frans Hals museum just outside Amsterdam in Haarlem, the local paper takes McCarthy's single of the same name. Obviously oblivious to the political sentiment of Malcolm's lyric (Hals was commissioned to paint the portraits of the governors of a charitable institution that he'd requested peat for as fuel because he was so poor, and ended up painting them sour-faced and drunk as a form of artistic revenge against their society. Malcolm has Hals as the struggling artist going down the DHSS) the museum governor eagerly requests two signed copies. Irony smiles again.

Talk about respectable!

McCarthy themselves are also on a brink of sorts, except here they must decide how best to present what is arguably the most precariously balanced set of ideals in an independent music right now — the art of 'political pop'. All on the dole, poor but relatively free, McCarthy eschew the usual be-seen-everywhere route for a wilful independence which maintains their ideals.

"I've noticed on tour, I've completely stopped thinking," says McCarthy singer and lyricist Malcolm. "I've become completely stupid. I'm amazed I can muster a few sentences together now. You get up in the morning and you arrive at the gig and then you eat and then you play and then you come back to the hotel, and it's not conducive to thinking. For some people in groups, they must live their whole lives like that."

In France, at the bizarre, stately Chateau de Cange, the atmosphere is more congenial. Out front are 450. McCarthy find them-

Very large picture collection from the folio of Martin Aston, following his Euro-trek with The Wolfhounds and McCarthy.

The Wolfhounds' Unseen Ripples From A Pebble, was greeted by Underground's John Best "bringing us here the pipe and slippers of the atrociously self-satisfied 'shambling' generation: the tautly jangled guitar and the voice of an unsinging (as opposed to unsung) hero".

Self-satisfied, Dave?

"I just don't think he could have listened to it very well. We're far from self-satisfied! We're always trying to improve things.

"We have to say in every article we're not a shambling band, and that we don't sound like The Fall. To us, it's obvious."

Sorry, John, I'm on Dave's side, and the horse's head is in the post. Meanwhile, The Wolfhounds' trial is to outlive the criticism and to make sure the muse is always on tap.

"Swan around Greater London for just £2.50/duck and dive around Dartford for only £1.60/but you can chicken out at home for the small price of nothing." (The Wolfhounds — In Transit)

Friday night in Amsterdam at 'The Strip' will cost you 15 guilders (£5), just down the canal from the famous Milky Way where a '60s night rages on minus the headliners The Lyres who cancel at the last minute. After The Wolfhounds and McCarthy have finished playing in front of 75 people (the Dutch promoters simply didn't promote, so unknown English bands stay that way) we all shuffle on down to find 600 or so dancing to a truly '80s post-party disco, which includes... The Wolfhounds' Anti-Midas Touch and McCarthy's Frans Hals. Enough people mouth the words to make you realise that it could have been 675 or so watching these two groups instead. The singles crunch and glide respectively.

"One day soon, the poor will deal with you/make your will out, mate/they know your name and they know your faces" (Frans Hals)

"I do like playing live," McCarthy's Tim concludes, although he's too nervous to look at the audience, "but it's recording an album and what it might turn out like that is the exciting thing."

When McCarthy return from Germany, a 14 track album will be recorded.

Similar to McCarthy, The Wolfhounds spray equal amounts of anger, protest and dismay, except that Dave allows the latter emotion to stray onto more expressionistic ground, squeezing out more sentiment.

"If I hadn't been so fickle with my life, I would have probably pursued an ecology degree at college and been the new David Attenborough," Dave grins. "No wind-up." But he has found ambition at last.

"I turned 22 and thought, fin' hell, when I get to 25, I still won't have any references at all, so I had to do something on my own back or settle down into a knuckle-down existence, working for someone else."

"I find I've got more energy and fire and I'm more willing and committed now than ever before. I can push myself much more if there's enough incentive and response from the others. We're getting better all the time at pushing out ideas... I'm amazed at Paul and how many ideas he can come up with."

"Mega-band status," as bassist Andy B puts it — well he is the only one in blond rinse and customary black so he's allowed to talk like that.

As The Wolfhounds swop France for Belgium for Holland and the idea that there are new audiences outside their peripheral view from their Romford or East End windows — that there is a future in noise and creation — so the underachieving hangs heavier. Paul's position is the most vulnerable, he is with job but, after all, as drummer Frank grins, this is "the best band in Britain" (!)

"I'm being pressurised into leaving my job," Paul admits. "I'd love to but I've got a pushy girlfriend and a mortgage, so I'm a bit lumbered. She wants me to leave as long as we're secure." On the flip side though... "one of the big wigs called me into the offices recently — I thought he was going to praise me, but he says to me, 'I hear you're in a pop group. This-has-got-to-stop. You must concentrate all your attention in work', which was ludicrous! It's just a completely shallow imagination — I work with no ambition, and my happiness, apart from my girlfriend and my home, is The Wolfhounds. I've had to be careful — I had to lie to get away, saying I was going to Canada to visit my Dad."

Instead Paul is waiting around in a dressing room, surrounded by 96 beers and the sort of sci-fi porn cartoons that only Zodiac Mindwarp would legitimise (in fact, most of it was drawn by Pop! Will Eat Itself by all accounts). It's Paul's personal love for the likes of both Captain Beefheart and Suzanne Vega that's seen The Wolfhounds transform from a ratshit-garage band to one that boasts its own throttle and tourniquet.

There is tension in both the lyrics and music, and a brittle unpredictability as well. Unseen Ripples From A Pebble (Become A Tidal Wave On Shore) accurately describes the album; live, Andy G's more rhythm-and-boozed guitar and Paul's more zig-zag-wandering guitar might blur parts of the jazz, blues and folk filters that the album feeds on, but the group are leapers, not shamblers.

"I'd just like it to shock people by the mood changes," Dave says. "But we aren't capable of doing that at the moment. We're still a beat group basically. In two years time, if we're still going, I'd like to do something as outrageous as what some of the '60s groups were doing, or some of the post-punk groups. I'd like to be out there... but still get the attention."

Against the usual grain, Paul would like to turn down the volume.

"I get disheartened when I think the instruments are too loud because it sounds like a boring pub rock thud. People must think we're clumsy. Nothing original could come out of that kind of a live sound."

At least live, The Wolfhounds benefit from the experience, where they can be like an uncomfortably fitting straitjacket, no matter whether the group want to be more original and/or poppy.

"There are so many avenues we want to, and will, take," says Paul, sounding like he's on the edge of handing in his cards.

Back in London, both groups might well find out the answers to their quandaries. And, in a sense, it'll be business as usual.

The Perfect Crime

GWR Records GWLP 12 ●● This angry album covers everything from Hiroshima to Hades!. With its magnanimous verbal gestures and clichés. The Perfect Crime sets itself on a soap box and as such it's going to be prone to sporadic verbal abuse. It can't be denied that there's a chilling realism here which supersedes its pessimism. Cut after cut of prime melody is only hindered by the occasional yobbo chant, which is supposed to be a backing vocal! It doesn't really matter too much 'cause both This Is My England and Working For The Company are future classics, the best in modern poetry. Alex Kadis

A SPLIT SECOND

Ballistic Statues

Antler 054 RR C ●● Simple and strong, a dancebeat that's insistent and moving with more heavy leanings towards the Cabs. This lot are Belgian, and had an acclaimed 4 track EP, Burn Out, out last October. They sing insomniac lyrics in English, and hope that this LP will take "a place in your favourite-records department".

On first impressions this is a winner, with meaty beats, interesting voice-overs and a voracious appetite for steamy dancefloors. It has all the hallmarks of a dense, demonic talent which, on the strength of mighty tracks like Close Combat and Check It Out, not to mention the lengthy and ingenious Cybernetics And Pavlovian Warfare, could serve its initials in the great old oak of electronic dancefloor pop. Carole Linfield

BAD BEACH

Cornucopia

Manic Ears ACHE 4 C ●●● The harsh lyrics here sometimes completely dominate the punky guitar based music, and the brutality of the words often leaves you reeling. The vocals hit where it hurts, and the message gets through loud and clear.

When not giving medallion men a severe kick in the groin, Bad Beach are taking sideswipes at religion, the arms race and society in general. This is not done with boring tirades against Thatcherism and ther ilk, but with a mixture of melody, power and lyrics to spur the imagination. Cornucopia is a marriage of words and power chord punk that you should not be without. Andrew Bass

THE BAND OF HOLY JOY

More Tales From The City

Film Flam HARPLP 1 P ●●● Strolling or sometimes lurching down the little white lines, folk peering at them from behind net curtains, losers and paranoids falling in their path and drunks peeing up their legs. The Band Of Holy Joy have moved unperturbed through the streets of London's New Cross, armed with their trombone, accordion, banjo, big bass drum, Casio organ and Johnny's wailing voice. The tale of their trail has been set down by this debut full length album, an often beautiful, haunted, courageous madcap waltz.

So much has been made of Holy Joy's Salvation Army shanties and ballads that it was doubtful they could live up to all that 'all real life is here' media stuff, but More Tales, whether angry or sad, awkward or tender, really does. What's more, and this is the real beauty, I've never heard any other record like it, give or take a slap or dash of nursery rhyme memorabilia. Martin Aston.

SELDIDY BATE & NIGEL BOURNE

Pagan Easter

Temple TOPY 024 RT C ●● Ritual music for the Spring Equinox anyone? Well, Temple have an oddity here from Sel and Nige. The music treads briefly through new age, folk and generally strange and understated backings, topped by Seldidy's chantalong vocals. For purists and practitioners, sure, as a neat sidetrack it's just so-so though. Johnny Eager

BIG DIPPER

Boo Boo

Homestead HMS 077 RT C ●●● Six tunes, six popette orchestrations and a sepla-tone cover that confuses the plot even further. These Americans are on a lefty pop tack that's more akin to the Hüsker Dü/Meat Puppets breeding ground than anywhere else... but better still, they don't just emulate, they deliver with real style. Big Dipper have the old trailing geeetar line that makes all the difference, the spark that ignites the heartstrings and a batch of songs that're well worth gargling to. TC Wall

CAMPER VAN BEETHOVEN

II & III

Rough Trade ROUGH 123 RT C ●●½ The long lost Camper's second album, which has only previously been available for mucho cash on import, finally reaches our shores. And, well, it's pretty much in the same vein as the other two Camper LPs. The neat line that separates genius from lunacy is in evidence again as the boys topple haphazardly between the two poles while "getting down" in a selection of styles akin to folk, country, post-punk-pop, nursery rhyme and more. Skiffle pogo muzak for hollerin' acid casualties, and pleasant with it. Dave Henderson

CASSIBER

Perfect Worlds

Re 0000 (Recommended Records, 387 Wandsworth Rd, London SW8)

●●● There has not been a band like it since German avantists Faust packed it in back in '74. Cassiber, now trimmed down to a trio and using compositional modes for the first time (they started out as a rock-improvising band) generate the kind of shock waves which are at once compelling and decidedly unsettling. Perfect Worlds is like hessian, rough to the touch, a tapestry stitched together from fragments of symphonies, tribal song, noise, lyrical dischord and angst. Chris Cutler's texts are finespun into a growing ball of pitted emotion — in a war between head and heart, conquest and conscience, power and paranoia. Musically and emotionally disarming, and their finest yet. David Ilic

THE CELIBATE RIFLES

Kiss Kiss Bang Bang

Hot/What Goes On GOES ON 8 Sh ●● Sydney's finest thrash city rockers whip up a storm as they pile full tilt through one blistering number after another on this live LP recorded at CBGB's in New York. A vast driving beat pummels away beneath waves of bristling guitars as they deliver prime cuts with their Mina, Mina, Mina LP, plus superb covers of the Only Ones' City Of Fun and that seminal Aussie band Radio Birdman's Burn My Eye. For full throttle, straight ahead, raucous thrash guitar rock, The Celibate Rifles rip it up Bondi Beach style. Dick Mescal

CHILDREN IN ADULT JAILS

Man Overcome By Waffle Iron

Buy Our Records BOR 12-004 (PO Box 363, Vauxhall, NJ 07088, USA)

●●½ These people are mean. The Children have taken time to throw down their wares in an environment of stranger than strange sub-funk with more than a wave to hardcore, a tousled glance at country jocularity and an edge that's all their own. This album sounds like out-takes from The B52s on bad acid.

Spiralling into an unending hangover, Children In Adult Jails play a game that's America gone mad, society behind bars and real music running riot. A classic with "songs" and a track called House O'Weenies. Zappa lives... three of the four are girls and there's a crossword on the insert. Love it. Dave Henderson

THE CHOCOLATE FACTORY

45 Minutes Out Of Three Years

FAB F202 RTS ●● More wonderful '60s plagiarism from another of those European bands that seem to be springing up all over the show. Like the truly wonderful Creeps from Sweden, The Chocolate Factory devote their attentions to the late '60s period — all hipster trousers, check button downs and long hair, with music to match. All vocals are in English with a slight German accent, which for some reason makes the whole thing more appealing. Their covers of Security, 60 Minutes Of Your Love and I Wanna Be Free sound more like a spaced out Stones than Otis Redding, Homer Banks or Joe Tex... The originals hit hard, with World Of Lonely People standing out a head and shoulders above the rest. Felix Adler

THE CLEAN

Compilation

Flying Nun FNUK 3 RT C ●● Ah, yes another outfit from the NZ early independent boomtime. The Clean are now considered forefathers of things that are good from down under, but are sadly defunkt. This is tasteful music that some might foolishly label punky folk bedroom doomism, but they're a little more confusing than that. A 12 tracker, Comp goes someways to unlocking their secrets and in their melodic overtures more than a few bracing listening experiences can be had. Investigate. Dave Henderson

COCK SPARRER

True Grit

Razor Records RAZ 26 P ●● Cock Sparrer were one of the first wave of street punk bands, but they were totally ignored by the press and punks alike, for reasons even the band aren't too sure of. This collection of early demos and singles shows just how good they actually were. If some one had believed and backed this band back in 1976, I'm sure punk would never have become everything it set out destroy. Mark Brennan

BRENDAN CROKER AND THE FIVE O'CLOCK SHADOWS

Boat Trips In The Bay

Red Rhino REDLP 77 RR C ●●● Aye, West Yorkshire's most infamous Creole performers come up with a mean slice of Pecan pie that waves a hand or two at Ry Cooder and Van Dyke Parks, and offers a cajun-come-blues trip around the inner lobes of your consciousness. This is the kind of music that US 'burger bars in Blighty should be spinning. Forget the worn out copy of Los Lobos' LP, ditch the Steely Dan tape and slap this on the turntable, now let's adjust the aerial and get Paris, Texas tuned in, yep, it's jes' like home. Dave Henderson

CRO-MAGS

The Age Of Quarrel

GWR Records GWLP9 ● Nihilistic visionaries who play it extra hard and fast-as-fast can go. They also sound as though they mean it; unlike some thrashers, there is a major streak of something mean and nasty and tangible running through the noise.

Even though the vocalist sounds like an angry Bull Terrier at times, everything is just too powerful to ignore. These Cro-Mags are battering the door down and they using their heads. They demand that you use your too. Daz Igmeth

DANIELLE DAX

Inky Bloaters

Awesome Records RT C ●●● Danielle has a voice that can be as sweet and sticky as a toffee apple. Take a bite though, and there's a good chance that you'll find a maggot wriggling in time to the beat.

Big, funky, stompy rhythms, Easternisms, toe-tapping poppings and moody flights into fancy are the ingredients, garnished with luscious harmonies, killer guitars and all manner of strange and wonderful aural spices. It floats, dances, sneers, trips, smiles, purrs and bares yellow fangs; is irresistible.

In the garden, some of the flowers are blooming, while others are ravaged and corrupted by decay. A balance that is reflected in the lift and sway of this fine record. Daz Igmeth

DAS DAMEN

Jupiter Eye

SST SST 095 RT S ●● My God, what gives at SST? What's breaking in those wracked and ruined corridors? Das Damen paint yet another obscure thumbnail and crack the enamel from rock in a pompous outburst that fuses the Dead, Tull, Black Flag, The Byrds on a tape loop, and New Order the morning after. Weird systems on overload in a guitar battle that's fit to strip asbestos. Dave Henderson

DESCENDENTS

All

SSE SST 112 RT S ●½ Raging and a-ranting, the ten commandments with a guitar drop-out line. Thrashing victorious assaults on the senses, the noise of a dishevelled degeneration, it's all here as The Descendents go hell bent for leatherette. These cats are post-thrash speed merchants with heavy handed tendencies. Sometimes — in fact most times — it works real well, but there are occasions when the chord interplay goes below downbeat and gets totally depressing. Maybe it's supposed to be like that. Huh, just another r'n'r brain tester. TC Wall

DEAF HEIGHTS CAJUN ACES

Les Flammes d'Enfer

Temple Records TPO 25 C ●●½ Cajun is an admirably uplifting musical variation and should therefore be more widely-heard, but there's danger, this music makes you dance! The Deaf Heights Cajun Aces are prime exponents of the genre, singing in French, despite hailing from Scotland and being signed to Midlothian-based Temple Records. Les Flammes d'Enfer contains 12 rousing numbers with delightful titles such as La Danse De La Limonade and Huckleberry Zydeco — sounds good enough to eat — featuring all the classic cajun hallmarks: swirling accordion and fiddle and an irresistible beat. Karen Kent

FIELDS OF THE NEPHILIM

Dawnrazor

Situation Two SITUP 18 ●● With an intro and a sequel (no less!), Dawnrazor is a well constructed and thoughtful LP which focuses on the exploration of sound as much as it does on making music. The guitar — a resonance which is more akin to the clarity of tubular bells than amplified percussion — is undercut by a sulphuric rhythm, insistent and teasing. The Music — a strong and sleazy canker which grows and dies under a deep vibrato — plays off meteoric tracks like Volcane against the sensual and mentally unhinged Vet For The Insane, which is heightened by its nursery rhyme antics and simple significance. Marred only by its tendency to plummet to depths of unnecessary gothicism, this is probably well worth one fifth of your giro. Alex Kadis

FLESH FOR LULU

Long Live The New Flesh

Beggars Banquet BEC 82 ●● Our modern respect for originality makes us sceptical of anything less, but let's not lose sight of the good that can be drawn from the strength of others. FFL are proof positive as they skip through several styles not all their own. But what this lacks in originality and dimension it more than makes up for in variety and scope. The ultimate manifestation of flesh, Dream One Cowboy, is the most extravagant track, taking the group out on a limb so far that you'd scarcely know they were men in black at all. What's more, the single Siamese Twist isn't the pick of the bunch! There's much better to come, and that's very encouraging. Alex Kadis

GET SMART

Get Smart

Nervous NERD 027 RC ●● More your slick suited rockabilly than your ripped t-shirt and bleached jeaned psychobilly, and all played very competently in a vintage Blue Caps style. The first few tracks are pretty predictable, then you get to Ape Man. Among a backdrop of animal and bird calls-vocalist/drummer Roy Philips goes over the top as did the volume on my Dansette. Then there's a slap bass and guitar solos a-go-go on their rendition of Frankie And Johnny, as it gets close to making a great LP. Sadly, too many mediocre arrangements get in the way in the end. Shame. Snakey G

GLORY/THE MAGNIFICENT

Skins N Punks Vol. 3

Oi! Records OIR 009 RC ●● The latest in Oi! Records' attempt to showcase new talent on the street scene, and it's probably the best in the series so far because both the bands prove that they can play. Dutch band The magnificent have the edge on Glory with their Cockney Rejects influenced, riffs and humorous lyrics — "Come Join the lager lads". Glory have discovered an excellent guitarist in Mark Magee, and should have little trouble in competing with the best of today's new bands. Mark Brennan

THE GO-BETWEENS

Tallulah

Beggars Banquet ●● The Go-Betweens now make five, with the addition of Amanda Brown on violin, oboe and angelic backing vocals. The alterations are only cosmetic in that Tallulah spins the usual G-B web of tangled, tight-lipped sobriety and gorgeous melody lines, but the sound is sweetened, moistened and, perish the thought, more accessible.

It took me four spins of Tallulah to allay my fears that The Go-Betweens hadn't sold pieces of their valuable soul. Such proof of longevity on top of the group's increased 'pop' clarity is proof of Tallulah's subtle brilliance. Martin Aston

NANCI GRIFFITHS

Last Of The True Believers

Demon Records REU 1013 ●●● This is, quite simply, a collection of very beautiful songs. Forget any preconceptions of country music because this beats the hell out of Emmylou. Yes, Nanci Griffiths IS corny and sings most of her songs with an irritating southern lilt. Yes, them gee-tars ARE a-twanging away in th' background ther' but if you're not already a fan perhaps this light treatment of the C&W theme will sway you. Shadowed in the genre each song could quite easily survive without it. Alex Kadis

HAPPY MONDAYS

Squirrel & G-Man, Twenty-Four, Party People, Plastic Face, Carn't Smile (White Out) Factory FACT 170 RC ●●● As unpredictable and unfeasible as their name suggests, Happy Monday's debut is produced by John Cale and beautifully sidesteps all pigeonholes while thumping ten chewed-off, vitriolic diatribes into your solar plexus, dancing all the while. No textbooks exist for this acrid trip; Happy Mondays occasionally betray the fact they're on Factory. Next to New Order's bleached funk-beats, but otherwise this debut boats a tough, bulging, golden rock-soul that lurches and bobs about, frighteningly confident, like the drunk who gets more, instead of less. This is the most disorientating, madcap album I've heard in a month of Mondays. Martin Aston

Voice

Red Rhino RED LP75 RR RC ●● More from the house of Hula, and more confusing too. Latest news says that the Sheff crew have shed another disciple, but just which way are they going? Voice would suggest that reasonable commercial success could be theirs, while cult status will stay intact, but, as Cabaret Voltaire found it difficult to develop their sound once they'd reached that oblique dancefloor in the sky (er, Virgin to you), Hula sound a little hesitant too.

Voice is a classic album, tuneful, melodic, emotive and beautifully balanced. But can their bank managers take the tension? You can't help feeling sometimes that Hula are teetering on the edge of something. What it is, is quite unclear, but it's that feeling that makes their music so important. TC Wall

INCA BABIES

Opium Den

Black Lagoon INCMLP 12 RR RC ●●½ Back from just after the grave, the Inca's drop their Birthday Party shroud, have a brief line up change and sweat it out in a neater, twangier, more threadbare vein. Still stacked with same aggressive aplomb, Opium Den puffs out smoke through a collection of melodic repartees that'll finally rid them of their sackcloth and sad rags. A promising redirection that's a fine debut from a scrawl from the back of your clouded memory banks. TC Wall

JACK THE BEAR

Bearfootin'

Backs NCHLP 13 RC ● Back in the days when men were men and women knew their place — yes, we're talking about the Wild West — good ol' bar bands like Jack The Bear were probably ten a dime in those sleazy saloons. Which makes it even more improbable that this three-piece come from Cambridge and sound like the entire cast of Annie Get Your Gun at full throttle. But they do. Utterly unpretentious R&B boogie-woogie in the style of the Blues Brothers with a large dollop of hillbilly thrown in to make a lethal brew, 14 joyous tracks of tub-thumping drums, frantic acoustic guitar and all sorts of thigh-slapping and whoopee noises going on in the background.

The only other group that can carry this off as successfully as Jack The Bear are the awesome Beat Farmers — but being born in the US of A they had a head start! Karen Kent

THE JETSET

April, May, June And The Jetset

Hi-Lo Records LO-7 RC ●● Ten tunes from Britain's answer to the Banana Splits! The jetset package and sell themselves wholesale, indulging in conceptual masturbation and tongue in cheek self parody, but none of this can obscure the wealth of skilled pop talent. The Jetset are essentially English, sometimes outrageously American and always totally charming. Their third long player release, it's actually their hitherto unreleased first album (recorded mid '81). It might well be just that, but with The Jetset you can never be certain, just play the disc and anything could happen in the next half hour! Chris Hunt

THE KING OF LUXEMBOURG

Royal Bastard

EL ACME 9 P ●●● Does it matter who the King really is? Does it matter that my wife used to have a picture of him on her wall? Of course it doesn't. This album should come as no surprise really, but it does. It's hilarious, irreverent, irrelevant, brilliant, inspired, totally unoriginal and completely original...

All the songs are covers, from the Monkees' Valleri to John Lydon's Pop-tones, it's wall to wall pop-flamenco-tack classic. It's all done with flair, wit and rampant sexuality. Don't miss it. Hoxton Leonid

LA MUERTE

Every Soul By Sin Oppressed

Big Disk Records BIGNESS 1 P ●● The press release acclaims them as "hard Belgian bastards" and that's a description that's difficult to better. Despite the absence of a recognisable melody, the lack of any musical restraint whatsoever, and the sort of aggressive approach you'd expect from a homicidal maniac, there is something attractive about this record. Is it hardcore? Not sure. But it's loud and comes at you like a runaway steam train. Perhaps the answer lies in the title of the album; these people seem to be tortured by inner demons and it's thrilling to listen to the poisonous results. Julian Henry

PAUL LEMOS & JOE PAPA

Music For Stolen Icon

Sub Rosa SUB 12003-6 RR C The litting sounds of reverberated dreams minced and cajoled into a vibrating blanket, er, well, this collaboration goes somewhere close to that lacklustre dry cleaning commercial of a review. Lemos, of Controlled Bleeding, being weird and an occasional journo in the US, teams his synths and sounds to the squirmy vocal range of Joe Papa (a man with little in the region of history). The result is pulsating, rhythmic soundscapes, a step more immediate than your Eno's, a tad more encouraging than your New Age. Listen and dive deep. TC Wall

LES POULES

Les Contes De L'Amere Loi

Ambiances Magnetiques AM 009 (Recommended Records, 387 Wandsworth Rd, London SW8) ●● Debut albums are often pretty busy affairs, and the most exciting of a band's output on plastic. Les Poules' first bubbles over with so many ideas, you'd think they only had another half-hour to live. The French-Canadian threesome mix their synths and saxes into a range of spicy cocktails, many of which hearken to Britain's second experimental rock wave — Henry Cow in particular. Certainly there's more chancy orchestrations that I have heard this side of the '70s new wave, although most of the 11 tracks are still song-based. Shades of Brecht and latterday noise experimentalists provide other important reference points, although the trio's own stamp is indelibly personal. David Ilic

LIVING IN TEXAS

Cowboy Dream

Big Beat NED 15 P ●●● Gosh, the Tex get better with every explosive chord. Long gone are the trappings of inconsequential fadism as Living In Texas further develop their potential (first really displayed on the superb, but sadly ignored, Girl In The Red Leather Coat) with a six track mini album for Big Beat. Five originals, which see the mood sway from sleazy jazz-come-born-again pre-GI-Elvis to tempered rock/pop balladeering, are creamed tastefully by a wondrous cover of Bowie and Pop's Lust For Life, which shaves lbs off the flabby original. A classic album hollering to the big league. Miss it at your peril. Dave Henderson

MAN JUMPING

World Service

Editions EG/Virgin EGED49 ●●● For this their second opus, the secret seven have moved on from Cocteau to the somewhat grander confines of tastefully elegant EG, from where they present us with a bright collection of stylish new tunes.

Little remains now of these ex-Lost Jockeyers' initial Reich/Glass influences. Sure, the basic structure is simple and repetitive, but building on that, World Service is at once jazzy, sassy and brazen, keyboard driven but done with feeling. Alex Bastedo

MIA

After The Fact

Flipside Records Oil Sh ●●½ There's little or nothing produced by the American independent wave that's downright commercial, but MIA have stuck their fingers up all the right channels. You'll believe a disc can fly. On the back of duelling power-pop chords, choruses and harmonies, whacked right up to the frames of your speakers, one song chiselled in the skidmarks of the last, MIA crunch up stick-insects like The Knack as they ride the jetstream of your car stereo.

The music really doesn't have time for the recurring themes of fading dreams, mistakes made and the oncoming days of commitments. The only mistake MIA make is to skim over an emotional sincerity that might make things that much more crucial. As of now, though, here are guitars you can surf on and tunes that will help you wheeze more easily. If MIA's thrill has really gone, you'd never believe it from this. Martin Aston

NITZER EBB

That Total Age

Mute STUMM 45 RT C ●●½ The Nitzer's find another new home and develop their bolshevik chic, Kraftwerk DAF fetishism and dancebeat-meets-rap screech. An album of a flamboyant preaching which is thundered home with precision, a hammer-headed drill and a minimum of melody. The Nitzer's Total Age is a fist waving stomp that's likely to have a million sweaty armpits dribbling in acceptance before the leaves turn brown again. TC Wall

PARANOID VISIONS

Schizophrenia

All The Madmen FOAD 2 ●●● I'm in two minds about this one (groan, sorry). Just kidding, there's only one thing you can do with this album and that is, BUY IT! IT'S BRILLIANT!

Schizophrenia not 'arf, there are so many changes on this record it's impossible to keep up. On one hand there's the riotously funny The Chicken Song. Laugh? I nearly fell off my ultra-hip Underground swivel chair! On the other hand there is the death metal thrash of Death To The Poor, which is followed by the more melodic Rhythm Of Injustice. Andrew Bass

THE POTATO 5/LAUREL AITKEN

The Potato 5 Meet Laurel Aitken

Gaz's LP GAS 001 P ●● Ska revivalism which owes more to the enthusiasm of its proponents than any real flair but is still some distance ahead of the 2-Tone pastiche which dominated the pop charts at the beginning of this present decade. The Potato 5 — all nine of them — are a fine club band and lead vocalist Floyd Lloyd Seivright is a product of the same Alpha academy in Jamaica that nurtured many of the original Skatalites musicians. His tunes here are vibrant and catchy and performed with the kind of spirit long absent from contemporary reggae, though a sense of chasing shadows pervades this present set. Laurel Aitken is a veteran of the original ska sound of the early '60s, but his music here is more in the vein of the kind of material he was recording for Pama which is notable more for its novelty value than any marked accomplishment. Evelyn Court

PSYCLONES/SCHLAFENGARTEN

Imprompto

RRRecords RRR010 (151 Paige Street, Lowell, Massachusetts 01852, USA) ●●● The label that brought you Eugene Chadbourne and Smersh now offer the second hard vinyl from Psyclones (their first was on Subterranean, they've otherwise been known as tape barons of the Ladd-Frith West Coast syndicate). Great stuff, too, as Psyclones guitar/bass interplay is thrown against the more outlandish electronic stylings of Schlafengarten. The end product is two elongated workouts of style and power that could be hazily aligned to anything from Zen Arcade period Husker Dü (with a few electronic outbursts) or New Order playing in tune with Zappa (without the frills and flares) on acidic guitar breaks. Get it all the same. TC Wall

PULP

Freaks

Fire FIRELP 5 NM C ●●½ Sub-titled 'Ten stories about power, claustrophobia, suffocation and holding hands', Pulp's greatest moment filters through the air like a wispy feather directed coyly at the spine of the nation. Pulp's sometimes uncomfortable visions of life balance on the edge of reality and hit closer to home more than might immediately be obvious. First, the musical elements create a luscious pillow for ultimate relaxation, then Jarvis Cocker's unkempt, untidy — almost scruffy — intonations puncture the water bed leaving life to trickle all over your protection duvet. Johnny Eager

THE RADIATORS FROM SPACE

Buying Gold In Heaven

Hotwire HWL 8503 ●● Phil Chevron has made his name working with Elvis Costello and then fitting on to the end of The Pogues, but The Radiators were his original home and inspiration. Between 1977 and 1980, they were Ireland's most relevant punk band (let's leave The Boomtown Rats out of this, OK?), starting out as traditional punk speedballs then graduating to new wave guitar-band versatility. Whatever shape or year they found themselves in, the group always retained a sussed political and social awareness, and that's two reasons why this compilation sustains interest instead of just providing a historical artefact. Martin Aston

THE RISK

Loud Shirts and Stripes

Unicorn Records PHZA 2 C NM ●● Debut LP from this well-loved Guernsey mod group, recorded last summer in the deepest depths of sunny California. Reeking of Carnaby Street and scooter oil, Loud Shirts And Stripes will no doubt find a corner in the hearts of all those enthusiastic about this genre. As is to be expected, influences abound — The Who, The Jam and so on — but the tunes are strong and the whole package cruises along at a happy pace. Particularly notable are the moodily psychedelic offerings Man Insane and Last Train and the angst-ridden Oppression. Incidentally, The Risk have not split as Underground mistakenly misreported, headman Mark Le Gallez is merely holidaying in the sun. Lucky him. Liz Evans

PAUL ROLAND

Danse Macabre

Bam-Caruso KIRI 052 Re C ●● And you thought Syd Barrett was either building housing estates or suffering frazzled cabbage frenzy in Cambridge... But no, for after years in vegetation, he has decided to change his name to a major keyboard/electronics company to throw people off the scent and make a fresh bid for stardom in the guise of Paul Roland.

Sorry Paul, I did actually truly enjoy your new LP, and as for the comparison, perhaps it is obvious but you wear it so well. Well crafted songs, a few power chords to update the sound 20 years to 1987 on occasions, and an obviously genuine love affair with the sound he is (re)creating. I liked it. Lots. Honest. Alex Bastedo

SALEM 66

Frequency And Urgency

Homestead HMS 078 RT C ●●● The Salem's second album for Homestead sees them further along the poppy guitar-lined road to stardom.

> SLEEVE OF THE MONTH: Happy Monday's LP with the long title >

Four gals and a guy with some neat songs, some great arrangements and harmonies fit to bolster a Bangles' platter. But there's even more here. Salem 66 have taken a pop side road that makes them even more pertinent than most and delivered their fare with verve and panache. A classy set with gleaming headlights. TC Wall

THE SHAMEN

Drop

Moksha SOMALP 1 NM G ●●● At last the darling debut platter, in long drawn out terms that is, from The Shamen. Having shaken the psyche shroud, the boys from granite town have developed into a mighty fine outfit with more than a few semi-commercial strings to their bow. Hear it all, and guess what they'll do next as they only briefly smack their forehead on Syd Barrett, drive at full speed through Floyd County and end up chez Shamen, with one of the finest albums so far in this greater-than-great year. Depresso cynics listen to this and gnash. Johnny Eager

IAN SMITH IS THE VAGABOND KING

Golden Grates

Cold Harbour ColdLP4 G Re ●● Ian Smith's list of achievements and influences seem endless — Ivor Cutler, Danny Kaye, Mack Sennett... offbeat, original and funny entertainers all. Mr Smith coolly digests then spews forth his bizarre slo-motion interpretation of the fairground tradition.

Prophet or prat? Well, both really, as is anyone who shuns the temptation to follow fashions. Years of experience as cabaret club compere, talent scout, singer, sculptor and Wild Wiggler have prepared the now and future King for his solo project. A rasping tongue expertly licks around some fine self-penned prose, though never better than on a glorious interpretation of Lionel Bart's Pick A Pocket from Oliver, a choice that more than any other exposes Ian's roots. Viva vagabond. Ronnie Randall

SNFU

If You Swear, You'll Catch No Fish

Better Youth Records BYO 17 Sn ●●● From Edmonton, Canada, SNFU initially sound like they make a great meaty hardcore and cornball humour sandwich with a ragged pop exuberance that neatly counterpoints the claustrophobic catherine wheels of Bad Brains, Black Flag and that ilk. But repeated play reveals a nagging lyrical undertow that articulates a disillusionment with potential adult responsibility which turns If You Swear... into much more. SNFU's frenetic, mock-horror humour — since as Where's My Legs and Electric Chair — takes on a different perspective. As their spirit twists about, so their guitars run like trains. All this and a guitarist called Brent Bunthoven as well. Great record. Martin Aston

SONIC YOUTH

Sister

Blast First BFFP 14 ●●● Frightening but true, this is Sonic Youth's best and most immediate plastic splinter to date. From rock extremity to live reality, the Youth offer all the right buzz sounds in all the right places on a collision of sounds that perfectly balance the internal friction. A volatile, wordy epic which elevates Sonic Youth into the wax hall of rock infamy alongside the likes of Patti Smith, Ian Curtis and old Bill Burroughs. But at least the Sonics are still alive and turning heads though. Dave Henderson

STRAFE FUR REBELLION

Santa Maria

Touch TO 6 RT G ●●● West German's Strafe Fur Rebellion surfaced about five years ago with a forthright chunk of plastic on a reasonably obscure German label. At the same time Neubauten's drill style broke into view and Strafe were subjected to little attention for the crime of their subtlety. But now, courtesy of fashion changes, and the neatly packaged Touch co-op, the group gain UK release for their evocative soundscapes. At points here the sound of opera is an odd bed fellow to magnified crisp packet squidging, but then again, it's through such juxtapositioning of noise that real music is made. Santa Maria is a powerful, moving LP. Don't miss. Dave Henderson

STUPIDS

Van Stupid

Vinyl Solution SOL 2 P ●● Sipping chocolate milk from sneering mouths they zoomed in on skateboards, weaving between metal thrash and hip hop punk, ready to be cool, to be Stupid.

This here offering from the Stoopie Boys is a seven track mini-LP that, for six of the seven, thunders along at breakneck pace. Heavy, heavy, heavy licks and thrills with tongues nailed to each others cheeks. Yo dude, look out for Rootbeer Death and I Don't Like Nobody; two finely chiseled rocks. Okay, so things can get a little bit contrived at times, but don't you tell The Stupids that, they'd probably ask you what "contrived" means. Daz Igy meth

TAGC

Digitaria

Sweatbox SACD 012 ●● A CD offering the absolute best of Adi Newton's brand new anti group outbursts. Distorted, demented jazz gets played off against minimal soundscapes and the vibrations of a car exhaust in sexual frenzy. This is miles from Newton's Clock DVA dance vision but still as rewarding in a more wholesome, upper-echelon-of-muzak mode. Churning but charming. Dave Henderson

THAT PETROL EMOTION

Babble

Polydor TPELP 1 ●●● Second album from the TP's, and already the preview tape is nothing more than a worn stringy ferric blur. Produced by Roli from Swans, Babble is a raucous, more adventurous platter than their debut Manic Pop Thrill. Still tinged with commercial crossover potential the emphasis here is on an emotional blood rush of sound littered with effects, grinding pulses, cross-plyed guitars, gunshots et al. An all-consuming sound that sucks you in, desperately whispering in your ear, in a taught Orson Welles-goes-breakdancing way, 'play me again before I shoot your ears off'. Phew! Dave Henderson

THREE COLORS

This Is Norwood

Soul Selects SELECT 3 NM C ●● New England's Three Colors spent three months at the end of '86 living in London's southern suburb of Norwood, where, invigorated by such English hallucinogens as pints and bhagees, they made this follow-up to last year's excellent debut. Whatever country they're in, Three Colors' acute, inbred melodicism and indigenous American roots feel — folk/country, Stax, Philly and pop back to back — still sets them apart from any other recent American import.

TC have the spontaneity of buskers and to ice the cake, a way with ridiculously memorable hooklines. And they're back in Britain right now, too. Don't miss. Martin Aston

TINY LIGHTS

Prayer For The Halcyon Fear

Temple Records TOPY 25 RT C ●●● Hoboken branch of PTV's friendly few come up with a scorchingly exceptional album. Acoustic guitars get strummed, violins and cellos swagger and Donna Croughn's voice breaks a few heartstrings. Prayer is a massively enormous sound that elevates the soul, shakes it about a bit and relaxes the temple regions like a good dose of Tiger balm. A classic that'll no doubt only be recognised in centuries to come. Johnny Eager

23 SKIDOO

Just Like Everybody

Bleeding Chin BC 1 RC C ●●½ Time to cash in the chips? Or just a little in the bank for next time? Skidoo repackage some of their finer funk (some of it remixed too) for a compilation of power, persistence and suggestion. The suggestion is, 23 Skidoo are so good, why aren't they a mega hit somewhere? Answer me that one.

Anyway, for the uninitiated, here we have the group's seminal Seven Songs set that first appeared on Fetish, plus the latest Assassin, earlier dance incarnations as Coup and Language and the excellent kitchen percussion of Urban Gamelan. This group promised so much, but the world still waits for that killer drop kick. Go to it. TC Wall

THE TWINS/RIG VEEDA

The Tale Of The Man With The Toothpaste Head

Illusion Production (15 Rue Pierre Curie, 14120 Mondeville, France)

●●½ Two UK outfits from Herts who turn up on this decidedly "quirky" collection of post-Barrett loon-outs. Cosmopolitan, confusing and romantically unaffected by the biz, both The Twins and Rig Veeda — who are afforded a side piece — make music of unmistakable personal value. This is an LP that'll scratch at your psyche and you'll only realise you love it to death when you wake up whistling it as the house burns down. A must. Dave Henderson

UG AND THE CAVEMEN

Ug And The Cavemen

Media Burn MB 16 RR C ● Out of the swirling mists of time comes this raw, reckless album of primitive rockabilly, from a time where dinosaurs and Racquel Welch in a leopard skin bikini still rule. Neanderthal numbers like Tarzan's Jungle Home give way to the ugly stupidity of Be A Caveman. This elaborate joke pales considerably within a couple of numbers despite flashes of psychotic flair. A bizarre spoof that's just not funny and with its lack of content it's hard to see even the most mindless, neanderthal rockabilly going apace for it. Dick Mescal

THE UNDERNEATH

Lunatic Dawn Of The Dismantler

EI Records ACME 9 P ●● Karl 'Shock-Headed Peter' Blake aka The Underneath's newest venture is not exactly built for consumerability. If Blake is extending a friendly handshake, it's one covered in musical scores and lyrical bilsters — turgid or twisted melodies, demonic guitar riffs, carthartic, bilesome lyrics, unsettling tape excerpts and a fearsome, literate command of the perverse and disturbed experience. Compelling as well as revolting — it's an ugly statement, but then since it's aim is to act as mirror to the society that spawned it, it's meant to be. Ugh. Martin Aston

UT

Early Live Life

Blast First BFFP 12 RT C ●● "I am evil, I am the Devil," she screamed in shattered vocals. This demonic triad rape guitars tuned to a wretched pitch.

With ruthless insistence they attack the senses and subvert the concept of music with their hideous agitation of our nomadic fears and dissonance. With discord comes the unearthly howl of warning, of unease, curtailing its power through its own abstraction (what? — ed). Without edges or form and wrought with tension this is a musical sculpture of sorts, or is it just pretence? Alex Kadis

VARIOUS

Bludgeoned! A Collection

Bludgeoned! BLUD 1 RC ●● A 14 band compilation comprised totally, it would appear, of fruitcakes. Top marks for eccentricity goes to Pop Parker with their Rubber Bone Boy — two voices, acoustic guitar and a sort of Simon And Garfunkel meets late '60s Bowie. "Don't you back down from your operation now," they chirp! Then there's The Shrubs' Dead Teachers (Eccentric CD Grey Mix) — a collage of noise resembling a psychopath loose in a china shop. Best title on the album belongs to Jenny And The Cat Club with No One Loves You At All, which is a sort of Monkees on downers.

With Brilliant Corners and Blyth Power, among others, also getting a look in this is a compilation of madness certain to edge up the corners of even the most downturned mouths. A real grin. Pop Pocton

The Cutting Edge

Cooking Vinyl GRILL 001 MM C ●● As soon as any genre becomes established, it also becomes a cliché. So it goes. Folk music's had a rough, tough time since punk sneered, but not anymore, as anyone from The Pogues to The Proclaimers will tell you. The Cutting Edge is a selection of contemporary British folk, sorry, roots music and is rife with diverse, surprising riches, from trad to hybrid to country and full circle again.

The sleeve graphic of a razor-ear-ringed mohican playing the fiddle may be a crass image but it shows exactly Cooking Vinyl's attitude to roots music in 1987. The best known names here are The Oyster Band, The Mekons, We Free Kings and Gone to Earth, but Malcolm's Interview, Andrew Cronshaw and Mark T And The Brickbats all offer absorbing, fresh music. Martin Aston

Meanwhile Back At The Ranch Big Dan Is Fighting For His Life

Bam Caruso MARX 075 RC C Well, with a title like that how can it fail? The excellent Bam Caruso organisation have come up with a low-priced collection of their contemporary roster, eleven acts and 12 tracks in all. And what they all have in common are musical influences firmly planted in the groovy '60s — in fact, some of the contributions are such uncannily accurate pastiches of the original models (especially The Patriots who sound more like the Beatles than the Beatles ever did, and The Palace Of Light who duet like a latter-day Walker Brothers) that they're almost parodies. So with tongue firmly in cheek, don those square-rimmed shades and get frugging to the sounds of The Bryan Marshall Orchestra's SPYDA's Web, a near-perfect John Barry TV theme, Paul Roland's psychedelic meanderings in Twilight Of The Gods, Nick and Tracey (from Voice of the Beehive's sparkling cover version of Somebody To Love... the list goes on. Karen Kent

Project One

The Produkt Korps PK1 RR C ●●● Here we have a compilation album from a worthy selection of artistes working in and around sounds and words. Loosely titled The Perversion Of Technology, it is a dark and disturbing view of life, shedding a murky light into obscure crevices. There's the peculiar noises and electro acoustic music of Barry Anderson, while Andrew Lewis and Non rub shoulders briskly with Robert Anton Wilson's spoken piece Calvi, The Pope And The Brotherhood and Kathy Acker's extract from Empire Of The Senseless. Coupled with the artwork, which comes from among others, Coil and Graf Haufen, the whole is a black gem to be treasured and used only sparingly. Liz Evans

Reggae Dance Party

Real Authentic Sound RAS3018 RA ●● A suitably titled compilation for there is a real party atmosphere captured on this set with contributions from the likes of Barrington Levy, Michigan & Smiley, Horace Andy, Sugar Minott and others. Perhaps the material selected is a little on the obvious side. RAS have decided to play it safe by including such well known cuts like Paul Blake And The Bloodfire Posse's Get Flat, Black Uhuru's rock flavoured Great Train Robbery and Horace Andy's digital elementary among other similarly generally acknowledged sides, but there is no denying the music's verve for all its easy option. Evelyn Court

Square Roots

Folk Roots FROOT 001 NM C ●● In the wake of Michelle Shockers and amid a general broadening of all things folky, Folk Roots magazine has put together this 15 track collection of the multi-faceted genre to illustrate the kind of thing that gets into their glorious publication. Plus factors range from a first introduction to Bulgarian Nadka Karadjova, Brendan Croker's drawl, Ted Hawkins twang slang and more, while Swan Arcade's track summons up vision of real ale, bad fitting Levi's and singers with a hand over one ear. Er, mine's a pint, Jack. Dave Henderson

Minutes

Les Temps Modernes 11m v.xv FF C A strange collection gathered 'round a teetering coffee table to impress the intelligentsia. Deep and dour stuff face on against prose and poetry with more than a smidge of character. Hear for yourselves the words and wisdom of Billy Burroughs, Jean Cocteau, Jacques Derrida plus the extrovert ramblings of Dick Jobson and accapella forays from The Monochrome Set and Louis Phillipe. Success and failure is debatable, but ex Tux Moonie Winston Tong plays it for kicks and smells sweet on versions of Going Out Of My Head and For Your Love. A conversation piece. Indeed! Dave Henderson

VARIOUS ARTISTS

The Timebox

Timebox Records TIME 001 P ●● In which 16 Bull And Gate regulars play for little more than the price of two Timebox entrance tickets.

Like most compilations, the quality is mixed but enjoyably varied, with lesser stars such as the suave Black Cillas, the humble Saviours Of Pop Music and the quaint Brad Is Sex rubbing shoulders with the better known Stump, Blyth Power and Thatcher On Acid.

While one or two contenders still need to shake off their Morrissey fixations, the stars of the show are Resistance, who with a bit more experience could soon be taking their soulful rock music to more expensive places. They can play in my living room anytime. Alex Bastedo

JOE LOUIS WALKER

Cold Is The Night

Hightone Records CH208 P ●●● After 20 years of unrewarded effort this man almost gave up on his musical career. He was saved from enrolling at The San Francisco State University in the nick of time by Hightone who subsequently "discovered" him. So the story goes. But the story isn't as interesting as the music. This is a fine LP, and Joe Louis Walker has an impressive, gutsy old voice.

A real R&B mood blends with nonchalant soul, peaks in gospel and bathes in swaggering blues. With influences ranging from Earl Hooker to Womack, Joe Louis is inspirational, rich and full of promise. Alex Kadis

WALL OF VOODOO

Happy Planet

IRS 5997 ●●● The Voo's are back with their fourth LP and still that Texical noise haunts proceedings, even on the opening cover of The Beach Boys' Do It Again. More lyrical bending, acerbic guitar play-offs and biscuit tin rhythms are unwrapped as Happy Planet reveals it has a more than palatable atmosphere.

Still a touch left field for chart romance, the amalgam of the quintet's diverse talents makes for a timeless noise that's both warming and aloof. TC Wall

WILD BILLY CHILDISH AND BIG RUSS WILKINS

Laughing Gravy

Empire CPO 195 B C ● 1/2 Yes, the North Kent Delta blues revival starts here and this tacky ten inch provides some reasons as to why it won't be going much further than cultdom. Bona-bad production, probably dubbed on a dodgy tape deck, reveal Bill from the 'shakes and Russ from The Len Bright Combo turning in below par readings of old style stuff that's rough and without reason. An OK laff after several bevs, but little in the way of full time enjoyment. Johnny Eager

X RAY POP

Welcome To My Guinea Pig's Box

X Ray Pop BO 0069 (Pilot, 10 rue de l'Elysee, 37000 Tours, France) ●● Excellent playful pop with continental accents, a grainy yet compulsive sound and some neat lines in melody. X Ray Pop appear to be a conglomerate of artistes who've seen action through a series of tapes and now have several vinyl 45s supplemented by this fine album. Erotic and evocative, Welcome To... is essential for an afternoon of caressing a long cool cocktail. Genius plus, no less. Johnny Eager

NO ROOM AT THE UG

THE ATOM SPIES And Their Treacherous Pop On

Microdot Cake Records NM C Bleep bleep! Squeak squeak! They are the Allens In Your Wardrobe and, at this very moment, are plotting to emerge from between the polo necks to subvert your feet. Funtime frolics and dyslexic dancing. And beware the holographic 3-D adverts in human form, lest they shout slogans in your ear! Twelve inch silliness heaven. DI

THE BACHELOR PAD The Albums Of Jack Warholasound

RR C This is brilliant. Like the first time you ever heard See Emily Play, or Oh Greebo I Love You, or Sputnik (before the novelty wore off), or World Domination Enterprises' Asbestos Lead Asbestos. Even better, it doesn't sound like any of them, it's just a colossal adrenalin gush littered with guitars, echoed keyboards and "Yeah, yeah, yeah". Do not miss this. DH

BAMBI SLAM Don't It Make You Feel Product Inc RT C

This is what we want! Enough posturing here on this homage to rock 'n' roll excess to force the anorak brigade to retire at half time with shattered dreams and nosebleeds. Bambi Slam's cellist could never seem to cut it live but on Don't It Make You Feel she peaks at the right time with some stirring back-up to front man Roy's slip curling vocals. ID

THE BEATITUDES Home Alone Exile P

BEATMANIACS 5432 Love Sign Us Up Records Rocking R&B from

be-quiffed South London growers. The A side is a bit insipid, in need of bite, but flip it over to Satisfied, a sneaking drawl with a snarl in its lips and some mean and nasty guitars. LE

BELL & THE OCEAN Living Underground Part One Live

Twist Music (105/107 Wandsworth Bridge Rd, London SW6)

Three live tracks taken from a live cable TV gig recorded at The Underground, Croydon. Rock with an enormous Rrrr. Big guitars, a bouncing beat and honking brass section aren't particularly stirring but if you like a bit of raunch, it's fine. LE

BFG Western Skies Attica RR C

So what if the drums sound like Doktor Avalanche's bastard offspring? So what if the guitars and bass swirl around in a mysterious but pleasant way? And who cares if the singer could be the nice, young brother of Andrew Eldritch? Who the hell are the Sisters Of Mercy anyway? The Mission? Pah. If you like moody psychegoth that's not too heavy then this is for you. Satisfaction guaranteed. DI

THE BLOODY MARYS Stain Mess Records JOSS 2 Re C

Well, the second single from Bristol based BM's is rather nice pop with that swaggering commercial edge that reveals that they've a Red Guitar in their ranks. Neat stuff that's well worth your spondoolics. DH

BLOOD UNCLES Crash Virgin Way-hey-hey-rock-and-roll goes

chunka chunka bang boom crash. Not exactly amazing but it sure ain't no limp lettuce leaf either. Buy it for the other side which boasts a beaty beauty called Beat-hag. Listen and feel the blood pump faster, faster. DI

BLUE TRAIN Land Of Gold Dreamworld RT C

A four track EP from a bedraggled four piece whose wispy vocal lines and almost Latin beats make for tea-time pop that's catchy but at times cumbersome. Almost but not quite. Matt Bianco goes indle, perchance? DH

PHILLIP BOA For What Bastards? Red Flame NM C

Remixed and thrown out at the tale end of Phil's UK visit, this is angry, angst-ridden noise with a club in its hand. JE

THE BOLSHOI Please Beggars Banquet The Bolsh edge yet closer to chart action with another tuneful pop ode that's blessed with a scurrilous guitar break, hot enough to take the varnish off David Coleman's forehead. DH

THE CAPITOLS Who Can Tell? Cake Slice 2 NM C Ah, the renaissance of jingle jangle pop. A great song, a groovy twang and some ill fitting anoraks for these cats who manhandle the crust from the mouth of The Shop Assistants. A gal who can sing and play guitar too. Brill. TCW

CCP A Solution Transglobal RT C A tastefully packaged inside out Russian-styled sleeve, a sleazy Ferry-esque vocal line, some neat count in vocals in "straight" English and a mean dance rhythm make for potential radio play, chart attention and a possible hit. DEM

CHATSHOW Kings of Confusion Federation RR C There's nothing confusing about this; a fairly nice commercial pop single. Sort of rock in a vein similar to Comsat Angels but worth a listen. DI

CHINESE GANGSTER ELEMENT EP CGE RR C Halifax calling... and sounding a little subdued. There are almost some songs here but the finish is woolly, the mix is indecisive and the tunes get lost in the battle to finish first. A good team talk and tactics meeting is called for. DH

CIRCUS CIRCUS CIRCUS Inside The Inside Out Man BDI NM C A must for all sun worshipping guitar lovers. This is neat pop with a great guitar break sprinkled daintily with a trif verse/chorus play off. Miss at your peril. Next stop the big boys. DH

CLOSE LOBSTERS Never Seen Before Fire Records NM C The Lobs snap their shiny claws at chart success with this sparkling Paisley pop song. Never Seen Before is a busy little number, bubbling over with tinkling guitars. Even a hint of the Van Morrisons in here with breezy girl harmonies augmenting the singer's Scottish burr. A thoughtful one for summer days. LE

CONCRETE GOD Floor Phlox CGOD 1 W Weird. The Conc's plan to play Guernica, sound almost like Nico jamming with New Order and have a four track 45 that bodes well for life after Bowie. Great name, almost a song, and a sleeve that sets them right on the road to toytown. DH

CULTURE Peel Session Strange Fruit SFPS024 W Classic reggae populists from the late '70s on a belated Peel four song set (first transmitted in '83). When The Clash shook hands with reggae, circa '77, Culture were in the afterthought with their Two Sevens Clash album and justifiably reached a wider audience. That track plus three suitably atmospheric overtures featuring the exquisite voice of Joseph Hill are included. DH

SUGAR RAY DINKE Cabrini Green Rap Flame MELT 3 C Inner-city deprivation wracked over a vinyl background with force, angst and venom spiralling hap-hazardly from the grooves. A dance-floor grind with more than a wack of charisma. TCW

DION D Yard Beat Is Fine Craze Frazz C From the house of Ariwa sound sculptures and the flinger of The Mad Professor, Dion D mixes it with a fresh beat and a reggae rhythm. Neat for the most part hampered only by a sick nursery tune break. DH

DOG FACED HERMANS Unbend Demon Radge RADGE FE C Edinburgh's fave art collective slips out of the wardrobe with a gruesome triple A seven, featuring all the noises that are right and wrong, on a blurted sax meets Big Flame explosion. Play that dischord son, and dance to it too. DH

DUB SEX Then Now Skysaw RR C Kapow! Peel faves, mucho press and a grinding, gurgling noise that bubbles and bites all the way from Manchester. Dub Sex offer four tracks, get Swansy, sing like Hugh Cornwall with laryngitis and make exceedingly good records. JF

EIRIN PERYGLUS Bronson Welsh, Celtic And Worldwide OFN 03 RR C Welsh electronica with a pop beat that files under DANGEROUS. Sung in native tongue and delivered with some force, Eirin Peryglus are young and ferocious and likely to improve massively. Encouragement and big funds needed. DH

FULL FATHOM FIVE Four Song EP South East Records (208 E Davenport St, Iowa City, Iowa 52240, USA) Speedily performed collection of tuneful guitar music that almost catches the record arm and sends it dancing across the room. High powered with potential, for arm thrashers everywhere. DH

FLYING COLOR Dear Friend Shigaku Presents SN Classic, bruised Merseybeat melody line and guitar reinforcements that should temporarily satiate unfussy Alex Chilton/Big Star fanatics. Anglophilia is still alive and kicking in New York. MA

FOUR CAME HOME/PASSION OF ICE Split Single Wounded Knee Records RR C A double first release by these two new bands. Side one sees Four Came Home getting their teeth into Diamonds In the Sky and H — with a hint of swirling Gothdom about them, all Banshee vocals and moody guitars. Turn to Passion Of Ice and we have the rumble of serious rock. The singing is a tiny bit off, but altogether alright if you seek things Cultish. LE

THE GARGOYLES Mad Men From The Planet Sex Reasonable RR C Wacko wacks, from Hull, do for Humberside what the sadly deceased Half Man's did for Tranmere. Raucous pop with laffs. TT

JESSIE GARON AND THE DESPERADOES The Rain Fell Down Narodnik FE C This 12 inch version updates the seven with three new songs that unfortunately add little more to the achetypal lilt of present-day Scottish indiepop. At least Douglas 'Mary Chain' Hart's production creates enough space for The Desperadoes' three guitars, and obviously the group are more abrasive, bolder types than Talulah Gosh et al. MA

GIZMO Psychedelic Rock & Roll MCM C Born To Be Wild has the riffs ripped out of it once again but, seeing that this record has a rumba break in the middle, Gizmo are not only forgiven; they are recommended for fans of freak music, wherever they vegetate. Freedom to burn brain cells in any quantity is our right! DI

THE GREAT LEAP FORWARD Controlling The Edges Of Tone Ron Johnson Records ZRON20 NM C Strikingly aware lyrics, jangly guitars and furious melodies which seem vibrant and ignorant of the sad state of affairs of which this man sings. The real success of this amazing 12 inch is its ability to sound like music and yet still tackle its socio/anthropological/political theories with a harshness that swings out beyond the realms of the musical form. Strong and moving. AK

GUERNICA Orange And Red Idol Records RT C And then out of the blue, well, what's all this about? Guernica are tastefully packaged and they play tastefully strummed symphonies that suggest more than a little bit that they'll soon be signing their name to a totally extortionate deal. Pointed pop with melody that rips at your spine and catches you hook, line and sinker. Brill. DH

HANGMAN'S BEAUTIFUL DAUGHTER Love is Blue Dreamworld RT C The name comes from The Incredible String Band, claims an old oak in the corner, but the sound is pure VU-meets-Byrds in a sparkling pop stand-off that reverberates across the room. Effervescent fun produced by Dan Treacy. DH

THE HEPBURNS Made Up Cherry Red W A real oddity this. Four tracks that give little away in terms of understanding, as the Heps ramble and scramble through their poppy poetry in a hand waving non-fashion. Subtle and charming with memorable hooks that linger in the psyche, somewhere. They could be big, or... DH

HOBBIES OF TODAY Dream On Dream Kid Rune C The vibes were good for this; the press blurb had a serpent swallowing its tail and details that this lot come from the Bygummer Triangle (up North), so strangeness aplenty was expected. Typically though, this is a fairly pleasant jaunt through pastures green and ordinary. Another alright pop tune. DI

THE HONEYMOONERS Another Fit Of Laughter Mr Ridiculous FE C And another slab of popism from north of the border, it must be all the Irn Bru they drink. Mellow jazz-tinged melodies that go for broke and succeed quite admirably. JE

THE HOUSEMARTINS Five Get Over Excited Go Discs More W pop for purists. Neat enough, but short on legendary status. The Housemartins make it to order, will chart but look hazy in direction. JE

THE HOUSE OF LOVE Shine On Creation CRE 043 RT C Overheated humid pop sounds bustling forth for a long, hot and sweaty summer. House Of Love drift above your head in a flurry of inconsequential guitar and vocal lines that leave nothing more than a bristling tingle at the back of your neck. Soft and lush, plus the X ingredient? TCW

IGAM OGAM Caset OFN (Tyr Stesion, Llangwyllog, Mon, Wales)

A slice of fragmented Welsh pop which hurls itself unceremoniously from side to side. Should have been our Eurovision entry. Excellent. DH

THE INSANE PICNIC Magistrates and Saints Waterfall

Records RR C A purple haze lingers here. This threesome, originating from England's very own East Coast, have squashed The Doors and Mark E Smith together and from the resulting sticky much a song trickles forth. A poem about silver snakes and things is given a dubbish sound treatment — odd and groovy. LE

THE JUNE BRIDES Peel Session Strange Fruit P From latterday, bittersweet June Bride days (God, nostalgia!), there's not too much to choose between these versions of This Town, One Day and We Belong and their originals, while Waiting For A Change which, though peppered by trumpet over a shuffling beat, backs up Phil Wilson's decision to record the song in its original C & W format and his first solo single. MA

THE LORRIES Crawling Mantra Red Rhino C Previously Red and Yellow, the Lorries have lost words rather than music. A beautifully noisy guitar and a slowish beast beat pummel you where it has most effect. Right between the ears. Short in length but bold, by golly! DH

GAYNOR ROSE MADDER Are You In Pain Ugly Man RR C A poignant question from half of Shiny Two Shiny courtesy of A&R tickling Ugly Man roster. Contagious stuff that, with the right breaks and an early summer blast, might just impress the newly lovesick among us. TCW

MDMA Godsquad Ediesta CALC 024 RR C Aaaaargh! The sound of Motorhead on HI NRG, well, that's what it says here, and in truth this scorching three tracker is a violent hybrid of those opposed factions. With ex Cassandra Complex people rubbing things against ex Dead Vaynes and an Executive Slacks person, this not only has cred but style with it. Don't miss. TCW

MIGHTY MIGHTY Built Like A Car Chapter 22 CHAP 12 NM C

Classy gawk rock with tuneful melodies and a talented throat holding the whole thing together. The Mighties are like the boy next door with a guitar and Farfisa, nice songs that'll turn heads and vol controls up. DH

MY BLOODY VALENTINE Sunny Sundae Smile Lazy RT C

Being something of a sucker for American '60s pop, this clutch of songs from Dublin's My Bloody Valentine had me in seventh heaven. Why? Because their music has got all the fixtures and fittings of that original sound: nursery-rhyme tunes, wistful, dippy lyrics like "Let's fall in love ... it's exciting", glorious Mamas And Papas-style harmonies and so on — yet in My Bloody Valentine's case, something their predecessors didn't have — that garage-inspired white noise. KK

THE NEW CHRISTS Detritus What Goes On Records SN C

Despite that fab name this four track is pretty much yer standard rocking Australians at the beach. No Next Time is the belt of lager that hits the parched patch and brings maximum thirst relief but it stands alone among mediocrity. This redeeming factor means that here is one to watch and leave to mature, in oak vats, for a while longer. DI

NOSEFLUTES The Ravers Ron Johnson Records NM C

Five juicy chunks recorded last August for Johnny Peel. Noseflutes are critical analysts à la vinegar. Sax scuttles across limbo-ing bass; shredded guitar and diced synth are added to vocal puke and trampled into your carpet. A good record for a not so hot world; share the dross and smile a wry one. DI

THE OYSTERS Mine Caroline Taang SN (import) The Rolling Stones' Not Fade Away riff is tied to the back of a skateboard and dragged across gravelly hardcore territory. Flipped over, Tell Me is a Pebbles garage type given much the same treatment. In other words, Boston's Oysters are fast, snotty, fun, pretty cool and worthy of your miserable wages. MA

PLACE OF LIGHT City Of Gold Bam-Caruso RT C No, sincerely folks, they don't write them like this anymore — a slow, lush, poignant, stately ballad trip that falls between the Walker Bros and Peter Hammill. The Bam-Caruso connection will stain Palace Of Light with '60s colours but inevitably all three songs here are out of time. MA

THE PASADENAS In The Past Few Days MC2 Records SN

Three slight, moddish beat-pop songs from three French Marcs, better known as The Pasadenas. Out of the three, Teenage Breakdown is sparser and moodier which lessens the cute, teen-naivety of Follow That Car and Them! MA

THE PASSMORE SISTERS Every Child In Heaven RR C The Passmore siblings get all worked up with this beaty little number. "Let's franchise!" — cries the head Sister, rousing us to action, although to what purpose I'm not quite sure. Nevertheless, Every Child In Heaven is their best-ever single, with plenty of bouncing energy and pounding drum bits. LE

THE PERFECT DISASTER Hey Hey Hey Glass GLAEP 107

NM C Four track EP deep from the heart of Beds. Sound lyrical melody chunks riddled with catchy bits and the kind of thing that could well transcend the cult early evening programming. Er, phew, what a scorcher, s'pose. DH

PIGBROS with THE MEMBRANES Now Is The Time To

Remove Your Mask Cake Records SLICE 1 NM C Aaaaah! After Age Of Chance reach mega stardom (well, almost) by covering Prince's Kiss, Pig Bros and the Memb's team up to do an injustice to Cameo's Word Up. Neat too, even if it's a little understated. Three other explosive missiles and a hot new launching pad in Cake too. DH

PLAYING AT TRAINS A World Without Love Idea P Melancholy rainy Thursday afternoon pop, that reflects inwardly and avoids depression through some neat harmonies. Graham Nash, Norm Wisdom and a bleak street brass band are reminiscent. Er, yeah. JE

THE PREFECTS Peel Session Strange Fruit P From 1979, Robert Lloyd's first pre-Nightingales group were spirited, guitar-rough punkers in school trows who would have (wrongly) been called shamblers back then. Faults, Motions, Barbarellas and Total Luck are all perfect examples of The Prefects' terse, wayward affrontery. Essential. MA

PSYCHIC TV Magick Defends Itself Temple RT C A two-sided affair seeing PTV joined at the seams by ex-Soft Cell mate Dave Ball, featuring John F. Kennedy and Pope Johannes Paulus II. Two cuts of dancefloor rhythms and Gen the P humming and haling over the top. There is, as ever, wit and wisdom of the Temple sort here ... and a neat little melody line too. TCW

THE RED Those Who Try (Don't Listen To Fools) Lost

Moment LM12402 RT C The Red look like nice boys but beneath that smooth-jawed veneer lies a resolute, indefatigable sound. Lost in an indie precinct this is chart material and would fare better as a gross A-ha. Steve Carter's vocals reach plaintively over an instrumentation which is both uplifting and penetrating. Definitely an appetiser for their forthcoming LP. Duran Duran beware! AK

RESTLESS Ice Cold ABC ABCS013T P Ice Cold has been a high point of the lads' live set for a long while now and I'm glad they've taken time out to re-record it (it was previously available on their first album). Now they're a lot slicker and studio wise they've done the song justice and the flip side, Stranger, is equally as good, with producer Pete Gage pushing his (and the band's) talents to the limit. SG

ELEANOR RIGBY Over And Over Waterloo Sunset Russ 103 P

Model looks and so-so voices mean Eleanor Rigby could be doing a lot better for herself. Unfortunately, these qualities are rendered useless when limited in such an obtuse way. Cute only in its idiosyncracies, Over And Over offers nothing new or exciting. Tuneless and limp this off-key ditty is merely a bad rehash of a style we bade farewell to 25 years ago. AK

TRACY SANTA To Hell In a Handtruck Exile P Undernourished production of a Neil Young styled throaty tune that's bereft on a dusty road between country and the Flamin' Groovies. Nice, but woolly. TCW

< BAD SPORT OF THE MONTH: Rt Hon Jeffrey Dickin BB and bar >

21 UNDERGROUND

YOU AIN'T GOT A CHANCE, IF YOU DON'T DIG THAT UG!

THE SCREAMING TREES Iron Guru Native RR C Mean and caustic guitar sound raked humbly over an upbeat rhythm that'll shake many a dancefloor. The Screaming Trees are nightclub kids who've progressed through the difficult world of sub-rock/post-punk holocaust soundscapes to a neo-rap cut-up that pairs Cabaret Voltaire with The Monochrome Set. I'd like to think that this is just another string to Sheffield's bow and that decentralisation is a possibility, and this is a sweet background noise for such whims. Brill. DH

THE SING MARKET Via TV Dark Network B C Dark Network is a spin-off from Sixties revival label The Dance Network, and its first signing is The Sing Market, an odd trio consisting of singers Carrie Booth and Morgan, plus veteran pub rocker Andrew Bodnar on bass. Via TV is a disquieting piece, very atmospheric and rambling, with electronic sub-doodlings where you don't expect them and vocals sung in a pure chorister's voice as if its innocence was on the very edge of corruption. KK

THE SOUP DRAGONS Can't Take No More Raw TV RT C Go go go it Soupies, with another slice of Buzzcocky pop that churns and spirals into the frontal lobes. More melody and a spruce-on-the-loose whimsical undercurrent make for a chart contender. Neat. TC W

STARVATION ARMY New Ways To Burn EP St Valentines

Records SN Recorded in a mine shaft somewhere near Cleveland, Ohio, Starvation Army are rock fragments refiled in a white hot kiln. From hardcore (Drinkin' Dog and City As A Ghost) to Stooges heartburn (Lose This Planet) to even Pere Ubu's restless spell (the title track), SA find new ways to burn rock's natural juice. MA

STEPH MEANS JUSTICE The Price You Pay Exile P Pale underplayed country pedal-steel harmony affair that lacks a killer vocal line. Nice song begging for a big arrangement and more power. JE

THE SUMMER SUNS Honeypearl/Rachel-Anne Easter

Records SN Named after the Chris Stamey song no doubt, this is pure sunshine playroom pop spangle from Perth, honeydripping with Rickenbackers and creamed harmonies. Next to Stamey though, The Summer Suns are too cute and coy to swoon over. MA

THEM PHILISTINES Tales From The Stagnant Pond EP

Lowther Street LSR TP 01 RR C Yes, ten years on and punk reaches Carlisle. A mean bottle trashing gruffness exudes from the grooves of this reaperesque metal excursion and the charm and charisma of melody at times make for the right stuff. Kachung, to say the least. DH

THE THIEVES Talk Your Head Off Planetarium THEFT 1 FF C

A band in need of a producer with a chorus that should make this popette a tastier hors d'oeuvre than it actually is. Neat enough for early evening but lacking that big crunch. TC W

3 ACTION (Don't Lose) That Stealin' Feelin' Ediesta CALC

023 RR C More from Hull and this time 3 Action's poignant prose is massaged into life with a much harder commercial sound that doesn't lose their bustling bravado. More dynamism in the production should lift these reprobates into a healthier circulation bracket. For now, this is worth your time anyhow. DH

Shaken and agitated loudmouth raps from the excellent Three Wise Men. London's bolshie answer back service come up with an even harder headbutt than their rivetting Urban Hell 45. Get it. TC W

THE TIMES Boys About Town Artpop POP43Doz RT C A reissue of The Times' homage to several people. Witness tunes à la Bowie (née Jones), a verse or two for Dirk Bogarde and a side dedicated to Joe Orton. Folky rebel music set straight to the heart of your cult and a reasonably pleasant listen along the way. DH

TINY LIGHTS Flowers Through The Air Temple RT C The hippies are back, this time sponsored by Mr P Orridge and his Temple label. Air-borne shrubbery, April showers and a female voice innocently belting out a tune for Europe blend nicely to present an appealing song. Short lived joy however as the Byrds guitar, The Beatles string sound and Edwina Currie's mad laughter elbow their way in to create a rather cluttered psychedelic pastiche. ID

TUMBLING HEARTS You May Never Know Exile P Sante Fe Sisters relocated to Berlin with a cowgirl twang and check shirt chirp-along that'll do nicely. A cover of an antique obscurity, the whole full colour package is steeped with cred and harmonious romanticism. JE

TWANG Kick And Complain EP Ron Johnson NM C A reissue of the first Twang single with three new songs. Twang's efficient, typically Ron Johnson dislocation dance — more Gang Of 4 than Big Flame — suffers from a thin, uneventful production, only Cold Tongue Bulletin manages to build up the requisite kinetic energy. Disappointing. MA

VARIOUS The Phase Three Mod Bands Unicorn NM C

Four worldwide modernists of varying merit and style on a value for cash seven inch slab. City Motions from Holland sound uninviting, while London's XL show a lack in direction, but side two's opener, from Suffolk band The Pictures, has the pulsing sound that makes it transcend categories. Finally San Diego's Manual Scan have an intriguing if uncontrolled sound worth catching. Top marks for investigative journo, half for potential. DH

THE WALTONES Downhill Medium Cool MC 004 RR C More tempered country swing with guts from the finely tuned Medium Cool label. The Waltonones sound like down home boys with a tinge of humour and a sparkling line in arrangements. Downhill is a wow! DH

THE WARHOLAS Pop Art's Dead Piranha Records C A laid back jazzy lament(?) that would fit perfectly into the background as you and a friend trapse slowly around the Andy W exhibition admiring the work of the man. The two tracks on the B-side make this a worthy purchase though. DI

THE WARHOLS The Other Side Zoot (from 813 Chesterfield Rd, Woodseats, Sheffield) Enterprising pop with an over-riding guitar and vocal line that suggest more big league attention in the future. For now The Other Side is low budget fare that bodes well but doesn't really capitalise on the potential. DH

WE FREE KINGS The Wild Oceans EP DDT FF C Plenty of rollicking accordions and gritty vocals in this freewheeling cow-punk/folk rock style EP, which features two tracks from their recent seven inch Oceans and an extra two remixed numbers from their now deleted first single. A riotous sound from people who kick up the hay in the face of the establishment. LE

WILD ANGELS She's Black and White Supreme FF C From the badlands north of the border, the Wild Angels come riding into town, trailing their slide guitars behind them. A catchy pop single created by a whole herd of boys with credible pasts — ex-members of Altered Images and Bourgie Bourgie mingle with Jazzateers and Flesh to make a sound with more than a hint of the prairie about it. Put on your 501's and head West, my son. LE

THE WISHING STONES New Ways Head HEAD 6(12) Re C From the lofty heights of the, er, Loft to the wistful, carressing tones of The Wishing Stones, Bill Prince has certainly come out from under, as Pete Astor's sidekick, with flying colours. His second glorious, rainbow hued single shows that these new ways are certainly winning ways too. DM

THE WOLFGANG PRESS Big Sex 4AD P C There's a grumbling heavy-handed beat lightened by a blistering surge of guitar on track one of this four song set, initiating the listener into the powdered-blonde-with-a-rubber-mallet sound of the Press. Outrageously explosive and chant-heavy, this is disco muzak for plastered performance artists. A neat twist of rock melancholy with a tune to whistle all the way back to the asylum. DH

YEAH YEAH NOH Peel Session Strange Fruit SFPS026 P From January '86 the Noh's at their most potent and political with jazzier inflections from keyboard player Andy Nicholls. Bona version of the excellent Blood Soup and three similarly fine out-takes from black country bed sitter land. Yeah yeah yeah, DH

THE ZODIAC MOTEL Sunshine Miner Swordfish NM C "I was a living chemical, no intestines, my body became an ocean and I floated with it", say the notes on the back of the sleeve; faaaaar out! This 12 inch has four tracks full of bedlamic beats and gut-busting guitar with a voice a little reminiscent of early Johnny Rotten swooping over it (but that's not enough to keep this 'un from getting two thumbs moving in an upward direction). Necrophilia and feedback combine on Inside My Mine, the best tune here, to give you an aural seeing to. Enjoy. DI

BONZO DOG BAND

The Doughnut In Granny's Greenhouse

Edsel XED 209 P From the canyons of your past, the Bonzo's mix and match jazz, folk and lunacy for a pre-Everett/Half Man fiasco that's probably a giant hoot after a few beers. Wacko laffs that seem even further out on a limb in today's sit-com tedium. A perfect back up after the Python re-runs have finished. Dave Henderson

THE ELECTRIC FLAG

The Trip — Original Motion Picture Soundtrack

Edsel ED211 P Anyone looking for freaky psychedelics from this soundtrack of the cult film from 1967 starring Peter Fonda will be disappointed. The Electric Flag was the vehicle of guitarist Mike Bloomfield and included luminaries like Buddy Miles and Nick Gravenites playing an experimental waltz, ragtime, jazz and blues synthesis; short sketches of which make up the bulk of the material here. Moods range from lugubrious to something approaching sentimental, though all we get mostly are tasters of styles and the sense of listening to a movie score is always there. The only occasions when the band really extend themselves are on the Chicago blues riff Gettin' Hard and the actual seven-minute acid guitar freakout Fine Jung Thing, one of the first consigned to record. Evelyn Court

THE GHOST

For One Second

Bam-Caruso KIRI 077 R C • This was The Ghost's one and only album from 1970 which probably sold 162 copies at the time and has had grown men and women weeping into their willowy beards to get a copy ever since. Bam-Caruso, who know about such things, say The Ghost were 'a psycho-collision between Family and Fairport Convention'. Well, there's certainly some fine, plagiarised flowering folk-rock a la Fairport between bouts of blissed-out West Coast acid-guitar and organ, but as for the rest... Martin Aston

THE MARINE GIRLS

Beach Party

Cherry Red BRED 75 P I would have thought Cherry Red might be better occupied looking for new bands to release records by — or will they miss the latest in a big burst of indie activity? Great records like these are reminders of Cherry Red's once illustrious past when they could pick up freshly supreme outfits like The Marine Girls, captured here in their frilly best (before Tracey grew up and formed "a serious band" instead) and catapult them to mini-stardom. This is a sweet record with more than its fair share of whimsically catchy ditties and some appallingly naff ones. A pointless release. Pratinja

Suspicion

Ace CH 213 P Young Tel must have been the only Presley impersonator to actually have the king rip him off by covering his best known hit, Suspicion almost note for note. I've not got a CD player yet, so I don't know what the fuss is all about but the Ace group of companies must think it's a good thing. In among their June releases are a load of CD's including The Best Of The Chi-Lites, Chronicle Vol. 1 & 2 by Creedence Clearwater Revival, The Fifties — Rockabilly Fever (comp), The Fifties — R&B Vocal Groups (comp), The Fifties — Juke Joint Blues (comp), Don't Stop The Music by George Jones (from the Glad label) and R&B Dynamite by Etta James. The latter is also issued as a regular rooster plastic thing too. On vinyl Ace has Volume Seven in the series Rock 'n' Roll Party (plenty of unknown greats here and the tackiest sleeve in a long while), plus albums from Jimmy McCracklin and Earl Forest & The Beale Streeters (who featured Bobby Bland and Johnny Ace) — both licensed from the Duke/Peacock set up.

On the soul side, Kent are back in action with No No No No No... Not My Girl, a 16 track set of Northern shufflers from the Chicago area. With that out of the way, Ace Records are proud to announce that Stax is back. With the same packaging as the sixties releases, they'll be flooding the market with 45s and LPs alike. The way things are at the moment they could have some top 20 hits on their hands. The first six releases on 45 are Private Number Judy Clay & William Bell, Who's Makin' Love 2 by Johnny Taylor, Time Is Tight from Booker T. & The MGs, Mr. Big Stuff by Jean Knight, Respect Yourself by The Staple Singers, and Shirley Brown's Woman To Woman.

Charly have two more albums of Sound Stage 7 recordings available. Nobody But Me by Ella Washington and a compilation titled Testifyin' featuring the deep soul sounds of Charles Smith, Chuck Armstrong and Ted Ford. Also, they're finally getting round to releasing the live Hank Ballard & The Midnighters album Live At The Palais (Harmersmith, December 1986), it's available on record, cassette and CD.

At Demon, blues/R&B legend Charles Brown returns to the scene with One More For The Road, while on Edsel The Bonzo Dog Band offer the world The Doughnut In Granny's Greenhouse. On Hi, Ann Peebles has the companion album to her exquisite Tear Your Playhouse Down set released, and that's called 99lbs. Ex-Velvet Underground token Brit John Cale gets Vintage Violence back on the racks through Edsel, and the label also offer the self-titled United States Of America LP, The Byrds' superb Younger Than Yesterday and a compilation of Ian Dury material titled, surprisingly, Sex And Drugs And Rock 'N' Roll. • Sonny Burgess and Larry Down team up for Rock Rockabilly on CFA, while Charlie Feathers has trucks culled from the late '70s to mid '80s on New Rockabilly Fever on New Rose through Pinnacle. Creation, of Painter Man fame, have reformed for a single called A Spirit Of Love on Jet, while on the soul front again, upcoming Hi releases, through the Demon axis, include Trying To Live My Life from Otis Clay and The Wright Stuff from OV Wright.

Edsel stuff in the pipeline includes Sly And The Family Stone's Fresh, The Byrds' Sweetheart Of The Rodeo and a collaboration between Bloomfieldz, Hammond and Dr John entitled Triumvirate. Demon will also be repackaging the primal Damned album Damned, Damned which first appeared on Stiff.

Sly Stone shows off his epic dress sense other. Terry was recording at the time of Elvis' critically acclaimed movie career. In fact there's a cover of Kiss Me Quick present here, but what's most appealing about Terry Stafford's recordings is the horrible wanky organ that features quite prominently through most of his work. Snakey G

History Of T Rex 1968-1977 The Singles Collection Vol 1

Priority MARCL 510 OK, here's the gripe first (and it's a biggie) — this double LP set has no explanatory sleeve notes, tracks which jump about all unchronologically, and not even an explanation of which were b-sides — which for all but the dedicated will have become lost in the mists of memory.

No doubt there will be more volumes of this collection to come, since this set merely brushes past some of Bolan's classics, like Metal Guru and Children Of The Revolution, while, say, Ride A White Swan is omitted.

And the rest? A wholly enjoyable selection, even if it does mismatch early, esoteric, selections like Child Star with the more substantial Groove A Little recorded in 1977 in the last year of his life, all on the same side. Carole Linfield

SIMON FISHER TURNER

Caravaggio original soundtrack

EI ACME 6 P A re-release of Turner's rich orchestral muses that are a million miles from his late '60s pop outbursts. Finely honed background sounds that lilt disarmingly into the sub-conscious and make Derek Jarman's tale of monks and painters a more pleasurable experience. TC Wall

VARIOUS

The Fort Worth Teen Scene (The Major Bill Tapes Volume 2)

Big Beat WIK 45 P Major Bill Smith is one of the great American eccentrics. In World War II he reached the rank of Major, but once back in civies he took to record production, his biggest success being Hey Paula by Paul & Paula in '62. Here for your pleasure are his mid '60s dabblings with garage punk, Texas style. The finest band for my money is The Jades, who have four tracks including covers of I'm Alright (Stones) and Don't Bring Me Down (Animals). There's also contributions from Electric Love, The Elite, The Rondels, The Livin' End, The Blue Notes, and Charles Christy, who covers For Your Love (Yardbirds) and I'm Down (Beatles). And you can thank Bal and Alec from The Sting-rays for compiling this pretty stoked album. Deke Wanger

VARIOUS

Illusions From The Crackling Void

Bam-Caruso MARX 085 R A •• Sixteen cerebrally stimulating samples of '60s Psychedelia. Well, actually, man, like eight of them are groovy and kind of trippy you know? Sounds alright to me. Hey! Mandrake Paddle Steamer and The Eyes. Wow! The Aquarian Age are fab too, man. Like, some of these bands are a bit heavy, and some of them are a bit naff too. At £2.99 it's no bum deal. Look at the wallpaper — its sort of rippling! Jazz Igy meth

LARRY WILLIAMS

Alakazam!

Ace CH 203 P A collection of un-issued recordings with a few alternate takes for good measure. Although he had hits in the '50s with songs such as Short Fat Fanny (alternate take included here), Williams has never really been taken seriously as one of the true rock 'n' roll greats. Recording for Specialty Records he's been rather overshadowed by Little Richard.

The bulk of the tracks here were recorded between 1957 and 1959 and show Larry experimenting with different styles of R&B getting away from his Boney Maronie sound. The ballad I Was A Fool To Let You Go is swamp pop, Hootchy-Koo is a piano-dominated stroller, and you should hear the stinging guitar on Make A Little Love. As a special treat Ace have included the original demo tape he sent to Specialty in 1954 of Jockomo (Iko Iko). Also worthy of a mention is the inconceivably titled Jelly Belly Nellie, the Fats Domino-esque Took A Trip, and his versions of Heeby-Jeebies and Rockin' Pneumonia And The Boogie Woogie Flu. Snakey G

Why did Vince Clark quit the Deps and Yazoo? How come he's still touring? What makes Andy Bell a rubber-clad mic-welding maniac? And if this is the Circus tour, where are the jugglers? Carole Linfield quizzes, Ronnie Randall clicks successful groups, Depeche Mode and then Yazoo, trading up each time like they were company cars.

And now? Now there's Erasure, a strange hybrid of a band who took a long time to rev up and drive into the charts. What makes Erasure different? What makes Vince, after all this time, still endure the tour circuit, with its cardboard existence? Was this all part of some masterplan? Is Vince Clark the embodiment of the independent spirit, forsaking success to keep his art as he wants it?

Andy Bell and Vince Clark, just one week into a nationwide tour, sit chewing on plastic food in a faceless Nottingham hotel and ponder.

"I don't think any of it out, it just sort of happened," says Vince.

Did you ever regret leaving the Deps or Yazoo?

"I'd like to think I've got no regrets but that's not true — everybody has regrets of some sort. But I never had second thoughts about leaving.

"When I left Depeche I thought that would be it, that no one would be interested any more. When I took the demo tape of Yazoo to Daniel Miller he was programming synths and didn't seem very interested. But I was really excited about the song, which was Only You, so I just started helping him program the synths so I could talk him into letting us record it. The whole time, he didn't seem particularly bothered about the single, which just made me more determined."

But, unlike the immediate blast to the top of the charts which Vince enjoyed with Alison Moyet, his liaison with Andy Bell didn't strike such an instant chord.

"It was depressing when the first single flopped," remembers Andy. "But once that bombed, we just thought, forget it, and kept on gigging and so on. The next two singles didn't do well either, but by that time it didn't seem to matter so much."

And if Erasure had never taken off?

"We wouldn't have called it a day," insists Vince. "By that time we'd developed a really aggressive attitude towards the record company. But we were thinking of leaving Mute. We felt we were doing all we could."

Vince Clark is not the most, well, assertive of people.

Rumour has it that he and his girlfriend are even moving house because he can't bear to sack his formidable cleaning lady. He doesn't seem to be the sort to throw tantrums, or insist upon privileges. Yet he's something of a moody enigma, having already done a moonlight flit on two suc-

Was it the lure of a major label's clout that led to this?

"Oh no . . . there weren't even any outside offers."

I must admit, had I been Andy Bell I'd've been getting paranoid. After all, Vince's previous track record with bands is rather Casanovic — didn't he even wonder if Vince was getting itchy feet for pastures new?

"No, I was really cocky and confident. Although once we started working together in the studio it was a bit daunting. I really respected Alf, and being in the same set up was really nerve-wracking. I did feel as if I was under Vince's shadow. I was frightened to say things, I didn't feel it was my place to do so. It was Vince's thing and I was the singer. The partnership is something which has developed gradually."

Was Erasure a pre-conceived product?

Vince: "It was at first. I didn't want to get involved, because I didn't know Andy, and I wasn't going to say, yeah, let's do six albums. But gradually it became apparent that we got on together."

Has it affected your career in any way, being on Mute rather than some major giant?

"We wouldn't have had a deal any more if we'd been on a major," says Andy. "We were getting worried at certain points, but Daniel's always been supportive, and never let us get discouraged about the lack of success. But obviously they're on a tight budget, and money is important."

"They're an adventurous label, they've got a diversity of groups, but transversely that's why they need a couple of hit groups," adds Vince.

Strangely, that success has been awhile arriving. Odd, since Yazoo's split arrived on a high note, and Alison Moyet's dreary solo efforts have met with mindless banner waving. And strange, too, since there was a howl of derision that Andy's voice was merely an Alf clone . . .

"I think that was inevitable, no matter what my voice was like," says Andy, rather coyly. "A lot of them also said I hadn't got any emotion in my voice and couldn't sing for toffee. It just made me more determined."

Are your songs supposed to be personal or are they just evoking an attitude?

"You don't have to make songs personal to make them good — it's quite easy to pretend. We've got fickle lyrics . . . words for the sake of it."

Even on the new LP, Circus?

"Just rubbish. No, they're a little bit more thought out than usual. The title track? That was just meant to evoke that life in a Northern town thing. But we had the tune first, and the song evolved from there."

Live, Andy enjoys playing the agent provocateur, the rubber clad renegade. But why all this camping it up? Isn't there a danger you'll alienate people? As it was, handfuls of the audience were heard to be mumbling about 'poofter bands' and the like.

"Well, that's just me, acting it out. And to be honest, I think most people see it as an act, and find that easier to deal with."

"I think that it is possible some people will think it's stereotyping, and others will hate it altogether. But there has to be a visual thing . . . like Boy George and Bowie . . ."

Don't you think it rather jars with the music? (A long silence follows.)

Andy: "Dunno. What do you think?"

Well, I think the music is more vulnerable than that. It demeans it slightly.

"People might strike it off as gender-bending, I suppose, which it's not."

Did you ever think of glossing over the homosexuality and going all out for teeny mass adulation? After all, the music is pop orientated enough for that?

Andy: "Well, we're already building up to the Depeche level — and we'll even overtake."

Do you want to overtake? Is there that rivalry?

Vince: "I think it's important for yourself not to think like that for your own sanity. You still get a thrill out of that, though — you still bitch about it! But we're not concerned with it."

Are Erasure on the edge enough? Or are they too mainstream?

Vince: "I don't think the average punter distinguishes between pop acts in that way. It's just a question of the music."

So what do you want to achieve, Vince, since it patently doesn't seem to be success or money?

"Being in a band was all I ever wanted. It was just something I always wanted to do. I started off in a gospel duo, and then I started writing songs."

Did you know what you wanted to get out of it?

"No. I'm not sure I know now. I haven't decided. The more I go on the more I don't know what I think. Your eyes become opened, you see how incestuous and superficial the music business all is, and you start thinking well, there must be something else outside all this . . ."

Outside all this at the moment is a giggly posse of auto-graph hunters. The tour circuit, though, isn't what it once was. Your average popstar these days is more likely to spend his or her nights phoning home and going to bed early with a cup of cocoa than trashing rooms or leaving an unhealthy disarray of stained sheets. Vince agrees.

"We're on an anti rock 'n' roll trip at the moment. And I do think it's really stupid that that guy in Simply Red goes on about sleeping around. I mean it was stupid before, but especially now."

What, because of AIDS?

"No, not especially, I just think it's a frightening attitude; that you can go around disrespecting people like that."

So, what next? Is it, as has been rumoured, that Vince will quit and open a restaurant?

"Nah . . . I think we'll just get a lot more experimentation in; become more self-indulgent."

And Andy? "I'm really naive. I want to be the media darling, but credible."

D&V

D&V: Drums and vocals. Neat. Jef Anteliffe and Andy Leach make up D&V, so, J & A, lads? "F... off."

If you'd caught D&V playing with Crass over the past decade you may just wonder why, in the current pop climate, D&V aren't huge. If past form counts for anything, in 12 months the Beastie Boys will be stripping their sound bare and releasing a 12 inch like D&V's latest, Snare, merely drums, rappin' and FX.

Ahead of their time?

"The Beastie Boys get set up on a major and are imported over here as cream cheese. What's sick is that we're already here, we already had the hard rhythms and we're putting words to it that are relevant to people in this country. Don't get me wrong, I love The Beastie Boys, but they're gonna get to a stage where a party trick with 12 condoms isn't enough. If they wrote about something serious they'd be dropped fast. But we're here, not partying, just making hard music and fighting."

The sparse D&V 12 inch, another imminent, precedes an album for summer — a vast change from the fast 'n' furious days of old. "Five years ago I'd get on stage and shout till my voice croaked, trying to drum my views into the kids watching. But after a while I asked why, because all those kids wanted was something fast and anti-system. Now I think before I shout, and though my views haven't changed, I want to make music. We've progressed beyond the thrash, we can still fight the injustice, but now the crowd can sweat dancing to it."

Snare is out on One Little Indian. Sweat and fight for your right, or you'll never get ahead.

Mark Balmer

HONEY isn't a group, it's a team. It isn't anyone, it's anybody. At the moment it happens to be Michelle, Debbie, Chris and Mark.

Honey sing their raps. They exist where pop meets rap, "pap" is their name for it. They're about youth and lazing around on the beach, endless summer made flesh and the re-birth of bubble-gum. They use scratches from the Archies' Sugar Sugar without the least taint of irony; they don't know anything about The Archies, "it's just old pop."

Their favourite films include Hellzapoppin', Pretty In Pink, Star Trek III and Round Midnight, and their single, More Wild Than Honey (available through Red Rhino/Cartel) reflects their cultural orientation; verging on the edge of movie soundtrackdom. A pumping orchestral theme vaguely reminiscent of Kraftwerk's Trans-Europe Express swells over the drums while girly vocals fight with "papped" quotes (brought up to date, of course) from Fred and Ginger's Shall We Dance? (Gershwin's Let's Call The Whole Thing Off). A slightly slicker production job should pull them the necessary two inches in from the left field and boost them into the world of Tony Blackburn. I can just see them on roller skates falling about the set of TOTP. The best bubblegum band in years. Paul Howard

HONEY

TRAGIC VENUS

If you can stop picking your nose for a moment, I'm here to tell you about TRAGIC VENUS, whose demo tape got such a grilling recently by people who have since been put to the torch. They are Philip Pendleton, who uncorks a mean guitar and does "other things", Bette Davis, of the voice and insured legs and Paul Buck of the lyrics and filthy mind. The end result can only be described as breathtakingly unsettling.

With a track on the For Your Ears Only double on Third Mind Records and another to follow on Abstract Issue 7, they're there for the plucking.

BABY AMPHETAMINE

Once upon a time there were three little girls and they each had veery booring jobs. Sound familiar? Well, this is a regular Charlie's Angels tale of rags to riches. Or is it?

BABY AMPHETAMINE is the creation of self appointed alternative music guru Alan McGee. His supreme dream was to pluck three girls from the Virgin Megastore and turn them into Megabucks. With true McLarenesque flair he selected the girls, Jo, Jackie and Perule. He manufactured the song, the look and the publicity. The result is an excellent piece of plastic which makes Banarama sublime by comparison.

Dreaming, scheming, leaning towards the gentler side of imagery and tone, with a hidden supply of unreleased funk bombs, the stylish mixture of Bette's operatic fascination and Philip's eerier suggestions make a tantalising alternative to the roar of today. Pratinrja

Chernobyl Baby is irritatingly infectious and will probably make Mr McGee the Mr Moneybags he so obviously wishes to be. When asked, however, to provide us with the definitive comment to accompany the definitive pop song, Perule said, "Oh, God, I dunno. Just make it up. I honestly don't care. I can't give you a definitive comment 'cause none of us can agree on anything — except that Alan McGee is a wanker. Sorry, but this rags to riches thing is a joke 'cause we haven't seen any money yet and we're not likely to. We're still stapling bloody receipts to bags for 70 quid a week! But if there's any other wanker out there who wants to give us money to make a record he's welcome!" Any offers? Alex Kadis

SON OF SAM (Mk I): Psychopathic serial killer resident in USA, got his instructions direct from his neighbour's dog and specialised in cut-ups of courting lovers in cars — somewhat easier for the authorities to find than . . .

SON OF SAM (Mk II): "The name fairly accurately describes our cultural level"

A Leeds-based flavour of the month with crossover potential, specialising in cutting-up hot beats, getting their instruction directly from Sly & The Family Stone, George Clinton and black dance music in general.

After numerous false starts, and only by following an increasingly bizarre trail of 'phone numbers, I interrogated one of the executors of l.k. bpm, their new single on Rouska.

Allegedly a 25 year old by the name of Chris Bishop met up with "Razor" Robbie 18 months earlier in a rehearsal studio, where he was mixing and producing various local bands including young hopefuls Age Of Chance, who doubtless fearing "Band Produced by NY Psychopath" headlines in the News Of The Scum neglected to include Chris' name in the credits on the 12 inch.

Avoiding the public gaze, "cos we weren't ready", they nonetheless slipped 12 inches called Golden Age Of Disco between the public's shoulder blades last year as well as trying to mingle inconspicuously on the Profane 9 Rouska sampler.

But now, people beware, Son Of Sam live work is in the offing; packing up their beat boxes, tapes and a guitarist they claim to have "found" in Holland. The new record is doing better than even their label boss hoped, it sold out of its first pressing in a fortnight, catching everybody on the hop. It's currently being repressed to meet heavy demand from Scandinavia, Central Europe and The States. But with all this interest are Son Of Sam due for the Duran treatment, feathered hair, make-up and 20 pounds of overweight? Chris denies it strenuously. Son Of Sam are happy being independent in Leed, and they've just been working on their new single Cain and an album, Rich And Famous.

Chris: "The title is a little preemptive though."

I hope not.

BLOODUNCLES

Wanna hear some noise? Wanna hear lyrics as sharp as pointed arrows? You do? Then you gotta hear THE BLOODUNCLES.

The Blooduncles blazed their trail from Edinburgh after the fires began to burn for this trio two years ago. A phoenix rising from the ashes of defunct local bands, parts of The Exploited were brought together through boredom.

They themselves aren't boring at all as you can discover for yourself with the release of their first single Crash, an out and out rocker for Virgin. Previously they surfaced with an EP of noxious stuff on their own label. Chasing it swiftly will be an album entitled Libertine which, according to the handy Ug! dictionary, means one who lives a wicked and immoral life — make of that what you will.

Despite claiming to be influenced by Dangermouse, The Terminator and Hellmans mayonnaise, The Blooduncles pull no punches.

"We're a bitter . . . very emotional band," explains Wee John, the singer. This is evident on Beathag, a track from the album.

"It's about someone I know who I'm not fond of. It's about anyone you don't particularly like." Andrew Bass

THE RAW HERBS

Hot on the heels of the American guitar revival and the likes of Green On Red and The Long Ryders, come London's finest, THE RAW HERBS. If you like your guitars to jangle, but not sound like loose change moving around your trouser pocket, then this band is for you.

The Raw Herbs are a fun loving foursome hailing from Leyton, Stratford and Walthamstow, with Stephen Archibald on bass, Derek Parker on geeetar and vocals, Brian Alexis on drums and Kevin Bache on geeetar and as band spokesperson. Formed just over a year ago the band have already gained a following in Manchester.

"We're really popular in Manchester for some reason. We get fan mail from there," claims Kev who has just got out of the bath to talk to Ug. This success came after appearances at the International and Broadwalk clubs in Manchester, no less, and if justice lives they'll soon extend their regional popularity.

But, as well as seeing them in the flesh, you can now catch The Raw Herbs on solid black vinyl with their new single She's A Nurse. But She's Alright out on Medium Cool through Red Rhino. The single is an excellent bouncy guitar workout displaying country rock influences but with a little more bite than the usual laidback fayre of their US cousins. Andrew Bass

Mike McCuster, singer of the TIER GARDEN, works as a plant draftsman at Vicars' Shipbuilding in Barrow-In-Furness. He was there, at his desk when I got through to him, after his tape had received the thumbs up from the Tip Sheet.

What are you doing working for a shipbuliding plant?

"There's nowhere else to work here in Barrow," the crackling line reveals. "All the band work here except for the keyboard player. It's not really through choice . . . we're building the new Trident submarine at the moment for the MOD . . ."

Isn't that a secret or something? Er, well, let's get onto the group and No Pasaran, which is Tier Garden's new single — a slogan lifted from The Nicaraguan Solidarity Campaign, translating as They Shall Not Pass, I'm informed.

"We're into South American rhythms and percussion and we try to make that come through on the song. As a band we're located somewhere left of centre, and the other two singles we've put out, The Africaan and India, we've already shown that."

So where are you heading?

"Well, we'd like to get into the Top 30, but at the moment we're just happy to put out another indie single. We're not interested in signing to a major who then want to try and change us into Curiosity Killed The Cat, we want to keep our character and develop it."

No Pasaran is impressive, fusing a thundering tom-tom beat with an annoyingly catchy vocal. Just the sort of thing to have every A&R man in the country dribbling and drooling I would have thought.

"Well, we've had about 15 of them out to see us so far, but no-one's come up with the right offer. We'll be doing dates in May, so there will be a chance for people around the UK to come and check us out, we're not content with just being Big In Barrow-In-Furness."

4,000,000 TELEPHONES look like very serious fellows. Dressed in sombre-looking suits, with business-like expressions, they're in London for a series of meetings with record companies.

"The last single, French Girls, has sold well," says vocalist Richard. "For some reason it seems to be happening mostly in Europe where DJs and clubs have picked up on it."

So (obligatory young journ-type question) how did the band first get together?

"It started very loosely at first a couple of years ago with a main embryo of four of us in Lincoln. Since then we've become a six piece and it's become a full time job, though we still don't make a penny. In fact, this trip to London is a bit of a treat for us, we've been saving up to do it for a couple of weeks."

An LP of the Telephones' first recording sessions was released in 1985, though the band aren't too happy with it in retrospect.

"We'd rather no one bought it. We just rushed in and recorded it, so it sounds pretty tinny. It's a bit embarrassing listening to it now," blushes bassist Stewart. The new Telephones' idea is to re-record the album, though a new single entitled Remember Me is planned for the early summer. Then a trip to Europe has been pencilled in.

"They look after us there. You can get £600 a night and a decent hotel to stay in."

Now we're talking! Julian Henry

JASS

"A lot of groups are terrified of the technology in a 24 track studio. Not me, I can't bloody play anything," says Jason of tape wonders JASS. The Sheffield trio are all in fact drummers, who create a hypnotic beat flecked by choral backing harmony with a mesmerising mix of speech from radio and television interviews. The lyrical content is totally reprocessed from other media, a monstrously clever juxtapositioning of 'found' sounds. Jason: "The beauty of rhythm can only be explored up to a point by a guitar, bass, drum and key. There's a limited number of chord arrangements available. We bring in other musicians and instruments as needed, it's more flexible. Really, we're co-ordinators and arrangers."

And the vocals, or lack of them? "Lyrics are intrusive so we use tape dialogue. For example Chest Compression is a radio interview of two judges discussing media pornography. Spirgyra has Robert Maxwell ranting about Trade Unions cut with Tom Baker's documentary on psycho-active drugs.

"The idea isn't to borrow library speeches or sloganeer in the way of Malcolm X. Neither is it to opt for tokenism like BAD. Those examples are experimental technique diluted by commercial exploitation. We are creating something new from what is already familiar. People are fascinated by everyday normal experiences like TV and radio. When they're thrown back in a different context, it provokes thought."

The Jass 'live' performance consists of tape recorders, sequencers and drums. A live tape band! Ronnie Randall

Gilt-edged 'n' loud: Anhrefn

"I don't know what the fk you were singing about, but you were angry!"

★ That's the sort of effect Anhrefn, four post punk bands from North Wales, have on people. How else can you react to stumbling across a band in a London club singing in Welsh?

★ But the band are just the tip of the iceberg. Together they've given the very insular Welsh music scene a kick up the arse by forming their own label, Anhrefn Records, and dragging their fellow musicians screaming into the big wide world.

★ "I see Anhrefn Records as a Welsh language label within the context of the whole world," explains Rhys Midyn, who with his brother Sion organises the label. "You see the Welsh rock scene considers itself to be on a totally different planet to everybody else, a completely separate entity. The Welsh media, BBC Wales, S4C and Welsh language newspapers cater only for Welsh music, never mentioning any English bands.

★ Rhys and his mates didn't like that attitude. They felt Welsh rock had a place in the wider world. Back in '83/84 Rhys and Anhrefn found they were making enough money from gigs to put out a record or two. Through organising gigs and hiring PA's they knew most of the other Welsh bands doing the rounds and decided to put out a 12 inch four track sampler of like-minded bands. ("We all had a copy of the first Clash LP and Never Mind The Bollocks.") The 12 inch featured Anhrefn, Tynal Tywyll (jangly popsters), Datblygu (the Welsh Fall), Cyrff (Clash-ish) and the wonderfully named Eifyn Presli.

★ A distribution deal with Revolver and the Cartel followed and pretty soon John Peel and The Tube began giving the acts airtime.

★ "Our original intention was just to say to the world 'Welsh music exists'. We want to be part of the music scene in general and we're willing to go a long way to communicate. We print sleeve lyrics and gig posters in English, if we're playing outside Wales. We'll even introduce the songs in English. But one thing we won't compromise on is singing in Welsh."

★ A stance which has hindered the chances in the wider world?

★ "London Records and EMI have been up to see us play. But London bottled out when we said we wouldn't sing in English. 'You won't sell more than 10,000 records,' they said. We sell about 8,000 of every release on the label now so what's the point in signing?"

★ The fellow countrymen haven't exactly been encouraging either.

★ "The Welsh rock scene sees us as a threat," says Rhys. "We get more airplay on John Peel than we do on Welsh language radio. and when BBC Wales play one of the label's releases, they'll follow it with a silly, mine us. It's so childish, especially when you consider that a lot of the English local radio stations, like Radio Merseyside, are quite happy to play our stuff and even take the time to 'phone us up and ask how to pronounce song titles."

★ I must admit I was stumped over the likes of Hwgr Grawth Og by Datblygu!

★ But, vinyl junkies, stand by for a shock. The ninth release on Anhrefn Records, a heavy dub hip hop EP from Llwybr Llaethog, featuring the cut up voice of Welsh language campaigner Fred Francis, is to be the last release on this historic label.

★ "Originally the label gave the bands the chance to appear on one record and then go off and set up their own labels. But that didn't happen, the bands stayed on to release more records. So we decided to kick everyone off the label for their own good. It's got to the stage where we've done all we can for them. Now, hopefully, we'll see lots more Welsh indie labels popping up. But more importantly I think a couple of the bands, like Datblygu and Llwybr Llaethog are ready to be signed up by one of the bigger independent labels and spread the Welsh rock culture further."

★ The end for Rhys and his brother Sion as svengalis of the record industry? No way Dai. Their next project is even more ambitious. They're now putting together a label called Welsh, Celtic And Worldwide. Already scheduled for lease are a single by Eirin Peryglus and a mini LP featuring a Breton Euro rock band and a Finnish guitar band. And the label's definitely planning to go where no A&R man has flashed an expense account before. A Celtic LP is planned featuring 12 bands singing in their native language, that'll include two Cornish acts — Davyth Hicks, who've already had a single out on Factory and hope to have future material produced by Peter Hook from New Order, and Penelwendir who are described as JAMC influenced. Sounds like a potent brew, especially with the promised Basque psychobilly band and a Maori choir waiting in the wings.

★ And Anhrefn the band, the catalyst that started all these shenanigans? Hopefully, they'll have a new album out soon as well as various other vinyl projects including a track on the Hunt Saboteurs compilation LP (along with the likes of Chumbawamba, The Three Johns and TV Smith), a split single with Hoi Polloi on the Words of Warning label, a track on Time To Develop Records in the USA and a contribution to the second Artists For Animals LP. It must be all that mountain air. ★ But all that activity still isn't enough for Rhys. He's still got one ace up his sleeve to help the passage of Welsh rock to a wider audience.

★ May the force be with you.

SLICKER THAN THE REST

After four independent singles and the excellent Manic Pop Thrill LP on Demon Records, That Petrol Emotion signed to Polydor Records in late 1986. The opening salvo from this new liaison was the insistent Big Decision single last month. The latest though is their new LP, Babble, which is set to create a new generation of raucous bustling pop fans, as it achieves a neat balancing act of catchy tunes and monster mixing. Of course, it helps a little if your band includes two ex-Undertones (the brothers O'Neill) and you are produced by Roli Mosimann (of Swans and Wiseblood fame). Steve Mack (vocals, Budweiser) and Ciaran McLaughlin (drums, Pils, Disprins and whisky) face the Alex Basteda barrage.

Roli Mosimann seems an odd choice for producer?

Ciaran "Well, we really like the work he has done with Swans and Wiseblood. He's opened up a lot of new, important areas in production techniques. We used to be a bit worried about big sounds, and sounding too mega, but since hearing bands such as Swans, and Foetus, we've realised it can work if you approach it in the right manner."

Steve "We've changed a lot since the first LP as well. The main influences on that were groups such as Buzzcocks, Velvets, Can, Beefheart, Television, Pere Ubu, Stooges, but this time around it's those groups again as well as Swans, Foetus, Young Gods, and dance music."

Ciaran "Especially dance music — that's why I hate this constant running battle between the indies and black music. Maybe it's just a press manufactured thing, but the fact is that some of the greatest music is made from the cross breeding of styles — Sly Stone, Hendrix, and now Prince . . . even Run DMC and Beastie Boys. Hybrids are the great thing, and rock music is a hybrid in itself."

That Petrol Emotion have always had a bite as strong as their bark. Their outspoken views riddle their songs, as they seem unafraid to speak out on the hypocrisy of religion, politics, sex, in fact all human life is here.

Steve "Music is such a powerful medium, and the way we've gone about things is to get people happy by writing positive, danceable songs. Having done that we can start talking to them through the lyrics and start changing their minds about certain opinions they may have. I think it's true to say in music that miserable people who think everything is terrible usually get ignored."

How about Morrissey?

Ciaran "I personally thank the Smiths have made some great records, but he has a lot to answer for. To base a whole career around being miserable, when there are so many positive things you can do, for me it's sick. And there are a lot of people still hung up on what he says . . ."

The shamblers?

Ciaran "John Peel called these groups 'the lemonade groups', and I think that's true because lemonade goes flat after five minutes."

Touché, and another great quote emerges from a pint of lager.

Steve "We've got nothing against those groups. If they can write a good song, fine. But there is so much hypocrisy involved with many of the indie groups. When you start a band, there's definitely an ego thing involved, you want some recognition for what you're doing, otherwise you'd just stay in your bedroom and practise. To anyone who says 'Oh I'm so shy, I don't really want to be up here on stage,' I say CRAP! They probably spend all day in front of their mirrors practising how to be so goddam coy, and pretending that they don't want to be signed to major labels. That's why I love Madonna so much. She just went out there and did it . . . and by writing her own songs, making her own videos . . . great!

What about other indies?

Ciaran "I really like Ron Johnson Records. I know it's trendy, but the groups on that label are aiming for a bit more than just recycling Smiths' records. Among others, they had Stump, who I think are one of the best groups in Britain. I have a lot of faith in them. Apart from that, I like Young Gods, Wiseblood, and I also really like a group called Yargo, who are from Manchester. They're really soulful, which puts them at an immediate disadvantage in the indie market. But really, there's so much recycled rubbish around."

Steve "I agree. Some of the biker bands are great for a night out, but the proof is in the vinyl. I can't see how they'll get away with just re-using Stooges' riffs on an album. Still, The Cult have done it . . ."

So there you have it. That Petrol Emotion — serious young men with a mission — and an alcohol prob? But, by taking a radical dance stance, now with major backing, theirs should not be a mission impossible (geddit?).

CATCH THEM IF YOU CAN

Here they come again, umm, um, ah, er, well . . . Welcome to the world of wracked roll! The Grizzelders, a unisex quintet emerging from a smokey garage with a cough, splutter and a kechangg. Snakey G gets the story, Ronnie Randall says, 'Cheese'

In Quiphola recently The Grizzelders were tagged as the best new band I'd seen this year so far. A month or two on and no one has topped them from that position. The music this three girl two guy combo play is based on mid '60s US garage sounds, but I figure they must be playing all their own songs as I can't recognise any of them (though I stand to be corrected on that point). To run though the line up briefly: on vocals and maracas there's lovely Scottish lassie Leslie. Now, this raunchy raw voiced gal sounds slightly reminiscent of, but at the same time puts to shame, the likes of Maggie Bell and Janis Joplin — a mau-mau mama to be sure. Brummie bassist Ivor looks like an un-bleached Brian Jones circa '64, yet his bass sound is in the mould of ex-Mindwarper Cobalt Stargazer and Motorhead's Lemmy. Over on guitars we have Londoners Liam and the Amazonian Claudia Pinto. These two rarely move, unlike the foul mouthed Cockney sticks woman equivalent of Animal from the Muppets. Conversely young Angie, once known as Strawberry Tart, has the attraction of good looks in-

The Guana Batz suffered a small misfortune the day before they were due to record a live LP at Klub Foot, sticksman Dibble got a kicking from a flange of Trevors. The poor fella had to stop a smashed glass from hitting his face and copped a load of stitches in his hand, rendering it temporarily unusable. Steve Meadham was drafted in to save the day, but obviously, without any rehearsal, the recordings were commercially useless. Another date was organised, supporting veteran punk rockers 999 and the group played under the moniker of Pip & The Pit Bulls. Now you'd think their fans would suss who it was from that, wouldn't you? But just 12 punters turned up for them — there were 1,600 at the other show. The album is due out on I.D. at the end of May.

Restless have just issued their finest record to date on ABC. It's a 4 track 12 inch featuring a re-recording of Ice Cold (title track), and a new landmark in their recording career is the eerie Stranger on the flip. They've spent May promoting it live around the country, following a French tour.

The launch party for the Ug & The Cavemen album was a huge success. The capacity crowd at the Sir George Robey, Finsbury Park, were treated to the leopard skin loin clothed combo (complete with caged go-go dancer) putting across a groovy set with a backdrop of acid light show and slides. Celebs in attendance included representatives from The Cannibals, Sting-rays, Bugs, Purple Things, Grizzelders and X-Men, Nigel Lewis, Northern Soul dj Harboro Horace and assorted record label A&R men.

When Howlin' Wilf & The Vee Jays played Belgium recently, occasional pianist Slim

instead of the matted beard. All in all, a good looking shower with a collectively varied mode of dress.

With nearly 20 gigs under their belt, and having been taken under the wing of The Purple Things, their future looks reasonably rosy as their reputation grows. Imaginary and Media Burn have both approached them in relation to recording on a one off basis, and the group themselves are eager to get a mini album on the market.

CHAPTER 22 RECORDS

DISTRIBUTED BY NINE MILE/THE CARTEL

Ron Johnson, the Howard Hughes of pop, is an enigma. His records make strange noises. John Lewis attempts to single out the man.

WILL THE REAL

1 Ron Johnson has been invited to go to New York to address a "New Music Seminar" in the near future. It is unlikely that he will go. He will probably send Dave Parsons. Which is nice for Dave, to be sent to the Big Apple to represent Ron. Will he have to make the speech?

2 "No, it will probably be on tape. I just have to turn the tape machine on."

3 Sounds exciting.

4 He's going to address the multitude on the whys and wherefores of independent music and specifically Ron."

5 The reason that Dave thinks he will be sent on this mission is that Ron is "a very private man". I wasn't able to meet him and he has done no interviews. Dave says he has one long phone call a month from Ron who will spell out the strategy for the month and Dave will enact it, liaising with Nine Mile (the distributors) and the likes of Underground.

Theirs is a strange association which started when Dave was Splat!'s singer.

6 Splat! were Ron's first signing. He essentially made it possible for them to release their own records. They did the work, Ron provided the instructions, finance and of course, the name. The basis has not changed. Ron still gives the instructions and Dave still carries them out.

John Peel said of Ron Johnson that it was the most unpromising name for a record company that he had ever heard. But many John Peel shows have at least a little Johnsonalia, and it would appear that Ron is undoubtedly a visionary.

7 Some time later, after releases by Big Flame, The Ex, A Witness and more, Dave still speaks of his leader with a mixture of reverence and distaste, and issues press releases like; "This is another pile of crap from Ron."

8 Is this any way to run a record label? Obviously, it is.

Reggae music has always been a law unto itself and a popular act will rarely be content in releasing just one new record at a time where two or even several might equally serve. It would appear that Frankie Paul has usurped Sugar Minott as the music's most prolific recording artist. In addition to a clutch of new pre-releases up from Jamaica this month — including titles such as We A Di Best (Redman Int), I'm Missing You (Ujams), Warning (Vena) and his own comment on the pre-natal condition of Sharon with No Tek It Weh for Black Scorpio — he also has three new discomixes out on the streets here: a song produced by Trevor Davis called I Am Your Lover (Fingers TD007) and two for Jammys, Cover Your Mouth (Live & Love LLD39) and Cool now King Jammy's (Live & Love LLD40). Also busy this month are the Wailing Souls vocal group who have a brisk selling pre in Diamond And Pearls (Power House) and a couple of discos on UK release: for Delroy Wright, Full Moon (Live & Learn LLD102) and for the ubiquitous Jammys, Dog Bit c/w Lonely Day (Live & Love LLD42). While other new Jammys releases include Chuck Turner on the familiar theme of the Run Around Girl (Live & Love LLD43) and Delroy Wilson, Stop Acting Strange c/w Don't Put The Blame On Me (Live & Love LLD41). Over in London on a visit recently after a protracted absence was Big Youth, who now emerges with his own inimitable reworking of a Bunny Wailer exposition for Trouble On The Road (John Dread JDPD009), while Bunny Wailer himself also has a new title out in Jamaica on the Solomonic label in the dance-hall manner entitled 'Haughty Tempo' (BW025). One artist who is always consistently good is Studio 1 stalwart and former Clarendonians singer Freddie McGregor and his first release for US based producer Tad crooning Name And Number (Tad's TRD26197) is no exception. Meanwhile, Larry White, the bassist with the Studio 1 band which always accompanies McGregor on his tours, has his own debut vocal release out on the new Lintanz label with Capture Me (LT1). Other new releases include: Dixie Peach, Get Up And Skank (Y&D YDD0106); Little Kirk, Screechy Across The Border (Ruddy's RM001); Ackie, Call Me Rambo (Heavyweight HW003); Dennis Brown, Fire c/w Son Of Jah, When She Love (Natty Congo NCDM040); Mickey Simpson, Don't Cry c/w Can't Conquer Ital (Roots Operator ROR001); Barry Biggs adapting If You Wanna Make Love c/w a self-composed Girl I Really Love You (Revue REV044T); Rula Brown reworking Billy Stewart's I Do Love You c/w Life Without You (Revue REV043T); and from UK based roots acts Black Roots serenading a version of the Suzy Wong song made famous in reggae by the late Jacob Miller c/w Pin In The Ocean (Nubian NRT04); new West London sextet Wisdom with Prisoner (Wisdom WMB001); and a lament for the '60s from Spartacus R on Woza Malcolm (Have They All Become Americans) c/w Jamahiriya (Africa Will Be Free) (Zara ZMRD7). RON JOHNSON STAND UP, PLEASE!

"All the best songs are about coming to terms with death."

Cheerful Pete Astor of The Weather Prophets takes Martin Aston on a cultural journey through his record collection simplicity. Someone like the passionate Tim Hardin (Tim Hardin 2, Verve 1967). A limited edition of the She Comes From The Rain 12 inch was backed by a Hardin cover, You Upset The Grace Of Living When You Die.

- "I really like the chord changes . . . it's a song I would have liked to have written. He's incredibly upfront, and not afraid to be embarrassing. I like that. . . There's a straightforwardness and honesty to Hardin that I think my songs have got. We try not to cloud the issue. He can get the feeling across in 20 words.
 - "It makes good copy having a manifesto, but music's all I feel qualified to talk about. What really changes your mind? It was something like The Velvet Underground that showed a different way in which life could be lived. I'm sure that liberates people much more than somebody saying 'hey, kids, don't do this!'"
 - Anyone who had a heart would probably go for Pete's next choice — The Band's All La Glory, from Stage Fright (Capitol, 1970).
 - "An incredibly sad song, one of my favourites ever. It just makes me want to weep. It's so schmaltzy but it's the real meaning of schmaltz, before it became a cliché. The organ here is a killer. So understated."
 - Nick Drake's Black-Eyed Dog and Van Morrison's Slim Slow Slider are equally enthused, and wept, over.
 - "That Van lyric (from Astral Weeks, Warner Bros, 1968) . . . "I know you're dying baby, and I know you know it too . . . "an absolute killer."
 - Self-expression and emotion are high on Pete's itinerary, but you sense he knows his voice wasn't meant for River Deep Mountain High. So The Weather Prophets stay low-key, even minimal.
 - Nick Cave's Sad Waters (from Your Funeral, My Trial on Mute, 1986) comes on. "I don't like the whole album but this is phenomenal. There's something very Australian about this which I like — he's being very honest here, singing in an Australian accent instead of that hammy Southern preacher accent. I don't like things with too much front, that's obvious."
 - Pete follows the sentiment with Tyrone Davis' I Wish It Was Me — "another beautiful, sad song. Very honest and straightforward
- Pete Astor's a bit reticent at first. There's been enough talk in print about The Weather Prophets alongside a continual guessing game of their influences he says with an audible bite, when I suggest he comes 'round and talks about the world, you know, and the records he fills the world up with. There are enough of these defensive interviews I tell him, so let's try and go beyond all that supercilious name-scraping and talk about the real key to Pete Astor's fundamental love of rock, his inspiration. Why shoot names when you can hear the music?
 - As for The Weather Prophets, their debut album Mayflower has just been released on Elevation. It's 12 songs deep in the underworld of Pete's isolation, they're careful, vivid and reflective, framed by the traditional sound of guitars. But it doesn't grab your hands and force you to jump in, rather, it asks you to stay awhile, begging the question, can you still hear guitar-rock without having to jump into a boxing ring with it? Those high-rise days with The Loft seem a long time ago.
 - The first record then; gosh, it's a bootleg!!
 - "One of the best functioning rock bands I've ever heard. Better than the Stones. Completely telepathic."
 - It's Bob Dylan with The Band from that groundbreaking British tour of 1966 when the acoustic troubadour dug up Electric Gold. "Judas!" cried the folk fan.
 - "It sounds like they're improvising all the time," this fan continues, "blowing all over the place, playing as much as they can without getting in each other's way. They're organic. The version of Like A Rolling Stone is so proud. It's what The Age Of Chance are trying to do when they clench their fists, but don't."
 - The beauty of many pre-punk expressionists was their very naked soul with a brilliant hook. It's all there."

- But so many of Pete's choices are so sad, mournful, melancholic, intense. Mayflower is so much more restrained and reserved. On purpose, then?
- "There is a real intensity there but it's held back. That's just the way I am. It doesn't hit you between the eyes but Naked As The Day . . . and Sleep are intense songs. There's an Englishness to what we do, which is that some of the emotions are less obviously open."
- He puts on Syd Barrett's The Madcap Laughs (Harvest, 1969) and then Surf's Up from The Beach Boys.
- "There is another side to what I really like, which is the mundanity and obliqueness and almost the innate boredom in music like Syd Barrett, which is another side to the way I see the world. There's another level to the album which is on a middle-ground. When you express yourself, you've got to be true to life as it is, or perceive it, so you have to have all those bits in between. I've always been a bit dubious about all that death-and-destruction, chest-beating thing. You can't walk around all the time with a palm to your brow."
- Can you, Morrissey?
- "I love The Beach Boys. Till I Die is so withered and small — it's the difficulty in actually expressing the emotion. People who are very careful about what they dare to say are often incredibly powerful in what they actually do dare to say."
- Pausing for Neil Young's Rust Never Sleeps (Reprise, 1979) and Kate and Anna McGarrigle's Heart Like A Wheel (Warners, 1976), Pete moves on from what he calls "listening music" to "party music", choosing Otis Rush (Groaning The Blues on Blue Sky, 1981) and his "totally funky, happy music. The guitar playing is just so proud, makes you glad to be alive."
- Which can be said for Al Green (Living For You on Hi 1973) as well..
- "Al manages to be very funky and carthartic and danceable and yet totally introvert at the same time. The Hi label band here is again staggering."
- Proving that the white man can cut that groove, Pete points to the "funkiness and freewheelingness" of Lowell George and Little Feat's Dixie Chicken (Warners, 1973). But put back to back with Miles Davis' Bitches Brew (Columbia, 1968), well . . . "this used to be our intro tape, until we lost it! It's the evildest music, the devil's music, the heaviest, thickest et music. There is so much there — it's so dense and layered. It's power music. Total musicianship."

■ Which naturally leads Pete on to Hendrix and Red House (from Hendrix in the West on Polydor, 1969).

■ "Just a brilliant musician, on a par with Coltrane and Miles Davis. Totally magical guitar-playing. The touch here is staggering. That's one thing I like about a guitar is that it's touch sensitive. Hendrix had that perfect touch. This music is completely visceral."

■ But The Weather Prophets know their heritage and their strengths. They can't impersonate Hendrix or Miles, but they can be a great pop/rock band.

■ "That's our culture. We grew up with 4/4, white rock music. It's what we're good at."

■ True to form, Pete's favourite guitar solo comes from this hunting ground — Iggy And The Stooges's Shake Appeal (from Raw Power on CBS, 1972).

■ "It's all impact. The album is just a formulative teenage influence — when you come home from school and you're frustrated, something like this is just what you want to hear. It's great punk rock, basically. Nothing has ever surpassed it, not even The Sex Pistols or The Clash."

■ Pete admits he's deliberately chosen to bring pre-punk records along — "I could have brought Television's Marquee Moon Elektra, 1977; or some of Tom Verlaine's solo stuff," he says, having praised the group's virtuoso qualities. It's an indication of Pete's reverential attitude. No, punk was an energy, but not a musical language Pete could use. Instead he thinks more of songs like Leonard Cohen's Passing Through (Live Songs, CBS, 1972) or Randy Newman's Rolling (Good Old Boys, on Warners, 1972).

■ "All the best songs are about coming to terms with death." It's music that Pete can almost pray to. The soul-searchers. I know what he means.

■ "Yes, those melancholic, downbeat songs, as you say, are my favourites. That's something I'd be interested in on our next album. I think it'll be a lot heavier. It wasn't by design that this record was light. The album has got a lot of depth to it but in terms of colour, it's green, not black. There's not a lot of death in it but there's definitely a death album we can make."

Mastermix commiserations to the unluckiest man in hip-hop, Spin-off's Rickie Rich following his trashing and subsequent two week hospitalisation after a south London house party. The Grandmaster has been unable to complete his Gwen McRobb/Feelin' Jah cut-up because of chicken pox and his home label have just sold their House Hustlers track to Cool Tempo. Chrysalis in the meantime have got their hands on the next great white hope, the singer from Stone Free, whose Can't Say 'Bye is out on Ensign.

Champion have an interesting scratch mix of Rob King's Jungle Fever called Scratch Fever featuring Shem from Hardrock Soul Movaball who have Elaweaser Just a Skeezer out on Serious. Both Champion and Serious have compilations out this month. Ultimate Trax 3 features a battle of the DJs between Streetsahead and CJ Markintosh while over at the Virgin camp weird record of the month award goes to Warren Zevon and George Clinton for their collaborative track off Warren's new album. Ten Records have licensed The Jack That House Built by Jack And Chill and are releasing Mantronix's Scream.

On import at the moment Emanon the baby beat box, has Susie out. Produced by Islam Bambara it's on Pow Wow. Good to see The Fezzless Four back on form with the flip of their new 12 You Can't Rock Us, and the new Stetsasonic single is numero uno in the States with Go Stetsa from the LP On Fire.

Last month (or was it the month before) I neglected to mention King Sun D. Moet's Hey Love (based on Moments In Love) on Zakia, well now you can avoid paying a fiver for it as Rhythm King have licensed it. Also from RK there's a six track Schoolly D EP called Dedication To All B-Boys, and a new J&B Traxx tune which I haven't yet heard but which should be worth buying if it's anything like last summer's release on Dance Mania (unless it's the same track of course), have to wait and see. The Cookie Crew are the beneficiaries of Rhythm King's enlightened signing policy with Rock The House, see this column two months back.

Fourth And Broadway save you money as they release the new Eric B record here soon. They also have a legal mix of the CJ scratch Boops.

The bizarre state of the New York club scene is reflected in the current reviews and charts of Rockpool. Strange to see the likes of Slab! and Son Of Sam alongside Shells E as these English bands bludgeon their way into the U.S. dance scene. I wonder how long it will be before one of them crosses the great divide between anorak-clad student and Kangol hatted homeboy over here. Finally, Lard Aa, The Slab MC has his first UK release, The Slab MC b/w Lard out on a label dear to my heart, Spacematic, but you'll have to make up your own minds about this one.

FEELING NASTY!

Nasty Rox Inc transcend the realms of something or other and develop a high-grade ice fetish (are you sure about this? •••)

What do you say about a band whose first gig was in a church hall in Southwark and whose next was in The Royal Albert Hall? Hype? Lucky? Nasty Rox Inc say "neither."

■ "We're shit-hot," is the reason they give and a lot of people seem to agree with them.

■ The band are: Dan Fox - Vocals, John Woodall - Guitar, Ian Roberts - Drums and Mark Townsend on Bass. They also feature the ubiquitous Nelloe from The Wild Bunch on turntables.

■ So what is it like to play The Albert Hall as your second gig?

■ John: "We were OK but the event was terrible, it was for the Salmoff Fashion Awards, and there was too much for them to try and cram in."

■ Don: "It was all faintly ridiculous with the clouds of dry-ice and everything."

■ Not the most obvious setting for Nasty Rox Inc's noisy collision of rock, go-go and hip-hop, but new boys can't be choosers.

■ Don: "Basically, it's what a lot of people seem to be talking about at the moment, but apart from Run DMC and the Beasties no-one seems to be doing much about it. Except with us it has a particularly English feel to it."

■ Ian: "The go-go thing is particularly important, we do use live drums and percussion and it gives us a more powerful sound, it really makes the thing groove."

■ "We also have Nelloe who adds a whole new dimension, the scratching isn't obvious because it is so well done, what he does is really hard, to drop break beats into a live set and to make it sound as good as a tape, I think he's as good as anyone from New York."

■ But what about a first release? There were some very guarded umms and arrs; instead of the usual "We've got ten majors who are fighting over us," spiel, I got a "We might be doing something soonish," with a shrug and a grin.

■ Judging from their confidence and their sound, I'd say "soonish" might well be sooner than Nasty Rox Inc are letting on.

Nitzer Ebb

make music to clench your fist at. It's a churning, all consuming sound that's breaking from the middle distance. Ronnie Randall takes it in and spits out a torrent of prose

Strong, hard, fast, furious, methodical, harsh, cold, calculated, violent, regimented, militaristic. In a word Germanic. Speedy Euro dance music for the delirious disco age.

Guns, fire, muscle and hate — manly, mechanised and murderous. If one word was needed to sum up Nitzer it would be strength.

The trio resemble renegades from the panzer corps, while the music, imagery and performance shout "Uber Alles". But why? What theory lies behind this muscular facade? "The image goes hand in hand with the sound — clinical, clean cut, some say militaristic."

Are you for militarism?

"Completely, no (?). Join In The Chant for instance is an anti-church message. Throughout history religion has been responsible for war and conflict. Look at Lebanon and Northern Ireland". Look at Hitler, Stalin, Franco...

"We employ slogans. Force Is Machine refers to cults using converts as a machine, a power, a force to boost their leader's ego and influence on society. Nitzer preach self belief, the right to control your own destiny. Arrogance and individuality is the thrust of our message. Don't inflate others' egos, jack up your own."

Dire Straits have more disciples than the Mormons, Curiosity Killed The Cat are a God-like plague to a certain sick section of society. Isn't striving for pop/rock stardom a religious calling? You create a hypnotic, methodical, machine-generated sound yet preach individuality, humanity even. Isn't that indoctrination too?

"Politics, be they party or religious, exploit us, we choose to exploit them in return. We bastardise to suit ourselves." You arrogant bastardisers. Why do you appeal more to Europeans? "Everyone is so goddam serious over here. The attitude is that you needed to be f* up, sleazy and on a downer to like rock. You must deny enthusiasm, drive, ambition or any positive attitudes. London is constipated by trends. You have to find out if an event is 'hip' before you dare turn up. It's a pity that Europe looks to England for its youth, music and fashion culture. It has bred a stifling arrogance in our attitude to anything from outside. People with life see what we're about — in Spain it's never loud or fast enough. They dance till they drop, they totally lose control, it's instinctive."

So are you unhappy here?

"It's not the healthiest of environments. A country bound by tradition, divided by class and money. Even in music, it's just not 'cred' to come from the Home Counties, so we're ignored. It's a form of media racism."

You taunt, tease and provoke a hostile reaction with your imagery. Surely you are victims of your own creation.

"Our method is sarcastic, it's easy to see. Almost all our early influences were German — Malaria, DAF, De Krupps. We saw them as a new dance direction in the early '80s. It had punk, it had funk, but it petered out. Now the evolved sound is spread throughout the continent with the likes of Front 242, Neon Judgement and The New Gods. In Britain the dancefloor has slowed down to a canter with the advent of funk.

"The other day some Radio One dork said Donna Summer's I Feel Love was too fast to dance to. Which sums up the state of things and the mentality we're up against. The reaction to our Murderous single was 'Too mainstream for the so-called alternative clubs and too alternative for the mainstream ones. We were, er, very, er, impressed with that reaction, but it won't stop us, we aim to kick apathy off the dancefloor.'" people in the charts particularly Spandau Ballet who you believe disguise nasty pop records as soul music to exploit and rot the brains of teenagers."

"Say that you find everything about the Top 40 makes you more violently sick than Eastenders (although you wouldn't mind your record being in there so don't be too controversial)."

"Say you really like Prince and Owen Paul although you think Simple Minds, Big Country and most other Scots bands are shite."

"Say that you can't play your instrument for toffee but you're a bit of a whizz with a tennis racket."

"Say that you want to be a potent anti-biotic and kill all the poison in the world (particularly Radio One DJs except Jimmy Saville)."

"Say that you once did the music for a McEwan's lager ad and weren't paid and you intend to do the same for the next Coca Cola ad."

"Say that your name is Davey Henderson, you love Cliff Barnes, Neighbours and your single Super Popoid Groove."

Death Angel is the name, mega-trash is the game. The Ultra-Violence is the debut LP from this LA based five-piece, and all I can say is it's totally awesome (not a word that passes these lips often). Death Angel, whose oldest member is 19 and youngest 14, can only tour during the school holidays so get this cranium-crunching record now and go mad. Out now on the MFN label, Under One Flag.

Out on Blast First now is a live recording of Head Of David's wrecking of the ICA rock week (party poopers) and a more uncomfortable noise you could not hope to find... Stupids' album Van Stupid makes a valuable point for British hardcore, and will battle it out with Join The Army from LA's Suicidal Tendencies who visit the UK in June. The skate war starts here.

Rasta-rockers Bad Brains blew London's Clarendon apart last week with shit-hot Jah-orientated mayhem, while most horribly brilliant record of the month goes to Bathory, whose new album Under The Sign Of The Black Mark is basically 45 minutes of evil chaos all in the name of Satan (also on Under One Flag).

Much overlooked is the Phoenix album from Brit band Instigators, a Dead Kennedys type barrage that has been out for a few months. Germany's top speed-metal exponents Helloween have just released their LP Keeper Of The Seven Keys after storming the Hammersmith Odeon, and if you missed Slayer there recently Whiplash pities you.

Through the post comes an entertaining rehearsal tape from The Parasites, "a hot-shit, ass-kicking five piece". I await the vinyl with baited breath.

Some of Britain's favourite noise-makers, including some Gaye Bykers, some Janitors, and some Bomb Party types have got together to "re-work" the old Motown classic Psychedelic

SO WHAT'S ALL THE FUSS ABOUT SLAYER?

They're the equivalent of a nasty motorway accident, claims cub reporter Andrew Bass as he extracts a few mouthfuls of venom from guitarist Kerry King. Brutal riffs played at death-defying speed, drums that resemble a thunderstorm and a ferocious vocal delivery that packs a punch strong enough to KO Tyson and co. But with such a violent reputation, Slayer can hardly be surprised at the reaction they've got from the moral minority and, subsequently, the problems they've had in securing a UK release for their Rick Rubin-produced Reign In Blood album. "People are always trying to blame us for creating hoodlums and thugs," opines Kerry, "but I think the live show is really healthy. We get a lot of really violent people at our shows but we give them a chance to take their violence out without hurting anyone." • And the satanic images? "That's just a topic to write about. Most people are scared to write about it but we're not. What we write are just stories, like horror movies." • So what about playing with The Beastie Boys? How did that come about? • "I just did one lead for them because their album was being produced by Rick Rubin too. That was on No Sleep Till Brooklyn, I wouldn't want anyone thinking I did the one on Fight For Your Right. That's pretty lame." • And the future for Slayer? What burnt offerings can we expect? • "If we can get away with something then we'll go ahead and do it." • Right. Er, that kinda says it all, I suppose.

Shack, while another German terrorist outfit, Kreator release the LP After The Attack on groovy picture disc.

Both Metallica and Anthrax are confirmed for the Donington festival in August, appearing before OAP act Dio... has he no sense?

Until next time I'll leave you with Death Angel. All together now... Thrashers! Thrashers! Thrashers!... love, Whiplash

The Scene (1)

Ladbroke Grove, West London. I meet The Stupids, England's freshest hardcore band, in Slam City Skates beneath the Rough Trade shop. Minor Threat is on the video and a colour-blind Mexican on acid has his board designs all over the walls. We head for a cafe. Tommy Stupid and Eddy Shred half-walk, half-skate. I use my legs. What a square!

We get turfed out for not ordering food with our drinks, and so we spill onto the pavement whereby Tommy and Ed dig out the Philadelphia Cheese and Mighty White Bread and proceed to eat lunch, using skates as plates. Fresh!

An admirable economy drive then, saving their money for the next opus?

"No, this is what we like to eat!" cracks Ed, sometime bassist and live vocalist.

"How many places can you go that serve Philly Cheese sandwiches and Chocolate Milk?" asks Tommy, drums/vinyl vocalist, vinyl rhythm guitarist and sometime bassist. A boy wonder in a backwards-flipped baseball cap, garnished with a McDonalds badge. A burger fetish too?

"McDonalds is a killer! It's the only place in England where they serve root beer!"

The Scene (2)

Ipswich. An ad is placed by Wolfie Retard, now in Perfect Daze, in Punk Lives magazine to form a band. He cites The Ramones, Millions Of Dead Cops and Blondie as inspirations. Tommy and guitarist Marty Tuff answer. They form The Stupids. Violent Nun is now a highly sought after debut? (give me a copy, Tommy!) while Peruvian Vacation and Retard Picnic are brutal, brilliant melodic hardcore albums that belie The Stupids' teenage years and reflect their infatuation with all things culturally American; the root beer, the Twinkies, Skateboarding — rad, shred, thrash, skate and destroy! — and the music.

"It was more exciting than the boring English drivel like Conflict or Icons Of Filth," Tommy reckons. And the difference? "Humour, energy, just really well played, and fast"

"And especially not depressive, which is the main thing," adds Eddy.

The Scene (3)

America in the mid-seventies. Skateboard fever bites into youth culture before rapidly going underground. Skate parks become the new concrete wastelands of the eighties. But the sport is back at roots level again, it's attitude and stance a mix of punk aggression and surfer/biker iconography; snakes, skulls, tattoos, earrings predominate. Not all skaters are hardcorists but it's the dominant shredding form. Bad Brains are currently tops but Tommy also rates Luder Christ, Squirrel Bait (now split up), Moving Targets and Social Unrest. Hardcore and skating; thrashing twins, tough and independent. Tommy: "Skating is something to aim for without getting competitive."

Ed: "You get some people, people like nobodies, really freako people, and though they're completely hopeless, they go skating and get into it. There are so many dangerous things you can do, you can really frighten yourself up. And they keep trying. It's really positive. You start rolling down the street and you feel great. It's pure adrenalin and energy." Something to aim for, Tommy?

"Yeah, to make a trick. It's like a personal ratification, to pull off a trick. It's not for anyone else, it's for yourself. You feel accomplished even though you're a bunch of spotty, talentless Adidas-wearing teenagers."

I sense a communal comradeship here. "Definitely. You can turn up to a skate palace and people who would otherwise be exceptionally boring, you can talk to. You're unified into one way of thinking."

The Scene (4)

America again. It's 1986 and the Stupids are so welcomed by the 'core skateboard fraternity that Skate-bible Thrasher puts them on Skateboard Rock Volume Five. The Stupids return this summer for six more weeks touring. Goodbye Ipswich, Hello Van Stupid, the new mini-album on new label Vinyl Solution. Apart from one (very boring) lampoon of The Beastie Boys (called Stoopie Boys), the other six are more snorting speedballs of hardcore pop: more teen angst, teen fantasy, cartoon savagery and real Dull-Town protest delirium. "We wear Clark's Commandos/You can buy our gear fresh from Doctor Barnardos!"

The Stupids think the new record is mixed badly, that it isn't powerful enough. "But people will think it is because they haven't had any Bleu+Xch music in their lives. They've been listening to Stump all the time." Instead, listen to Eddy's own hardcore band, Bad Dress Sense, or Frankfurter, with Eddy and Tommy on guitars, or Schnozza, with... I can't remember who with. English pop thrashed supreme in '87.

Flesh For Lulu trample the graves of the last fab four. Jerry Smith gets their autographs

The Fab Four, Nick Marsh, Rocco, Kevin Mills and James Mitchell, collectively known as Flesh For Lulu, are currently putting the final touches to their latest, and by all accounts greatest, long player in the world renowned Abbey Road studios. Already on the lips of the youth of the nation is the burning question of their latest 45 and just why or how you do the Siamese Twist? It's just the sort of thing to spark a revolution or just as easily a dance craze to sweep the nation!

Back to reality, and the shabby edifice that is EMI's showcase London studio, Abbey Road is now a mere attraction for lost hordes of Japanese tourists, but for the moment the Beatles posters have been obliterated by the more enlightening Lulu graffiti. Working on their new LP, provisionally titled Long Live The New Flesh, with famed producer Mike 'George Martin' Hedges at the controls, they have captured that rare essence of swaggering, pure sex and rock 'n' roll in its most classic form. Their maverick noise has been harnessed with the driving power of rivetting new material.

As drumming philosopher James Mitchell points out; "it signals the rebirth of the new Flesh sound with a greater versatility and a wide range of material. There's even a slow soulful number! Mike has really captured our true spirit. He's not scared to try anything and has really brought out the ultimate Flesh For Lulu sound."

Thoughts of that other Fab Four at Shea Stadium flit through the mind as the news that their I Go Crazy track from the new John Hughes brat pack movie, Some Kind Of Wonderful, is out as a single and making its presence felt Stateside while the soundtrack album that it is featured on, along with The Jesus And Mary Chain, Pete Shelley and Furniture, is making a useful dent in the charts. Quote of the month from demon guitarist, Rocco: "God, Furniture are rank. They should be left out in the rain with their drawers open!"

5 Flesh 4 Lulu current London sayings:

In fact the encouragement from the States is only rivalled by the level of apathy over here. They are certainly not press darlings and have much vitriol for "the bigoted press and their fashion victim bands as well as other parts of the business." In any other country you're treated like a human being but here it's like something out of Spinal Tap. Everywhere else they actually promote gigs but here they're too busy making sure they get the beer in!

Swop the Beatle suits and wigs for Harley Davidson T-shirts and leathers and Flesh For Lulu's first two videos could well be out-takes from Help!, bubbling over with effervescent style and pouting fun. But where the Beatles delivered plastic pop, Flesh For Lulu splutter with fizzing energy.

Dumb Beatle references aside it is time that the land of fad-ism, where speed metal and neo-hippies currently reign, discovered a band on its own doorstep that combines raw power and style with a panache that the Americans are already beginning to catch on to. As singing "Sex God" Nick Marsh remarks, "Forget the cerebral approach — just turn up them guitars!"

First up, some very cheering news from Topic Records who are starting up a new label called Special Delivery. The first two releases are from cajun r'n'r experts The Baiham Alligators and the extraordinary acoustic duo The Panic Brothers. The Alligators are pleasant good-time pubbies but The Panics are really something else; perfect harmonies, perfect suits, haircuts you could cut diamonds with, and songs bursting with wit and life . . . more about them next issue . . .

Want some good news from America? Oregon-based garage band supremos The Wipers are definitely coming to this country in June, it'll be their first visit and you'd be a fool to miss them. Another American band who should be seen at all costs are The Miracle Legion. They've just signed to Rough Trade and an LP, tentatively called Surprise, Surprise, Surprise, will soon be out. Their debut, The Backyard, was one of last year's classics and no doubt you'll be hearing a lot more about them. New Jersey pop/beat outfit The Smithereens are definitely booked for Glastonbury this June and will also be playing a London date before that. Exciting? Oh yes indeedly!

That's enough about Americans for a while, let's have a look at a couple of Australian bands with new records . . . Guitar drillers The Lime Spiders have a single out called Weirdo Libido while The Wigs present their new single Six O'clock Shuffle on the Media Burn label. Is it so very odd that so many of the new bands have names that seem to come straight from the Pebbles and Nuggets albums? Certainly they are very influenced by the likes of The Count Five and The Elastik Band!

Bam Caruso time again, and once more they've got the best new releases and re-issues of the month. First on the Bam hit list has to be Nick Haeffner's The Great Indoors, a truly great album that could only be made by someone with real talent and a genuine understanding of music past, present and future. There's echoes of Syd Barrett, The Byrds, Nick Drake, Wire . . . the list is endless. In the end, though, it's all Nick Haeffner. Stand-out tracks are the single Back In Time For Tea and a heartbreaking evocation of childhood in Don't Be Late . . . Also new from Bam Caruso is the debut album from Palace Of Light, an intelligent mixture of REM-type rock and Scott Walker-ish ballads, and on the re-issue front, watch out for Revenge Of The Quackenbush Brothers by Michigan's very wonderful SRC, a terrifying blend of Stooges and MC5 . . .

Regular readers may be wondering why I haven't mentioned Robyn Hitchcock so far, well this month I've decided not to, so don't bother even looking. By the way, anybody see him do his one man show at Ronnie Scott's? Oops . . . To make up for the lack of Robyn mentions, I'd just like to tell you a little about Karl Blake. I'm sure you're all familiar with The Shock Headed Peter but are you aware of The Underneath? Well, that's what Karl is up to at the moment. The Underneath have released their debut album on the ever enterprising EI label and if you thought the Peters were heavy . . .

Finally, I must point you in the direction of a rather wonderful compilation on Dionysus featuring some excellent '80s garage/psych, my favourite track being a version of Heartbreak Hotel, by The Legendary Golden Vampires, now there's a name to conjure with . . . talking of names to conjure with, how about Bevis Frond? There's been some flak flying 'round here over a less than praiseworthy review of his LP. Bevis says his LP is brill, Ronnie Randall says it's crap and never one to sit on the fence, could I just say, that I too think it's brill too. Controversy, don't you just love it?

Oh, Clam-aty! Hoxton Leonid doesn't know about psyche crazies Bachelor Pad yet, here's a pic of them, though with fresh blood, a new album and a more developed sound. Mats Lundgren plugs in his maraccas and tambourine and asks Nick Vahlberg just how cool it is in Sweden

Hardware is the reborn door slam from The Nomads, the first sign of real life after their much praised Outburst debut. Now, almost three years later, their new album breaks out of the garage and presents a band matured and ready to fight for a broader audience.

"We've always objected to being labelled a garage band," explains singer/guitarist Nick Vahlberg, "because our influences are spread over three or four decades, not just the '60s. At the start we listened to American garage bands like Sonics and 13th Floor Elevators, but personally I'm more into the high quality rockabilly that was made in the '50s."

Nick is referring to songs like Del Shannon's Move It On Over, one-hit-wonder Tommy Bell's Swamp Gal and the Sun-artist Charlie Feathers who co-wrote Jungle Fever. The Nomads have covered all three on Hardware.

"There's a goldmine of music out there if you have the energy to dig away the pile of lousy country artists that conceals it."

One thing that really should wash away the '60s stench is the fact that Hardware has no over-riding Farfisa sound. The Nomads' story has always been told by loud trashy guitars, and Hans Östlund's lead is even more upfront now.

"I don't wanna depreciate Frank Minarik's organ on the new record, but his main input was the maraccas and tambourine — and those are really cool instruments. They're not characteristic of the '60s, they're more in the style of Jerome Green who played with Bo Diddley."

The Nomads have no comprehensive strategy. They were recently able to quit their daytime jobs and subsequently their main concern right now is to play enough to pay the rent. Hardware could well mean that they'll stay afloat until the fall and perhaps even get to realise their long planned American tour.

With their total sales just passing 30,000 copies, a huge response for a band on this level, The Nomads look set to generate a certain amount of mania.

"We are aware of our limitations. We can only reach a certain level the way we sound. And personally I'm quite happy to stay on the independent market. One and a half years ago we almost signed to a major company but I'm glad that it didn't happen. I'm convinced that The Nomads would have gone bust.

"Our real strength is the sound. if we ever tried to adjust our music just to get airplay we would probably lose our following. A major deal means you have to make compromises, and we're not interested in that."

When Hardware was released in Sweden in mid March it also became official that bass player Joakim Tärnström and drummer Ed Johnsson had left the band. Due to social commitments they weren't prepared to do the extensive European tour that was to follow. To fill in, the band recruited bassist Björn Fröberg (ex Warheads) and borrowed Jocke Eriksson from the local Red Checkers.

"I think it means that the live impact will be stronger. These two new guys are more technically skilled, which will make the sound even tighter. New blood is always a fuel injection, too."

At the time of this interview, the British music press hasn't reviewed the album. Any fears?

"Judging by the response to Outburst it's not that hard to guess what they'll write and it doesn't make me nervous. But of course it's important to us, especially since this time we wanna make it into the indie charts."

FELIX ADLER checks his bank balance and passes out!

At long last the well overdue Makin' Time album, Time Trouble And Money, has finally surfaced. The third LP release from the Midlands rhythm 'n' soulsters, it's a live set recorded back in December '84 at their first headliner at London's 100 Club. The band split in December last year when drummer Neil Clitheroe joined The Sandkings. • Also back on the streets with a new live album are Rochester's Thee Mighty Caesars, who present their sixth album, titled Live In Rome, recorded at Claudius' Grotto in The Severn Hills Club, Rome while on their recent world tour. While on that subject, the busiest boy around at the moment must be Caesars' singer, Billy Childish, whose art exhibition is currently being shown at The Rochester Adult Education Centre, and who also has a ten inch blues wailing LP released on Empire next month, and watch this space for news of his forthcoming book of poetry! • Probably the best LP from the mod revival is at last being made available again by Re-Elect The President. Originally released in the summer of '82, The Beat Generation And The Angry Young Men was a collection of unreleased singles, demos and studio out-takes from the likes of The Merton Parkas (who went on to supply Mick Talbot to The Style Council), The Directions (who graduated into The Big Sound Authority), The Purple Hearts (with Paul Weller guesting on piano and production), Small Hours and Long Tail Shorty. The sleeve is the original Well Suspect pop art effort, and only the catalogue number has been changed. • Les Elite, another of the vintage mod bands that appeared on that album, have some more of their archive material released through Unicorn this month. The East London four piece, (who included ex-Reject, Upstart and Case stixman Derwent) split way back in 1980, but apparently, the demand for their material is still so strong that they've put together a mini-LP called Pathways. • Walking through Soho last week I bumped into Mick Pallum, former vocalist with The Hidden Charm, who is now busking his way through life while he collects enough material for a forthcoming acoustic LP. • The Rapiers have just finished a hard slog recording session with Buddy Curtis' O.C. Smith, the result of which will appear on an Ace long player next month. • A kick in the pants at the 'bearded, corduroy jacketed, red wine drinking' modern jazz devotees was unveiled this week in Radio London's Mag On Jazz fanzine, compiled by DJ Giles Peterson and his team from Tuesday's Mad On Jazz programme. The free, eight page first issue offers a hip light-hearted look at the current jazz scene. Just send an SAE to Giles at Radio London, 35a, Marylebone High St, London W1A 4LG. Well worth the price of a stamp. • Kent supremo Harboro' Horace stopped off at the office this week to drop off his latest top five faves and to pick the two winners out of the hat for last month's competition. The question he set was "Who was Maxine Brown's male duet partner?". Well that was simple, wasn't it?... Chuck Jackson, of course!... The first two correct answers were from Jerry Allen of Hewfield, Sussex, who chose Kent Stop Dancing as his Kent Album and from Iona O'Rafferty from Leamington Spa, who chose Wack Wack by The Young Holt Trio. Well done and thanks to everyone else who tried.

• Horace has been rather busy up at Kent mansions lately, there's three compilations scheduled for imminent release: No, No, No, Not My Girl, is a collection of northern stompers featuring half-a-dozen unreleased raves from the likes of Tommy Hunt, The Platters and The Gentlemen Four. • That's followed up by Blues And Soul Power! a sixteen track monster featuring gritty rhythm and blues and soul from The US Kent/Modern vaults (featuring the legendary Johnny Otis Show, and Lowell Fullsom's Tramp, from where the Mohawks ripped The Champ). Lastly, he's putting together an as yet untitled Chicago soul collection for release in the summer... No doubt of' Felix will offer the chance to win a few copies of them in future issues, but for this month's prize, we've got three copies of the new Blue Note compilation Baptist Beat to give away to the first three lucky winners. • As the LP (featuring some heavy Gospel/Soul/Jazz from the likes of Jimmy Smith, Lou Donaldson and Hank Mobley) was compiled by Giles Peterson, it's only fair that he should set the question: "Where did Jimmy Smith play when he last visited England?" Check it out and drop it in the mail to Underground/Jimmy Smith Comp.

SO JUST WHO DID WIN LAST ISH'S COMPS?

THE DEAD KENNEDY'S live vid went to a mere ten happy souls who knew that Klaus Flouride plays bass, and had their fingertips to show us. They were Guy Oddy from Berkhamsted, Myles Edwards from Wrexham, Julian from Leeds, K A Beer from Ilkeston, P Armstrong from Manchester, Glyn Evans from Kidderminster, John from St Helens, IR Jolley from Lewes, Conor McGorrvan from Dublin and Robert McKenzie from Kettering.

LYDIA LUNCH'S comp asked where Die Haut are from, and the answer to that is West Germany. Sexy postcards flooded in and the winners of a Lyd t shirt and Hysterie comp are Mark Woodley from Thornton Heath, Britt Hogan from Stratford, Jacqueline from Port Talbot, Steve Barber from Bristol and Robert Symes from Glasgow.

WIN OUT WITH PULP

FREAKS, FREAKS, FREAKS. Winos, freaks and loony tunes... tune in. • Those messiahs of bedsitterland tragedy, Pulp, have a new album called Freaks on Fire Records and it's pretty damn splendid. What's more it's reviewed in this very ish. • So good is it, that ace scribe Ronnie Randall sold his soul to the devil to get five copies to give away. All you've got to do is answer one question on a postcard and send it to Underpulp, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 to arrive no later than June 10 and you can free Ronnie from eternal bondage.

But where are FRONT 242 from? The answer is Belgium and the five winners of Front media packs and albums are Robert Soderberg from Sweden, Beaka from Borehamwood, Tom Penton from Brum, Matthew Butler from Bristol, and MA Hughes from Sheffield.

Then there was CHAKK. Many an answer and suggestion as to what FON stood for and the winners of the thangs are Philippe Codugnet who said the label is called F Off Nazis, but maybe it should stand for Funk Overflow Nightmare. Yes, well, Philippe is from Paris. Other winners were Rudolph Hess from, er, Manchester, Chris Seddon from Runcorn, Mark Graham from Hexham — who suggested it should be F Off Noddy — and finally Jim Waddell from Irvine.

Question is... Which fine northern city do Pulp come from?

Hi, I'm Jarvis Pulp, wanna win my album?

Paul Howard fishes for the key to northern life.

again

If the Screaming Trees' new single, Iron Guru, was food

it would be a pizza, such is the variety of quotes to be found within their work. Oh and, of course, it is round and flat. An initial listen to the 12 inch reveals a Barbara Shack Up-style guitar line dropped into a New Orderish bass line over a very New York sounding drum program that they insist is a 707, (although I am convinced that the classic pinging cowbell would only have come off an 808). In places, the digging bass drum achieves the classic gated Linn II sound favoured by the Rubins & Simmons of this world; mind you the vocals are like nothing I have ever heard in any warehouse. • Mark, the guitarist, talks it out from his apartment chez Doncaster. • "At the moment we're experimenting with drums a lot, tending to go very much towards the dance beat side of things, then building on top of the rhythm; almost hip-hop style. On the next single, after Iron Guru, we're getting in a 727, the percussion version of the machine we're using now, so rather than A Certain Ratio or Barbara we'll be heading more towards Mantronix or even Tackhead. Having said that, however, there's no one who we could call a direct influence, both Shaun and I have very different tastes and we pick up things across a very wide base." • The guy who put the deft prod touches to the single is Steven Singleton, formerly of ABC, and he seems to have a lot of similar ideas to the Trees who have started to working with him a lot.

"He'll be producing our next single and the album, that's due out in September, that will be on Native as well." • But will they have to move south for fame and fortune?

"We've got everything we need up here, the studio we use in Sheffield, Vibrasound, may be small and smelly but it's got everything we need, and it's getting a computer mix-down so there's no real need." • Well, let's just ink the Trees as more hard northerners who're blending dance music and northern culture into a totally convincing sound. And, check the monster dub of the 12 incher's title track while you're about it.

DEATH TO ARRAN SWEATERS

That dreaded four letter word that your mom told you about... FOLK is back in town and Cooking Vinyl are the guilty men. Mike Hirst traces their brief but bamboozling rise to infamy.

• There is a tremendous depth and wealth involved in folk and roots based music. After all what we are looking at is the collective cultural history of the world. Folkies and ethnomusicologists have always known this. The word is spreading. Folk music is no longer locked in dusty academic libraries and smokey back room pubs. Ian Anderson's Folk Roots magazine and Andy Kershaw's radio enthusiasm have all played their part. At the forefront of this roots revival, Cooking Vinyl repackages folk music for a wider audience.

• Pete Lawrence and Martin Goldsmith set up the idea for the label 12 months ago when Pete had left distribution company Mulling House. Martin just phoned him up and said 'let's go into business'. The label's first signing, arch folkies The Oyster Band, were already well known on the folk scene, but how would the cynical world of pop and politics take to their rural English country rock and roll?

• "At first we faced a lot of resistance, but once people had transcended those initial barriers they were very receptive. The fact that the band have crossed over to a younger audience shows that image and looks needn't be everything. I think that fashion consciousness thing is no longer so important. People are making up their own minds what is hip."

• Cooking Vinyl's biggest success to date is, of course, The Texas Campfire Tapes by Michelle Shocked. Despite being recorded for a budget of one pound on a personal hi-fi it still says a lot for the power and emotion of her songs. It says even more the 'keep recording out of the recording studio' attitude of Cooking Vinyl.

• "The whole philosophy behind that record is as subversive as anything punk ever did. It's that DIY ethic that's important and hopefully it'll open doors for people making similar recordings."

• There's certainly no shortage there. Looming big and large on Cooking Vinyl's horizon is the Cutting Edge compilation. Hopefully the first of many, this is a collection of all that is best in British roots music including The Black Spot Champions, We Free Kings and The Mekons.

• But is Pete the Morgan Khan of the folk world?

• "I wouldn't mind that — as long as I don't go bust! We've been sent a lot of good demos and there's some wonderful roots music around. The next couple of releases really will broaden the base of things. The compilation will consolidate that and then the LP from Zimbabwe's Real Sounds, which will be out late June, will push that a stage further. In July we'll be doing an album with The Happy End, a 21 piece jazz-based big band with Sarah Jane Morris from the Communards on vocals."

• It's not all beards and Arran sweaters any more.

WIN OUT!

Cooking Vinyl, in a generous mood after we threatened to reveal their secret leather chaps fetish ("oh, shit"), tried to buy some favours from the Ug! team by offering three sets of their product (yep, all the platters on their list from The Oyster Band, Michelle Shocked, Gregson And Collister, Rory McLeod, The Mekons plus the brand new compilation). To get this bag of goodies, all you've got to do is answer the following three questions on a postcard and send it off to Underground Cooking Comp, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London, NW1 to arrive no later than Friday June 12. And for 20 runners up, there'll also be a copy of the label's new comp. Questions go like this...

1 Ian Keirey of The Oyster Band did an LP recently with Gerard Langley. Which group is Gerard in?

2 Which band did Clive Gregson formerly front?

3 At which festival were The Texas Campfire Tapes recorded? Go for it!

"Here's to a band that deals in the facts of life in their ten short ugly years."

Rory McLeod

"That's what we think we've been doing for the last ten years," Kevin Lycett Mekon sighs. "Hopefully."

Jon Langford Mekon: "Ugly refers to the fact that we're very short and ugly... those ten years have gone very quickly because we've had a lot of good times but a lot of bad times also. It's been pretty ugly as well..." For the last three years at least, The Mekons have been taking to the long and whining road as renegade country rockers, documented by three albums — Fear And Whiskey (1985), Edge Of The World (1986) and now Honky Tonkin' (so named after could all play really well. They were just pretending to play badly."

Still, Roots music does deal in the facts of life as well.

Tom Greenhalgh Mekon: "Yes, the winter's evening, going down the pub. A bit of poetry there."

Jon: "Tom and I spent five years, every night, going to the pub at 9.40pm precisely, totally institutionalised."

As a band with as many as 12 members, The Mekons should know more than most. Actually, this particular incarnation of the group is about to end.

Tom: "We see the last three albums and the Crime And Punishment single as part of a series. We're not tying up the idea of Folk and Country forever, but Honky Tonkin' has really done properly what we've tried to do on the other two albums."

The next Mekons creation won't be a record as such, but a "multi-media" idea. They've been offered an exhibition in New York and somewhere in the conversation, one or more Mekon owns up to painting abilities. We'll have to wait and see. "I wish The Mekons good fortune, I sold them fame and riches and good health."

Meke 'n' Wild

the Hank Williams song), all on their own SIN Records label. But far from veering off their sincere punk roots, laid down by Never Been In A Riot and Where Were You, back in the days of Jim Callaghan, The Mekons' adoption of traditional roots music to relay their bleak but spirited tales of contemporary, urban life, fear, alienation and hope has found an equally sympathetic form.

"There's a wheel off my wagon and a tolling bell/Axle dragging on the road to hell".

How else should The Mekons drink down their stories of Britain's down-at-heel social and political decline than with country's stinging, melancholic mead?

Kevin: "Actually it wasn't the common sentiments at all but the functions and processes. English country music is an extremely functional music because there's a demand for music that people can dance to. So people who make it aren't really doing it because they're musicians but because they're there and it has to be made, which was very similar to what The Mekons were doing in punk at the time. So we had a lot of sympathy in that approach."

Jon: "We were a real shambles! In the first wave of Punk, no-one compared to us because they

● This month's selection of tapes sent to the Tip Sheet were taken by Julian Henry to the shadowy towers of el Records where label supremo Mike Alway held court. Mentions of antique personalities like Edgar Winter and Caravan were churned out as Mike's desire for luscious listening. It was a stern test. ● In the past Mike has worked with groups as diverse as Everything But The Girl, Felt, The Monochrome Set, Eyeless In Gaza and Red Box on Cherry Red and more recently with The King Of Luxembourg, Louis Phillipe, Momus and a whole host of others on el. So let's see what he reckons to this selection of young hopefuls . . .

The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential. Er, well, let battle commence . . .

BLAB HAPPY (135 Devana Road, Leicester LE2 1PN) steal riffs and melodies quite openly from The Monkees and The Beatles, but we can't possibly hold it against them because they play with such panache. Each song seems to last a matter of seconds and you can imagine these people struggling over BORING little details like tuning with admirable lack of concern. Mike agreed on the numerous '60s references and said that they sounded attractive despite an occasionally constipated vocal delivery.

ACTION DIRECT (01.508.2451) take their name from a Parisian terrorist organisation, and sent their tape in a large box that contained what looked to be a bomb. It turned out to be a fake bomb unfortunately, but both Mike and

I agreed that this sort of devilish presentation deserves some form of reward.

How disappointed we were to discover some rather feeble Kraftwerk meets New Order sounds on the tape. Mike shook his head: "Dear, dear, dear," he said. "How very suburban, how very Uxbridge. It's a great pity that the humour they have used in sending us this fine package is not apparent in the music."

2 2 9 3

PLUM PUDDING (2 Huntshaw Place, Earlsdon, Berwickshire, Scotland) have since changed their name, but due to a bureaucratic bungle (someone lost the bit of paper) we are unable to tell you their new mantle. Mike's eyes lit up at the promise of songs about things like potatoes and bits of chicken, and pointed out that titles such as Crunchy Joseph can only be to the group's benefit. But then two songs in, Plum Pudding came a terrible cropper by committing the cardinal sin - performing a song by The Velvet Underground. Mike was so disappointed.

"I would so like to be mystified by this group," he said, "but now I can picture them signing to someone like Creation Records and it all becomes so terribly predictable."

6 2 2 5

CANCEL (Postbus 1386, 8001 BJ Zoole, Holland) are Dutch and have supported groups like Hula in the past. Mike described their music as an attempt to recreate the polytechnic rock of 69-72, in the fashion of bands like Caravan, and so we were both pleased to discover that, yes, the band freely admit a healthy interest in the movements of Pink Floyd at that time.

THE MECHANICAL PREACHERS (57 Gee Street, London EC1) contain an ex-Gang Of Four person in Jon King, and how extraordinarily well played and recorded the tape sounded. But it made Mike see red!

"There is absolutely no quality on this tape," raged Alway. "It's as if he's done this recording just to get a deal with some yuppie label like A&M. There is no original language here whatsoever. Taking King's integrity and intelligence into account, I can only say that this is a tremendous disappointment - why it's just the sort of thing that might make it to the top of the charts!" The tape was removed from the cassette player, and eventually Mike calmed down.

ENDLESS PARTY ((01) 393 6994) sent us a fanzine with their tape which contained all the lyrics to their songs.

"Are Bon Jovi like this?" Mike asked after a few minutes. I nodded my head. "I thought so. This sort of thing can be so terribly popular, people seem to like it because it endorses their boorish male nature . . . I find it almost cryptonazi. Why don't they read a book and stop being so violent in their outlook." An interesting suggestion, but not one I imagine that Endless Party would agree with.

JASON SMART (120 Richmond Road, Brighton, Sussex) is one of those gifted fellows who does everything himself. He writes to tell us that this tape was recorded at a friend's house with the vocal mike tied to a floor mop. Jason, I must be cruel and tell you that it sounds like it. But nevertheless you can take heart from Mike's critique.

WALKMAN WONDER: Seeds I & II compo cassette from Cherry Red

"I would hesitate to be cynical about this," Mike said. "You can see quite clearly that there is a person here and genuine human thought. However it does lack sensuality and is perhaps a touch too earnest. Jason sounds like a ditherer, and will no doubt be an exceptionally nice person."

7 3 6 5

THE FANTASTIC FLINTSTONES (0235.81.8518) are from Didcot, a place that Mike frequently passes on his train journeys down to Bath. Their first song is a frantic rockabilly version of Brand New Cadillac, only it's been re-titled Brand New BMX. Mike suggested that here was a group who would certainly know how to "rock out" and judging by their obvious command of their respective volume controls, I would not disagree.

"I imagine they get offered hundreds of concerts and perform live with no mean vim and application," said Mike.

WILD ROSE (021.354.9527) describe themselves "no frills, no gimmicks, just good ole rock" and for some reason we felt threatened that here, at last, was something of substance and value. It was heavy metal though. Mike sighed. "Oh, dear. That guitar sounds about as stringent as yoghurt. They would appear to be a group of rocking accountants."

On the positive side, though, it must be said that Wild Rose have a singer who can claim to have an authentic gritty rock voice, despite his perpetual groaning on about "a woman who turns me on".

2 4 2 4

HEAD (39 Glengarriff Road, Bellshill, Strathclyde, Scotland) wrote absolutely nothing on their cassette which is really very naughty. A handout claimed 'Head have a need. A need to master themselves and others'... What's that all about then, matey? Mike didn't like their cassette and roughly pulled it from the tape machine after a few moments: "We don't have to go through this," he said. "Another bunch of chaps fat on mum's cooking; they sound like they read books but I'd bet they were mostly dictionaries. Here is a group who need poetry and verve and daring."

THE JEREMIAHS (0276 27939) drew gasps of pleasure from Mike, the first group in the pile to do so. And why?

"It's simple, they have the spirit and gumption to make their first song run in 5.4 time, and I feel that they have it in their grasp to do something great." The music sounds lush, understated and carries a folksy feel with a vocal that floats around on top like a paper boat on a pond. And quite obviously Mike is in love.

"I would do everything in my power to encourage a deal with Cherry Red Records subject to meeting them," he said. "The worst they could be is a successful, but essentially dull indie band, but at best they could die for their art and attain massive commercial success in the process."

8 9 7 9

DELICIOUS (01.387.0202) Succeeded in drawing Mike and myself into animated conversation: He felt that there was something impressively mid-'70s - as in Alvin Stardust - about their song New Sun Rising, whereas I felt it to be much more Generation X or Westworld. Whatever, we both agreed this song and band were due to head in just one direction - the charts.

"This is so incredibly vacuous and lacking in artistry it has to be a major label signing," Mike reckoned. "It is a genuine contender and you can only admire the guile of it. Of course the visuals will be immensely important, but if I was working at EMI I'd sign them tomorrow." As a special bonus this group even have a vocalist who can sing which is quite unusual.

SOME NOW ARE (75 Canterbury Street, Blackburn, Lancs) sent us one of those confusing packages with all sorts of hi-tech symbols and diagrams. What sort of conclusion do we draw? That here is a band manned by robots? "Much too stiff," said Mike. "It's as if this song has been created in the studio and I must say that I find it unbearably cold."

As the tape progressed things became marginally more fluid, and a vague comparison with early A Certain Ratio was discussed. Then, quite unexpectedly, a voice came from the tape saying "that is the problem for men when machines take their place." Mike quickly took the cassette from the machine. We had both had enough.

New Zealand needs heroes! Pratninja tweaks a cappuccino and finds one in the secret of The Chills

50 UNDERGROUND

Young Martin Chill, an impossibly quiet and polite type, seats himself opposite me in a rabble-filled cafe all but drowned out on tape by the coffee machine, but even that cannot dim the peculiarity of his tale. This is the tale of The Chills! Formed nearly seven years ago, and currently in their tenth line up, they are New Zealand's biggest indie band, capable of top ten hits in their national chart and the first outfit to take up temporary residence in the UK in pursuit of a brighter future. They also have a guileful album in the works and the 12 inch I Love My Leather Jacket is already percolating busily inside many people's shattered heads. Their recent live appearances, both here and in Europe, have been scandalously well received.

And now, the big question! Were you a punk?

"In spirit, and appearance, I suppose. An awful lot of the NZ locals would drive 'round in cars 'rockhunting', looking for punks to beat up. No-one in the media was interested in doing anything for punk rock. It was a very exciting time, a good time for the music."

Then The Chills first appeared on these shores. It was about two years ago.

"We didn't know what the scene was like, whether there were 20 Chills-type bands in the London area or whether we were making complete fools of ourselves. We've since found out there isn't really another band like The Chills in the world."

And then they split up!

"I spent a year looking for the right people. This is Chills Mk 10 and I don't wanna go through any more. I look for people who really want to be in The Chills for as long as it takes."

And that frisky single, Leather Jacket, is that the jacket (on the seat next to him)?

"That's the leather jacket. We had a drummer, Martin, and in '82 he got leukaemia and died a year later and left me his jacket in his will, and it's a song about that. He was an amazing musician and an amazing person. It's about the responsibility of carrying on with a band named The Chills after someone has died."

The Chills is a totally consuming operation. They flit from style to style, within their own delivery, at gigs. Most bands have a certain sound with tangents therein, but The Chills seem almost wilfully perverse. Suddenly, out of character, he tells me there are two points he'd like to make. First, about The Chills somehow developing a stage setting for their shows.

"Somewhere along the line I think there's a good compromise between putting on a show without detracting from the music. God knows where, but you can get it."

You said there were two things.

"Yeah, I've forgotten the other one."

Gaye Bykers On Acid tell Alex Kadis about their innermost yearnings

"Oh, William Shatner, he's a fine man. He's growing old so ungracefully!" • This is Mary speaking. I've just made the mistake of asking Gaye Bykers On Acid to tell Underground what turns them on and they're still going on about Captain bloody Kirk! • Mary: "He's put on so much weight!" • He throws his head back and bleats his uncompromising and infectious laugh but then, he has every reason to laugh; Gaye Bykers look set to follow the success of Everything's Groovy with their latest vicious vinyl, Nesedive Kama on In Tape. This — and the whiff of a major signing — mean Gaye Byker are feeling fine. Vocalist Mary aka beautiful earthling movie star Montana Wildhack goes into overdrive... • "I'm telling the kids of Britain, 'don't buy 501's'. They're not user friendly. Get Texaco brand instead. CBDA thoroughly recommend them." • Tony: "Although we can't recommend their washing up liquid. You never make a saving on a cheaper brand." • Mary: "What else turns us on? I've just got some drugs!" • Rubber: "Food and drink." • Mary: "The Butthole Surfers." • Kay: "Sex. I've actually had sex. And the toys you used to get with Topper." • Rubber: "And the free toys you get in cornflakes." • Mary: "And the free cornflakes you got the first 2000AD comic!" • Yes, and being in Gaye Bykers On Acid and getting away with it. Is nothing sacred to these men? Enough groovy thangs thank you!

Steve Diggle nearly focuses for pic scare. Last sighted "playing" guitar while his bro did "performance" art, the former "Buzzcock" now reveals that his band, Steve Diggle And The FOC will release an LP soon. But first, they have a single called Last Train To Safety about to hit the streets. Ha.

Those Leicester chaps are such wags. The Bomb Party celebrate their latest album, a retro show called The Last Supper, by recreating the orig scene avec other Leicesteronia-ns including several Gaye Bykers, Janitors and Crazyheads.

Prefab Sprout

Songwriters don't come much more prolific than Paddy McAloon. Rumour has it that the lad churns out his tunes roughly as fast as the time it takes to be served a Big Mac, fries and chocolate shake to go, so why then the deadly hush from Sprout HQ since their Steve McQueen LP release? The Underground Research team can reveal all • Firstly, there is no truth in the rumour that the Sprouts are to leave CBS for Warner Bros in some multi-million pound transfer extravaganza. An LP, entitled Protest Songs, was recorded last year but was deemed too rough for release by the CBS big-wigs after the Thomas Dolby-produced Steve McQueen album. Protest Songs was knocked out in two weeks, and despite McAloon's initial enthusiasm for its release, it is now on hold and will remain in the cupboard until the band come up with an end product that sounds slick and commercial. Some protest Paddy • The group are now in London recording new material, both with and without Thomas Dolby; songs such as The King Of Rock 'n' Roll, Venus In The Soup Kitchen and I Remember That have been born, and will most likely see the light of day in the early autumn of this year with a single — no title confirmed as yet — scribbled down on the CBS release schedule for July/August. Meanwhile the world holds its breath.

LONELY IS A STATE OF MIND

hard resource be used as an excuse for peddling crap. It's in the old emotional wallets that the real sparsity lies—surprise, surprise!

Not everything's Right There. Frontier (Dead Can Dance) offers us Liz Gard's chilling beauty through a strobe's rhythmic blur, and on the scale Grierson's created for himself, takes us only halfway there.

The reason why most people will probably buy this, the Cocteau Twins, Crushed has all its edges corroded by heavenly light; Robin's twinkly guitar glittering like the firmament itself. And with Liz's cheeky man-gala at the helm, it is the quintessential Muse's goal—like the covers if they got up and embraced you.

Like that one, but not as much as I like Acid, Bitter And Sweet by This Mortal Coil. Here the music slips and image blurs, and the effect is... almost holy. I'm speechless (wow! — ed)

But not too speechless to tell you about Throwing Muses, though. Fish is the only film here not made by Nigel Grierson (it was made by Charles Jesremovic for Danger Video in the US), and while it shares water, fish (get away) and grainy things in general with the others, it's not really as good. Any film of the staggering power of the Muses is, however, a wonderful thing to behold. And this is always that.

Xymox (Muscoviet Musquito) and, later, Dif Juz (No Motion) join with Grierson in a brilliant empathy of sound and vision. But The Wolfgang Press' Cut The Tree is better still. Curtains open in a darkened monochrome room and the music fills with light. Mick Allen falls back on a bed in slow motion. Pain and again, heat over heat. A chaotic orgy of beautiful dementia. It'll make you want to ring your friends up and huddle.

Cocteau Twins' Hot Doggie ain't like the... Martyn Young edges his tongue into a moll-ish mouth, and we're in Gangland. Sounds of chainsaws and pictures of lawnmowers. Laugh! I nearly bought an... or Biggun record. He, Doggies is Grierson's proof that because he can embody High Art (irony minimal) doesn't mean he can't take the piss.

Which leaves The Protagonist, a Koyaanisgatsi-ish wonderment from Dead Can Dance, rendered here as engrossing and scary as a vision of Armageddon itself. In fact it's a personal armageddon, culminating in a drowning as gorgeously conceived as that of Kate Bush on the second side of Hounds Of Love. The fact not to forget here, though, is that Kate Bush makes crap videos. While this, this... well, I think you get my drift.

Sorry, I just had to tell someone.

Muses, Dead Can Dance, Cocteau Twins, Dif Juz and Clan Of Xymox, plus a remixed version of Dead Can Dance's 1979 toe-tapper, Frontier (recorded back in Melbourne on a 4-track). As if that's not enough on its own, in addition to the usual cassette, vinyl and CD versions, you can, if you're quick, get a limited edition version of the LP in a box-set, containing the record, a fold-out thingy and a lavish, lavish 24-page booklet containing words about the songs, the complete label catalogue, and stills from The Videos, which, let's get this straight, really I'm here.

We've all seen videos; we're all saturated in the bastard things. We've all said (a) 'Yeah, well, that was quite good... for four hundred quid' or (b) 'That Bowie frigging movieola for 220 years'ole money', or even, (c) almost anything else you care to name. But come on, they're all crap. You know that. And when you've seen the videos Nigel Grierson's made for Lonely Is An Eyesore you'll know it doubly over; you'll know it to an infinite degree; you'll know you'll never be able to tell a TV commercial from a promotional video again — as if you ever could (except the ads are better). Grierson makes it all look so blah blah easy.

Except he doesn't. He makes it incredibly difficult. The man's blessed with a unique understanding of the dynamics of the music he is creating his images for, and about LIAE is more than a light touch of genius. Grierson has turned it all on its head, and never again can lack of Supergroup or supergreek? After Intape came Abstract, and the resultant Family Fantastique 12 inch, the Janitors' first release in nine months. But, hey! Whoa! That's not all. Dentover and Craig have also been collaborating with fellow Leicester acid metal boys(?) Sarah Corina and Mary Mary from various Bomb Parties and Gaye Bykers, on a rather, er, contemporary reworking of Psychedelic Shack, the old Temptations foot stomper. But lots more about that next ish. What about The Janitors and their family problems? Dentover, is the Janitorial Intellectual. As it turns out he spent his teens in approved schools.

"I felt the need for approval."

But why?

"I used to see a psychologist each week. He told my mum that I had a sexual fixation about her. That I probably spied through the bedroom keyhole, and more than likely wore her underwear. I don't think I did, but she believed him. That sorted out that relationship once and for all. Mind you, I learnt a lot about psychology." And so The Janitors come up to date in a purely hysterical historic rock 'n' roll style.

"The '60s was about creating the myth that lyrics had deep psychological meaning. But however you read it Purple Haze or White Rabbit are just screaming I'm out of my tree." "The cynical '70s was about extending and exploiting it. Being a rock star is a kind of applied fascism, it's like Nuremberg rolled into every gig. Stir 'em up, stir 'em up."

So that's all psycho-analysed. Nice and neat? And back to the new single? "It puts the soot in subtle. It sticks out like a big sore penis on a garden gnome — from the horse manure around it; that is. It's a happening sound that this summer of love recreated."

Figlio di Una Puttana, as they say in Italia. RONNIE RANDALL

"I think I'm in danger of getting overwrought here, so at least I'll start off on some kind of reasonable footing," bleats John Best when confronted with 4AD's newest artefact

Lonely Is An Eyesore is the first ever compilation done for this country by 4AD. It's made up of unreleased stuff from Colourbox, This Mortal Coil, The Wolfgang Press, Throwing

Aussie Celibate Rifles, a "deliberately dum name" chosen as a warp of Sex Pistols and nothing else, serve the noun in more than one sense; their pumping adrenalin is the antithesis fo vacuous pop. The suspiciously named Damien Lovelock, vocalist/lyricist explains: "A lot of people would argue that our lyrics are inappropriate to the genre because it isn't supposed to give vent to thoughtful words." ● Impetuous A&R men have claimed that the Rifles are the best live band in the world — but impossible to market! ● "Part of the integrity of the band is to try to capture things as they are and not present a perfected image which is what homogenised music is all about. Hi, I'm Sally Timms and my record company hired a "professional" photographer

T La Rock in Listerine ad special. The rap from the shadows demonstrates the latest in the current wave of NY fashion for break dancing injuries

Billy Bragg dismally fails the Jake The Peg test after forgetting to bring the third limb into full use. Rolf Harris, yet again, succeeds in carrying off the 'silly-old-bugger' award. Hooray.

Right between the eyes! The Loggerheads get it where it hurts

AAAAAAAAAH, the man with a band in his eyes. No, it's not Kate O'Bush but The Sinister Cleaners looking remarkably un sinister. Still, they're thinking of putting a record out Northern "pop" group steal Magnus Magnusson. Them Philistines, the Carlisle "crew", have kidnapped Mag and present the Mastermind chair as means of proof. Bastards.

IT'LL NEVER FLY... Cassandra Complex try to look "cool" and stop the mickey-takers, who've accused them this week of buying a totally dormant chopper. Cor, the things these pop stars squander their ackers on...

Look here mate, don't give me any of that sub-industrial, post-porn, harder than the rest schlep, where's the toothpaste? Lee Newman and Michael Wells of Greater Than One face up to each other after deciding to call their LP All The Masters Licked Me. Huh!

Voice Of America contemplate their deal with Virgin following their debut 45, I Will Tell, which Ug! gave the thumbs up to in ish one

A HA HA. Eine joke. Well, when we asked people to suggest bands we could cover, Mandy Sharp said... Fine then, with a budding Blindfold. Good! I think that goes for Curtis Nick Kamen too. Don't you? Anyhow, The Teen Bunch are in Cornwall working on their new album, and by the time you read this Edwyn Collins should have a single out on Creation. Derek Wilson sez we need music that drags itself where it's not wanted and points a nagging finger at Leslie Crazyhead. He says they're not The Beastie Boys Chains for Brava (he could be right). His Shadows include Louie Louie by The Kingsmen and Sunny Sundae Smile by My Bloody Valentine. So he must be a good bloke. As is... King Boy D of JAMS who scrawled a message into the editor's desk to the effect that Ug readers sent for more of his Shag. Shag, Shag t-shirts than any other paper (including Over 21, Viz, Frayds and something else). The Inca Babies have been having fun, their Finnish gigeroo with Masseudin Tulevalsuus (who'd tried to stop the Inca's entering the country). The result was a shortened set and Clive Allen's 50th goal of the season (which spun in off the post). Still that's rocky macroller derby, ain't it? Kvatvh numero six has things on Pop Will Mighty Mighty and 3 Action plus a flexi by The Groove Farm and The Sea Urchins. Put together by habitual anorak wearer Claire Ward at 25 Rossett Beck, Harrogate, North Yorks HG2 9NT (er, 50p plus a bit for postage). Another weird mag comes from Certain Gestures (55 Perowne St, Aldershot, Hants, GU11 3JR for 30p including post and packing). Is it art? Off the cuff, ripped and torn prose, a bit on Brunel, young lust, Karen Elliot. Subversive and suggestive in a way. But don't ask us to explain anymore. If you're real quick, on June 21 you can catch The Membranes, Mighty Mighty and The Stitched Back Foot Airman at Oxford Blackfriars Sports And Social Club. Promoted by Rock Trade, it's the first of several strange things to take place this summer. If you're not quick, you can go see where it happened. Good news for Dave Editorson, The Bodhi Beat Poets who did revolutionary rap a la Last Poets several years back have resurfaced and are threatening to unleash a 12 inch and LP that are absolutely garishly brilliant. More news when it happens. Er, time for The Beastie Boys' backlash yet? Bring back Bill Grundy and The TV Personalities, that's what we say.

material from Fela Kuti, The Last Poets, Grandmizer DST, Time Zone and a whole bunch more readily available. And, 4AD have risen from their hibernation with threats of new material, kicking off with a multi-faceted conno in CD, cassette, LP, fuel injection and other formats. Colourbox features the studio working with AR Kane, DJ Juz, Cocteau Twins, Dead Can Dance, the sex mad Wolfgang Press and the rest of the crew. The Cabs still signed to Parlophone (no mention of The Beatles, please). And they also have a track on the second volume of Funky Alternative (alongside tracks from Hollywood Beyond, Chakk, Stump, Quando Quango and some other people. What about the new Depeche Mode album? Well, pretty neat to say the least. Started in Paris, developed in Crouch End at the Kinks' studio and mixed in Denmark, the much travelled master tape is powerhouse stuff and will be called Music For The Masses. The flipside of Strange Love, you know, that weird one, only tells half the story... and the confusion will develop as the group have a box set of B sides and instrumentals finally released in the very nearness of time. Weird art bods Bourbonese Qualk opt to not put out a record this week, going for a publication on plexiglass instead. Er, yeah, that's what we thought. And, banned risque performance person Karen Finley follows her banned Belgian Waffles taster, Tales Of Taboo, with the subtle Lick It For Crammed. Those extrovert Temple people have a brace of new releases including a collaboration between Zos Kia and Sugar Dog (the latter of whom have Fritz Haaman from 23 Skidoo within their ranks). And Shelter have a new compilation LP (with profits going to the organisations' worthy funds), entitled Let's Try Another Ideal Guest House, featuring tracks from Laugh, The McTells, Stars Of Heaven, The Hermit Crabs, The Close Lobsters, The Passmore Sisters, Househunters, The TV Personalities, The Bats, 1,000 Violins, Talullah Gosh and yet more.

Depraved, Vachel Booth catches Pee Dog II, a Gary Panter/Jay Cotton concoction, squarely in mid-forehead

"Boy, you'd have to be pretty immature to do some of the stuff I've just done..." • So says Dracula Danny halfway through PeeDog II dangerous and downright dirty!

Yep, they tried to ban the Gaye Bykers On Acid and forced all and sundry to place erotic splashes of colour over some gruffy hairy bits on the sleeve of their Nosedive Karma 12 inch. In true rock 'n' roll tradition a few copies of the original with PORNO sleeve slipped through and we have five copies of these "things" to give away. All you've got to do is answer this... What colour does acid turn litmus paper? Difficult huh? Send your answer on a postcard to Underground/Bykers, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 to arrive no later than Monday July 6. Go to it.

and with good reason, rarely has a comic book been so filthy, depraved, demented and downright peurile as this one. Danny is an amalgam of Jim Bakkar, Dick Tracy and Quickdraw McGraw, he can, in his own words "alter time and space! Or cause somebody to skid on his own vomit down a stairway to Hell!" And he's the good guy! • The anti-hero is now an anti-heroine and sports four sets of breasts, surgically sculptured genitalia and a behavioural problem. The only reminder of her former life is her constant companion, Pee Dick (one of the two is a dismembered part of the other, I can't quite work out which). • The perpetrators of this travesty call themselves the Shit Generation and are in fact cartoonists Gary Panter and Jay Cotton indulging the excretia of their fevered imaginations. Panter is the better known of the two, for his work on Attack Of The Elvis Zombies, Jimbo (serialised in RAW) and the cover of the recent Smack My Crack compilation. His own excellent record Pray For Smurph has found its way from Japan to some of our bargain bins. • I hesitate to recommend Pee Dog II to anyone, most of a nervous disposition should stay well away, but if you like puking and laffing at the same time this'll help you on your way. • Pee Dog II is available by post only, send six dollars to Spooky Comics, P.O. Box 896, Commerce, Texas, 75428, U.S.A.

VIDEO FRENZY

Colossal eyeball wrenchers this month from Ikon (120 Manchester Rd, Altrincham, Cheshire WA14 4PY) who've three visual brain scramblers set to massage you right out of your easy chair and across the floor.

1 Severed Heads (Antipodean tape babies with an electronic undercurrent) present Kato Gets The Girl, an hour's worth of colour explosions featuring five of their demented sub-pop songs. The Heads let Stephen Jones vid-mix and the result is a big public confuser that lasts 60 mins. Neat to say the least, especially the romanis Kato Gets... (Kato, m'lud is an industrial jigger, what else?)

2 Daniel Landis And Richard Hedop (Cats who've been associated with 23 Skidoo and Last Few Days in the past) make a "film". It's weird, surrealist septa-toned and PG-rated, no less. Entitled The Child And The Saw, it's a treat of industrial austerity, animated circular saw blades and terrified stares. With amplified sounds of cats ealing and babies being stomped hung on the odd strange camera angle, a general tension lingers for some time afterwards. It's, er, weird. I guess.

3 Brian Nicholson (he who has worked on clips for The Fall, James, V Brunes and more) makes a strip-in series of clips into a frightening landscape of self-documentation, paranoid visions and reasonable unpleasantness. Does the world need to see The Mad Carrot Eating Woman, The Joys Of Smoking, Food Adores The Love Of A Fat Man and other such unassuming stuff? Actually, I think it does, it only to scare itself back into reality.

So there you have it, three good reasons to stay up late with a bottle of meths. Johnny Eager

THE ROLE OF PERFORMANCE ART IN NEW MUSIC

Yeah, er, Laurie Anderson, Karen Finley . . . GG Allin, er, yeah. Triv Tel

DEADER THAN THE REST

Pratninja gets wrinkly with Deadface and friends! You're young, sweet and far from invincible. I'd say the last thing you need right now is me perverting your leech-free gullibility. Here goes . . .

I'm not inferring rudeness . . . oh no! I'm talking about fresh attitudes, a spontaneous appreciation of life in its less grumpy mode, and Fantagraphics' LOVE AND ROCKETS, in two recently released issues (20/21) is just the ticket to freedom. Stylistical brilliance unveils music, cigarettes, sex, alcohol, skateboards, the burn of love and . . . Jerusalem Crickets.

If you prefer to ignore that we can look at British efforts again. If you haven't yet got your copy of Kiss Of Death (Acme Press) you're duller than anyone believed. Horror, wispy shadows, a sense of evil and nothing laid out thick. A rotting spree, it is beautifully haphazard. DEADFACE (Harrier) has better ideas but looks far worse. Look further than the obvious however because this brings us Bacchus, an immortal actually worn down by too much wine, women and song. He's also on the warpath, out to get Theseus. You'll enjoy him telling an incredulous barman of his times spent incubated inside the thigh of Zeus, just as the fight scene in debauched circles will drive you wild with nostalgia. Marvellous stuff.

SENTINEL (Harrier) and SECOND CITY (Harrier, too!) are . . . well, spotty. Sentinel's space feel doesn't work that well, but is fairly diverting, while Second City is a skillfully plotted microcosm. Demented and dirty.

Vulcan shoot-out

Pete's pimple feels the Ronnie Randall

What's new in the home computer games world then? Well, not that much judging by the frantic rush to convert every cartoon and comic character into a game format over the past nine months.

Licensing of branded characters is usually a sign that originality is at a low. Too much money tends to be spent on the use of the name, and too little on justifying it with a game to match. Still, there have been lots of goodies.

The engine really got cranked up with the arrival of Virgin's Dan Dare late last year, perhaps the first computer program to successfully re-create a feel for the character and comic strip format in both graphics and gameplay. The sight of such success caused the games industry — that youthful parallel of the record business — to rush out conversions like the plague.

The Flintstones, Popeye, Spy Vs Spy, Scoby Doo, Batman, Dangermouse, Yogi Bear, Asterix, The Road Runner, Mask, and various Transformers, Gobots and Centurians are either here or on the way.

On the comic strip front 2000 AD has proved a fertile source of material with Judge Death is imminent. Pete's Pimple, Rubbishman and Tom Thug are about to appear in a single game by CRL based on the Oink! comic spoof. But the one we're wetting ourselves in anticipation for at Underground is Roy Of The Rovers, due later this summer. Apparently the idea of the game will be to prevent Melchester winning all the cups, and I say that's a tall order what with their habit of scoring decisive last minute goals.

One licence that's heartily recommended is Firebird's Star Trek. Likely to be the game of the year, if not the decade, and finally beaming down next month after more than a year in development. It's a galaxy-blazing adventure where the seven main characters actually talk in authentic digitised voices. The game itself is a complex space strategy (what else?) requiring Vulcan style logical thought. Your eyes will sparkle at the lush graphic detail and depth of the challenge. Finger flickin' good.

The Inside Story with extracts from McLaren's secretary's diaries, punctuated with the newspaper headlines of the time, the Sid 'n' Nance affair and all that stuff. UG THE JUNCTION

Now freely available in the UK via distributors Muzik Tree is Big Al Pavlow's celebrated list of hot, black, American recorded music of the 20th Century: The R & B Book — A Disc History Of Rhythm & Blues. Published in 1983 the book lists what beginning with Mamie Smith's 1920 'Crazy Blues' recording purport to be "representative race and jazz records" of the period up until 1939. After the war the terminology transmutes and we have an annual "hot chart" culled from the Billboard listings up until 1959. With some 3000 titles compiled it is an exhaustive read and more. Enough to make an R&B enthusiast's mind boggle! Price £10 including P&P from Muzik Tree, PO Box 11, London E16 3UA. Evelyn Court

GG ALLIN

Hated In The Nation

ROIR A-148 RR C ● 1/2 Dodgy rock 'n' roll from GG that spirals around a "performance-art" style of dubious insult and threats. Rock taken to the ultimate extreme as GG's combo gives the audience a hard time in real barbed iggy mode. The audience get a bad deal, but you can tell that they just love it. Interesting to say the least (and pornographic in places too). Johnny Eager

BIRDHOUSE

Burnin' Up

Vinyl Solution SOL 3 P ● 1/2 Confusing. I had Birdhouse pinned down to be fine 1987 garage snots, looking back in respect to the Stooges and the Pebbles/Nuggets conglomerate, but then kept hearing diversifying snags. There's a reverence for The Rolling Stones' R&B grind, plus some hard rockisms and a touch of thrashing suburban punk, but nothing really constitutes the real thing itself. Either the boys, the songs or the production is too clean, because somehow Birdhouse just sound too polite to make the real motorgrade. Martin Aston

BLOODLOSS

Bloodloss

Satellite Records SLR 001 P C ●● Violent, discordant rock 'n' roll from Australia, blessed with some seedy, shrieky vocals care of Sharron, who, despite an obsession to "bring it right down", hangs ten on top of a bobbing rhythm and a crashing guitar — to great effect.

There are faults to be found but the future for Bloodloss looks much better than anaemic. Daz Igy meth

BILLY BRAGG

Back To Basics

Go! Discs AGODP 8 ●● 1/4 Billy gets his past brought back to life by Eamonn Andrew McDonald's Go!D label and it all runs together neatly for under six notes. Prime Bragg from the Brewing Up and Life's A Riot LPs plus verbal outbursts from the lad's Between The Wars EP show a keen succinct set of 21 bottlesome Braggerys.

Bill's latterday high profile was always intelligently embedded in his taciturn tongue-in-cheek prose and these songs haven't lost any of their original aplomb. Dave Henderson

BRAVE COMBO

Polkatharsis

Demon/Rounder Europa REU 1018 P ● Er, yeah. Polkas, watzes, schotische... all played in weird styles. Is it cult time rock 'n' brunch muzak, absolute dross, tasteful radical four play, or what? Well played, dismal listening fodder, but weird? Yes! Dave Henderson

CRAIG BUKP

The History Of Decency

Illusion Productions IP 027 (15 Rue Pierre Curie, 14120 Mondeville, France) ● 1/2 Craig Burk is a crazy Yank who teeters on the edge of self-indulgence in a rather stodgy art pose that's probably hip with his pals. Opera meets nursery rhymes while drum cases go bump in the night on a collection of tracks that just about keep you intrigued. Desperately playable and memorable in a kind of annoying way. Dave Henderson

BUZZCOCKS

Total Pop

Weird System WS 021 (Lange Road 101, 2000 Hamburg 1, West Germany) ●● Wah! Singles Going Staddy in the charts, the group's first two albums re-released by New Rose in France... and now this oddity wings in from Germany with a selection of album cuts, singles and the two tracks which the group had on the seminal Roxy album. Great stuff, rollickingly packaged and proof positive that Shelley and pals were always a brilliant song writing and performing unit. The world need never be bored again. Johnny Eager

CASSANDRA COMPLEX

Hello America

Rouska CXRA 002 RR C ●● Special compilation of the Cassandra's singles filled with a couple of extra cuts in Clouds and Fragile. Hard-edged electronic fodder that's well in the realms of Skinny Puppy, Portion Control, DAF and all that jazz — with the added bonus of being almost totally bananas. Speedhead rhythms with a kamikaze bent. Not to be missed. TC Wall

PETER CATHAM

Anan's Mouth

Permission P4 (PO Box 73, Pasadena, CA 91102, USA) ●● Oddball Yank makes good after three cassette albums. The move to plastic must have suited him as Anan's Mouth, although decidedly experimental is more akin to The Fall head on with Dep Mode than his more esoteric tape loop meanderings. Best description must be, it's 'jes' like David Byrne singing in the bath. Great, huh? Johnny Eager

CCM

Into The Void

Belfagor BEL 007 ●●● The sound of Italian hardcore by this account is impossibly delirious — fingers-shoved-into-plug-sockets time, documenting fear and loathing in dead-end, arch-conservative Italy. CCM (standing for Cheetah Chrome Mother*ers) are Pisa's forgotten sons; anti-nihilist, profoundly personal and already Maximum Rock 'n' Roll fanzine heroes in America. Syd Migx, who sings like he's had the skin scraped off his tonsils with hot stones, has actually been run out of Pisa for his politics, and Into The Void, CCM's second album, is their return ticket. Soundwise, they produce a sound so at war with itself and so compressed that while everything is explosive, it still feels trapped. Caged noise — one of the ultimates in rock music. File CCM with Bad Brains, Flipper, Scream and The Stupids. Martin Aston

THE CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Is That A Fish On Your Shoulder Or Are You Just Pleased To See Me?

Egg Plant TWOEGGS NM.C ●● 3/4 Crazy mixed up kids in a head on collision which throws it on down between The Beach Boys, Beatles, Shads, Dep Mode, Zappa and all related subject matter. The Chrysalises are a fusion of Deep Freeze Mice and Yukio Yung and as such transcend both groups low level acceptance by being really rather good.

Here they throw in the towel on weirdness and get eclectic. Sifting the bins after rock's last party, The Chrysanthemums come up with pop of substance, style and character. Excellent fodder, primed to impress. TC Wall

GENE CLARK AND CARLA OLSON

So Rebellious A Lover

Demon FIEND 89 P ●● Ex-Byrd and sometime country stalwart, Gene Clark teams up with bustling Textones' front person Carla Olson for a country-esque selection — ably aided by Ry Cooder, Chris Hillman and The Long Ryders' Stephen McCarthy. Balladeering into the hearts of the sub-consciously tipsy, Clark and Ollie make pretty music for each other which hums but rarely lets rip with songs of CLASSIC proportions. Nice one all the same. Johnny Eager

CRYSTAL BELLE SCROD

Belle De Jour

United Dairies UD 021 C ● 3/4 Strange and plot-thickening, this is an LP of two sides that'll appeal to totally different schools of thought. Tortured art time on side one, sees feedback, scraping screwdrivers and the odd "noise" doing it, while side two's sideswipe on disco, folk strum, and general avant-garde pot pourri makes for an all-consuming 20 minutes or so. Crystal is not the ideal dinner guest, but who wants to eat? Dave Henderson

EMIL

Stammer

Bi-Joopiter (2 Wentworth Rd, Hertford, Herts SG13 8JP) ●● 1/2 The Hait of Rig Veeda who went to Brighton for a suntan, have put together a fine tape. A collection of breezy pop tunes that bristle and break into the sub-conscious at the drop of your Raybans. Sandy and salty tales of requented love, underplayed, but ever so charming. Dave Henderson

FIXED UP

Fixed Up

Closer Records CL 0019 C ●● The French have always had real good taste in their rock 'n' roll — Gene Vincent, Vince Taylor, The Flamin' Groovies, right up to Wilko Johnson and Bill Hurley — are all treated with god like respect. And out of all France, Le Havre, the home of Fixed Up, has always been a hot bed of r'n'r/R&B activity. Fixed Up write the bulk of their own material, in English to boot, and draw their rough and ready musical arrangements from influences like '60s garage punk and vintage Dr Feelgood. With all this and ex-Pink Fairy Larry Wallis at the production controls, how can you resist? Snakey G

FLAMIN' GROOVIES

One Night Stand

ABC ABCLP10 P ●● The last surviving original '60s garage group return with recharged batteries after an eight year absence and duly proceed to shake some action one more time with their beefy brand of beat. Included on this latest set, recorded in Australia last summer, are their own highly charged covers of songs like The Who's Call Me Lightning, Freddy Cannon's Tallahassee Lassic and Barrett Strong's Money, as well as new versions of Groovies classics such as Shake Some Action and Teenage Head, although the last is something of an anomaly from the quartet, all of whom must be into their 40s by now. The Flamin' Groovies trademarks of acid guitar and drum onslaught pace from the moment the needle hits the vinyl grooves to its close. Evelyn Court

THE FLAMING LIPS

The Flaming Lips

Enigma 21881-1 RT C The garish full colour horror sleeve is pretty schiacky, and the further you get into this record, the tackier it becomes. Maybe I'm missing something, but The Flaming Lips sound as if they don't know the tape's on, aren't sure how to tune up and can't remember their songs. This is an underproduced sub-standard fart that no-one can explain away. Dave Henderson

THE FLESHEATERS

Greatest Hits

Fan Club FC 025 P ● LA rock from the New Rose specialist series, and a three strike collection of Dolls meets Cramps horror for tribal black-wearers everywhere. Doomy lggy-rolls-in-bottle stuff that just about lifts itself free of the average tag — only to be laid low again by an uncertainty in sound dynamics from track to track. Purists and reptile collectors take heed. TC Wall

FLIPPER

Gone Fishin'

Fundamental SAVE 17 RR C ●●½ Flipper's second studio album for Subterranean finally gets a UK release at a reasonable price, so now there's no excuse not to possess this masterful (and best) collection of Flipper fragments. Slowed guitar and rhythms with gut-wrenching vocals and a unique churning sound are a must for all mind-numbed excessives. Johnny Eager

FOR AGAINST

Echelons

Independent Projects Records IPR 19 (Box 60357, Los Angeles, California 90060, USA) ●●● Finely tuned debut album from the exceptionally good For Against (from Lincoln, Nebraska), on the artistically correct, beautifully packaged and consistently bona Independent Projects label (previous releases include Camper Van Beethoven, Ten Foot Faces and Savage Republic).

A swirling and infectious bass-driven sound that suggests pop balladry right next to heartbreak melody. A keenly sharp delivery and a must for music enthusiasts. Dave Henderson

CARMAIG DE FOREST

I Shall Be Released

New Rose ROSE 121 P ●●½ I'll admit I was drawn by the 'produced by Alex Chilton' credit but, it's actually de Forest's overwhelming similarity to Uncle Lou Reed that's the most lasting impression. While sounding like a blood cousin of Reed's terse, cryptic delivery and minimalist guitar-band format, de Forest can outlive any comparison because there's a different temperament at play — in this case, precocious, sly and warmly humorous. De Forest also recalls the loose but abrasive burn of Violent Femmes and Elvis Costello; his 15 songs — more like little speeches, ten coming in under two and half minutes — are busking-fresh, streetwise, with hints of pop and flecks of R&B to punky-folk troudadouring. Martin Aston

GENERAL TREE

Every Thing SoSo

Black Scorpio BLSCLP001 Na ●●● Much of what passes for contemporary reggae toasting is of scant relevance outside the insular context of the dancehall, but this album from former stable lad General Tree delivers with a wit and panache that gives it a wider significance and is quite the best DJ set I've heard since Brigadier Jerry's Jamaica Jamaica LP of last year. Black Scorpio run one of the most popular sound systems in the musically active Waterhouse district of Kingston and Tree is their principal barker, possessed of a strident ribaldry and authoritative style that never becomes wearing. His comment here on the Boops phenomenon for Na Na Moon Us is entertaining and very much to the point, while his toast rapide on Walking Rocking compares favourably with those of his UK counterparts. Also included is the DJ's own slant on Brigadier Jerry's Gallop For Me and the two singles Mini Bus and Peanut Man. "I can see the peanut man out there shouting," he cries on the latter. "Ital and salt," comes the response. Evelyn Court

Let's Crash The Blue Bus

Bite Back BB 010 RTS ●● Neater than the rest, '60s orientated cassette-only fodder that's well produced and extremely listenable. Tracks are cut up with Warhol/film/documentary dialogue and the acidic wit of the tunes makes for an ideal juxtaposition of classic styles set in a modern day environment. Dare I say . . . groooooovy? Johnny Eager

GUANA BATZ

Live Over London

ID NOSE 14 Re C ●●¾ The mighty live sound of the dribbling sweating Guana Batz captured at their four millionth Klub Foot orgy of haircuts. Full colour gatefold sleeve, smart tattoos, hardcore kecks, and all the live sounds that're fit to assault your full length mirror to. Purest blues-meet-rockabilly noise fleshed out perfectly by scatty drums and thumping double bass. The topping wins the day, though, with Pip's squeaking tonsils cast across the stage and Stu's animal-instinct guitar cut free at every opportune moment. Your sister will hate it. Johnny Eager

THE HAFLER TRIO/LUCIANO DARI

Ben, Rauch, Ab, Shaloshethen Yechad Thaubodo/Idrogeni Superiori

Musica Maxima Magneitca eee 01 (CP 54, 80100 Napoli Centro, Italy)

IN THE NURSERY

Stormhorse

Sweatbox SAX 021 RT C ●●½ Sheffield's peroxide drummers have turned into a triumphant symphonic duo. Like an orchestra in the last throes of steamy dissection, a synth hammered into submission by an abrasive luddite, In The Nursery are the Beethovens of a new beatnik generation. This is real filmic music, not stuffed with self-indulgent pomp but exploding with life and creativity. Lush and then some. Dave Henderson

PHILIP JOHNSON

Heartache's Worst Assistants Versus The Genius With The Secret Of Making Gold Into Dynamite

Cassette LP (from 5 Hollingbourne Rd, Norris Green, Liverpool II)

●● This is an odd one, like a late night hangover from a lunch time drink up, Philip Johnson's pot pourri of past cassette crimes comes to life. As Brookside characters overlap industrial churning, test tones and all, things get less direct but more consuming. Very listenable, very Liverpool and very good. Dave Henderson

CHRIS JORDAN

Twilight Of The Gods

Coda New Age 832 180-1 P Plinky-plonk comatose muzak for the dead that has little in the way of redeeming factors. The new age pomposity is a lacklustre yawn that's well produced and best left alone in most cases. Johnny Eager

JOSEF K

Endless Soul/Young And Stupid

Supreme International Editions EDITION 87-6 FF C ●●● Like a Budweiser after the London marathon (not that I'd know) or a bucket of water over the head of a sweaty music perv, Endless Soul, and its historic Josef K out-takes is prima, magnifico and absolutely brill. Tracks from the never released debut LP, the Crepuscule cuts, Postcard deletions and bits from Peel sessions go to show just what a fine crew the K's were. Not to be missed, part of the world's inheritance, a God sound, boss with the best, and all that jive. Dave Henderson

CAROLINE K

Now Wait For Last Year

Earthy Delights EARTH 001 RR C ●● Ex-Nocturnal Emission, CK debuts the ED label with an instrumental churning noise that has its moments. Veering dangerously close to John Carpenter film soundtrack country at points, the most satisfying parts of this pot pourri of mood musique came when the disc was rotated at 45 rather than 33. No offence meant, however, as symphonic clarity of reduced speed still lends magic to the compositions. All in all, this is a weird one. TC Wall

THE KANE GANG

Miracle

Kitchenware KWLP 7 ● Rootsy Newcastle-popsters dive headlong into the sweetly soulful morass of daytime programming. In doing so, the Gang lose some of their sparkle, add a lot of effected glitziness and fail to deliver their songs in the time honoured heartbroken style. It's not that I'm waving a flag for the indie-for-the-sake-of-it team, it's just that The Kane Gang seem to have cut and run, right into the arms of their bank managers. TC Wall

KASTRIERTE PHILOSOPHEN

Between Shootings

What's So Funny About... ST 43 RR C ●● The KP's may have an unpronounceable name but they've got a whole lot of talent too. This must be their third or fourth album and, as they say, the hits just keep on coming. Melodic pop stuff, brimming with affection, harmonies and some neater than sound arrangements from this German duo make for bona listening. Don't miss out. Dave Henderson

HISTORY OF UNHEARD MUSIC

Drop it

RRRecords RRR HUM AL 303 HR (151 Paige Street, Lowell, MA 01852, USA) ●●¼ Is it God? This is a great album, a hybrid of styles, an investigation into the paltry, seedy world of rock 'n' roll. The Residents meet Van Dyke Parks, the ideals of The Beach Boys get Throbbing Gristled, jazz tips its hat, the world drops a chin in excitement. A document to weirdness with a palatable and extremely listenable veneer. A superb album, miss it at your peril. Dave Henderson

DAVE KUSWORTH

The Bounty Hunters

Swordfish SWFLP5 NM C ● Familiarity, as they say, breeds contempt and half of this record is contemptible; acoustic slushrock and lots of sobbing, broken heart songs and self-indulgence 'cos his girly has gone and left him — yeah, yeah its real sad. Pity really, because there are a few good, if not exactly innovative, songs. Daz Igymeth

LIBIDO BLUME

Brilliant Names And Dames

Dikeoma K105 (4A N Kazantzaki Str, 15234 Haladri, Athens, Greece) ●¾ Five track mini album from hotly sunburnt Greek combo who loiter with intent at pop's mucky door. Charming in its naivete, this will never be Steve Wright's fave, but there are moments creeping through, hauling away from the Westernised trappings. Potential unrealised, as yet. Dave Henderson

LORD JOHN

Six Days Of Sound

Bomp BLP 4024 RTS ●●● If you could wish for the ripest rock psychedelia played like punk for all its psychological worth, then need I say that New Jersey's Lord John are a dream. There's one pair of granny-glasses and one paisley shirt on the cover (the shirt sporting flares. Wide flares) and there's little advance in the sound to tell you this record was made in 1987, but Six Days is still new in its revisionism.

It all drips with echo, reverb and voices disappearing up wind-tunnels, as melodies chime hazily or stamp recklessly on duelling colour-guitars. If you wish The Jam had been smitten with Syd Barrett rather than Pete Townshend, then the genie has delivered. Brilliant. Martin Aston

JOHN LURIE

Down By Law — Original Soundtrack

Crammed Discs MTM 14 RR C ●● 1/2 For a start, anyone who kicks off a soundtrack to a film in which he stars with a title like What Do You Know About Music, You're Not A Lawyer, has got to have a perspective on things. Lounge Lizard Lurie has polished off the 'fake jazz' tag of old but he still can breeze through all manner of scenarios. On Down By Law itself, Lurie allows himself to minimalise, infusing odd cool-blue laments into a more ambient framework, while a support feature, a strip joint jazz soundtrack to the film Variety, teases New Orleans sleaze next to swing and beyond. Led by Lurie's cruisy alto sax and trusted ensemble of Lizards and friends, these are superb soundtracks, equally acceptable as music without pictures. Martin Aston

MATADOR

A Touch Beyond Canned Love

What's So Funny About WSFA 40 RR C ●● 1/2 Alarming good album that I absolutely hated at first. But these ex-Malarians have their plus points which wobble quickly past industrial landscapes, shake a fist at Neubauten noise and introduce chin-in-chest voices of high character. A Touch is canned charm which distinguishes itself quickly from contemporary Euro stock. Maybe not a classic but a hollowed vessel that carries the most uplifting of big sound. Dave Henderson

MINIMAL COMPACT

Lowlands Flight

Crammed/Made To Measure MTM 10 C ● 1/2 Crammed special collection of different music gets to vol ten with this techy Minimal Compact construction which was sized to wrap around Blue Rn Dances ballet Two By One. An evocative flow which touches several ethnic homebases on its way to your inner ear, it's a delightful collection that succeeds where the structured pieces augment the unstructured flow (well, if you know what I mean). Dave Henderson

(1952-19??)

Cordelia ERICAT 021 (60 Newton Rd, Rushden, Northants) ●● R Stevie is an enigma with a message, a pop purist whose symphonies are eminently catchy, never syrupy, and always spiralling towards a keener than sharp hook line. This collection of his work ranging from '76 to the present day mixes all of his songwriting skills over an array of sounds and a dictionary of finishes. There's even room for a cover of Satisfaction, which Stevie carries out in his own struggling style. One to be savoured and an investment that'll brighten any boudoir. Dave Henderson

MUSLIMGAUZE

Jazirat-UI-Arab

Limited L5 RR C ●● Strange eastern rhythms and arabic background chants from the Mus's of Swinton. Another in the group's series of intense rhythmic tapestries which manoeuvre the unsuspecting listener into a state of near torment-come-worship. Electric and tenacious, Jazirat is a formidable platter. Dave Henderson

CONCRETE CHIC FOR THE UG! SET

PHANTOM TOLLBOOTH

One Way Conversation

Homestead HMS 081 C St ● 3/4 The Tollbooth expand their theory of guitar meets guitar down a dark alley, someone sings occasionally, strings break, voices are lost. This is a right old barrage of sound which shaves wood from the speakers as it tunnels into your migraine. Like Husker Du with sirens blaring, The Meat Puppets with no subtlety and a hammerheaded shark with a rumbling tum. TC Wall

THE RED

Crack

Lost Moment B ●● Taking shelter behind a cloak of total anonymity, The Red deal in an upbeat mood music that is frequently reminiscent of early Cure and also conjures up the spirit of never-quite-made-it scallies Cook Da Books. The lyrics are minimal, and often obscure, but even at its most mellow, as on the excellent Moving Time, the effect is still charmingly uplifting. Too simplistic — in both presentation and content — for 4AD, that is not necessarily a bad thing. An album of potential more than achievement, it is still a brave debut. Tony Fletcher

ANDREW POPPY

Alphabed (A Mystery Dance)

ZTT Records ZTTIQ9 ●●● Granted, Andrew isn't particularly poppy, but then, unlike George Segal... What he is full of ideas. From classical to jazz to systems to pop music, this album somehow fits into all of these categories, and yet at the same time veers off into something completely different, it not quite totally original.

You can still detect the influence of Messrs Reich and Glass in places, and perhaps an even more laid back Laurie Anderson on Goodbye Mr G, but our Andrew is out on his own among European contemporaries, just doing what he feels he has to do. Long may he prosper. Alex Bastedo

PRIMITONS

Happy All The Time

What Goes On GOES ON 9 ●● Neat album from Primitons, who originally turned out a tasty platter for Throbbing Lobster some time back. Riddled with better than great guitar-tinged melodies and creamed with a lyrical charm that's more than ear-bending, Primitons are the scrawl on the wall of a deserted diner, the sound of contemporary Americana strained from a tinny jukebox. Dusty but never contrived, a real catch. Johnny Eager

BILL PRITCHARD

Bill Pritchard

Third Mind TMLP 19 RT C ● 3/4 Bill meanders down dimly lit Gaelic streets, hap-hazardly humming and whistling as he goes. A dour man dressed only in minimal music, he has his moments — his memories — and a pretentious air. Sometimes Bill is a warm and endearing friend, a relaxing lushness that floats on ambient ambience, other times the melancholy takes over, and the sunken eyebrows are hard to shake. A brittle, understated album that's as down as you feel (and then some). Dave Henderson

ROSEMARY'S CHILDREN

Kings And Princes

Cherry Red MRED 77 ●● 7/8 This is more like it. C Red's brightest nugget for some time come from somewhere like Slough but sound like they're wafting in from paradise. A real band who strum and sing, play pop with passion and can write a fair tune. Kings And Princes is a royal treat spiced with exotic soundscapes, folkie follies and direct Englishness. A classic, I'll be bound (except for the awfully embarrassing Merrydown Skank, which sucks). Buy it, go on be boring. Dave Henderson

SCHWEFEL

Schizophrenic Party

Amigo AMIGO 501 (Fidicinstrasse 16, D-1000 Berlin, West Germany)

SHIRATI JAZZ BAND

Benga Beat

World Circuit WCB 003 RR C ●● First UK release for these recent tourists, Benga Beat features the full band line up rather than the truncated one which played the live shows. It's not really jazz, but the Kenyan benga style; a genre distinguished by its twinkling guitars and swooping, melody-bending basslines. Sweet and rhythmically nimble, the music might seem too flighty until you remember that this is its region's out-and-out pop — and then compare its richness with our own pop. A very summer album — if we ever get one. Russell Brown

SIGLO XX

Flowers For The Rebels

Play It Again Sam BiaS 51 RR C ●½ Belgian sombre and sober thoughtmentalist, Siglo make downbeat music that's almost a rivetting and frail tease. But there are too many of rock's accepted sounds and patterns lurking on Flowers, there is too much here that's borrowed. Siglo XX have constantly turned out strong stuff in the past, but in the end mix this collection does little to develop their sound. TC Wall

THE SLUMBERS

Scream And Shout

Antler Records RR C ● An apt title for the debut album by four young Belgian rockers, who seem somewhat apologetic for the fact they've even had to make a record rather than being allowed to thrash it out on stage for the rest of their lives. Though they attack all eleven cuts with a fierce spirit — most notably on the title track and Your Love Is Gone — there is a distinct lack of originality present, singer Niklaas' growling voice only detracting from what melody there is.

Scream And Shout is probably best as a souvenir of a live show, and until The Slumbers cross the channel, that means there will be little demand for it this side of the water. Tony Fletcher

SORT SOL

Everything That Rises . . . Must Converge!

Melody MDLP 6320 (PO Box 343, Dk1503, Copenhagen V, Denmark)

●● Danish delights? Well, these ex-Lydia Lunch compadres are a raucous Wire-orientated conglomerate who cover Ode to Billie Joe, close in tight on pop with guitar feedback, and threaten to make some great music. Don't get me wrong, this is a good album, it's just that it seems to roll in like a never-ending torrent of upbeat rock 'n' roll — like a cohesive Leather Nun that are just too audible. Check it anyhow . . . TC Wall

Spot 1019

Pitch-A-Tent Records PITCH 003 RTS ●● More post-schoolyard loony toons from the label that dabbled with Camper Van Beethoven. At least 50 per cent of all known musical genres are hitched up to Spot's wagon and driven around — Beach Boys pop, garage-a-billy, jangle-rock, skiffle, country, and naturally, Big Pop.

Spot on. Great, great lyrics, and a real party of a record. Martin Aston

SPRUNG AUS DEN WOLKEN

Story Of Electricity

Les Disques Du Soleil DSA 54009 (BP 236, 54004 Nancy Cedex, France)

●●½ A concept of sorts from this German crew who've seen action with Neubauten in the past. And the metallic edge and hard hitting percussion style is here, wrapped around a more whimsical, performance-style presentation. God knows what they are going on about, but this suave package does make for something of a treat that it's neat to get to grips with. Intriguing and compulsive stuff. Find it if you can. Dave Henderson

GET UG FOR THE DOWNSTROKE

< GOOD SPORT OF THE MONTH: Fuzz Townshend >

ST. VITUS DANCE

Love Me Love My Dogma

Probe Plus PROBE 10 RR C ●● Sixties swinging that could be likened to the Housemartins' sound; jangly guitars and dancey pop songs, only better done and, unlike those spotty gits, the stuff is actually quite enjoyable.

Clever lyrical contortions are there to be enjoyed if the music isn't; I Was A Stable Boy Who Grew To Be A Most Unstable Man sings Noel Burke with irony, but also with humour, and before you realise it, you're gyrating and making Ba Da Da Da noises; that's no light recommendation. Daz Igyemeth

STARTLED INSECTS

Curse Of The Pheromones

Antilles Records AN8708 ●● This ain't no avant-garde, this is Insecticide! Brought into your living room by the Island-funded Antilles label, this all-instrumental set weaves its subtle charms within a couple of plays.

Alternately driving and sleazy, these ears were particularly attracted to the constantly inventive use of percussion. Great sleeve too. Alex Bastedo

THE STINGRAYS

Cryptic And Coffee Time

Kaleidoscope kslp 001 RR C ●● Having survived countless potential carbon monoxide overdoses, due to their virtually permanent presence in assorted garages over their formative years, these former "Trash Kings" have evolved into a bunch of rather good tunesmiths. Cryptic and Coffee Time, their first long-player for Kaleidoscope, contains 14 self-penned numbers which, although still having that rough and ready edge to them, feature some dangerously good melodies and some decidedly nifty guitar parts.

The album's opener, Behind The Beyond, Love Of A Kind and Burden of Dreams are all remarkably instant. Alec Stingray's lyrics are certainly not throwaways either. For The Stingrays it's a case of coming out of the darkness and into the light of day at long last. Karen Kent

THE TOASTERS

Pool Shark

Unicorn Records PH2A 5 NM C ●●● The Toasters are a nine-piece ska band from the US, and are living proof of the current worldwide revival of the original bluebeat ethic. This is their first UK release and every one of the 11 tracks is guaranteed to get your foot tapping. Infectious melodies coupled with politically astute lyrics, especially on Naked City, show that The Toasters are more than capable of carrying on where The Specials left off. Well worthy of investigation. Mark Brennan

TRASH GROOVE GIRLS

Vol One: Urbeit, Sport & Spiel

What's So Funny About SF 38 RR C ● Colourful primadonna rock from glam trash queens who gradually disappear under a thumping Euro-disco beat. Lyrically and harmonically wispy, the end product is little more than a drum beat. A mini-album that goes nowhere. TC Wall

JOHN TRUBEE AND THE UGLY JANITORS

Beyond Eternity/Lavender Flesh

Cordelia ERICAT 020 (8 Denis Close, Leicester LE3 6DQ) ●¾ Trubee's former antics with Zoogz Rift are renowned. In true Zappa style, he's maaaaad. The group are weeeeird and they swear on records. Tune in for a total play off of musical styles, check the phone interruptions, but don't try to work out what it's all about. Take medication before hearing, but do hear it. Dave Henderson

COLIN LLOYD TUCKER

Head

Glass Records MCLALP 024 NM C ●●½ Hey, this is alright — kind of mind-expanding and danceable simultaneously. Sitar, guitars, keyboards, drums, cellos and even a bit of digeridoo back the voice of Col, who sings about Eating People and Kicking Buddha's Gong. Ziggy-style Bowie flavouring is evident but never actually spoils the taste of this mini-album, chartworthy songs dressed in tacky luminous trousers and cheesecloth socks (?). Daz Igyemeth

TUXEDOMOON

You

Crambo CBOY 9090 C ●●● Ex-pats in Brussels, Tuxedomoon have for the best part of this decade married their, originally, jerky, experimental rhythms with Europe's more avant-garde sensibilities, producing an unsettling spread of electronic laments, cabaret dances and brilliant soundtracks for great cities.

Usually Tuxedomoon are possessed by the decaying — moral and physical — condition of their European environment but on You, they've written a wonderful animated cartoon for the ears in the four-part Boxman, eerie but darkly humorous, that almost parodies the alienated tones of their past work. Elsewhere, Tuxedomoon have added luscious, commercial edges to their last-chance dances. Martin Aston

SST 106 BLAST!: It's In My Blood (LP/CASS $7.50) You say you're bored, homeboy? Mr. Rogers gives you more of a kick than the latest "next big thing"? Dudes, get blasted with BLAST! The heavier than anything sound of this Santa Cruz quartet will make you do all the things that you ever wanted to.

SST 079 FIREHOSE: Ragin' Full On Mike, George (FROM THE MINUTEMEN) and Ed (FROM OHIO) are FIREHOSE. Now, usually, a firehose stops things from burning. SST 112 DESCENDENTS: (ALL) The Descendents bring it all home for their first SST release. "ALL" From the one-second magnum opus of "ALL" to the buzzsaw pop of "Clean Sheets," the rock gods of bonusdom do not let up on the concept of maximum fun. Faster-than-light guitars from Karl and Steve, blockwork drums from Bill, and the everyman vocals of Mac make this record the best of all. Includes Goodbye and eleven more tough tracks.

SST 130 DINOSAUR: You're Living All Over Me (LP/CASS $7.50) This band is known for some of the loudest performances known to man. After this record, they will also be known for playing some of the most soulful, heartfelt music around. J. Mascis, Lou Barlow and Murph have been crafting their fine form of dynamic, raw edged soul just for you. Dig the dig.

SST 110 CRAZY-BACKWARDS ALPHABET: Crazy-Backwards-Alphabet (LP/CASS $7.50) This record has crazier stuff on it than just it's alphabet. With Henry Kaiser (avant guitar god), a Swedish rock star that sings in Russian, the former bass player for the Dose Dregs (Andy West), and John "Drumbo" French the legendary thumper for Captain Beefheart. What else could you expect? ZZ TOP'S "La Grange," sung in Russian, Power Blues, Exotic outings on ten songs.

SST 125 LAWNSDALE: Sawtooth Rock (LP/CASS $7.50) Strange experiments have been conducted without our knowledge. Deep in the bowels of SST laboratories, Lawndale have created things that were not meant to be heard by mortal man. Using chops learned from their Bigfoot friends, Lawndale have really gone beyond barbecue on this one.

4AD CAD 703 ●●● Seemingly endless aeons in production, this multi-faceted compilation has finally made it to the high street in numerous lavishly presented formats. A cassette pack, CD with booklet, video with book, and LP with excellent booklet or a super deluxe album with booklet and various fold-out pieces.

Fine, but let's get down to the music. It's, well, it's more than this and much more than that. Each lovingly crated 4AD person has afforded due care and attention and the result is an exceedingly good compilation that perfectly highlights the hidden depths of the label's style and performance on these previously unreleased tracks.

Colourbox I knew were brilliant soundsmiths in search of a hit, The Wolfgang Press are enticingly fresh — as are Dif Juz...but the finest? Ah, now Throwing Muses, I never dreamt they were so beautifully tempered, so whimsically light, so essential so exceptional. Miss them at your peril, miss this compilation and you'll probably miss the 4AD act that you never realised existed. Dave Henderson

COMPETITION WINNERS

You lucky people who desired the mystery packages of singles from French multi-coloured vinylists X-RAY POP can have them! Yes, Peter Bishop of Chester-Le-Street and Steve Prescott of Emsworth in Hants both knew that the first outfit to unleash their talents on Rough Trade were the exceptionally electro-punky Metal Urbain. Enjoy your X-Ray's... Yeehaw! The 'win a cardboard box' comp had people scratching their brows the length and breadth of the country. There were five winners of the boxes (which contained 20 spesh items including releases from The Hit Parade, Terry And Gerry, The Membranes, The Lorries, Hula, Chakk and a whole bundle more). The winners were Malc Miller of Lincoln, Gary Reynolds of Houghton-Le-Spring, Kevin Lowe from the West Midlands, David Huitson from Barrow-In-Furness and Peter Edwards from Bebington, Merseyside.

They all knew that, The Red Guitars signed to Virgin, the ex-Cabaret Voltaire member of The Hafler Trio is Chris Watson, The Toy Dolls are from Newcastle, Terry And Gerry's LP was called From Lubbock To Clintwood East, Age Of Chance covered Prince's Kiss, Cath Carroll from The Hit Parade, also has her own band called Miaow, The Membranes are signed to Homestead in the States, there are four Passmore Sisters, Eugene Chadbourne used to be a member of Shockabilly and Red Lorry Yellow Lorry are now called The Lorries. Phew! Clever bastids!

Oh! To free Ronnie Randall from eternal bondage. Yes, you, the readers, released Ron "The" Randall from a life worse than working for TVAM, by writing in your many trillions to tell us that Pulp are from Sheffield. The first five honch-mon who revealed such tat get a copy each of Pulp's new album, Freaks... and they are Paul Furniss from Derby, Lamontina Cranston from Nairn, Kent Ragnarsson from Gothenburg, Shan Samuel from Port Talbot and Paul from Eccleshall in Staffs.

So, let's get Cooking! Three questions on the Cooking Vinyl way of cooking beans and burgers gave us three winners of the label's catalogue, and they are Mark Graham from Hexham, J Peverall from Liverpool and Steve Owens from Powys. They knew that Gerard Langley was also in The Blue Aeroplanes, as well as collaborating with Ian Keirey, that Clive Gregson was formerly in Any Trouble, and that Michelle Shocked's Campfire Tapes LP was recorded at the Quiet Valley Ranch Kerville Festival in East Texas. There are also 20 runners up of CV's The Cutting Edge and we'll be getting to you all in good time.

TWELVE 88 CARTEL

We Encourage Resistance

Bite Back BB 004 RTS ●● Neat cassette-only package from this south coast outfit whose potential and performance has only been noticed in terms of upper-reaches-of-the-iceberg proportions, so far. Atmospheric to metallic and assertive at the drop of a crowbar, Twelve 88 are worth watching out for and this a good place to get the first dose. Excellent. Dave Henderson

FRANCISCO ULLOA

Merengue

Globestyle ORB 020 P ●¾ Dominican Republic accordion music that sounds just as mad as that brief explanatory jibe suggests. This is music made by chanting nutcases, yucca-grating dudes and honchos with drums slung over their shoulder. Wild and ultra-crazed stuff that's probably as ordinary as Mrs Mills on home ground. Still, in downtown Camden it's shirts rolled to the sleeve and 12 litres of alcoholic sludge all round. Caramba. Dave Henderson

UT

Conviction

Blast First OUTRO 3 RT C ●● Re-released from last year to co-incide with the new live LP. Sparse, awkward woman-noise peopled with sprawling sexual metaphors. Rock 'n' roll this is not. Words and music don't always gel, partly because UT don't do anything easy, but with the lyric sheet in front of you UT are by bursts compelling. Russell Brown

Alternate Cake

NATO nato 824 (Essex Record Distributors, 71 High St, Billericay, Essex CM12 9AS) ●● There is even less room than normal to complain about the rugged continuity of most compilation albums when it's the avant-garde you are dealing with. Alternate Cake scoops up some of the left-over pickings from around the French indie's table — some of them live cuts from The Chantenay Festival (an annual knees-up for the 'outness' tendency), a solitary re-recording of something that's already out, and quite a few studio out-takes. The key word is "wayward" — try British Summertime Ends' cover of Running Bear; some tropical forest atmospherics from the stray Frank Chicken Kazuko Hohki; some devilish sax manoeuvres from improviser Lol Coxhill; and the rough-cut freeform of guitarists Jean Herve-Peron and post-punk finger-shredder Arto Lindsay. Not everything is essential, but there are certainly more ripe bits than rotten ones for your four quid. David Ilic

Beyond The Wildwood

Imaginary ILLUSION 001 FF C ●½ Unpredictable records, these tributes, as love and devotion can so easily block out real musical innovation. This indie-band tribute to Syd Barrett is the equivalent of a fan letter — an endearing declaration of faithfulness that's worthy, inspiring, awkward and disappointing.

The Barrett song has to be one of the most unique, and you can either slip into its silhouette as some unfortunately do, or instead imbibe its intoxication and climb on up, like Opal's stunning adaptation of Jugband Blues, Tropical Fishtank's No Man's Land or The Shamen's Long Gone. Elsewhere, everyone has obviously loved being Syd for a song, but I fear that such alchemy can only really be practised by sorcerers, not their apprentices. Martin Aston

Bugs On The Wire

Foghorn Leghorn/Skysaw SAW 3 RR ●● Fine compilation culled from selections by Radio Lancs' Steve Barker. Diverse styles and presentation make for a never ending treat, an ear scratching trip through musical genres and a more than worthwhile set of namechecks on the sleeve.

From The Fall to It's Immaterial, right back through The Riverside Trio, General Strike and The Suns Of Arqa with Prince Far I, this is a real treat. Dave Henderson

The Dotted Line (Here)

EMI EMI EE3530 ●½ Because of EMI's involvement in both this and '77s Roxy LP, you can draw a parallel and guess what'll go down ten years on. The Roxy had a swell narrow band of wired-up punks who fathered the independent network that, in part, you can hear right here. But, as a cross-section of current Brit-indies, this is too much of a letdown. Not that it's awful — Dave Howard, Blue Aeroplanes, The Jack Rubies, We Free Kings and Asian are all worthwhile providers, but that's the trouble, it's worthy, not rivetting, exciting or essential. The two major-league dotted-liners, Voice Of The Beehive (since gone to London) and Crazyhead (on the verge, surely) are both disappointingly flat. Maybe this does sum up the state of British mainstream independence. You've at least got diverse rock/pop/folk/funk fractions which is healthy, but what will the children of The Dotted Line sound like in 1997? I wonder. Martin Aston

Dr Death's Volume One

C'est La Mort CLM 001 (Box 91, Baker, La 70714, USA) ●●● Fine ten track set culled from the networked US radio show, Dr Death. Moody and melancholy stuff that straddles all points (pop through pain, melody through mystery) and includes fine offerings from Throwing Muses, Rash Of Stabbings, Room Nine, Breathless, Lung Overcoat, M-1 Alternative and more. Well worth investing in. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS ARTISTS

Hip Hop 16

Dance Music/Streetsounds ELCST 16 ●● Nine track seminal sweatbox of sounds liberally splattered with hard dance cuts as diverse (but essential) as The Classical Two's New Generation, Marley Marl's He Cuts So Fresh, MC Shy D's Rap Will Never Die (Part II) and the World Class Wreckin' Cru's Cabbage Patch. Still the safest place to get the best sounds for the most economical outlay. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS ARTISTS

Let The Pigeons In

FruX FRLP 2 ●● 1/2 Four bands with different ideas and varying quality. Half of this comp shows promise, suggests illusions, images and creation, while half lacks dynamics, power in performance and production. There are six tracks from Belgium's Bene Gesserit who trip the light fantastic in a world alive with nursery rhyme scary monsters and big rhythms. From France, DDAA supply one long piece which fondles the backwaters of the mind in a troublesome vibrating manner leaving the two could-do-betters, We Be Echo and Iham Echo, to struggle with lacklustre sound and less than new ideas. Interesting but not as testing as it should be. TC Wall

Red Wave

Big Time ZL 71331 After the press dazzle of smuggling tapes, four bands from behind the iron curtain, music with "no borders" and the rest, the four enclosed Russian combos come out as nothing more than a future book and film story for Jane Fonda. The acts included, Kino, Aquarium, Allsa and Strange Games, play bland westernised pap. Sad. Dave Henderson

Raw Cuts Volume 3: The German Underground

Satellite Records RAW 3 ●● 1/2 Not the raw, punk scene, rather the indie pop brigade; witness some great country/chart moments from the likes of The Legendary Golden Vampires, The Nirvana Devils, The Beatitudes, Shiny Gnomes, Broken Jug, The Chud and Dizzy Satellites. Only when Les Black Carnations slaughter VU's What Goes On? do things become torpid. The rest of the time we're dodging a Rain Of Death or being subjected to Love Torture, Under The Green Sun on Some Foreign Shore and digging it. Fifteen goodies and one baddy isn't a bad average ya know. Bloody good actually. Daz Igymeth

Seeds III: Rock

Cherry Red BRED 78 ●● Quite what this third volume of Cherry Red's Seeds series is trying to prove remains a mystery, being no more a collection of influential rock masterpieces than any random 13 singles of the last decade plucked from any sizeable record collection. The exceptions come in the first ten minutes: Rudi's Big Time being the first post-punk pop record out of Northern Ireland (and still one of the greatest), and Dexy's Midnight Runners' Dance Stance sounding as pure, clean and emotionally charged as the first day I heard it.

Otherwise, Seeds fluctuates between third division promotion candidates and those doomed to permanent non-league status. Though the GI*xo Babies, Wasted Youth and The Monochrome Set all strive to rescue this operation, their task is hopeless. Tony Fletcher

Smack My Crack

Giorno Poetry Systems GPS 038 ●● 1/2 Being an old bore at heart, I kind of liked John Giorno's albums when they mixed the prose and poets from weird street, with the odd left field combo thrown in to make up the numbers. Burroughs, Laurie Anderson and the like made for different listening. Smack My Crack, although in itself quite good, is nothing more than a clearing house for the bizarre and Bizzare acts of recent times. On show are Neubauten, the gorgeous Butthole Surfers, Diamanda Galas, Swans, Burroughs, Giorno, some bod called Tom Waits, Nick Cave, Blondie boyfriend Chris Stein on a YMO workout, and an awful yawn from Chad And Susan. Waits wins hands down for talking his way through, the rest passes (the quicker the better). Dave Henderson

Super Stars Hit Parade Vol. 3

Live & Love LALPO11 LA ●● The practice of a single rhythm track serving a whole album is long established in reggae and this perky digital dancehall sample realises some spirited performances from the likes of Pinchers, Jose Wales, Super Black, Johnny Osbourne, Little John, with honourable mentions for an in form Cornell Campbell relating Mix Up Family antics, newcomer Anthony Maluo castigating Bad Minded People, an hilarious, riotous Wear Yuh Size from Lt Stitchie. Producer Prince Jammy turns round these computer rhythms so swiftly that their genesis is sometimes obscure, though there are claims for Admiral Bailey's Politician hit as the original version of this, but which is curiously omitted here. Evelyn Court

What Are You Doing About That Hole In Your Head?

Rot Records HOLE IN 1 RR C ●● 1/2 Here we go, here we go — slamin' all over the world. Seventeen extremely noisy and fast punky/metallic delights collected from various parts of Earth, including vicious music from Brazil, Finland, Sweden, Germany, the USA and Little USA (UK).

Alright, when some geezer is screaming Pooklestar, Pooklestar! its not exactly a jab in the conscience, but then this is entertainment. Daz Igyemeth

VARIOUS ARTISTS

Wide Open

Cracked Records CRAK 1 CC C ●● Competent comp which focuses a bleary eye on Leith, Edinburgh. Many a tangent is covered, all with credit but some with more panache than their citymates. The choice is entirely the listeners as the heavy headbutts run rampant, and spoon-players in league with The Fall face up against fonkers who should know better. Top marks to the unique sound of Jackhammer, a blood rush from Acoustic Youth and a great name mention for The New York Pig Funkers. Dave Henderson

VIRGIN PRUNES

The Hidden Lie

Baby BABY 008 P ● 1/2 The Prunes in tatters perform live and come out of it all sounding quite tame. The lads in loincloths who used to smother themselves in all sorts of stuff have been caught in the act in Paris (6/6/86), the style of rock with theatrical delivery, the end result, a well produced rock album that fails to transcend into absurd-land. A good version of Lou Reed's Lady Day further confuses the issue, but still it all sounds like they're treading water. Johnny Eager

THE VYLLIES

Sacred Games

Fun After All AFTER 4 P ●● Enchanting synth/keyboards based sounds which inhabit a region that lies between commercial dancefloor and stranger classical shades and abstractions. Three women; Ursula Nun, Ilona Prism and Manu Moan produce a tasteful combination of sweet yet strange songs. Moody but danceable and, due to their Swiss nationality, the vocals are endowed with an attractive accent. Synthipop with brains and aesthetic value. Mmmmm. Daz Igyemeth

AIDAN WALSH

The Life Story of My Life

Kaleidoscope kslp 002 RA C Aidan Walsh has a problem. He thinks he's funny, and so, apparently, do such previously sane notables as Dublin's The Golden Horde and Stars Of Heaven, according to the accompanying notelet. This LP, a would-be vinyl autobiography, is an appalling mess of chronic cover versions (Do The Hucky Buck and Do The Hokey Cokey); rapping/spoken lyrics over a dubious rock backing track (I Am Aidan and Have You Ever Given Money Away) and a particularly nauseous little ditty entitled Kissing And Eating With Women (all about how he needs to eat meat to score with the opposite sex).

Side two is rather more — ahem — conceptual. Mr. Walsh giggles, grunts and wheezes his way through a selection of self-obsessed and self-congratulatory set pieces — tongue-in-cheek it is NOT.

This man is a cult figure? Am I missing the joke? Karen Kent

THE WOODS

It's Like This

Demon Records Fiend 93 P ● 3/4 A perusal of the sleeve reveals that The Woods are an American three piece from somewhere in Carolina, and a member of the Georgia Satellites appears on the album. Despite these encouraging signs, it must be said that It's Like This falls slightly short of being unbelievably brilliant, perhaps because it's just a little too traditional in its outlook. I had hoped to be reminded of REM or The dB's. Instead I found myself thinking back to The Outfield, who's AOR rock has found great favour in the American charts. Julian Henry

YOUTH OF TODAY

Break Down The Walls

Wishing Well Records (Box 9417 Fountain Valley CA92728 U.S.A.) ●● There are two "street" underground musical cultures thriving in the States at the moment — namely new ska and hardcore. Youth Of Today are leading lights on the US hardcore scene. Hardly a subject is left untouched on this 12 track LP. The government, the family, you name it, they hate it and with each song lasting about one and a half minutes, they don't mince words either. Mark Brennan

BETTER MOUSETRAP The Road To Kingdom Come

Cuddly 111 11 This particular brand of mousetrap succeeds in catching its prey with a bait too intriguing to completely ignore. The Road To Kingdom Come is five minutes of cartoon-style bravado, a mostly acoustic ramble that falls short of true glory due to its twoness. From Cleethorpes via their new home in Wembley, A Better Mousetrap may not be contenders but they should have no trouble raising a smile on their travels. TF

A HOUSE Snowball Down 111 11 11 Wow, even betterer than their mucho-applauded Kick Me Again Jesus. Snowball Down is the kind of infectious pop that'll rattle through 13,000 car stereos as they queue for a parking space at the drive in. Well, it's great pop anyway, a pulsing charmer and worthy of serious chart action. JE

ALIEN SEX FIEND The Impossible Mission Anagram 11 Insert your green plastic fangs and get down to the latest sexbeat; a rock 'n' roll stamp with cut-ups of dialogue from Mission Impossible stitched on. Razor guitar slices through and keyboard swirl; bleep and go squelch. My Brain Is In The Cupboard - Above The Kitchen Sink is the delightful offering on side two. Grungy music, grungy vocals; great gungoi DI

ARKA In Paradisum Skysaw 111 11 11 AKA Suns of Arqa, Arka opt to fuse opera with dub reggae and come out smelling sweetly weird. Odd, whimsical but ultimately cutting and perceptive. DI

BABY LEMONADE Secret Goldfish Narodnik 111 11 11 Sweet tooth pop from scrambled lunsters, north of the border. Paley and pastiche make way for a purist melody line and some warm-fire crooning. Why, they've even got a Warhol-esque t-shirt or two in their ranks. TCW

BALHAM ALLIGATORS Let's Dance Delivery/Topic 11 This single's got the lot. A classic covered in hot cajon sauce, a happy noise collection of soaring accordion, swinging beats, French singing, even some Frenchified Beastie-style twisted rapping. Edgy and raw, the single takes us to Scotland and Lafayette, with fiddly folkling, rolling drums and fine geeetar picking. Dance or die. 155

THE BEATMASTERS FEATURING THE COOKIE CREW Rok Da House Rhythm King 111 11 11 Jumpy and sweaty uptempo beat fodder with the Cookie's chattering, and a relentless rhythm, holding it all together. Dancefloors may never be the same again. TCW

THE BEAT POETS Glasgow, Howard, Missouri 53rd & 3rd 111 11 11 Neater-than-life surf sounds from The Beat Poets. Instrumentally yours in a kind of ghetto version of the Shads or The Ventures with a caffeine overdose. DH

THE BELOVED Surprise Me Flim Flam 11 Final coming of age for The Beloved, whose style previously has never quite been realized. Here, the distinctive electronic and melodic pop edge works on an eight minute blow out, on 12 inch, with subtle Madonna sampling, Depeche Mode commercialism and New Order power rhythms. Surprise me is a classic. DH

THE BIG GUN Heard About Love HMFibre 111 11 11 Chirpy pop music for scooter riding soulsters who've escaped the Kamen trap for pastures more wholesome. The BG's have some tuned edges, a good delivery and a strong song in Heard. Next step? Stardom, or never ending obscurity with more than a few smiles along the way. DH

BIG ZAP! Psychedelic Shack TIM B 11 11 11 Classy reworking of the Temptations' standard featuring renegades from The Jesters, Bamb Party, Gaye Bykers and Cool Notes. Phlegmy and quite souled out (with more than a snatch of commercial potential). DH

THE BLOW UP Good For Me Creation 111 11 11 Sixties, schmickies. OK, what's good for me? Opening strains of altar-bashing and a candy-sweet undertow of Merseybeat pop aren't bad for anyone's health BUT The Blow Up sound routine, lackadaisical, more calculating than creating. So they have goodish taste. A letdown. MA

BILLY BRAGG Peel Session Strange Fruit 11 The Bard Of Barking used to be young, naive and green-gilled Billy Bragg in July 1983, more personal than polemical troubadour. The inimitable spontaneity and verve of these six tracks of prime, raw-livered Bragg, with a brazen cover of John Cale's Fear among them, makes No. 27 one of the most affecting and valuable of this series. MA

BROMPTON COCKTAIL Sally Blind Date RR C Woolly underproduced underachiever from pointy-toed rockmen whose chord-play lacks the spit and polish of accessibility. Hesitant debut tones. TC W

BUBBLEGUM SPLASH Plastic Smile Subway Records RR C Emotionless vocals whine through a song that tries so hard to swing. But it's Jerry Built pop and you can see the joins! CH

CATAPULT Summary STS (39, North Rd, London N7) Moody, hypnotic, embracing and reasonably "lilting", actually. Catapult aren't an outrageous noise assault, as their name might imply, but a layered sound-scapes begging lush relaxation and eventual smothering warmth. Pretty good, huh? TC W

CITY GIANTS Little Next To Nothing Give It A Blast (277 Valley Rd, London SW16 2AB) Brillo single from a new crew who couldn't write a press release if you paid them. Powerful melodies coupled with a more than confident vocal delivery. Expect more and investigate. TC W

THE CLOUDS Village Green Subway Records RR C Buzz-saw guitars and the proverbial three minute pop song show that The Clouds are set to give the Soup Dragons a run for their money in the Wish It Could Be 1978 Again stakes. Essential listening. CH

THE COMPANY SHE KEEPS What A Girl Wants Cold Harbour Scatty popalong radio stuff with a great harmonica break, a smoochy backbeat and Rik Mayall in the vid. Radio action and a potential charter. JE

DADA Pearl Dadisk RR C Dodgy name that hardly befits this sweet pop (electronic melody and nice verse/chorus) sound. Nice haircuts and radio play potential. TC W

THE DENTISTS Writhing On The Shagpile Tambourine P C A five track bargain from Medway's finest balladeers. Though Writhing isn't the most pertinent Dentists effort on show, the lads from the striped stuff show their teeth on some neat pop that soon leaves the jingle-jangle back in the closet. Pop with poise, no less. DM

JEGSY DODD AND THE SONS OF HARRY CROSS The Jewel In The Flat Cap Probe Plus RR C Poet Laureat by the year 2000, that's Jegs. Five scorching songs (!) ram-jammed with vicious, painful insight. The Jewel refers to the industrial North being like part of the old British Empire. There's a wallow in the plight of Liverpool on Always The Bridesmaid, then there's a haunting, harmonica-accompanied, 8,000 Miles Away about the real victims of the Falklands war, the widows. This man's a hero, arise Sir Jegsy. RR

THE DOONICANS The Doonicans EP Probe Plus RR C To maintain tradition, you don't have to be traditional, as The Doonicans show how. This is truly modern folk. Top cut Fisherwoman's Life experiments with a mesh of joyous voices, shuddering drums, discordant guitars and bold time signatures. Elsewhere, pennywhistling jigs are bookended with Pretty Vacant and The Specials' Gangsters riffs. It's no novelty, just vibrantly innovative. MA

EGYPTIAN KINGS Peppermint Cream Native RR C Tepid Americana rock that'd do just fine on CBS, with a copy of Rolling Stone stuffed under its arm. Here it looks set to disappear somewhat unremarkably. JE

THE FALL Peel Session Strange Fruit P C November '78 and The Fall are fist clenching under a different banner. No pop here, as squidgy organ and Mark E muffle any possible commercial potential. More powerful and emotional, though. Stripped to the bone as The Fall always should be. TC W

FEAR OF DARKNESS Lay Me Down Sugar Shack RR C Bristol-based Fear Of Darkness look and sound like one of those groups that enters Battle Of The Bands competitions. Lay Me Down, despite a Steven Street production, is a very average single — positively Steeleye-Spannish in the chorus. Things improve slightly on the two B-side tracks, but otherwise nothing out of the ordinary. KK

SPARKING IN THE 6K ZONE

THE FIVE YEAR PLAN Hit The Bottle Breakdown RR C Gilt-edged, bracing pop from Bristol that sounds like a more springy Wolfhounds (Hit The Bottle) and a much more inspiring angle on the female-fronted Scottish indiepop with a spiningling build-up of reverberating guitars at the end. Curious, and gorgeous, with not a trace of indieplagiarism in sight. MA

FOLK DEVILS The Best Protection Beggars Banquet Strangely off-the-wall, maybe even Ron Johnson-esque, explosions from Folk Devils. Their sexy sleaziness and growled vocals are given extra vim on this uptempo, breakneck chordplay. Smartish. JE

GIRLS AT OUR BEST The Peel Sessions Strange Fruit R C Girls At Our Best were a delightful band who recorded (in '80/'81) some of the finest pop moments to grace many a record collection. Their infectious tunes and naive enthusiasm should have won them mass appeal, but instead they were exiled to the domain of the new-wave pop aficionado. Judy Evans' delicious out-of-step vocals still appeal and the medley of their first three singles ('A' and 'B' sides) that appears here is a fitting tribute to a fine band. CH

THE GROOVE FARM In The Summertime Raving Pop Blast RR C Lodged deftly in the twangy world of stripey pop, The Groove Farm play it for kicks and never quite manage to transcend the fun school and wacky wackness. Good tunes but no killer punch...lasting all the same, though. JE

GUANA BATZ Rock The Town RD C Full-blooded live work-out that stays almost completely faithful to the Stray Cats original, with all the usual yelling and stamping of feet that you would expect from a group like the Batz. JH

HARD CORPS Lucky Charm Rhythm King RR C On one hand, you can talk about trans-Europe disco ethics, or more likely on the other, a gorgeous Kraftwerk-meets-Propaganda-in-heaven swoon that, in one swoop, knocks 95 per cent of all known ZTT germs off the shelf. MA

THE HEARTBEATS Can't Let Go Core FE C A long lush grind which spirals to infinity without really attaining anything in the zone of highs and lows. A decisively numb disc that's quite catchy and infectious but totally forgettable. Strange. JE

THE HEART THROBS Toy InTape RR C The Hearties homage to Buzzcockery finally gets a mucho delayed release and sounds remarkably Buzzcockish. Neat, tuneful, songworthy...but isn't it all just a little too late? JE

HEX/FEED YOUR HEAD Nothing Ventured Nothing Gained EP Words of Warning RR C Two bands, four tracks, £1.30, and is this what they call punk rock nowadays? Both bands suffer from sadly hackneyed post-goth-punk guitar, a shame since the vocals are sound, and the songs all bounce along, throbbing, direct, to the point. Still, no adrenalin rush lads. IBB

THE GODDAM BLEEDING METEORS HAVE A NEW BLOODY SINGLE OUT CALLED GO BUDDY GO

Er, yeah, well y'know The Stranglers did it first, but The Met's have a t-shirt with the design from their single bag all over it. Yeeeeeeps. And you can win one of these t-shirts, all you've got to do is tell us which Strangler went to pris? Write it on a postie and send it to Ug/you're nicked, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 to arrive no later than July 5.

TINGLE IN THE LOVE TRIANGLE

THE HOLLOW MEN Gold And Ivory Evensong RR C

Mmmm...lots in here. Violin gives way to carefully noisy guitar gives way to harmonica gives way to twinkling keyboards as the singer sways along underneath them. All the mood seems to have made the singer a wee bit shy but it's still a good 'un, a bit like one of the Stranglers' quiet ones with the AOR taken out. Dreamy, like. RB

HONEYMOON IN GREEN Eve Rampant RT C Left-field psychopop, as Australia currently knows how. Eve is a swaying somnabulist of a song, dense and eerie, propelled by nagging string synths and a heaving rhythm. MA

HOT 'N' HORRID Tourists Make The Trees Grow TIM C

The sound of "rockin'" Windermere comes headlong into the world on a deshevelled skat version of life, seen through rose-tinted goggles. The Hotties play folk on the track to hip-hop, just around the corner from Heaven 17 jamming with Nyah Fearties, they're one of those exasperating conglomerates who make you want to go out and do, er, something. DH

DAVE HOWARD SINGERS Yon Yonson Hallelujah RR C Big hearted Dave - the last remaining Singer - with some neat and finely honed dance noise concerning the near legendary Yon Yonson - the man from Wisconsin. Mean sound with echoes of hip-hopping eccentricities and all that jive. Miss this one at your peril, Beryl! TCW

IN EMBRACE What's Got Into Me Glass NM C Back from a fit of lovelorn depression, the In Embrace young romantics opt for an airy skank sound topped with a harmonious verse/chorus hook. Warranting airplay, in need of sunshine to really hit...and a long way from their sour depressing days. DH

JACKDAW WITH CROWBAR Monarchy, Mayhem and Fishpaste Ron Johnson NM C Four diverse fragmented, and seemingly unrelated, pieces from a combo with a great monicker. Dis-jointed in parts, as only RJ sons and daughters know how, the Jackdaws play dub reggae, Beefheart punk, filmic nightmare music and definitely won't get on the Mike Read show. DH

JUNK Messiahs Of Pop Raunch Native RR C Loud and troublesome guitar afterburn from Junk's new 12, which updates their album of last year, with an ugly brand of "roek" that's polished to sparkling excellence by simple self-flagellation. Hard. TCW

KABBALA Ashewo Araink NM C Remixed and restructured to encapsulate the tribal drum-heavy dance beats of trendy sleazoid clubland, Kabbala's honkin' jazz-pop floats haphazardly, floats above your head and makes the dancefloor turn head over heels. Moving and pushy, a beat that should never end. TCW

KALIMA Weird Feelings Factory Records R Recorded in Stockport, but it sounds more like it comes from a Cuban jazz bar. Delicious vocals from Ann Quigley, delivered just on the sunny side of The Girl From Ipanema. JH

THE KLINK Fear Antler RR C Belgian dance extroverts on a massively warped disc (wrapped neatly in incisive surgical sleeve). Pulsing Eurobeat in sub-Cabs mode that throbs and vibrates itself into oblivion. Loud and temple grinding. TCW

LOCOMOTIVE LATENIGHT Out Of Range KDY FE C Streaming full-ahead dance pop from north of the border. Shaking a plectrum at neo-commercialism and radio play, the LL's break into a pop symphony and look likely to attain mucho cash in the long run. Look out for this one. JE

LOOP Spinning Head RR C More spiralling guitar splurge from psyche-Wire-Ramones-on-barbs team. Struggling through the undergrowth of pop inaccessibility, Spinning is a headful worth inhaling. DH

THE MATTER COMPANY Merchant Train Of Thought (33 Warwick Road, Worthing) The Matter Company are two surreal groups - I Penal Colony who offer Thug Activity (from barking angst to the rotting control room) and Smog by Suum Cuique (rolling along on an old blues groove while sweetly sketched female vocals emerge stage left from the swamplands of a Teeside chemical plant). Harsh, insistent, and very, very slick. RR

THE MOODISTS The Moodists EP T.I.M. Records 12MoT5 Four doses of The Moodists courtesy of a new EP. More swirling reflections of life to make your head spin. My favourite's Somebody To Love, a Twist And Shout start reels off into avenues of haunting images and melancholy with a machine gun chorus. On top of that, there's the sad tale of Hey Little Gary, the mellow It Takes A Thief and the pounding Someone's Got To Give. A platter worth bending an ear for. PP

SHAWNIE G Mission Impossible Rhythm King RT C Hard headed rap over the much travelled TV theme. Shawnie G is sound as a bag of spanners and twice as noisy as he lets fly. Mighty and full of bounce. TCW

MICHELLE SHOCKED Disorientated Cooking Vinyl NM C Folky studio fodder from Michelle Camp Fire, that introduces her lyrical bent to string quartets and more poignant end products. A class cut that'll rack nicely alongside Joni, Phranc and Judee Sill in aeons to come. DH

SLAB! Smoke Rings Ink NM C Deep-rooted grinder from former Ugi cover chaps. Yes, I think we can smugly say 'we told you so', as their guitar sludge beats off, the brass gets staccato and King Slabbie gets horny. Huh, smokey Joe. TCW

STELLA'S BABY Port Of Amsterdam No One, That's Who

FE C Tasteful version of the Brel standard that gives little info on this sketchy duo. Flip it and Don't Switch Me Off offers a more vibrant view of their near commercial popism. JE

THE STONE ROSES Sally Cinnamon Black P Eighteen months on from their Martin Hannett-produced debut, the band that claims to be Manchester's most-likely-to emerge with a spicy number that combines swinging '60s guitar hooks and subject matter, with a healthy '80s aggression. Yet for all their obvious potential, on this offering The Stone Roses merely hint at greatness without actually achieving it. TF

SALLY TIMMS This House Is A House Of Trouble TIM

B C Surprisingly pert collaboration between the sultry Sally Timms and the stylised Marc Almond. Instead of being tacked unceremoniously to a country-esque ballad, Marci gets stuck in head first to this tortured pop song that deserves full exposure. A classic. DH

THOMAS THE VOICE Stone Cutter Boy North-West RR C

Three songs in all that move the hybrid sensation up about 100 notches. Thomas combine modernist, beize funk with traditional folk outlines, balanced by musicians who just share the same North-London music co-op roots that spawned Scritti Politti. Imagine the very best of Heaven 17, and think of an acapella version of Prince's Nothing Compared To You. As in pretty unique, I'd say. MA

UG BOY, FINGERPOPPIN'

TWO HELENS Silver And Gold Sharko FE C Post Dolls tub-thumping thrash with a silver of Iggy, a snatch of "anarchy" and all the usual stuff. If there's life after Flesh, then the Helens could be there. JE

UNITY STATION Day After Day Restless Re C Ah yes, strong delivery, energy, enthusiasm and a lot of well placed jangling really can do wonders. They're kinda hard on the outside with squishy centres. Four varied slices of power pop pie go down a treat. Yum! DI

VARIOUS ARTISTS Lunacy Is Legend Barracuda Blue Records

B C Another release from the label who specialise in Marc Bolan cover versions. Nikki Sudden weighs in with a low-key and disappointing Sailors Of The Highway; the Necessitarians do better with a healthy garage version of The Groover, but top prize goes to Times, whose delivery of The Slider is impressively slug-like. JH

VARIOUS ARTISTS Miners Benefit EP Wake Up Records B C

Highlights of this left of the iron curtain charity disc include a wonderful Bragg version of Sam Cooke's A Change Is Gonna Come plus a horribly chaotic version of Garageland. The Redskins also deserve a mention for their surprisingly restrained Levi Stubbs' Tears making this, all in all, a most welcome release. JH

BEN VAUGHN COMBO My First Band 53RD & 3RD FE C Lincenced from Hoboken based Telstar Records, Ben's tale of primal band formation has throbbing Nick Lowe kind of charm as it billows with chug-a-lug Fonzi-ness. A tight tune that makes Huey Lewis sound like Huey Lewis. DH

THE WILDHOUSE Groove Me EP Uh Huh FE C The sound of young Dundee, heard through a never-ending blare of tra-la-la-feedback and stuff. All the right poses get nearly the right sound to make not a bad record. DH

PHIL WILSON Ten Miles Creation RT C You can castigate Phil for furthering his 'country roots' with a carefree cover of Jackson when he should be refining his imperfectly-perfect gladrag pop, but then he hands over Ten Miles with its assured touch and flamenco tones, and you just want to hold his hand. Stay with him. MA

99 lbs

Hi UK HIUKLP 402 P A companion set to Peebles' Tear Your Playhouse Down, 99 lbs features some of her classiest 45 cuts. Backed by the evergreen horn sound that became so synonymous with Willie Mitchell and Hi, Ann lets her larynx do the wobbling on Slipped, Tripped And Fell In Love, plus another 15 similarly mammoth odes to love. Squidy 'n' excellent. Dave Henderson

THE BEARS

Insane. Roots of Punk Volume One.

Tigerbeat Records GROWL 001

Re C Twelve tracks, 10 superb songs 'recorded live at Waldo's Jazz Club 1977 — no overdubs, no nonsense, no money'. Also, no audience.

Remember riffs, remember wailing X-Ray Spex, Cravats-style sax, remember bass working its way up, around, through, below crashing cymbals and sharp geeetar? These songs pick you up, turn you around, suck you in, gob you out. Ian B Bourne

BIM SHERMAN

Lovers Leap

RDL Records RDL 700

Re C This is the first UK release for an album originally briefly issued in Jamaica in the late '70s as a limited edition and long unavailable. It is also arguably Bim Sherman's best work. For though only a five track showcase, the inclusion of each title's respective dub gives the set a completeness, particularly as the rhythm tracks accompanying Sherman's frail vocal are so demonstrably resonant and the Prince Jammy mixes satisfying wrought. Standout tracks are the upfront cut of The Hep-tones' Get In The Groove rhythm for My Brethren and my own personal favourite of all Sherman's songs Chancery Lane, wherein he recounts day to day livily in his place of work at the address of this name in Jamaica and which as evocatively serves to remind me of my own blighted City sojourn here. Evelyn Court

BOB MARLEY AND THE WAILERS

Soul Rebels

Receiver RRLP106 P These recordings from 1970 represent the earliest of The Wailers' works for Lee Perry since their liaison together during the rude boy rock steady era at Studio 1 in the mid-'60s and it is, in fact, the first album ever put out by the group — released originally in this country by Trojan. Recorded during the period when Bob Marley had temporarily reject Ras Tafari and was referring to himself as a soul rebel, the material is more interesting than startling but in many ways anticipates their inspired music with the Upsetter on the follow up African Nerbsman set. Evelyn Court

THE BYRDS

Younger Than Yesterday

Edsel ED 227 P Another leaf in The Byrds book of twists and turns. This classic catches McGuinn and compadres between several disguises as the Tambourine Man style and sound disappeared and several members departed leaving the path free for later, even more experimental outbursts — Notorious Byrd Brothers and eventually the country-rock Sweetheart Of The Rodeo. Younger Than Yesterday is a set of flery ideas caught in action, as an album maybe it's a little disjointed, but the ideas are incredibly moving. Dave Henderson

THE KOOBAS

Barricades

Bam-Caruso KIRI 047

Re C Re-issue (with a new sleeve and titles) of this much overlooked album that ranks among the classic British releases of the late '60s. Humorous, imaginative and sensitive all at once, it is a clash of moods and sounds: The Small Faces' Ogdens' Nut Gone Flake meets The Zombies' Oddysey And Oracle via The Pretty Things SF Sorrow! Recorded at the tail-end of The Koobas' career ('68/'69) this album belies their Merseybeat origins and shows a band capable of developing with verve and originality when given the chance. Chris Hunt

LES ELITE

Pathways, 1978-'79

Unicorn PHZA8 Re C At best Les Elite were only in the fourth division of the '79 mod revival. At worst they were non-league non-contenders whose entire discography amounted to one track on a Rocket Records compilation album. But they were there in '79! Hence the need to celebrate their very being with a 7 track rehash of old demo's (three of which are already available elsewhere). Cymbals push at every opportunity and clichéd guitar riffs dominate — in fact it sounds just like you'd expect it to. A mildly entertaining but pointless release that does nothing to enhance the reputation of such music. Chris Hunt

Charly Records have a lively batch of product for us this month. To start with there's The Rockin' Carl Mann, a double LP set featuring his Sun and Phillips recordings. Two compilations in the Sound Stage 7 series, Southern Soul Brothers, and yep, you've guessed it, Southern Soul Sisters. Moving right along there's Mama's Cookin' by Cissy Houston (mom of chart topper, Whitney) which is made up of her mid '70s Janus recordings, including the original version of Midnight Train To Georgia which, although a hit, was overshadowed by the Gladys Knight And The Pips rendition. On the cool side, jazz wise, there's Take The A Train by Betty Roché (Mid '50s Bethlehem recordings from one time vocalist with Duke Ellington), and Route 66 man Bobby Troup doing the business to some Johnny Mercer material. On the CD front there's Live In Paris by Dee Dee Bridgewater and a compilation We Want Latin Soul. On the budget Top Line CD series you can get This Love Of Mine, pre-Atlantic Ray Charles, Billy's Bag by occasional Rolling Stones sidekick Billy Preston, The Shangri-Las' Greatest Hits, Rip It Up Vee-Jay period Little Richard, the Kings Of The Blues compilation with Elmore James and Fredddie King among others, Home Of The Blues by Johnny Cash and last, but not bothered, You Make Me Feel So Young by Frank on his last legs Sinatra.

Hotwire have unleashed a collection of tracks from Ireland's eleventh most famous group, The Radiators From Space. Now a Pogue, Philip Chevron's old band recorded for Chiswick Records between 1977 and 1981, and among the tracks here are their classics Kitty Ricketts and Enemles.

Veteran rockabilles Gene Simmons, Johnny Powers and Tony Conn are set to headline some rock 'n' roll weekenders down Weymouth way in October.

Magnum Force Records have acquired part of the Capitol catalogue, and to prove it have stuck out The Rockin' Years LP. It features tracks from Tommy Sands (who married Nancy Sinatra), Wanda Jackson and Hank Thompson and more, more, more.

Live event of last month was R&B legends Lazy Lester and Little Willie Littlefield at Camden Town's Dingwalls.

Mary Wilson, original member of the world's most successful girl group, The Supremes, was over in Britain recently to promote her book Dream Girl — Life As A Supreme. Smokey Robinson also turned up on Wogan, and Eddie Knock On Wood Floyd spent a good deal of his recent London performance talking to the spotlight which he affectionately referred to as Otis ... man, weird.

Meanwhile, over at Ace Records, July's releases are Earl Forest And The Beale Streeters featuring Bobby Bland and Johnny Ace, Rock 'n' Roll Party Volumes 7 compilation with the tackiest sleeve this side of me, Blues, Chickens, Friends And Relations by Billy Let The Little Girl Dance Bland, and Jimmy McCracklin's Blast 'em Dead. Kent-wise the 70th release is Sweet Soulful Chicago featuring tracks from the Dakar and Brunswick labels. On the CD front we have The Very Best Of Jackie Wilson. Also through Ace, don't forget the Stax Is Back seven inch 45 series, and to win the first six releases, read on ...

If you read last month's Re-wind you'll already know the first six Stax singles are: Private Number by Judy Clay & William Bell, Who's Making Love? by Johnny Taylor, Time Is Tight by Booker T. & The M.G.s, Mr Big Stuff by Jean Knight, Respect Yourself by The Staple Singers, and Woman To Woman from Shirley Brown.

To win them, answer these two questions set by label man Roger Armstrong correctly, and be the first pulled out of the leather trilby: 1. Which U.S. town was Stax based in? 2. What did Booker T's M.G.s stand for?

Plus, as a separate competition, we have a slightly harder question. What were the surnames of the two people who took the first two letters from each of their names to make up the word Stax? The prize for the first correct entry out of the hat to this one is a DJ-only white label LP featuring the listed six singles in mono on one side and stereo on t'other. We're talking limited edition here. Send your entries to Snakey & Little Roger's Stax Competition, Underground Magazine, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 7QZ. Competition ends August 1.

NIRVANA

Black Flower

Bam Caruso Kiri 061 Re C A prime example of obscure late '60's British psychedelia. Flowing, or should that be flowering with ever so gentle and pretty semi-surreal lyrics. Take note, I'll be testing class at the end of the lesson. What do phrases like "Explosion of the storm upon the sea in red" and "The sunlight spreads blue rays" suggest the duo were doing with their doctors prescriptions?

Aye! the sound and stance of Island idealism from an age and group who never quite made it. Awkward vocals squeezed by soaring strings and close harmonies. Ohhhh! So peaceful. Probably a seminal influence on the better known Nick Drake, but more folksy, Donovan style. Ronnie Randall

SRC

The Revenge Of The Quack-enbush Brothers

Bam-Caruso KIRI 054

Re C SRC were from Ann Arbor, Michigan contemporaries of The (psychedelic) Stooges and MC5-back in the latterday '60s. Acquired tastes may disagree but to these ears, SRC thawed out their original surging Merseybeat R&B and psychedelic excursions with extended prog-rock developments that dropped them in between two stools of thought.

Dreamy introspectors rather than freakouts or anarchists, SRC had to stand by their mesmerizing lead guitar (one Gary Quackenbush, one of two brothers, hence the title) and billowing organ moods. Recalling Pink Floyd, Traffic and The Pretty Things, circa 1968, SRC deserved better treatment from the hands of history. Martin Aston

TAJ MAHAL

The Natch'l Blues

Edsel ED 231 Re C The eclecticism of Taj Mahal as evinced by his current Hawaiian flavoured collection Taj for Sonet has always been a feature of the man's music, although in retrospect his earlier recordings now sound a lot less challenging than they seemed at the time. As its title suggests, this is the closest Taj Mahal ever came to creating a blues album in more or less traditional style even if the tradition in this case is based on the acid rock blues of its period, as inevitably as the inclusion here of Al Kooper as sideman. With his academic sound more contrived than felt and this is further compounded by the irony of his songs as demonstrated in titles such as She Caught The Katy And Left Me A Mule To Ride and Going Up To The Country, Paint My Mailbox Blue. Nevertheless it has worn a lot better than much else of its time and remains a pleasant listen while never negotiating any real peaks. Evelyn Court

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

The United States Of America

Edsel ED 233 Re C Turning the clocks back to '68, Edsel turn out this cultural diamond from their dusty memories. In today's climate, the hap-hazard construction, multifaceted instrumentation, bleeding heart delivery and overall enthusiastic charm would be confined to labels like EI (and possible obscurity), but not way back then. On CBS, the US of A were something of a challenge. In retrospect, the questioning of the lyrics, the lives of mid-town Americana, the flower power, love generation given the once over, and titles like The American Metaphysical Circus and The Garden Of Earthly Delights make for real brain scrambling stuff. A treat to be sure. Dave Henderson

Nightmares In Wonderland

Bam Caruso Re C Subtitled Rubble Volume Three, an accompaniment to the just-reviewed Volume Two, Nightmares features a further 16 British psychedelic gems. The Pretty Things and The Executive both make reappearances, but aside from The Brain (who would become the deadly serious King Crimson), Tomorrow (featuring Keith West, Yes-guitarist Steve Howe and cult figure Twink) and Mark Wirtz (founder of the Teenage Opera), this collection features a greater share of complete obscurities. Perhaps then it is not surprising that the aforementioned names provide most of the record's high spots. Tony Fletcher

The Red Bird Story

Charly CDX 15 Re C If you saw the Easter Saturday BBC1 history of rock 'n' roll programme you'll probably agree that the best part was the girl group segment. The films of The Essex, The Ronettes and Shangri-Las were all new to me, and while on the subject, the latter trio are the leading lights of this double album set, having six songs featured. The best is Give Him A Great Big Kiss; but sadly the cream of their recordings, like He Cried and Long Live Our Love are not here. The Jellybeans, Ad Libs, Butterflies and Dixie Cups make up the rest of the first record while disc two goes from deepish soul to northern. Stand outs include Go Now by Bessie Banks, Take Me For A Little While by Evie Sands and the closing track I Know It's Alright by Jeff (Barry) and Ellie (Greenwich). Snakey G

Pop-Sike Pipe-Dreams

Bam Caruso Re C With the much-hyped release of Sgt Peppers on CD set to inspire all manner of nostalgia for psychedelia, what better a time to release this glorious compilation? Most artists present followed a similar pattern to that of the Fab Four (albeit less successfully), being British beat groups that changed with the times and thus dallied with psychedelia, but all blessed it with their own spark of madness.

Though The Spencer Davis Group, Pretty Things and Keith West (of Teenage Opera fame) are on first glance the only star names present, Gordon Waller proves to be of Peter And Gordon fame, The Shotgun Express and Bo Street Runners both featured Mick Fleetwood, Idle Race starred Jeff Lynne, The Talismen boast an appearance from Jimmy Page, and The Executive — whose wonderfully way-out Tracy Took A Trip is my own star choice — were led by the NME's Roy Carr. Tony Fletcher

Street Corner Memories Vol. 1

ACE CH 205 Re C From the days when all the slum neighbourhood kids — whether Italian, Puerto Rican, whatever — would hang out on the street corners and warble together. Although the varying styles conjure up the names of Dion And The Belmonts, The Marcells and The Penguins, none of the more well known acts are included. Instead the compilers have gone for the super rare and unreleased cuts by such enchanting acts as Dino And The Diplomats, The Enchords, The Bon-Aires and Vito And The Salutations. Snakey G.

THE WALKER BROTHERS

The Walker Brothers In Japan

Bam Caruso Records AIDA 076

Re C Previously only available in the land of the rising sun, this double live album is a great scoop for re-issue specialists Bam Caruso. A must for anyone interested in keeping up their Walker Brothers/Scott Walker collections, these two platters include standards such as The Sun Ain't Gonna Shine Anymore, Make It Easy On Yourself and In My Room.

It's all great stuff and a largely up-tempo, beaty affair that's a million miles away from the introspective, world-weary existentialist Scott Engel was soon to become. With Phonogram still sitting on his albums nearly 20 years after their initial release, how about Bam Caruso for a complete re-issue series? Alex Bastedo

BEASTIE PUSS SENSATION

The Beastie Boys' long lost first US 12 inch, Cookie Puss, has surfaced in London with a new bag, and as a French pressing. On sale in the high street, no-one has yet determined who pressed it up, whether it's an import, and all that kinda thing. It's pretty good though . . . even if it lacks a little bit in sound quality. Steve Martin gets scratched

The Beastie Bores . . . Sorry, we just couldn't find a B Boy pic, all the other mags have them — they're on the cover of New Scientist next week! So here's a pic of the legendary Bachelor Pad. EARLY RABBIT PATTY

Pete "The first time I saw the Bunnymen I didn't really like them. It was at the YMCA in London . . ."

Mac "That was legendary! That was when everybody loved us!"

Pete "I just thought it was totally strange. I thought Joy Division were great. I knew Dave Balfe, and he said to come and see them because the Bunnymen needed a drummer.

They were playing Eric's in Liverpool, so I went. It was just very weird being in Eric's seeing this band which I was trying to join! But seeing them at Eric's was magnificent."

Will "I've never heard that before!"

Mac "I had a blue-checked shirt on that night. I remember being thin, and I always wore Lee jeans . . ."

Pete "Because they were at Eric's, there was less of this coldness between them and the audience, like there was at the YMCA. At Eric's, it just seemed really warm and powerful. But even after I joined, I used to think it sounded shit for ages."

Mac "It did, but it was still great . . ."

Les "I liked that tour we did with Teardrop Explodes, when we used to alternate."

Mac "They were turds! We'd headline in places like Huddersfield, but whenever we got to London, we always lost the toss. We were always hipper in London. A better following."

Les "Yeah, we used to blow them off."

Will "We were unusual for those times be-

03 UNDERGROUND

I walk into Bunnymen HQ, up the stairs, past the eight-track recording studio and rehearsal room and peer into the end office. Mac's facing the other way, on the 'phone, the others are scoffing Sugar Puffs. At four o'clock in the afternoon.

Bunnymen associate, helper, stooge and on-stage keyboard player Jake ushers me in to wait in the office. Like you do, I take the time to look at the numerous Polaroid freeze-frames on the walls. They're cute or comic, or knowing cheeks-sucked-in rockist poses — the usual self-mockery to be found in any band's personal collection, the official Rock-Group photo session in which 95 per cent of the time the band's brains as well as their overcoats have been pickled in aspic.

Later, Mac gets off the blower as Les, Will and Pete come in. First task — to sign a Bunnymen album sleeve. It looks like the new album (hills, trees, a bird's eye view of earth, etc, etc.) The album's called Arrogance. Typically bloody brilliant, cocky album title, I think to myself. Good title, I tell them.

"Nah, it's a bootleg actually," Mac grins.

Later still, the Bunnymen eagerly hand over copies of their own fanzine, Freakbeat. Among cooking recipes, drawings of rock types, discographies of The Byrds and a helpful list of Bunnymen bootlegs, are more of these offhand snaps, none of which appear to be shot in floodlit forests, on deserted beaches, by Icelandic glaciers or navigating through a luminescent underground cavern.

The new album is called The Game. The cover was shot on a hill near Kirkby, but only so that photographer Anton Corbijn could stand above or below the group.

"It's just our heads, basically," Mac confesses. "Yeah, it's a new beginning. We've done with that series of scenes."

"Now that we're fat and ugly," adds Les.

So no poses, no frills or excess luggage? Just the Bunnymeat then? So, something's changed?

The post fab four tell Martin Aston how to soak a rusk, they remember their roots. Will the real bouncing babies now stand up . . . and will we all live happily ever after?

Arrogance, conceit, bloody-minded, bloody brilliant... If the rock bible was ever written, you get the feeling that the Bunnymen would want to be written in as God's chosen people, or so you might have thought reading Mac's mouthy, Scouse-sharp interviews of the past. They'd be the first to admit their stubbornness and brazen confidence, but here they all are, admitting they've made a "mistake".

Simply, they let Echo And The Bunnymen disappear.

Mac: "I think we thought at the time it would be really hip to take the year off, and that people would think, 'wow, no other group would do that'... but in the end, we shouldn't have."

Les: "A year off just seemed so monumental. It was our manager, Bill Drummond's suggestion anyway. He'd grown up with us, and he said we'd departed so much from our original personalities, because cause of the drum machine. It was really minimal, no big power chords or anything."

Mac "That's the thing about us — two days into the group and we'd done the second rehearsal, and we'd all be going down the street, going, 'we're in a group!' . . . all the things The Rolling Stones must have felt! It's a continuation of that feeling."

the Bunnymen are back at the time, the good thing about us was that we all came from different backgrounds, and I think he wanted us to develop it more, or establish more of an independence, just to make us see things different. I don't think it helped."

Mac: "I remember him saying 'I think you should all buy movie cameras and make films in your year off', all these stupid ideas. You're in a band to write songs and to play them."

What did you all do then?

"Uhh, I had a baby, and so did Les."

Les: "We were very domestic . . . I watched a lot of videos actually."

Mac: "I did nothing at home. If it wasn't for the group, I don't know what I'd do. I'd just want to get playing. But now we've got more to prove because of the time we've stopped touring."

What must you prove?

"That we're still the best group. I'm not just after proof that I can enjoy it again."

Maybe that's why the album is called The Game. But who's been winning in your absence?

"It sounds like a competition, but, well, The Smiths have not so much taken over as much as gone on from where we left off. It's good because it'll be harder for us now which is what we thrive on rather than when everyone loved us. Now people will be wondering what's happened to them."

At least during the "disappearance", the Bunnymen became the traditional Bunnymen again after drummer Pete left, in a spell of disillusionment ("it almost felt like the end, having the Greatest Hits album released and no new material") to join The Sex Gods, before realising he had lost that lucrative bonding a group like the Bunnymen nurtured. So he rejoined, and the "chemistry" as Mac puts it, was back. You can tell from The Game.

But the management are acting all protective, so I only get to hear three songs, and only after I've met the group. You'll have heard the title track by now, and probably Lips as well if you saw The Bunnymen live in '85. Both sound like excellent consolidations, rather than new beginnings but it's New Direction that really lives up to its title. It'll surely become the new live Do It Clean — a gallop of a song with a kick-start chorus. If anyone thought Ocean Rain was self-indulgent, then this will strike you as a return to Bunnymen basics, with a renewed pop consciousness.

Mac: "I think the new songs are a different angle on what we've done in the past. It's like, in a way, our Crocodiles with a different sound in that that album had a lot of different styles of songs on it, like Stars Are Stars is different to Crocodiles itself, which is different to Pictures On My Wall. The new album is brilliant."

At least it is now, but it wasn't a natural step, there were big problems. Rehearsals with Echo, the original drum machine had followed the departure of drummer Blair Cunningham (to the Pretenders), after an American tour where Les confesses "it felt like you'd joined another band and you were playing the same songs". Stagnation set in, which didn't shift even when ex-ABC drummer David Palmer sat in. Everybody, even their publicist Chrissakes, didn't like the album. The Bunnymen didn't disagree (a first). They scrapped it. They heard Pete might be willing to rejoin. They took him back and completely re-recorded the album.

"I like to believe that you go through a collapse before something great happens," Pete says.

The year off has given the Bunnymen some much-needed objectivity, and some humility to go with it. Even Morrissey's taken over as Bigmouth, bigmouth.

"I'm glad somebody else is doing that 'cos I hated all that. Looking back on it," Mac sighs, "I think Morrissey's probably said all those things because he doesn't feel that secure. I'm sure people used to say that about me. At the time, I thought it was funny that I'd say the first things that came into my head, but at the end of the day, it's in print, and I wish I hadn't."

"I only did it to make people laugh, but I said horrible things that people didn't deserve. Y'know, when The Beatles were writing things early on, like Help!, people used to ask them what they had for breakfast."

Yes, I saw the Sugar Puffs.

Mac: "Nah, that's Jake, but we like them as well. I like Farley's Rusks. Dead mushy in milk."

Will (filling glasses): "Pour boiling water — first one, then put the milk on after."

Mac: "Good thing, 'cos it's what we prefer to talk about. Er, Puffa Puffa Puffa. It's good. And Sugar Stars."

Will: "My favourite cereal is The Arches."

Mac: "What about Les Enters?"

Will: "There's no sodden beauty in that programme. You couldn't give a crap if they lived or died. At least in Corrie."

Ah! Corrie, very rootsy. Er, so what do you think of Copey's relevant revival during your sabbatical? He's been elevated to pop star icon status. . .

"Yeah, but who's he trying to kid with that elevated mike stand? He likes to think he takes embarrassment into an art form, but it's just the worst acting you've ever seen, like Bowie playing a schoolboy in Merry Christmas Mr Lawrence."

Will: "I think Cope looks like Russ Abbot when he wore that flying jacket."

Nothing ever really changes, does it? So, what about pop, Mac?

"I heard Primal Scream and I thought they'd be really good. I saw the Mary Chain live and it was just like punk. What's wrong now is that all the pop is crap. Madonna and all that . . . there's no Mamas And Papas or Ronettes. People can get away with anything. I think Simple Minds have got a lot to answer for. . ."

Who calls The Shamen?

So who are The Shamen? Who are these mysterious men with their fine collection of skinhead haircuts and pointy boots? They are none other than Colin Angus (bass guitar/vocals), Derek McKenzie (guitar/vocals), Keith McKenzie (drums) and Peter Stephenson keyboards) and it is to them that we look (today) for the meaning of life.

So what's with the name?

"Well, the shaman was a kind of spiritual witchdoctor for cultures in places like South America, who communicated with the spirits on behalf of the community and so he was looked up to and revered by that community. There is a certain parallel there with modern pop culture, don't you think? Especially as, of course, some were frauds, some were complete madmen, while some were genuine mystic visionaries."

This they say with wee Scottish tongue placed firmly in wee Scottish cheek, just to leave you in no doubt as to where they lie!—The Shamen obviously have a foot firmly planted in the 13th Floor Elevators' door to psychedelia of the '60s. In fact, "psychedelic" seems to be the first word that springs to everyone's minds when mentioning The Shamen, so, is this a bit restricting?

"Well it certainly doesn't bother us to be called psychedelic, although it's picked up many wrong connotations due to misuse."

"We certainly aren't '60s revivalists, like some we could mention, because there's no point in that. Bands from that period are not so much influences as inspiration."

In fact, ask The Shamen about bands that inspire them particularly and they choose thoroughly modern and eminantly respectable bands like Wire and Matt Johnson, with honourable mentions for hip-hop and that "spectacularly good" bunch of anarchists, D&V.

Don't get the idea that The Shamen are a bunch of dippy hippies, swathed in patchouli, love beads and a naive view of the world. See them live and you will notice that their thrilling, kaleidoscopic pop show is lit solely by the flickering of their hard hitting slide show and the old, ubiquitous oil wheel. All of which reinforces the bleak edge that exists in their lyrics — beneath the glorious, cavernous sound of their technicolour dream, '80s style.

"The visuals at our shows have got harder and now we've got a wee bit more money than when we first started we've added films and animated optimistic moments, but we can be moaning bastards at times. It's nice to have a wee moan every now and again, isn't it?"

Back to the matter in hand and the fact that The Shamen have recently released their wonderful and thoroughly fab 'n' groovy debut LP, entitled surrealistically Drop.

Why Drop?
"Well it ties in with all sorts of things from the obvious, like, drop the bomb, and, drop acid to, drop your inhibitions. People can be irritatingly staid these days and lacking in any sense of abandon."

Drop is chock full of exquisite numbers, admirably encapsulating their unique brand of exotic mysticism in its brittle grooves and it includes most of their first three singles to date for any new devotees. Thrill to the mighty Something About You, wonder at the power of World Theatre, ponder thoughtfully over Happy Days and then marvel at the exotic Eastern groove of I Don't Like The Way The World Is Turning.

Having originally started as Alone Again Or, and having been handled "disastrously" by Polydor it's easy to see why they have formed their own label, curiously entitled Moksha.

"Yes, we were certainly put off the music business by that, but having been in the indie camp for some time you can see that there are areas of it that are just as bad and equally hype-orientated. So things are not so wonderful in indie land, but then we are a very different band now."

And the label monicker? Another strange story . . . Apparently Moksha means 'liberation from Maya' with Maya being the bullshit of life that stops you getting down to the real business. Well, not surprisingly, this comes from a book by Aldous Huxley called Maya.

"He ws a really together guy, you know? Very responsible in the way he used drugs. He even dropped LSD on his deathbed and by all accounts went out quietly."

Well, what a way to go — eh!? — "But don't get us wrong, that hippy pie-in-the-sky thing is so irritating. Before it was a different era and all quite excusable then, but nowadays people are so poor and drugs have to be taken seriously. You can't go off and drop acid, just like that."

The only thing that remains now, is to prescribe regular doses of The Shamen's very fine LP, and maybe, just maybe, this small technicolour ray of light will brighten up the wilderness.

it's been kinda tough but I guess you gotta right to know. Your ol' mate Leonid done done it. Yep, he done got hisself wed and unashamedly uses this space to greet his wife Lisa. No excuses offered other than it won't happen again. Anyhow enough of that romantic stuff and on with the show . . . This month's Reader Of The Month award goes to James Blonde of Mexborough, South Yorkshire for some interesting info, and highly original underlining. Big Jim, you see, runs his own fanzine Generation X and his own label U.N.C.L.E., which specialises in releasing obscure but essential U.S. beat/surf combos. He's just released his first volume, Neighbourhood Watch, containing 18 tracks of mod, psych, ska, beat-pop. It all seems like good stuff, so write to him at 117, Adwick Rd, Mexborough, South Yorkshire, S64 0BG. Anyone else with info on their labels, bands etc write to me c/o The Underground and I'll try and include it. Another release to look out for is a cassette only LP by Doc And The Pods called Join The Mind Scouts Of America. It seems that these boys are noted for their "beaty r 'n' r surf" and come from Ohio. You'll find it via Big Jim at the above address . . . More U.S. news, surf mindbenders The Happy Gauls should soon be releasing a single with the song title of the month, Where Are Basil Henriques And The Waikiki Islanders? . . . Enterprising enthusiasts should contact Unlimited Productions (P.O. Box 715, Council Bluffs, Iowa 51501, USA) who are a goldmine for surf records. Special attention should be paid to a compilation of 16 US surf bands called, imaginatively, Surfin' In The Midwest; also there's a five track EP by The Royal Flairs . . . Psych giants Plasticland have a new album

The Brothers are on a mission from . . . Hank? Hoxton Leonid lets Mr and Mrs Panic's boys explain that there's more to them than a few laffs and cardboard boxes

- The Panic Brothers. Name mean much to you? What images does it conjure up? What do you think they sound like? Well, here's a few first impressions: two young men who could well be brothers (they aren't), two voices whose harmonies could charm birds from the trees, two acoustic guitars of awesome resonance, the sharpest song structures and lyrics since John Cooper-Clarke joined up with Hank Williams. Hank Williams? How did he get in here . . .
- Richard and Reg are The Panic Brothers, and very relieved they are too. After a few years of attempting Straight Pop Careers, involving publishing deals, management deals and even electronic instruments, He struck. Richard heard the lonesome, bone-chilling moan of Hank and saw the light. Reg, miraculously sharing the same management, heard it too. They joined forces, ceremonially burnt their contracts and synths and became The Panic Brothers.
- All this was about 18 months ago. Since then they've got (at least) a 40-minute set of original material, toured the country with Lenny Henry and Hank Wangford, played over three hundred gigs in pubs, colleges, theatres and universities and made an album, In The Red (Special Delivery). I asked Reg and Richard how it had turned out.
- "We're very proud of it. I suppose everyone says that but it's true."
- Live, it's just the two of you but on the record you've got almost a full band on some tracks. Why?
- "We wanted to go beyond what we do on stage. It's still very acoustic-based, and we've added some pedal-steel, bass, cardboard box . . ."
- Cardboard box!?
- "Oh yes, it sounds great. We use it as a bass-drum."
- Some of the songs are quite humorous but do I detect a more serious side as well?
- "Actually I think nearly all the songs are serious really. We use humour as a way of getting the message across. Take a song like Bivouac, it's got some dead funny lines in it but I've lived in tiny one room bedsits. Or In Debt, it's got a really catchy chorus and harmonies but the subject matter isn't funny. There have never been more people in debt, it's a huge and literally deadly serious issue. I think it's got to be told but you can be totally serious and po-faced or you can look at it our way."

Strum along a panic . . .

● I agree with them. At their gigs it's almost as much fun to watch the crowd. Songs like No News: about "snivelling pop stars" who spend their time "lying in the gutter press" and then complaining about their treatment. The audience laughs, then realise its not really funny and then laugh again as they realise that's the point.

● Paul Weller once said that if music really could change peoples views it would have been banned long ago. I think he's right, the revolution won't be started by a record but The Panic Brothers do make you think. They also entertain vastly, damn near perfectly actually.

→ out on Enigma entitled Salon, which features such wig-lifting titles as A Quick Commentary On Wax Museums and a wimp/psych/punk classic Don't Antagonise Me. That's mighty angry stuff indeed! The Beat Poets, still my favourite UK surf/psych band, finally get their EP out on 53rd and 3rd. It's called Glasgow, Howard, Missouri and everyone is urged to buy two copies . . . Wildest, and indeed longest LP title of the month, is from those merry Bam Caruso boys. Meanwhile Back At The Ranch Big Dan Was Fighting For His Life is a compilation of new Bam bands, like Palace Of Light and the extraordinary Nick Haeffner. Also soon to emerge from BC is The Walker Brothers' Live In Japan, a double album of class beyond mere words . . . Nice to see that the ever more evil Anagram label is issuing a very fine rockabilly/surf compilation, For A Few Pussies More, which is volume three of the Blood On The Cats series. Watch out for a great version of Surf City by The Meteors and Boneshaker Baby by Alien Sex Fiend. Makes a nice change from their usual loony out-pourings . . . This month's Robyn Hitchcock item centres on whether he'll change his band's name after the departure of Andy Metcalf. Current odds are The Sensational Robyn Hitchcock Band 100/1, The Psychedelic Jews 200/1, The Psychedelic Jooves 10/1 . . .

The prolific dominance of producer Prince Jammy in present day dance hall runnings continues apace with a batch of new releases this month through UK distribution company World Enterprise. Following earlier efforts from Little Twitch and John Clarke on the recently launched Super Power imprint exclusive to Jammys, a further sextet of styles are issued: the falsetto intonation of Michael Prophet declaiming No Run Left You Man c/w the more folksy Mouth A Mazy Liza (SPD3); King's reworking Will You Still Love Me Tomorrow for Tonight You're Mine c/w a detailed skirmish relative to the oft repeated phrase "if you want good your nose have fe run" on If You Want Good (SPD4); a relatively low-key toast duo Tippa Lee & Rappa Robert with Post Man At Your Gate c/w Star Appeal (SPD5); rising star Admiral Bailey hilariously extolling the virtues of the Big Belly Man and Horse Stepmach (SPD6) on respective sides; Youthman Promotion acolyte Chris Wayne riding the horse or obverse of the dancing floor (SPD7); and Pad Anthony coupling Moving Forward and Cooler Rinnings (SPD8). Also on the label is a various artists LP, Double Twin Spin Vol 1 (SPLP1), with contributions from Don Angelo, Pinchers, Risto Benjo, Collie Rozen and others, as well as the follow up Come Again (SPLP2) set from Coco Tea containing the title track hit. Other new Jammys products include Super Black, You Who Can Make The Game Ram c/w Give Me Love (Jammys AM08); Shaka-Demus, Two Foot Walk (Jammys PJADIS004); Horace And Must Have To Get It c/w Girl Of My Dream (Live & Love LLD38). While none may be quite as obsessively productive as Jammys, nevertheless others have also been busy. Germain music makes greater compromise and wears a more finished veneer as exemplified on the latest Freddie McGregor interpretation of Ronnie Dyson's Just Don't Wanna Be Lonely (DGT24), while his own hitmaking protégé Audrey Hall looks to improve her chart status with the pert Head Thick Skull Numb c/w Misery (DGT23), while in more roots vein from the same stable the aforementioned Admiral Bailey sings No Hypocrite c/w Chaka-Demus, Holy Book (Revolutionary Sounds RS008). Talk of Audrey leads naturally to sister Pam Hall whose latest album is Perfidia (World Enterprise WENLP3032) and now comes out with a plangent reading of Nancy Wilson's How Glad I Am (Blue Tracks BTR10) on disco. EVELYN COURT

FULLTIME LOWDOWN

Pake, Ha! is Trevor → Nearly and so recording of their debut
 Scottish mini-album, Rain, Craig are finding themselves defined in terms of what they do now, rather than in terms of what bands they used to be in.
 → Will: "I don't mind people mentioning the Cocteau Twins, it only pisses me off when people say we sound like them. I don't see that at all. Apart from the bass playing, but that's pretty obvious."
 → But, in a lot of ways, the clutching at easy labels wasn't always entirely the fault of the critics. Rain sounded pretty much like what it was; an early striving after a coherent sound which never quite materialised. And while the parts never really came together it was easy to scratch at obvious surface comparisons.

 → But, as Low Life's music has progressed and matured through the album Permanent Sleep and the 12 inch EP Vain Delights, such comparisons have lost validity. Now, with their talents displayed in one rounded, magnificent whole, on their latest album Diminuendo, the ghosts of the past have been finally laid to rest as Low Life have surpassed the musical achievements of their previous bands in almost every way.
 → Their powerful sound, with its sweeping bass lines, deep, resonant vocals and meandering guitars has always managed to create an intense atmosphere, but now there is a better balance between light and shade and a clearer definition to their moods.
 → Craig: "I enjoy my lyrics better now. Before it was always, 'Quick, we've got a song, rush away and write a set of lyrics'. Now I'm actually enjoying writing, actualising sitting down and thinking about them... but not, 'I'm not going to say this song's about this or this song's about that'. I let people figure that out for themselves."

→ But their achievements so far, despite the massive critical acclaim already heaped on Diminuendo, are still only a beginning. Having only ever played a couple of live dates (in Edinburgh and Glasgow) prior to supporting the Go-Betweens in May, they see their next step as capturing something of their newly discovered live sound on record.
 → Will: "We've learnt a lot more about our limits and capabilities from playing that tour. I think we probably sound more like we really want to live than on record, because we tend to compromise a bit too much in the studio. We're guilty of using too many effects just because they're there. We used to just throw chords together, and whatever sounded best we kept. We know each other much better now as a band, and we're thinking more, deciding what will sound best on what song."
 → When I talked to the band in Grangemouth, or oil-city as Will calls it, they were concentrating on preparations for their show-case gig at the ICA towards the end of June, and a Janice Long session around the same time, with plans for the less-immediate future centering around writing more material for future live shows.
 → As for any future recording work, Will?
 → "I think we'd spend more time on writing and rehearsal now, rather than a lot of time farting around in the studio."
 → And if that means further improvements on the already excellent sound of Diminuendo, then they really can't go wrong.

STICK THIS!

Alex Kadis checks Camden's Heads On Sticks

"One of the qualifications for being in this band is baldness!" jokes Tom, but then, Heads On Sticks is all a matter of perspective! ▼ Branded as jazz-punk-industrialism and Bauhaus spawn, just two from a whole host of comparisons, their music is a stark series of sound sculptures. Sometimes built in columns and sometimes adopting a horizontal stance it's a sound much bigger than our Camden bedsit rendezvous where Tom and Paul, co-stickheads/baldheads, paint the picture. ▼ What is important with HOS music is not what you hear but how you listen to it. Use your lateral eye and employ your feeling senses and the band's newest tape, The Eyes Of The Company, suggests no real comparisons at all.

Paul explains: "When we did the tape and listened back to it we tried to see if it had the right sort of feel to it — the right frequency: ▼ "We think in images about our songs. Like, I'll think a song's too fat or too thin, or it could be a long thing with bits on it. I think of songs visually." ▼ Tom: "I'd love us to do a movie soundtrack, or to hire out an art gallery and have our music playing while you're looking at the paintings, or even moving sculpture with a soundtrack, there's so many possibilities." ▼ Surprisingly, the outcome is not one of contrivance. The Eyes Of The Company creates a simple but ultimately powerful effect. The key is a combination of spontaneity and experimentation as Paul points out: "I don't like playing chords. I like harmonics and odd little noises. I build things out of sounds that I find by accident. We don't deliberately write anything — it just develops." Tom takes over! ▼ Tom: "Sometimes songs just get a mind of their own and we think," Oh well, let them do that then." ▼ With two Peel sessions under their belt, a European deal and a tour this June they've pretty much reconciled those opposing forces for themselves. Tom is resigned but determined: "Most people seem to like what we do — whatever it is!"

WALKMAN WONDER: Sampled selection by Son Of Sam

The Passmores get lyrical about life and cardigans

Why is it that whenever I hear the term "Indie", my mind's eye reaches into its reference library and presents me with a picture of THE UNWAGED. Not Thatcher's millions, but those people in second generation Marks And Spencer cardigans who, week after week armed only with a UB40 and a stoic taste in music, dutifully tune out for the less popular gigs in town. Considering that the independent music scene in Britain is a direct descendant from punk (remember punk?) it's difficult to spot the family resemblance. Today's Indie rockers, sorry, popsters, are all so bloody cautious!

- The Passmore Sisters, armed with their not inconsiderable collection of pop classics, carry more than enough weight to bash their way out of the ghetto and onto the car stereo of many an XR3i. In short, they are a pop group of immense accessibility. So why are they still in the ghetto and why have they not yet attempted to form an escape committee?
- So, have you got a plan?
- "I think we're the best independent band going at the moment," is the cautious retort.
- Yes, but you must have ambition, even dreams!
- "Most bands aspire towards a major record company and then they fall apart, like The Shop Assistants. We'd like to make a living out of what we do. The management consists of a couple of our friends, the artwork is done by a school friend and we trust them. It's that level of independence we're not prepared to let go of. That's all we know and it's all we want."

- But how long can you survive on those principles?
- "If the new single bombs, which it won't, then that'll be the end because our distributors will probably pull out."
- So, just what is wrong with major record companies, and all that goes with that way of working?
- "I don't know, we're wary of them all. We're sick to death of seeing bands we've never heard of getting full page spreads in the music press. It's The Roaring Boys syndrome. Our managers were told by the majors that they're keeping an eye on us, which is so patronising! They have this idea that they'll watch you for a while and if no-one else jumps in they're not gonna jump in either. If that's how A&R men work then they must be the thickest people in the world."
- But if the Passmores are so anti-major how do they see, with hindsight, the Pistols/EMI hook-up some ten years back?
- "It wouldn't happen now. It's more puritanical now. In the days of punk the majors were scared of what was happening, they had these dodgy old acts who they had hung up in the closet until it was all over. Now they've got Rod Stewart and Elton John out again, dusted them down and re-issued them. We're right back where we were before... it's like punk never happened!"

Ian Dickson waves an EMI contract

RESSURECTED BY ELECTRICITY

Since those heady days, The Go-Betweens have had their ups and downs with the press, signed to Beggars Banquet, most recently they have released their fourth LP, Tallulah.

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

Lindy Morrison from the Go-Betweens looks back to Brisbane.

Lindy Morrison took up drumming back in the mid-'70s when women drummers were as rare as hen's teeth and when, by her own admission, she only got gigs "cos punk happened and it was groovy to have girl drummers". She'd tried social work, she'd dabbled in theatre and then one day she moved into a house which boasted a resident set of skins. (drum skins, that is).

Playing with Brisbane feminist band, Zero (1978-79)

"No one would give us a gig, because we were an aggressive, all-girl band. We were just too crazy. At that time, bands like The Apartments and the Go-Betweens were getting gigs all the time!

"I was constantly in trouble for attending right-to-abortion rallies and demonstrations. I even had my drums confiscated by the police for several months for playing in the street with Zero."

Meeting Robert Forster, joining the Go-Betweens and escaping Brisbane (1979-80)

"At the time we had a rehearsal room where you could play whenever you wanted — it was in an old printing building — and Robert didn't have a rehearsal room so he just started coming down and playing with me. It didn't take long to fall in love. There was never any decision about whether or not I'd join the band, I joined because we became lovers and because they needed a drummer. They always wanted a girl drummer, so it wasn't a major decision at all.

"Another factor in my joining was that I desperately wanted to get out of Brisbane, and they were planning to move, and they gave me a gateway out of that hell. It was such a small town for me, and I was so unpopular because I was too aggressive and forthright and saw it exactly for what it was."

Meeting and touring with The Birthday Party (1980-81)

"Living in Melbourne at that time was particularly exciting because of The Birthday Party. We started hanging around with them and boy, did the show us things. I had a fast introduction to the rock 'n' roll life which included everything. I couldn't believe how many drugs were going down or the incredibly loose lifestyles that people held."

They don't exactly make you feel welcome but... meet The Cookie Crew — self proclaimed Queens of the rapping scene. Demon dames who rok it the best. Cookie spout slogans like "Cookie is Cool", "Cookie is Def". They spew forth streams of supremely clever words as they run rhymes off the top of their heads. There is confidence in abundance, yet at 18 the girls seem almost world weary. Their few good words are reserved for themselves, their beloved rap, and their record company, Rhythm King.

"When we talk hip-hop, they talk hip-hop. They know where we are coming from."

Scorn is poured on Def Jam and The Beastie Boys.

"They just rap about being rich, it's just a laugh to them. We like to stay close to the street, where we're from." The street in question contains their South London des-res, next to Clapham Common. Cookie conversation brims with nostalgia for the heyday of the London rap scene circa '83. The best years of their lives — school-days, Malcolm McLaren, Buffalo Gals . . .

"The rappers then had attitude and lifestyle, but this new generation on the scene don't understand hip-hop, they've assimilated it too fast. All they know and want is the commercial exploitation side. We've got history, we know what we're talking about and for this we demand respect." Respect is a term constantly uttered by the girls. Susie Q and Cookie you see were probably the first British female rappers to gain attention. Four years on and nearly grown up they still dominate their field. A field full of back-biting gurlies jealous of the Cookie success. Peggy Lee, the latest utility in the Cookie kitchen, a spluttering, spitting, tooth-decayed, mouthful of ulcer type human beatbox with a Dutch lilt has been added. Cookie picked her up in Amsterdam. The good ol' days of Granddaddy Flash, social concerns and geographical insight seem to have taken a back set in new rap circles. The rap scene has an incestuous sound and look. Heavy Metal riffs aside, most raps concern themselves with the world of rap. The girls are no exception, though the difference is they do it with vicious insult and arrogant insight, striking a blow at crass rip offs and bandwagon jumping. But these Cookies tough, and that counts.

don't fit black people. After my suits I like sweat suits of which I prefer Fila an' after that I like jeans that I don't have to wear a belt with you know a lot of jeans don't fit me 'cos of my thighs an' so they try an' make me buy the ones that's big in the waist but I don't like that. I like jeans 'cos you can throw your shit on an' don't have to iron them or nothin'. I don't like to wear my sweat suits on stage they're too hard to clean, my sweats cost between three, three hundred an' fifty dollars a piece so I don't bother."

Yeah?

"I started out wearing suits an' shit on stage but it was screwing my clothes up. I used to go out on stage in my suit, my shoes, my fur coat I got a full length fur coat . . . gun an' shit; but that shit that they put on the stage, you know the wax, make you slide right off of that mother and into the audience, an' with the gun my pants used to get all fed up. An' you know with my dress pants right they don't hold the gun too well, say with something like a .32 calibre which I prefer it's a little bit heavy, but for effectiveness it's my favourite.

"Code prefers a 9mm but I don't mess around with that automatic weapon shit. They jam on you an' all that kind of shit — you pull your shit out an' 'Oh, shit' they jam on you an' the dude been done bust you. Ahh motherf! You f with those automatics an' I'll shoot yo' ass. Anyhow with the gun it be like slippin' down an' shit so I stopped wearin' it plus you get all hot an' sweaty an' you can't really get into it. Then I tried sweat suits but like I say they was too hard to clean so I switched to jeans 'cos all you gotta do is throw them into the wash an' hang 'em out to dry. But I always wear my Gucci, an' lookin' at it, it's time I was gone."

Cookie clix by Ronnie R

Here kitty, kitty, here . . . come to mama!

Sonic Youth get pulled through a cupboard backwards, Myrna Mynkoff gets a little confused, flexes her guitar arm and purrs . . . Sisters, doncha jes' love 'em? And, hey what's it all about?

The new Sonic Youth LP could have been called Kitty Magik! Wow! Sonic Lifers were invited to send in photos of their own dear pussos but that was just to distract us from the true meaning of the word kitty. Stay tuned for this one . . .

"New York City is forever kitty" (Cotton Crown)

When intuition fails, one always looks to punctuation for enlightenment but even that can't help us here. The mystery sickens. Conspiracy freaks will understand why much theory has been woven around these Sonic New York delinquents. It's an attempt to smother the true spirit of Sonycke Sorcery. To hell with the meaning of art. We crave the meaning of kitty. Hey, Thurston . . . ?

"Whoooooaaa. Heyyyyye! . . . (pause). Mate?!"

The meaning of kitty?

"Hey, like, where can I get one of those Schoolly D four shirts?"

Lee?

"Hey, Thurston, where d'ya get those Wire LP's?"

The meaning of . . . ?

Silence. Down the hall from Blast First Records is a cupboard full of Mute Records — and Sonic Youth. It's what they're over here for. Heavy blag action (a technical upper echelon record biz tactic). The Sonic's Ciccone Youth mantle and Into The Groovey was a typographical error, it should have read into The Souvie. "Souvie" is Sonicspeak for 'memento'. The Blagbag is filling up. Led Zepplin, Black Sabbath, Grateful Dead, a Slayer pendant. On their last US tour they were listening to Jethro Tull. These Sonics have wide taste(?). Seems like we're getting closer to the meaning of kitty. It's a way of life. But is it art?

Kitty screws you up (grafitti in Blast First toilets)

The scene: a rehearsal studio in West London. Triceps Goddess, Kim Gordon has left the Sonic rehearsal studio and is crouched by another studio door.

"Hey," comes a warning voice, "Iggy doesn't like to be disturbed when he's rehearsing."

"I was just listening for the chord change. We do a version of I Wanna Be Your Dog."

She didn't mention she was fixing Iggy Pop with a kitty hex. The next night at the Town And Country Club the normally volatile Pop had been tamed and was waiting in the wings — not just to show them the chord change, but to sing the song for them.

The power of Kitty.

More than words can say.

Thurston is standing beside a pool of his own finger blood. An industrial accident. The blood has shorted the guitar circuit. Don't mess with kitty. Two nights later he falls asleep on stage, but his bandaged fingers still move. Kitty looks after its own.

Confused? You would be if you talked to them. Lee and Kim and Steve can pretend to have a normal conversation, jiving back with whatever ammunition you care to name. But mention kitty and they shout you off.

"Whooo. Hooeee. Heyyyyyyyyye!"

Every society has its shaman and Thurston is the Sonic Shaman. He is caught in physical thrall to some unseen vision that causes him to salute the horizon like an ecstatic triffid. He does it everywhere, more and more. In photo sessions, in the street, in Indian restaurants.

...And he shall have the word 'kitty' writ large across his brow (Erasmus. His last words)

The new Sonic Youth LP is called Sister. But it's probably already too late . . .

Big bang and smoke rings!

Living in Texas, yellow roses, John Lennon and Alex Karls

The Sting-rays played their last show at the beginning of June. Luckily a mobile was on hand to record the event and it will appear on LP on Media Burn in September. Reason for the split? That old chestnut 'musical differences'. While on the subject of Media Burn, there's a 12 inch King Snake by The Purple Things due, which precedes the release of their first full album. In addition, label boss Stan Brennan has done a swap licence deal with California's Bomp Records, look out for a soon come compilation — more on that next month.

Big Beat celebrate, if that's the word, the demise of The Sting-rays by releasing The Essential Sting-rays LP. It's a best of with additional unreleased tracks. On the Off Beat label there's the second album from Jet Harris fans The Rapiers, and it's affectionately titled 1961, a year when your humble scribe was still in nappies and had not yet heard of Bobby Angelo & The Tuxedos. I couldn't get in touch with Roy Williams to find out what was going on at Nervous, but I did receive a copy of the Skitzo album Skitzo Mania from him. If you're reading this Roy, I love the colour effect your photographer choppy got on the front cover — very 50s chic.

There's a new label just about to be launched by Mighty Caesar, Wild Billy Childish. He's calling it Hangman Records after Hangman Books, the company that publishes his books of poetry. The aim of the label, to quote Billy, is "to release obscure recordings which no one will like". The first three planned releases are The Milkshakes' Revenge (The Long Lost Ninth Album), I've Got Everything (indeed, a Billy Childish solo LP and Madway Powerhouse, a compilation featuring unreleased cuts by The Milkshakes, The Prisoners, The Dalmonas and The Daggermen. These, when they see the light of day, will be distributed by Revolver. Meanwhile, Billy's latest book Companions In A Death Boat is just out with accompanying drawings by Milkshake, Mick Hampshire. For more info write to Hangman Books, 2 May Rd, Rochester, Kent ME1 2HY.

The Five Young Cannibals (formally the Cannibals), who're still going through legal actions with The Fine Young Cannibals for halting their name, have another LP released in July. It's self-titled and is a limited edition hotpotch of new, old and re-recordings.

Essex based Rockstar Records has put out the debut album from The King Beats, titled simply The King Beats. I've not been sent a copy yet, but judging by the cover versions I present I would assume it's your straight rockabilly. As is a charming little EP by The Go Katz on Loughborough label Raucous.

The rockin' group Flying Saucers, who've been around for over ten years now, have a new EP and a video out. The disc is Got That Magic and the vid features old favourites like Keep On Comin and Texas Calls You Home. The EP is £2.25 and the vid is £15 (both inc. p&p) from Jack Geach, 25 Station Rd, Harrow, Middx HA1 2UA.

"Here's the greatest story ever told 'bout how man sold his soul for a pot of gold." (Civilised Soul) Stephan James is outrageously prepossessing. He prefers his coffee strong, his music rockin', his walls white and his conversation intense. Mediocrity is not a word which features in his vocabulary. It's a meeting of extremes and, needless to say, his personal politics are just that. Dreamt of, devised and fronted by this compulsive talker, Living In Texas have just released Cowboy Dream, their aptly titled mini-LP on Big Beat.

It casts a cynical eye over the western world while it embraces the real worth left to man. Fluctuating between a violent urgency and the patient understanding of one who needs to be understood, Stephan delivers his lines with a passion and reveals the seedier side of the American Dream.

But, why use the cowboy imagery?

"I'm amazed at the strength of the image. The hero. It took 30 to 40 years of history to form a culture, an ideal which is the very foundation of the greatest power in the world. An ideal based on greed and self preservation.

"But it's a false ideal. You see a cowboy film and he's blazing a trail across a new land in search of new dreams and new hopes but if he'd just stood back and looked he'd have seen the most beautiful race — the Red Indian race — and the most beautiful country and he'd have gone, 'no way!'. The Cowboy Dream is the most disgusting nightmare.

"The strength of the cowboy image is very fascinating because it reveals the 'civilised' side of man's nature. Yet it was a world where they shot and raped and killed without the slightest hesitation because they thought the Indians were savages. They weren't. They were a race far more in love and in tune with nature than we could ever be. They still had their instincts. We've developed our social skills to the point of absurdity in the west and there you have the joke — that's where the civilised world comes into it. The Cowboy Dream was a myth. The west was never won, it was stolen."

The potency of the LP lies in the unavoidable comparisons with contemporary life. Ironically, perhaps, the songs have a distinct western feel to them but there's atmosphere there and they communicate as much by suggestion and instinct as they do through the lyrics — just listen to their own Yellow Rose Of Texas.

"I love it for purely selfish reasons. I could walk along a sunny road singing that. It has something of the crooner, the dreamer, the romantic! It's the romantic in Stephan which implores a restoration of the old values.

"Children, have you nothing? Give me something to set my soul free. Woman take these children, take this heart of mine for eternity." (Julia's Child)

"Julia's Child is about John Lennon. I wrote this on the day he died, my birthday, December 8. I loved him because he brought a European feel to what was basically a western music. But yes, I say look after our children because they're all we have. I know it sounds corny but I'm one of these people who have to say what I feel — and why apologise for the way you feel?" Where does your cover of Iggy Pop's Lust For Life ("it pisses on the original".) come into the scheme?

"Well, we all love Iggy but it fits in because it's SO NEW YORK, BABY! A very cowboyish song to me. I can imagine Iggy doing the v-deo to it as a modern gay cowboy — the sleaze of it all!"

And the ultimate Texan dream? "Everything we say has been said before but to hell, we're gonna say it again. Everything we do has been done before but to hell we're gonna do it again." (Cowboy Dream)

"I know everything I say or do has been said before. I DO want to change the face of music but you have to do it subtly. I do this because I love it. I'm expressing myself, and my joy. I will say I will TRY to do something new. At the moment we haven't been successful but I believe that we leave something of ourselves in our songs that maybe in years to come people will say, 'now, there's an emotion and a character' . . ."

Maybe the west was stolen but Living In Texas aim to win their part of it fairly and squarely.

WHAT'S THAT NOISE?

RE-RELEASE OF THE MONTH: Front 242's back catalogue on CD

TC Wall gets to grips with the BBC Sound Effects series

Sound as a pound cat burglary and general pilfering is running wild in the record biz. From The Beastie Boys to Depeche Mode, Erasure to JAMS, and all points in between, the chant is "Steal, steal, steal, some more..."

But is it legal? And, where does all this stuff come from? And, better still, how can we get in on it? Simple, you don't even need a million quid (but that'd be nice).

First it was just nicking a few riffs (man) — George Harrison, sit down — even The Membranes had a go. More recently there's the Casio SK-1 sampling keyboard — that can record any sound, make into any loop you like, join it up to make things rilly groove, and stuff like that. It's basically the new luddites version of 37 banks of diodes that originally made that infernal "Chaka Khan, Chaka, Chaka, Chaka, Chaka..." drivel, and it's a snip at a hundred notes (for what it can do, that is).

So you've got that, you're bored with nicking Schoolly D, Led Zep and Beethoven, you've not got a yearning for opera a la McLaren, so what is next? Yes, the BBC Records And Tapes Sound Effects series. Just whap a few of their notettes through the old Casio and you're off, tendons being severed and a babbling brook in the background perfectly augment the heavy disco beat stolen from the bonus beat of Davy DMX's One For The Treble, or a backing track lifted from the Streetsounds/Dance Music Break Beats series.

The BBC offered a spokey, who intoned: "It's illegal. But, of course very difficult to trace."

So what's the point of the records if you can't actually use them? What use is the thundering sound of a 5-Ton Austin Diesel Truck? Or an Avro Tutor and DH 60 Moth (from the classic Vanishing Sounds Of Britain platter)?

"Well, er, for home movies."

Great! But there again, they'll never find me out. Ha, ha. I suggest the chugging sound of disco beats thrown against a Purple riff and the distant tones of Sword And Axe Fights from the Combat album. That might make for decent listening. Are you out there Age of Chance?

But be quick... Get your mitts on Essential Sound Effects, a double "best of" which has prime cuts including Garden In Springtime, Jet Airliner Takes Off, Passenger Steam Train Passes, Firework Display and more. Wow! Now That's What We Call Music...

NAME OF THE MONTH: New York Pig Funkers

Johny Joy screeches for floss control (pic Ron 'The' R)

There's been literally tons on the mod scene of late, it's amazing how it seems to blossom with the weather — all these scooters come out of the garage for the summer! suppose... Guernsey's leading stripey shirt merchants, The Risk have been busy recording their follow-up album before frontman Mark LaGallex departs to spend the summer Stateside... London's leading purveyors of modernist music, Unicorn Records, have just opened a retail outlet in Camden Town, give 'em a bell on 01-4855 1698 for a stock list. Meanwhile the label side of Unicorn has also been rather busy with a re-issue of The Times' version of the Bowie classic London Boys, as well as Volume Three of their compilation EP series, (this one featuring City Limits, XL, The Pictures and Manual Scan...) There's a rush in releasing Eurosounds at the moment, as Belgian Mods A Beat Boy bring their debut 45 The Money (ripes) out in the UK on Waterloo (ripes), while Swedish garage mer-leased. Hopefully another Indie smash... Fast Eddie have just headlined a Rhythm And Soul festival in Hamburg. It was the Essex hipsters first public appearance for three years and was recorded for a live album on Geermany's FAB label. Whether or not it will see the light of day on a UK label remains to be seen... The country's longest established mod society, The Phoenix celebrates its fourth anniversary this month with an all day party in London. The society was set up as an 'information bureau' to inform mods in the provinces of gigs, clubs and rallies around the country, and their newsletter (which has a weekly circulation of over 1,000) is steadily increasing circulation. The List is available by sending an SAE to PO BOX 554, London NW8 0JZ. Well worth a look in...

Competition-wise, last month's Jimmy Smith Quiz was won by Tony Shopman from London, Jen Allen from Sussex and Paul Campbell from Hounslow. The answer was the jazz-master Jimmy 'The Cat' Smith last appeared at The Mean Fiddler. Copies of the tres hip Baptist Beat, Blue Note compilation, are on their way...

chants The Creeps have just recorded a follow up single to their hot debut LP, Enjoy, which will be out on Re-Elect next month. Lastly, from Italy, The Underground Arrows release their second single, No Chance To Escape on Unicorn.

The ubiquitous James Taylor has been experimenting with a five piece brass section, a percussionist and a vocalist to take his Quartet up to orchestral proportions. Sounds interesting, but I don't think they'll be able to call themselves the Quartet anymore. "I am happy, I am in love, everything is great, ha! Happiness is a phoney state of mind most of the time. I'm better at projecting my more melancholy moments in song." Johnny Brown, the voice of The Band Of Holy Joy is deflecting the oft made accusation that he must surely be a miserable bastard to write such heartbreak lyrics. He certainly seems to be a cheerful enough fellow.

"It's just nonsense, my songs are never depressing. Some are fatal, others tragic, and there's pathos and sadness for sure, but you can't ignore the humour contained within."

What!? Like Who Snatched The Baby? Or Don't Stick Knives In Babbies Heads? And then there's my favourite line, "You beast, you sow, you bastard cow", from Fishwives. I think they call this kind of humour, er, offbeat. Not that Johnny's taking the piss. These anguished lyrics appear to have been ripped from a quivering spike-pierced heart. The boy's been hurt... but I suspect he might like it that way. Unlike most of us, Johnny crafts the heartache into something beautiful, his pain is born again.

Nosey, gossiping bastards that we are, we'll all want to experience Johnny's suffering on the new Holy Joy album, More Tales From The City. It's a spectacular blending of hi-tack and low life, welded together by a gruff and gritty soul.

"Almost all the songs on the album are about Sue. I love you Sue, you vegan hound. So pure, so beautiful, so precious. I'm a romantic, I fall in love every day, but that one was special and now it's over for good."

Johnny is bruised, but not beaten.

To promote the release the nine piece Band have embarked on a five week tour incorporating Aberdeen and all stops south to Paris. Until now Holy Joy forages have been limited to weekends away from their South London base, a situation caused by the logistics of getting so many members to get time off their day jobs at the same time.

"We've never made a penny from the records, mainly due to the lack of radio exposure. I honestly thought Rosemary Smith would make the top ten. I don't see why not, we play accessible music that should be heard. It's at its best late at night when you get home alone from the pub, feeling vulnerable and melancholy."

Through the media, the Band are generally depicted as uppity but quaint working class folkies. There's an underlying mocking tone beneath the middle class journo attention. 'Pretentious!' they cry.

"That accusation is totally fabricated bollocks," swipes Johnny. "I must be a journalist's nightmare," he grins. "I slur, I talk really fast in a thick Geordie accent, and then I get drunk."

"Once you gain some sort of notoriety everyone and their dog starts calling up for a few pearls of wisdom. The more you go on you realise you're in danger of becoming a transient media commodity. We're creating an art form while all around the stench of hot air rises like a fart. It's a cattle market and we're part of this season's prime stock, so they give us the once over. I suppose the slaughter comes later. You've got to play the game to a certain extent, but sometimes I think 'f it!'"

Perversely, Johnny seems to enjoy it for their madness. It's a 24 hour party and besides, the drawbacks and hardships only lead to more songs. Still, he worries about complacency.

"Holy Joy knew we'd arrived when we played The Player's Theatre late last year. Everyone was howling for us before we'd even begun. There was nothing to prove, we'd won. It was painful, I wondered why I was there and disintegrated into sick hysterical laughter. I felt really false so consequently gave a terrible performance. Success could be a problem if it affects me like that."

Fear not, the boy thrives on a challenge, and as a critically acclaimed act on a tiny indie label (Flim Flam), they've still got lots to prove and mountains to climb. Meanwhile the live performance is ever more accomplished as Johnny relishes his role as crossbreed between ringmaster and bingo caller to the organised chaos around him. Holy Joy, the band, have the look and sound of a circus side show, like Tod Browning's Freaks. They are distinctive and seductive, with a noise all their own, apart perhaps from a few 100 pub cabaret artists and the derivative pastiche of French And Saunders' backing duo.

It's been a year since the salty Big Ship Sails mini-LP and the sound has drifted noticeably from seadog to seaside tradition. Yet the result remains, as always, enveloped in a tear-stained wrapping of mocking nostalgia. I was touched, but they only sniggered.

Bastards, I choked, heartless bastards. Cha! cha! cha!

So far the Fiend Roadshow has "rocked" for four or so years while spewing out a fair torrent of vinyl. Throughout this time the line-up has consisted of Yaxi Highrizer on guitar, the attractive Mrs Fiend on electronics, and Niko Fiend, Nik, on vocal rantings and artwork. This is beyond simple gothism, beyond all those categories. In fact, forget goth, Hawkwind and any puny animals. Bill, his Missus and Yaxi create a 21st Century nightmare of corrupted music.

Fiend for yourself

Dr Why brew dissects the Alien

The latest vinyl outings include the LP, It — lock all your doors, turn off the lights and play it loud — their most subversive sound yet.

And most recently there's been the brand new Impossible Mission 12 inch, a collection of punk, electro, acid-rock, all punctuated with Mission Impossible taped voices. Out now, it's destined to become a club (bed?) hit in all the right places.

You see, Alien Sex Fiend have it sussed. Each release counters the previous one to avoid making it too easy for you or for themselves. Live, the Fiends really steam. Mrs Fiend runs the whole cacophony from her beatbox and sequencers, Yaxi's guitar grinds along, leaving lanky Nik to corrupt the din still further with tales that only his morbid scatological mind can ever hope to make any sense of.

The Fiends have successfully invaded Europe, the USA and even Japan too. And Brazil should be the next to fall. But, what do the foreign audiences make of Nik Fiend hunched up on stage with a full beer glass balanced on his head? Well, they seem to like it. Unlike the general UK opinionated public.

It's in Britain that the Fiends seem misunderstood. Perhaps it's the gothic label that has followed them since their early Batcave days. Perhaps it's that they don't release records that follow the same format.

Either way, it's certain that Alien Sex Fiend are a bunch of genuine mental misfits that have become one of our most innovative independent bands ever.

Audio track video, including four promo and five live tracks, is to be made available from July/August from Jettizoundz, and direct contact with the Aliens can be made through Blue Crumb Truck, 97, Caledonian Road, London N1

Well gang, most exciting news to reach Whiplash towers in a long while is a new Metallica single, presumably a taster for their fourth album. Rumour has it that it will be an EP of covers, and should be out in time for the Kings Of Speeds' Donington appearance.

Agent Steel and Nuclear Assault are in the country engaging in a twin sonic attack, and expect a new album from the latter soon (formed by bassist Dan Lilker who left Anthrax because they were "going soft") on Music For Nations. Also prepare the ear'oles for LP's from Agnostic Front, Crumbsuckers, GBH, Exodus, Onslaught, and the compilation Speed Kills III from the same company. Due too is some new product from The Bomb Party, the original (with The Batfish Boys) dirty biker grunge outfit.

Into The Pandemonium is the title of the new LP from Swiss 'avant-garde death metal' exponents Celtic Frost, and a stranger noise you will not hear . . . Crazyhead's new 45 Baby Turpentine is expected late July/early August, while Motorhead and Megadeth are both working on new albums.

Metalworks is an independent English label specialising in thrash attack bands, and boy do they have some noisy mother-f*ers foaming at the mouth. You could do worse than grab yourself a copy of their compilation European Assault dur very soon. Featuring seven slaving outfits, the cream of the crop nosebleed award is shared by Deathwish, thrash-metallic mayhem, and Virus, 'hardcore skateboard eaters from hell'! Also on tap is tasty filth from Angeldust, Deliverence, Necronomicon, Exumer and Angels Of Malice. Released in a limited run of 5000, European Assault is the finger of red eye before the gallon of loony juice that is the September schedule of releases of albums from the various nutters mentioned.

Well that's it for this month my hairy little darlings, short and sweet I know, but that's always the best way . . . WHIPLASH

There is a little item you require, entitled Preacher Man, one of the finest indie singles these past 12 months; a spookily atmospheric rumbling and slicing sound which fits snugly into Fields Of The Nephilim's post-spaghetti western worldview. And now Dawnrazor, an album like a slow dream, exists to keep it company.

Five scruffy young men, their hats akimbo, slope arms when I interrupt some subterranean rehearsals and, after a brief chat in an appallingly bland room, they warmed up to conversation when I crammed them round a pub table. Vocalist Carl McCoy is sufficiently lively an hour later to try wrestling a plaque from the wall outside. Drummer Nod Wright even chose to reveal just what he can do with a few Scalextric components, given half a chance.

With Pete 'Sodbuster' Yates on guitar, Nod's daft brother Paul (also guitar) and Tony Pettit (bass), these are the Nephilim, a strange name for the modern man.

Anti-Neph criticism in the music papers comes from oafish and divisive comments about Sisters Of Mercy and Mission similarities, providing you compare recordings through a horsehair doormat, half a mile under the sea-bed. The band shrug such things off with ease.

Tony: "We've got more rock than the Sisters, more leaping about. They were quite slow and The Mission are totally different."

Paul: "People are trying to make out we're a new band jumping on some bandwagon. We were there before The Mission. We were even in a band called The Mission!"

And on the image, this end-of-the-trail mess, he is equally swift to ignore trivial pursuits. "Still got the same clothes. They're just older."

With their wild following, a smart young tribe including some in aboriginal make-up and a mysterious man in a turban, the western themes are understandable, and fun, enough.

With the album, a track on the Italian soundtrack of Demons II and some bizarre link-up with that street-show Emmerdale Farm, the lads are in justifiably optimistic mood, although Pete won't reveal just what band he was in before.

"Actually we sent a demo two and a half years ago to Jungle Records, but it doesn't matter, they've just found the Jesus And Mary Chain demo as well."

The EI label's biography on Karl Blake and The Underneath's new album: "We live in times unprecedentedly full of horrible things. Yet we are more reluctant than ever to confront and examine our fear. Among the wretched escapism of the music industry, only Karl Blake has kept awake through the long night, a staunch sentry guard at the gates of our mental waste reprocessing plant. Lunatic Dawn Of The Dismantler is the morning after the night before . . ."

Karl Blake on his biography: "Oh God, who's written that load of old shit? I don't get this. They asked me to do one but I'm sure they'd just throw it away. True, it's pointing in the right direction even if it is flowery old crap . . ."

On EI records: "Mike Alway told me that EI is just an exercise in being totally facile and chocolate-box, complete pop-throwaway stuff, and it's not what I do."

On what Karl Blake does: "I'm just doing what comes naturally, which is seemingly everything which is bloody depressing and nasty and all this stuff. A lot of the songs seem to be about self-hatred . . . the stuff I communicate is bloody horrible although it probably wouldn't come across that way. People think I'm a child murderer and all that . . ."

On the difference between The Underneath and Shock-Headed Peters: "The existence of a record label, pure and simple. Shock-Headed Peters can't get a label but because of EI's peculiarities, I could. EI didn't like the fact that I ceased to become a dictator in The Peters. They said it lost focus. What I ended up with was a load of upstarts. Now the Peters are myself and Katerina. We're the bosses, and the other two in the band are very reasonable. They're not going to give us any trouble."

On Katerina: "She used to be in Rock Goddess and before that, She. When she advertised, she mentioned Hendrix, and I thought, since it was a girl, she would be coming from a different angle, without the usual hype. If it had been a man, the likelihood would be dyed-hair prats walking around in their all-leathers and pointy boots."

On music: "I wanted to create the heaviest thing around. The Peters were using wah-wah pedals in 1983, and then all of a sudden some bastard comes along with a wah-wah. We had the foresight to realise that what's gone before is there, not to be plundered but to be learnt from. People like The Cult are naff gits as far as I'm concerned because they're looking back and saying, 'yeah, we like that lifestyle' . . . I'm anti-cock rock, all that 'BABYBABYBABY' . . . I want to cut out the bullshit."

On The Dismantler: "He's a person who can't say no to a goose but he's got this little black book ticking away in his brain. He's dismantling everything around him — the machinery of his existence, until in the end, everything is devalued, and everything ceases to mean anything . . . yes, he's me, more or less."

On Karl Blake: "I suppose I'm a romantic and an idealist, but I'm not one of these who says, 'let's put armour on', but I can't do it. I think you've got to throw yourself into situations and if you get hurt, so be it."

Here, mate, we were The Mission before The Mission were The Mission!

The Nephilim ask for their old demo tape back from Jungle.

VOLTS ALL THIS THEN

"We've never had any principles from the word go"

Wow! Pop Will Eat Itself are real rebels in search of success. Greaseball rock squeezes a pimple again, Liz Evans gets it in the face, Ronnie Randall steals the pics.

The floor tiles loom large beneath my nose as I struggle feebly to escape the iron grip of a thing with matted greasy hair and a plaster on his nose.

Too late! My upside down position is changed to a sprawl, crushed beneath a giggling, beery mountain of bone and gristle. Hmm . . . This doesn't bode well. I can see chaos looming on the horizon.

The Black Country purveyors of cock-pop are in fine form today. Bloodshot eyes swimming with alcohol, they are being "mean" and "moody" — prising pearls of wisdom from their clam-like gobs (normally open in full cry) is a trying task.

Singer Clinton is swilling at the bar, guitarist Adam is comatose, leaving us with only Graham and Richard, the latter of which is outlining the Poppies' course of action, "We're leaving the Indie scene in the gutter where it belongs, along with the empty Tootie-Fruitie packets." (symbolic, eh?)

Graham: "We've really conquered the Indie market now. It sounds shit to say so, but we have. It's really bad at the moment, to be part of the scene you have to be small and twee. We just want success."

So you would sacrifice the Indie ethic?

Graham: "We've never had any principles from the word go. We just want to make some money and have a good time."

What's your reaction to those who accuse you of talking about nothing except girls?

Richard: "Just because we talk about things we like people automatically accuse us of being thicco's."

Graham: "If you are clever you don't talk about sex and drinking. We don't pretend anything. We sit around for days at the pub, talking about shit and total trivia and if someone interviews us we aren't going to change."

This bunch of loveable greaseballs, when encountered later, got into letting off their pent-up aggression on the dancefloor, flailing their grungy limbs around the place after a hard day of winding up harrassed journalists. Still later on the rooftop, they hurled chairs and glasses into the night air onto bewildered passers by and parked vehicles. It was difficult not to forgive them for their misdemeanors, after all, it must be hard at times to lead a lad's life . . . And that's just like a big group, Isn't it?

CROP SPREADS THROUGH EUROPE

Martin Aston on Eton Crop The Dutch used to have access to nighttime John Peel but those '77 days have long been filed away under "nostalgia". One band who sucked in the thriving Brit-independent whirl at the time were Eton Crop. It sounds just right as they've had four Peel sessions and toured five times since 1983, but if Eton Crop themselves didn't share that same gritty, abrasive Northern guitar zeal, then nobody would want them back for more. ■ "We've been associated with The Three Johns since the last album," explains Corne Bos, bassist and regular Crop ambassador to their British label Ediesta. "It was produced by The Mekon's Tom Greene and Jon Lanford did the sleeve, but what's that got to do with the music? We're punkier and more basic than The Three Johns — who use more Captain Beefheart riffs and things. A lot of English people sometimes don't listen..." ■ Then again, Crop sound English, if there's such a thing, probably because they sing in the language, but also because their manic song titles reflect a sharp command of it. It's My Dog, Maestro (the last album), Yes Please, Bob (the last mini-album) and now the 12 inch A Bundle Of Bucks (For A Dead Dog Is A Bargain). Corne, explain! "We're very keen on these titles. They're more like headlines in the newspaper, like Boy Meets Tractor." ■ Here's one for you, though — A Bundle Of Bucks is about the saga of the American woman who dried off her pet poodle in the microwave and cooked it (medium, I believe). "She got 100,000 compensation because the instructions said nothing about not putting your dog in a microwave..." ■ Add a feisty Peel-pop-perfect cover of The Nightingales' Raffin Brain on the new 12 inch, and you have irony, humour, bite, twisting riffs, and... "music papers in Holland pick up new bands too late." ■ You heard the man.

MIRACLE miracle! SHOCK!

The Miracle Legion climbed the steps of Elektra Records for one last attempt at touchdown. They got kicked out. Wired-up, nauseous, delirious — "it was our last string," murmurs Mark. "We had nothing left to live for on that level" — they played New York's CBGB's the same night. Rough Trade's Geoff Travis sees them. He signs them up.

- Miracle Legion lynchpins Mark and Ray are in London to cut their new album, their first for RT, Surprise! Surprise! Surprise!
- When The Miracle Legion last visited, 'round '86, they were signed to fast disappearing Making Waves. Their first mini-LP was critically acclaimed, but the new record has dug in deeper, its dense scan of guitars and brooding twists of melody adding to those REM-erica comparisons of The Backyard mini-album. Mark: "I don't want to specify and put ideas into people's heads or mouths but it just seemed that people had a certain expectation for that record. We don't really deliver live the same way. I think people thought we were, uh, mush, or folky. I don't think we're folky."
- So my passing thought that Surprise! was a conscious move away from the archetypal REM swirl-surge-and-jangle meets disapproval. "I don't see that we would want to not be like anyone," Mark says, puzzled.
- "In America, no one would see us as anything. They weren't interested. They were looking for something else. When Elektra got in contact, it was their heavy metal A&R guy who called us."
- But the world is full of surprises. Like rock 'n' roll, almost. Mark Asquith

Italy

Italy has always had its share of hard electronics combos and noise mystics (does anybody wonder whatever happened to MURIZIO BIANCHI, the sultan of Italian industrialism? Well, as many rock stars, he repented and subsided to God Almighty...). In contrast, inventive creators of soft cool avant garde are just starting to surface. One belonging to this more scholarly nucleus is PIERLUIGI CASTELLANO: he mainly writes soundtracks for theatrical ballet pieces and his second LP, Dances, collects ten brief excerpts from such scores. The sound is reminiscent of SOFT VERDICT and other sweeties on Disques du Crepuscule, but is less minimal, displaying a wide range of classical and popular influences. The romantic melodies are strewn with electronic twists. Lushly packaged and digitally mastered, definitely a work worth checking. On MANTRA RECORDS, Via degli Etruschi 4/14, 00185 Roma, Italy.

STEVEN BROWN, with the new TUXEDOMOON album, you, fresh from the factory, has been seen more and more around Italy in the past few months. He produced and played on Lazare, the debut album by MINOX — a fresh band from the Tuscany countryside with classical atmospheres and languid pop-tunes. The record was mixed by GILLES MARTIN and is manufactured with a local reputation by IDL, easily the most illuminated indie from trendy Florence. ■ Also from IDL, Brown has cut five covers of the Italian songwriter LUIGI TENCO, to be released soon as a mini-LP. Tenco, who killed himself 20 years ago disappointed by the short-sightedness of pop-audiences, has become a cult-figure: his sad love stories still being relevant and touching. ■ Steven sings in Italian, without thought of mastery. Amusing as a white fly (Must be some local Italian phrase — ed). Steven Brown Plays Luigi Tenco stands out from the mass of Italian independent productions. IDL is marketed through Material Sonori, Via Roma 20, 52027 San Giovanni V.no, Italy.

By far the most active and prolific Italian label on the front of weird electronics and underground experiments is ADN from Milan (Via Segrino 6a, 20133 Milano, Italy). They have an impressive catalogue listing their own home brand of cassettes and records plus hundreds of unusual products from around the world. Recently they have become the Italian branch of the RECOMMENDED RECORDS organisation, so a few of their releases may eventually be available through Recommended Headquarters in London.

Picking out just two titles in the more harsh and noise-oriented vein, the debut LPs of TASADAY and F.A.R. are worth getting. Tasaday is a numerous from from the outskirts of Milan (11 musicians on Aprirsi Kei Silenzio), with granite-like percussion and techno-technical drags. They have another LP out on Aspetta Record, L'animale Profondo, with a hand-painted cover. FINAL ALTERNATIVE RELATION (F.A.R.) come from Savona, the line-up changes constantly and right now they are an almost all-girl band, quite uncommon for the kind of music they play. ■ Their album, Da Consumar Con Grazia, mixes rough synth and tape-loops with softer atmospheric interludes. More relaxed titles from the ADN Mes are Doubling & Silences, a LP by F.P. & THE DOUBLING RIDERS (assembled with collaboration through the mail by musicians of different countries), and Riflessi by RICCARDO SINIGLIA (serious ambient structures by a young and gifted architect-musician who teaches electronic composition at Milan Conservatory). More about ADN next time!

FLAVOUR OF THE MONTH?

The Mint Addicts are introducing pop with passion to West Germany, Jan Cux gets a taster... "Not once did I write ONE proper LOVESONG/All my odes were destined to end up in odiousness..." (Cor Gout)

The Mint Addicts have another destiny, they prefer lovesongs. ■ The West German independent-aristocrat Phillip Boa couldn't neglect them! He knew that The Mint Addicts are not a disdainful band that only tries to create sentimental lovesongs. ■ It was their debut single, Thunder, Storm And Lightning, that introduced me to The Mint Addicts' versatility. The band from Bremen (a town with an interesting scene) easily combines noisy and harmonic elements. Their music gains vitality from its multiplicity. ■ This is the reason why it's so difficult to classify the Addicts' sound. There are lots of crossovers (from sound experiments to harmonies) and these are allowed to run wild on their Constrictor debut album Naked Eyes. Their potential has already been recognised in Germany with some intense media attention. ■ Having just returned from a successful trip to Poland, where they appeared with The Ex, Minimal Compact and David Thomas in Warszawa, a bigger record deal is in sight, and England should be next.

LEFTER THAN THE REST

Martin Aston rides the Red Wave In Western eyeballs, Russian rock 'n' roll has been represented by five minutes' broadcast, via Live Aid, of Autograph, hopeless MOR casualties who reinforced our opinion that Russia was a cultural back-alley of tame cliché, outdated and toothless. ● The picture might well be shifting. Red Wave: 4 Underground Bands From Russia has just been released by Big Time Records (as a double album in America but only as a single here in the UK) which is the culmination of a saga that both Hollywood and BBC Radio Drama have already got their storyboards around. ● LA-based musician Joanna Stingray, over three and a half years and nine visits, was introduced to and befriended some of Russia's most popular, thriving underground bands whose relative radicalism and daring contrasted greatly with Autograph's bland prog-rock. The only snag was that unlike Autograph, who are 'official' in that they are government-sanctioned to record for the state-owned label Melodia, the 'unofficial' groups aren't allowed to record or even make a single rube from performing. ● Subsequently tapes are made, duplicated and passed on (DIY independence lives on, cynicism-free in Russia). Joanna, paranoia in pocket and with KGB and FBI questions following her 'innocent' visits to Leningrad where her friends lived, smuggled out master tapes and compiled the album back in LA. ● The result? Well, the four featured bands, Kino, Aquarium, Alisa and Strange Games still sound ten years behind, being poppy new-wave, techno-rock, glitter-rock and Two-Tone respectively. True Underground in the illegality stakes, but musically alternative? You'll have to make your own mind on that one.

long run it's got to be more indefinable. I've wondered whether it's because it takes a few listens to tune into what we're doing."

Whether supporting Thrashing Doves in New York, heading increasingly bigger shows back home in Boston (ah, their parent city has shown approval at last) or rumbling around this country, Three Colors want to crack it. So much so that, as their second mini-album This Is Norwood (on Soul Select) says, "if you are not pleased with this product, we will come over to your house and sing".

This band feels exactly right, but then what can you expect from a bunch of Bostonians who name their record after one of London's forgotten southern suburbs? Martin Aston

What's the color of pop?

They say Boston is the most Anglophile of American cities but that doesn't mean we have to have everything in common. Just because Boston gave Three Colours a bit of a hard time because they couldn't instantly categorise (and thus handle or accept...) a beguiling, non-conformist bunch of indefinables doesn't mean we've got to get in on the act...

Three Colors number five (namecheck: Chris, Hub, Max, Barry and Dana) and together, they can raise the roof. Three Colors don't ham it up.

So why the indifference, trend-conscious readers?

"Obviously it's hard to pin us down," sighs Hub, Three Color spokesman. "We never fit into any one genre in Boston, which is more known for garage stuff. But in the GREEK ROCK 'N' ROLL | did you not. From the land of the rising kebab, the people who brought you Nana Mouskouri and Prince Phillip let you get your ears 'round the aural delights of garage psychedelia, gothic, punk, computer and even anorak rock. ■ Athens is the nerve centre of this growing Greek movement, and the leaders of the pack include LAST DRIVE, the "best" garage band in Greece, who are famous for a frenzied version of Blue Moon on their Underground Shakedown LP. For the heavies, there's the hard rockin' Anti-Troppau Council, and the more frenetic post-punk punksters CHAOS GENERATION. For the more rootsy and greasy, try a helping of professional "trash" from YELL-O-YELL, who have now released their fourth LP, and VILLA 21. ■ Finally, for the trip freaks there's the psychedelia of BLUE LIGHT (on Object Records) and LIBIDO BLUME. There's more, but space restricts listing the full Grecian 2000. The vinyl entrepreneurs sending out these sun and Ouzo drenched sounds are Hitch Mike Records (garage psychedelia), the all purpose Dikeoma Diavasis, punk label Enigma and Smash Records from Salonika. But if you'd like any more details on any of these, contact Anthony Fragos at 16 Petmezastrasse, Neo Kosmos 111743, Athens, Greece. (Anthony also writes for a national music mag and DJs a purely independent show for national Greek radio. Would-be popsters could do worse than to contact him too.)

Intrepid scribe Julian McHenry dons his stripey shirt and gathers a swag bag of chrome and ferric for a head-on collision with Go! Discs supremo Andy McDonald. Yes, yes, yes, the man who signed The Housemartins, The Bic (let's forget about that one, Dave) and some bloke called Bully Bargg (among others) gives judgement on this month's Tip Sheet. Julian Henry types on regardless.

The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential. Er, well, let battle commence . . .

FICTITIOUS NAMES (84 Park Street, Radcliffe, Manchester) come at us with their guitars in their hands. The big says that their music is 'powerful, popular, commercial, listenable' etc etc, and so Andy and I give this over while listening to their cassette. "It's got a good beat," the Go! Discs boss finally declares, but otherwise we're stuck for inspired critical comment. I eventually mention The Smiths, and Andy agrees adding that although it's all very pleasant, there's not enough impact there to make him jump up and down and want to start sending out contracts."

3 3 3 3

FROM THE HIP (0742 325624) play the sort of dead commercial soul/pop efforts that usually end up at number one in the charts, and, as it happens, one of the group actually co-wrote Alison Moyet's Weak In The Presence Of Beauty blockbuster. Blimey! What are they doing sending us cassettes then?

Shouldn't they be off recording in New York or lounging round a swimming pool somewhere? Anyway, Andy approves of singer Rick Barnes' contributions, and says that there's a good horn arrangement.

"They wear their soul influences very much on their sleeves, and I suppose it's better to steal from Otis Redding than Mud," he concludes.

6 5 4 6

THE LA's (42 Morcroft Road, Liverpool L36) wrote us a scribbled note, urging us to turn the volume control up loud when playing their tape. We duly obliged and were rewarded by some rather pleasing acoustic strumming that was both economical and distinctive. Andy started tapping his feet excitedly.

"This is GOOD. I could imagine a song like this being written by someone like Ray Davies; it doesn't matter that it's badly recorded, and any A&R man who can't recognise the quality should be shot."

Strong words indeed from the 'Mr Nice Of Pop'! will you be signing up the LA's?

"I shall definitely be calling them up — there are four songs here that are nice and concise, and not one of them has overstayed its welcome. The best tape so far".

7 6 6 8

CLARK (01-381 1819) come from Tulse Hill, and sound to me like Stump. Or Slab. Or any one of those groups with a name so clod-like and matter-of-fact that they can't possibly be anything to do with the glamorous and showbizzy world of pop music. I wonder what they want? Perhaps they should be hung in an art gallery. Perhaps they should be hung full stop. While I am silently pondering over Clark, Andy is staring out of the window watching the rain.

3 3 3 3

THE HANGING THREE (8c Sisters Avenue, London SW11 5SG) have made a tape with seven songs on it which they tell us they intend to sell for £2.50 plus 50p postage. Well, this is something or is it? Andy looks sheepish when I ask him to be hard and give me a tough assessment of The Hanging Three. "Well, it's alright, you know," he mumbles. "I don't like to knock it but there's actually not much on a tape like this for me to comment on constructively."

3 3 3 3

XL (36 The Mall, Southgate, London N14) have named their cassette Go! — in an attempt to win over our guest reviewer's heart, and they partially succeeded with a frantic '60s work-out. "They have definitely decided that they have a direction and they are sticking to it," Andy states diplomatically. "It could be a mistake though, opening with an instrumental."

When listening to the cassette again later, I discovered a photograph of the band — they all look to be about 12, something that I am quite sure would have impressed Andy had he known.

THE PROTECTIVE RACKET (406 Gibbet Street, Halifax, W. Yorks) were welcomed to the cassette deck only in as much as they provided a bit of "controversy". These are naughty boys, you see; they list their influences as The Beastie Boys and Jimi Hendrix and sing about having "heads full of smack"

Ideals and skin colour apart, these four guys gave it all they had — impressive because the music was just so potent. When the sounds weren't flying by in an enjoyable blur, the few, well-placed reggae numbers served to break the set up and give some short respite to the hordes of diving, slamming devotees; allowing them a short but sweet slunk. There was a hiccup when the sound disappeared for a few minutes, but this incident was forgotten quickly enough. Some over-zealous 'characters' started a violence vibe, but singer HR was straight in there and cooled it out. After the hoodies for encars was done and a perfect backflip executed over his collection, HR thanked everyone for their support and it was all over. Bad Brains, baaaaad gig.

and "kicking a broad in the head until she was dead", and all the other dull wet-dreams of morose with no ideas. It's pitiful to behold. I ask Andy if he can see anything redeeming in this cassette. "No, not really, it's a celebration of total stupidity. I sort of wish people like this would just f off and die actually!"

I.V.E. (7 Churston Road, Ashgate, Chesterfield, Derbyshire) perform their art with loving attention. The hand-out tells us nothing about the group, but details all the previous recordings on various tapes and compilations. Our cassette was number 17. My guess is that there is one fellow who does it all himself, locked away with his Portastudio, as the tape sounds so personal. Andy, unfortunately, was unimpressed.

"Too tameless for me," he said, "but I certainly hope he enjoyed doing it." How tactful the Go! Discs "King Of Pop" can be sometimes!

FRIENDS (c/o PO Box 13, Stockton on Tees, Cleveland TS13 1RX) drew appreciative coos from Andy and myself as they launched into their first track, a summery Lotus Eaters ice-cream lolly-pop ditty called Far And Away which sounds suspiciously like a hit. "Nice melody, well constructed, and a lot better than many bands who've got major deals," says Andy. "I would be most surprised if this lot don't get signed up in the next few months."

"I would be most interested to have a sniff around one of their bedrooms — I'm pretty certain we'd find a few Tear-drop Explodes records, don't you?" Andy muses, as Burning Bridges displays some very Julian Cope horn blasts.

6 6 7 6

REMEMBER FUN (83 Watson Street, Larkhall, Lanarkshire) open their first song with lots of dee-dah-dums, and tell us in their letter that they expect to be The Next Big Thing. What does Andy think? "It's OK. It's been done before, it'll be done again." Having a rather sweet tooth for this sort of thing I am prone to feeling more sympathetic, and hope that Remember Fun spend their time at beach parties or riding around on double decker buses, as befits this type of music.

THE HELP ENGINE (46 Hazelrigg Road, Clapham North, London SW4) sent us a rather fetching promotional photograph of four people (the band I presume) baring their bottoms. One of

B B O Y S B - W A R E

First on stage is hardly a privilege at the best of gigs, and the Blood Unc's arrived to a barrage of uncontrolled apathy. Undaunted, they plunged into some sexy, beaty rock and pulled out the pauses. Bang! One track ended, a quick inhalation and it was back to work. Their drum-machine-driven attack, scalpel-sharp guitar sounds, bounding bass-lines and gritty vocals are that much meatier live, and songs; Crash and Beathag really flexed. Look out for 'em.

Next, audience participation was the name of the game as the stage divers and slammers got into it. Broken Bones weren't the result, but were the reason for this energy release; supersonic punkers with guitars firing off all over the gaff. There were leather and stab-infested arms moving in all directions and eight out of ten punx, who expressed a preference, launched themselves from the stage at some point. Far superior in the flesh than on vinyl, they proved to be a pretty much unstoppable force and went down a storm.

After an interval, in which the Electric album by The Cult was forced upon us, Bad Brains took to the stage. Whereas those old cults have swapped self respect for scotch eggs in the trousers, dreadlocked punk-metal couldn't be anything other than honest.

the group used to be in Modern English apparently, so Andy and I spend some time peering at the photo, trying to identify which bottom belonged to the Modern English fellow.

Perhaps it was the big one. No firm conclusion could be reached, unfortunately, so we turned our attention to the music, which may have been a mistake from the band's point of view. "Not incredibly special or brilliant," was Andy's comment, and I felt inclined to agree. We felt much happier looking at this group's bottoms.

4 4 5 4

THE SCREAMING ABDABS (78 Sunderland Road, London E8 2LL) scored big points on our charts. From a photograph that shows them all yelling and howling in a truly inspired fashion, and secondly a long charity letter that tells us of all the benefit concerts that they've played. They definitely had the good eggs. However, what about business? How do they shovel the beer vouchers in the promotion of The Screaming Abdabs? Andy pointed out that although they would certainly be a "top notch" live act, they would be a bit hard to take seriously as a band to sign up.

5 5 6 5

THE DISCO SCOOTERS (37-39 Norman Road, St Leonards On Sea, East Sussex) sent us a whole LP's worth of songs on one cassette. Crikey! The first few songs sounded alright... and, yes, just like The Jesus And Mary Chain. I suppose everyone says that. Andy said something different though, he said "Not my sort of thing." We both agreed a cassette like this, for sale at £2.80, deserved a bag of peppermints or something to say "well done."

5 5 6 5

THE POETS (c/o 16 Coppice Wood, Grove Guiseley, Leeds, West Yorks) were my favourite band in the pile. They write to tell us that they're "from a cellar, not a bedroom", and are "bad at writing grovelling letters to people." The music is undramatically traditional in its use of guitars, piano and harmony vocals, but is delivered with a reverent aggression and a healthy respect for diminished chord sequences (what-ed). Andy was unconvinced at first, but the sudden appearance of a John Lennon vocal on the second song won him over. By the end he was pushed to deliver the following plea: "Please send me your next cassette!" You will be hearing more from The Poets.

NORTH OF CORNWALLIS (62 Barkway Street, London W10) were already known to Andy through a link with The Housemartins, and a play of their cassette drew the following comments: "It's intelligent, sensitive, and they seem like battlers. I've heard this tape before and want to see their next gig: in fact if I had to put £5 on any of the bands we've listened to tonight being famous, I'd put it on this lot."

A perusal of the blurb enclosed with the tape reveals good press cuttings, decent picture and a nice letter from singer Lester. The music is mellow, well-played and Lester appears to own a fine set of vocal chords. This group seem to be doing it right.

SHEND ON THE RUN

Confessions of a pop icon number one: Move To The Big City And Do Some Recording

The month started with some optimism. I had acquired the ancestral rights to a room in Camden, and the person responsible for the transaction assured me that the medieval deeds, in the leatherette pouch, signed by noted Danish legend Prince Flarg in 1527, were genuine... Although I marvelled at the great Dane's revolutionary use of biro. Still no matter, the main thing was, at last, I stood, without scaffolding, in 'The city that never sleeps!' A place so different from the rolling vales of my Worcestershire home, a place where wastebin rummaging seems compulsory. The Very Things were in the studio constructing their latest LP. Robin Raymond, my life-long compatriot in the seamy world of music, was hunched over a machine named after a Japanese motorcycle, which, like its namesake was making a horrendous racket; noises that I knew would one day manifest themselves as the latest chart-topping 'Rockin' Verys' disc. I sat and watched The Price Is Right in the rest room. Leslie Crowther's margarine mentality mingled with the muttered abuse from Derek, our trusted engineer, as expensively hired equipment languishing in his path, was sent sprawling into a pile of broken expensively hired equipment and discarded Robert Palmer promotional blow-up women. Derek is the only person I have ever seen mend a delicate sampling machine with violence. Fact One: A sampling machine is basically a clever utensil for stealing sounds that people like Robert Palmer spent £40,000, and simply ages, creating. It is a good thing. Much of the drums and other boomy bits can, these days, be "laid down" (much studio language seems to revolve around being prostrate) on a glorified 'Alien-War-Attack-Death-Crash' computer game in a friend's wardrobe if necessary. This minimises the time spent in the studio, where, to watch The Price Is Right and half of Ever Decreasing Circles costs about £40. Fact Two: Studios are expensive. Having read the ingredients on each flavour of the Maxpax machine, and finding them all to be identical, I wandered back into the control room, removed Robert Palmer's box set: How To Sell A Pile Of Crap Using Women's Thighs and made useful comments like: "ADT the flange line", or "A D minor 7th would sound good after the hook". Fact Three: Recording is very technical. These comments can cause embarrassment, as someone may spin round and ask what you mean. Everyone then realises your true vocation is re-checking those vital Maxpax ingredients immediately. The disturbing thing in a studio is when they play vocals back without any other tracks, then you realise that you're in dire need of an iron lung, and that, with practice, you can guess the exact amount of loose change jangling in your pocket (58p for the new single). Leaving Robin to grapple with the latest neuro-surge technology, I wandered unnoticed into the night. My Prince Flarg ceremonial mace glinting under the orange street lamps. By the way I'm writing this with a Mike Read Radio One pen. If only life were as simple as Mike Read.

DON'T MISS UNDERGROUND YOU BOZO! KILL TO CHILL DEPECHE MODE exclusive new LP stuff BIG ZAP!

the soul-metal re-union gets balls TALULAH GOSH life after press insults and the special RONNIE "THE RANDALL" away-day in Paris plus a million reviews and all the other fall out OUT FRIDAY JULY 24

"Most groups are pressed out of a jelly mould with one idea that can be marketed for kids. It's become a fast food pop chart streamlined for quick turnover." The Jack Rubies are questioning their role in the new age, but not for long. They brim with self-confidence. For all their trepidation they are supremely sure of their ultimate destination.

"We are interested in songs; ones with verses, choruses and tunes. You remember the sort of thing? We don't just strut some funky stuff, slice in a few riffs and chuck some words on top. We carefully construct each piece."

Architects? Navvies? Landscape gardeners? Construct? How?

"Well, the way it works is Ian meticulously works out every last detail of a piece, brings it to the rest of us, and we mangle and bludgeon it to death. It stops him getting uppity."

Hence all the references to violence, mutilation and suicide?

"The humour may be black and malicious, but we're definitely not dour. Those songs are a celebration of love, not a downer. When you're hopelessly in love you get these gross ideas like self-mutilation and they seem reasonable."

The Rubies' live performance is fresh and fluid. A frantic bundle of bouncing aggression awash in great tides of enthusiasm. Oooh! And the sweat.

Forgetting the J Rubie/Lee Harvey Oswald/Kennedy axis, there's still a strong US feel to many of their songs. Gunbelts, stetsons, black teeth, railroads. Chug-a-lug, twang-a-lang. You been watching cowboy films then?

"The influences are American flotsam. It isn't kitsch or derivative. We know next to nothing about the place, apart from the telly and radio. In the '60s it all seemed like a glamorous wonderland. Of course, it's turned into a bit of a nightmare now."

THE JACK RUBIES

And the ironic Rubies! A guitar band rising on the dawn of the computer age?

"Samples will never replace a bass guitar, but they will change the general direction of music. Some of it is good . . . the way The Young Gods make use of computers in a grungy, nasty noise, not the usual rinky-dink metronome nonsense, but there's a lot of bad stuff. As a concession to the brave new world we're writing a song based on the theme music to the Hang-On motor bike arcade game. It's the next single."

They laugh loudly, but then they always do. Whatever they're on, I want some. I think it's called the road to success. Be With You, the single, is on Idea.

THE MIRACLE MILE

The Miracle Mile are a guitar-toting three piece from Skipton in North Yorkshire. Unearthed by the Tip Sheet, their tape was a fresh and vaguely Roddy Frame-sounding affair that was impressively professional.

Guitarist Trevor Jones was eventually located at the end of a telephone and made to explain: "Well, we've been going about 18 months, though we moved down to London a year or so ago to make a proper go of things."

Since then the band have signed to Zomba Music for publishing. The group now play live as a five piece augmented by ex-Haircut 100 sax man Phil Smith and Steve Davies (no, not the snooker player) on guitars.

The actual nucleus of the band, though, is very much the songwriting duo of Trevor and bassist Stephen Smith, and when confronted with a comparison to Roddy Frame, Trevor admits a keen admiration for him.

"We like people like Frame and Paddy McAloon, but I think our favourite must be Elvis Costello," he says. "He seems to be able to just suggest an idea and then seduce the listener which is what I like; he's also got real heart and spirit."

The band's debut single is planned for mid summer release.

Julian Henry

It takes a tough character to escape from New York without being musically tainted by the hip-hop/rap culture.

Aussie Jaqi and Yorkshire-born Michael spurned the predominant local sound, preferring the more anguished utterings of Swans and Sonic Youth. The resultant Dustdevils have a sound more acclimatised to the British provinces.

Having played four New York clubs that subsequently crumbled (beware a Dustdevil), they decided to exit the decaying club life at the core of the Big Apple.

Jaqi: "New Yorkers are totally self-centred. They pride themselves on being open to everything but are ultimately shallow. All their opinions originate in books or are heard in therapy, while political awareness is at a premium. Everyone in the world should live there for a year . . . then scarp." "

They fled one Gotham City for another, Michael's home town of Leeds. They'll hate me for saying it but their Banshee-style goth rock (ouch!) had found its spiritual home.

Suburban Leeds after the crazyness of New York? After the sun and sea of Sydney? Where's the attraction Jaqi?

DUSTDEVILS

"There's none really. It perfectly lives up to its name of Gotham City — tribes of teenage goth warriors roaming across the vast plains of endless shopping precincts. It needs a shake up."

Perhaps the new album, Rhenyards Grin, is the start of a whirlwind, and the track on Rouska's Zarah CD comp? Yes, that should do it! Ronnie Randall

FIRE NEXT TIME

It's not every day of the week you stumble across a band like Fire Next Time.

There's enough pop to hum on the way home, enough gusto to send the occasional shiver down your spine, and what's more, they even write songs that suggest influences ranging from Cole Porter, Bruce Springsteen, Dionne Warwick to Paul Weller to name but a few.

Now signed to Polydor, after a debut single on Stiff last year, it seems like they're poised to head chartwards sooner or later. The current single, I Can't Go Back, won't be the one to do the job even though it's a corker.

"It's had some night-time play on Radio One, but for some reason Smash Hits haven't been on the phone to interview us yet," says singer/guitarist James Maddock. (Are you serious, — ed)

The NME haven't shown much interest either, despite loads of gigs, despite James' political interests (he's a Marxist/SWP person), despite lots of benefits, but most importantly, despite being a bloody good group.

"It doesn't bother us too much at the moment," says guitarist Geoff Sapsford. "The deal we've signed is for seven albums so we aim to build up gradually and Polydor agree with that."

People endlessly moan about the death of rock music, even when the raunch is rumbling right at their door. At the moment Fire Next Time are young, raging and quite inspirational, they can easily see off their critics, but pop music desperately needs more groups like this. Julian Henry

"Pop should be fun, we've no time for modelled video androids. Look at me, an Edwardian twat. Look at Smith, a teacher type."

Patrick Troughton lookalike, Martin Newell is explaining his philosophy on the painted pap that passes for pop in the video age. For him, image should play second fiddle to songs, and his Cleaners From Venus are supreme songwriters. A sound ablaze in influence from that heyday of prime British pop, the swingin' '60s.

"Good pop is perennial," he parps, "but there's a bad case of Emperors new clothes at the moment. Far too much overproduced rubbish. I won't let the bearded git producers anywhere near my work."

Martin recorded an LP on a four-track in his bedroom during the miner's strike called Under Wartime Conditions and now it's out on CD in Germany. "I'm proud of that achievement."

Having spent five years ignoring the record industry, refusing contracts, releasing cassette albums which sold in their thousands, he's finally found a sympathetic ear in the Ammunition label.

"It's not that I've got 'small is beautiful' Yuppie ideals. I just believe in devolution. As far as the consumer society is concerned the biggest crime you can commit is to not compete."

The debut vinyl album is called Going To England and is a look at life in the nostalgic England of John Betjeman, Edward Thomas and AE Houseman. An England that probably never really existed, more an ideal. Further along, the new single, Living With Victoria Grey, is about life under Thatcherism and her grim Victorian values yet situated in a scene from Dickens. How apt, and how sweet it would be if the Cleaners message just slipped into the charts. Oh, go on. Ronnie Randall

MY BABY'S ARM

My Baby's Arm?

Grimmo: "We didn't want a name that began with the."

Hmm.

When we met, Grimmo and Paul from the group along with their manager Neil from Kaspar Records were in a somewhat sombre mood, crying into their pints over the lack of radio play for their new single Hung In The Playground.

But who, if not what is My Baby's Arm?

Grimmo, the Irish mop of hair and ex-Zerra One, is on guitar, Paul is also on guitar and Mark plays the drums. While Jeremy is the most senior member and an ex-Monochrome Set person (all present professed a strong dislike for this band), who plays and sings — the father of the aforementioned baby.

So what's it all about? Do My Baby's Arm have any bone of contention to chew over, any message in the lyrics?

Grimmo: "The music itself isn't trying to create a reaction, it's just our reaction against blandness. We aren't trying to put across a message." Liz Evans

THE SHREW KINGS

Two years ago, I was reviewing this Play Brecht single and asked myself 'any chance The Shrew Kings are a bunch of name musicians?' Well, here I am 'phoning singer Jeff Harvey and asking him just that! Indeed, Jeff used to sing with King Kurt but left "just as they started to get notorious."

The group number six, with three vocalists and the intermittent use of squeezebox, harmonica, fiddle and trumpet among the guitars. Sick and tired of being branded Brechtobillies, just because they used to always sing The Alabama Song and Mac The Knife (and Brel's Funeral Tango), the group have dropped all covers from their live set, leaving behind a busking mix of country, skiffle-abilly, western, dancehall and pop. Bypass the erratic Sad But True LP of last year and hear the new, improved Green Eyed Kid EP. Eclectic buggers or Jacks-Of-All-Trades cabaret stars of '87? You'll just have to go and find out. Martin Aston

THE BATHERS

If you followed the tempestuous career of the sorely missed Scottish pop icons Friends Again, then you'd have heard the classic Honey At The Core and State Of Art singles from 1983 plus the long-delayed, erratic album Trapped And Unwrapped. Guitarist James Grant ran off with the drummer and keyboardist to form Love And Money while it's taken the group's singer and songwriter Chris Thompson over two years to re-surface with The Bathers.

An extended trip to Rome rekindled Chris' songwriting but without him knowing, his (recently fired) manager was only approaching major label deals.

MEHEAD

MEHEAD's music features tortured rhythms and brutal blasts. It's a noise much admired recently by the legendary Pere Ubu man Dave Thomas, who was reminded of his early days back in Cleveland. Founder members Phil and guitarist Dave Maleed proudly show me a picture of man-mountain Mr Thomas chatting to them.

The present line-up has existed for about 18 months, but 1986 didn't see much activity. Three gigs! How come?

"We're idealists," they say, but can idealism sell records? Sticking uncompromisingly to their guns, they plan to avoid the majors as well as the would-be Svengalis of the indie scene, and release a 12 inch EP on their own Makerite label in the autumn. They've done it before, in '84, and have learnt from past mistakes.

Militant Wire fan Paul Kneller, drums, and Happy End jazz trumpeter Loz Speyer complete the New Cross foursome, whose mixed-up, undanceable chaos isn't like anything I've heard before. But then, say Mehead, "If you had my brain, you'd know what I was thinking." Ian B Bourne

SURF DRUMS

The Surf Drums have been causing a big splash in the small pond of their home town, Brum, since the release of the sharp, dramatic '60s influenced beat of their Take It With Me single but now The Byrds influences have given way to the '80s urgency of Walkaway on Kaleidoscope Sound (Red Rhino and the Cartel).

As for their contemporaries, lead Surfer David Kehoe has little good to say of the frothy, sugar-coated pop of certain flavour-of-the-month Midlands bands, and he's obviously a man looking past the ephemeral qualities of the pop world, his mind on higher, more admirable thoughts.

"If we can create a feeling — a tingle down the spine — something to touch someone, somewhere — then we've served our purpose," but then with a wry smile, he adds, "But then again, we want to be the next Rolling Stones!"

Neat. Now here's a style note; the Surf Drums have nothing to do with surfing and their name comes off the back of a Pebbles album.

Dick Mescal

THE FLOWERPOT MEN

"We want the music to conjure up images as soon as you turn it on without the need of a video." This is Ben Watkins, the charismatic vocalist of THE FLOWERPOT MEN, a group who have nothing to do with '60s Californian pop and everything to do with late '80s intensity and excitement.

"We're sound created out of sound rather than environment."

The Flowerpots have their own Compost label (get it?) on which they've released three powerful throbbing blasts of hard, shivering swamp-soaked "thud" in as many years. It's been 18 months since the Dr John cover Walk On Gilded Splinters and a year from Beat City — recorded in Hollywood for the soundtrack of musical Anglophile John Hughes's Ferris Bueller's Day Off — but now there's the brand new Alligator Bait EP.

Why the wait?

"Money . . . Plus the group's been all over the place . . . Adam (Peters, the electric cellist and twin driving force) and I have added Mr Delardes and Mark Irving to the sound so now the inconsistency is over. It's a pretty intense period what with the Furs' tour, our own headlining tour and now the LP about to happen.

"We've been a bit aimless in the past, taking it as it comes, without looking over our shoulders at major or indie charts. We've been in a vacuum. Now we have a higher profile, but who knows, with spending so much time together we'll probably want to split up . . . Ha! ha! ha!"

Not so nervous with the laugh Ben. Ronnie Randall

52 UNDERGROUND < GOALMOUTH INCIDENT OF THE MONTH: LA Lakers' Magic Thompson >

TEXAS

JAMES RAY AND THE PERFORMANCE

In the words of Tripwire, DUB SEX are "coming up on your blind side". This particular sortie has involved multiple session plays on the Peel show and the recent release of the debut Then And Now, on North-West label Sky-saw. "It's only been a year since we started," says singer Mark, and when he tells you there's nothing more important than Dub Sex, you start believing him.

We met in the less than auspicious surroundings of manager Paul Hulme's flat, just on the outskirts of downtown Manchester; a perfect reflection of the Dub Sexy sound of claustrophobia and advanced neurosis. Present, correct, if only a little quiet, were the rest of the group — Cathy provides bubbling bass while Roger plays a perfectly matched slamming beat and Dave provides a reasonably disturbed guitar.

In conversation, it's Mark Hoyle's voice which registers the element of intimidation, which makes Dub Sex music something more than run-of-the-mill. And if his voice suggests a 'bad taste in the mouth', then the lyrics often suggest 'fingers down the throat'. It's an attack on open nerves which is gaining support far and wide, due mainly to the success of their Peel session — "we've had letters from all over Europe but Wolfgang in Germany is the big fan."

It's going 'very nicely thank you,' but will they follow the normal path of other independent based groups? "We're just going to make more Dub Sex music, and don't compare us to anyone else because we're not just another independent band."

Paranoia anyone? Craig Ferguson

WE FREE KINGS

Playing a selection of traditional acoustic instruments, from mandolin to fiddle, melodeon to reeds, Edinburgh's WE FREE KINGS for rather too long attracted unjustified comparisons to those London-Irish folk The Pogues. Unjustified because, rather than mimicking folk songs of the past, We Free Kings hurtle breakneck through their own glorious, swirling cacophony of sound, which owes much more to the early Clash, Stooges and Velvet Underground than to The Dubliners.

Their live set is manic, shambolic, utterly compelling and has led Waterboy Mike Scott to describe them as the best live band in Scotland. Their singles to date, Death Of The Wild Colonial Boy and Oceans, appeared together on a 12 inch single released at the end of April, and the band have just completed work in Dublin on their first album, which is scheduled for release in September.

All their vinyl product comes complete with exhortations to support Friends Of The Earth and the Scottish magazine Green Scotland. Not so much a political crusade, says singer Joe Kingman, as an attempt to make somebody, anybody, care, before they wake up covered in an ocean of concrete. Trevor Pake

< NOW ON VID (I TOLD YOU IT WAS CRAP): Shanghai Surprise >

TWANG

"If people listen to our records in five years time when we've disappeared, they should still sound fresh and influential," reckons TWANG singer Andy. "Indie stuff is stale . . . jingly-jangly leather trousers bands."

As part of Twang's attempt to "break away from the clichéd aspects of indie music, their next single (the third) will be given different treatments: a Radio Mix, a Dance Mix . . . But, insists Andy, "We're not a pop group."

Funny then that the Pop Group get a name check as an influence! Funnier still that Haircut 100 do too. The Kick And Complain EP seems a million miles from the ideal pop disposability of Haircut, until you make that vital connection: dance music.

The violent, unexpected and hard northern funk of Twang, issuing from Dave's ragged guitar, John's heaving bass and new-boy Albert's drums, doesn't leave much space for Andy's "sly sense of humour" to come across. His semi-political lyrics are very different from the up-front socialism of former label-mates Big Flame, but musically they were an early influence, and anyway, they're friends. See B Bourne

THE WALTONES

The Waltonones have been a 'band-most-likely-to-in-Manch' for a goodly while; they've got the jangliest guitar in town; and now they've released a single, Downhill, on Medium Cool. Not that they've been confined to Manchester — far from it, they've been playing regularly outside that great Northern metropolis for a considerable time now. So it's been a surprisingly long wait before the release of that debut 45.

"When we played with The Raw Herbs, their label Medium Cool offered to put us out on record," explains guitarist Mark. This arrangement lets The Waltonones have the advantages of being on a London-based label, while remaining a Manchester-based combo. And that does make a big difference.

On stage, The Waltonones are enthusiastic funsters — all smiles and adolescent ditties. While Mark furiously works at the said jangle, Manny and Alex are bass and drums respectively, and singer James quips, blows harmonica, and bears an uncanny resemblance to Paul Quinn. If there were accusations of Orange Juicism in the past, then the sound they're developing at the moment is all their own. Craig Ferguson

What's wrong with this country these days? The Rain... from Woking (uh-oh) are a brilliant band. They've got a great single out, Tom Paine on Jive Alive, a track on Imminent IV called The Money Men, plus tracks on a couple of other worthy cassette compilations. So what's wrong with them? Eh? OK mister smart-ass A&R man, it's time to get your feet on the table and impress the boss. Snaffle the gold American Express card from the top of the bureau and get a bundle of The Rain before some other tykes do. They may look a little straight, but they write brilliant songs. TC Wall

Genius or lunatic?

Princess Tynmeat, the floor is yours, Our Man Reg sets the poseurs

THE NEW 45! Your first two singles took a lot of thought and preparation whereas the third one, Angels In Pain, was a much more spontaneous venture. It was the easiest I've been to working on my own, which musically is the way I intend to develop.

THE THREAT OF THEATRE! I've always been fascinated by the latter silliness and frivolity of pantomime. Recently I've started to work with various artists, video makers and dancers. This has proved to be a slow process simply because I'm not prepared to half do my ideas anymore."

POP MUSIC V INTEGRITY! "About a year ago I decided that it was not enough to make records of artistic integrity and achievement, I also wanted to make records that I would really enjoy listening to. Being a drummer I'm interested in dance music and I like the idea of commercial music providing it keeps its hard edge."

OUR PUNDIT-COME-REPORTER CONCLUDES! Not allowing himself to be pigeon-holed in any way (which seems to be a favourite pastime of the British music press), Princess Tynmeat has become a multi-media product in which vivid imagination is given the freedom to run wild. Whatever the future, Princess Tynmeat plans to be around for a very long time. Genius or lunatic, er... I'll get back to you on that one.

Who can this luscious, pouting creature be? Why, it's none other than Jon "Fat, Hairy And Disgusting" Beast, that primal promoter of pithy pop performance, that infamous "Indie impresario" to whom countless squillions of embryonic beat combos send their fab home recordings in the hope of being booked to play their debut "gig" at Kentish Town's hallowed shrine of emetic electric eclecticism The Timebox. Yes, you've sent him your seminal Vertical Y-Front Revolution flexi! You've endured his raucous ansaphone messages! You may even have paid in to see Donkey Kong And The Mating Mules! But what you've probably never realised is that

Primal Scream threaten to unleash album

"I want to spend my life listening to great records and making great records. The first priority of this group is to make great music, the greatest within our capabilities. I think our LP is brilliant — there's so much in it, different moods and emotions. I'm proud of it."

INTERVIEW BY RICHARD LOWE

Primal Scream's Bobbie Gillespie is ranting and raving again.

★ Ask him about his beloved garage psychedelia and he'll write you an authoritative list of essential purchases. Confront him with accusations of being (a) a revivalist and (b) just another of those wimpy "anorak" bands and he snaps back, in the same gentle but firm tone that characterises his singing.

★ "I'm sick of being called a wimp. I'm not a wimp at all and I take that as an insult. I'm a strong person and our music is powerful music. It may be gentle and melodic but that doesn't mean it's wimpy. Everyone has their soft side. Anyway, how can anyone call Primal Scream wimps when Jim's in the band."

★ He's got a point there. Although young Bobbie may not look as if he could blow the skin off a rice pudding, guitarist Jim is built to roughly the same proportions as the proverbial side of a house.

★ "And as for being a revivalist band," continues the floppy-fringed one, "that's just ridiculous. None of our songs are ripped off for a start. Of course there are influences, but you can trace the influences behind every group. And we're not just influenced by stuff that was made 20 years ago — we're influenced by rock 'n' roll full stop. From the '50s up to present day groups like The Weather Prophets and the Mary Chain.

★ "The trouble is if you say you're into the Velvets, Love, Buffalo Springfield, Pink Floyd and groups like that you're labelled a revivalist, whereas if you say you're into Sam Cooke, Otis Redding, Bobby Womack, Aretha Franklin and Marvin Gaye — though they're all great artists — you're automatically hip.

★ "Now that's just ridiculous. I don't think you should categorise music by boxing it off into eras — how can you just box off human emotions and spiritual art like that and say it's out of date and irrelevant?

★ "A good record is a good record forever. A great record, whether it's just a fun record like California Girls by The Beach Boys or a violent record like Search And Destroy by The Stooges, will always be a great record. People should dig all kinds of music and not get petty and snobbish about what's hip and what isn't."

★ "And it's up to groups like us to make great records and get them played on the radio and into the charts. If groups like us and The Mary Chain, who are the type of groups in a small minority on major labels, get to sell a lot of records and change the record companies' way of thinking, great. We've got to try to have the same effect on the record industry as The Sex Pistols. They're the reason we're in a group now, because they cut through the crap and opened up the music business. But it's back the way it was now. As far as I'm concerned groups like Johnny Hates Jazz and Living in A Box are ridiculous because there's no warmth or soul or spirit or humanity in their records. They're just worthless."

★ And Primal Scream's new LP is "worthwhile" is it?

★ "It's a genuine record and that's what counts. We wrote those songs and they came naturally to us. Nothing about Primal Scream is contrived — when we write lyrics and melodies it's pure me and pure Jim. All great music has to be natural and our approach is like that. We don't analyse what we do, we just get on with it. We don't sit down and think 'let's write this one like Kris Kristofferson or Alex Chilton'.

★ "We're perfectionists about what we do, but we're impulsive — that's always been our approach and it always will be."

IN TAPE STILL MACGROOVING

In tape supreme Jim Khambatta 'phoned Ugphone to tell us that his label is out of hibernation. Concerning the initial press blurb about In Tape's "hibernation on June 26", he claims it was only for that day, when he allegedly went to the seaside. A new roster of acts will be announced when his towel is dry.

SNAKEFINGER DIES

Sad news that Snakefinger, The Residents' pal-come-guitarist, died of a heart attack last week in Vienna, during a European tour to promote his Vestal Virgins LP. He leaves a wounded public and a string of fine performances.

"Big Black are dumb, ugly and persistent. Just like a wart." — Steve Albini

Big Black bid farewell to the world as we know it after a caustic and creative flurry of activity. Current releases and those scheduled for the next ten seconds include a CD, The Rich Man's 8-Track Tape, a new album with the lovingly lovely and lovey-dovey title Songs About Fing, and finally, the B-Boys cover Kraftwerk's The Model. So long guys, it's been, hic, well, er, LOUD!

MORE MISSIONARY MEN

The strange tale of Guthrie Handley and Wayne Hussey of The Mission unfolds this month with the release of Guthrie's 12 inch Where Was?. It seems that the two met when Guthrie's band, Naked Voice, were about to record their LP and a baby-faced Mission were just free from The Sisters Of Mercy.

Wayne and Guthrie exchanged ideas in the studio, and discovered their age and birthsigns were the same, that they both had Protestant ministers for fathers, and they both weren't sure about what they were doing in the studio. Guthrie's band left him and after a try out as singer for The Mission, Hussey teamed up with the Scottish born Handley to complete the Naked Voice LP.

The Mission's Serpent Kiss turned rock into history and Guthrie's temporary disappearance scuppered plans of a more permanent tie up, but now, after some legal wrangling with The Mission's new label, Guthrie Handley's Where Was? is out and selling on Lambs To The Slaughter through Pinnacle. What's more, the temporarily withheld LP, Forgotten Frontier by Naked Voice, will be back on the racks before you can speak. So go hear it!

German People!

Der Plan release a new LP this week and to celebrate they've metamorphosed into strange squiggly lines and horned beasts. Must be the lager.

TAPE OF THE MONTH: Big Skin by Algebra Suicide

So, We Asked Crazyhead.

If Baby Turpentine Was A Cocktail What Would Be In It?

Bad Moonshine and Wicked Lady base, they blubbed (all drunk and stuff). How wimpy their mentor Andy 'Mr Big' Food grunted. It should have been...

- One bottle Thunderbird
 - Three measures Jim Beam
 - Two measures Benedictine
 - One measure blue Cacao
 - Half measure Sangria and Grenadine
- then just add a banana, cream and brown sugar and blend for 30 seconds. Add a dash of turpentine and garnish with half a limp salad sandwich, paper broly and plastic crocodile. Yum.

Taffy, caught in compromising position on larger than life chess set, revealed that her new fabbr single on Rhythm King, Step By Step, is not a cover version of the old Step by Step by someone else that always used to annoy everyone when it got played in scuzzy discos. So there.

Camera Frenzy

Spacemen Three avoid new Mirror snapper! Dennis 'Wildman' Healey was fired this week from a famous (?) newspaper after failing dismally to get a "scoop" semi-nude page five pic of Glass signings Spacemen Three. The Spacies new 45 (which plays at 33) has been making people go weird and Healey had been dispensed to the group's north London flat, but failed to get the pic after being subjected to repeated playings of the disc in question.

THOSE DAMN bleeding annoying Warhols from Sheff keep ringing up. We told them they were dead, but they wouldn't have any of it. Anyway, they claim they're recording a "live" LP and that they desire semi-porno polaroids from Ug readers for the cover. Can it be done? Is it art? And, what's going on in Finland? They have a great mag called Sisubeat (with pictures of ice and ships on the cover) in Finland, and the latest edition has a free cassette of Fin fodder for general punter perusal. Intriguing Oi, Oi, Oi meets 999 stuff that Arthur Negus might be keen on ('cept he's dead).

No bombs this month, but a riot of superglue and a mini-ransom note from some bods who claim to be the "righters of injustices" or something. Hmmmm, we told Ron 'The' not to write that review.

Still, good to see that SST are re-educating the world by making the vastness of their catalogue available to us Brits through Pinnacle... it seems that there'll be more than a few little gems to save for now, that might otherwise have been well outside of the pocket of your usual Underground personage. For example, Black Flag manic guitarist's Greg Ginn's other project, Gone, offer us the more tempered metallic onslaught of Gone II — But Never Too Gone and the late lamented Minutemen have a double album of live history in the shape of Ballot Result. It's a classic, a gem, and all that kind of thing. Other things looming on the SST horizon include... oh, I'll get back to all that in a minute, because our personal promo campaign of Fuzz 'Half A Haircut' Townshend continues this month with the news that his label, yes, Cake Records has a new record set to roll.

It's The Davidsons' version of Gal Glitter's I Didn't Know I Loved You Till I Saw You Rock 'n' Roll, and it's a scratching wow. Wow! News that Shend On The Run is to take up a directorship at Aston Villa have been denied, but rumours that his band's "cover" of R Dean Taylor's Ghost In My House had to be shelved after The Fall scored big with the tune, do seem to be true. Bastards, eh?

And so we get back to SST... they have threatened a glut of stuff from the remarkably paunchy Zoogz Rift, including the man's Idiots On The Miniature Golf Course, while other releases are from Dinosaur, Blast, Slovenly, Angst, Tar Babies, Blood On The Saddle and other such unsuitables. Houseband SWA have shed guitarists Sylvia Juncosa and Lawndale do Sasquatch Rock which looks like it comes with a whole string of Mexican cocktails or something like that... well, the titles are pretty weird... Last Train To Nowhere, Ambush, Hot Pink Bongos, all sounds like The Eagles, don't it?

fiction

As Bal Manilow said, before grieving over the demise of the wunnerful Sting-Rays, er, read 'em and weep . . . in Blackburn things are bland when people are forced to go to jazz-funk do's and write about them in the otherwise rather splendid Whatever Happened To? ish four. More to the point, the mag (just 30p plus a large sae from Bernie at 19, Bay Street, Blackburn, Lancs, BB1 5NJ) is really neat when dealing with Portsmouth's Red Letter Day, to the button when it asks The March Violets what they think of The Batfish Boys and around and about some good sounds when it concentrates on Meat Whiplash and The Scarecrows.

So, let's move on . . . to, well have you heard the one about The Lobster Telephone, the radical small piece publication that's in excess of ish 14. It has bad cartoons, a grim sense of humour and dodgy interviews with chaps like The Gaye Byke People On Acid, which mention buckets of cocaine, £2000 and lorry loads of "Dutch" lager. Ha, aha! Get the latest ish for a mere 10p plus a sae from the Dredd Ed, 5A Gregory Street, Lenton, Nottingham NG7 2LR. And try to decipher that lot (have fun too).

Wow! Part of the Happy End press kit that Cooking Vinyl are sending out to precede the group's record release is a Happy End beer mat. Wahooo! What'll they think of next? Michelle Shocked campfire lighters?

And how the world has turned around. The Smiths cover Cilla's Work Is A Four Letter Word on the flip of their new Girlfriend In A Coma single. What next, Morrissey presenting Blankety Blank? Or maybe not.

Still, 4AD look set to tangle with The Frazier Chorus who our own John Best will no doubt be enthusiastic about real soon. Besty would also like to point out to his many fans that he is not a spelling error of Jon 'Fat' Beast and he was also on holiday when the Jon 'Bionic' Beast feature was done.

Ruby Blue look likely to be daytime radio played by the time you read this and their debut LP on Red Flame will be with the world in September. The Cabs have their back catalogue plundered for a CD of their greatest singles. Also Rough Trade are still keeping quiet about the silver disc they should have earned for Nag, Nag, Nag. I say, let's petition them.

Vindaloo have returned from WEA and the wilderness of whatever with their first record for a year through the Cartel. So, the first platter will be by Port Vale regular Ted Chippington. So, er, yes . . . it's The Wanderer, you know, the old Dion runaround number. So, there you go . . .

AFTER the fact

Driller Killer Pop Murder

Kill Ugly Pop get mean and moody after one of their number was left shades-less after a thief raided their "pad" recently. Even more, controversial, the first in their series of butchered "classics" features a maniacal uptempo workout of Jimi Hendrix's Purple Haze (including a suitably demonic guitar solo) on Fever through Red Rhino. Future butchered gems are said to include Shirley Bassey's Goldfinger, Max Bygrave's Deck Of Cards and that dreadful Roger Whittaker and Des O'Connor whistle-a-thon that charted last year. Although we're not really sure about that last one.

A Marriage Made In Limehouse

Temple signings ZOSKIA and SUGARDOG team up

John Gosling, formerly of Psychic TV but now of Zoskia, in a vain attempt to form a volleyball team ended up . . . sorry, OK, ex-23 Skidoo person Fritz Haaman and his Sugardog teamsters commit their first vinyl ritual as half of Zoskia Meets Sugardog on the Temple release That's Heavy Baby. And you know what, it bloody well is. Firm but fair, though.

AAAAA
AAAAAARGHHHHH!

Wow, like hey, kings and queens of the souvenir cupboard, check this mother out? ● SONIC YOUTH, the group we all love to love, did a very SPECIAL LIMITED EDITION INTERVIEW DISC, that only a few mega gem Gods got their hands on. Better still, the Sisters of all things GOOD (or whatever), have AUTOGRAPHED TEN COPIES and wrapped them up (with their own hands) in spesh mega SONIC YOUTH SISTER POSTERS and left them pinned to DAVE HENDERSON'S BACK with a 17 INCH MACHETE. ● So, OK! Who wants one of these prime, blood stained, packages. Get to grips with the Sonic speech patterns by answering just one question and sending the answer on a postcard to Underground/Sonic Machete, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London, NW1. ● Go ahead . . . question . . . OK, which obscur(ish) German label did Sonic Youth have their Kill Yr Idols released on way back in the mists of time?

Voice over

Wales needs heroes!
Thomas The Voice oblige

Being from the valley's the Voice tend to wax lyrical in a particularly fluid way, so I wind up and . . .

"We're going against the grain of the current rough and ready rootsy folk revival. More hi-tech, more honest to folk tradition than the ad-mans vision of olde worlde countrified authenticity. Our position ranks alongside the organic development of people like Prince".

P-P-Prince?
"Folk music is about telling stories of the time in the ways of the time. By all means have an awareness of the culture you spring from, but the point is to do something with it other than trying to re-create pre-industrial Britain. That's a twee, idiotic ideal, like buying back the first bike you ever owned".

B-B-Bike? Pretty controversial!

Thomas The Voice's second single, Stone Cutter Boy, is on North West through Red Rhino and the Cartel. Ronnie Randall

Ex Soft Cell man Dave Ball (right) returns from the "mighty" producer's chair of many a past thing (plus sev guest appearances here and there) to introduce the world to his new band English Boy On The Love Ranch. Expect things soon on Temple.

Good mentions still abounding about The Grizzelders, but it does seem that they've split up, before the world could fully take in their, well, you know... Anyway, for dance bods (as we like to call them) the Castle Communications company is launching Blatant Records which will hit on the roots of def jam and all that stuff. First up is a double featuring primal Sugarhill material from Grandmaster Flash, Melle Mel, Troublefunk and more, so tune in.

Psychedelia is back! August 23 sees the recreation of the legendary Roundhouse Sunday afternoon psychedelic sessions with a supertent being erected in Finsbury Park for Acid Daze, a real experience, man! That's probably just as well seeing as they've pulled most of the old Roundhouse down. Anyway, headlining will be Hawkwind (yeeeeeheh), while the rest of the seven hour freak out will feature The Pink Fairies, Dr And The Medics, Gaye Bykers On Acid, Voodoo Child and Pop Will Eat Itself. Loon trousers are not necessary.

Dutch persons, The Ex are not content to release a new double on Ron Johnson this month, they also have a proper live cassette on Acid Rain Products for a paltry £1.50. Cheques for this should be made out to Lee Oliver and rushed to 50 Warndene Road, Brighton.

Meanwhile, the Let's Try Another Ideal Guest LP gets another added bit of promo with several gigs this week.

The Gimme Shelter tour calls in at Brighton Zap on July 27 with Talulah Gosh and The Househunters, and simultaneously (clever huh) it'll be at the Jangle club in Nottingham disguised as McCarthy and 1,000 Violins. Tuesday July 28, Brum Burberries welcomes James, Pigbros and Rumblefish while Bay 63 in London has Three Johns, Membranes and more.

Wednesday 29 in Norwich at the Cocker Club, Laugh and Cary Grant's Wedding wrestle with bingo, and on Thursday July 30, Newcastle Riverside has Chumbawamba while Laugh and the Talulahs team up in Manchester at the Boardwalk.

Saturday August 1, The Shop Assistants hit The Venue in Edinburgh while Manchester's Boardwalk offers Biting Tongues and The Passmore Sisters, and finally on Monday August 3, there'll be five short sets for Shelter at Glasgow Raffles by The Pastels, The Bandits, The Dragsters, The Vaselines and The Groovy Little Numbers.

Further to that, a mere week or so later the footie season starts and mucho respected soccer 'zines When Saturday Comes and Off The Ball will be available through Red Rhino and the Cartel.

The combo who sent Ug the bomb, Action Direct, sent us a letter which they "claim" came to them after they sent a similar thing

SUB culture

THE WAY IT FALLS

Next Big Thing 23 finds itself in a new seven inch square format with a cool record by Thee Roman Gods slung in for good measure. In what's just about Britain's longest running xerox and guts publication, Lindsay Hutton has developed the scribbled word into a little gem that acidic musicologists just shouldn't be seen without. ★ Punctuated with American corn ads and sexual cut-outs, there's humour plus wide ranging factual exposes on everyone from Splacats, Scuba Scuba Scuba, Angst, Tell Tale Hearts, Vertical Smile, loads of reviews, news, comment and, well, it's just a life's work every ish... so don't miss it, it's available through the Cartel and Fast Forward. Johnny Eager

Ah, the dreaded bring-back-dada collage. Holy Toy's throw-away literature which surfaced just after their brief flurry with the west, features a collection of sub-Soviet art bits to accompany their excellent Union LP Warszawa. Periodical size, it spawned a string of copyists, but the group, after signing to Sonet in the UK, disbanded and never reaped the rewards for their primal creativeness. Shame. Still they've recently returned with Pakt Of Fact (through Red Rhino). Ripley

SUICIDE BY NUMBERS

How many people sing about death and get away with it? Or should that be, how many people sing like death and get away with it? Anyhow, Algebra Suicide from the States are a little more than all this stuff and quite alarming and mind numbing at times too. • With numerous packages and compilation contributions already done, they can be found on a tape of their own, the well presented Big Skin on Cause And Effect (Box 30383, Indeanapolis, IN 46230, USA), which is well worth investigation. Ripley

Belgian label Antler think of everything. The first 1,000 copies of their recently biand 12 inch from Save Sex has a free OrthoShield with instructions on what to do with it. So, after melting down the record, please refer to diagram... Ripley

Directions for use:

- the condom has to be put on before the seminal discharge;
- the condom has to be removed after the sexual intercourse, it cannot be preserved for a second use;
- at each sexual intercourse a new condom has to be used.

SAVE SEX IS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR INFANTIL ACTIVITIES!!!

LIVE DEPARTURE OF THE MONTH: Big Black double header in March >

WEIRD SHIT!

Yeah, no scam, man! Vagina Dentata Organ, who brought you the sound of Jim Jones' religious suicide plus some sexual wolf-barking in the past, is back. Their new pic disc (previous releases have sold for lots and featured things like human blood) is dubbed Sex Stars One And Two and revolves in a noisy blur all its own. Strange and a snip at ten quid from WSNS, Box 116, London, N19 SD2. Ripley massive album collage and art threat

Psychic TV fans have been slavishly saving the tabs from their Live series of LPs to create the sleeve (or something like that) for the 23rd release in the set. Pretty weird, odd and strange anyway. Well, to confuse things, Sub-Culture fans, we're printing one of the most recent ones here. Pretty corrupt eh? Triv Tel

KEEP THIS VOUCHER
for it is a fragment of their tenth sleeve

The only way to obtain record N 10 in this series is to send in a complete set of nine tabs from these vouchers to: BM, TOPY, London WC1 3XX.

to the Chrysalis A&R dept. The letter intoned that the chaps there "refused to listen to the tape as it was sent with what looked like a bomb, and didn't the group know that things like that were illegal?"

John Rivers who produced everyone from Love And Rockets to Mighty Mighty, Jimmy Jimmy, Felt Felt, Jazz Butcher, The Loft, The Pastels and some other people, has written to tell us that he didn't produce the new Glass LP by In Embrace even though he did. Claims that the thing was cut from the wrong mix, from a cassette, from whatever about... we tried to contact the label, the would-be-producer, but, well, let's just say our noos dept isn't in the Moonlighting league yet.

Save Sex from Belgium have a free Ortho-Shield with a limited supply of their new Don't Do A Thing single, while back in the UK, Rain Tapes have The Unknown 4, a compilation for £1.75 with words, text, pix and music from the likes of Playground, Venus Fly Trap, Red Harvest, Vicious Circle, Cheek To Cheek, Catapult, Every New Dead Ghost and a whole lot more on a chrome C90 from Julian Smyth, Brynhyfyd School House, Ruthin, Clwyd LL 15 1AA, North Wales.

To coincide with the latest Doors' revival, including WEA's release of the Hollywood Bowl tapes, vid and how's your father, Bobcat Books have re-printed John Tobler and Andrew Doe's interesting, but rather uncatchingly titled, The Doors.

Mags about, er, newer groups come in all shapes and sizes, for example, John Coltrane Stereo News (£1.50 from Bent Sorenson, Nibevej 366, 9200 Aalborg SV, Denmark) concentrates, as you might imagine, on The Dream Syndicate and their offshoot projects. Interesting... but for dreamers only really. Similarly for Coil aficionados, there's a high quality mag with colour cover and everything you've every dreamt that you might need to know about Coil. It's a mere two quid including post etc from M Gaffney, 20 Everton Drive, Stanmore, Middx HA7 1ED.

9 UNDERGROUND

EYEBALL IN A FREAK OUT NATURE

The Residents have a new vid available. It's, er, weird...

The Residents' Video Voodoo should be on the racks and in the stores by the time you caress this page. A healthy set of films of eight tunes, it follows those blinking eyeballs through a whole new world of strange things, in graphic terms, as glove puppets, in dadaesque Klu Klux Klan garb for Third Reich And Roll, and as directors for a tale of sexual perversion (or something like that) on Renaldo And The Loaf's Songs For Swinging Larvae. This is a groove city tape, ideal for late night brain numbing. Inhale. Ripley

AC TEMPLE
Songs Of Praise

Further FU 1 RTG ●● 1/4 Five piece, currently based in Sheffield, with a mini album of action painting in noise and tune to launch this new hand-in-pocket partner of Blast First (in the RTA empire). It's a difficult earful at first too, the wavering wobble between mystery and suspense, bad pop nightmares and slothfulness, almost self-indulgence, making the AC's prime targets for confusion. But stick with it, and stick it on again.

AC Temple are far better than they might at first suggest. They throb some, they bang their hands till they bleed, they make damn fine songs and make adrenalin pump and hearts beat. It was an ordeal but I think I pretty much like them. Dave Henderson

THE APOSTLES
Equinox Screams

Andy Brant Inc. No. 1 (£4.50 from Box 4, 136 Kingsland High Street, Hackney, London E8) ●● Plenty of anarchic, free-form sounds, swear words and Yank preachers, plus some truly degenerate noisy bits. The Apostles respect men like Aleister Crowley, Genesis P. Orridge and Charlie Manson; as in There Is No God But Man, Subhuman and Eyes Of A Dreamer. Safe pop to dance to it is most certainly not. Closer to Psychic TV and insanity than some might feel comfortable about, it's worth checking out despite some naff bits splashed here and there. Daz Igmeth

BALHAM ALLIGATORS
Balham Alligators

Special Delivery SPD 1002 P ●● Aaah, Balham! Gateway to the South. Alternatively, have you heard the one about the Scotsman, the Irishman, the Welshman, and the two Englishmen? Well, they're a crack team of cajun, R&B and zydeco musicians whose name appears more regularly in London's gig listings than anyone else I can think of. Accordionist Geraint Watkins is perhaps their best-known member, having gigged with Dave Edmunds and other such luminaries. This is a cracking little record, especially Malheureuse, Tennessee Blues, which had me blubbing into my Tequila, and a hilarious Los Lobos parody, aptly named Tacos. Karen Kent

BEAUTIFUL PEA GREEN BOAT
Obsessions

Third Mind TMLP 20/MSR 1 RTG ●●● Just about my album of the year, but then what do I know? Mirror Of Souls is a screaming soundstorm of vibrating noise that somehow manages to retain its melodic beauty in the face of enemy fire. You can't totally dismiss the Cocteau Twins from the mind, and the English male/female duo do reside in Edinburgh, but their synth-rhythm-sound is intense and individual enough to be seen as a new force for the under 40s. New age music for transporter lounges. Ronnie Randall

BHUNDU BOYS
Tsvimbodzemoto

Discafrique AFRILP 03 Re G ●● The Bhundu's follow up to the independent chart regular, Shabini, with Tsvimbodzemoto which looks set to further enhance their reputation while introducing their distinctive "shed" sound to an African-music-hungry generation built of past Simonites and cultural renegades.

Upbeat and frantic with just a hint of technological sparkle, the Bhundu's sound is enhanced further when the vocals are allowed the kind of edge that Culture — circa '77 — attained. A totally different time and music here, but equally as moving and potently summer-happy. Dave Henderson

BIFF BANG POW!

Oblivion

Creation CRELP 020 RTG ●● Biff! Bang! Pow! Alan 'Creation' McGhee's with-a-little-help-from-my-friends project are certainly bashing out the big black discs these days. Can the nation take it, we ask? Oblivion is no watershed or huge diversion but just carries on McGhee's 60s-fixation — ba-baa's, chimes, zings, peals, studied innocence and lots and lots of blue-pilled love and romance — that mostly draws on psychedelia, mod and Merseybeat dreams. Martin Aston

BIG BLACK

Second Of Impact

Walls Have Ears WHE 002 RTS ●●● Fifty minutes of bitchin' rattlesnake brilliance. Produced in a limited edition of 2000, the "official bootleg" from Big Black captures the highlights of two of last years U.S. shows. New material rubs shoulders with old faves Kerosene and Passing Complexion. An awesome nauseous rendition of Jordan, Minnesota is not a comfortable experience. Steve Albini is as sharp a social commentator as has come from across the Atlantic, his 'Training programme for Social Retards' in the last issue of Forced Exposure was funny as hell. So are his between song rants and put downs. "You can't breathe? You should feel lucky there are some people that can't see! A asshole." Vachel Booth

BIM SKALA BIM

Bim Skala Bim

Fonograf Records BSB 001 (41 Boston St, Sommerville MA 02143, USA) ●● Yet more new ska from the US! First time I've heard of this lot, but I'm sure it won't be the last. Musically akin to early Beat and lyrically similar to Bad Manners, check out Jah Laundromat for proof. Bim Skala Bim are apparently packing them into the clubs in Massachusetts, and with a major deaf imminent, look set to repeat that feat nationwide. Now, where did I put that pork pie hat? Mark Brennan

BLURT

Smoke Time

Toeblock Records TBLP 4.00307 JJJ ●● Now, while I can't honestly claim to have ever found paradise in Ted Milton and Blurt, it has to be said that he can blow a wild sax on occasions, and while his work never consists of any of yer actual singalong terrace anthems, it's always interesting to listen to. Difficult shapes, crazy rhythms, hoarse vocals, it's often frenetic stuff. Noise annoys, but not this time. More power to your elbow, Ted. Alex Bastedo

THE BOMB PARTY

The Last Supper

Abstract Records ABT 016 P ●● 1/2 Dunka, Dunka! Let's get philosophical! Nope — we're the Bomb Party, boy, so cut loose and rock yer nuts off — or else!

If brainless, barnstormin' rockin' is to your taste, then look this one up: five new tracks and all the material from the Raygun, New Messiah and Life's A Bitch singles. Fourteen cuts of prime gravelly vocals nailed on to the cross of rock 'n' roll and filthy alcohol-enriched bass, drums and guitar. This is not one to be played quietly in the background; dials set at maximum will only do. Daz Igmeth

BRAD IS SEX

Gentlemen, Start Your Sheep

Bam Caruso MARI 074 Re G ●● It's amazing what they can do with science these days. This man used to be a Tortilla Flat, now he's an all rounder quarter pounder, with Tracey Voice Of The Beehive in tow on one take, on a half album/half megamix weird-out. The longer, more esoteric, eccentric piece on the flip is impressive, but it's the top cover of Black Magic Woman that's the hypnotic, trump. Neat LP. TC Wall

STEVEN BROWN

Searching For Contact

Play It Again Sam Records BIAS 55 RP G ●● An aural equivalent of Jean Genet or William Burroughs (that's aural), this album is a travelogue through the seedy European underworld that continues to fascinate Steven Brown. Sax, clarinet, synths, piano and spoken voice are just a few of the ingredients that go towards creating a sleazy atmosphere for this expatriate American to relay his narrative tales of drink, drugs and debauchery.

As his earlier solo records might suggest, it's a lot more minimal than his outings with Tuxedo Moon, but no less enjoyable for all that. Alex Bastedo

BREAK AND FINGER UG!

EUGENE CHADBOURNE

Vermin Of The Blues

Fundamental SAVE 18 RR C ●●¼ More madcap frivolity from ex-Shockabilly Euge. Backed by Evan Johns And The H-Bombs, Mr Chadbourne reveals that Buddy Holly Is A Communist and offers a burning version of the Johnny Cash hit Ring Of Fire. Plenty of laughs, as ever, on a fine album liberally sprinkled with wit and some eminently hummable tunes. Dave Henderson

THE CHADBOURNES IN AMERICA

LSDC&W

Fundamental SAVE 19/20 ●½ A double from Eugene with family in tow and some pretty well-wired versions of Beatles, Burl Ives and Roger Miller tunes among others. Taking it seriously, this album asks the age old question, just how many more braniac LPs can the former Shockabilly person get away with? Also, who buys this shit?

On a lighter note, it is funny, manic, maniacal, dodgy and totally out to lunch. Enjoyable for a few plays at least, is there more to life than this? And do we need a double album's worth? Heavy trippin' Euge . . . Johnny Eager

CHAIN GANG

Mondo Manhattan

Lost TTL 87109 RTS ●●¼ As they tell it, Chain Gang were formed during the massive manhunt for the Son Of Sam killer, using the 30 grand reward money to wax their vigilante bounty-hunter classic Son Of Sam. Chain Gang have apparently brought their "Taxidriver lifestyle" to the screen for Mondo Manhattan, to which this is the soundtrack. Scratchy, gutter-garage punk scrapings and hard-edged, electronic dance is fused to dissonant No Wave guitars and New York rap-dance, interjected with voice-over commentaries while politically, at a guess, Chain Gang hang out on the same left-wing patch as the Dead Kennedys. A blurred, exhausting, often challenging sound, Chain Gang are real ghetto blasters, documenting the mixed-race Bowery streets, physically and emotionally honed to feverish pitch. Martin Aston

BOOZOO CHAVIS

Paper In My Shoe

Ace CHD 214 P ●● I have cherished the name Boozoo Chavis ever since first hearing his 1954 zydeco recording Forty One Days on the Mike Leadbitter compilation double album Nothing But The Blues on CBS in the early '70s and until the release of this album it was also my sole acquaintance with the man as well. Which is hardly surprising really, considering Boozoo Chavis recorded a mere three singles in 30 years playing dances around the Lake Charles area in Louisiana and only recently realised the opportunity to record this present set. There is nothing new here quite as raw as Forty One Days, nor is the song included, though another of his regional hits from the '50s, Paper In My Shoe, is reworked. Evelyn Court

THE CHESTERFIELDS

Kettle

Subway Organisation SUBORG 3 RC ●●● The Chesterfields are an outfit who looked like they'd come dangerously close to extinction last year. Glimmering and shaking on a dodgy seabed of jangle-frenzied haircuts, it can't have been easy to aspire to the "grooviness" of A&R respectability, independent chart success and 'I told you so' firmness.

Kettle is merely a brilliant collection of songs — spiked with a million melodies, riddled with rhyme and reason — bustling through a supermarket queue of low excitement to a pinnacle of post-jangle hysteria. This is the "great pop LP", a mammoth listen and vital for any slim chance of a summer this year. Johnny Eager

THE CLAIM

Armstrong's Revenge

Trick Bag 0387 RR C ●7/8 The Claim's second stab at popular notoriety comes in this set of 12 plays-for-today set in jangle and squidgey keyboards by their own fair hands. There is light and dark here, story telling of magnificent proportions from a band who sound like what-The-Milkshakes-should-have-become-when-they-got-out-of-their-leathers. They also have the potential to succeed in the song writing swamp of their choice in the fullness of time. Dave Henderson

DEAD CAN DANCE

Within The Realm Of A Dying Sun

4.A.D. CAD 705 RT C ●●●● It's been a long 18 months since we last heard from Lisa Gerrard and Brendan Perry but, oh me, the wait was worthwhile; this will carry you away to places ethereal, moody, chilling, angelic, ghostly, sombre and most of all deliciously beautiful in its entirety. Have your spine tingled and caressed by the dark sparkle of Lis's soaring voice. Feel your brain immersed in the dulcet flow of Brendan's perceptive words. Let your body float in the enriching fluid sounds of sleep-like death, like the release of an un-selfconscious dance, and listen closely.

Dead Can Dance's musical style and wide eyed beauty (meaning that which delights eye, ear and mind) is one of those rare things actually attractive enough to fall in love with. Succumb to the fatal charm. Daz Igy Meth

DEAD KENNEDYS

Give Me Convenience Or Give Me Death

Alternative Tentacles VIRUS 57 RT C ●●½ A massive 17 track monstrosity to bid farewell to America's most bolshy sons. The Dead Kennedys' hits, tormented pleas and embittered prose are laid end to end on this career collection that revs and splutters with some real gasoline gargling aggression. And, in this context, the true width of the Kennedys' sound and their potential for explosive noise can be heard in all its glory.

For beyond the valley of pogo-ing thrash and happy slam-dancers, these men had tunes, melodies and the constant desire to cough up what really mattered. Mega-good . . . but we should all know this by now. Dave Henderson

DEATH

Scream Bloody Gore

Under One Flag Flag 12 P ●● This was thrash rock at its fastest and most furious, until I discovered I was playing it at 45 instead of 33. Still, it sounded just as frantic either way. Bloody hell, there's no slowing this stinking monstrosity down as black putrid smoke rises from the grooves.

From Florida via LA, Chuck Schuldiner looks such a sweet, fresh faced, orange juice-bred boy. He must have been cavorting with Linda Blair's best mate from The Exorcist to gain such a deep, puke-perverted voice. Regurgitated Guts, Baptized In Blood, Infernal Death, yes all those subtle tunes we've come to know and love. Very, er...intense. Ronnie Randall

THE SWEET UG OF SUCCESS from previous page

DUMPTRUCK

Positively Dumptruck

Big Time ZL 71272 ●● An alluring full colour photo-freak sleeve drags you in, the reverse check-shirt/guitar-band-live-shot gives you second thoughts, but the vinyl? Now, hey! Without sounding like Dream Syndicate, REM, The Silos et al, Dumptruck give off that initial odour of Americana, a bottle of booze (half empty), and a temporarily pickled heart. Pop, melodies and style all in attendance. Great. Dave Henderson

EINSTURZENDE NEUBAUTEN

Fuenf Auf Der Nach Oben Offenen Richterskala

Some Bizzare ●●½ 'Five On The Open-Ended Richter Scale' is the title which really does have something to do with Collapsing New Buildings. Funnily enough, there is less dissonant, shuddering earthquake-angst and noise to Neubauten's fourth album, and more of what can be called conventional melody. The opening Zerstorte Zelle is a grindingly slow chamber ballad, wracked by strings (a synth?) while Tim Rose's Morning Dew is a gripping, fated ballad with slide guitar, sung by Blixa Bargeld as if he was postively eaten away by the song.

Neubauten haven't lost their aim or intention — objects are still pushed into reproducing sound in manifest ways, rhythms hissing and steaming behind Blixa's gutted groan. Haunted, but not the demolition people might be expecting. Martin Aston

EL ULTIMO DE LA FILA

Quando La Pobreza Entra Por La Puerta, El Amore Salta Por La Ventura

PDI (Evaristo Arnus, 64.08014, Barcelona, Spain) ●●½ "When poverty comes to town, loves goes out the window" is what they (Last In The Queue, that is) mean. Barcelona's El Ultimo are Spain's first concrete sign of musical autonomy, away from Western influence of the Mediterranean MOR-ballad form. There's little precedent for this uncanny rhythmic urge: flamenco and Moorish (read: North African/Moroccan/Arabic) accents colour a booming pop ingenuity that can border from a Police-style dexterity to an REM mystique, but essentially doesn't conform to any stereotype. With gypsy blood, a social conscience and a sleeve quote from Dylan Thomas, El Ultimo sound armed, possessed and ready — one of 1987's more unqualified surprises. Martin Aston

RANDY ERWIN

'TIL The Cows Come Home

Heartland HLDLM 001 Re C ●● Mid-priced mini album from Heartland, Zippo's new country label, Randy Erwin's UK debut re-introduces the tender art of yodelling to the world as it steps into full gear with minimal accompaniment but more than a keen sense of song in its heart. Randy will be over touring later in the year and should kick up some press action with his cover of Frank Ifield's Lovesick Blues. Wah! Wogan here we come. Johnny Eager

THE EX

Too Many Cowboys

Ron Johnson ZRON 25 NM C ●¾ More from The Ex in the politico guitar fuzzed harranguing office, and some mean diatribes let free to the right the collective wrongs the world over. Resplendent with a mega-huge newspaper style periodical in which the tunes are given typographical cudors, Too Many Cowboys is a dream that you can pin on your wall and live up to, too. A mere 20 tracks on show and a grinding, spell-binding version of sound and its kindred spirit make for the right stuff and an extremely volatile album. Raunchy and a million miles from the caustic rock dream of our forebearers, long live The Ex. Now, listen in! Dave Henderson

FELT

Poem Of The River

Creation CRELP 018 RT C ●●½ You get the feeling Lawrence will never, ever, ever, ever be happy. "I will be the first in history to die of boredom" is one hell of a way to open a new mini-album but Felt manage to maintain the morose and glum tone throughout. But, Poem's musical glories remain undefeated; the keyboard and guitar pattern that elevate the extended She Lives By The Castle and Riding On The Equator respectively are rich, mature tapestries that hark back to earlier Felt watercolours off their first two albums. Lawrence really sounds like a melancholic, middle-aged singer-songwriter — Tim Hardin, Bob Dylan, take your pick — and it works. He's let got of the pop-at-all-costs ideal and simply reflected what he feels. But take heart, Lawrence, this is a wonderful record. Martin Aston

HORACE FERGUSON

Sensi Addict

Ujama UJLP-001 (Reggae Quarterly, 10 Walmer Road, #1501 Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5R 2W4) ●● It has taken some while for Horace Ferguson to follow up his sizeable reggae hit of a few years back with an album of the same title but the wait has not been without its reward. Nor does his acknowledged dependence appear to have impaired his voice in any way during the interim. Horace Ferguson is in the same vocal mould as namesake Horace Andy and like him employs an endearing quavering vocal and air of injured innocence to convey his message, while the minimal digital accompaniment here further enhances the singer's clarity of expression. In addition to the memorable title track there is his castigation of chemically induced states of being on Tranquilizer and a glimpse into the arcane art of voodoo for Gazuma. Most intriguing of all is the gospel departure of Great Stone where Horace outreaches himself in terms of intensity for a moving performance. Evelyn Court

FLUID WAFFLE

Fluid Waffle

Amok mLP509 (Box 7309, Vanier Terminal, Ottawa, Ontario K1L 8E4, Canada) ●●● These people are real good. Again the inner song is detached from the inner ear, chords are interplayed but all still keeps rolling along with a mutantly tuneful fascination. Fluid Waffle are from Ottawa and one of the brightest things this month. Six tunes, just, raring to break even further into the psyche. Don't miss this one if you can help it. TC Wall

THE FUGS

Star Peace

New Rose ROSE 115 P ●½ The stalwarts of anti-gov rhetoric return on this double LP, rock opera concept, written by head Fug Ed Sanders. A play on words set to music where a lot of the jokes are too highbrow, and the music remains mainly undeveloped — this is for converted reefer kids and of little bonus value to CND. Enjoyable for a few plays but it wears pretty thin after a while. Now, maybe if Laurie Anderson had been brought up 20 years ago . . . Dave Henderson

G.B.H.

No Need To Panic

Rough Justice JUST 7 P ●● Some say that the only difference between thrash metal and thrash punk is a haircut and the names on the back of scruffy leather jackets. Wrong! Lyrical content, when audible, is also a major factor.

G.B.H. don't sing about devils with unpronounceable names, or women with insatiable desires that only they can satisfy, it's the rough 'n' ready world of getting nicked on tour (Hit The Deck) or visions of future holocaust (Rumbllin' Underground) that this lot are concerned with.

They might not be as musically competent as Metallica or Megadeth, but their attitude is a lot healthier than the likes of Venom or Bathory. A sense of humour and a sense of honesty are the driving forces of this L.P. and for these reasons alone the rest of the thrash world should have plenty of cause to panic. Mark Brennan

GLORIOUS DIN

Closely Watched Trains

Insight (Box 5599, San Francisco, CA 94101, USA) ●●½ What a name! With a moniker like Glorious Din this group just had to be snatched and thrown record deck-wards, and some treat it turned out to be too. Not the innocuous blast of bitter atonal nonsense one might at first suspect, but a gently strummed collection of songs that's almost folksy in a Dylan-styled sub-drone of a score. What's more, there's even an embittered vocal edge and a neat tuneful bit of guitar riffing (purely picked, not powerchord) behind that faltering, hesitant, affected vocabulary. Glorious Din fall convincingly above the rest of America's paling sludge and make a fine LP. Don't miss. Dave Henderson

PETER GORDON

Otello-Falso Movimento

ROIR Tapes A-150 RR C ●● A colossal effort, a, a, a, well, you remember when Malcolm McLaren tried, superficially, to tie opera and dance together, well Peter Gordon has taken it all a step or two further. Here, on Otello, the first and last fiery moments of Verdi's explosive music is punctuated with Gordon's more courageous modern day interpretations. The stories are twisted, the sounds are transformed . . . the results are transfixing. Excellent stuff. Dave Henderson

HEAD

A Snog On The Rocks

Demon Records Fiend 95 P ●●● Like all Bristol strains of modern music there are the obligatory Rip, Rig and Pig connections. And thus, as surely as day leads to night, you can expect a bundle of brass-spiked rhythms to form the backbone to Head's harsh, funky meanderings. It's music to impress your friends with as phoney Americana jumps into bed with a Soho bohemia soaked in hip nightclub ethics.

Head have bitten into endless musical genres, toying with cut-ups and samples along the way, as they rip and plunder. Country pop, naff folk and rabid R&B are trashed as forced humour and empty emotion run riot.

Head should leave me cold, they are posey and pretentious. And yet... and yet the resultant whole is a pulsating masterpiece. Ronnie Randall

THE JAZZ BUTCHER

Big Questions (The Gift of Music Volume 2)

Glass GLALP 023 RM C ●●½ The Jazz Butcher's parting shot before leaving Glass for pastures new is this second, deluxe selection of past singles and their b-sides, the first having been issued a couple of years back. Containing full length versions of classics like The Human Jungle and Hard, alongside more eccentric fare like the fabulous Groovin' In The Bus Lane and the even more bizarre tribute to Peter Lorre, simply titled Peter Lorre, it fairly covers the wide range of subjects and styles that he manages to encompass from simply acoustic ditties to full blown epics. The big question is, dare you give the gift of music when it's as fab 'n' groovy as this? Dick Mescal

THE JOHNSON MOUNTAIN BOYS

Let The Whole World Talk

Rounder Europa/Demon REU 1017 R ●●● This is bluegrass so traditional that it's hard to know if it's serious or not, especially since the cover pic shows the five squeaky clean lads in mushroom coloured suits worthy of Kevin Keegan. But give them the benefit of the doubt; they know what they're doing.

There's a fair old fiddle in here, particularly on Maury River Blues, written by "rock steady mandolin player" (it says here) David McLaughlin. And though the subtle blend of country, cajun, Celt, gospel and folk can sometimes seem hard to swallow, the Mountain Boys help it down with a sweet (but not sickly) dollop of hometown harmonies and some banjo playing extraordinaire.

Peak enjoyment! Carole Linfield

THE KREWEN

Sweet Dreams

Lost Moments LMLP 020 R ●● Psychobilly with a bit more bottle than most of their rivals. Kicks off with a topical spaghetti westernesque Warpath, which sets the breakneck pace for the rest of the album, in the true Meteors tradition. The needle finds itself racing to get to the end of each track before the song finishes. I've nothing against their own songs, of which there are nine, but the track I enjoyed most was the closing one, a live rendition of Shout/Knees Up Mother Brown which had me whipped into a bit of a frenzy. Snakey G

THE LIME SPIDERS

The Cave Comes Alive

Zinger VOZ 2006 R ●● Cooled down acid rock that revolves around the crazily insane guitar explosions of Spider Gerard Corben and the cranked-up intensity of this liquid light Aussie combo. Dirty downhome garage music that's been refined and produced into an orchestrated nightmare, like a poop version of The Cramps or a Love meets The Byrds in a 48 track studio, with more than a hint of a chequebook showing. Some great tracks here, y'hear? Johnny Eager

THE LUCY SHOW

Mania

Big Time LC8278 ●● Presumably the title refers to The Lucy Show's obsessive desire and inclination towards replicating '60s nostalgia and not to the content of the album. Though dangerously close to mediocrity on some of the less inspired tracks, Mania is generally an uninterrupted sequence of soothing sounds, richly enhanced by the careful use of acoustic guitars, the sweetest voices and drums which compliment, and never shadow, its sensitive outlook.

Another in the series of seasonal beatings given to the Beatles' rug gives this unhealthy homage to reminiscence a somewhat secondary significance but this is more than compensated for by the honeyed beauty of such songs as Sad September and A Million Things, while New Message is certain to titillate even the most discerning pop palate. Alex Kadis

MAKIN' TIME

Time And Trouble Money

Re-Elect The President Reagan 1 R C ●● Along with The Prisoners, this mob knew how to excite an audience. With a mixture of original material and well chosen sing along '60s anthems, such as Boom Boom and I've Got My Mojo Working, they were first class. So it seems fitting then that as they've now disbanded, a recording of them live is made available as an epiphaph. Recorded at the 100 Club, an historic venue in the annals of mod, it has a surprisingly clear and full sound, unusual for records of its ilk. A live album to be proud of. Snakey G

THE MEMBRANES

The Virgin Mary Versus Peter Sellers

Vinyl Drip DRIP 001 R ●● A mixed up, screwed up, collection of out-takes, re-recordings, and all that jive from Blackpool's fave sons. Their hard to find and obscure back catalogue — before they trod the boards through In Tape, Glass, Creation and Homestead — gets an airing and displays that they've been confused and creative since birth. Included are early Rondelet sides, flexi cuts and the tracks from the Blackpool Rox EP. Like heritage, man! Dave Henderson

MILKSHAKES/PRISONERS

Thee Milkshakes vs The Prisoners

Media Bun MB17 RR C ●●● Recorded live in a studio back in '84, with an invited drunken rabble of an audience. This is the long lost gem which once made it to white label for the doomed Shake-Up label — copies of those now sell at £30 plus. A definite must for those who enjoyed these bands' chaotic and sweaty live shows, with your record player cranked up and a beer in your hand it's just like being back at the Hope And Anchor or MIC Club. Deke Wanger

THE MILKSHAKES

The Milkshakes Revenge

Hangman HANG 1 UP RR C ● The "missing" ninth Milkshakes LP sounds like all the others and forwards the question, if they were so keen on living out their cavern-like existence, were happy to atone to that sound and look, are they anything more than an underground pub band?

Spotty beer sodden pop recorded in an airing cupboard. Some might suggest that the group were talented enough to develop their songwriting process, others may say they never wanted to, do we need another album of evidence though? Johnny Eager

MINT ADDICTS

Naked Eyes

Constrictor CON 00019 RR C ●●● This album is really, really hot. A German band that sing in English and play with the kind of inventiveness, sensitivity, and drive that's not been heard for some time. Lodged within their driving, all consuming and invigorating, songs, Mint Addicts sprinkle more than a dab of potent ingredient X. It's that little extra something that elevates them to those great heights, and it's because that it's only the Ad's who know the formula that they can always quirkily keep one step ahead. This is a fantastic album. Grab it. Dave Henderson

THE MIRACLE LEGION

Surprise, Surprise, Surprise

Rough Trade ROUGH 112 RR C ●● Second UK LP for The Miracle Legion who've undergone a small line up change since their Making Waves mini LP In Your Backyard. What's more, their distinctive sound has travelled further from their Athens, Georgia roots to become a distinctive symphony dressed in guitar and heartfelt vocal patterns. Punctuated with your standard rock phrasing, the Legion are now harder campaigners, champing at the bit and with more than their share of potential radio action expected. Surprise is still only part of the way along the road, but well worth your funds. TC Wall

MOMUS

The Poison Boyfriend

Creation Records CRE LP 021 RR C ●● Momus' words recall the beatnik '60s drawl of a Tom Waits character who spends his time nurturing a studied, and quite authentic, left bank street ethic. The faithful acoustic guitar is now married to some fairly downbeat arrangements and a variety of other instruments, but his voice, combined with the verve of the lyrical content, ensure an attractive end result.

Observing Momus' progression on record since '85 hints at a just-recognisable commercial awareness. On one track, Situation Comedy Blues, he busts loose and almost sounds like a pop group. Strange, I thought I was listening to 10cc for a moment. Julian Henry

MOVING HEARTS

The Storm

Tara Records 3014 R ●●● Instrumental Irish band, which avoids the quirkiness of the genre by sticking to a fluid, genteel approach. So, there's no Lick The Tins gaeity, nor quite the esoterics of Clannad, but this is gloriously melancholic, rather wistful and very classy.

Anyone care to come and watch the sunrise? Carole Linfield

MRS GREEN

Mrs Green

Beserkley BZ1001 ●●● This is the first release on Beserkley ("Home Of The Hits") for some six years, so it's good to see they've picked a good 'un.

Mrs Green, three West Coast lads, have cast up an eloquent debut, and are apparently causing quite a stir back in hometown San Francisco. They excel in what seems to be a new breed of West Coast melody, and have subsequently already been lumbered with comparisons to The Byrds. But that's only part of the truth, since although this relies on real tunes (and even the odd harmonica) it somehow evokes a new '80s realism.

Ones to watch. Carole Linfield

RIPCORD

Defiance Of Power

Manic Ears Records ACE 5 RC ●¾ "New Death Total Thrashers" is how Manic Ears describe Ripcord, though in the shredding light of The Stupids, everything Brit-wise sounds lacking. Ripcord certainly thrash fast, spinning through a battery of impulses and protests — Drugshit, Vivisection-Tortura Innessaria, Abuse and Ignorant pretty much sum up their howl of dismay — but the production cuts back the musical venom instead of catapulting it forward. Martin Aston

RUSSIAN MEATSQUATS

Let's Hang Out

Whoopsie Kerplonk RM 001 RTS ●½ For the name alone, Russian Meatsquats should be godlike but some dupe behind the recording desk must have been listening to The Carpenters or something before completing his stint. The Meatsquats can play a dense, blurred hardcore, that never hangs around too long (the longest track of ten is one-minute-forty), but they never get much of a chance because the production is so horizontal. Everything, especially the vocals, slips off the turntable. Martin Aston

SPAHN RANCH

Thickly Settled

Insight Records (Box 5599, San Francisco, C 94101, USA) ●● Spahn Ranch and the Manson family murders connection might suggest some kind of watered down death-head, post-industrial grunge, but this Californian group reach far deeper than those stagnant waters. Spahn Ranch in this context are all consuming, trickling and flowing in a wash of tones that bubble and pop in your ears. Their music is soft and luxurious, shining through with intense charm, glowing with thickly structured sounds and beating with an intense unique structure. One of the best albums so far this year (as pundits are prone to say), but you check it and you will be impressed. Dave Henderson

THE SECT

The Voice Of Reason

Razor RAZ 27 ●¼ Splashed out squeaky guitar pop from The Sect, who seem in a desperate rush to rid themselves of their message. For all its flaws, The Voice Of Reason, although brimming with good intent and familiar diatribes, is a raucous noise that's keen to splash all over. Nothing unique or innovative here, just stylishly executed late punk with a hint of angst. Johnny Eager

YASUAKI SHIMUZU

Music For Commercials

Crammed Discs HTM 12 C ●½ Number 12 in Crammed's wondrous Made To Measure series, this could have turned out like Tomita's primeval moog ditherings, or an oriental revision of Tubular Bells, but Shimuzu rescues the day with gorgeous, intersecting rhythm patches under an umbrella of sweet Far Eastern samples. Shimuzu will probably be criticised for new age leanings, such is the smoothness of sound, but his fusion of Latin-European music and an expert understanding of the swing in rhythm (Shimuzu is actually a top saxophonist in Japan) is too organic, too playfully eclectic. These 24 snippets really were music for Japanese ads — whatever the product, with this seductive curtain behind it, I bet it sold. Martin Aston

SHOCK THERAPY

Shock Therapy

Fundamental HOLY 003 RR C ●¼ Six track mini album from Detroit-based combo whose fuzzy guitar shakes a blistered finger at the pimply brow of democracy. With a few electronic pulses thrown in to gain momentum, the Shocks have a distinctly post-apocalyptic minimalist Cabs sound that's a little more rocky than most. Intriguing and a good chance of developing into something even louder in the nearness of time. Dave Henderson

SIXTH COMM

Content With Blood

Eyas Media EYAS 002 RR C ●¾ Ex Death In June person, Patrick O'Kill picks up the pieces and develops a new sound that verges on mass acceptance (in a purely gothic popist manner) and operatic minimalism. Somewhere between, Sixth Comm dodder about and make art into music and then, hopefully, into cash... all at the drop of an eyelid. This is emotional fodder that suggests something's happening, but doesn't quite, as yet, go all the way. However, make no bones, there's sure to be plenty more on the way. TC Wall

THE SKELETONS

Rockin' Bones

Next Big Thing NBT 3301 RT C ●● Strange brand of late '70s-through-to-'86 surf pop that's grown through a handful of influences and styles into quite a formidable genre itself. The Skeletons have been touted here and there and mentioned in Lindsay Hutton's Next Big Thing mag for yonks. Finally, through the mag and man himself, they launch the Next Big Thing label. An ideal place to start, too. Johnny Eager

SNAKEFINGER'S VESTAL VIRGINS

Night Of Desirable Objects

Red Rhino REF LP 78 RR C ●●● Highly enjoyable set from this legend in his own lunchtime. Snakefinger, in cahoots with a few cronies, forsakes the weirder excesses of past workouts with the likes of the Residents, and there is plenty here for fans of all types of music to enjoy.

This time out, the thinking man's Richie Blackmore plays with jazz, disco, rap, soundtrack, gospel and Irish music, to produce an album of trans-Atlantic, trans-Europe excess, with a marvellous sense of humour prevailing throughout. Alex Bastedo

THE SPIKES

Colour In A Black Forest

Zinger Records ZIN LP1 P ●● The Spikes make a good, guitar-driven noise that rocks around the psychedelic ground and peaks with a gem called The Meaning Of Life, which would make for an excellent single. Vocals are care of the Lou Reed school of singing weirdos and that's quite forgivable, given the strength of the backing sounds. So maybe it's not exactly a landmark of rock, more of a feather in the big mind expander's hat. And if you don't know what that means then don't buy this. Interested? Daz Igyemeth

THE STING-RAYS

The Essential Sting-rays

Big Beat WIK 61 P ●● With the demise of the Sting-rays, following their excellent Coffee And Cryptic Time LP, the group's back catalogue and five year transformation through garage, psychedelia, surf, punk, you name it, gets an airing on this well crafted, masterfully compiled and magnanimously wide reaching set.

The Sting-rays were always a little better than their rootsy rags to rags story suggested and there was constantly the threat that they'd write a neater than neat teen anthem and give it the weirdest of arrangements. A great group, remembered here fondly. Dave Henderson

THE STOMACHMOUTHS

Something Weird

Got To Hurry RTS ●●● Four girls and a boy from Sweden, squeaky clean from their baseball boots to their Hamlet haircuts, step up, grin their crooked grins and... bleaarghhh! Ha Ha Ha Ha! The Stomachmouths have chewed up and regurgitated all the great greasy sounds of mid-'60s America; the thundering surf beat shoved to the back of the mix, the guitar and organ garage grunge fighting it out to the fore and, smack in the middle of the whole heaving mass; a voice that rasps and reeks with contempt. Yeow! Genuine brain warped mayhem from a smart bunch of Swedes. Vachel Booth

JAMES TAYLOR QUARTET

Mission Impossible

Re-Elect The President Reagan 2 RC ●●● The James Taylor Quartet are in the lucky position of being able to do no wrong in the eyes of the press at the moment, and happily cash in on that with a breathtakingly brilliant seven tracker. It's all very tongue-in-cheek, that Hammond organ veering over the cliff-tops of fashionability on one side and ridiculous kitsch on the other. It's all covers, from Gold Finger to Alfie, with cut up film dialogue chucked in for good measure. Their version of Mrs Robinson is worthy of lifts everywhere. Some original material is promised soon — 'till then, get practising that gimpy dancing to this! Carole Linfield

TOT TAYLOR

My Blue Period

LPA TOTAL 5 Re C ●¾ There's something about this album that's quite alluring. Although Tot insists, at times on getting very sub-Absolute Beginners, a little like Sinatra sung in the bath, a touch like a '40s B film soundtrack and the kind of thing that Ronnie Hazelhurst grew up on... there's still that distinctive Tot-means-pop varnish, that's so hard to chip.

I think I could grow to love it, but compared to Mathis, or the aforementioned big F, it's all a little tame, and lacking in vocal dynamics. Nevertheless, it's unique, discerning and very different. And that's real good. Dave Henderson

TSOL

Hit And Run

Enigma Records 3263-1 RC ● 7/8 There once was a lumbering mammoth called Easy Listening, and there still is a glut and over-abundance of so-so safe sounds for sun-filled beach gods/goddesses (the knucklehead generation). You know the kind of thing: inane lyrics about American things like girls, tough guys, cars, drinkin' with the boys (real tough boys) and so on.

Not that this album is full of the above, though. It's just that True Sounds Of Liberty could be accused of harbouring some disgusting tendencies. They score one and seven eighth bullets because of good lyrics, energy and danceability. Smarter than the average mammoth but not quite enough. Daz Igy Meth

MOE TUCKER

MoeJadKateBarry

50 Skidillion Watts In The Hands Of Children RTS ●●● Lou? John? Nico? Naah, give over, Moe's the only member of the Velvet Underground with any credibility left. Of course with only a handful of live shows, two singles and a solitary album to her credit, during the last 15 years, she's hardly been overexposed. Nonetheless when it comes to delivering the goods she's still on it. Her second solo album proper should arrive later in the year, meanwhile there's this mini-LP, recorded in one six hour session featuring Moe pounding the skins, Jad Fair (of 1/2 Japanese) singing and a couple of Florida kids fleshing things out a bit. The record is permeated with loopy lead guitar, sterling rhythm and Moe's inimitable drum stylings. Her sweet sweet voice appears on only one track, Reed and Cale's pre-Velvets Why Don't You Smile Now, but when she chimes in "smile, yeah! smile, woh!" It's 24 carat magic. Vachel Booth

Animal Liberation

Wax Trax! (Pacific House, Vale Road, London N4) ●●● Nina Hagen, Lene Lovich, Shriekback, Attrition, Howard Jones, The Colourfield, Luc Van Acker, Chris And Cosey, The Smiths and Slouxsie And The Banshees all appear on this compilation which, as its central theme, suggests that 'Animals are not ours to eat, wear or experiment on'. A benefit album, all royalties will be donated to PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals), an American organisation whose European counterpart is BUAV (British Union for the Abolition of Vivisection — based at 16A Crane Grove, London N7 8LB).

All the music contained herein is lyrically excellent, but stand-out tracks include the Banshees' acidic Skin, Chris And Cosey's haunting Silent Cry, Van Acker's sinister Hunter and a particularly passionate live version of The Smiths' Meat Is Murder.

The disgusting treatment of animals by humanity will continue as long as apathy and refusal of responsibility remain firmly implanted in peoples' skulls. Painless for them, unlike the metal rods pushed into craniums, the chemicals smeared over eyes, the senseless slaughter. A harrowing image from Attrition is Monkey In A Bin. Buy this record for yourself and for freedom to live. Daz Igy Meth

Big Noise

Big Time WL 71275 ●● A compilation spanning myriad styles and fixations from the suddenly burgeoning Big Time label. These guys have taste at least some of the time.

On show, eight artistes attuned to differing planets. From the UK, US, Canada and Russia, the wayward eclecticism of The Dream Syndicate rubs shoulders with Max Eider, while the Soviet Union's affected Alisa share grooves with the rather excellent Dumtruck. No answers emerge, but there's enough here to whet the driest of throats. (What's more you can win a copy by turning to page 31.) TC Wall

For A Few Pussies More

Anagram GRAM 29 RC ●●● In other words, Blood On The Cats III, a varied cross section of bands with The Wigs and Bad Karma Beckons alongside Restless and The Meteors. I was very impressed with the Turnpike Cruisers offering Extra Flesh, and even Alien Sex Fiend have put their psycho trousers on to rock it up a-la Cramps on Boneshaker Baby. As for what The Raymen are on, I doubt we'll ever know or understand, but I sure would like some of it! In the more traditional rockabilly vein, business is taken care of by The Riverside Trio and vintage Levi Dexter. Snakey G

For Your Ears Only

Third Mind TMLP 17/18 RT RC ●●● Is there no stopping these Third Mind compilations? Another whopping helping with around one hundred minutes of mellow, though striking, pop mood. A double delight going for a song. The first platter concentrates on the more established label acts Bill Pritchard, Bushido, Attrition and Beautiful Pea Green Boat, while the second record is a tour de force of new faces and fresh ideas. Especially noteworthy is Tragic Venus' Paintbox and Edward Ka-Spel's And The Lord Said which seems to have stolen the ashes from the grave of Syd Barrett's Pink Floyd. Just 25 glorious tracks from 14 luscious acts, blended like good tea, whatever that means. Compilation of '87. Ronnie Randall

On show, with unreleased material, is A Witness, The Passmore Sisters, The Househunters, The Dragsters, The TV Personalities, Laugh, 14 Iced Bears, AC Temple, Pleasureheads, Talulah Gosh, The Bats, 10000 Villns, Stars Of Heaven, The McTells, The Hermit Crabs, 3 Action, The Flatmates and The Close Lobsters. Is there anything else to say, except, buy it? Dave Henderson

Ten Years After The Goldrush

Constrictor CON 00022 RC ● 7/8 Strange 16 track compilation from German label run by Phillip Boa's pals. Musically it's a cross referenced selection of fragmented strangeness that tells you little about movements, less about what happened over the last ten years and nothing about just where we are now. Some of it is great (Boa, Wedding Present, Gaye Bykers, Mint Addicts, TV Personalities), some is a little less convincing (Palookas, Creepers). An interesting set, a strange trip through time, a nice sleeve and a few questions left unanswered. TC Wall

WOMAD Talking Book Volume 4

WOMAD 006 RR C ●●½ This is a nice package to welcome you into the world of music and dance, a large format magazine and gatefold sleeve with information about, and music from eleven Asian artists. WOMAD provide a valuable service for artists and audience; uniting people not just hundreds of miles apart, but separated by whole oceans (okay?).

Take the effort to discover that the Desert Musicians Of Rajasthan can draw patterns with the sound of swirling, skirling pipes. That the drumming of the Temple Musicians of Sri Lanka is of this world, though you wouldn't think so. That the voice of Asha Bhosle is a beautiful instrument, and that there's a big wonderful/terminally ill planet out there and not all of the noise is bad. Some of it is rather good, actually. Daz Igymeth

THE VIBRATORS

Live

Revolver REVL 85 ●½ A record that's been on the shelves for a spell but, in its own way, it's a timeless epitaph to an era long gone. Ten years on and The Vibrators, the most affected followers of punk's primal bastions, re-emerge, a little older, a little rockier, but no less cocksure.

After the highlights of CBS, guitarist John Ellis put in time with Peter Gabriel and it shows as he soups up the sound and introduces a more poignant edge to what by 1978 had become a pretty heavy metal version of punk. This is an LP that never recaptures the vitality of The Vibs, but does murder the classic Whips And Furs. Dave Henderson

THE YOUNG FRESH FELLOWS

The Men Who Loved Music

Frontier/Pop Lama FLP 1021 Sh RTS ●●¼ The Frontier catalogue spawned Suicidal Tendencies, TSOL, The Circle Jerks, Long Ryders, The Three O'Clock and a whole bundle more. Suffice to say, The Young Fresh Fellows deserve your attention for their label source alone. What's more you won't be disappointed, as the Fresh Fellows' up tempo tuneful songs wander through country-esque gardens, touch on melodic guitar pop and add a sense of humour. The Men Who Loved Music is cram packed with excellent songs and focused with a huge range of instruments. Mad as hell. Dave Henderson

THE YOUNG GODS

The Young Gods

Product Inc 33PROD 10 RT C ●●¼ Hailed, or whatever, as Euro minimalists, architects and bootleggers, The Young Gods' debut LP is masterminded into a sonic post-Neubauten noise by Rolf Mosimann of Swans. It's a thin and slim sound filled with vibrant rhythms and speckled impromptu noise structures. It's a glant sound, soaring and boring its way into your head with all its tribal in-jokes and feudal boundaries, at first unwelcoming, then almost falling over itself to beckon the final dinner guest to the last supper. Background cocktail music made with mallets, a gothic monstrosity with highlights designed by a glitzy high-street specialist. TC Wall

SINGLES THIS MONTH REVIEWED, with vim and vigour, by Martin Aston, Johnny Eager, Snakey G, Dave Henderson, Chris Hunt, Daz Igymeth, Alex Kadis and TC Wall. Reading is believing (well, almost) . . .

A CAST OF THOUSANDS Nothing Is Forever Fun After All P

Surely, Dave Harvey is a voice of the future. Nothing Is Forever may have been contrived to please; if so, the success lies with those deeply resonant vocals and a middle eight to be cherished — a combination which renders any critical faculty insensible — for this goes straight to the heart. With form, elegance, grace and symmetry, A Cast Of Thousands present something damn near to perfection and an excellent prophesy for their forthcoming debut LP. AK

ALIEN SEX FIEND The Impossible Mission Plagiarism P Cut up TV dialogue over a fuzzed guitar soundtrack that make for a parasitic pleasure, akin to not filling in your tax form. The Sexies play neat pop highlighted with wit and jokes. Good one. JE

ANTI-CIMEX Anti-Cimex Distaught RR C Neither as dumb as metal nor as stagnant as bad punk, the speedy sounds of Cimex in full flight, as on Set Me Free from this seven track taster, are worthy of your time and hard-reaped beans, amigos. DI

BIG BLACK Headache Blast First RT C Four track EP, with a three track seven inch, from the sons of US fun who holler and scream in a more distressed state than usual (or at least they seem to). Guitars go kachung, the spirals get more jagged . . . record ends, again, again, again, again. Coceptual, huh? DH

THE CHAIN GANG Long Time Gone Idea P Ahem, these "rockin' muthas" are actually quite succinct at putting their prose into verse/chorus arrangements. Quite an enticing single that would chart if it were by Huey Lewis. Sadly, the Gang are from somewhere up north and look unlikely to score Ghostbusters II at this rate. JE

THE CLEANERS FROM VENUS Living With Victoria Grey

Ammunition Communication P Tales of Dickensian debauchery, the government, and all that stuff, set to a neat '60s styled Backing-Britain-beat. The Cleaners are just two of life's eccentrics, nice to have them around. DH

THE CORN DOLLIES Forever Steven Hamma RM C This lot look dangerously close to being reasonably popular. Even worse they write really good songs and have a full colour sleeve. The Dollies are good tunesmiths who deliver on time in the right earlobe. Expect more real soon. DH

CRAZYHEAD Baby Turpentine Food RT C Crazyhead's second 45 is another cert independent chart topper with the time honoured verse/chorus onslaught riddled with rock cliches, biker grease and a thumping bass line. Huh, when you're young and . . . DH

THE CREEPERS Brute Red Rhino RR C A Terminal III Mix! With what sounds like a super-tuff part-pastiche, part-revelling brew-up through rap's bastard beat as seen through the ears of a Northern club-land band — The Creepers wear their laughter high on their sleeve. Their rhythm itch is bolstered by handclaps, whirring guitars and Three Johns' Jon Langford's spacey production. Neat, neat, neat. MA

CRITICAL MASS 4 Track EP Timebox Records P Things are happening in the UK, at the Timebox, in town and in the mixed up heads of Critical Mass. Four excursions into the "real" world, plucked and strummed with panache, all lyrically atonal with a stock moody sleeve pic, all make for a group worth checking further. Keen. DH

DECADE WITHIN Speed Hippy EP Floating Gerbil C Pay no more than a quid and witness the 90 mph onslaught of DW who burn out on four tracks that don't seize up but score low in the subtlety wardrobe. Crash, thump and back to the drawing board. JE

DREAM CLINIC Relocating Flowerpots Primitive TM Strange, mentally disturbed and generally horrific pop nightmares from the Miss Marples of Radio One. The Dream Clinic are too clever for their own good, their songs are a little too intricate, but I bet they had fun doing them. JE

DUB SYNDICATE Night Train Lacerworld/Contempo RR C Strange Sherwood-isms wrapped in a neat package, dubbed to oblivion and sent here on a train from Italy. There's something still lingering in the Sherwood dub syndicate that makes it necessary to persevere with every release, but this is one of the more rewarding excursions. DH

DUSTDEVILS Mother Shipton Rouska RR C Intriguing flex of powerhouse potential from Leeds duo who last time turned up on Rouska's hi-tech CD comp. Neat sound and melody of note for good measure. DH

THE FOETUS ALL NUDE REVUE Bedrock Some Bizzare RT C A growling, scowling croon from the multi-nom-de-ilumed Foetus which does little to widen the chasm between identities. Sure, this is an OK record but not as blisteringly different or indirect as, for instance, the fledgling You've Got Foetus On Your Breath's Custom Built For Capitalism. Still, better than Bananarama. TC W

FORTUNATE SONS Hammerhead Bam Caruso Re C Three track uptempo rock-out burner from men who feature ex-Flamin' Groovies and ex-Barracudas. No frills just throat stretching contortions and a live workout of Steppenwolf's The Pusher for good measure. JE

GHOST OF AN AMERICAN AIRMAN I Hear Voices Recoil (c/o 19 Knockburn Park, Belfast) An archetypal, nagging chart-commercial thang that sounds all-American, but originates from Belfast. Not much goes on beyond the gloss, but if Thomas Dolby wrote for Simple Minds, it might conceivably work out like this. MA

GREGOR SAMSA Captain Mission Pet Sounds (Box 150, 15 104 65 Stockholm, Sweden) Oddball? No, these Swedes are rootsy enough, dug into their goth groove, and spiked with a chunky guitar sound akin to Gen X metal. Glam on the edges but in the lower divs — if the truth be known. JE

GUTHRIE HANDLEY with WAYNE HUSSEY Where Was? Lambs To The Slaughter P So, er Wayne gets independent again with the alluring Guth. Where Was? is the title track of a four track "thing" that transcends all premature boundaries that all the Mish and Sisters' prior recordings might suggest. This is a great record, with a bona-fide brillo title track. Miss it at your peril. DH

DAVE HOWARD SINGERS Yon Yonson Meets Dr Ruth Hallelujah RR C Manic big sex sample of Howie's Yon Yonson 45, thrown onto a new song and interspersed with some fluffy Dr Ruthisms. The furor created by this record before anyone heard it has guaranteed interest and possible biggo sales. Good dance music too. TC W

HULA Cut Me Loose Red Rhino RR C Five track workout from Hula whose turning, yearning sprucing of sound and staff has left them still searching for that breakthrough. The beat goes on and on, the FX are relentless, but are they getting any nearer? A fine record, but is it enough? TC W

I CAN CRAWL The Misty Mountain Zinger P Perfectly drab cover of Zep's Misty Mountain Hop, that might have sounded like a good idea at the time, but should have been strangled in its infancy. JE

INTO A CIRCLE Forever Abstract P Mood-heavy semantics and romanticism from the should-be-somethings, Into A Circle. Still locked in a downbeat flurry of sexual sleaziness, Forever is almost radio-playable and nearly a powerful song. Still searching, though. TC W

I SPIT ON YOUR GRAVY Piranha Zinger P Aussie outfit who're wacko, crazed, and close to doing The Monkees' Stepping Stone without realising it. Fine pop with a summer finish. No more. TC W

JACKALS We All Sign On Play Very Loud C Refresh of Lennon's Instant Karma with the glorious line "Norman Tebbit's gonna get you" leading the way as the Jackals psyche-tinged sound finds its true shape and form. Flip side gives a less hazy picture on a better self-penned tune. JE

KILL UGLY POP Purple Haze Fever RR C The Poppers get heavier and hoofier on this upbeat sleazoid slab of post-Hendrix necrophilia. Kill Ugly Pop wind their cheesy guitar strings around the "maestro's noise" to develop a tortured blow-out that gets even fuzzier on the flip. Brandishing a guitar solo that smells like a CS gas explosion, this is music to be buried to. True grit. TC W

KNOT TOULOUSE The Leaves Are Turning Blue Contempo (15 r., via de Neri, 50122, Firenze, Italy) While present-day Italy is gripped by psychedelia, Knot Toulouse move closer to the Athens, Georgia sound. As melodic, wistful and involved as the Southern axis of REM/Guadalcanal Diary demands, this is another plangent little curio that deserves a UK release. MA

LAUGH Paul McCartney Remorse RT C Manchester's Laugh maintain their pounding Northern soul zeal with another swaggering soul-pop melody that confirms them as leading underdogs. You can smell their confidence. Whether this is a tribute or a poison pen letter is unconfirmed. MA

LAUGHING HOUSE Democracy Sonar (84 London Road, Coventry) Four feisty, well-executed rock-pop dynamos that border the terrace end of the British new-wave, from The Skids to The Ruts to The Alarm. Laughing House temper the potential pomp but only succeed in failing to set the house ablaze. MA

THE LIME SPIDERS My Favourite Room Zinger P Uptempo guitar chugger from deep down under Aussie acid cases. Psyche-stuff with a neat ending and a cover of Lou Reed's Heard Her Call My Name on the flip (and a brill sleeve too). JE

THE LIZARD TRAIN Thirteen Hour Daydream Zinger P Straight into Seventh Heaven, track one of four, and here we are floating on a sea of love. Now that's no bad introduction but we are lulled into a false sense of security and then When The Acid Drops explodes we're suddenly tripping up and down, heading for an Explosion In A Room caused by That Chain Lightning. Wheeeee! Massive guitars and unashamed indulgence. Spiffo! DI

THE LONG TALL TEXANS Saints And Sinners Razor Records P Second 45 from these double-bass toting, checked shirt wearers, that suggests they have great crossover potential and that their frantic and frenetic sound works when set in such a polished environment. JE

THE LUMINARIES Mystery And Disguise Dangerous Rhythms C Already compared to Henry Cow, Fairport Convention and Talking Heads, these mixed-up people (who feature an ex-Metabolist in their ranks) play unaffected guitar pop with a restrained throat problem. Strong songs — as in post punk — that inspire. DH

THE METEORS Go Buddy Go Anagram P When founder member Nigel Lewis left the band in 1982, Paul Fenech's once flourishing song-writing ability dried up. I can't remember the last time a self-penned song made Meteors A-side status, and even the flip features a cover that's been in their live set since 1980. But, creativity aside, the self confessed tub of lard plays a mother of a guitar and no-one will ever better The Meteors at their own game. SG

THE MOCK TURTLES Pomona imaginary EE C Four tracks on 12 inches of shiny vinyl. Fifty per cent is mediocre/ordinary jangle guitar stuff. Very fortunately this matters not as of the remaining, Mary's Garden is quite wonderful and Bathing In Blue, a warming, lovely song is utterly irresistible. Two good reasons to buy it. DI

1000 VIOLINS Locked Out Of The Love-In Dreamworld

RT C Sprightly, absorbing, pop-conscious, but like their second 45, no one specific track, out of these four, is quite as wistfully memorable as their Halcyon Days debut. 1000 Violins' scaled-down Spectorish sheen is essentially gorgeous. MA

OPEN BOOK Pension Day HAG (133 Islingword Rd, Brighton) A touch of the Matt Johnsons, a rather good song and HAG records are off and bobbing with a pretty decent debut single. Emotive but lacking the final sparkle that'll raise it above the rest of the stuff that's currently pogo-ing around the same area. DH

THE PHAROAHS Vigilante Nervous C The title track is alright, nothing that special, but flip it over to You're On Your Own. A very interesting song and arrangement, more in keeping with the last Spear Of Destiny hit than Guana Batz live at the Klub Foot (again). They take things easy with a relaxing good time acoustic feel. In fact if they'd come from Missouri Andy Kershaw would probably be hailing them as the new messiahs on the strength of that track. SG

THE PONTIAC BROTHERS Be Married Song (Electric) Frontier (P.O. Box 22, Sun Valley, CA 91353) Well, y'all here's some sounds that'll rock ya but it ain't too hard so you jest sit back and don't tax yer brain, y'hear? About as threatening as Sooty. DI

THE PRIMEVALS Heya New Rose P Glasgow bands don't often remake a 1969 hit for one JJ Light that was recorded during the Celtic Solstice in honour of the song's original Red Indian roots, fusing rock with gospel with swamp gothic, but then not every Glasgow band are The Primevals. A very strange record for 1987 anyway. MA

THE PSYLONS All The Things We Need Iron Lung Re C Possibly falsely bracketed as psychedelic, The Psylons are much more your palatable neuro-surgeons of guitar-strained pop. A neat edge and, did you know they were from Portsmouth? DH

RED LETTER DAY Take Me In Your Arms Quiet C Thrashingly precise single which has the whip hand style of primal Adicts (circa first 45) and other such pop powered punk funsters. A great big-hearted sound that'll fox the "now" generation into a 'new or slightly used and abused' quandry. DH

RINF Bang Contempo RR C Italian chaps of some reputation team up with Adrian Sherwood for a scorchingly good filmic epc. Guitars straggle the scene, a beat wanders in and out and the odd voice is heard in the corridor. Mindfully wistful. TC W

THE SINISTER CLEANERS Longing For Next Year AAZ

RR C Five tracks of rampantly strummed heart-rending stuff from the Cleaners, who shake it in a northerly direction. There's something on the good side of pop's idiosyncratic nothingness here, that makes you want to cheer and say, 'Yeah, go on, break a string, have a hit', and you know, in a perfect world, they might just do it. Sadly, here at Shit Central things are a little more bleak. (What?—ed) TC W

SKIN Girl: Come Out Product Inc RT C Excellent remix of this enticingly good track. From out of Swans come things that are better than things that you ever dared . . . well, you know what I mean. Moody, hot, sweaty and a mean rap to close. Dishy. DH

SPACEMEN 3 Transparent Radiation Glass NM C A four track EP that spirals and slows at 33, leaving the atmosphere panting for more. There's something hypnotic and quite enchanting about this record without the inevitably drab trappings of self-indulgence. A different move by the Spacemen, value for cash and well worth experiencing. DH

G POWER!

THREE COLOURS Sitting Pretty Soul Selects NM C Thoughtful balladry lifted from the Coles' Norwood LP. A slice of Motown heartbreak and nostalgia played by honkies — with not a silver sequin in sight. The Colours should serve time on every UK record deck for this. DH

TWELVE 88 CARTEL Sweating Furore Bite Back C Dynamite and discipline as the 88 beat hard on the dreams of modern pop. This is powerful stuff, backbone material as individual and dynamic as you like with more than a hint of longevity. Expect more . . . real soon. DH

UNDERGROUND ARROWS No Chance To Escape Unicorn

NM C A bizarre set-up here — two Romans, one Scot/Italian and one Swiss make up the best beat-mod anthem I've heard for years, backed by two more tiny classics. Rome's Arrows aren't simply R&B, or Merseybeat, or Garage, but a sharp angle on the perfect-pop factor. This should be bought. MA

VIBE TRIBE Conscious As A Daisy Tribal Re C This is a strange lilting flutter and pop song, wandering through the underworld of wherever in a frenzy of something close to Buffalo Springfield harmony. Is it me, the sun or this record that tells me a Poco revival is on the cards, and that the vibs will be breaking at the front. Nice one. DH

WE ARE GOING TO EAT YOU I Wish I Knew All The Madmen

RT C A debut single that bounces like a pert, sassy folk-pop Blondie with B-52 echo beats, but with sober British beat/punky concerns between the gleaming sheets: "I could kill/I'm so ugly when I'm constantly denied" WAGTEY's fine female singer lets out, and I think of Girls! At Our Best. Definitely recommended. MA

THE WEATHERMEN Poison Play It Again Sam RR C By far and away the best Weathermen single for some time, this still retains the group's uptempo dance leanings while introducing a much more discerning arrangement and some nice vocal and effects embellishments. Atmospheric and grossly affected while retaining an odd quirky pop edge. TC W

WHIRL Heaven Forbid Playroom Discs RR C A 12 inch from the now defunct Whirl — who've gone on to become Creation band Blow Up — which sounds, dare I say it, slightly better than their more recent plush soundscapes. The Whirl view of life is more tempered and pop veneered, pleasantly sun-drenched, too. JE

ZOSKIA MEETS SUGARDOG That's Heavy Baby Temple

RT C Meaty, mean, broody . . . and all with a dog fight on the cover! Two Temple disciples shroud their mysterious music with semi-rapped sounds to create a magnificent dance-orientated pot pourri. Throbbing, beating, sexual ritual music. All this and toes that go tap too. DH

ORIGINS

Just some of what the press said about the last Thirteen Moons album. "Records such as this inspire the Wrath of God . . . A favourite LP may have, if it's lucky one or two moments that weaken the knees. 'Little Dreaming Boy' with all its huge, delicate soul, does this with every breath."

(Stan Barton - NME)

"I have the crappiest dictionary in the world and it defines the word 'consummate' as 'complete, perfect', sod that, from now on, the definition of 'consummate' is 'Little Dreaming Boy' . . . It's quite staggering to think this is their debut album."

(Andy Hurt - Sounds)

"New moodists, new ambience, new jazz - call it what you will. But, the album, 'Little Dreaming Boy' by Thirteen Moons is the most unnervingly reflective piece of music I've heard this year."

(I've heard this year.)

THE STUNNING NEW ALBUM 'ORIGINS' IS AVAILABLE FROM AUGUST 10th. Also available as a double play CD for the price of one containing 'Little Dreaming Boy'.

Ace CHA 216

The Fifties — Rockabilly Fever

Ace CHA 218 Three compilations with enough tracks between them to see you through the steamiest all-nighter. Ace have gathered together obscure (to me anyway) and more familiar names and then divided them out under suitable subheadings, each volume in good old mono and lovingly wrapped, but with gatefold sleeves and informative sleeve notes.

The R&B stuff contents itself mostly with gentle girl meets boy, girl dumps boy, boy wonders what went wrong stuff, with lots of quaint ideas about marriage that they all seemed to go in for in those days. Names to drop: The Flairs, The Robins, the sensationally modernly named The Cliques (with Girl Of My Dreams) and, ahem, The Rams.

Juke Joint Blues is slightly more predictable, shoving down a gear and parading stuff from legends like B B King (Three O'Clock Blues — know the feeling), Elmore James (Long Tall Woman), Baby Face Turner, Bobby Bland... the list goes on. This is hoedown, back of the store country blues — find yourself a sultry verandah to enjoy it on.

Finally, Rockabilly Fever steps on the gas and sets to with tub-thumping country rock rhythms, the sort of stuff that's going to appeal to all those nouveau rocksters that Levi's are responsible for. No early Presley or Perkins here, but there is Sleepy La Beef, Link Davis, Glen Barber and Glen Glenn (pictured with Elv). And with titles like Pink Cadillac (by Johnny Todd), Snake Eyed Mama (Don V Cole) and Jitterbop Baby (Hal Harris) you can just tell it's good boppin' stuff. Carole Linfield

BILLY BLAND

Blues, Chickens, Friends and Relations

Ace CH 222 P I once would have poo-pooed Billy Bland (not to be confused with Bobby) as a plastic early '60s pop rocker, only really knowing his Let The Little Girl Dance hit. But no more. This is a wondrous collection, visiting most areas of the r&b spectrum with Billy's voice just oozing its way through. The tracks date from 1955 with the brilliant hambone/Diddley-esque Chicken In The Basket through to 1963 and his beautiful rendition of Bobby Bland's Little Boy Blue. Other high points are Grandmaw Give A Party and Momma Stole The Chicken with its Gary U.S. Bond's overtones. Snakey G

BLOOMFIELD/ HAMMOND/DR JOHN

Triumverite

Edsel ED 228 P Three diverse '60s legends brought together in the early '70s when it seems everyone's minds were turning to ideas of supergroups, jam sessions and general self-indulgence. That's not exactly what goes on here, but... well, let's say I've heard Dr John on better form and Mike Bloomfield or John Paul Hammond fans could probably also point to better sets by both.

Triumverite never gets past first base, never gets into gear, 'cos the guys can't decide who's going to drive. A shame really as there were probably lots more interesting routes they could have taken. An antique though, with a sleeve that doesn't reveal the width of their flares. Dave Henderson

THE BYRDS

Sweetheart Of The Rodeo

Edsel ED 234 P The birth of country rock as Gram Parsons develops the legend of the bespectacled ones to bittersweet realists and American documenters. Following this, Gram took off with Chris Hillman to record The Gilded Palace Of Sin as The Flying Burrito Bros (that's also available on Edsel), and that's a fruitier more heartbroken set that no-one should go without. As for Sweetheart, phase nine of The Byrds is flawed but cherishable nonetheless. Dave Henderson

JOHN CALE

Vintage Violence

Edsel ED 230 P Whimsically lightweight LP from the Brit passport holding Velvet, circa '71. Pop rock balladeering in that chasmic period of pre-Bowie nothingness, that led the world to create the grandad of American Orientated Rock, into which this LP fits all too nicely. Dave Henderson

COUNT 5

Psychotic Reacton

Edsel P True manic depressive stuff. Count 5 vacillate between the aggressive paranoia of Out In The Streets and They're Gonna Get You and the cheery day thrills of Double Decker Bus and She's Fine. Despite a real pony cover of My Generation, the title track is essential listening, one of the great garage/psychedelic standards and these are the boys who did it first and best. Vachel Booth

CISSY HOUSTON

Mama's Cookin'

Charly R&B CRB 1158 Ch Cissy Houston's dangerously glitzy period in the early '70s is surveyed on this Charly compilation and she just about escapes without embarrassing herself. Houston's voice prior to this Janus set was far more stunning and it's sad that some of these tepid arrangements pull her down to the level of par that many have since overtaken.

Of course, she's a sly cookie and more than half of these cuts have enough spine-tingling throat aerobics to frustrate the blanket backing and production. All in all, though, this is a real hit and miss collection. Neat version of I Just Don't Know What To Do With Myself though. Dave Henderson

JEFFERSON AIRPLANE

2400 Fulton Street

RCA NL 90 036(2) Jefferson Airplane were guilty of the worst hippy excesses whether acting as patronising pop-stars-as-gurus or just vague dopers. Preaching about paradise while watching their followers wallow in mud and filth, did these people really look forward to the Age of Aquarius knowing it'd stink of Patchouli oil? Ugh!

Rewind

Back to their roots! Mega re-ish time, The Troggs go to Jayne County's house!

Back from beyond the wherever in Belgium, the Konnexion label broadens its scope with four new releases. The Troggs are caught at their finest on the excitingly titled The Wild Things, while Screaming Lord Sutch has his past pre-parliamentary fodder revived on Jack The Ripper (resplendent with more bloodlusting ballads).

Geno Washington has his revival (?) severely hampered by a set of pre-pubescent croonings called, and including the Johnny Paycheck track, Take This Job And Stuff It, while the 80th punk wave raises its head again on It Was Ten Years Ago Today. Memorables (or not so) included are Sid Vish, The Sex Pistols, Jayne County, Hubble Bubble (what?) and The UK Subs. All this is through Pinnacle, as are the following...

Mike Bloomfield's tortured I'm With You Always and Roky Erickson's Don't Slander Me on Demon/Rounder Europa, and through the HI UK/Demon axis, a collection of Otis Clay tracks called Trying To Live My Life Without You. Back, briefly, with Demon/Rounder Europa, Professor Longhair has his legendary lost sessions from '71 found and packaged under the title House Party New Orleans Style, while on Edsel, The Collectors have their seminal '60s stuff, Seventeenth Summer released.

The next Stax batch of 45s are Knock On Wood/Big Bird by Eddie Floyd, Soul Limbo (the cricket theme)/Heads Or Tails by Booker T & The M.G.s, In The Rain/Good Soul Music by The Dramatics, Theme From Shaft/Cafe Regio by Issac Hayes, I've Been Lonely So Long/Lea by Frederick Knight and Short Stopping/I Can See Eve by Veda Brown.

Dion And The Belmonts, whose classics are all available on Ace Records, played a re-union concert at Radio City Music Hall in New York last month. Who should join them for a Johnny B. Goode encore? None other than Phil Spector golden girl Darlene Love and ex-East Street Band boyo Little 'I wear my hanky on my head' Steven.

Charly's July/August releases kick off with Rock With Me, an album from recent visitor to these shores Eddie 'Nothing Shakin' Fontaine. The recordings date from 1956 to 1958. CD punters will be eager to hear that there's three just out from the Sun Records catalogue; We Wanna Boogie by Sonny Burgess, Rockin' Love by Carl Mann and So Long I'm Gone by the late Warren Smith. On the

Southern Soul Brothers

Charly R&B CRB 1156 [Ch] In Charly's Sound Stage Seven series, this collection of southern crooning blues hollerers is deep and yearning with some colossal performances coming in from a whole variation of singing stylists over a wide period of time. As a compilation bringing together such diverse sounds it still manages to hold together well through the sheer heartbreak of each performance with plus points to the eccentric delivery of John R and a namecheck for Moody Scott for summing it all up. Real hard stuff. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Southern Soul Sisters

Charly Records CRB 1155 [Ch] -Sisters doing it for themselves on more than a brace of bluesy downbeat show-outs. On display are some of the greatest vocal performers since the early '60s, with magnificent displays from both Ann Sexton and Ella Washington, surrounded by similarly tear-sodden outbursts from Margie Hendrix, Alder Ray Black and Vivalore Jordan.

Bittersweet and styled with that venomous delivery that makes you really believe in every twist and turn of every tortured sentence, this 16 track collection is just begging to be heard, and heard again. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Sweet Soulful Chicago

Kent KENT 070 [P] An excellent compilation set from the Kent team which highlights mid-'60s Chicago soul as perpetrated by the Brunswick, Dakar, Bashie and BRC labels. Main talking point is the weird and wonderful horn arrangements which cut into each of the Carl Davis productions plus the exceedingly odd noise which breaks on the I'm In Danger cut from The Visitors.

This is a cohesive upbeat collection that, even when it gets down, is irrepressibly dance orientated. There are some neat string arrangements in here and enough quality listening for any soulful lush to totally let overtake him. Dave Henderson

OV WRIGHT

The Wright Stuff

Hi Records HIUKLP 414 [P] OV Wright's ups and downs are catalogued through every heart breaking side he recorded, and every gritty vocal embellishment that he can muster. His deep soulful voice never really sparked the charts on this side of the Atlantic but with the distinctive Memphis Horns' sound and Willie Mitchell's production bringing out every speck of style, and every bit of salt in every tear-sodden melody, it's sure as hell a moving experience. On The Wright Stuff we're offered OV's sleazy 45s plus a couple of precocious LP out-takes. Always moving, this is the stuff that will turn any hardened jeans wearer to alcoholism. Late and great. Dave Henderson

Can't deny the grooviness of White Rabbit, but once they'd fed their heads, the Jeffersons spent the rest of their career blowing it out their backsides. Jefferson Handkerchief's I'm Allergic To Flowers (from Pebbles vol.3) is recommended to put a better perspective on the summer of love. Vachel Booth

CARL MANN

The Rocking Mann

Charly CDX17 [Ch] Tracing Carl Mann's early days at Philips International/Sun — from 1959 onwards — this double set re-introduces the subtle voice of Mann which was versatile enough to whoop it up on the hillbilly beat numbers, and also get deep for the bluesier ballads. Classics like his debut 45 Mona Lisa (no not the Matt Monro grinder), Rodgers and Hammerstein's Some Enchanted Evening, plus a sprinkling of album tracks, are joined by 11 previously unreleased tracks, including uptempo rockers like Blueberry Hill and tracks that have become latter day standards such as Walkin' The Dog and Kansas City. Well weathered and still as juke jumping. Johnny Eager

RASPBERRIES

Overnight Sensation

Zap ZAP 1 [Re] [C] Post Beatles harmonies with a hint of the Beach Boys from US outfit who hit once in the UK with the title track. Like a primal Buggles, they were a contemporary to early Flamin' Groovies and a less acidic Big Star. Today, The Raspberries are difficult to place, this LP is for classicists, and perhaps not as vital to the cultural development of today's young things. Johnny Eager

Blues & Soul Power

Kent 068 [P] This 'un turned up just at the right time for me, having just read The Life And Times Of Little Richard, a book which documents the '60s as well as the '50s. And this compilation does include a 1966 Richard cut, Holy Mackerel. Also here is like And Tina Turner and The Ikettes, one of the only acts Richard would worry about having to follow in a live situation.

Getting down and dirty for your pleasure is The Johnny Otis Show, Z.Z. Hill, B.B. King and, praise the lord, Lowell Fulson's classic song Tramp. Snakey G

Rock 'n' Roll Party Volume 7

Ace CH 221 [P] I thought I knew my rock 'n' roll, but most of the cats on this platter are new to me... have you ever heard of the Lucky Enois Quintet? But it's not all ultra obscure, there's Heebee Jeebies Love by Little Richard, Blim Bam by B.B. King and the excellent rockabilly Little Bit More by Sleepy La Beef sandwiched between goodies like Bad Mousie Yes by Willard McDaniel and Dance The Thing by the Floyd Dixon Orchestra. Roll back that carpet mother. Snakey G compilation LP front there are two samplers, This Is Charly Soul (Sam Baker, Lee Dorsey, Solomon Burke etc) and This Is Charly Blues (Elmore James, John Lee Hooker, Lightnin' Hopkins etc). On the British beat front there are three gems to be sure: Cross Section by the Downliners Sect, and albums from Garry Farr & The T-Bones and Steam Packet (featuring Long John Baldry, Brian Auger and Julie Driscoll).

STOP PRESS NEWS from Ace. Mike Vernon is currently producing a new album with R&B man Lazy Lester, who's been in the UK playing dates. The project, through Ace, will resurrect Mike's New Horizon Records. From the same source, we've heard that rockabilly Sonny Fisher's all too few '50s recordings featured one Joey Long, aged 14, on guitar. For a point of interest Joey was one of the few black guitarists who played rockabilly (we're talkin' 1956 in redneck country here). Anyway, Ace man Ted Carroll, who's also organised recordings with Fisher in the past, is setting up a recording session in the States for Joey to record an album. Two albums to watch out for indeed! Snakey G

LET'S GO ALL THE WAY!

HEAD's press officer thinks that they're filthy perverted people with some disgusting tendencies. ★ Ronnie Randall pricks up his ears

We use and abuse until we're amused. One hour of degradation, sensual and exciting, the ultimate disciplinarians. Long legs, red bums... Reading the messages in the Notting Hill phonebooths proves a pretty accurate warning of the insults, lies and wind-ups I was about to encounter during the imminent rendezvous with Candy Horsebreath and Hank Sinclair, the Little And Large comedy duo from West Country smock rockers Head.

Candy clops along with a broken foot, sustained during a run-in, or rather, run over, with a Massey-Ferguson tractor immediately following the band's celebrated performance at Glastonbury in June. That's right, the one where they played with their willies dangling beneath their guitars. Headline grabbers!

"We did it purely for the publicity, and for no other reason whatsoever."

Hank is otherwise known as Gareth Sager, ex of The Pop Group, Rip Rig And Panic and Float Up CP. Bands with plenty of critical clout but lacking in commercial success.

Gareth: "We went exactly as far as we wanted to go, truthfully. Head is a different kettle of fish, a bigger outboard motor, for mass consumption."

Gareth is noted for his fishy references. As we pass his local fishmonger he claims to be reminded of his girlfriend. Smutty or what? But does everything they do have a sexual angle? Is it that simple?

"Why not? Sex is healthy, clean and fun. A pumping, sweaty, smelly and exhilarating experience, until you begin to take it seriously.

"Then it becomes a jaded, 30 press-ups dressed in rubber - and - chains - type chore. We operate in a jaundiced, old fashioned field called rock 'n' roll. The idea is to make it fun, at least for ourselves. How can you take the occupation seriously? Sure, we're singing about serious shit, personal hygiene is far more important than politics to everyone, and we are prepared to highlight the fact.

"But we like what we do and aren't going to be bored by it. Falling flat on our faces is part of the entertainment."

"Our material is unselfconscious. The first thing that comes out. We don't rifle any record collections for ideas and influences, it's just BLURRGH! And there it is, all over the place. Snog On The Rocks is that point where your imagination reaches an all time low and you experience free association. That's when the really hot stuff emerges."

Head dither between being part of London clublife and Bristol olks.

"We like the big wide open spaces of the wild West Country, where everyone will put a glass in your face, and then buy you a drink. It has no cultural divides. Britian needs to break out from its isolated island stance.

We're more for the Italian, all-in-the-family approach where the girls all say no and the boys all say yes.

"We're for flair before patriotism. Head are like the French rugby team, fluid, exciting, groovy. They take every chance they get and still leave the field with their shirts clean. It's sex on 30 legs. These days style isn't enough, you've got to have a label and they've got it... Le Coq Sportif."

Masses

From Sgt. Peppers to Music For The Masses, Depeche Mode tread a filmic journey through contemporary music keeping their integrity intact and sticking strictly independent. Story by Carole Linfield. Pictures by Ronnie Randall

Martin: beret interesting

Alan: with the art of success

The flickering TV set in the corner is desperately trying to pick up the dim signals of a BBC documentary. Through the resulting snow on the set, images of McCartney and co. dissect and examine the "LP of the century", and Sgt Pepper marches out again. Here we are, sitting in a studio, watching TV footage of a studio . . . it's like the picture of a tin which has a picture of the tin on it. Does it go on for infinity? Oh, but it was 20 years ago today . . .

Twenty years ago today, everyone in this recording studio was more worried about bubblegum cards and Batman comics than pop art. Twenty years on, and Depeche Mode are looking forward, not back.

"I wonder if anyone will make a documentary about the making of this album?" muses David Gahan, chasing a piece of pasta round his plate.

In the background, there's the incessant jingle of the video machine, and the soft chunk of cue upon snooker ball. Ah, the gentle art of recording a new LP.

"It's going to be called Music For The Masses," explains Martin Gore.

"Which is a bit of a joke really, when you consider how much a lot of people hate us." I bet you were even thinking that yourself. Depeche Mode? Don't they belong in glossy pop rags, talking about their haircuts or their favourite teddy bear?

Well, let's have a little look at the evidence we can put forward on Depeche Mode's behalf. Arguably, Depeche Mode are the blueprint for commercial success while remaining in the independent machine. They produced innovative music at their outset in 1981, even though The Human League went before them — they were the first true pop band to augment the synth and later the sampler. They don't have a manager, and never have had. They turned down big offers from majors in favour of remaining on Mute, and, whenever the singles have charted, they've never resorted to a nauseating round of self-promotion in order to cash in on it. To some extent, they helped pave the way for other bands to cross over, from The Smiths to the Mary Chain.

So why all this vitriol?

"I dunno," says Dave. "You wouldn't think it was possible to hate a band so much as the way some people hate us . . .!"

"I think," muses Martin, "our music never crosses over to the general public, hence the album title, it's a joke. It's only the fans who buy our stuff."

"Also, people have branded us as a sampler band, which is OK in itself, but so many bands use samplers badly. They don't give it enough thought. We spend ages trying out different sounds and trying to make sure we never use the same ideas twice, even if, because David's got such a distinctive voice or whatever, there is obviously a very definite Depeche sound."

And despite what you might think, it's not that easy even for Depeche to get radio play and the like.

"We're in a bit of dilemma because most of our music doesn't fit in and doesn't get played as much as others, though fortunately it does elsewhere in the world," says Martin. "And if we find

Andrew: from Sincerely Synth Spares

THE Deps

David: next stop, global domination

it difficult, and we think we're quite commercial, it must be impossible if you're in a really alternative band."

So how do you overcome that?

Andrew: "We were lucky, when we started it was at a time when there was a flourishing live scene, so we built it up that way, but there's not even decent places to play any more."

So why did you decide early on not to sign to a major?

Martin: "It was quite tempting. Looking back, I can't imagine why we didn't go with them, it was just a stroke of luck we didn't. I mean, can you imagine four 18 year old boys with no cash being offered sums of money like £200,000? But it was the best decision we ever made."

David: "There was a gut feeling at the time . . . although the real reason is probably that we were so indecisive it passed us by. Daniel Miller was advising us too, although he never pushed us to stay with him. He did say that whatever they offered, he would do his best to match, and if we wanted singles in the charts, he'd do his best to get that for us, too."

Martin: "I think the reason we've stayed around so long is because we're on Mute. We've been given the freedom to do what we want by being on Mute. We're not pushed in any particular direction, and Daniel isn't like a record company boss, he comes down to the studio and helps us out. He's more like a friend."

In the long run, of course, it's made the Deps a lot richer . . .

Andrew: "We went for points, percentage of the profits, there's no way a major would have given us the points deal we've got with Mute. We had to go for the first two years without much money, though, because we didn't get a huge advance."

So would you advise young bands to take the same course?

Martin: "It's difficult when bands come up and tell us they've been offered a major deal or whatever, because you want to say go for an independent, but we were very lucky in our case, because our first single was a hit. It has to be said that it's much easier to fail on an independent."

Andrew: "Some 99 per cent of new bands will fail, even if they're signed to a major, so at least that way maybe they'll come away with a bit of money. I'd like to advise people to go for an independent, but you've got to be careful. Bear in mind we only know one label, too; that doesn't indicate what the others are like."

Alan: "And if you need to buy equipment, you're going to need to go for the big advance."

What advantages have there been, apart from the money?

Alan: "A major would have pushed for us to have hits, but we've been allowed to go along at our own pace. Also there's a certain amount of rubbing off of each other . . ."

There's a certain amount of schoolboy tittering at that one.

"What I mean is, the standard of music on Mute is very high and that rubs off on the group."

From the glimpses we had of the new LP, the Depeche which is re-emerging is a harder, more classic construction than before. The vocal is still surging, but underneath there's a . . . well, filmic quality lurking about. Not melodramatic, but assured.

So it's not surprising, then, that individually all the members of the band have expressed an interest in scoring films.

"We have been offered some dodgy sci-fi B Movie stuff, where they've asked us to drop in words like "Venus" and "Jupiter" here and there," laughs Martin.

"I'd prefer something along the lines of Ry Cooder's stuff, like in Southern Comfort," adds Dave.

Andrew: "The thing is, I bet a lot of people wouldn't know it was us. We could get round a lot of preconceptions that way."

Preconceptions which have been built around the teenie following they initially commanded.

Martin: "We went through a stage around '81, '82 when our image was very teen orientated. We didn't know what we were doing, I mean our clothes and everything . . . even we find it embarrassing to look back on and think it's really sickly, so I can quite understand how it put some people off."

Andrew: "I think the teen audience can be one of the best, especially when they develop with you. They're really enthusiastic. It's only like The Smiths' audience, except theirs is more male dominated, but that's 16, 17 year old boys."

Isn't that kind of audience generally a lot less critical, though?

Andrew: "Perhaps, but then again I think they're more critical because they give everything you do a listen and really think about what you're doing. That gives us a responsibility."

David: "People think that just because an audience is 13, 14, they haven't got a mind, but that's not true. They may be more up on what's going on than the 25 year olds who are going out and buying Dire Straits records."

"Besides which, a large proportion of our audience has matured and grown up with us."

The Deps are planning to head out on tour with the LP, but whether the uninitiated people will grit their teeth and give the album a try, I couldn't say. All I know is, I'll bet given a blind taste test, many of them would give it the thumbs up. Meanwhile, the rest of the world, as so often happens in these cases, is already converted to the faith.

You said, don't sell out. Don't let the big wigs get it all their own way. You got Fad Gadget, you got New Order, you got The Smiths, and you respected them for it. You got Depeche Mode, bloody good at what they do and getting classier all the time. Don't forget it.

JESSE GARON AND THE DESPERADOES

Named after Elvis Presley's still-born brother, JESSE GARON AND THE DESPERADOES released their first single, Splashing Along, on Narodnik late last year, to almost instant acclaim.

"The single came out when we were in the middle of supporting the Shop Assistants," explains guitarist Andrew, "It sold a lot of records and got us established. We started getting major press at the start of the year and then the second single came out . . ."

With that single being the small but perfectly formed guitar pop gem The Rain Fell Down, things were looking good . . . "and then the other two guitarists left."

The group carried on regardless, the next release being an EP combining the first two singles.

Margarita: "It's called The Billy Whizz EP, which I think is a crap name, but Andrew decided on it and didn't ask anybody else."

And, after that? Then they plan to release an EP called The Adam Faith Experience (in August) when, assuming their guitarists have been replaced, they also plan to tour and, in Margarita's words, "make a vicious assault on everything." Hey, watch out everything.

RESISTANCE

With a debut single to promote on Timebox, RESISTANCE appear to be at an interesting early crossroads in their career. Is This What England Is?, and their track on the recent Timebox compilation LP, pitch them somewhere between Toyah and an embryonic Berlin, while live performances evoke the spirit of mid-period Banshees.

With a little more song development and live experience, Angie Heard (vocals), David Woolfson (guitar, keyboards) and Dave Rogers (bass) will soon have to decide in which ultimate direction to take their music. The choice is theirs. Watch this space . . . Alex Bastedo

A wandering minstrel for the 1980's, PAUL ROLAND is a fascinated and sometimes fascinating singer/songwriter whose burgeoning reputation should be added to with the recent release of his third LP, Danse Macabre, the Bam Caruso label.

Compared rather obviously with Syd Barrett, Roland is a careful but imaginative tunesmith, while his lyrical preoccupations with historical epithets and engaging whimsy mark him down as perhaps our only psychedelic romantic. With concert appearances lined up in Britain and Europe for the summer, he will also be looking to bolster a growing live following before the release of a further mini album in September. Alex

BEAT OF THE BEAST

BEAT OF THE BEAST have already been embedded in a six foot deep hole with the earth shovelled rapidly over them, due to the fleeting gesture that they were once a "Goth" Band. Who recalls the story of Ausgang? With three years of minimal press coverage, they decided in a final fit of desperation to add the A-Go-Go suffix to the end of their name, before they were deemed palatable.

Anyway, Beat Of The Beast are anything but Goths. Beat Of The Beast are entertainers. They douse themselves in American and Soviet regalia, and make the proclamation in their press release that they would like to be very rich. Neat eh?

FUG OUT, JACK

Their vinyl releases to date add up to a solitary double A sided single, Amber Sun/Cold Sister, a record which is really a misrepresentation of their present day set.

Their new sound is different: a hysterical male voice rotates around fluctuating drums, guitars tainted with feedback and a pendulous bass. They'll grab you by your arm and take you away screaming into their world where "... we exist to give people a good time and to have fun . . ."

Right! Dave Potter

TELL TALE HEARTS

Anyone who's man enough to admit they come from Piddington deserves a coveted UG TND! TELL TALE HEARTS have more than the quirky name of their Northampton homebase to merit the attention, however. The band's name, taken from Edgar Allen Poe's The Tell Tale Heart, isn't the slightest bit indicative of what they're about, insists the vocalist Mark Refoy.

"I think a group's name assumes its own identity once it gets known, don't you?"

He's probably right so let's call it a glorious coincidence then because their wonderful recent 12 inch, The Eight Till Late, is an achingly heartfelt rendering.

Guitars are petulant and simple while Refoy's vocals temper mood with melancholy. Jingly Jangly Sperm, which features on the flip side, is observing, sad, funny and beautiful. Hidden somewhere in the obscurity there's music with a meaning.

Finances permitting, The Tell Tales hope to release their, as yet untitled, subsequent single real soon. Arise, Sir Mark of Piddington, your public awaits! Alex Kadis

WALKING SEEDS

"Whatever happened to The Mel-O-Tones?" I hear you ask.

After the band's divide, Frank from Barnet and Bob from Barrow re-emerged to form grungy reefer rock group WALKING SEEDS. Marque Chapman, the follow up to their debut Know Too Much, is a veritable acid bath of wailing vocals, submerged urgency and the sleaze of a Soho street corner. The result is a mutant pop explosion, sullied, indefinable and, probably, unmarketable.

"We get treated as if we've got an economic death wish, which is just not true. We're not deliberately anti-earning cash — we wanna rake it in! But at the same time we wanna do what we wanna do."

Much revered by Mark E Smith, May saw the Seeds touring with The Fall at the personal request of the great man himself! We know a threat to fame when we see one and we're not about to let history laugh at us thank you very much. Alex Kadis Influential hip-hoppers Five Star may have started something!

"We're definitely looking for some serious financial sponsorship," chortles Mike West of THE MAN FROM DELMONTE. A certain company comes to mind immediately, but that's a different can of fruit, we're talking serious ambition with these posters. Ten minutes on 'majors', 'advances', and one of life's great mysteries 'The A&R man', and we're of the common agreement that "Virgin could afford to risk a measly £10,000" on this particular venture.

But they're not unhappy with their lot — their debut single, Drive Drive Drive, has established them as one of the best unsigned bands in Manchester. Australian expatriate Mike, guitarist Martin, bassist and proud mother Sheila, and AWOL drummer Howard make up the happy quartet who are serious, but not, er, serious.

"I want it to progress as far as possible but when I stop enjoying it, that's it," says Sheila, on everyone's behalf. Heard it before? Well at least this group look and sound like they mean it; on stage they draw the happiest of mediums between musical professionalism and a quirky unpredictability.

The music itself is a lesson in the original art of the guitar-based pop song, very '60s — Freddie And The Dreamers, Jake Thackery, Jonathon Richman, Uncle Tom Cobbley and all.

The second single, Water In My Eyes, again on the Ugly Man label is just the start of a summer of serious enjoyment. Craig Ferguson

NAMEDROP

CATAPULT

They've hardly opened their eyes since birth, but CATAPULT's first single, Summary/Subtle, is already something of a revelation. These are 1987's most inspiring guitars — ringing, diving, circling around murmured, introvert melodies and vocals. The group are friends of The Wolfhounds, inhabiting the same East London pitch — Dave Wolfhound, if pushed, reckons "Catapult are close to a cross between Wire and Primal Scream"(!!) but I can hear an early New Order density inside an elastic 4AD sphere — a combination of startling moods where nothing feels recycled. "Uh, thanks, really . . ." says a Catapult.

Quote of the month, and record of the moment, released on their own Stop To Start label (through the Cartel, or contact Catapult c/o 39, North Road, Islington, London, N7). Martin Aston

The Third Mind roadshow hits the French capital. Mood music and Satie get lampooned, the EEC wins out Canterbury's Third Mind Records, with four monstrously talented acts, are off to Paris with records to plug and reputations to enhance. At least, that was the theory...

Only trouble was, I'd missed the bus. However rebellious its image, rock 'n' roll runs to a strict timetable.

The train journey affords me the time to re-acquaint myself with the Third Mind sound. My Walkman sizzles as wailing harmonies and ghostly shivers caress and chill the soul with their friendly hauntings. We have Attrition, the Coventry politicians, Bill Pritchard, the guitar-bashing bard, Beautiful Pea Green Boat, whose Obsessions LP tops my playlist, alongside Paintbox, the Tragic Venus track on the label's For Your Ears Only double compilation.

The coach is unmistakable, it's the one without reclining seats, video and toilet facilities. We are to make do with our own wit, but the drive through Northern France proves to be a cool affair. I put it down to nervous, inexperienced bands, and fall asleep to the motormouth babble of Attrition's Garry, resident 'lad'. His perpetual and hilarious Black Country rap is the life and soul of the party; only nobody's laughing.

That evening, I sit at a boulevard terrace with Brian, the coach driver. The occasional Third Mind wanders by. There go the mysterious Tragic Venus, they look like goths, but sound like liquid gold. Down the rue a spasticated Garry bores the locals with mythical descriptions of Coventry City's cup final heroics. Bill drops over for a chat, but no-one sees Pea Green Boat.

Morning finds us trapped in the tiny hotel, attacked, outflanked, and flim-flammed by a blustering army of French media militia. Radio stations, fanzines and grown up magazines like Best, the French Rolling Stone bombard their quarry with questions, serious questions, as is the continental way. Typically the shysters of Tragic Venus sneak off, muttering something about a guitar string, while Attrition are itchy to hit the Eiffel Tower.

The Rex Club nestles beneath a nine screen cinema complex whose enormous queues initially have the Third Minders hearts fluttering wildly. That's until it's realised the crowd are squabbling over seats for Pea Wee's Big Adventure. Indeed, the gig audience are a strangely subdued and sober selection. Partly due to drinks at four notes for a half, but mainly because they are French muse-industry types fresh from a conference, of which our event is an integral part.

The Third Mind ethic involves a sparse approach, synth based, taped rhythm. The stage is an almost barren landscape; keyboard, cassette player and perhaps the odd guitar. Perversely the audience prickle with hardware. More cameras than yer average branch of Dixon's. Tape recorders here, video camera's there. More equipment is recording the live event than creating it.

Tragic Venus are minimalists. Two sullen statuette boys punch one tiny keyboard, a bizarre visual presence to accompany Bette Davis' startling and brittle operatic vocal gymnastics. The sound owes much to Satie and Diamanda Galas, which is hardly surprising. Satie in particular is a recurring theme in the Third Mind psyche. As Paintbox tails off, fragile Bette explodes into tears. It's her public debut. Later she confides, "It was terrifying, yet brilliant. The idea that everyone's eyes and ears are on you alone is exhilarating."

The nerves are nagging Pea Green too. Heather bounces about with a burr in her saddle, while laughing Ian looks constipated. Still, that doesn't stop a shimmering cascade of melodic beauty seeping through the club. But the English accented Edinburgh duo feel cheated: "We mixed it for POW! but it came out PUFF!"

The aversion to drummers leaves a serious lack of visual aggression in live

Bill Pritchard, in the shadow of the shutters performance. There is an understandable reluctance by the French to enthuse over basically studio taped sound. Gutsy Bill Pritchard is most in tune with his audience. The speedy string bashing and almost singalong style places the Francophile with the matinee idol looks firmly in their hearts. They enthuse over the picture postcard, kitsch classic visions.

"I'm sick of synths, I want to get back to basics," he'd warned last night. Ulrike, his German girly quipped that it was probably more to do with his short memory.

Jeux Sont Frontiers it wasn't, but if points were awarded for reaction Bill would be going for gold.

Naturally, Attrition would then have to play the Joker or rigalo as the locals now referred to Garry. Unfortunately their wordy material proved a largely insurmountable barrier for the French, the message buried under a muddy mix.

As even Brian the bus noted, "Totally unsympathetic, the wrong audience entirely."

We didn't see much of Paris, but it mattered not, the bands were happy, they'd made contacts, picked up publicity, even a bit of money. Had it all been worthwhile? The man from Third Mind, he says yes!

◀ RUMOUR II OF THE MONTH: Colourbox did Star Trekkin? ▶

Ian Dickson talks to ROIR boss Neil Cooper

"The name of the company is R.O.I.R.; Reachout International Records inc!" affirms Neil Cooper with pride. R.O.I.R. (say 'Roar!'), having conquered New York has recently arrived on these fair shores with the uphill task of endearing itself to the British (and European) music consumer. No mean feat for a record label that doesn't release any records; well, no vinyl anyway. You see, ROIR is a cassette-only label.

● When launched by entrepreneurial maverick Neil Cooper some six or so years back, the guffaws could be heard the length of Manhattan. But the cynicism was short lived. A glance at the ROIR catalogue will tell you why; Television, Fleshtones, Johnny Thunders, New York Dolls, Lydia Lunch, Einsturzende Neubauten, Bad Brains, Nico, Suicide, Ruts DC...

● But why work exclusively with cassettes?

● "I started to think that I had to do something different to get attention. I started to hear product coming out of England by Malcolm McClaren which was out on cassette and it interested me. I thought if I get a record out on vinyl then I'm just like all the rest, there's nothing to distinguish me. Also, the people I wanted to work with, like my first four releases — Lydia Lunch, James Chance And The Contortions, The Dictators and Suicide — if I had approached them with a vinyl deal they would have wanted much more money than I was able to pay them."

● As well as being nicely packaged with band pics, sleeve notes written by name journalists, and quite often lyric sheets, ROIR tapes constitute a highly collectable series due mainly to the fact that they all contain previously unreleased material.

● "Almost all has been unreleased," says Cooper. "The Dictators and James Chance we recorded live in a nightclub. Most of it until recently wasn't released before in any format. On occasion now we will licence or put out cassette releases of those deleted on vinyl. Prince Far-I which was Adrian Sherwood's project was no longer available on vinyl and our next releases, Ruts DC and the Mad Professor which are both deleted. But for the most part, our output has never been released before."

● Neil Cooper exudes an industrious Broadway spirit that is due in no small part to his background as theatrical agent and promoter. He has represented Warren Beatty in Hollywood, he has acted as U.S. manager to Shirley Bassey and for a while he managed the jazz legend Charlie Mingus. He also speaks with nonchalant indifference about his dealings with Her Royal Highness; Madonna Ciccone.

● "At my club in New York, I put Madonna on about ten times and at that time she was singing R&B, very Motown orientated. She never got more than 75 dollars because nobody knew her then, but she was wonderful, like a Motown shouter. I've been searching in my apartment because I know I did an off-the-desk recording of her but I haven't been able to find it."

● Christ! The man's got the Holy Grail somewhere in his apartment and he's sitting here talking to me! But what else would you expect from a chap who, while working as a Crown agent in 1965 acted as currency adviser to Haile Selassie, a relationship which has elevated him in the eyes of his Rastafarian artists.

● "I have kept a very exhaustive file on Haile Selassie to show them so that they treat me alright," laughs Cooper. "Bad Brains, which has been my biggest seller is a case in point. There were six contracts which they ripped up until I showed them that I knew Haile Selassie and I showed them the letters from him and the pictures of us together, then they signed without reading the contract."

Martin Aston runs through the ROIR collection

● ROIR has unquestionably been one of the independent sector's most brilliant of artistic ventures. Suddenly, ROIR UK, distributed by Red Rhino has emerged with the full catalogue in tow (now for realistically affordable prices) and at least ten new releases — still tape-only — on the table.

● It's a brilliant catalogue of original, exclusive, sought-after, salvaged independent music, more often than not stripped of record-company interference and thus sounding like God, or at least how it's maker intended, drunk or otherwise!

● Naturally, an emphasis is placed on the American — and New York — network, from punk's iconoclastic blast onward, but there are enough left-field specials to make this one of the world's broadest, most sussed catalogues.

● It's doubtful that ROIR's range is fully known, but here's a taste: Live cassettes from Nico, The Raincoats, Television, Lounge Lizards, Malaria, Sex Gang Children, Bush Tetras, 8-Eyed Spy, Flipper, The Dictators, James Chance And The Contortions (ROIR's first ever release), Einsturzende Neubauten, even ? & The Mysterions reunion concert from 1984, plus collections of prime garage, underground, hardcore, dub (c/o Adrian Sherwood's goldmine), metal and essential New York singles 1977-80.

● What about the bunch of American independent stalwarts that despite a lack of British recognition, were still collapsing old values — Germs, Stimulators, Human Switchboard, Scientific Americans, Shox Lumania. Shall I go on?

● Black soul, funk, dub and rap dynamics from Prince Charles, Alfonia Tims, Brother D And Silver Fox and Prince Far I... real archive material from New York luminaries like Richard Hell, Glenn Branca, MC5, Johnny Thunders, New York Dolls, Bad Brains, Suicide and The Fleshtones.

● It's said that the Peel Session EP's on Strange Fruit have become a collector's series — if anything, the quality of this series is so upgraded that there should be a pocket money revolution. You get the drift?

● Next up: live Johnny Thunders, Suicide, The Dickies, UK Subs, plus archive Polyrock, Skatalites, Jamaican-Japanese dub, Radical Songbirds Of Islam, compositions by Borofsky and Tomney influenced by Islamic prayer chants and last, Peter Gordon's Otello, apparently a Talking Heads-style approach to Verdi's opera. Signs that ROIR are widening the breadth of their operation.

● There's history in them magnetic grooves. Fast forward.

Just a few pix from the ROIR inside wallet. Next month we'll have a special competition to win the only ROIR vinyl ever pressed. To launch the label in Europe, a special set taken from the catalogue has been put on record. There are just 500 numbered copies, and we have 12 to give away. See you next month!

Let's beat it up!

The importance of being Eithne! Holly Wood finds the real rap with Talulah Gosh... There's life after cuteness, and don't blow those bubbles bozo!

THERE ARE three of us on the front seat of the Talulah Gosh tour van, Mathew Fletcher, drums, beer, vodka, cider and chips, Chris Bass, a man with Black Sabbath on his Walkman, and I are rhyming and stealin' our way through an impromptu Beastie Boys set when suddenly...

"Peter's in the back 'cos he's skeezing with Amelia!"

Mathew respects neither his sister's person nor her privacy. While backing singer Eithne lies the other way across the mattress listening to Chris' Sabbath tape in seemingly blissful ignorance. "There is," young Mathew claims, "a degree of hanky panky going on underneath the Talulah Gosh tour quilt!"

When you talk to Amelia Fletcher over the 'phone, she sounds the sort of girl you would have hated at school. In fact she sounds like she's still there, back in the fourth year, still giggling, still getting on everyone's tits. She certainly doesn't sound like a second year Oxford philosophy undergraduate, she definitely doesn't sound like she's living with The Older Man, and there's no way she sounds like she's the leader of one of the best pop bands in the country.

But then there have been a lot of misconceptions about Talulah Gosh. Some people have called them cute and twee, others have called them fascists and a lot of people have just sat back and ignored them in the vain hope that they'd just go away.

The fools who've ignored them have shit for brains! While the idiot who threw the Nazi iron into the fire hasn't even got that. But the ones who've got it most wrong really are the ones who honestly believe in the anorak, cutie-pie, let's pretend, 15 forever, Winnie The Pooh chic.

"We played in Sheffield a couple of days ago, and this boy, this cutie came up to me after the soundcheck and asked me if I'd like to play marbles! And then 20 minutes later he asked Mathew!" Amelia incredulously recalls, "And then when we were playing he started blowing bubbles at us!"

Amelia isn't the sort of girl I would have hated at school. She's beautiful, she's funny and she's flawed in a way that would make it impossible for anyone who's ever talked to her or seen her on stage to hate her. As we sat on the grass outside a motorway service station on the way to Yeovil, chewing both veggie burgers and the non-animal fat, I could understand just why my boyfriend is completely besotted with Talulah Gosh.

So you're not cuties then? You didn't want to play with his marbles?

"He wasn't really my type, and I really don't think he had all his marbles anyway."

Later that night, dancing along to the Talulah Gosh on-stage onslaught, I was shocked by the extreme power this allegedly twee little girly pop band bring to their art. I've seen The Stupids and I've seen The Cult and I've seen Talulah Gosh, and I know which band is the fastest, the most intense, the funniest, the best, the best, best, best.

In her 'Talulahs Suck Dick' baseball cap, Amelia dominates the scene in a way which puts smiles on every single face in the room. "Don't talk to me about The Monkees," she sings, "don't talk to me about the Russians, let's just talk about you. Because you're the most miserable, manic depressive bastard I've ever had the misfortune to fall in love with."

A sentiment we can all identify with. Sung with an appealing honesty and an essentially feminist assertiveness, these are words which reconcile both independence and romance. You think, the Talulahs sing, that the universe revolves around you, well it bastard well doesn't!

Though Amelia is the focal point of the group, she certainly isn't the only good thing about Talulah Gosh. And to her eternal credit, there's no way she thinks the universe revolves around her. Back in the van on the way home to Oxford after another successful show, the Talulah Rhythm Section spell a few things out for me.

"The thing about this band is that Peter and Amelia love all these nicely, nice, inoffensive little pop groups like The Chesterfields, and they write songs that they fondly imagine are going to sound just the same. But their songs are often a lot better, and then when Mathew and me get our hands on them, well we just don't play them like that. We beat them up!" Chris Scott has just put his finger on the secret of Talulah Gosh, he's just explained the wild fragmented exhilaration that makes them just about the best band Yeovil — home of The Chesterfields — will ever see.

He and Mathew are the "rock out" element of the band, their tastes lie more towards The Ramones, primitive metal and primal hip hop, and their own aggressive rhythms form the bed-rock foundation for the battering-ram charm of the Talulahs at their best. While Peter and Amelia provide the majority of the melody and the pop awareness

(although Mathew has written some of their very best songs, he uses Amelia to translate his thoughts into actual music and chords and things!). But what about Eithne? What does she do? Well, arguably the most lovable Talulah of them all, she has a special talent for happiness — a quality which both she and Amelia radiate from the stage — and she's simply there to dance and to bash her tambourine and to sing whatever backing vocals she can remember. She has started writing songs of her own, again Amelia is the middleman, and she will get to sing lead vocals sooner or later, but really she's a Talulah because the others want her to be!

"Eithne's useless," Mathew explains, "she's a real spaz. But she knows she is. She knows she can't sing or even play the tambourine in time, but she doesn't care. So why should we? She's great. And she's in the band because we all love her. Eithne's the most important member of the band because she's the one thing that stops us getting too serious about it all. She stops us becoming professional!"

Amelia (right) and Eithne.

New names for pop stars.

POET AND HER ROOTS ANNE CLARKE

takes five to pick fave influential poets

The words of Anne Clarke, poetess and one of 10's young protegees, her current home after being scooped from aspiring independent Red Flame a couple of years ago. Intent on innovating the poetic form, she has been chanting her own brand of blatant verse for yonks, and as she prepares for a huge tour of Europe (where she's huge), Anne takes time out to give Underground her five fave poets (in no particular order).

Billy Childish

His stuff is excellent.
I mean, it's rude, crude and aggressive.
That's the sort of stuff that should be taught in schools.
He's a modern writer but I do like traditional stuff too.

Christina Rossetti

The pre-Raphaelite writers were wonderful.
I love the way
they used language.

Dante

He was a kind of hopeless romantic dreamer.
This was the sort of stuff that society was built on.
Now it's tits 'n' bums 'n' bingo!

Philip Larkin

He's an obvious
one.
He wrote
This Be The Verse
which is on the new album.
I read it when I was at school.
You do the crappiest poetry when you're at school and I remember thinking there's got to be something better than this.
So I went hunting 'round the bookshelves and found that.
It was when I was 15 and going through the crisis of hating your parents while they hate you.
I read this and I thought, 'Oh!
Somebody else has felt the same!'

Victoria Wood and Julie Walters

They are just ridiculous and simple.
They take the saddest situations and turn them into something ludicrous.
They're totally uncontrived.
They just say 'This is us. You either weep at it or you laugh at it'.
Which is so important.

"Unfortunately poetry with a capital P has got a horrible connotation.
That's basically that it's elitist and has become an archaic art form."

This has been an Alex Kadis expose

So there you have it. If you want to discover the power of the poet, Anne's new LP, Hope Road, is well worth a listen.

VERY LOUD

The column where metal melts

Er, not a lot happening this month was the strangled cry of Whiplash as he disappeared to the pub. I rang Music For Nations but they're on holiday, he claimed. Right, fine. Peter Chalcroft from Metalworks disagrees, though, and forceably made Ronnie "The" Randall go to see Virus — who are in fact bleeding brill. Sadly the group were only exchanging skateboards with the poncey Suicidal Tendencies. But they do have lots of tattoos and we'll be studying these in a future ish when their record arrives. Triv Tel (disguised as Whiplash)

Quiphola

Slicked back, bass slapping, punk-a-billy

ABC and ID have teamed up with Jetti-soundz to bring you video films of Restless live at the Sugarhouse, Lancashire and Demented Are Go live at the Klub Foot, London. The first is entitled Baby Please Don't Go (JE 157) and the latter is aptly referred to as Sick! Sick! Sick! (JE 158). On the record front, ID's a bit on the quiet side, but ABC release, on 12 inch only, a cover of The Rolling Stones classic 2,000 Light Years From Home by German psychedelics Multicoloured Shades — taken from their forthcoming LP Sundome City Exit. Also, about to go into the works is a live album from pretty boys Restless, as yet untitled.

Up and coming on Nervous is an album from R&B enthusiasts The Rhythm Aires, to be closely followed by the compilation LP Zorch Factor Two. Teen favourites Torment are about to start work on an album with Frenzy's Steve Whitehouse producing. Label guru Roy Williams also informs me that Skitzo and The Pharoahs have been doing good business live wise in Germany, and they're currently negotiating a visit to Yugoslavia where the rockabilly/psychobilly market is reported to be huge.

- The Medway Powerhouse album mentioned last issue has been put back until the autumn, but the Billy Childish album I've Got Everything should be out as you read this. About to go into production are Root-En Raunch by Sexton Ming (with Childish on guitar) and Don't Give Any Dinner To Henry Chinosky by Thee Mighty Caesars, featuring early demos and recordings found lying around the garden shed.
- Fans of the French cartoonist Antoine Bernhart, whose work has been used by The Cramps (1986 tour programme), Tall Boys (Johnny's skull), The Meteors (Teenagers...) and Crazyhead (latest t-shirt), may wish to know he's just signed a t-shirt deal with a newly formed merchandise company. The first range is a ghoulish Walt Disney collection featuring Mickey Mouse as a skinhead and Pluto as a quiffed leatherjacketed hoodlum, among others. They'll be distributed by Outer Limits.
- Over at the Big Beat beanery, The Bugs' debut album, Darkside, is now on the racks. It features the original line up, bassist Lloyd (ex-Vibes) has now departed for pastures new.
- In Anagram's continuing pussy saga, the latest album is For A Few Pussies More (GRAM 29), featuring fourteen of your favourite acts including The Wigs, Guana Batz and the legendary Levi Dexter And The Ripchords. Snakey G

MASTERMIX

Full beats on suicidal throw downs!

- Slab make the surprise record of the month, Smoke Rings, on Ink, sounds like George Clinton did the drums and bass and it's getting heavy rotation in New York, as is the new Nitzer Ebb 12, Let Your Body Learn on Mute. New Order have given the Arthur Baker treatment to Section 25's Bad News Week on Factory, which manages to funk along at an incredible 202 bpm, and that's not hanging about.
- Jive are grabbing acts as fast as they can; from Master Music come North Londoners The Wee Papa Girl Rappers and their new release Rock The Clock, while from Flame comes Schoolly D. Whodini are due to bring out a new LP, Open Sesame for Jive pretty soon, too.
- Rhythm King make up for losing Schoolly D, with the release of Shawnee G's reworking of Mission Impossible and Sun D'Moet has finally made it into the charts.
- At Champion Pual Ockenfield is getting busy with Ice T's Make It Funky, Jock E Makossa And Arthur Baker's Opera House while helping to compile the first Def Jam Sampler and plugging the re-release of The Beastie Boys' She's On It.
- Most important re-release has got to be Fab Five Freddie's essential Change Le Beat on Celluloid, who are re-issuing the whole D.S.T. back catalogue, too (all through Rough Trade and the Cartel).
- Streetwave's aggressive A&Ring is yielding gold with 14 acts waiting to go into their soon-to-be-completed studio. It's good to see them developing new talent as well as pumping out the enjoyable but safe comps. Paul Howard

THE UNDERGROUND DETECTIVE AGENCY

GETS THE SCAM ON THE WIRES THAT ARE BUZZING

Pop goes bang!

The Chesterfields put the Kettle on. . .

Just because you make three-minute capsules of hookline pop doesn't mean you want to be escapist or trivial, as Dave, Simon or Dom will tell you. They haven't yet written "Hey, hey, we're The Chesterfields", but they'll sing "they've got electric guitars in their hearts" and they'll sing about the pain in love, the ironies in happiness and the joy of pop. Mind you, others will try and tell you different.

Dave: "Just because we write three minute pop songs that aren't about suicide, we're labelled as twee little boys. People have to suss this out. Everyone's trying to put us down as sugary pop, all sweetness and light, but the words are bittersweet as well."

It's the bittersweet side of being a hopeful pop band in such a cynical pop climate. Kettle is their first long-player, 12 naive, hopeful pop songs that reflect Dave's (and the others, I suspect) voiced influences: Postcard discs, Beatles, Pop-with-Tunes-and-Hooks, in fact. Martin Aston

TV SHOW, ABOUT TIME FOR REPEATS: AUF WIEDERSEHEN PET >

Burnt to the ground

Neubauten and the perfect beat!

"I think people are getting fed up with this type of music," Blixa Bargeld boldly states from Some Bizzare's roof garden. "They've had too much of these kind of bands, and what they've seen wasn't worth seeing."

Einsturzende Neubauten (German for 'Collapsing New Buildings' for those who don't already know) were really the first to venture beyond the conventional Western rhythm with 'industrial' metal objects as percussion. Singer/songwriter/lynchpin Blixa also participates as one of Nick Cave's Bad Seeds but Neubauten is his own expression.

To him, the instruments Neubauten use — currently bass guitar, amplified springs, metal pieces, oil tanks, plastic buckets, an occasional clarinet and most recent, an Emulator — are simply natural.

What's more, they have a new, typically unpronounceable album. What does Blixa hear on the new record?

"I remember walking back from the dentist in Berlin and passing by a second-hand shop and buying a record which had Morning Dew by Tim Rose on it which didn't leave my head for quite a while. It reminds me of playing in Vancouver at the EXPO World Exhibition and having two days free in the studio and recording Morning Dew there because it was the best way to get rid of it. I remember sitting in my hotel room in Melbourne when I was on tour with Nick, when I couldn't sleep, and writing Ich Bin's (It's Me). I remember playing in Bavaria in a big stadium. We played in a building called The Golden Hall which had swastikas as a ceiling decoration which hadn't been used since the war. We were able to play a special performance there, seven degrees celcius in the winter . . . horrible. We made No Beauty Without Danger that night."

This is, like the LP, intense, dissonant stuff. Performances, often as threatening as they are loud. Is there more to the Neubauten experience? You'll have to capture the LP to find out . . . Martin Aston

Control theory

Portion Control sign to London

So, they've finally gone and done it! After years of LP and 12 inch releases in the independent wilderness, Portion Control have clinched a deal with The Pet Shop Boys' management company and subsequently signed on the dotted line with London Records.

With an Arthur Baker mixed single, Conscience, out at the end of this month, and an American deal in the offing, the erstwhile three wide boys of electro-punk are in for a busy time over the coming months.

But why the move to a major after all this time?

"After our last 12 inch, The Great Divide, we felt as if we'd achieved as much as possible on an indie label. That record sold a lot of copies (nearly 20,000, and it actually made the American Billboard charts) and we thought it would be difficult to follow if we stayed independent. For us, the major deal was a natural progression, because we've always been quite commercially minded, albeit with an edge."

Is there any difference in approach now?

"No. We've kept our sound exactly as we want it. All that happens now is that we get to compete with The Birdie Song rather than some hippy shit. The indie scene, because of its supposed lack of commercial pressure, is supposed to be more innovative, but these bands just seem to follow each other like sheep, like the jangly guitar bands or the biker bands. There's not much that's new."

Right, and after hearing the new 45 you can tell that they ain't going to be standing still. Alex Bastedo

Great Alan: happy now!

Thrashing against reality GLF snuff out the Big * Flame

THE GREAT LEAP FORWARD wrap their politics in a music aimed to thrill. While the lyrics, barbed and bang on target, hit out at a world full of injustice, guitars ring out in an abandoned celebration of THE moment. There may be contradictions here but there's also a fine cohesion and tension, and the end result is certainly more essential than the Yuppie appeal of Style Council, or the dull worthiness of Billy Bragg. The immorality of Europe's Common Agricultural Policy and the indignity of labour may not sound too promising as subjects for songs, given the earnest self-righteousness of most politicising pop groups, but the titles, If The Cap Fits Waive It and Haranguing The Boisterous Buffoons, indicate that there's a sense of humour at work here.

Alan Brown, the driving force behind the Great Leap Forward, was previously the bassist with Big * Flame. That group delivered on their promises then promptly dissolved leaving a legacy of half a dozen highly combustible singles, with melodies crammed together so tight you could almost feel them choking each other.

Now free to pursue a more accessible course, the melodies are allowed to develop in a way they never were with Big * Flame. "I realised when I left the group, it was like opening the floodgates. It wasn't a conscious decision to be more accessible, I was always the one who tended towards that anyway, but my contribution would be appropriated into the context of the group. Now I'm only answerable to myself."

A follow up to the Great Leap Forwards' current Controlling The Edges Of Tone is set for the end of the summer. Featuring two new songs and two from a recent Peel Session, it should be well worth the wait. As for live dates, all Alan will say is that he's committed himself to playing in a Manchester rock week come October. Vachel Booth

SURFIN' CLAMBAKE Hot surf poop and psychedelic thangs

Well, would you credit it, Hoxton Leonid gets married then has the cheek to go on honeymoon. This has not been a good month for columns and news, has it? Er, well, I suppose we could mention The Palace Of Light album on Bam Caruso, that's goddam good. Robyn Hitchcock probably went on the honeymoon with Hoxton, The Next Big Thing ish 23 is featured in Sub-Culture on page 8. The Shamen are going wild and this really might just be the return of the summer of love (as All About Eve sign to a major). Spacemen 3 gets reviewed in Underground. Barrence Whitfield also stepped over recently to promote his Demon/Rounder Europa release but Snakey G said his backing band looked too miserable, so he went off again. Triv Tel (in a paisley hand-me-down).

STATION TO STATION Riotous rhythm and reggae onslaught

- The current success of Admiral Bailey extolling the virtues of the Big Belly Man has prompted its inevitable rejoinder. On UK disco this week are issued titles from newcomer Mikey White and veteran DJ Tonto Irie both celebrating Slim Belly Man (Justice and Island respectively) while up on Jamaican pre Peter Metro toasts the same. The long career of Delroy Wilson is presently reactivated with a wealth of new music, including the release this month of discos Stop Acting Strange c/w Don't Put The Blame On Me (Live & Love) and his interpretation of Faye Adams' Shake A Hand (Joe Frasier), plus an LP Which Way Is Up? (Blue Mountain).
- With the release in Canada finally of his overdue Sensi Addict album for Prince Jazzbo's Ujama label, Horace Ferguson now brings forth a latest disco from the same source, coupling Fry Fish And Bread and Trials And Crosses. Also on Ujama is released Frankie Paul, I'm Missing You c/w Prince Jazzbo, The Bible. Up on Jammy's Super Power label is Shabba Ranks with the slack Original Fresh c/w English journalist turned Jamaican toaster Dominic (Kenny) denying any physical resemblance to Culture Club's erstwhile lead singer on Favour Boy George; and on the same label Leroy Gibbons sings She's My Baby c/w a version of The Drifters' Magic Moment.
- Latest from the Legal Light label are Johnny Osbourne with I'm Gonna Make You Love Me and Conrod Crystal, Sweetie c/w Ignorance. Up on the Star Light label out of Harlesden comes Christine Joy White adapting Tammy Wynette's Stand By Your Man, Trevor Walters reworking Bunny Maloney's Baby I've Been Missing You and Dennis Brown singing of a Summer Holiday distinct from Cliff Richard's song of the same title. Evelyn Court

GET SMART a modernist frenzy of soulful delight

- The most interesting release on the modernist scene must surely be the new compilation on Unicorn; Modern Times is the follow up to their last successful collection of international mod groups, Beyond Tomorrow. Featured this time are the pioneers of the current mod/surf craze The Reaction from Bristol (with their Surf Riding, I wonder if they'll go to the extremes L.A. mods did a couple of years back and get special surf boards to fit to the sides of scooters!), as well as The Gents, The Risk, The Threads and Japan's High Style...
- If you've found yourself inadvertently humming the excellent music for that employment agency advert Get A Job, well I'm pleased to announce that Stateside have just reissued the original by The Silhouettes. Great stuff... Italian beat fanatics The Underground Arrows are over this month promoting their No Chance To Escape single, it's their second tour of the UK, their last one being in '83. Check your music paper for dates.
 - Garage superheroes The Flamin' Groovies (22 years at it and still going strong!) have a single taken from their One Night Stand (ABC) album released around now. It's a newly recorded version of their classic Shake Some Action and is backed with Teenage Head... Also out this month is the second album from The Risk, one of the very few bands from The Channel Islands. Called Invitation To The Blues, it precedes a massive Eurotour...
 - The Daggermen have just recorded a new track Ivor The Engine Driver for the forthcoming Re-Elect The President compilation of garage and beat bands, titled For Your Ears Only and featuring (among others) The Crowdaddys, The Creeps, The Teenage Filmstars and Makin' Time. The release date has had to be put back a couple of times and it should now see the light of day in the next few weeks.
 - The James Taylor Quartet, The Prisoners and The Discords have all been confirmed for the forthcoming Medway Powerhouse LP released on Hangman Records soonest... Compwise this month, we've got three copies of the above mentioned Modern Times LP and to win your copy, all you've got to do is answer: Who starred, wrote and directed the film Modern Times? (We'll give you a little clue here, it was a silent movie!?)

get psyched (in a pad of your own)

- Glaswegian five piece, The Bachelor Pad, (they're from Strathbungo if you really MUST know) have set tongues flapping of late. The editor of Underground rants and raves about them, swearing that 'they're going to be REALLY big', and Are You Scared To Be Happy? (the bestest fanzine in the world) says we should sit up and take notice; the band were recently featured on a flexi-disc, along with Baby Lemonade for that mag, and have their thoroughly groovy first single, The Albums Of Jack rolling on Warholasound. ■ Guitarist and co-songwriter Martin Cotter is happy to talk when he is finally located on the end of a telephone in Scotland.
- "We're pleased with the single," he says. "It's kinda noisy, but we're all pretty sick of just spending ages in the studio getting a polished and professional sound."
- A listen to their tape reveals all sorts of candy-coloured influences, the most obvious trailer being a weird Syd Barrett meets Buzzcocks melee. Most important of all, there are actually SONGS in there fighting to get out.
- They want to make money! I am staggered. Such potential, originality and a sense of direction. And, what do you intend to do with all this money?
- "We're going to spend it all on lots of drugs!" he answers, laughing hysterically. "No, actually, I'm not being completely serious."
- The phone fizzles, the man mentions maturity...
- A day later I listened to The Bachelor Pad's version of The Beatles' Norwegian Wood and decided it was much better than the original; these people deserve to be rich and famous so let's give them all our money, and hope they invite us to their house when the party starts.

Rosemary's Children have just released a magnetically precocious, ultimately supreme and dangerously lush album called Kings And Princes. Their sound glows and vibrates, you shouldn't miss it... Tony Fletcher didn't

Ah, the joys of youth. On the other end of the 'phone I have Robert, an effervescent 19-year old understandably happy with the way life is treating him. Following a largely-ignored single on EI last year, entitled Southern Fields, his group, Rosemary's Children have just released Kings And Princes on Cherry Red, a mini-album that has already picked up a modicum of acclaim. It contains five melodic songs, sometimes thrashy but more often wistful, and all with a groovy jingle-jangle that could lead the Children to be termed "psychedelic" if one felt so inclined.

But for now it is enough that Robert is coming to terms with his group — which as well as featuring himself on vocals and 12-string, contains Jake on bass and vocals, Karel on lead guitar and Toby on drums — being liked.

"In the '60s, you could make a brilliant record and get in the charts and be listened to," he tells me with an air of authority. "And that's completely died — it's really frightening. I'd like to be the sort of band that made hit records and people actually listened to."

So if you're not a star by the time you're 21, are you going to call it a day?

"Well, this is a difficult question, because I don't think you should be allowed to be a pop star if you're over a certain age. I don't like many pop stars; I don't have much respect for them. But I think you know when it's time to quit. We'd know if we were just masturbating."

You sound as if the world is smiling on you, Robert.

"Yeah, of course it is!" he rebounds. "We're 19 years old and Toby's really cute and Jake's pretty and it's brilliant. Every record we've done I've felt a lot happier about and..."

But you've only done two!

"Yeah, but I'm 100 per cent happier about Kings And Princes than I was about Southern Fields! I know what's going to be on the album and nobody else does — it's going to be absolutely brilliant. I piss myself laughing when I realise how good the album is going to be."

The chillun of Rosle: pretty psyche, huh?

in store?

"No. When I first heard it I didn't know what it was!"

That figures. Ian's mad as hell. He's not going to take it anymore. Unless he does. In which case he will. Pratinja

THREE ENGLISH FOOTBALL GROUNDS never had a LUDICROUS mouth it

Now then, now then, what can we think of this ridiculous couple, this unlikely group, this phenomenon. Ludicrous? Well, the ridiculous half, asserts that they hated each other to begin with and it's deteriorated ever since. Will, who delivers the punchline, disagrees.

And the punchline follows in which the crux of contention is whether Will hated John because he wore glasses, or because he was a grammar school wimp.

Ah well, the rubbish began in pubs... rubbish which is the stuff of I, Ludicrous songs and essays. Ludicrous which has thrust them into the first division within a few months. Swiftly, following a much requested and highly valuable flexi from Blah... Blah came a first session and now an album for Kaleidoscope.

So what is the formative factor, the bond between you, something...?

"Crystal Palace is the only thing we've got in common... and The Fall." And indeed, Mark E Smith, who, seems to have shaped their nose. It comes over as a resonance of many Flah. They supported their heroes at a gig in London a couple of months back, although naturally I came aboard in absurd circumstances.

The first we knew of it was exactly a month before it was due to play, when we saw the gig advertised. At first we wondered whether there could be another band of the name, but it was us. Mark E liked a tape we'd given him many months ago, and he'd never got in touch with us, so he just booked us."

So where do things go from here? "We want to be on the front page of the Sun under the headline, 'THESE SICK BASTARDS'. I hope you're going to disagree us."

Ian B Bourne

Hate, doom and despondency The Folk Devils go cocktail shaking

The Folk Dev's with our man Lowery stage centre

The Folk Devils are a rumbustious little band with a big, BIG sound which has crossed several areas already — gnarling and flailing like severed power cables — and can be currently found bouncier than ever before on The Best Protection on Beggars Banquet. It is all courtesy of a new line-up, the old Devils having floundered upon the rocks of a disastrous recording session in Holland.

"We do have occasional differences," admits 'main Dev' Lowery, "but nothing approaching the tension of the last group. We had the reputation for being violent but we were only violent to each other. We usually had a punch up in the dressing room before we went onstage, not that it was a ritual. In fact, we got banned from Portsmouth Polytechnic for 'unseemly behaviour', we just smashed the dressing room up. Not out of high spirits, but out of rage!"

Perhaps the change in temperament has been the force behind the viciously upright single, which is a thing of crystalline velocity.

"I don't like the new one," he scowls. "I think it's overproduced and overplayed. It should have been more raw and immediate than it is. My vision was polluted by the producer. They're the most devious race of all. But... it's pointless making excuses 'cos it's done now."

Around the label of the single can be found the phrase 'what can't be cured must be endured'.

"Ah! That's a phrase I found in a book by my favourite author, Jim Thompson. He was classed as a pulp American crime writer in the 40s/50s. His books are bizarre. All his characters are pretty amoral, sick, nasty, violent, bleak and depressing. There's a lot of wit in there. He also uses a lot of crass clichés in his books."

Later at the office, Ian pours mediocre filth, tequila and port mixed, down my throat, and gets starry-eyed listening to The Ramones. Was this what did it for him? Did it change his life? That spellbinding moment of self-realisation of what fate had

In a dubious attempt to come up with a concept, I've arranged to meet Leicester's Indie supergroup Big Zap in a Leicester Square amusement arcade to talk about their single Psychedelic Shack. The Square (W1), is as close as they get to their home town these days. ●

I enter the ultimate zap shack to be greeted by a barrage of deafening noise and proceed to delve deep into the neon recesses of this pit in search of the Zappers.

BIG, BAD AND PSYCHEDELIC

"Yaahh! Whomp that sucker to death." I think I've found Dentover. His craze is the result of too many nights on the road, chewing plastic food and riding the Hang-On motorbike machine that you find at all motorway service stations. He's tucked snugly into the sleek cockpit of Roadblasters, this season's topping game.

"I like high speed driving action, and blasting everyone to buggery," shouts the new werewolf of London. Unfortunately he's a little inexperienced on this one. A mere virgin... "Oooh! Baby, that feels so good," he squeals. But it's all over in a minute, and he's quickly ejaculated from the seat by Sarah of The Bomb Party. Dentover and Craig are with The Janitors while the fourth Big Zap is Gaye Bykers On Acid's Mary.

Mary: "I like lots of speed, lots of noise, lots of hard rhythm, and lots and lots of action." ● Just like Big Zap in fact. The old adage Too fast to live, too young to die doesn't apply anymore. In the electronic wonderland you can die a hundred times and still come back for more. ● Are Big Zap a cynical cash-in or what? ● Mary: "It's a genuine attempt to start an indie supergroup, or, a sharp move to make some fast cash. Take your pick." ● Of course, that was before the Bykers' Virgin deal.

Dentover: "The success of the concept should spread some sunshine over all concerned. In the soul-less '80s, we're not ashamed to admit to craving success and money. We're well into our individual bands, but as close friends we wanted to hold hands and funk off in the studio together. It's a different music for us all. Why pin your sails to one mast? We wanted to feel totally impressed with ourselves."

independent that you couldn't depend on", to release a frantic smash called Family Fantastique on Abstract, the home of Big Zap. Meanwhile The Bomb Party bought back their album, Incest, from Abstract in order to self-release it. Only to be upstaged by The Last Supper collection of old Bomb singles. New product won't now be available until September.

The frustration is obvious, and it's a touchy subject for Sarah, the sweetest smile in psycho splatter. Dentover advises me not to push the matter.

"It's like dipping your head into a compost heap. Let's face it, being independent is like doing an apprenticeship. The scene is watched by the majors who are sniffing out the big stink. When they find it they scoop it up. They're pooper scoopers, which is alright by me. I want them to know that we smell really bad."

You've got to get noticed to be heard these days. It used to be the other way 'round. Not that the Bykers are a house of Tarot cards. In this age of synth'n'sampling non-musicians, the resurgence of hardcore rock - without spandex - is a rejuvenating experience.

Dentover: "They say that with a 30 year back catalogue the only answer is the cover version. The past and the present, rock history condensed. Repeat, repeat, repeat. It's the only way to get a hit."

Mary: "Everyone's doing covers, either directly or indirectly through sampling. We're just jumping on the bandwagon. Soul music has always had seriously demented followers. I'm well into P-Funk period Parliament and all that really heavy stuff. We've dumped on it to rejuvenate it from its creators' remains."

Or, to put it the Spanish way, cago en tus muertos.

Cynical, silly, sensational. However you look at it, Psychedelic Shack, that's where it's at.

Big Zap go to Vegas. Look out Tom Jones!

suicide or bust

SUICIDAL TENDENCIES skate or die.

OK! Are you amped out? Stoked, and ready to get your fingers burgered? You'd better be 'cause full on, serious skate band Suicidal Tendencies are in town! Biggest Arseholes or best band? Their homeland USA has deemed them both.

They're fast and frantic and back home they are BIG — each member weighs in at around 200 pounds! But how will they fare when they grace the shores of Britain? Are they merely the offspring of an exclusive sub-culture, fit only to serve that genre, or will they appeal to the eager ears of our own youth who barely knew what a skate band was until the recent maxi-press coverage? A candid chat with vocalist Mike Muir, across the no-expense-spared Ug! trans-Atlantic hotline reveals all . . .

Mike: "Although we have associations with skaters I wouldn't class us as a skate rock band. People say we're speed metal, we're punk, we're heavy metal, we're skate metal. All those people are into Suicidal. I don't really care what people call it as long as they listen to it. If they like it that's fine. I ain't worried about being a speed metal God or Mr punk rock. That doesn't make me a better person."

Don't you think the Brits are going to think that you're a little strange?

Mike: "Well, the British people shouldn't judge us by our appearance. Like, when we were in England walking down the street, people would be walking into lamposts and stuff! I mean, we're not trendy like a lot of British bands."

Do you think that the British 'kids' will be able to relate to you? To something which is essentially a strain of the American youth culture?

Mike: "I guess we could catch on. It's weird 'cause it's usually the other way round — British bands come to America. But they do fine."

But will Britain's reputed conservatism allow us to hang loose and get Suicidal?

Mike: "Ummm . . . yes! The thing with conservatism is there's always a backlash. It's like half the bad things I've ever done I would never have thought of doing if someone hadn't told me I shouldn't do it in the first place!"

Er, yes! Think we know what you mean! But what about the predictions here that you'll hit the top 40 in our mainstream charts? What do you say to that?

Mike: "If we're successful then that's good. It means that people like our music and that's why we're putting out records."

Well, they're mean, they're tough, irredeemably straight and unrelentingly USA, but incredibly cute for all that. Biggest Arseholes or best band? The decision is yours. Britain cast your votes please. Alex Kadis

SUPER DIAMONO DE DAKAR get hot in Senegal

Super Diamono are a cosmopolitan band, one of the top bands in Senegambia, but their horizons are broad, judging by their array of musical styles. The most striking live vision is the percussion section, Lappa Diagne on the drumkit and Alassane Djigo and Mamadou Maigu on traditional percussion, which moves constantly in and around the snare beats overlaying funk with the mbalax rhythms of Senegal.

■ Mamadou Maigu looking definitely sharp, if slightly incongruous in an American mock college/sports jacket is also one of the three alternating lead vocalists. The others, Omar Pene, described as the veteran, who sings soul in Wolof (one of Senegal's languages) and Moussa Ngom from Gambia, singing in Soce, lend an eerie voice giving grace to their records.

■ Diamono play long sets of dance music. They like to flex some of the muscle they have picked up in the ten years or so that they have played together. From their beginnings, and a mixture of Latin and mbalax, they have also picked up jazz, reggae and blues styles and now present them in a distinctive and accomplished way, a circularity of influence.

■ They were at last year's WOMAD festival where they were slightly overshadowed by co-Senegalese Youssu N'dour Et Les Super Etoiles but if you missed them, there are two albums: Mam and the recently released People, that are well worth seeking out. John Lewis

Crawling through the night

The Lime Spiders spin their web!

It must be the climate. What other possible explanation can there be to justify the tough breed responsible for Australia's granite outpourings? From the land that gave you The Saints and Celibate Rifles come the torch of an indigenous musical integrity which seems hell bent on wiping wimps off the face of the Earth!

"Chief lungs" Mick Blood takes up the story: "Yeah, we mean business down here! It's a bit of a characteristic of Australian rock 'n' roll. It's very hard edged. Groups who are regarded as pop bands over here are a lot more hard edged than their European equivalents."

As a band who started out as a bit of fun could the Spiders be the next successful Antipodean export? It's their fresh attitude and personal treatment of a definitive sound which makes them strong contenders for the title; their current Weirdo Libido EP, the title track of which was originally written for the Australian film Young Einstein, is a brilliant concoction of rasping thunder and sharp humour.

You can see for yourselves this autumn. Until then, be content with The Cave Comes Alive LP, which is being released as you read and the 12 inch My Favourite Room which is taken from the LP (both on Zinger through Pinnacle!) With tongue firmly in cheek it promises to be a good one. The true epitome of a turning point, its caught snugly in a preponderance of past and future. New material demonstrates Blood's growing relationship with the most stable Spiders line up to date while covers such as Cream's NSU and the old Pebbles classic Action Woman are an affectionate glance back to the Spiders' covers band roots.

"Yeah, we made our name that way but then we started to write a lot of our own stuff . . . but we still like to play covers, only we give them the Spiders touch!" Alex Kadis

BARKING AT THE METALHOUSE

Skinny Puppy have invaded Europe, Mark Galbe sees the first batallion land.

Canada's Pups have been together for some time, bracketed neatly in the Front 242, Portion Control, Severed Heads, Cabaret Voltaire, Revolting Cocks school of clinical beat. Last year US major Capitol took up an option on their Nettwerk house label and this year, through Red Rhino and Play It Again Sam, they've been reaching some straining ears in the UK.

■ The current Pup incarnation features stalwarts Dave Ogilvie (referred to constantly as Ogre) and Cevin Key plus last year's acquisition, following the departure of Bill Leeb, of Dwayne Goettel, who answers questions here . . .

■ WHO DOES ALL THE SCREAMING?

■ "Ogre, I suppose, although we've got a lot of taped voices from films and radio, all kinds of weird stuff."

■ HAVE YOU EVER PERFORMED WITH ANY DOGS ON STAGE?

■ "We did plan something like that for Expo with performers and guard dogs, but it never really came off in the end."

■ DO YOU THINK THERE IS A BREAKTHROUGH IN ELECTRONIC/HARDCORE MUSIC, NOW THAT SEVERAL ACTS SEEM TO BE GETTING BIG EXPOSURE?

■ "I don't know if it will grow any bigger, but we are trying to reach as many people as we can. We've never made any sort of plan in the past, we're just trying different things . . . experimenting."

■ SO HOW WOULD YOU CLASSIFY YOURSELVES?

■ "Theatrical heavy noise? I'm not sure, deny all categories, I suppose."

■ For men whose live shows are the most convincing around — original noise that deny description, photographic evidence of such, plus actual experience around you of an explosion in an electrical spray shop — it's ritualistic and radical on a massive high, and that their music should stand up to their aural assault is a savage treat. Great though . . .

TERROR OF THE FURTHER OUTPOST

Jean Marc Lederman gets hyper and hypo about La Muerte

You're just back from the swamp and you don't know if the sweat running down your back is the malaria or the southern comfort . . . either way it stings. Through the headache, the sound can only be LA MUERTE though. The four of them stand in front of you, they look mean . . . like, mean.

■ Sisco plays vibrobass but he won't speak to you, Becky Wreck stays back behind her drums (and that's probably just as well). There's still some leather under the rivets on her jacket and she could tell any Butthole Surfer a few dirty jokes.

■ D Jee plays guitar but he laughs and says he knows nothing about chords — but he does a lot with little while others do nothing with the works. Then there's the voice. The growl behind the gaggle, Marc De La Muerte. He coughs it up like his throat's been slit.

■ So it don't look too good for you. Well, at least they're kind enough not to disguise loudness as power as your head splits and 1,000 Nick Caves fall over your sweating brow like lemmings on a summer outing.

■ Meanwhile, in the UK, La Muerte commit their sins to vinyl. Their latest LP is on Big Disk through Pinnacle. The strings get plucked, a sea of noise overtakes you and there's that voice again . . . ringing, ringing. The LP's called Every Soul By Sin Oppressed and it's big, too big to fit into the megastore even.

After the fever, you'll claim you loved every inch of it. Cough.

Italy in the weird-out cupboard

Vittore Baroni turns his collar up and feels the revolutions

P.E.A.C.E. is a label for special projects, representing the union of several Italian alternative indies (as opposed to more commercially oriented small record companies turning out pop-crap by the thousands). They consist of Blu Bus, Catfood Press, Particolare Music, Rockgarage, Trax and Ut/Comunicazioni, who are all separate entities.

■ The first album produced by P.E.A.C.E. was an LP-benefit for Amnesty International with 11 young Italian bands. And, just released is another benefit project, with voluntary unpaid work from all involved: a double album and booklet of "unheard music, unwritten words and unseen images inspired by fear", entitled F/Ear This!

■ Profits will support the anarchist monthly magazine A/Rivista Anarchica. Contributions are varied geographically and stylistically, and though the theme of "fear" is not always respected, all in all it is an interesting collection of oddities, including a deranged version of the Jesus Christ Superstar theme by Italian Crowley scholars Thelema, inspired poetry from Annie Anxiety and Peter Wright, contributions by well known unconventional ensembles like Nurse With Wound, Die Form and Embryo, plus a dozen very obscure names (ultra-noisy Paroksi-Eksta, flute wizard Gergorio Bardini, Franti, Possession, 2+2=5).

Contact: Catfood Press, c/o Marco Pandin, Via del Gaggian 1, 30170 Mestre-Venezia, Italy).

The people behind Viva fanzine in Rome always had a taste for the exotic and uncompromising. After several packages with heady texts and the occasional tape (SPK, Nocturnal Emissions and the like) they have now developed into a record company. Last summer they released Viva Los Angeles, a stunning survey of new semi-experimental groups in the California area (Bay Of Pigs, Savage Republic, Drowning Pool, Randall Kennedy, 17 Pygmies), including a 60 page booklet of texts and informations (you guessed right, it's in Italian!).

■ Now, Viva Records have just produced a whole album by Drowning Pool, one of the most promising bands on the previous compilation. This four piece from Costa Mesa play a ritualistic and evocative mixture of raga, folk, minimal, whatever, interspersed with the fluid vocals of Andrew Crane. Sometimes they remember the, now sadly deceased, Savage Republic, but with more clean and meditative openings. Rock meets folk meets ambient electronics: a second album is already being assembled.

■ Contact: Viva Records, c/o Disfunzioni Musicali, Via degli Etruschi 4/14, 00185 Roma, Italy.

Oink-out, man!

Cassette revolution in US and the birth of Sound Of Pig!

In a way, it represented the coming of the third independent wave, and in a way it went further than hardcore by being the first music ever to be both recorded and released on cassettes specifically. When the American tape underground exploded in the early 1980s it heralded a major change in musical perception and recognition, reaching as far as The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal. Some cassette labels were big news, specializing in electronic and otherwise far out musics, beginning with compilations only and branching out to release full cassette albums by international artists. Sound Of Pig was one of these labels.

■ Begun by Al Margolis in 1984, SOP was at first a reaction to the ever-increasing network of cassette-only artists. Gradually, through reputation and sheer endurance it has become one of the most respected cassette labels in the US, along with Tellus and Cause And Effect.

■ Today over 100 releases are listed in the SOP catalogue, including tapes by Big City Orchestra, Psyclones, Schlafengarten, and Nails Ov Christ. Al answers his mail personally, and can be reached at 28 Bellingham Lane, Great Neck, NY 11023, USA. Al also trades cassettes for practically any good reason at all; so do it up, babe. Carl Howard

Confessions Of A Pop Icon Number Two: Hitting The Stage As High As A Small Garden Shed

Regular readers of Mr Underground will know that I had moved to London, crowbar in hand, ready to prise the gold from the paved street. This wealth, has been craftily obscured by a pack of government trained dogs with decidedly poorly insides. So digging has been abandoned.

New idea: The band is to play for Joe Public at a North London public house on the same night as New Order and other Factory luminaries were to play 400 yards away in a circus tent.

Fact One: Planning is of the essence when setting up a bash. No doubt Factory supremo Tony Wilson was pretty bloody worried when he realised a rival roadshow was on his doorstep, obviously pride prevented him cancelling (although we put him on the guest list just in case).

Fact Two: Guest lists are usually scrawled illegibly on wrinkled scraps of paper handily loseable by the 'I'm getting 20 quid' soldier of fortune on the door. Inevitably the list is full of people who don't turn up. Jeremy Journalist has sudden micro-surgery, Gerry Enormous of Fatty-Filth-Wallet-Pig Records is strangling his mistress and DJ Simon Braindeath is charity nude para-gliding with the Wombie Show Business eleven.

As the evening proceeds, the reason for this may become apparent, though...

Fact Three: The trouble with pub venues is that the beer and nub-end flavoured carpet increases the gravitational pull of the earth due to its sticky properties and ones fashionable winkle-sandals tend to adhere with alarming regularity.

Fact Four: Another joy of playing live is the audience. They take many forms, they often contaminate your beer, alarm small pets and should never be put on guest lists.

Ah, live music, the true spirit of UK inventiveness, style and whatever... this is your icon signing off. Blip!

TIP

Julian Henry bundles another trundle of tapes into his leathette mailsack and threatens editor Dave Henderson's neighbours with the first "Outdoor Tip Sheet" of the season. A fine full bodied selection, with wine and cheese to follow, as Henderson (formerly of Noise, Sounds, Q, The Hit (hmmm), and currently of Music Week, Underground and Which CD?) casts an independent eye over the latest chromium contenders. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential. Er, well, let battle commence...

THE NIVENS (63 Evesham Place, Beaconlane, Cramlington, North-umberland) write songs with titles like Tales Of A Duffelbag and sound twee in the style so successfully pioneered by Edwyn Collins on the early Orange Juice recordings. Neither Dave nor myself were particularly rivetted by their cassette though, as we suspected a lack of true inspiration behind the Niven's simplistic shambblings.

"Are they being twee just for the sake of it, or do they play marbles for real?" quizzed Dave in a typical fit of crypto-journalese, revealing once again why he is the editor of the world's most underground monthly. (Cripes!)

4 5 6 5

THE POPPIES (31 Meadow Way, Chigwell, Essex) play what I would term, 'The Creation Sound'. A scan of their fact-sheet reveals that they've supported luminaries such as The Wedding Present, Primal Scream and The Bodines.

I wonder if the group realise that there are so many other people singing and playing just like them — jangly guitars, whispered vocals etc — so many so, in fact, that I would hesitate before terming this music either underground or alternative. It's more like student rock '87 style.

Anyway the group probably don't care about that, they're just dying to hear what the editor of Underground has to say. "If they were my mates, I'd probably really like this," says Dave. "As it is, it sounds like all those records you hear playing on Janice Long but don't really know much about. A bit uninspiring."

5 4 4 5

THE LOW GODS (c/o 249 Harvist Road, Kensal Rise, London NW6) win the most coveted 'Tape Of The Month' award, albeit in the face of some pretty unexceptional opposition. Their package looked good — photographs xeroxed onto tracing paper — and their tape was well-recorded and pretty pro. It turns out one of them used to be in Wasted Youth, but looking at the picture you wouldn't guess, as they look dreadfully trend and contemporary.

"They sound like a major label signing to me," says Dave. "It's good to hear a saxophone on a tape for a change," he added, referring to what I had recognised only as a vague wailing sound.

7 7 8 7

THE SMOKING MIRROR (c/o 127 James Turner Street, Birmingham, B18 4ND) did not make lots of friends with their press release which tells us that their previous cassette is "selling well despite recent promotional inactivity", and that they're soon due to start a "large promotional drive". It sounds rather as if they've written it with an A&R man in mind, as if hoping to make it look like they're hot stuff. Crikey. Pull the other one! Dave didn't like it, saying it was pompous and boring. I agree.

So, if you want your demo tapes given the attention that they no doubt deserve, send them along to Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1.

THE BIBLE FOR DOGS (c/o 78 Colney Hatch Lane, Muswell Hill, London N10 1EA) have sent us a tape before, and ask us this time if we'll listen harder and come up with a more thoughtful reaction. Dave concentrated for what seemed like years before making the following declaration: "A really professional sound but the songs aren't strong enough to carry it. All the instrumentation is good but it lacks emotion."

Now there's a critique I've never heard before! (I suppose you'll edit that bit out Henderson).

But hang on, he's off again: "You would have to listen to this really loud to appreciate it. Unfortunately, I can't see it impressing many A&R men." So there you are Bible For Dogs, a far-reaching and penetrating review from the editor of Underground.

2 4 4 2

The impressively named ADAM BOMB (c/o CCC Management 0101.212.644.8900) sends us an expensive pair of glossy photographs and a pile of press cuttings from America that tell us he's due 'to explode at any moment'. Blimey! Stand well back lads! Adam records in Hawaii and likes groups like Michael Schenker and Aerosmith, which all seems rather far-flung from us grubby pen-pushers here at Underground. I wonder what on earth he's doing sending cassettes to the Tip Sheet. Surely he's much too busy 'exploding' or 'bustin' loose' or whatever it is these American super-groups get up to. Anyway, we think his tape sounds pretty useless, so there.

2 2 2 2

BASEMENT MANIA (c/o 85 Lower Boxley Road, Maidstone, ME14 2UT) call their cassette "alive and dying". Hmmm! Is music really THAT important to these people? It doesn't sound like it, as their singer's delivery veers towards the drab.

The Henderson opinion is that they're under-produced as they seem to be attempting clever pop, or something like that, but it's really too amateur to make it much further than the starting post.

5 4 6 4

UK INVASION OF THE MONTH: Pending news of a new Savage Republic line up

THE HIPSTONES (c/o 61 Rugby Place, Kempton, Brighton) must be enterprising fellows because their cassette arrived disguised as a Kitkat — I almost ate it by mistake! Dave's foot was seen to tap for a moment (or perhaps he was stepping on an ant) and then he disappeared off to find himself some beer, leaving critical opinion in my hands. Errr... well, it sounds very nice. I believe these people like '60s groups as they rarely explore further than distorting the mike slightly just as The Jesus And Mary Chain do. Oh, but hang on, the next song sounds just like The Velvet Underground. Honestly, groups these days!

DEATH BANG PARTY (c/o Diligent Productions, PO Box 302, London SE1 1TN) sent us a package with lots of bits and pieces like confetti, photographs of people dropping their trousers, and very rude badges which we can't possibly talk about. Despite being most entertained by this thoughtful selection of goodies, we weren't bowled over by the music. Dave sums up: "They make the mistake of sending a great package which makes us want to hear something dramatic on the tape... when the music turns out to be so ordinary, we are, of course, most disappointed."

2 4 6 4 ↓

UG: BALLOONING ENTHUSIASTS TO A MAN

KRYSTAL NACHT (Pant Idda, Longford Road, Holyhead, Gwynedd, Wales) are selling their cassette of five songs for a pound which seems like a bit of a bargain. Dave said he thought they sounded like The Cult, which then sparked off a row about what we all think about them... however, as far as Krystal Nacht are concerned, we felt mildly enthusiastic about their tape, but it must be said that the singer sounds like a right gloomy blighter.

COMBAT POLICE (80 Higher Drive, Banstead, Surrey) make quite an unholy din that is really rather appealing. There are loads of ideas — radio cut-ups, excerpts from films — and a doggedly nihilistic approach as to how they actually record their music.

Perhaps the future of rock 'n' roll lies somewhere down this road. Dave agreed that there's plenty of creative resources at work, but pointed out that the songs themselves are a mite insubstantial — what else could we expect from a group who tell us that their main influences are The Beastie Boys and Fuzzbox?

6 4 7 7

DEADBEAT SPACE TRUCKERS (c/o 174 Junction Road, London N19 5QQ) do not, unfortunately, draw rounds of unrestrained applause from Dave. "It's too down-trodden," he says, "no real personality comes through and all I feel about this cassette is that it reflects a real support band mentality."

Meanwhile, the group's deadpan psychedelic mumbling whitters on. By the time we reach the third song we've had enough.

3 3 3 2

DAZ ODEUM (no address supplied) have made a cassette full of grumbling noises and mutterings which I have great difficulty in coming to terms with. Dave is capable of telling the rough from the smooth with this sort of thing though, and he immediately pointed out that this was exactly how Cabaret Voltaire began their rise to stardom.

"I remember them sounding just like this, and all their gigs were real events," he says. "The Human League were the same; it's not especially commercial but I think they do this rather well."

TIP

TC Wall gets locked in the Tip Sheet tape cupboard until he wades through some of the back log of chrome and asbestos which has poured in from all over the place.

The Bland's Dick Happy cassette "comes", as it were, in a phallic illustration seven inch sleeve. The tape itself starts promisingly enough but soon lapses into madmen-at-the-controls mayhem. The Bland are from Chesterfield.

Twelfth Wreck, from Redditch, opt for a cute cover on their four track tape. Lack of info doesn't enhance the performance, but the playing is competent, the rock edge is adequate and the actual songs are quite good.

Bristol's More Short Stories are in their infancy but play clean light and airy tunes that beg for a big production and a little arranging. Expect a single later in the year (by which time they should just be about right).

Catch The Bomb are almost regulars of the Tip Sheet. Their letter points out that the tape they sent before was "crap" and this new chunky noise from Shepshed in Leicestershire is, in fact "better". Rockin' out is the name of the game, but their plea for us all to "C'mon" is still pretty limp wristed. Shake yourselves lads... get a good night's sleep and send next month's tape in.

Final Conflict have a dodgy image, illustration and a big that's so detailed, I feel like I've known them for years. These are genuine people who write dangerously commercial dreamy neo-Genesis, almost AOR meets new age music. They need someone to pick them up and make them transatlantic radio faves.

Studio 68 from far north London, are teaming with '60s mod appeal, brimming with energy and about to record a demo that's audible enough for A&R ears. Their tape looks interesting, has good songs and is masterfully delivered. Expect more from them soon.

The Visitors from Exeter wrote to us on a sweet bag about the burgeoning Devon scene. If their tape is anything to go by, it should be worth taking at least a weekend to take in the sun and the sounds down there. A contemporary bustle that wriggles with popist charm.

The Ocean from Oxford have an exciting brash style with a well confident vocal delivery and a neat line in verse/chorus crossover. A four piece worth watching with good songs and some measure of potential.

Exit 13 from London play decent enough tunes but their quiet jangle seems to take them only so far and leaves a frustrating unfulfilling feeling.

Psycho Ken from York sent us 23 Concrete Pipes, a tape of rambling frenzy like Billy Bragg after a crate of stout on an untuned guitar. One of life's true eccentrics. EMI should contact him at 29 West Bank, York YO2 4ES.

Every New Dead Ghost are acclaimed as Nottingham's "hottest goth/rock/glam/cosmic" band and in that genre they certainly excell — as displayed on their latest, well presented and packaged four track demo. They've a 45 coming soon.

Mutant Sheep from Sittingbourne come in a dodgily illustrated tape bag and offer us a pint for a good review. A smidge under produced, the ideas are quite good but the songs don't really drive enough. Weird interplay of guitar and keyboards. Can we have a half to be going on with?

Rioutus Assembly ((01) 441 1892) play a neat kind of post pop punk reminiscent of a souped-up Pretenders with a nice vocal style. A touch of rock history in the composition makes for quality material that deserves a wider audience.

Vinale Disorder (947 8084) play a direct kind of muscle-bound trash with more than its share of FX for good measure. Already with interest in the States, this trio should be in the album and single racks pretty soon.

The Weeping Messerschmitts already came and went to Upright and now their scraping tinny pop sound is back from beyond wherever on a three track demo. Still as forceful, there's obviously pop in the old boots.

Papas New Faith play pop with a lilting sign-us-up veneer and a silky vocal line. Their debut single will be with the world real soon on the Garage 27 label and should interest the upper echelons of A&R and daytime radio.

Richard Makes New LP are from France and their tape, Trying Their New Drum Machine, is doomy, downhearted and pretty out of tune. Whether it's supposed to be like that is difficult to say. Genius or lunatic? Place your bets.

Hands Of A Virgin have a dangerous manager who doesn't really seem to understand the niceties of the low level music biz-world. Still, the group, after five years as The Abandoned Babies from Leicester debut with a track on EMI's second ICA record, then they have a track on another compilation. They play well and sound interesting but the quality of this recording is duff.

All Fall Down opt for a far more gutsy guitar sound and suggest a greater longevity. Live shows will sharpen their sound and the possibility of a distinctive single of note could take AFD to a much wider audience.

OUT OF STOCK!

We all know that in our society it is only the great institutions that save us from being swept away on a tide of filth and corruption. We in "rock 'n' roll" are particularly at risk — but breathe easier, for you are safe from Sodom as you cruise the aisles of at least one major record chain. ■ Underground has obtained a copy of the Obscene Product List of "stuff" "not to be stocked" by branches of a large retail chain. And, scanning the list, what is the overwhelming menace from which our families must be protected? Why, four lettered punk, of course.

The entire Dead Kennedys catalogue, including the CD of Plastic Surgery Disasters, has been banned — though it's a moot point whether the ban came before Alternative Tentacles boycotted the chain anyway.

Leading the field for England are Chaotic Discord, with their LPs I Don't Give A F, F Religion F Politics, Now That's What I Call A Fin' Racket and the, rather disappointingly, titled Live. Conflict and Disorder have only managed to get one LP each on the list but The Anti-Nowhere League have a couple up there. But dozens of other groups are saved the ignomy of slipping through the net with the inclusion of several Punk & Disorderly type compilations. ■ It's not all spiky haircuts and swearwords — witness the presence of Microdisney's We Hate You White South African Bastards, of all product on the Cross label and subsidiaries, and of The Blood's False Gestures For A Devious Public. ■ Further along the road to Gomorrah we find Coil's Scatology, Marc And The Mamba's Torment And Toreros, Psychic TV's Berlin Atonal and Some Bizzare's If You Can't Please Yourself compilation. Makes you feel sullied just reading the names, dunnit? ■ Nice old Ian Dury finds his 4000 Weeks Holiday having to snuggle up to Philes And Smiles by the genuinely appallingly-named Raped (any bunch of boys who call themselves that probably deserve to be). ■ In the heavy metal field, only little leaguers like Venom (At War With Satan), Witchfynder General (Friends Of Hell) and Starz (Piss Party) make the ban. Which is a damn sight better than hip-hop has done, managing only a solitary placing with the Hip Hop Electro Eleven LP for a track by Faze One. Must try harder.

COMPETITION WINNERS

YES, THE Go-Betweens competition reaped some interesting replies, but the lucky ten dudes who knew that the group's first release in the UK was on Postcard, are Eddie Fisher of New Milton, David Hutson of Barrow, Stephen McConville of County Antrim, Misery Guts of Midlothian, Ellis Fisher of Maidenhead, Frank Laehmermann of Cricklewood, Andrew Ashbridge of Cockermouth, Joe Cook of Falmouth, Julian Ross of York, and Debbie Ghant of Stowmarket. For their troubles, they'll each get a Go Betweens special limited edition promo LP.

The people who knew that acid turns litmus paper red, and suggested that we should send them an uncensored version of the Bykers' Nosedive Karma (with fleshy bits intact on the sleeve) for their knowledge, were Berni of Blackburn, I Wright of Carlisle, Simon Csoka from the Isle Of Man, Chris Simpson from Bristol and Roger Hall from Bath. Soon as we get the discs out of custody you'll get them!

The goddam bleeding Meteors comp to win a t-shirt got millions of entries but we've only got five t-shirts, so the winners are . . . Nigel Lavender from Ramsey St Mary's, Steve Owens of Powys, D Fletcher of Barton-on-Humber, John Spencer of Huddersfield and Jen Allen of Henfield, they all knew that the Stranglers person who went to pris, some time back was Hugh Cornwell and the tenuous link between The Stranglers and The Meteors is the fact that the Mete's are covering Go Buddy Go.

Finally this month, Felix Adler's comp asked which band James Taylor of the Quartet used to be in. It's The Prisoners of course. The three winners of James' Mission Impossible LP are Nicola Dundon of Strood, James Lewis from Gwent and Mark Amies from Ruislip.

Remember next month we'll be revealing the Stax packs winners plus the 50 Peel session vote-roonie.

JESUS AND MARY CHAIN DETUNE THE DARKLANDS

STORY BY MARTIN ASTON

3 UNDERGROUND

"Anyone who says we compromised musically when we signed to a major record company must be absolutely insane because as far as I can see nobody's ever made a more extreme record than Psychocandy, ever."

That's the reaction you get if you mention the memory of independent labels to the Mary Chain's Jim Reid.

★ Jim will also tell you that although Blanco y Negro — through WEA — never promoted the album, "it sold five times more than it would have done on an indie." But that's not to say that Jim doesn't value the ideals of independent labels. At least, not now.

★ "I always thought independent labels were a waste of time but I've kinda changed my mind over the past few years. The major label thing has worked well for us but there are a lot of groups that have been on an indie label for a year and a half going 'we want to get out of this indie thing' and then sell exactly the same amount of records on a major.

★ "I think there's a type of music that to me, sounds indie, and doesn't suit major labels, d'you know what I mean? Take a group like The Shop Assistants who, to me, sounded indie and had an audience who were into independent records, and they went to Chrysalis and bombed.

★ "I think there are too many groups who look at us and think, 'it's as easy as that, we can go to a major and do well!'"

★ Why didn't the Mary Chain fail then?

★ "I think our music sounded more important. It sounded bigger and grander than that."

★ People think you've 'sold out' because there was no intrusive feedback on the April Skies single, that you've cleaned up for the charts.

★ "We didn't want it to sound like anything on Psychocandy. We were getting pissed off with everybody talking about Psychocandy and white noise and we thought, what can we do, so we decided to make a good, totally conventional record with no white noise, basically to surprise everybody and to get away from the past. Nobody wants to be labelled 'the feedback group'. We would have just been repeating what we've already done. We certainly didn't want that Ramones thing where they made all these albums that sounded the same and then no-one took them seriously.

★ "We're different people now. We were getting naturally pissed off with the Psychocandy sound. If we had all those songs now and recorded the album, it would be totally different."

★ Like how?

★ "Well, I think April Skies would fit in nicely."

★ Times change, and even traditionalists like The Mary Chain move on. Jim wants to use drum machines, brother William preferring a real drummer (and appearing to win the dispute). Tastes change too.

★ "I'm fed up with all my records. I know everybody's saying it, but I quite like hip-hop. LL Cool J is great. I think somebody can make great music influenced by that music. What I like is the production, the drum machines and all that. You hear one of those records coming out of huge speakers and it gives you a shiver up the spine. You hear one of our records coming out of huge speakers and sometimes it's a mess.

★ "Compared to some others, there's something lacking in our live sound. You're making a hell of a racket with a guitar, and you think 'this is ferocious', and then there are two wee drums going 'ti-ti-ti-ti-ti'."

★ So what is the new Mary Chain album, Darklands, like then?

★ "Oh, it's great. I don't think anybody's making records as good as the Mary Chain. No-one else in 1987 comes close."

LL Cool J is great," sez Mary Chain's Jim Reid

GRAVEROBBERS DISTURB HENDRIX TOMB!

by an Underground reporter

Local townfolk in Seattle's lower east side were disturbed early this morning when police came across a band of desperadoes who seemed to be in the act of exhuming the body of '60s guitar legend Jimi Hendrix. The former sex-bomb-cult-hero died when he choked on his own vomit after a night of sex and drugs, and has recently been in the news after a member of English pop group Kill Ugly Pop claimed that he was the illegitimate son of Hendrix. ★ The police disturbed the intruders, who made a hasty exit, leaving only a copy of Kill Ugly Pop's version of Purple Haze near the grave. Anyone seeing the group should contact the police for "a friendly chat".

Kill Ugly Pop: subject of police interest

Bang!
 FOLLOWING ON from the series of Shelter cassettes and albums, there's now a video called Gimme Shelter which is available through Backs and The Cartel. With introductions from John Peel, the tape features a host of exceptional styles, and stylists, including The Shop Assistants, Big Black, The Pastels, The Mighty Lemon Drops, The Jesus And Mary Chain, The Janitors, Pighros, Spacemen 3, Soup Dragons, Bambi Slam, Pop Will Eat Itself, The Chills, The TV Personalities, World Domination Enterprises, The McTells, Talulah Gosh and many many more.

WE AS NEW ORDER WOULD JUST LIKE TO GET OUR PICTURE IN UNDERGROUND. We believe our press officer reviewed the demo tapes, is that true?

Hello, we're The Go Hole taking time out from our picture session. Oh, dear are we knackered! Well, what the hell!

Actually we're here to tell you about our BRILLIANT single Flight Of Angels on Big Pop through Pinnacle. Can we just mention the single? You know, and how brilliant it is?

TAYLOR in Gramming Shock

Composer/keyboardist extraordinaire Tot Taylor, former doyen of the Compact global enterprise, chews over the facts in a rather difficult Graham Greene novel. Yes, what else can you do after such a varied career and a new album called My Blue Period, than turn to the stage for a musical version of Greene's Brighton Rock. Aha!

AAAAAAAAAAAAagh! Gurn on baby!

The Noseflutes show their spots but fail to shove a warped copy of their new Heartache Is Irresistable into the Underground collective sweaty hand. What can we say . . . er, they're from Brum, have a rather pleasant headed notepaper all their own and have done 50 Peel sessions (well maybe not). Still, hopefully next month the great Ron Johnson in the sky will have given birth to their latest. Adieu.

HOW INDEPENDENT ARE YOU?

Jamil (152 Burrow Rd, Chigwell, Essex IG7 4DL) reckons he's pretty indie. Last year he recorded Play Safe/Go Safe — an anti AIDS tune — for Nagla. He sent copies to labels and chaps in power alike. He got some interesting replies.

A&M said: "It didn't turn us on."

RCA: "Not suitable for RCA UK."

London: "Does not relate to the current record market."

TBWA ad company: "We'd like to use it for our anti-AIDS campaign, but we've spent our budget."

Well, that's life (and death) innit?

ROCK AND DOLE MUSIC

Dolebusters' first release is a cassette of some note featuring 16 artists and 18 tracks (including a special from Pulp). All this for a measly £1.50 from SCCAU, 73 West Street, Sheffield S1 4EQ. Enclosed music varies in style but is a good listen anyway, with outbursts from The Bergmans, Trolleydogshag, Henry Normal, The Bland, The Wealthy Texans and more.

Hysteria Ward have a new flexi thing and it's pretty good. Louise's vocals have flourished and you can get the thing from All The Madmen, 97 Caledonian Rd, London N1 9BT.

MAGAZINE HARDWARE SURVEY!

The July issue of Jump Away has a spesh treat for the first 1000 to put hand in pocket. They'll get a seven inch 45 with a side apiece from Hurt and Little Red Schoolhouse. Pretty neat it is and it'll be available about . . . NOW!

The future of music lies in Greece. John Robb of The Membranes and the mastermind behind the near legendary Rox magazine visited the country recently and discovered that "Greek music is about getting drunk and excited and smashing everything up. That's very honourable," he concluded. So now we know. The ongoing saga of The Heartthrobs and their many reviews, for their FAB 45 Toy on In Tape, continues. Yes, a letter, with razor blade and poison pen recipe arrived at Ug Mansions this week from Rose Heartthrob. Seems she and Rachel of the group wish to be referred to as Rose and Rachel Carlotty in the future. Why? Why? Please tell . . . Because that's the name of a mythical creature from days gone by who was notorious for throwing diabolical tantrums and murdering her three husbands and her son. Ah, every home should have one.

More mail. News of the kidnapped Magnus Magnusson, as mentioned in Ug 4 when Them Phillistines showed off the Mastermind chair to seek a ransom, comes with a message that we'll never see the old buffer again unless all Icelandic Policital Prisoners are freed (or fried, we couldn't quite read their writing). Well we'll have a think about it chaps.

Young Eleanor Rigby, that sweet soft spoken gal, appears to have forsaken her Pristine Pose and turns out in a semi porn Vaseline-lensed, full colour, total starkers,erotica shot to promote her brand new Censorship album. The LP itself has the gal in a similarly out of focus in-the-sack shot. The photographer should get his thumb off the lens.

Seems Mr Creepy from Bad Tune Men has been asked to leave the group because of his political views. In a hurried quote Creeps said "I want to grow fat and old." Hrumph!

Friday nights in the old metro-polis will be all the brighter for a new club called The DTs (sorry, Dangerous Times), where bands will be playing live and there'll be an alternative disco (with the likes of Television, Patti Smith, Velvets et al). It'll be happening at 146 Charing Cross Rd in the West End, kicking off around 7.30.

Virgin have splashed out more than a bit of cash recently. Joining the swelling ranks at ballonist towers are former Factory faves The Railway Children and former Rough Trade eccentrics Camper Van Beethoven. Also snapped up, to join Gaye Bykers and The Blood Uncles, are new guitarist talents Pete Townshend and Ronnie Wood. Ariba.

At the other end of the league table, Pink have gone walkies — the two partners in tune falling out over something or other — and In Tape are back in business repromoting stock that got shelved when the Gaye Bykers Nosedive Karma Ep made it briefly. This includes Zor Gabor who feature ex-Banshee John McKay.

In the liquidation nation is Illuminated Productions. Creditors are advised to attend hearings at Barnet Court concerning the label that once brought you releases from 23 Skidoo, 400 Blows, Dormannu, Sex Gang Children and a host of others.

Peter Coyle, who gets unceremoniously trodden on later in this issue, is an ex-Pale Mountain, and he's back with a new release soon in his own right, as is former Gang Of Four person Andy Hill and ex-Pistol Glen Matlock. Time for old time?

The Shelter organisation follow up their second compilation album with a video of live and promo footage from the acts featured on the album this month (through the Cartel), and that org has a new branch which will be importing a host of prime material including the best of US label Rhino's releases.

The Rhino roster includes the classic LP Best Of Louie Louie — featuring a dozen versions of the old "hit" by various bozos (including the Kingmen), plus various compilations of surf, soul, psyche, etc. Featured artists also include Nancy Sinatra, Phil Ochs, Paul Anka, James Brown, Nazzy, Lightning' Hopkins, Dick Dale and a bundle more. The new branch of the Cartel dealing with all this is New Routes and that's based at 24 Gaskin Street, London N1.

The Red Flame/Ink axis of companies are heading into the mail order business next month, with their Red Flame catalogue boasting a wide selection of material from The Room, The Decorators, Dif Juz, Hi-Cat Trance, Severed Heads, Mab, Phillip Boa, Nightingales, Anarchy. You'll need a copy of their catalogue and terms, which you can bag by sending an sae to PO Box 927, London W3 6YB.

Most news/excitement, as old man of the boards, PJ Proby returns with a cover of, wait for it, The Sex Pistols' Anarchy In The UK. It's weird, distorted, disturbing, gash, scary and all the other things that Malc Mac would love it to be. Oh Savoy through someone or other.

News too that Ciass will be opening a US branch to promote Spacemen 3 (album next month), In Embrace and other such marvels. More news soon.

The Wedding Present are currently putting the finishing touches to their debut LP, and new is that it's going to be called Georgie Best. Guess what? The front cover's going to have a picture of Georgie Best on it too. Well, ain't that just showbiz?

AFTER the fact

Boston Calling

Much raved about Boston nutters, Bim Skala Bim display their fine style of hair management after reading the rave review for their US album in last month's Ug! Fear and loathing continues Stateside as majors clammer for their autograph, Two-Tone finally makes it to Times Square, and Ska Records UK (through Revolver), plan to release the group's seminal Boston Bluebeat LP. Catch it. Johnny Eager Yeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeehaw!

Randy Erwin checkin' in with a lasso and a Frank Ifield song on my noo album. Er, that's 'Till The Cows Come Home on Heartland, y'all know?

Hey Babe, Come Up And See My Record Collection

Hi, I'm Henry Kaiser. I've got some records, they're all pretty good. Anyway, I bought a guitar or two and now I've made my own record for SST, and you know, it's pretty good too.

UNDERGROUND: next month you can hear it too

Up Against The Wall

Shoot out in Finland . . . Yes, this is PIM (debut single reviewed on page 24). As you can see they have some serious fashion and personal problems, but what the hell? We're hip! We're a rock 'n' roll crowd used to individuality.

So what if they want to wear pink sequined suspenders, paisley tie-dye vests and cowboy hats? So what if they want to rob banks and make loud obnoxious songs?

Dr Truth Sez:

And when I see that Dave Howard, I'm gonna stuff him!

Hula Assault Photographer!

After a flurry of press activity surrounding the release of Hula's new 12 inch Cut Me Loose, the news has been blazed that they've had their 400th line up change. Sifting as art, they are now a duo, who should soon be So Big that they can't both get in the same picture at the same time. Huh!

Donny Osmond has signed to Virgin . . . groupies in their late 30s were seen outside Virgin mansions, but better news, Brighton's Audio Instant label — who brought you Honey before — have the first 45 from The Crucifixion Of Donny Osmond, and it's called Love Puppy.

Er, Johnny Marr has left The Beatles. Thought you'd like to know that. A replacement guitarist might very well be Eric 'Short Memory' Clapton . . . or haven't we heard all this before?

Rock is on trial with Jello Biafra at the helm. Send your cheques for support to Jel, or go out and buy the upcoming Christianhound single on Constrictor (through Red Rhino) . . . all proceeds to the cause.

Royal Family And The Poor have used all their cash to promote their new album so go out and buy it. Mike Keane of the group is also well entrenched in Earthbeat — a Liverpool conglomerate who manage to stage strange and vivid events. Last year they got a festival together in Stanley Park, and this year it looks like similar things will happen. So keep your eyes peeled for that one.

Wow . . . Front 242 in FAN CLUB scare. Yes those masters of hard nosed, guilt-edged, stone faced and whatever fonk have decided that the best way to answer the millions of letters and requests for parts of their bodies is to set up the 242 propaganda unit. People wishing to get down with the Fronts should write them at PB 841, 1000 Brussels 1, Belgium and see what they've got on offer.

Chris Martin from bustling Bristol sez "Hey, you're right, Bristol's happening and The Groove Farm have a new single out full of high energy summer pop." Who are we to argue, he's right, they have. Other Bristolian stroller noos mentions that The Five Year Plan are mega (yeah, we knew that), The Seers are just about to sign a deal and The Royal Assassins have penned an agreement with Fire. What's more there's notable mentions for God Bless You and The McCallisters. Hep, let's move . . .

More news/excitement, as old man of the boards, PJ Proby returns with a cover of, wait for it, The Sex Pistols' Anarchy In The UK. It's weird, distorted, disturbing, garish, scary and all the other things that Malc Mac would love it to be. On Savoy through someone or other.

SUB culture

THE WAY IT FALLS

Tape me to the bridge, huh!

Wahoo, Bi-Joopiter Exp (2 Wentworth Rd, Hertford, Herts, SG13 8JP) are nice guys.

They draw all over everything. Latest emission from their drawing room is a C30 cassette by The McTells released to coincide with the group's first 45 on Frank.

What's more it's silver-tongued pop, strummed in lacklustre style a la pre-deal

Marine Gals ('cept they're blokes, most of them). Anyway, get it from Rough Trade

Shop or scribble to Bi-J with £1.50 and get a catalogue too. Happiness is cheap this summer. Triv Tel

BOARD BIBLE!

Sporadic sidewalk surfers (or even skatecore enthusiasts) should be totally inseparable from Transworld Skateboarding — the fattest, glossiest mag of the mo. The August issue features a retro on veteran (he must be at least 22) Steve Caballero, who's been in action for almost ten years, plus a million skate variations, ramp news, action shots that deny description, and enough fashion suggestions to make your eyes bubble. Transworld is bi-monthly and you can get details from 353, Airport Rd, Oceanside, CA 92054, USA, or you can pick up a copy in good newsagents or at the Rough Trade shop. Triv Tel

CLOSE TO THE EDIT

Goths and glams beware!

Alien Sex Fiend have some of their finest visuals displayed on Jettisoundz's Edit vid — a nine track collection which fuses animation, live footage and general mayhem. A fine cinematic showpiece, it proves that the Fiends are far better than their critics might have you believe.

The goth tightrope has been destroyed and the real Alien sound — a hybrid of electronic pulses close to Portion Control and Skinny Puppy, mad guitars and dangerous screaming — is certainly closer to PIL playing Sonic Youth or vice versa.

Second track, Get Into It, is a classic. If this doesn't smudge your eyeliner . . . nothing will. TC Wall

Party pooper goes chrome

US noise special. Aptly sub-titled "Excerpts From Various Bad Dreams 1980-86", Archaic Nightmare is the perfect thing to put on when the party has gone on too long and you want to get rid of your uninvited guests. Featured on this 60 minute cassette are 34½ of the weirdest and noisiest tracks ever assembled on one collection. ● Not to be missed are classic oddballs from such now deceased bands as Aunt Curehead and Paranoid Blue, as well as the wild and wacky Caroliner Rainbow and Ethyl Meat-pow. There are even a few lilting instrumentals thrown in with the noise, by Half Blind and Sangra de Puerco, and perhaps the most amazing track is Miserlouie Louie by Handy's Exotic Percussion Orchestra. You'll never find another tape as strange or varied as this. David Katz is it a house?

is it a building?
no, it's a cassette tape!
huh?

Neat packaging from Illusion Production's (15 rue Pierre Curie, 14120 Mondeville, France) latest tape release, a live set from Deficit Des Annees Anterieures, with the tape box coming with a colour photo insert, and the whole thing slotting into a drawn facade. A real good looker, and a noise worth cherishing too, as DDAA present their live antics from a selection of recordings spanning '80 to '85. Dave Henderson

DRAFT DODGE OR BOOBY TRAP n-n-n-n-new computer challenge

- Pop music hasn't proved a fertile field for plunder by the avaricious computer game barons. To date, Ocean's marvellous Frankie Goes To Hollywood game has been the only contender. Unfortunately it appeared on the market during Frankie's year in tax exile. Not good for sales.
- Now Cascade have decided to brave the choppy waters of the charts to present us with 19 or rather N-N-N-Nineteen, the Paul Hardcastle Vietnam documentary related hit of a couple of years back. Computer games are renowned for their violence and use of ideologically unsound ideals, but this one promises you the option of joining the peace corps. At the outset you are asked, Will you fight the war, or the draft? If it's war then you find yourself embroiled in the usual Green Beret style arcade action, blasting and zapping gooks to kingdom come in traditional Shoot-Em-Up fashion. But fight the draft and we have an altogether more challenging affair, with a text and graphic adventure format. However, make one mistake and you find yourself up to the eyeballs in boobytraps and bamboo shoots as you are instantly drafted. Ronnie Randall

COMIC OD

The ICA in London recently hosted a talk by Jim Shooter, ex-head of Marvel Comics in America, as part of their Comic Iconoclasm exhibition. The talk was notable for two reasons — Mr Shooter's reluctance to serve the dirt on his ten year stay at Marvel, and some questions from a highly articulate audience that bordered on the hostile. ★ The feeling afterwards was that Big Jim hadn't actually said a great deal of interest, despite his position at the top of the comic industry for over a decade. ★ But don't worry, the real event of the year happens in the first week of September when Swamp Thing creator Alan Moore visits the ICA where he will be interviewed by Charles Shaar Murray. ★ A day later the UK Comic Arts Convention 87 takes place at The Institute Of Education in London. Will Eisner, John Burn, Alan Moore, Brendan McCarthy, plus the 2000 AD mob are scheduled to appear, and the event runs for two days with all-night films, art displays, awards and a fancy dress. ★ Tickets are available, £10.00 for both days, £7.50 for a single day, from the following address. Mr H. Yusuf, UK CAC 87, PO Box 360, London WC2H 9TB. Julian Henry

ALL CHANGE FREAKERS

Difficult, but never daunting. Stimulating reading almost, around 60p from 107 Colston St, Benwell, Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, NE4 8UN. Ripley

THE HAFLER TRIO
CONTROLLED BLEEDING
BOW GAMELAN ENSEMBLE

THE ADICTS

Live And Loud

Link LINK LP 010 ● The "lads" on the rampage, on this "official bootleg". This is straight ahead, bugger the quality, heads down stuff, that cares little in terms of professionalism and purity of sound for The Adicts' fine collection of post-pop-punk classics. Each triumphant terrace anthem, littered with hooks and luffs, is hammered home at breakneck speed, leaving the end platter as nothing more than a superfluous seething mass that pales embarrassingly against their studio recordings. For purists only. Dave Henderson

AFFIKA KORPS

God It's Them Again!

New Rose ROSE 125 P ● Something here is wrong. This album has a God awful camouflage cover, it hails from '82 when these guitar toting acid casualties got back together for a reunion and it sounds like an out of tune drunken rabble most of the time. There are a couple of decent workouts, but this is mostly Spinal Tap. Johnny Uneager

ANHREFEN

Defaid, Skateboards A Wellies

Workers Playtime PLAYLP 1 P ● This is the first LP from punk anarchist, Welsh speaking, veggie animal rights types Anhrefan. The Defaid in the title refers to sheep, and as for the rest of the lyrics, I can only guess that they espouse the values of being a hunt saboteur and a Plaid Cymru voter, since the "explanatory" remarks on the cover are somewhat vague. Judged on music alone, this is hardly earth moving stuff, consisting of samey, rather watery punk tunes that lack a dynamic vocal and a clear musical direction, with only Dawn's Y Duwiau waking itself up to an '80s style potency with any real effect. Otherwise, one for the hardcore hippy punks only. Carole Linfield

ATTRITION

Death House

Hamster HAM 18 B C ● 1/2 Attrition circa '82 on a 50 minute workout which originally appeared in cassette-only format. Now re-mastered, the recordings have made it to vinyl and, boy, are they odd. This isn't the lyrical left-field pop version of Attrition, this is an all out booming barrage filled with whizzing sound effects, rife with explosive chemistry, vibrating as it shakes the fillings from your teeth. What the hell it's a soundtrack to I'm not sure, but I wouldn't want to have seen it. Dave Henderson

BAD DRESS SENSE

Goodbye . . . It Was Fun

Vinyl Solution SOL-4 P ● Ed Shred of The Stupes gets his own band and for the most part he ditches the humour, slows the pace and sounds like a post punk descendent of fellow Ipswich townies The Adicts. There are some glowingly near commercial sounds here that suggest that middle age for Ed might provide him with a hit, if he's desperate. Anyhow, Bad Dress Sense's debut album is pretty good, pretty fast and it's got a great cover. More than skatecore, more than punk, more than enough said. Johnny Eager

BLIND IDIOT GOD

Blind Idiot God

SST/SST 104 P ● 1/2 Loud rampant geeeeteeetar instrumentals throw their way around your living room. Paint peels from the wall, metal bends, strings go into convulsions, this is a b-a-d album. Angry, distorted, frantic, you know . . . pretty noisy. Hardly a polite introduction to "rock 'n' roll", but great to stand in front of the mirror to. Johnny Eager

BLOOD UNCLES

Blood Uncles

Virgin TCV/CDV 2437 ● 1/2 Obnoxious throaty gargling from the Uncles who've sent their wry snort-a-long style to the dry cleaners. Still reasonably gross, their lapses into full blown metal are saved by some more succinct arrangements, and this debut album is, as far as it goes, quite appetising. Not essential, but a good way to shake your marbles should you feel so inclined. Johnny Eager

BLUES & TROUBLE

Hat Trick

Big Beat BLUH 001 P ● 1/2 Blues And Trouble's third album finds them in league with the chaps at Ace — and where better to nurture their distinctively bluer than blue hue. Beyond the pub-rock death throes that the name initially suggests, Blues & Trouble actually score higher for their authenticity quota.

Hat Trick is a grower, a bar room background or upfront clatter that's worth checking. Johnny 'Blind Lemonade' Eager

●●● MEGA A godhead uprising

●● HOTSY Tasteful and tenacious

● TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish

DRAB No bullets, means no hope

BOGSLED

Brutal

Shelfish SHELFISH 4 B C ●●● Originally lumped with the dreaded "shambling" tag, Bogshed have always been somewhat removed from that limiting environment. Now, with Brutal, they've gone yet further down a road of their own making. The group's romance with music as diverse as full blown pop, showbiz-film-musical crooning and Membranes mayhem has developed into a unique sound that's authentically left-field, but unmistakably riddled with near commercial potential.

Brutal is busting a gut to embrace Mike Read's Sunday show, it's got a brace of songs for Maggie Moon and Marti Caine to cover — plus a vibrant bolshy edge that'd make your most radical of music lovers desperate to put it on again and again. Gear. Johnny Eager

THE BUGS

Darkside

Big Beat WIKM 62 P ●● A mini album from the frantic and quite ferocious Bugs. Their uptempo numbers storm along at the regular regimented pace and they even manage to squeeze a ballad in to show their versatility.

Darkside is in that classic barrier breaking ground of post-a-billy psychogarage, and there's something here in the make up of The Bugs, especially on the slowie, that suggests they're heading into a Love phase circa Da Capo. Next stop Forever Changes? Johnny Eager

CABARET VOLTAIRE

Code

Parlophone ●● Cabaret Voltaire have flirted with commercial success, wafted back and forth across the gorge of credibility and landed flat on their ass on the dancefloor. Formerly a magnificently unshakable outfit, the cash has left a stain that they're only just beginning to come to terms with.

This latest album returns to the CV sound of old, the mixture of tapes, effects and rhythm, the force of Mal's voice and the power of the energetic sound. There are still no songs here, but the mood is more tasteful, more desirable. Don't Argue, the recent 45, is a good indicator, but that final direction still seems pretty unclear. Ripley

CARMINA BURANA

The Apocryphal Dances

Midnight Music CHIME 00.32 RT C ●● Midnight Music's second Spanish import is fortunately more resolute and stolid than Karmas Colectivos. Like the latter, they've re-recorded the lyrics in English and displayed the hallmarks of building a best-of-British post-'77 new wave collection, but because they also attempt to build an emotional cortex for the music, it's possible to move up and beyond the obvious Joy Division hangovers.

Carmina Burana can be as stark as Unknown Pleasures or as impulsive as Closer; wild string synths pull a loose blanket over harsher, monotone pulsebeats or a tugging bass undermines a particularly strong Gallic melody. It's a surprisingly durable record for those who still prefer their rock wracked, cracked and expressively gloom-grey. Martin Aston

THE CLAIM

This Pencil Was Obviously Sharpened By A Left Handed Indian Knife Thrower

Trick Bag Records CU 0388 RR C ● A six track EP from a mysterious band who aren't very good at Letrasetting. This is a workmanlike record, which does show the occasional flash of inspiration, notably on the intriguingly-named title track, although the vocal could use training. Morrissey may get away with being out of tune, but this doesn't cut the rug in quite the same way. Said track is in fact REM meets The Smiths, which is an interesting idea that should be capitalised on if this band want to grow. The dull aimlessness of much of the rest is to be avoided at all costs, though, chaps. Verdict: there's a good single on here; the rest is filler. Carole Linfield

COLENSO PARADE

Glentoran

Fire Records FIRE LP NM C ●●● The Colensos' probable parting shot before reaching the "big" time is an essential fully-coloured set of melodies graced with a deep, dark, voice as luscious as Van Morrison singing Walker Bros' hits in the tub. This is teen emotion time, strapped to the angstmobile with passion, and then some.

Glentoran's first striding shot is the sadly foresaken, but fantastically succinct view of love and defeat, Fontana Eyes (a 45 from last year). From then on in, the album plays its part in a full red blooded variation to the norm, grim and gracious all at the same time. The Colensos could well be on the box real soon, and this best-of-so-far, a collection of singles, flips and sessions, is a fantastic way to catch the early days. Dave Henderson

Core

Subterranean SUB 56 (577 Valencia, San Francisco, CA 94110, USA)

●● Strange hybrid keyboard sounds, on a plain somewhere between Pinky And Perky playing the classics, seminal Todd Rundgren, Philip Glass with a hangover, The Residents at their most disco and all points in between. Controlled Bleeding have escaped the urban industrial wasteland and head into your bed with a repetitive buzzsaw beat, that wins through on a ticket to monotony. Can be annoying, can be charming. Ripley

COPERNICUS

From Bacteria

Dead Mans Curve DMC 017 RR C ●●½ ... Come into the atomic nevermore. No past. No future. No present. Gone forever into the atomic unknown ...

Hallucinogenic poetry and strange backing music/random noises might not be everyone's cup of mushroom tea but you really should try a taste — this is a concentrated brew stewed from both of Copernicus' American albums, Nothing Exists and Victim Of The Sky. A bitter taste at first, the attraction builds itself up quickly and smiles soon replace frowns. Anyway, lest you should forget your humble origins, try the Darwinian weirdness of the title track. From the atoms came the bacteria, and humans are the descendants of the bacteria. And humans are the descendants of bacteria! The forefathers of humanity were bacteria! Alexander Fleming was never like this! Daz Igmeth

DEHUMANISERS

End Of Time

Neg FX Records NEGFX 006 R C ●● What falls between schizophrenia and quadrophenia? Whatever it is, Seattle's Dehumanisers have got it anyway. They can't decide whether to be rock 'n' rollers, metal freaks or punk snots; the abandonment of hardcore wins out in the end but the group veer between all three, gritted by a guzzling humour, chucking up rap, FM-rock tomfoolery and other wayward experimenting. Dehumanisers' eclecticism at least boosts their individuality. Sure, this is the familiar world of American brat-white-boy-guitar but it sounds like a whole weird world this time around. Martin Aston

THE DEIGHTON FAMILY

Acoustic Music To Suit Most Occasions

Rogue FMSL 2010 ●● Strange one. A whole family, all singing, all playing, camped around their Barnsley central heating system and wavering between cajun, folk, country blues, old style Indonesian rock 'n' roll and more besides. Like a Ry Cooder album with all the best rough edges intact, and none of the schmaltz on show, well researched, and crazily catchy too. Johnny Eager

DEJA VOODOO

Gotta Have Money

Gaga Goodies GAGA GOD — 2 (PO Box 361, 00121 Helsinki, Finland)

● Garage fodder with a cover of Baby Please Don't Go, surrounded by a brace of frantic workouts that all sound like they're covers of something Iggy threw off in the shower room. The DV's admit they steal "bits of bop from everyone from Link Wray to The Jesus And Mary Chain", and as there's only two of them, the surprising sound they achieve is a whimsically forceful noise of gritty spunk. OK, but no room for originality yet. Johnny Eager

DINOSAUR

You're Living All Over Me

SST SST 130 P ●● The first Ug person who tried to review this melted in a glazed acid flashback. Fresh from the fields of wherever, the secret life of Dinosaur reveals that they've a healthy respect for everyone from The Meat Puppets to Joy Division — not forgetting lots of other groups I've forgotten. A keen and close shaved vision of life that's more than a little acidic. Gemsville. Dave Henderson

DOGGY STYLE

II

Flipside FSR 012 RT C ●● American howling neo-thrashers who've got metal desires, a mock Led Zep II sleeve and some neat ideas in song arrangement. Doggy Style often threaten to write commercial speedrock in the Husker Du vein but balls it up with a guitar break that's fit for Grebo Brits only.

A neatish show in places that just fails to bring home the bacon. Close. Johnny Eager

THE DONNER PARTY

The Donner Party

Cryptovision CRL 1400 RT C ●● A century and some ago the Donner Party's namesakes, George and Jacob Donner along with 80 fellow emigrants, tramped across the U.S. to settle in Sacramento. Only half their number arrived, the flesh of the other half having nourished their comrades during the harsh weeks in the Sierra Nevada. The group aren't the musical savages you may hope for but graduates of the REM school with a hillbilly eye cocked on their heritage — the legend of John Wilkes Booth; the Evolutionist trials; America's appropriation of G.I.o.r.i.a. ... Vachel Booth

86

Minutes In A Day

Fundamental HOLY 4 RR C ●● Not all Georgia bands are country daddies or jangle hobos. 86's primary gtr/bass/drms set up is made of a darker sometimes psychedelic hue, stitching up some eerie, implosive place between Joy Division, Jimi Hendrix and the Banshees' gothic shuddering. As you'd expect, by the end of six oppressive songs, 86 show themselves to be carrying heavy weights, or caught in a downbeat, claustrophobic spiral. That's the sound of it anyway. They can't quite find it in themselves to say anything new but 86 at least make you want to hear what they've got to say. Martin Aston

11 UNDERGROUND

NEW 7" & 12" SINGLE FROM

FISH CAKE SHAKE

Do The Heart Beat

Probe Plus PROBE ELEVEN PG ●● Heartily recommended hybrid sounds from this collection of humourists, whose musical tangents converge into a dishevelled reading of cajun, folk, ethnic African, pubescent Ferry, stylised omming, and the like. Fish Cake Shake are shrouded in some dainty in jokes. Lovingly garnished with a side salad of wit, they've had the foresight to learn how to play their instruments in a finely tuneful order. Flowing and testing, always questioning and still sounding harmonious, Do The Heart Beat pounds on regardless. Johnny Eager

GARGOYLE SOX

Headless Horseman

Fundamental Records SAVE 25 RG ● And odder they come, but not strange enough. This US album on paper, or in theory, must have been conceptually vibrant. A goth-esque guitar histrionic and a Kraftwerk-styled key person meet head on, someone warbles occasionally, and the result is art. But the mix doesn't quite capitalise on the idea because it never really goes far enough, nothing gets jarred or jagged. What you get is a little half baked, unconvincing due to the inadequacies in the songs. Average. TC Wall

GREAT PLAINS

Before We Stop To Think

Shadowline SR 0387 RS ●● Ohio's Great Plains quit their US roots and turn out a mini album for Dutch label Shadowline, and it all sounds just fine. More of the same US uptempo guitar pop, with melody stamped all the way through, makes up this seven song set which leaps and cavorts around the turntable with a self-styled enjoyment level that's constantly enhanced by some neat songplay. These boys have great potential, by album six they'll be as mean as hell. Dave Henderson

JANE'S ADDICTION

Jane's Addiction

Triple X Records XXX1004 ● 'Oh, I know about the war but I just wanna fight!' Oh really? Jane's Addiction sound like archetypal Los Angeles bad-good rock star urchins dangling at the glam end of punky metal. They also sound like an inflated melodramatic Gene Loves Jezevel, without the charm. This is side one, but flipped over, Jane's Addiction become a straggling, naked, twisted infant, stripped down to more haunted, acoustic, tribal rumbles which include covers of Lou Reed's Rock 'n' Roll and The Stones' Sympathy For The Devil. A strange record, made even stranger by the fact it was recorded live, but they've just signed to Warners so maybe someone can see some sense in them. I can't. Martin Aston

JOLLY JUMPERS

Back To The Tom-Tom Town

Gaga Goodies (Box 361, 00121 Helsinki, Finland) ●½ Ten inches of rockabilly fever spat and gargled by the jollily named Jolly Jumpers. Fogged and running off at full pelt, the Jumpers sound like The 101ers with their tales on fire, or Strummer leading the Stray Cats with a Ramone on guitar. Either way, it's an interesting concoction don't you think? Johnny Eager

FRANKIE JONES

Dance Cork

World Enterprise WENLP 3018 RS ●● Frankie Jones first made his mark in the mid-'70s as a songwriter, penning Leroy Smart's 'Ballistic Affair' hit among others. Since then he has struggled to make the transition from roots sufferer to singjay dancehall artist, though on this latest set which sees his return to producer Bunny Lee, he is at least lively throughout the proceedings, especially on the title track and a thrilling Watch The Jeep, both singles from last year. And while it never breaks any new ground the whole is consistently entertaining throughout. Evelyn Court

COMPETITION WINNERS

SONIC MACHETE COMPETITION WINNERS SCARE*

*Yep, there are ten lucky honchos who knew that the German label which picked up on Underground some time back was Zensor. They all win an autographed interview disc with the Sonics, and they are Jeff Stonehouse from Crawley, Chris E from London, A Mickethwaite from Wakefield, Stacey Franklin from North Ascot, G Barnes from Greenford, Iain Cussie from Inverness, Paul Bilbey from Chalfont St Giles, Gerard Nguyen from France, Chris Twomey from Canada and Peter from Crawley (for his seriously illustrated postie).

LAWNDALE

Sasquatch Rock

SST SST 125 P ●● Manfully playful and playable platter from Lawndale. The sound of surf instrumentals, metal throb outs, country/cajun polka out-takes and suchlike laid end to end and taken, spinning, into the '80s. Lawndale play like they've got no qualms about categories and end up sounding like an eccentric string quartet playing punk for royalty. Pretty damn fine. Dave Henderson

LEATHER NUN

Steel Construction

Wire WR 004 NM G ●●● Leather Nun's barren beginnings in the UK — a past midnight slot on a Throbbing Gristle bill when they played hm just too loud — seem a long way behind them now. With a deal inked in the states, UK press acclaim at their every move and general "good vibes", as they say, this is a real important album. Of course, there isn't a hope in hell that it'll let anyone down. Suffice to say, when the Nuns are old and grey, they'll still be prouder than proud of Steel Construction.

Their most prolific platter to date, it switches the emphasis from track to track, letting the listener do the work. Keeping abreast of their stylised movements isn't easy . . . but hell, it's rewarding. Dare I say, best of the year so far? Potential? Yes, I think so. Dave Henderson

LIVE SKULL

Don't Get Any On You

Homestead HMS 083 RTS ●●½ Live Skull must be sick of the Sonic Youth comparisons, especially when they've got a female bassist who also sings in that forlorn, atonal way. Live Skull aren't so fixated with any American gothic rhetoric — this live recording at New York's CBGB's club surrenders no articulate sense of what they might be on about due to a blur of angered voices — but share the same exhilarated desire to squeeze and skewer white lightning out of their guitars. They don't seem interested in making any 'pop' analogies either, but more the real dark blue-black gothic groans of a rock band in excelsis. A rivetting, climactic record, as passionate as can be while still sounding uninvolved. I recommend you get as much of this over you as possible. Martin Aston

MARINO & THE AFTER FOREVER BAND

Gypsy At Heart

Scorpio Records (12 Aberford Walk, North Humberside, HU9 5EN)

●¾ Wherein Young Marino, guitar hung low, takes some extended solos in territory not exactly unfamiliar; Carlos Santana peeks from behind a tree and lifting up a stone we find a lurking Clapton riff. An independent artist with a major label sound — if that's what you want. As far as I'm concerned though — pass the machete and quick before he bends another note! Daz Igmeth

NEW ORDER

Substance

Factory FACT 200 P ●●● What can you say about a compilation of New Order's finest 12 inch cuts all placed end to end on a double album. The Godlike qualities, coupled with Factory's artistic profile, well in evidence on a simplistic Peter Saville sleeve, make New Order supreme as they provide their stylised soundtrack of 12 classic tracks which prove how wistfully essential they've become.

In the fleeting moments of recent history there always seems to be a New Order single out, a chart temptress, a quality piece of modern music unaffected by the shortcomings of the general public's inability to try new things, the independents' inability to break less than mainstream acts, and the band's alcohol problem.

What the hell, who needs The Smiths anyway? And I'll bet Blue Monday is still in the Independent charts. TC Wall

MODEST PROPOSAL

Single-Minded

Unicorn PHZA-9 NM G ●● Modest Proposal from Washington have been around for some time, and actually made it to the UK for one gig at the 100 Club. Their debut LP is taken from sessions spanning the last three years but the quality and flow of the music gels pretty well throughout as they plough into full throttle strumming pop from the first heartfelt vocal harangue. Each and every song is a slice of pure pop with a spirited throbbing bass keeping the attention moving. Comparisons to The Jam at their best are obvious, but Modest Proposal have enough here to surpass those limitations. Good one. Johnny Eager

THE MUSKRATS

Soul Francisco

Subterranean SUE 58 (577 Valencia, San Francisco, CA 94110, USA)

●● The Muskrats are a left-field modernist cabaret type outfit whose choice of songs immediately sets them apart. Jay and Tom both sing, and play guitar, feedback, washboard, tambourine, percussion and the like, providing a warm front parlour sound. The Muskrats would have been a great houseband in any of those art world '60s movies and in the '80s can probably rely on a similar cameo appearance in the future. For now, this LP of lesser US classics will do just fine. Johnny Eager

MARTIN O'CUTHBERT

Rejected

Esoteric Records MAROC 002 (33 Barberry Hse, Shannon Rd, Kings Norton, Birmingham) ● Life's eccentrics play another bad joke on society with O'Cuthbert's second LP (after numerous singles). A man atuned to his bank of synths, askew from life and shaking a limp fist at the world in general, Marts is lost in a sea of Secombe-meets-Vangelis orienteering that eventually drives man, dog and cat insane. Aweeeeha! Dave Henderson

LENNY PICKETT

With The Borneo Horns

Hannibal HNBL 1321 ●● When your sleeve namechecks Bowie, Nile Rodgers and Todd Rundgren, you've got to at least get an earful. Lenny Pickett's strange crossplay of sax, assorted horns and occasionally more conventional instrumentation makes for a kind of strange hybrid that's pulling on ethnic, jazz and systems of influences. The resultant noise is quite effective and most of this album is extremely palatable and replayable. Different light. TC Wall

Virgin V2455 ●● 1/2 New PILs for old, and what's Mr Lydon got up his sleeve this time? Quite a bit by the sound of it. This PIL almost returns to the dangerously challenging noise of Levene's guitar styles, the embryonic ethnic qualities of Flowers Of Romance, but it gets halted in its hurried steps by a full upfront production.

Like Ferry and Bowie, it seems that our John's able to step back into the credible limelight at the drop of a chord and this huge sound is closer to their better periods than it is to, say, the rank nothingness of U2, Simple Minds et al.

The secret here is the songs and the approach to performing them. A little more in the way of raw exposed nerves would even bring John back into the mass cult scam, but for now this will do just fine and financial security prevails. Dave Henderson

PLASTICLAND

Salon

Enigma/Pink Dust 2179-1 RT C ● 3/4 This lot look out-of-date, out-of-time and like they've been out of their heads for ages. With hair squiffed forward to cover their embarrassing bits, Plasticland are the acid casualties who're still high on the rock dream, the liquid light show and all that stuff. Some of the material is lacking here, but mostly, Plasticland are quite spritely and pop-toned... just don't look at the sleeve, man! Dave Henderson

PROTECTION

Protection

Touch T33.6 RT C ● The sound of squiggly lines from part time Hafler Trio person Andrew McKenzie. Cult fare that has sound dynamics and disturbing interludes a la Nurse With Wound, but it all somehow lacks the charming beauty of form and continuity. Undoubtedly, that's the least of its worries. Ripley

PSYCHIC TV

Live En Suisse

Temple TOPY RT C ●●● Is the Ug office succumbing to Temple Vibrations or are these outbursts in the live life of the Psychics getting better? The latter, and maybe a bit of the former too. Live En Suisse is one of the most stable PTV line ups — in terms of accessible song structures — leaving Genesis P free to wrangle and roam through the world and his daydreams. Here it works, it's crisp fresh and at times harsh... like the first snow of winter, like a shock from a bare wire. Tricky. TC Wall

Themes 3

Temple TOPY 019 RT C ● 1/4 A riot of salvaged sound and source material thrown against the sound of hairdryers in their death throes. Quirky and ultimately squeaky music with an edge all its own. Testing frequency of sound and staying power, this is either massive self-indulgence or the future of noise as we know it. Burn down the mission. Ripley

PSYCLONES

Another Bridge

Dead Man's Curve DMC024 RR C ●● Does anybody out there remember Tonto's Expanding Headband? Thought not. Well they were like a plastic version of Vangelis' Bladerunner soundtrack, which, as you know, is a bit of a cult smash with us young fogies. California's Psyclones slot snugly between the two, and into that genre of aural wallpaper from the dead zone. A vast vat of black dye bubbling over onto the metal walkways of Mega City One and slopped through in rubber boots. Kinky, mean, dark and squeelchy. Ronnie Randall

PUSSY GALORE

Groovy Hate F

Vinyl Drip International SUK 1 RR C ●●● The story goes that Sonic Youth's former sticksman Bob Bert got together the Pussies, caused general furore in the states, and released a few things that got deleted. Now, VDI have put all the tracks together on one record, Product Inc are going to follow it up with an LP called Right Now, and Pussy Galore look set to turn more than a few straying eyes.

Basically, this is The Cramps' loose edges sawn off, Sonic Youth's dirtiest discarded chords, the Butthole's unshaven and more songs about fing than Big Black. Pussy Galore are going to be absolutely huge or they'll be the next wreck on the highway. Burn it or die. Ripley

ZOOGZ RIFT

Looser Than Clams . . . A Historical Retrospective

SST SST 088 P ●● Rift's an acquired taste, and this "greatest hits vol one" set lays the man's sexual inhibitions to rest, introduces the world to more than a handful of his jokes and exposes the crazed side of Zoogzworld through 14 explosive outbursts. Punky madcap pop from a man-mountain sicko turned psycho, with a cover of Costello's High Fidelity plus selections from Amputees In Limbo, The Island Of Living Puke and much more. Irrespressible. TC Wall

UNDERGROUND DIVATION

ELEANOR RIGBY

Censorship

Waterloo Sunset WSR 001 P ● It's a real shame about this album, which looks quite enticing in its mock permissive '60s sleeve. Unfortunately the pastiche and professional tackiness doesn't carry through to the music. There are several reasons. Firstly the songs themselves are nothing more than averagely played sketches — no arrangements and not much dynamism. Worst of all the production is awful, smothering any talent that Eleanor might have by not allowing her to actually sing, apart from I Want To Sleep With You. At least that has recognisable form as song — the rest is more or less The Kinks songbook revisited (and performed badly). Dave Henderson

HENRY ROLLINS

Hot Animal Machine

Fundamental SAVE 24 RR C ● 1/2 Ex Black Flag, a writer, a perennial performer of poetry, Rollins embarks on his first solo project and makes some neat side moves, as well as falling ungracefully into rock's smelly armpit of stylised bluesdom for a mo. Tackiest, and best, is the side one closer, A Man And A Woman, which revolves around domestic disharmony, a Last Poets' style approach and some wracked lyrics. But, Hot is only great in places, even though repeated playing develops further interest. Johnny Eager

ROTE KAPELLE

It Moves . . . But Does It Swing?

In Tape IT FORTY FOUR ●● Six pop-toned outbursts from the Rotes, those doyens of melodically underplayed charm. The good thing about the Kapelles is that they write fine songs and what's more, they know how to link them together and arrange them . . . how to sound loud but still essential, how to bridge rockabilly good time with hardcore jangle pop and post-punk grooviness. Why, I almost mentioned Black Sabbath and Wire too. Brill. Johnny Eager

ROYAL FAMILY AND THE POOR

In The Sea Of E

Gaia Phase 3 RR C ●● Former Factory man Mike Keane continues his delving and diving by adding sundry associates including a Bourbonese Qualk person. Royalty should always be encouraged, but is rarely understood, and these sound structuralists emerge from a musical underwater adventure with even less than the recommended standard in the way of continuity on show. The sounds and songs ebb and flow with ease, but what's it all about? This will fuddle even the "cleverest" Yuppie brow for hours. A tease for sure. Ripley

SANTRA

Santra

Oxyd OXYD (Zensor, Verlag Plane, GmbH, Postfach 827, D-4600 Dortmund 1, Best-Nr 480099, West Germany) ●● Santra's wailing voice and simple accompaniment of an accordion sum up her Berlin environment perfectly — at least for people steeped in film noir visions who've not been there. She's the Lili Marlene of latter day pop, a sound that wavers between Nico and Diamanda Galas, she's got a vast collection of clippings following her German "nightlife", and this LP's weird ambience certainly suggests that she doesn't get enough sleep.

She even does a song called Lonely Skinheadsong. Can't be bad, eh? Ripley

SAVAGE REPUBLIC

Tragic Figures

Fundamental SAVE 21 RR C ●●● Exceptional album from around '82, that was released on the Republic's own Independent Project label, formerly with a limited edition letterpress sleeve and riddled with a hybrid sound somewhere lost on a waste tip between post-pop-punk, Joy Division, 23 Skidoo and all those other seminal ecclectics.

The first of two UK releases for the band to ready the Euro climate for their impending tour and an LP of brand new material. This set won't disappoint. Dave Henderson

THE SCIENTISTS

The Human Jukebox

Karbon KAR 1051 P ●● A seven track explosion from Aussie psyche rockers The Scientists that at first sounds masterfully different, and ultimately like the future of something different. The opening and title cut is brilliant — a mangled distortion on life itself, it makes Scientists so so so special — but the other half a dozen soirees just fall to last the course. Still, it's neat psychedelia with a garage spanner in the works all the way home. Johnny Eager

SHINEY GNOMES

Wild Spells

Pastell POW 7 RTS ●● More sub-psychedelic modernism from this German label, who've previously released albums from Paul Roland and the TV Personalities, among others. The Gnomes have something different and alluring in their chemistry that's quite difficult to put a finger on and, with the added dynamism allowed by sitar and other exotic posturing, they mould their music into a nicely rounded contemporary sound. With undertones of the pop goes psyche freeness of past times, Wild Spells is a fine listen and well worth the investment. Johnny Eager

SHOWER SCENE FROM PSYCHO

SLOVENLY

Riposte

SST SST 089 P ●●● SST's roster of acts is so diverse, you can never really hazard a guess as to just what each combo is going to come up with. Renowned for picking up on harsh but fair prospects and welding them into palatable giant sized outfits (or at least nurturing their development and allowing them to grow), they seem to have turned out yet another class act in Slovenly.

On Riposte, the Slovenly house band weave a bitter spell in the style of distorted and four-o'clock-shadowed Meat Puppets, but with a more folky, universally more sincere, veneer running through their songs. Slovenly let their guitars play themselves, wandering through harmonics and bitter tonal soundscapes, while lyrically they swing across ravines and deliver heartbreak stories of life as we love and loathe it. Ripley this. Except Shower Scene From Psycho appear to be three blokes, so the girl's voice is probably a tape effect like the cut ups of Woody Woodpecker, car screeches and false endings ad nauseum. She and Purple Haze could be played in your plusher martian supermarkets, but you wouldn't want to hang around at the deli counter too long. Vachel Booth

THE SHRUBS

Take Me Aside For A Midnight Harangue

Ron Johnson ZRON 23 NM C ● The Shrubs' noise often ostracises the clientele, they splurt and splutter in a twisted car spring sound, over stressed guitars, interplayed reactions . . . leaving little room for thought. The Shrubs are claustrophobic, intense, unnerving, unsettling and at times tedious.

This album thrives on being difficult, it won't have a lot of friends, it's a walling plea that'll impress a few and terrify most. What its role in life is is questionable, and whether The Shrubs' awkward self-consciousness will survive the winter is debatable. TC Wall

THE SILOS

Cuba

Ediesta CALC LP 21 RR C ●●● Like a breath of salty homegrown air, The Silos second album gives us real American country rock — The Byrds brought right up to date through the Burredos and REM — on this licensed gem from a fine outfit (surprisingly based in New York). The width of sound and the heartbreak stories and delivery of guiding Silo, Walter Salas-Humara, make for life after indifference, and a quality of new western music that glows white hot from the dusty chaps of the Rain Parade/Dream Syndicate/Green On Red conglomerate. What's more, there's commercial potential in abundance here, a beating bedsit immortality, that'll shed a few tears before each track's completed. Blub. Johnny Eager

THE SOUND

Thunder Up

Play It Again Sam BIAS 53 RR C ● 1/2 Largely forgotten in England now, but still attaining giddy heights in the Lowlands, The Sound turn in a sterling performance on this set for aspiring Belgian indie Play It Again Sam.

Alternately, intimate then driving, there is perhaps an absence of truly striking material on display, but repeated plays reveal Thunder Up to be an endearing friend rather than an irksome colleague to previous works.

This quality shines through despite crass lyrics, one dimensional vocals and the lack of killer hooks. When Adrian Borland really gets his act together again they'll be brilliant. Alex Bastedo

THE STEPPES

Drop Of The Creature

Voxx VXS 200.044 RTS ●●● Can this be for real? Does this record really have a 1987 datestamp? Can some men wear such ruffled shirtfronts and still walk outside? All these questions are blown away by yet another startling psychedelic-timewarp. The Steppes play the most blissful folk-into-psychedelia music, like the moment when Syd Barrett fronted The Byrds and then Jefferson Airplane, or when Roger McGuinn slung 12 strings over Pink Floyd's first album. The Steppes even manage to crystallise the essence of beat-pop. Brilliant poetic-hurt wimp visions scatter a field of tripped melodies, as inspired as Rain Parade's debut: occasionally The Steppes go all dopey but otherwise, they're excessive, outrageous, ecstatic — better this than Sergeant Pepper any day. No more questions. Martin Aston

STUPIDS PRESENT FRANKFURTER

Eat

Vinyl Solution FART 1 P ●● Phase seven of the Stupes plan to overthrow the world comes as they don their bibs and sing a homage or two to food, glorious food. From burgers to donuts and all with fake American accents, frantic guitar breaks and all the usual stuff. A great noise, a belch from the wasteland with humour intact. TC Wall

TAGC

Research Recording Record 1

Sweatbox SOX 013 RT C ● 1/2 Some people are absolutely desperate to do their dirty washing in public. Adi Newton's Post Clock DVA recordings have varied in style and execution and this latest "Research" record you could easily say should have been best left in the filing cabinet. Yet there's an uncontrollable drive to this film soundtrack without a film, this tense Bond meets Bladerunner noise symphony with occasional talk overs, that makes you want to stick with it. What's it about? Well, it sure ain't rock 'n' roll. Ripley

THEY MUST BE GIANTS

They Must Be Giants

Rough Trade RT C ●●● If songs could be Saturday morning cartoons, starring your favourite heroes from the entire history of pop, that's what this record sounds like. With titles like Youth Culture Killed My Dog, Rabid Child and Put Your Hand Inside The Puppet Head, New Jersey's They Must Be Giants are two supreme ironists, satiricists, parodists and cartoonists, as well as deeply pop-culturalist. A more eclectic record you won't find.

It's all played out in electric guitar, accordion, beatbox and some devious tape loops. Not only but also, TMBG's weird-out, wacked-out lyrical guffaws have a way of saying more than just the punchline. Remember, don't take the humour out or seriousness! This is fantastic pop, 19 songs strong, the epitome of pop's recycling fever but recycled by acute lovers of today. Martin Aston

Zippo ZNIP 501 P ● 3/4 Zippo's roster gets a compilation airing and suggests further that there's still more than a little life in them thar hills. This time, these are real downhome boys, mean streeters who rankle through country rock's outer limits to the rockier side of rock's rocky rockness. Those on display vary in delivery, but mostly it's straight ahead stuff, with Thin White Rope, The Windbreakers, Long Ryders and Divine Horsemen rubbing shoulders with Danny And Dusty, True West, Giant Sand and a whole bundle more. Johnny Eager

Boston Goes Def!

Beautiful Sounds (Box 1863, Brooklines, MA 02146, USA) ●● Rap gets less than def as the story gets confused, but this compilation of the best that Boston can offer certainly suggests that there's some rootsier material that us UK types aren't initially getting to hear. In Boston things are more streetwise, with more rhyming, and less downright showing off. A straggle of contenders deliver the Boston sounds in a scratched up, cut-out manner that'll move feet and temporal lobes simultaneously. Grab this if you can find it. TC Wall

Desperately Seeking Suicide

Priapismus Software DSS 001 (Franz Liebel, Steinerweg 14, D-8000 Munchen 60, West Germany) ● 1/2 A mere 25 track collection of stark Madonna-throttles-herself-anti-pop that ranges from the strange off-beat harmonies of Algebra Suicide (like Joni Mitchell in a B film) to the excruciatingly nerve-scraping Borbetomegus, HNAS and several others. It's strong stuff ranging from sly fun-poking a la X-Ray Pop of France to hammer punch in the kidneys stuff from Null and Die Form. Educational all the same. Dave Henderson

German Canadian Friendship

Amok Records LP504 (Box 7309, Vanier, Ontario, K1L8E4, Canada) ●● Contagious culmination of strange and unique acts from Germany and Canada, with each side of the Atlantic getting a side apiece. For Germany, the Arabic excesses of Dissidenten, the exotic pop of Stratis, a solo project from Ledernacken's sax player and other such extrovert out-takes outline a shadowy set of sound, while the Canadian sextet of diversity tells little more in terms of direction. But, although universally intriguing and stimulating, this album never once lapses into self-indulgence, nor does it lean too far to the left. In total, it's another one worth hearing if you can lay your hands on it. Dave Henderson

HAG!

Hag HAG LP 1 G ● 1/2 The sound of the south coast frothing from the stereo. Just 12 bands with their ideas about life and how to listen to it, with, in some cases, some reasonable attitude-provoking variations on the norm. Names are too spluttered and styles too undeveloped to raise any single conglomerate, but Hag could have a burgeoning business with the right handling. Although Salad From Atlantis is some name. Here lies experimentation and enthusiasm, get some. Dave Henderson

Headset 2

Dead Man's Curve DMCC 02 RR ●● 1/8 Moody melancholia from The Lazy Giants and Black Tape For A Blue Girl, meaty pop from The Decorators and Recipe along with other assorted stuff from the recent past by the likes of C-Cat Trance, Heads On Sticks, Third Circle, Farm Life... let's just say sixteen artists, reasonable quality, three and a half quid and that's pretty much all you need to know, right? Oh yes, Club Tango are bastards but don't let that put you off, okay? Daz Igymeth

Hip Hop 17

Streetsounds ELCST 17 ●●● Shaft the Beasties... this is the latest in real meat from the stateside stable. All strapped and throbbing for your attention from the Streetsounds conglom, vol 17 features excellent cuts from MC Chill, Nightmare On Chill Street, Brooklyn Blew Up The Bridge by MC Mitchski and a whole lot more. Don't miss. Ripley

Insane Music For Insane People Volume 13

Insane Music 13 (2, Grand Rue, B-6190 Trazgenies, Belgium West) ● 1/2 A 14 track compilation that throws together some of the odder creative spirits and some of the poppier weirdos of the western world. Witness here the annoying Lelu/lu's, Third Mind's frantic strummer Bill Pritchard, Belgian dance network Human Dance, the obscure side of Legendary Pink Dots in D'Archangel II, the bananas American-folkie-with-a-problem Craig Burk, Japan's Kaoru Todoroki and another batch of unpronouncables. Yes, it is a testing compilation, but ultimately there's a few laughs and lots of enjoyment on hand. TC Wall

Spirits Of Africa Vol One

Mother Africa MALP 02 P G ●● Comprehensive collection of what, from the sketchy info, seems to be a compilation of South African contemporary acts. Past the hooah of Paul Simon and the pseudo commercial "acceptance" of Ladysmith Black Mambasa, those included here bend and sway in a cohesively aromatic style, lulling the unsuspecting into a state of immediate tranquility.

Spirits Of Africa is a totally listenable and enjoyable experience, a majestic trip through the backwaters of wherever, with contributions from a host of unpronouncables that deserve your attention. A fine album, busting with what's needed. Dave Henderson

Unicorn Two... Modern Times

Unicorn Records PHZA-11 NM G ●● Gawblimey... mod songs from around the globe! But thankfully, there's some happy little gems in here, nearly all avoiding the horrible, anthemic stuff that we were battered with round about the time of the appalling Accent. Lincolnshire's The Threads attack a Hammond assault course with style, while Guernsey's (I) The Risk spout a passable pop song. Strangest of all is High Style's London In The Mist: the band hail from Tokyo and this represents the first ever Japanese mod song released in the west! It's a suitably mixed up work that scores highly in kitsch value.

Of course, there's the odd Weller fixation (notably with Leicester's Raw Material and Yorkshire's The Gents) and the occasional low point (what on earth are Madrid's Sex Museum all about?). But the diversity on offer allows for a variety of taste, even if that does mean quality control can't be as strict. An interesting effort. Carole Linfield

Walling Ultimate

Homestead HMS 079 SH G ●● 1/2 Homestead's tour de force, a neat 14 track collection, has some of the best stuff to come from the States in recent times, firmly placing them in line with SST as one of the most prolific labels around. All the usuals are here, Salem 66 with their exquisite play off of guitars and harmonies, Big Black's Primetime II Duce cut, Live Skull as aggressive as ever, Great Plains "rockin' out", as only they know how, Big Dipper, Breaking Circus... and a whole lot more. A bargain and a grooved listen. TC Wall

VICTIMS FAMILY

Voltage And Violets

Konkurell 001 Re C ● 1/2 Loud angry and a little bit over excited, Victims Family are a hell-for-leather entourage whose penchant for stripping wallpaper with their teeth is quite evident on this licensed album. Loud is the word, angst is the message. Bang your head, mate. Johnny Eager

WARUM JOE

Le Train Sifflera, Crois Moi

Fan Club FC 024 P ● 1/2 This is strange fruit indeed, brought to you from a spin off company from New Rose. The songs themselves are perhaps unwittingly good, with an upbeat catch to them and a refreshingly restrained use of cut ups, which adds an extra layer to the well-executed instrumentation. But the vocal is dire, both monotonous and monotone, and is, I suspect, trying to add a fashionable nonchalance that the music would be best off without.

The whole thing's in French, which should give it an extra intensity; instead the most beautiful language in the world (which can sound so effortlessly radical) is buried under this unsympathetic execution. Carole Linfield

NOBLE 'THIN MAN' WATTS

The Return Of . . .

Bedrock BEDLP 3 P ● ● Sleeve notes by Taj Mahal (so can you really argue?) acclaim Noble as a fine rootin' tootin' sax player and he sure as hell goes out of his way to prove it on these new recordings. Wavering between the bluesier end of R&B, a big band blow out and some soulful tongue play, this is a sweet collection, gravelly and reasonably sleazy. Dave Henderson

FENTON WELLS

Viva Villa

Pastell POW 8 (Bergischer Ring 93, 5800 Hagen, West Germany)

● ● 1/2 Fine stuff, Fenton plays geeetar instrumental versions of Hawaii Five-O, Jack The Ripper, Peter Gunn and more, but on the flipside of this classic platter, he opts to do a 20 minute soundtrack style spaghetti opera. Fantastic fantastic. Don't miss this histrionic and historic guitarplay. Magical. Dave Henderson

BARRENCE WHITFIELD AND THE SAVAGES

Call Of The Wild

Demon/Rounder Europa REUM 1029 P ● ● Journalist wet pant stuff akin to the vibe Los Lobos created a couple of years back . . . and look what happened to them. Barrence is one of life's eccentrics. A throat akin to the Stax crooners, a healthy regard for post-R&B soul and a dirty blues tale in his pocket.

Past the initial trepidation that the sleeve and press blurb gives, this is actually quite an amenable platter with more than its share of tasty morsels. Johnny Eager

WILD BILLY CHILDISH

I've Got Everything Indeed

Hangman HANG 2 UP Re C ● 1/4 The man from The Milkshakes and Thee Mighty Caesars, plus a thousand other demented and distorted guitar and ciggie smoke workouts, goes solo for a couple of sides. Childish returns to his roots, according to the blurb, and creates a Frankenstein monster of an album hollering direct to pre-used cassette and then to vinyl. In his bathroom for echo, the cross of Springsteen's Nebraska, authentic blues and wanton self-indulgence makes for a strangely undefined product. Real love or hate stuff. Johnny Eager

THE WILD FLOWERS

Dust

Chapter 22 CHAPLP 15 MM C ● ● The Flowers' success and general media/cult popularity has always amazed me. I'd never quite seen the startling attraction to their poppily coloured rock music, and nowhere could I see any depth in their style and performance. But, Dust has something that spells success, big bucks and a pending major deal.

The Flowers can write substantial pop tunes — tinged with an aggressive sleight of hand that makes that difference — and this mini-album is their most convincing set of projections to date. Just eight tracks, but the potential can't be denied, as their convincingly powerful sound batters down the most resilient of denouncers. Not a soundtrack for me to live by, but a potential Bunnymen in the fullness of time can't be ruled out. Dave Henderson

ZOVIET FRANCE

Assault And Mirage

Red Rhino REDLP68 RR C ● ● A cassette album from Zoviet France — Newcastle's answer to all things esoteric — with a complimentary vinyl outing, A Flock Of Rotations, to follow closely on its heels. Through their dishevelled, and correctly postured, musical development, the Franckies have introduced the world to the subliminal calls that even Eno dare not offer. This is the underarm stench of The Hafler Trio, the London Philharmonic heard through a sock, a slowly crisping spiral of sound poured into the inner ear, with a treacle chaser. I kind of like it, too. Ripley

CONFLICT

Turning Rebellion Into Money

Mortarhate MORT 30 MM C ● 1/2 Conflict's live documentation of their recent Brixton gig which ended in riot, arrests and what have you, it's an interesting and quite evocative story, a "con", a "sting", and the trials and tribulations of getting there. Worthy stuff indeed, until you get down to the actual album which really asks the question, is this enough? Even with sentiments intact and an electric atmosphere — you can feel it from the first opening salvo — the breakneck noise of Conflict sometimes slips so far off the rails that it's neither audible nor desirable.

Subtly, as displayed in the lead up to arranging the gig, a convoluted tale of fake and forgery, isn't used in the music, and Conflict's message is lost under a sea of fuzz, a wail of frantic bleating and thereabouts. In essence then, they're preaching to the converted and providing cannon fodder for their "enemies". And that's a shame. Dave Henderson

THE NEW ALBUM MUSIC FOR THE MASSES OUT SEPT 28th / MUTE RECORDS

REwind

Life before yesterday

The characters at New York's Kicks Magazine have formed a label called Norton. And just in on import is The Wild Man by Hasil Adkins, recorded in NYC last year with Hasil playing most of the instruments in his one man band style. Second up is Vintage Vooia from the late Esquerita, which has the two NRC sides Sweet Skinny Jenny and The Rock-a-Round plus seven unissued recordings including a version of Rockin' This Joint. Believe me, they don't come a lot more eccentric than these two artists. Stax continue their much welcomed return with 45s Hang 'em High by Booker T. & The M.G.s., Do The Funky Chicken by Rufus Thomas, I'll Take You There by The Staple Singers, and Starting All Over Again by Mel And Tim. As you'll probably remember, last month Stax re-issued Booker T. And The M.G.s.' Soul Limbo (or the T.V. cricket theme as most people refer to it), and now you can also purchase it as a cricket ball picture disc — ouch! Plus, it's also in 12 inch form with additional tracks Soul Clap '69 and Time Is Tight. Album wise there's the first UK release of Mr. Big Stuff by Jean Knight and Who's Making Love by Johnnie Taylor.

Staying on the soul side, Kent are issuing a Dobie Gray album titled, rather adventurously, *Dobie Gray Sings For 'In' Crowd*ers That Go Go-Go which includes the classics Out On The Floor and of course In Crowd. That will be closely followed by Groovy Ideas by Barbara Acklin, the 72nd Kent LP.

The first five Creedence Clearwater Revival albums are now available on Fantasy Records in cassette, and mid price CD and LP formats. Namely they're Bayou Country, Cosmos Factory, Creedence Clearwater Revival, Green River, and Willy And The Poorboys.

Ace Records beef up their R&B catalogue with San Francisco Bay Blues by Jesse Fuller, Shufflin' And Jivin' by Young Jessie and the compilation Bay Area Blues Busters. The latter features mid '50s Kent and Modern recordings from the San Francisco and Oakland areas. Among the tracks are two unreleased cuts by Jimmy McCracklin's guitarist Lafayette 'Thing' Thomas which feature, according to R&B expert Ray Topping, the best guitar solos of all time.

The Demon/Edsel group are stepping up operations a bit at present. On CD they offer two from The Byrds, Younger Than Yesterday and Sweetheart Of The Rodeo; Fresh by Sly And The Family Stone, and Vintage Violence by ex-Velvet Underground John Cale. On record there's The Faces' first LP The First Step, Gabbi Pahinui's Hawaiian Band (early '70s, featuring Ry Cooder), Keynsham by The Bonzo Dog Band, and a double set comp. of '50s R&B and r'n'r titled Hi Records — The Early Years. Later in September Edsel offer Golden Heebie Jeebies by The Association (includes Along Came Mary), Please Don't Change by Brinsley Schwartz (featuring Nick Lowe), Haunted House by Jumpin' Gene Simmons, and S.F. Sorrow by The Pretty Things in gatefold sleeve and original running order. A new label, Mau Mau has been set up for '70s recordings such as Leave Home by The Ramones and Euro-man Cometh by Strangler J.J. Burnel.

The Glam Years (1971/79) by Hello on Bill records is just out. As well as their Bell hit such as Tell Him and New York Groove, there's also unissued material. Over with sister label Zap! there's The Raspberries' Best Of set entitled Overnight Sensation. Over at Charly, their current issues start with two soul compilations, Chicago Soul Uprising (The Real Sound Of Chicago '67-'75) featuring Jackie Wilson, The Chilites, Major Lance etc, and Too Good To Be Forgotten (More Soul Classics) featuring the above and Maxine Brown, Eddie Bo, Chuck Jackson etc. Robert Parker's '66 gem Barefootin gets released in seven and 12 inch forms with a promotional animated video to accompany it. Beat freaks will need the Buzz With The Fuzz album by Chris Farlow And The Thunderbirds; the title track was withdrawn soon after its mid '60s release as the Metropolitan Police took offence to it!

Over the last year Charly have been responsible for importing the mid price Chess/Checker/Argo exact reproduction albums from the continent. Among the 12 set for September release is Bo Diddley's In The Spotlight, Chuck Berry's Is On Top, Best Of Muddy Waters, Look It's The Moonglows, Little Milton Sings Blues, and John Lee Hooker's House Of The Blues. Snakey G

SHIRLEY BROWN

Woman To Woman

Stax SXE 002 A '74 album that followed the success of Shirley's deep hearted soul smoocher Woman To Woman. A timeless piece of Stax love triangle tussling, it's surrounded here by another nine similar vocal excursions which she carries out with the greatest of ease. Although never really reaping any greater success in the UK, this album which seems to be continually re-released is a fine testament to her greatest period. Dave Henderson

JOHNNY COPELAND

Dedicated To The Greatest

Kent KENT 067 Prime Copeland culled from the early '60s on side one of this album, with tracks taken from the Gusto label, while side two emanates from '71 and Copeland's time at Kamp. Truly an LP of two halves, but both faces of the ultimately soulful Copeland tongue slice fare well through different arrangements. For me side one's more rootsy verve cuts it best, but tomorrow I could easily change my mind. Dave Henderson

FACES

First Step

Edsel ED240 So much has happened since the 1970 release of this album that you either know The Faces as a good rockin' "lads" band, the source of the dreaded Rod, or a foil for the Stones. They're so drenched in rock history that it's difficult to place this quite sporadic album in the scheme of things.

What we have crosses into blues, R&B, Brit beat, seminal rockism, cajun country, Dylanesque escapism, and most places in between. A quite entertaining listen, it's not a desert island classic but it is a lot more imaginative than you'd guess after what they've all gone onto since. Dave Henderson

TAV FALCO'S PANTHER BURNS

Behind The Magnolia Curtain

Fan Club FC 029 Still being disrespectful to rock 'n' roll, this is the kind of stuff that will either totally endear or blindly infuriate. In the right mood, it's a meaty dish, although I have to admit a certain waning of interest by the end of the 14th track. Jangly and instantaneous it may be, but the zaniness does get trying. That said, Tav's voice is in fine form, warbling through some good stuff like She's The One That Got It and the chunky Snake Drive. Chew this one over. Carole Linfield

THE SECT DOWNLINERS

Cross Section

Decal LIK 10 The Sect play a bizarre style of boogie-woogie psychedelia with a tinge of garage

Americana thrown in for good measure. From the '60s their beat and blues sound is highlighted by indecent haircuts, maraccas, harmonica and some blood curdling tight ankled trousers. Classic or casualties it's up to you. Johnny Eager

SCOTSMAN OF THE MONTH: Eadwyn Collins

the often quoted Nothin' Shakin', but Eddie Fontaine's legacy to rock 'n' roll went a lot further than that. This 16 track collection covers his '56 to '58 period on Decca, Argo and Brunswick and even manages to unearth some unreleased tracks from the silver tongued Fontaine. From the opening cut, Hey Marie, Rock With Me, the Italian love bandit pose covers all aspects of the four-letter word. Perhaps not an all-time classic, Fontaine's glitzy view on life always makes for entertaining listening, with some strange wordings on show to boot. Johnny Eager

THE IKETTES

Fine Fine Fine

Kent KENT 063 P From the Kamp Records roster, The Ikettes are a hell of a lot more than the four sprightly ganglers who backed Ike and Tina. Here they sing and dance in real original beat boom soul style, with some excellent soul slivers like the title track and I'm So Thankful showing off their best vocal parts. They also do a neat line in sequined dresses. Dave Henderson

JERRY LEE LEWIS

Killer Country

Edsel ED 250 P Jerry Lee in country swing with some above cabaret loose country tunes and some more tastier 'tales of the bottle' blues bits. From 1980, the Lewis Piano style and some less than straightforward country arrangements make for a more unique sound... why, the man even whistles his way out of trouble on one cut. A difficult transition, this album has him looking pissed off on the reverse (as if he wishes he was still rocking out), and it's that image of him that makes this set a little less than convincing at times. Johnny Eager

PRINCE JAMMY

Uhuru In Dub

CSA CSLP2 PRT Je Reissue of the bass and drum skeleton to the debut Black Uhuru album 'Love Crisis', also the set with which Prince Jammy made his mark as a producer of merit on the first step to his present ascendance. His work at the controls here is never flamboyant, in fact this is an underplayed selection of dub sides where the rigid bass of Robbie Shakespeare, Sly Dunbar's military double drum tattoos and the interweaving organ of Winston Wright dictate on their own terms, without embellishment, while the occasional snatch of a Michael Rose vocal phased into the mix keeps things constantly interesting. Evelyn Court

THE SHIRELLES

Greatest Hits

Impact ACT 011 P Chronologically spanning the years 1959 to 1967 and containing the full 20 hits of the New Jersey female quartet whose Will You Love Me Tomorrow from 1960 presaged the whole '60s girl group genre. The sound has not dated well and is very much of its time; those early '60s orchestrated baroque or rococo arrangements, for all their pretty melodies and cleverness, invariably sound contrived. But there is no denying the sweetness and charm of songs like the aforementioned Tomorrow, What

A Sweet Thing That Was and Baby It's You, while their rendition of Everybody Loves A Lover is brilliant in its execution. A notable omission is the song The Beatles made famous, Boys, (never a hit in its own right but the B-side of Will You Love Me Tomorrow), and it could well have replaced some of the somewhat dubious later material on show here. Evelyn Court

LARRY SPARKS

...Sings Hank Williams

Fundamental Music SAVE 28

RR C Prime '77 bluegrass versions of Hank Williams' back catalogue as performed by Larry Sparks and The Lonesome Ramblers. A fine set culled from the American County label, it breeds familiarity of the Williams melodies with a swaying country swing performance that's as addictive as a bowl of chili in mid-winter. Neat. Johnny Eager

THE STANLEY BROTHERS

...Of Virginia — Volume One

Fundamental Music SAVE 27

RR C Taken from the County catalogue of '73, this deep slow paced redneck version of touching country/bluegrass/blues is a real tearjerker, the kind of thing that latter day TV evangelists must have been weened on. The Stanleys play with the ever whining fiddle always called on to jangle the heart, while the harmony lines do all the grief stirring. Fine album that should have surfaced long ago. Dave Henderson

STEAM PACKET

The First Supergroup

Decal LIK 14 Ch An oddbod union of Brian Auger, Rod Stewart, Long John Baldry and Julie Driscoll culled from December 1965. A two hour sprint to make a demo for America resulted in this stodgy album which, although featuring so many names, seemed doomed to failure from the start — the group split soon after.

What we have now is an LP worth of Auger's driving organ instrumental topped by some unsure vocal performances from people who went on to better things. It was nearly 22 years ago today, and it sounds it too. Johnny Eager

Forever Gene Vincent

Magnum Force MFLP 049

Sh An odd ball this. First off there are Gene Vincent's four last recordings — just vocal and harmonica — with a full band added later, sounding in places like The Velvet Underground. Then there's a heap of tributes to the man including Say Mama by Gene's daughter Melody Jean. A collector's item for sure, a reasonably sound listen too, and a hard luck story on the back that just shows nothing's changed in rock 'n' roll. Johnny Eager

Midnight Movers

Kent KENT 058 P If you're thinking of taking the plunge into the Kent catalogue, you're a little bit into the most thumping of northern soul sounds, and you've got your giro... just bash it on the counter and grab this one.

Prime slice Wigan early '70s stuff, where melody and range of instruments came to a head just before the Mecca funk boom. Classics enclosed are to numerous to mention, but space please for The Four Larks' Groovin' At The Go-Go, Billy Preston's The Girl's Got "It" and Homer Banks' Hooked By Love. Superb. Dave Henderson

Stand In For Love

Kent KENT 056 P Uheeeeeeee. Sadsville, Arizona, as the Kent cohorts assemble a 16 track collection of downbeat tearjerkers. In the deep soul moves nothing stirs 'cept the rustling of Kleenex, and Little Anthony And The Imperials, Bobby Womack, The O'Jays, Garnett Mimms and Irma Thomas all get a little depressed. An exquisitely packaged and moving set. Glug. Dave Henderson

Strutting At The Bronze Peacock

Ace CHD 223 P A real neat collection of early '50s tracks from Texas label Peacock, featuring acts that starred in label boss Don Robey's two venues the Bronze Peacock and The Matinee.

On show here is a fine hybrid of blues and sleazy jazz that seems in the main part to defy definition. There's not a duff track on show, but best named and most ticklesome has got to be Dyke Takes A Hike by Cherokee Conyers And His Orchestra featuring David Van Dyke. Ah, they don't have names like that anymore. Johnny Eager

WAILING SOULS

The Very Best Of

Greensleeves GREL 99 Je Not an entirely accurate title as it omits the Souls' '60s recordings for Studio 1 and Tuff Gong, concentrating instead on their output from 1977 to 1984, but nevertheless a strong collection of sides from one of the most stirring Jamaican vocal groups. Insistent melodies and weaving harmonies combine pleasingly and the group deliver their folk homilies in a manner that is as distinctive as it is delightful to the ear. The lead vocals of Winston "Pipe" Matthews bear more than a passing resemblance to the late Bob Marley's and the whole Wailing Souls sound bears comparison with The Wailers when they too were a vocal outfit. Evelyn Court

JACKIE WILSON

The Soul Years Vol Two

Kent KENT 054 P Wilson's ever changing career — through rock 'n' roll to several brands of commercial soul — sadly ended back in '75 after a stroke. The obvious charisma and creativity he had (apart from his serious trouser problems) have lived on, and this selection of his soul sides from the Brunswick catalogue will surely further enhance his reputation. There's even a version of Stevie Wonder's Uptight with Count Basie and orchestra in tow. Johnny Eager

ST UNDERGROUND

Throwing Muses

put the hook in Dave Henderson.

Confusion sets in, the 'phone rings!

If it's Tuesday, it must be, er, Boston!

1 "So, how are things in Boston?" the stupid editor dribbled, sweating at the thought of having to hold general conversation with Kristin Hersh of Throwing Muses. Many seconds later, the wonders of science return a giggling Kristin's first magnetic salvo, from far beyond where men and Dick Branson have recently ballooned . . .

"What?" she retorts, "we're in Rhode Island."

Shit! That's the end, my carefully planned introduction is scuppered.

I thought, Boston, yeah, Boston, now what do we in the UK know about Boston — past the first cup of tea in the morning? Cheers, that's it! Cheers — the famed Friday night TV laugh-in that signals the weekend beginning and the end of normal consciousness as we know it. Shit!

"We used to live in Boston," claims Kristin, obviously vainly trying to make me feel better, "and when Ivo," (4AD label boss and the man who gave the Muse to the UK), "came over, he was real keen to go to Cheers, you know, the bar."

So it exists?

"Not really. Not like the TV show."

Shit! Illusions shattered.

But life's like that, I thought philosophically (or quickly, anyhow). Through the mammoth million page biog/clippings and cuttings collection that Throwing Muses have gleaned from enthusiastic scribes far and wide — intellectual and just plain intelligent — the screwed up piece of paper held more than a few hastily scribbled, but truly probing questions that jourmodom would be proud of.

Kristin's endearing 'phone manner made life a little easier, and we soon got to chew over the group's current state of affairs. With the group now signed to Sire around the world, but staying true to 4AD over here, Kristin's mere 20 years hardly seems adequate for her to have done an album and EP, played both sides of the Atlantic, had a child called Dylan, and dyed her hair a number of exotic colours, but times move fast these days.

"We were real surprised at the interest in us," she confesses. "There were something like 13 labels interested but the whole thing dragged on for ages. And, of course it was real important to get the right deal. We didn't want to have to take a huge advance and get dragged down into having to pay it back and being pressured into writing hits, or whatever."

The first Sire product, a mini-album called The Fat Skier, is released simultaneously on 4AD and will feature an extended version of the album track Soul Soldier on one side, plus six previously unreleased tracks on the other side.

"It'll confuse people a little really. The songs are very quiet, very dry — without much reverb and all that — and it doesn't really tell you anything about the direction we're going in next."

Seems that's been a constant with T Muses' releases to date though. As Kristin casts a critical eye back, her comments on previous product produces good memories, but no great pattern due to the period of time over which each song or project was originated.

"The first album spanned a great deal of time, and to me the EP was an extension of that, with new stuff next to old. Some of the newer songs weren't quite developed, they were too new and still going around my head. Delicate Cutters was a new track, at the time people said 'hey your head must be really weird'. It was, and it's taken some time to get that song fully worked through. I suppose that usually happens, it takes about six months for things to work themselves out."

The story of Delicate Cutters is interesting too. You know the feeling? It traces the story of pent-up people who cut their arms, or parts of their body to release tension — emotion. Like a ritual bleeding, an escape. A sordid (?) pastime where people would cut words into their flesh for release. So did Kristin cut words? And which words?

"I never really got to the point of actual words, I was more of a beginner, just a doodler. . . .but that kind of thing has, in a way, got out of hand over here now. There are a lot of kids killing themselves for the thrill of it."

And what saved you from cutting real words?

"I suppose, what saved me from everything. What let me escape from being down, depressed and doomy, like a lot of people think I should be for writing the songs I do, is the band."

And if it hadn't been the band, would it have come out in some other way?

"I think I'd have been very angry."

Ski tips for beginners

Somehow, I can't imagine Miss Hersh's emotions being best expressed in anger. She doesn't strike me as the kind of trolley wielding maniac who'd down stacks of refried beans because her bio-rhythms were low . . . but who knows? Emotions certainly are an integral part of the Muses' artillery, and the effect of their performances often result in dramatic explosions.

"I've seen people crying at our shows . . . not because they're depressed or anything, not because of the frantic goings on, but because they're letting something out of their system. You see them later and their faces are smiling and relieved."

The reason for that release of the self-conscious is easy to track. Kristin bares her soul, forgets her inhibitions and lets people into her own world, she touches on more than a few things that Jo Public daren't even admit to their mirrors. Is that wise, though?

"I can't help it. The songs come as they are, they're unaffected, they come from the sky to my spine, then out through my mouth, they sound right and we work into them to make them really flow."

But doesn't your boyfriend, for instance, think that his life's being exposed in some of the autobiographical inserts that make the songs so lifelike — and so much more important?

"Yeah, I'm sure he does. But you'd have to ask him really."

And the band, the evocation of Kristin's life and time sketches? They are obviously the cog of the Muses' wheel that makes their rock 'n' roll, their succinctly '80fied music so burning, so infectious, so dynamic.

Kristin's belligerent vocal lines bounce from her flakey guitar parts over David Narcizo's stridently humming snare slaps, while Tanya Donnelly's guitar rounds the edges and Leslie Langton's bass throbs glowingly like another lead instrument through each unexpected break in time, tune, direction.

Throwing Muses' musical pot pourri covers the history of rock 'n' roll and can be aligned as touching on everyone from Berry to The Beatles, from the B52s to Talking Heads, from The Beach Boys to Jefferson Airplane, and all points in between.

The song's structure and inbred uncontrollability (and initial unpredictability) make for confusion. Kristin says it's all a little confusing.

"It's confusing."

Because things keep switching about, changing and moving all over the place.

"It's confusing."

But it's never art-bore style. Throwing Muses know which side of the pretentious wall hanging to stand.

"Yeah, we thought the UK wouldn't take us because we were too rock 'n' roll initially."

More poignantly, and near the button, Kristin's search (as carried out through the group's songs in words and music) is, while entertaining, a little scary at times. A little too close to home, maybe a little too far away from reality.

"It's strange with the words and stuff, it's like the songs are ahead of me and it takes a good six months to work them into how they should be from when they start."

Like, when psychics suggest that they can see your future because life's a road they're above, as it were, and they can see the roadblocks, the turn offs, the better routes, for the next six months?

"I suppose."

But the songs are so vivid, do you have nightmares? Premonitions?

"Sure. But not scary. I see a lot of things coming up, a lot of things happening."

Then in the morning do they affect you? Do you carry on the dream?

"Yeah, sometimes."

That happens to me too. Wonder what it is?

"My father's a lecturer in dream symbolism, and I've had to hear all this stuff for years. It's real strange."

So what about in 20 years time? Have you thought about things that far ahead? What would you like people to look back and say about Throwing Muses?

"I don't know. That's real difficult."

OK, then why is the mini album called The Fat Skier?

"That's the sleeve and a postcard that my father sent to me with a giant fireball that looked like a skier . . . he'd written a poem on it. That was kind of important to me."

And the record itself?

"We're really happy with it, but it's still old and new material, it doesn't really tell you where we're going to next, which way we're developing."

So when will we hear the new new Throwing Muses material? What's it going to sound like?

"It's brilliant, it's great, it's turned us into a manic band. We've rehearsed it so hard that we all know each other's parts. We're really pleased with it."

Still not recorded yet, the new new album, is a hyperventilating saliva-tingler that's already causing a thudding in the Underground office's collective chests. For now, The Fat Skier will do just fine, only seven songs, but, hell, Boston wasn't built in a day.

"Aren't you going to ask me my favourite colour. What I eat for breakfast and all that."

No, I am not. We're a serious magazine . . . but, just in case, what colour socks do you wear?

"I don't wear socks."

Shit!

a story of vinyl obsessives

Here, Dogman And The Head are a weird lot. Their High Fly on Influx is a rhythm and little else, while on the flip they cover Argent's Hold Your Head Up. Strange.

— And stranger still, The Vaselines' Son Of A Gun on 53rd And 3rd (Fast Forward) is touted as a cross between Francoise Hardy and The Residents but it fails to deliver. Twee pop, instead. On Fundamental (Red Rhino), Ritual Tension do a sluglike cover of The Eagles' Hotel California that lacks any reason in life and plays at 33 (while claiming to be 45 on the label). Yep, mixed up indeed.

— Nigel Rolfe's African Flower on Reekus (Pinnacle) has some interesting ideas, and a political ideology that's sound, but the disc is undeveloped and won't turn enough heads. Although his press pic may well do. Having long hair and being young in the UK is a boon with the post-Dumpy's Rusty Nuts Grubo shobang, but being in St Vitus in the States and being on SST, just underlines that they're a band out of place. Their Thirsty And Miserable three track (through Pinnacle) is state of the art kachung (but is that enough?).

— Play it Again Sam in Belgium have three 12 inches available through Red Rhino here. Da Davo is a black looking, backward facing Joy Division fetishist on Where Even Angels Fall, Minimal Man go on in their subterranean-rock way with the Mock Honeymoon EP — a restrained bass-pulsing grind — and finally, Chris And Cosy emerge with an up tempo slice of neu electronica — floating gleefully with Cosy's affected vocals. Said disc comes in a shoddily finished sleeve, adorned with a photo of Cosy in an intriguing position, wearing nothing more than a smile.

— Brendan Croker And The Five O'clock Shadows have lifted Darin' from their Boat Trips album (Red Rhino), it's a slim measure of poppy gravel tongue, with a whisker and a smile, while the Idea label (through Pinnacle) has Moss Poles' One Summer brimming with Undertones powerchords, but no sign of nasal Feargal. Idea also "do" John Shuttleworth's northern "humour" on Swimming With Sharon — a tacky Gordon Is A Moron re-run.

— The Dragsters on Union City (Fast Forward) are just about audible on I'm Not An American, but it's a little too fast to catch why they're so firm about it. The Sons Of Shane (Whippet Records, 116 Galton Rd, Bearwood, Birmingham B67 5JS), are steeped in tra-la '60s subjectivity on their Fly single. Claustrophobic and cluttered with too many correct "bits", but evocative in a way. Like Vani Vidi Vici... they have a single on Sad Tiger (148 Trafalgar Rd, London SE10). Two Of A Kind kept reminding me of a thickly strummed version of The Hollies... now that is odd, isn't it?

— The Garden play prime post-punk cardigan music. Well intentioned and on the verge of some kind of cohesive tunesmanship. On Gogshaws (through Revolver), their Negative Allegory EP is cleansing and never contrived.

— New label, Minthead (Red Rhino) offer the world the late '87 version of how Kitchenware should be juggling on their debut 12 inch, Tell Me About Your Childhood, a strummy pop confection by The Honest Johns, while on the continent, Isabelle Antena (the last remaining Antena member) is seen shrouded sexily in no more than a tea towel on the sleeve of her Les Femmes Des Mers Du Sud on Crepuscule (Pinnacle). The record itself is quite a tasteful slice of sleazy late night stuff, unlike the pounding disco thrub of Psyche on their Prisoner Of Desire on New Rose (Pinnacle).

— Short laughs from Ted Chippington on an anti-these version of Dion's The Wanderer on Vindaloo (which has returned to Cartel distribution after a spell with WEA). Stiff Kittens' post-punk-Bansheism gets another outing after their last single fared reasonably well in the Independent chart. Their Happy Now three track on Crisis is distributed by Red Rhino and bears all the hallmarks of Joy Bانش Division and The Bauhaus Bros. Good tune though.

— Darlington offers the world Crow People on a four track 12 inch called Cloud Songs on Meantime through Red Rhino. Strained vocals but a driving beat. Similarly strident are Frank Chickens whose camp cabaret continues on Yellow Toast on Flying Records through Revolver. Neat arrangement, like an oriental string quartet playing hip pop.

— Strange things happening at Waterfront where former rock jurno Giovanni Dadamo (part of The Snivelling Shits way back when) has penned the lyrics to The Engineers plodding Pompell Lovers. Introverts die hard stuff.

— Finally, Late Road Lunatics' Rose has some drive but they've got someone's dad playing trumpet making it all a little mixed up. It's on DDI.

ANNIE ANXIETY BANDEZ As I Lie In Your Arms One Little

Indian RT C A startling surprise from Annie — who most people have probably got down as a Crass-like howler. Here, avec Bandez, it's lush sex music, with a beat, a message and an industrial grind. Like jazz funk fed through the mincer. Superb. R

A PRIMARY INDUSTRY Heart Of Glass Sweatbox

RT C Industrial Eurobeat remake of the former Blondie disco classic. Don't expect to hear the vocals, don't worry if the tune goes slightly off the rails, this is a tough mix and it's still got the beat. TF

BAMBI SLAM Happy Birthday (Yet Another)

Product Inc RT C The Bambi's newie revolves, in glitzy celebration ribbons, and reverberates with a more straightforward approach, tickled into submission by some neat guitar lines. A fine single which'll no doubt keep their name on many a tongue, but maybe it lacks some of the dynamics of their excellent Don't It Make You Feel? 45. DH

CIRCUS CIRCUS CIRCUS

Magic Girl Sweatbox SOX

024 RT C Already raved about, Circus X3's new single is yet another leap out of the commercial cupboard. Their new cloak of swishing popism, with a rock beat, could very well make them into an essential life force. R

EDWYN COLLINS Don't Shilly

Shilly Elevation Unmistakably Edwyn. Wondrously written, a great pop song... what did you expect? DH

DARLING BUDS Just To Be

Seen Darling Buds C Great rock 'n' roll twang-pop from Darling Buds on this seminal single that's re-released because it's darn good. A pummeling melody line gives way to a great verse/chorus play off and potential is definitely marked A. JE

THE DOCTORS CHILDREN The Girl With The Green Eyes

Buffalo P Perhaps not the strongest song from King Buffalo, but a delight of guitars and Paul Smith at his most Lou Reed-ish still wins the day. Pleasingly unpolished, this is not an invitation for daytime airplay, but it is a great record. Enough. TF

GAVIN FRIDAY AND SIMON CARMODY You Can't Always Get What You

Want Baby P Ex Virgin Prunes cover the Stones with a throaty warble, which does little to enlarge their collective ego rating. Rhyme and reason for this lacklustre affair are difficult to understand. Room full of losers!. TC W

GHOST DANCE A Word To The

Wise Karbon P Cult followings often quite reluctantly find themselves sharing their beloveds with bigger audiences, and it's about time Ghost Dance fans got themselves ready for the same treatment. The latest, and most prolific, GD release sees four tracks lift them beyond obscurity and pretty close to some deserved commercial exposure. Just watch them now. JE

THE GO HOLE Flight Of

Angels Big Pop P Met with indifference by Stephen Edney of London Records when the group submitted a tape to the Tip Sheet, The Go Hole poke two fingers at the world with this classy slice of poppy teenage angst. Bright and alarmingly well delivered, this a real sweetie. DH

HANG THE DANCE Break On Through Black Map

RT C Topid cabaret version of Doors' classic. Too gimmicky and quite forgettable. DH

HEAD I Can't Stop Demon

P More of the old sex-funk stuff with a touch of drunken glam thrown in for good measure. Head are like an Indie Slade... all lager, "lads" and terrace chants. We look forward to their Xmas monster. JE

THE HOUSEHUNTERS Cooler Than Thou 53rd And 3rd

EE C Dork production for what is a great song, far surpassing the group's previous outings. Here, the 'hunters' humour and songwriting potential shines, begging hungrily for a decent arrangement and finish. A cult 45 that should've gone a whole way further. More talented than the plethora of no-ones who've signed recently and well worth an investment (and producer). DH

INSTIGATORS Dive Super

Seven Record Co (Doug Moody Productions P.O. Box 1596, San Marcos, CA 92069, U.S.A) Plenty of energy and the punk ethic still lives and breathes. Rough, ready and recorded live in Denmark back in '86. It's probably a safer bet to lend an ear to the studio stuff as this four tracker lacks the necessary bite. Not very exciting really. DI

JAKE THE PILGRIM GAIA

Waterfall C Thoughtful Strangers 'n' powerchords rock with a punk penchant. Close but no banana. JE

JILTED BRIDES Bad Vibes

Trashcan NM C Chugging rock/pop on this debut four track EP from the Jilted Brides. Guitars flail, clichés rattle, and the rock 'n' roll circus moves on again. JE

AR KANE Lollita 4AD

RT C Neat cover! Neat Psycho-tinged drama as the moody torso has a loaded blade behind her back, the danger is shrouded in mystery, and AR Kane's second single is coloured with the same intense charm and mysticism. An erotic, exotic journey into a lush sense of melancholia, riddled with dangerous visions and strummed accompaniment. Music for real people. DH

LEATHER NUN Cool Shoes

Wire NM C Novelty pop story telling with an acidic guitar break and good supporting croons. It's rock, but with its buttons flashing. Brill. R

LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE

Iced Puns EP TIM RT C From the ashes of The Nightingales, Andy Lloyd continues down the sparse guitar path, though in a far more structured vein. The better tracks are on the back side of this 12 inch. Pioneer seeing Andy as storyteller, and Three Times as 'socially aware'. A fair start. TF

LOUDSPEAKER Psychotic Machine One Little Indian

NM C More evidence that one of today's most important labels — sound, visual and political — is One Little Indian. Loudspeaker has all the distinctively quality-orientated hallmarks... it sweats, sounds vibrant and dangerous and is, as ever, timeless. R

MACKENZIES A Sensual Assault Ron Johnson

NM C Four out-takes from the contemporary death disco — where noise in the basket is top of the menu. The MacKenzies come of age with a new kind of music, a soundtrack for the next degeneration, that'll keep us vibrant as we burn our Smiths t-shirts. Exotic. R

THE MAN FROM DELMONTE Water In My Eye Ugly Man

RR C Majestically flowing pop, harnessed to mouthorgan and African-styled guitar from Manchester's Man From. A lilting top side with a pop slant — which is joined by two similarly recommended cuts on the 12 inch. DH

THE MEMBRANES Time Warp 1991 Glass NM C

A new label for the Mems and a new slogan... Long Live Trad Rock. Yes, the boys are getting satirical and they now present their guitar onslaught, and angry angst, through a hail of synth swirls and tongue in cheek rhetoric. The bastard public didn't like them when they went "pop", so they'll get cynical-cyber-punk instead. Brillo. R

PIM Fade Away Gaga Goodies (Box 361, 00121 Helsinki, Finland)

Brilliantly kitsch 45 from three girls and one guy dressed as cowboy glitterati, and sounding like paisley primadonnas. Out of their heads on beer and metal, with the message "This record is good. Honest!" daubed on the sleeve. Flash stuff. DH

THE PURPLE THINGS Kingsnake Absolutely Free

RR C Maximum fuzzing guitar and demented vocals stamp some mean crepe-soled feet on that rockin' beat, go down low for a bit, then jump around some more. Headbutt the walls or catch the colours from the air; the Purps are up for a bit of both of those. Peter Gunn Got Hit By A Train on the flip is also most welcome. Got the bastard! DI

RED HARVEST Murder Quiet

Records NM C Fervent and direct new sounds from Red Harvest, who've leapt head and shoulder above their former hesitancy. This new found quality should see them move closer to the new league championship and into a more serious mode of acceptance. Nice one. JE

REM It's The End Of The World As We Know It (And I Feel Fine) IRS A blatant and shameful remake of 'Subterranean Homesick Blues' this may be, but fk me, what a remake. A taster from the upcoming 'Document' album, if this trade of vocals and incessant chorus set to a 70 mph beat is anything to go by, REM could be set to produce the album of this year as well. Georgia's satellites go pop. Leonard Bernstein. TF

THE SIDDLEYS What Went Wrong This Time? Medium

Cool RR C More from the vaults of the strumalongs friend, Medium Cool. The Siddleys are more English sounding than their labelmates, Raw Herbs and Waltones, but they still retain that edge which makes you want to take them home to meet your mother. Great record. JE

THE SINGING RINGING TREE Good Day Good Sample

RR C Singalong pop from Stockport. A scratching guitar, a shuffling snare and some good confident vocals make it work. With guitars and even a middle eight, you'll wonder how they got so much in it. JE

THE SMITHS Girlfriend In A Coma Rough Trade

RT C After several forced plays, the subtleties of this two minute ballad are revealed to display typical Smiths tenderness and warmth. That said, Girlfriend is not a single, is not a good trailer for Strangeways Here We Come, and is not going to convince anyone that Morrissey without Marr will be able to lead The Smiths onwards and upwards. TF

SPIZZ Where's Captain

Kirk? Hobo RR C Revived and revitalised, the "loudest" record in post punk maelstrom daze, resurfaces with a more temperamental beat and a bigger production. A pop classic? A novelty hit? Who knows just what this plastic plea might reap second time around? TC W

TAGC Big Sex Sweatbox

RT C Backwater beat music with a film noir facade, a gritty Adi Newton talkalong, and some jets taking off next door. Quite alarming, quite appealing, but not enough guts, not enough driving power! Haunting, it leaves you begging for more. TC W

TOT TAYLOR It's Good For

You LPA RT C Stuck in the scat-a-longa-Sinatra school of sassy jazz, Tot's eccentric behaviour makes him one of life's little ironies. A strong independent chap, his latest single pleads for a deal, the lyrics even ask, and you never know he might just make it. Smoochy. DH

THE VAYNES Baby Cruel

Vanity C Greasy pimple rock with loose powerchords and max. conviction potential. A noise for your local acid head. JE

THE WALLFLOWERS 83.7 Idea

I Yes, the Idea label seems to be collecting mostly notable names (a few dodgy ones here and there), and The Wallflowers should be a big priority act. Their new single continues their tuneful poppy bent, and manages to get even closer to the correct daytime posture, while still retaining that masterfully distinct and original undercurrent. Very tasty. DH

THE SWANS New Mind

Product Inc RT C From the seething mass and melée of post Swans fervour, nearly everyone forgot about The Swans. But, hell, just past the umpteenth Skin variation and format, they're back. New Mind is a volatile return to form, a grinding chiming noise that's even better than you might expect. What's more it's a precursor to their upcoming double Children Of God. Get your seats now. Ripley

STOP

AAAAAAAAAAAArgh! They is back. Yep. Alternative TV release a new single this month on Anagram called My Baby's Laughing... and it's GOOD. Almost commercial. Anagram also have a 12 inch from Silver Chapter which features four real neat grinders with a guitar edge, so watch out for them. On EI there's five new tracks of debatable style and quality. The Would-Be-Goods sound like Lorraine Chase, Anthony Adverse is average, Marden Hill are exotic and evocative, Louis Phillipe is Louis Phillipe and The King Of Luxembourg is his Royal Highness and then some.

The Timebox label continue their bolshily gravy boobey series of releases with a fabola EP from And So To Bed through Pinnacle (and did you know, we didn't even mention the New Order single last month? Readers, ratings... who needs 'em).

SURFIN' CLAMBAKE

Hot surf poop and psychedelic thangs

Let's kick off with Philadelphia's finest, The Ben Vaughn Combo, who have got the greatest garage anthem released this year. It's called My First Band and makes Louie Louie sound like Pomp And Circumstance. Attention should also be paid to the B-side, Vibrato In The Grotto, a surf instrumental of staggering virtuosity and er... vibrato. Staying with Americans for a while, remember The Raybeats? Well, their guitarist Danny Amis has a band called The Overtones and you are strongly recommended to find a single on Twin Tone called Red Checker Wagon. The A-side is OK but the flip has a wonderful version of The Raybeats' classic Calhoun Surf. A poignant reminder of The Raybeats arrived only the other day from well-known Scottish person Lindsay Hut-ton. It was a badge, and the same package contained an LP by The Skeletons called Rockin' Bones. An excellent example of surfin' r'n'r, and particularly outstanding for the track Blood Surfin'.

- That's enough Americans (and Scots) for now, let's see what's cooking on the English front. I've nothing against A-sides but the B-sides often attract me more. A good case in point is a new single on the way from Marden Hill on El records. The B-Side Hangman is an epic spaghetti/surf instrumental quite the equal of some The Monochrome Set's finest moments.
- It's funny name time again. Ex-Drop Kick Me Jesus drummer David "Jones" Rathbourne has resurfaced with The Dental Mechanics' Daughter. They've got a single due out soon through Backs which continues his peculiar fascination with crackling snares and rockabilly cowbeat. Odd indeed.
- Richard Norris from Bam Caruso has started a club operating from Kentish Town's Bull And Gate called the Hangout which promises weird bands, weird light-shows, weird music and general psyche happenings. It's on Monday nights and should be pretty interesting.
- Big, bad Barrance Whitfield And The Savages have a mini-LP out on Demon. Call Of The Wild could have been named Scream Of The Wild as Bazza hollers his way through tracks like Stop Twisting My Arm and Girl From Outer Space. A more pure and manic R&B record you'll never find. If that isn't enough for you, then it looks like Celluloid will be releasing Peter Zarembo And The Love Delegation's Spread The Word. It has Barrance on backing screams and is a perfect swinging '60s good time party album with the inevitable gospel and psyche overtones. Don't miss it. Hoxton Leonid

Slicked back, bass slapping, punk-a-billy

New from Big Beat is the mid priced second album from The Locomotives entitled Bourgeois Voodoo. You may remember that their debut album was on Media Burn, who have been lying low while moving their catalogue from Rough Trade to Red Rhino. The last Sting-rays gig was recorded though, and is released in September, as is a compilation licensed from L.A. label Bomp, which features The Pandoras, Plasticland and The Chesterfield Kings to name a few. Label boss Stan Brennan has also started a new label, Absolutely Free. The first album is by Purple Things, the first pressing has a gatefold sleeve, but advance orders have claimed all of those. The second pressing has a regular sleeve but the record will be pressed in purple vinyl.

- Nervous have just signed The Coffin Nails and work on an album is about to start. I.D. will be releasing albums by The Sureshots, Demented Are Go and The Turnpike Cruisers in September, none have titles as yet. Likewise with ABC who still have no title for the Restless' live album, even though it's due for release early this month.
- The Meteors, riding high in the indie charts again with their version of The Stranglers' Go Buddy Go on Anagram, have a new album entitled Don't Touch The Bang Bang Fruit, this month.
- There's a rather good 'zine called Pandoras Box, which carries a free flexi disc by Thee Mighty Caesars. The contents vary from trash pulp TV articles through to The Medway Sound and The Chesterfield Kings. Send an A4 SAE and a cheque/P.O. for 80p to 19 Forthingdale Close, Cosby, Leicester, LE9 5UN. Mags like this need supporting.
- She's Just Rockin' is the title of a compilation of rockabilly, blues, jive and hillbilly from some of the best bands playing the circuit at the moment. Fury Records have pulled together The Bootleggers, Hayriders, Deltas, Rusti Steel & Tin Tax, Wiggsville Spliffs, Oakville Tune Wranglers, Niteshift Trio, Keytones and Sunset Valley Boys. Snakey G a modernist frenzy of soulful delight

Listening to the monitor mix of the new Fast Eddie album last week confirmed my original impression that Shake Yo' Tailfeather is the hottest slice of live R&B this decade. Continuing the Essex delta blues wailing tradition, it should be in your shops at the end of the month... The other live LP, on Re Elect The President this month, is That's What I Want by East London's fave sons Long Tail Shorty. It apparently includes a version of the rather controversial Anti-CND which was originally censored by the band's last record company, Diamond, who apparently misunderstood the sentiment.

- The Untouchables, the soul/ska cross-over band from the States who achieved quite a lot of UK chart success with Free Yourself and their Wild Child LP a couple of years back have run into a spot of trouble with their American label, MCA. It seems that the company president is an old buddy of the president and didn't take too kindly to the anti-Raygun lyrical content of the new single. The release has since been shelved.
- On a slightly more blue note, it's good to hear that Radio London's Mad On Jazz team have brought that Hammond Organ maestro, Jimmy Smith, into town for a series of dates at The Town And Country club and elsewhere this month... Check local flyers for details... Also swinging into town this month are The Flamin' Groovies who are over for a tour to promote their One Night Stand LP.
- Small World, one of the best and certainly one of the most underrated bands of the mod revival have got themselves back together for a one-off gig in Rotherham (where?) in mid October which'll be recorded for a live LP on Unicorn... Also out on Unicorn in the near future is the debut 12 inch from The Ambassadors, a young four piece from Norwich... Finally this week, a blindin' fanzine called Empty Hours. This issue features The Jazz Renegades, Toots And The Maytals, Warhol and lots more... 50p & SAE from Flat 4, Granite House, Heyworth St, Derby. Felix Adler

Hate and moaning in England

The Doctor's Children get vitriolic yet again

The first time I saw The Doctor's Children perform, singer/guitarist Paul Smith was busy blaming what was actually quite a reasonable performance on everything in sight until burgeoning Radio One DJ Andy Kershaw called from the audience for him to "Stop moaning and get on with it." Three years, many shows, the occasional record and umpteen line-ups later, Smith still seems to thrive off animosity.

"I hate playing England," he declares bluntly. "In London, everybody thinks they're A&R men, and outside London nobody goes to gigs... I hate the independent scene, but I hate the way majors are working at the moment."

Smith will probably never be happy, but if his offspring continue to fling their rampant rockist barrages at us I shall have no cause for complaint. Witness last year's Upright EP Rose Cottage (which had its surprisingly tender moments), followed earlier this year by the six-track King Buffalo, a spritely piece of rock'n'roll noise, and the original home of the new single The Girl With Green Eyes.

That The Doctor's Children aren't stars may be a travesty, but it is not overtly surprising. Neither cuties or grebo bikers, Paul Smith and his current assemblage (which, as ever, he assures me is the permanent line-up) are possibly just too rock'n'roll to fit in. Though the Velvets at their raunchiest strike as an obvious influence, Smith himself prefers to pinpoint those original punks and currently maligned funsters, The Who.

"A lot of people pick up a guitar because they want to get laid, and a lot of people pick up a guitar because they want to be accepted, like Pete Townshend. I think the thing my ego is looking for is massive exposure to the people I was brought up with, to get the respect I never got before."

Neither Paul Smith or the collective Children seem obvious candidates for future immortality, and Smith himself is deeply worried that the Children have been around for too long, with too few releases. At times his frustration clearly shows through, but he still looks at the bigger picture.

"I think in ten years time we'll be playing stadiums. The way the band is, we're either going to go all the way, or not at all."

I know which route I hope for. Tony Fletcher

Edwyn Collins and the solo stigma

- Don't Shilly Shally is the first Edwyn Collins single on Elevation Records. It marks something of a return for the great man who first leapt into the public eye at the helm of Orange Juice.

- The early Postcard releases are collectors items, and now change hands for hideous prices — Orange Juice's influence is still evident today, six years after the release of their last Postcard 45, Poor Old Soul, and the indie scene is still full of groups who adhere doggedly to the band's "anti-rock" politics.

- Of course Edwyn modestly denies this.

- "Alan McGhee," Elevation boss, "is always telling me that there are lots of anorak people who regard the group as seminal, but I find that hard to believe," he says. "Perhaps it is because our guitar parts appeal to beginners."

- So what of the many guitar groups currently toting their wares?

- "Well, I am still naive enough to expect a degree of honesty from bands," he replies. "Unfortunately it is not always apparent these days. In Orange Juice there was a great awareness of rock's heritage in our music, as well as other things like the Sound Of Young Scotland slogan. There was a knowingness, as well as some guts and conviction. I look around at some of today's jingly-jangly groups, and all I can see is pastiche. There's no wryness to it which is more disappointing."

- But never mind, Edwyn will be playing live soon. But what?

- "We will be doing a smattering of Orange Juice material in the set, but it will not be an evening of pure nostalgia. I am always receptive to audiences and their requests, so we'll be gauging what each concert demands and responding accordingly."

- The new live group includes Denis Bovell on bass, and Steve Skinner on guitar.

- "I've worked with Denis a lot before," says Edwyn. "Steve is also an old colleague — he used to roadie for Orange Juice, since the days of Blue Boy. It means that they both understand the sort of thing I want to do, and it keeps us away from the session musician mentality."

- After the current batch of dates around the UK in support of the single a more comprehensive and lengthy UK tour is planned for the autumn. Julian Henry

GOING FOR MASS EXPOSURE!

Critical Mass dissect the rock/pop theory

- "So many people who are doing music think they're living on the wild side of life but this is no different to any other business. In the end it comes down to money. I'm not saying that's anyone's reason for doing it but you need money because it's a very costly business and you need to be earning more than the minimum wage to be able to do it."

- The harsh words of some musical mercenary perhaps? Cold logic indeed, but not a representative example of the Critical Mass ethos. This is just big brother Lincoln Fook talking realism, spouting the rationale.

- Russell, four years his minor nods assertively. The half Germanic/half Chinese Fook boys, along with fellow Tuetonic Alan Chutt, recently released their Operation: Dreaming Of Babylon EP on Timebox. A highly accessible kind of thing which found itself in the ejector seat of a strangely puritan craft! It's all a part of The Mass's coda — a dangerous blue print for avoiding commercial success at all costs!

1. DON'T PROMOTE THE A-SIDE OF YOUR DISC.

Lincoln: "We've gone to a lot of trouble not to have an A side and a B side that's too obvious a distinction between good and bad. There can be no possible motive for making a record except that you want to so there should be no need for an A and a B side."

2. DON'T MAKE ANY RECORDS!

Russell: "That's why we wouldn't want to make an LP or a single. We'd prefer to make three EP's a year to keep things different and to keep up the quality."

3. DON'T MAKE ANY MONEY!!

Alan: "The thing is, as soon as you start to make money it's very easy to stray from your original path or ideal."

4. DON'T GIVE UP YOUR DAY JOB.

Lincoln: "I s'pose that fits in with our philosophy as a band. We all do other things to earn money. If you relied upon a record company things would be very difficult . . . We're very lucky because Russell goes to the London School Of Furniture and he makes all our guitars."

5. DON'T SIGN TO A MAJOR!

Alan: "Most of what we do wouldn't be mainstream anyway."

Russell: "We're happy on Timebox. Jon Beast seems to want to do music for the sake of music and we're happy with that."

Alan: "We wouldn't move on without him."

6. AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST: DON'T HAVE YOUR PHOTO TAKEN!! (Even if you are very pretty.)

Russell: "It's very distressing when you open up Sounds and see all those pictures of bands. They look like models — ugh!"

Lincoln: "I know that's purist but I agree, although I can see that it may be the wrong attitude. Perhaps we're too purist for our own good at the moment . . . but if we succeed it has to be purely on the strength of the music."

I know what I think. You'll just have to buy Operation: Dreaming Of Babylon to discover the true worth of Critical Mass for yourselves won't you! Alex Kadis

New Moon goes plastic

Thirteen Moons and the Scandanavian alternative

That's the trouble with groups like Thirteen Moons who are so far out on their own: There's too much worrying time spent trying to describe them and yet trying not to pigeonhole them. OK, it's a music that uses space and distance for expression: a music that winds saxophone, a stroked semi-acoustic guitar and strings around a deep, forlorn voice: a music that could be jazz, or ambient, or new music, or mood music, or '60s film composer John Barry taking a camping holiday by the Swedish fjords near to where Thirteen Moons live, or something . . .

After a four-track EP, A True Story, 1986's Little Dreaming Boy album and this year's Suddenly One Summer 12 inch, there is a new album called Origins. It was recorded in both Stockholm and Cornwall.

But what is Sweden like for a band as unconventional as Thirteen Moons?

"We have a very small audience," crackles Anders Holm on the Moonline. "Some journalists love us. Sweden is a conservative country but that goes for England too. It's hard to be a band in Sweden."

It doesn't surprise me that Anders sounds as melancholy as Thirteen Moons' music. We agree that it's hard to be honest as well. Thirteen Moons' music is honest. Unquenchably honest.

"We're trying to communicate and to be honest and human. These are the values I believe in. It's not just because I'm in a band but because it's what I try to do and try to be."

And are you succeeding?

"I think so. Maybe it will succeed eventually. Not in a month or in one year, but maybe in five years time, someone will come up to me and say something nice or good about our music." Martin Aston

Derek B is the first English rapper to be signed to the prestigious Stateside label Profile, and not just for a single either. By the time you read this he should be well into an album.

- Meanwhile, at his home label Music Of Life, things are going from strength to strength with the release of the Hard As Hell compilation which is as essential as their first comp — look out especially for Asher D's Ragamuffin Hip-Hop, and C.J. Macintosh's The Tables Are Turning, both singles and both excellent.
- Staying with the Profile connection for a moment, the label are due to set up a London office sometime before Christmas and will be scouting for U.K. talent. (Check out the old Monkees hit Mary Mary rehashed by Run D.M.C., The Surf M.C.s' Surf M.C.s and the new Dana Dane album in the meantime).
- The London Posse have a single out on Blatant, produced by none other than London D.J. Tim Westwood. It's a good time all round for London's M.C.s and D.J.s, with the Cookie Crew and Renegade Sound Wave singles due out and The

Riotous rhythm and reggae onslaught

One who has been a fixture on the Jamaican recording scene since he sang with The Techniques in the Sixties is Winston Riley. He has been producing music on his various labels since the early Seventies and last year hit a winning streak, first with his album of Stalag cuts and shortly after with the original Boops recording by Super Cat. Now he is looking to repeat this success with a number of new releases on his Techniques label, most popular of which at present is Flourgon entreating Hol A Spliff. Other titles from the same outlet destined to make an impact include an Ernest Wilson double-sider coupling First Love and Lady Soul, and Janet Kenton crooning Honestly c/w a Dean Fraser saxophone workout I Love You.

- Reissued yet again due to public demand by Prince Jammy is the witty indictment Gimme No Bun with Little John pleading the case for wholesome Jamaican cuisine as opposed to a fast food diet, on this present occasion coupled with a further Jammy title, Coco Tea singing Possy. From the same outlet and currently the most popular of all the Jammy mixes is Frankie Paul on Sara c/w Cultural Roots, Running Back To Me. And from the same stable Mr Paul also sings Possie Run Come, while for the same source upcoming dancehall artist Chuck Turner continues to improve his reputation on We Rule the Dance and Tears.
- Harry Mudie productions are as rare as Johnny Osbourne titles are common but the combination pays dividends on the singer's derivation of the Hill And Gully theme. Also up from Jamaica is Wayne Marshall, Pon A Level c/w Dance Baby Dance, Peter Metro, Nu Sell Yusef c/w Gone A Session, and the latest from Girlie Girlie hitmaker Sophia George on a Willie Lindo composition Final Decision. Evelyn Court

Three Wise Men just finishing off an album, all on Rhythm King who are also re-releasing the first two Schooly D albums as a double. The excellent Chuck Brown double live album gets a well deserved re-issue on Rhythm King as well.

Sadomasochism and lullabyes

A R Kane defy definitions and break down barriers

A R Kane, who have been called lots of things

There's confidence and there's confidence. Hear Lollita, A R Kane's first single for 4AD and it's unlikely you'll hear anything like it again this year.

"We formed basically because the kind of music that we wanted to listen to wasn't made anymore," says cool Alex.

Do you mean it was made once before?

"No, he doesn't mean that!" interrupts clever Rudi. "OK, he's right, it has, but not the style of music, but the kind of music — the approach of making it."

Like who?

Alex: "Miles Davis between 1967 and 1970, early Weather Report, and that's about it really."

Rudi: "It's mostly jazz but there are elements in some rock bands as well, like Can and Jimi Hendrix . . . but we don't recognise terms like rock and jazz as valid at all. They're just categories that don't apply to anything in reality. Rock and soul and jazz and blues . . . we borrow from all of them."

What is the shared approach?

Alex: "It isn't based on any formula but on what you're feeling. It comes directly out of the emotions, out of the guitar and onto the tape."

A R Kane's approach, going by their first single, You Push A Knife (on One Little Indian), and Lollita/Sadomasochism Is A Must/Butterfly Collector, is to fashion beauty out of chaos and chaos out of beauty. It leads some — myself included — to talk of a black Jesus And Mary Chain — albeit a much better Mary Chain. They could see the confusion, Alex and Rudi tell me, if you didn't know about both groups.

"It was written as a very well composed pop song and it just happened to be really noisy. It's not like a Mary Chain song at all. But sweetness and noise are elements that run through a lot of our work. By the way, was it Underground who called us goth-horrors? We've been called so many things!"

A R Kane might record for 4AD and Lollita is produced by The Cocteau's Robin Guthrie but you'd be hard pushed to find a trace of gothicness in any of those peoples' pockets. Instead, you'll find fur-coated ballads with steel claws, a sensual haze of a day drowned by a cloudburst of guitars. Martin Aston

Jet lagged and star struck

The Jetset reveal the secrets of Koo and a new LP

- For three years The Jetset were Britain's zaniest (only?) exponents of Bubblegum pop. Cute, cuddly and dressed like The Monkees, they won hearts and minds with their combination of delicious pop songs and faultless packaging. They even had their own wacky cartoon strip. Now, with the release of their fourth album, Vaudeville Park, The Jetset seem to be growing up. Even the infamous Jetset uniforms have gone.
- Paul Bevoir: "Much of our earlier work was disposable pop — you couldn't really get anything out of the lyrics. I wanted to write some songs that actually meant

FIZZY POP EXPLOSION

Baby Lemonade in massive single mix up shock!

- Their flexi, The Jiffy Neckwear Creation, was only slightly less successful than the privatisation of BT, which is about as well as you can hope to do without stealing from millions. And their first real single shone out like a pearl of great price from within the muddy indie pack. But who is Baby Lemonade, and why is everyone talking about her?
- Well, Baby Lemonade is not Joan Lemonade, although you might be forgiven for having thought otherwise. In fact it's a five piece pop group from Glasgow.
- While Joan sings ("in a voice of pure honey," says flatmate Graham) and dabbles with her clarinet, her flatmate plays bass, Paul and Mark join up the dots on guitar, and new recruit Martin drums away to his heart's content.
- "Martin's not on the record. Our last drummer wasn't committed enough so he left, but amicably, we're all still good friends."
- Though they aren't crying over the bad reviews that hard vinyl 45 Secret Goldfish received when it first came out, relying instead upon the judgement of all the people that bought it, Baby Lemonade were upset by the suggestion that they were ripping off the Shop Assistants.
- "It's just lazy journalism from lazy journalists who didn't even pay enough attention to the single to realise they were listening to the wrong side." The Baby Lemos aren't annoyed that the slow side of their single wasn't reviewed as the A-side, they feel both songs stand on their own merits. After all, they argue, the names are there quite clearly on the sleeve and it isn't hard to spot that the slow one's called The Real World and not Secret Goldfish if you actually listen to it! Holly Wood

The Roy Rodgers and Trigger of rock 'n' roll

Texan torment!

James Ray talks about "me"

Conjuring up images of dust clouds and tumbleweeds swirling across the desert beneath ominous blood red sunsets, James Ray And The Performance arrive in town. They've had a long trek from the latest outpost of the Rising Sun: Northern Eastern doom town, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, but then they are looking for the great American dream! Head honcho, Andrew Eldritch, once a top-dog Sister, is nowhere to be seen but his spirit hangs heavy over our two low riders.

■ James Ray and his trusted sidekick The Performance go together like the Lone Ranger and Tonto or even Roy Rodgers and Trigger, in so much as you can't imagine them apart. But more importantly they produce a mean, cinemascope soundtrack for modern Spaghetti Western fantasies. A sort of The Good, The Bad And The Ugly meet Ry Cooder on a bucking beatbox in hell!

■ Of these, the last strains of their Mexico Sundown Blues debut single have died away across the rubble strewn streets, and so they have crossed the Rio Grande, along with the latest truck load of wetbacks, to deliver the goods on Texas, again on Merciful Release. Ask them to comment and, not surprisingly, without removing their cheroots they mutter "*-ing Brilliant".

■ They listen to Chrome, Suicide and Aerosmith(?) and it shows, and they also have a habit of hijacking gigs!

■ "We used to turn up with a drum machine and synth and ask if we could get up and do one song — only they didn't know it'd last 20 minutes! It ended up with people going to see other bands in the hope we'd turn up!"

■ They're modest with it too and as for the Eldritch seal of approval, "We're far better than anything he could do! I can sing and he'd be the first to admit it!"

■ As you can see they talk in exclamation marks, but who cares as they make exceedingly fine records. So pull on y'r stetson, saddle up and whipcrack-away across the prairie to the wonderful soundscapes of James Ray And The Performance. Dick Mescal something. Two Minute War is about the worry of nuclear war. It's a bit of a common subject I know, hardly original because people have been doing it for the past 20 years. But it's nice to be able to do something like that with a good tune. Like Costello's Oliver's Army — a melodic pop song that says something quite serious."

- Vaudeville Park is the band's masterwork, their Sgt Pepper. The Beatles may have set a recording landmark, but The Jetset aren't adverse to pulling a few technical tricks themselves.
- Melvyn J: "It's a shame that when people hear the album they won't initially realise the depths to which we've gone to make it sound like it does. We even mixed it in a weird way, so it sounds like the old Beatle albums when they were transferred from mono to stereo. If you put the balance onto one speaker you can get rid of my vocal and sing along."
- But the Jetset are, in fact, Melvyn J's second stab at stardom. As an actor he made the front page of all the tabloids while starring in a film with Koo Stark.
- "It was at the height of the Prince Andrew thing so it attracted a lot of attention. I had been asked by Julien Temple to star in a film called It's All True, along with people like Mel Brooks, Ray Davies, Tenpole Tudor and Koo Stark. In the film I ended up getting married to Koo through a TV screen. After that Koo remained a household name, Julien Temple went on to direct Absolute Beginners and I joined The Jetset!"
- Now, who won out there? Chris Hunt

Are The Jetset destined for take off? Or will they stay forever grounded?

WHERE'S CAPTAIN SPIZZ?

10 faces of a confused pop person

1 The original mixed up kid has resurfaced as Spizz, just Spizz, with a re-recording of his major league hit, Where's Captain Kirk? Triv Tel raids the photo library and plans to expose the never-ageing elf for the highly suspicious person he is.

2 Circa 1936, Spizz (right) with Pete Petrol as Spizz Oil. Fresh from Brum, a Peel session and a Rough Trade deal resulted in 6,000 Crazy and Cold City 45s. Primal powerchords meet crazed Aled Jones groans. 3 Circa 1936, Spizz Energi, without drummer. Eventually, with a skin-basher Soldier/Soldier, and finally Where's Captain Kirk?, the charts tumbled. A tour with Kleenex and The Raincoats and a London show with Dexy's (a new Bernie Rhodes discovery) couldn't discover them. They sign to A&M. 4 Circa 1966, the England futurist world cup squad, Athletico Spizz 80 debut on A&M with the "big" album Do A Runner. A trip to America results in Jello Blafra biting the Spizzthigh during a San Fran show. Jel later apologised, claiming he was carried away with the intensity of Soldier/Soldier's anti war message. 5 Circa '81, the missing link... no pic. The group that got carried away in a name change, and even wanted to have sweets made in their image. "We thought we were as big as The Beatles and could do anything," a shamefaced Spizz recalls, "but the album was a bag of nails." 6 Spizz Energi 2, circa the year 2000, move back to Rough Trade, mostly get sensible haircuts and release Spizzhistory LP. A distraught Spizz shuns the media and paints himself into a corner. Does art. 7 Circa 2083, Spizz re-emerges as Spizz Orwell (preceding the 100 year commemoration of Orwell's 1984 nursery tale). 8 Circa the next millenium, Spizz And The Astronauties play the Marquee (still flourishing after all these beers). Crowds come off life-support machines to see the "amazing little man". 9 Spizz's Big Business in the millenium plus one, a subtle name change that sees the man donning "a suit". 10 Spizzsexual get together for PAs in millenium plus another bit. The myth rises from the ground, ready for... 10 Spizz, in a town near you now. The simplest and "best" (?).

FAMILY FORTUNES

The Royal Family And The Poor atune to the Global Planetary Intelligence nerve centre!

- "When I was 12 a book called Keys To The Kingdom Of Soloman changed my life. I made up a little ritual, cut my thumb, smeared a little blood on the book, and vowed my life to magic."
- I know what you're all thinking. Mike Keane is one of them, and to a certain extent you're right, he is. But there's more to him than the psychic-nutter-burnt-out-hippy theory. Mike is The Royal Family And The Poor, a name dreamt up by Tony Wilson in the "band's" unhappy Factory days. But that's the only element that isn't 100 per cent Keane.
- "There's a general lack of sincerity in music at present. Robert Graves's White Goddess concludes that if Britain has any pre-Christian cultural roots, then they were in poetry and song, hidden in order to survive the ruthless religious tyranny. My new album In The Sea Of E takes its directions from this viewpoint, although it isn't some folkly experience. There's everything from pop to experimental."
- Too right John. Mike may look and sound the image of Catweazle, or some pagan anti-Christ, but his sounds are contemporary and slick. And he's started a new record label, GAIA, to accompany the rebirth of the Royal Family.
- GAIA is more than an outlet for the Royal Family. There are booklets, a recording project with Robert Anton Wilson, and the label is also seeking musicians who are aware and influenced by magick and the thelemic current, for a compilation release later in the year.
- For now there is the new LP, though...
- In The Sea Of E is magical terrosism, coming to you on my own Gaian network. It is commercial and approachable, and should be played on every radio station the world over all the time. But don't get the wrong idea. I'm not a mad satanist or anything to do with a lot of the current trends in that direction."
- Mike Keane is available through PO Box 134, Liverpool L69 8BP and welcomes opinions, tapes and ideas. Ronnie Randall

YOUR CHANCE TO "WIN" SPIZZ FOR A NIGHT

Yep, Underground magazine — in conjunction with Spizzperson — can, exclusively, offer the world a night out with the great man (plus the legendary Daughters Of God). Only hardened drinkers need apply for this "tour" of London's seedier clubs and pubs (including many a bev, a ruse, a smile, and probably several other things that we shouldn't mention). • Find out who this mystery man is. And why should we want to offer you his "bits"? He has a G O L D Spizzcard and no holds are barred. • All you've got to do is answer the question here and you, if you're over 18 and, er, Game For A Laugh, can go a-rockin' with Spizz. Expenses within reason will be met (no airline tickets, hospital fees extra). • Right, the question... in the exquisitely written story de la Spizz, one incarnation, circa '81 is missing. What was the name of the group then? Answers on a postcard as quick as legs can carry. For 25 runners up, there'll be copies of the new single and a dream that you might have touched fame for a night (hmmm). Ug accepts no responsibility for the behaviour of Mr "Spizz".

Dance of classical grace

Dead Can Dance reveal the Radio Three angle

IF Brendan Perry and Lisa Gerrard could live anywhere, they'd certainly choose "somewhere close to fields and nature and water. As people, out of context with music, we would go and live by the sea". But as it is, they live in a council block above the Thames in London's grime-grey east End docklands, tied to the financial support of their record label 4AD and to the building of their own studio.

- "Our music changed so much when we moved here. When we were in Australia, we used much more earthy tones and there was a lot of Aboriginal influences. One listens and puts their ear to the ground and describes their immediate environment, or describes what's needed in life. What's lacking."

IF you put your ear to the ground in London, you'd consequently hear the squish of trodden cigarettes and McDonalds wrappers, so it's safe to assume that Dead Can Dance describe the lack. You wouldn't hear the awesome New World music of Brendan and Lisa; the classical, orchestral, Eastern middle-eastern and electronic rhythms; the sampled keyboards and the ancient Chinese Yang Ch-in, or the timpanis, or both Brendan and Lisa's soaring, sonorous voices; You won't hear the beauty. This is what is lacking.

- "London is deprived of so much real beauty, so one is certainly inspired to try and do something here, something quite untainted. There's so much negativity in London, it inspires you to turn that into something positive."

IF Brendan and Lisa had grown up in England and played alongside lots of English bands from the time they were 14 or 15, "we'd obviously be influenced by the London feel that music has. You can pick English bands from certain periods." But as it happens, both had the kind of childhood that has set them literally worlds apart; first, Lisa in Australia, in the heart of a heavily populated Greek area. "They had their music soaring out of their windows into the streets and I became interested first in Eastern music and then middle-eastern music, as well as my father having a wonderful collection of Gaelic tunes which he would recite at parties. I was much more influenced by the spirit of those things rather than things which I didn't feel were personal to my life."

- Brendan emigrated to New Zealand as a teenager, taking with him a magpie's experience of Pink Floyd's Piper At The Gates Of Dawn, "which showed me there was a great alternative to '60s pop music", Holst's Planet Suite, "the only piece of classical music I knew", the soundtrack to West Side Story, his mum's collection of Irish rebel songs and a knowledge of the John Peel show. In New Zealand, he played bass in a punky group called The Scavengers, but eventually succumbed to playing the music that mirrored his and Lisa's environment.

31 UNDERGROUND

IF Brendan and Lisa could change anything, they'd most probably wish for a greater awareness and acceptance of all musics, stripped of categories and associations with lifestyle and fashion marketing.

- "We really wanted to break more into the classical market. In fact, when we started, we became very aware of the way things are marketed so specialised here, in line with fashion and taste. We reacted very strongly against it. That's why we chose to do the music that we want to — we tend to react very strongly against all forms of musical cliché. Our music does tend to cross over so many different markets. It's a hybrid music, what musicologists could interpret as being derivative of periods of musical history."

IF only they went under the name of 'Brendan Perry and Lisa Gerrard, composers', they say, their music could be played on Radio Three. But Dead Can Dance? "In a sense, that makes us even more reactionary because we think 'why the hell should this exist?'."

- You'd expect the sound of Dead Can Dance's music to reflect the struggle, which it does, splicing the joy of song and incantation with the poetry of lament. They chose a statue for the cover of their new album, In The Realm Of A Dying Sun, because, as a representative image, "it best expresses the album's mood of a sense of loss."
- "In our past year's experience, we've come to terms with many losses of friendships and very personal things in our lives and we think our music reflects that. The best example is Dawn Of The Iconoclast which was like a cleansing process for us, all the bitterness and awful darkness... we can look at the time it was written and understand our lives and our displeasure and all the unhappiness."

In The Nursery's broody, moody, LP examined

In The Nursery started business in 1983 or thereabouts, with a three-person line-up, military drums, bass and guitar. They were dismissed by some quarters, we understand, as a kind of second rate Joy Division, but they survived the comparison, and four years later they are still here. They have made the odd record you could dance to — sort of. But you can't dance to ITN any more.

Their new album, Stormhorse, is subtitled Original Soundtrack To The Film and it strikes this pair of ears as a moody, broody business — although in conversation with Klive, the more public of the brothers Humberstone who are now the only ITN's left — I discover an unsuspected degree of deniability in the content.

Klive is bemused by my use of the word 'lugubrious', surprised that I find the music 'militaristic'.

"There are certain pieces which are saddening, but not gloomy. When we did it we saw it as a soundtrack... a soundtrack to anything, we didn't want to make it specific."

There must have been some element of visualisation in the process.

"Yeah, we called it Stormhorse, because there was this feeling of wild horses running through, similar to say, Philip Glass's soundtrack to Mishima, but that's more repetitive, but we were influenced by that."

Over the last two years, the overriding input into the Humberstone ears has been orchestral music, notably Shostakovich, though they appreciate what Yello have been up to.

There was going to be a great wad of text to accompany the album, but in the end the brothers elected to reduce it all down to two lines, and let the listeners imagination do the rest. The lines are as follows:

"Man has to believe in myths. Like wisdom, myths foretell the destiny of man. Imagine a lonely boy, with a "Song of Destiny" on his lips, and the "Deathwatch" in his eyes."

Stormhorse is an enigmatic work. I like it more than Klive probably thinks I do, but then it was a very odd conversation we had there for a while. Marc Issue

Why, Why Wylie?

A bulging 162-page book documenting the Liverpool Rock Scene — from The Bunnymen to OMD, from Deaf School to Pink Industry, from Wah! to Frankie — called The Scouse Phenomenon has just been released, so it's a good time to scour back over those Wah! singles, and ask Pete Wylie about his road to what he now calls new age rock 'n' roll. Press start . . .

"I love Better Screamer (Inevitable) although Hey Disco Joe probably has more in common with what I'm doing now with its repetitive bass line and atmospheric sounds as well as guitars. The single was very moody — I was also trying to sing push in case me mum was listening.

"Seven Minutes To Midnight (Inevitable) was really intense, fast and angry, with screaming guitars by me, trying to be The Stooges' James Williamson at the end. I told the engineer I wanted the solo to sound like it was recorded down an alley at midnight.

"On Forget The Down (Eternal), I was too tired to do the singing but I love the song. It was the first wordy song I wrote. It's about 'something's gotta change' I suppose. My song for the revolution.

"Somesay (Eternal) was three lyrics by our original drummer Rob Jones that I made into one strong lyric. I suppose it was about the first bad review we got. I love its militant drive and that hypnotic bass line pounding out.

"Remember (Eternal) was the first record that should have been made differently. It was my first time with a producer. When I hear it though, I think of cowboy movie violins.

"Story Of The Blues (Eternal) was from me blue period. It's me trying to get away from guitars, cos I gave up playing for two years. I'm dead proud of this, especially the talking bit at the end which was a one-take effort.

"I hate the version of Hope (Eternal) that was released as a single. Warners wanted a quick single after Story Of The Blues and remixed it when we were on tour.

"When I hear Come Back (Eternal/Beggars Banquet), I think of a New Year's Eve when Peely and Janice Long were presenting a radio party and we didn't get there till ten minutes before the end. We heard Peel saying, 'that swine Wylie, but we're going to play Come Back again 'cos it's the best record in the history of the universe!' As we walked into the foyer, it was playing on the speakers, like in the movies!

"Weekends (Eternal/Beggars Banquet) has great words. One day a thesis will be written about them. It was about being a scally in Liverpool without money and getting all these big images thrown at you, like why don't you go on holiday, and all those pop groups with the big money angle.

"Sinful (MDM/Virgin) was the first time I'd dealt with technology. It was also the first I'd made with some control, realising, channelling and honing me energy in the direction I wanted.

"Diamond Girl (MDM) I love with a passion. It's me trying to be The Rolling Stones with sequencers. It was a challenge."

Who's shaking those wires?
Who's making the news!

Tooth Dentists go flossy!

- The Dentists are a ray of post punk pop sunshine rising over that most depressing of towns, Chatham in Kent. Their old drummer wrote a thesis on why Chatham was really a Northern town in the wrong location. Was he right?
- "The Medway is one long stream of dereliction; we wouldn't live anywhere else. We've benefited a lot from the contradiction. Northern grit without the industrial edge. There isn't any industry here you see." They've been labelled everything from Fairport Convention to the Buzzcocks and back again, while they'll admit to Byrds and Monochrome Set touches. But the result is undoubtedly Dentist.
- The new EP is the fifth offering from the gum blasters. They first came to prominence three years back via the almost obscure classic, Strawberries Are Growing In My Garden And It's Wintertime, on Spruck. Since then they have entertained us with album titles like You And Your Bloody Oranges (from Billy Liar), Down And Out In Paris And Chatham (Orwell), and the tear jerking, Some People Are On The Pitch, They Think It's All Over, It Is Now, (Kenneth Wolstenholm).
- "We may be boring to talk to, but look at the titles." Our next is going to be Buy Our Record You Bastards." Sound advice. Ronnie Randall Ghosts in the machine!

A word to the wise with Ghost Dance

- There are three of us sitting over West London's front line district excavating ancient taboos: Ghostdancers Anne Marie and Gary Marx and me; and one of us has just mentioned the dirty word, gothic! Since heading off from their previous unhappy homesteads, Skeletal Family and Sisters of Mercy respectively, the pair have been dogged by the past.
- "It'll never be cleared up because people keep going on about it. Journalists seem to like writing about goths. No
- "We had a weird gig in Birkenhead the other week! A very mixed audience. There was a fella busking at the front of the stage all the way through. He was having a look at the chords I was playing and copying them! There were people playing cardboard guitars, go-go dancers . . . it might be quite standard for Birkenhead!"
- There again it might not. Gary Marx isn't about to cast judgement upon others, he's been on the receiving end of that game for too long.

A C Temple detune the horizontal

AC Temple reveal secret foot smell weapon

• "Fear no more the heat of the sun" is actually a biblical quotation," claims Noel reflecting on one of his lyrics. I don't know what Bible Noel reads but according to my weighty and thorough

Youngs Concordance no such passage exists. There are references a plenty to fearing not the word of the Lord, but this stuff sounds downright pagan! Noel and Jane are part of the one else seems to talk about goths. What's a goth? It's only a fashion and we've never been fashionable."

• Point taken. Which brings us back to Birkenhead because contrary to popular opinion, Ghost Dance have always enjoyed a wider appeal. While they cause a significant stir on the street merited press attention has, in the main, been denied them.

• Anne Marie is silent but not unheard. She nods affirmatively and encouragingly as Gary passes comment and a fleeting glance in her direction: a check for the approval of his stoicism. Even the news that their new EP on Karbon, A Word To The Wise, is to be presented at the imminent Radio One playlist meeting fails to move him.

• "Hmmm . . . very interesting."
• Anne Marie allows herself a little more excitement. "It was the picture of me and Etch on the cover what did it!"

• "Yeah, that comes across well on the radio! Of course I'd like it to take off but that's a bit much to expect for a band in our position. A very romantic idea that it will get picked at this meeting and be played and be a hit."

• Nevertheless Fools Gold and When I Call, the tracks chosen for the single are accessible sounds which indicate that Ghost Dance may be in with more than a chance. Anne Marie's vocals are richer, Etch's diversity is firing on all six and Mr Marx has an established line up on his hands. So has Ghost Dance developed a new character, made a move in the so-called 'right direction'?

• "Well, we're more of a band now but

Sheffield based collective A C Temple, crusaders on behalf of the Church of Electricity, the Church of Noise and Power.

• Songs Of Praise is their first epistle, a six track mini-album and it's more about creating your own myth than living someone else's. But let's not get too much into specifics.

• Noel: "We often don't know what the songs are about until they're finished. Even then we're not always too sure. We're not a group with any particular message to put over."

• Jane: "The words always come last in our songs, we always start with the guitars and build up some kind of feeling and the words slip naturally into place."

• A C Temple's clearest affinities lie with groups from across the water: Sonic Youth, Swans, Big Black. These are some of their favourite groups, but they also like and feel some affinity to the Dog Faced Hermans and A Witness. They are well aware of their geographical roots.

• Noel: "We're very much in a Northern tradition. The groups that started us off a couple of years ago were groups like The Membranes and The 3 Johns. They were a great influence."

• Jane: "There have been some great 'noise groups' in Britain but they're very different from the American school. We were just the first British group to take the strings off our guitars and put them back in a different order. Using different that's a very volatile thing. It could all fall apart tomorrow. The single does sound different but that's because we had a producer. It doesn't mean we've changed direction, it just means we had a bit more money.

• "We did it to please ourselves initially but it's not ours to keep. You give it away and the people you give it to will either love or hate it. It's a chance you take." Alex Kadis

Ghost Dance: bugger off if you think we're goths tunings and that just seems dead obvious. I'm surprised more people don't do it."

• Because that detuned guitar sound is so firmly associated with Sonic Youth though, it's been easy to saddle A C Temple with a Sonic Youth copyist tag.
• The group's newer material builds on their own strengths. Live A C Temple easily oustrip the promise of their record and promise better for the future. The sparks are flying and the current is surging in the Church Of Electricity. Vachel Booth

THE VULTURES

THE VULTURES are an accident waiting to explode all over your face. A time bomb of shrill, angry rock momentum ticking away in a little flat north of the border. And when the ticking stops and the ominous pause ends, the impact will be felt all the way down in the clubs and shops and charts of London. Because The Vultures are illin'.

I could've cried when I heard I'd missed The Vultures first and only trip down to the Smoke, because their back-to-mono demo had had the hairs standing up on the back of my neck for months, but instead I stuck out my thumb and went north in search of Janie Nicoll (vocals), Anna Watkins (guitar), Allison Young (bass) and Ian Binns (drums and belches).

I found them in a cafe in Edinburgh.

In true Scottish tradition, Ian also plays in Rote Kapelle and the Staircase, but the three girls are Vultures through and through.

"Anna and Allison formed the band about 18 months ago, and I joined them about six months later," Janie told me. "We were all at art school together so it seemed like the natural thing to do."

Which it is, Janie sings like a mentally disturbed and essentially very angry Clare Grogan, only many miles better. Anna's guitar sounds much the same. And Allison's bass is a small car falling downstairs. The Vultures are a primal rock'n'roll scream caught in the throat of Edinburgh, but with a four track 12 inch, produced by the Mary Chain's Douglas Hart, featuring cheesecloth/cheesewire covers of Money and Jack The Ripper along with a brace of Vultures' originals, out soon on Narodnik, the chances are that Scotland will be coughing The Vultures up all over your bright paisley shirt sometime soon in the future. Holly Wood

DAN

Who or what is DAN? "It's the name of a male whore in a porn film who gets wrapped up in cling film and bounces down the street with his dick hanging out," squeals Ian of this thrash-pop foursome. "I only saw that bit, though," he adds quickly.

"I've not seen any of it I'm quite glad to say!" says Julie with some distaste. While fellow noiseniks Wal (guitars, tunes, singing and a bit of keyboards) painted the garden fence, and Jim (drums and more drums) worked at a much-loathed day job, Ian (bass, tunes, words and art) and Julie (singing and words) chatted over the 'phone; informing the world of the 18 different line-ups and 25 people that have, at some point, been DAN, and of their August release of an LP on All The Madmen. We await the platter . . . and DAN's sequel. Oh-ho! Dax ignoeth

MORRISONS

The MORRISONS' small beginnings, brief years and short discography don't give a reasonable picture of what they're about. Let's face it, a flexi given away with Johnny Dee's splendid Especially Yellow 'zine hardly tells you more than that they're springy, chirpy songwriters who can blend graded grains into finer music.

John Peel has played the flexi (hardly CD time is it?), a rumoured session and an imminent EP on Playroom Discs (Red Rhino) will be supported by live outings with McCarthy, The Groove Farm and The Blow Up, and for those discerning punters who can't believe that music so grand and delicious can't be alive on floppy plastic, you can still get a copy of the near legendary Listen To Your Heart/Every Time I Open The Bottle by writing to The Morrisons at 199 Hele Rd, Torquay, TQ2 7QG (I'd include a large SAE and a nice letter if I were you). Now, be off with you. Triv Tel

THE ONLOOKERS

"We just want loads of beer, drugs, money, fast cars and be able to play loud music."

A sound philosophy indeed, and a surprising one when you realise that these hedonistic words spew forth from the mouths of some ex-Easterhouse offenders. THE ONLOOKERS are playmates of The Cradle but they much prefer partying to politics. They wanna have fun, fun, fun, and injure a few ear'oles in the process. The Onlookers are elegantly irksome and manically melodic, "just like a cake that you pile all the ingredients in and it comes out a sickly mess," yabbers ex-Soil drummer Gary Farrell, notorious for his eloquent turn of phrase.

Gary's a pretty sussed spokesman whose claim to fame is turning down a job with The Smiths.

When Mike Murray and Peter Vanden were relieved of their duties in Easterhouse, they enrolled Gary and guitarist Steve. All they needed was a voice.

"At first we had this guy who spent most of his time yodelling and stuffing his face with food," explains Mike. "Then I kept getting calls from this Martin O'Donnell geezer who said we'd really like his voice if we'd only give him a chance."

Martin was recruited and now the five go mad in Manchester. Ro Newton

THE CROWS

Formed from the remnants of First Priority and Autumn 1904, THE CROWS are Scotland's latest stadium rock band, or would be if someone would let them into a stadium. In the meantime, they have a busy year ahead, with continuous touring of smaller venues planned.

Featuring a heavy double dose of wailing guitar from Donald MacLeod and Ian Watson, backed up by drums, bass and sax, and topped with the swirling vocals of Ross Allison, The Crows' second single, Red Man, has already taken them to the number one spot on the French independent radio chart, RVN, and attracted interest from the American distributors Rockpool.

Perceptive as always, I couldn't help but notice that the band, in both their sound and their image, seem to owe rather more to the '60s and '70s than to the current decade.

Ross explained: "I don't think we're emulating the past, we're looking to the future. But the '60s and '70s were exciting. Nothing since, with the possible exception of the Psychedelic Furs, has excited me in the same way. I think when people hear something good again they'll realise that everything just now is really boring... Maybe we're the band!"

Maybe.

If you haven't managed to catch the single, you can hear the B-side, The Love You Run, on the soundtrack of a short film from Ken Howard titled The Fun Run, which will be broadcast on Channel 4 some time over the summer. Trevor Pake

THE JEREMIAHS

As one of the few groups to emerge from the Underground Tip Sheet with flying colours, THE JEREMIAHS are currently attracting pockets of interest in record company A&R circles.

Stardom does not, as yet, appear to be closing its fingers around their necks though, despite some modest self-promotion in the shape of live concerts around London and the surrounding areas.

"People don't seem terribly interested in coming to see live bands these days," says singer Simon. "It seems that they'd rather spend their £2.50 on a couple of pints of beer or going to some naff club which is something we find a bit depressing".

The next stage in the career of The Jeremiahs will, of course, be a record release. On which label, they're uncertain, but it will feature the song Driving Into The Sun, and may perhaps be entitled The Precious Things EP.

At the moment, The Jeremiahs appear suspicious of the music industry as a whole. They complain, quite justifiably I suspect, about the crummy treatment doled out to support groups. They mutter darkly about supposed record company interest which fails to materialise. And on the whole, they seem equipped with an unusually realistic and down-to-earth attitude, as far as their future as a pop band goes.

The test for them will come when more people begin to stumble upon their talents. Good songs, simple melodies, well played; it's all quite a rarity these days and there's enough of all these things in the band to take them onto the next rung of the rock'n'roll ladder.

"We are happy usually," one of them bellows down the phone, "only we haven't been down to the pub yet." OK lads, get them in.

UG: theories splattered

THE MONKEY RUN

Everything pointed to depression as far as this child of the '60s was concerned. Enter THE MONKEY RUN, Rochdale's finest and the bearers of an unshakable optimism.

Guitarist Mark Hodgkinson is attentive, assured and astute; Jim Stringer, responsible for lyrics, vocals and bass, is surprisingly quiet. The Monkey Run play mildly melodic protopop — they'll hate me for that, as much as they did when I described them as boyish guitars and polite vocals.

On the strength of the two singles so far, they are indeed progressing steadily but surely. The second of these, Falling Upstairs on their own Intense label, has been noted for three reasons.

First, and most superficial, is the fact that they chose to put a piccy of that old glamourpuss Morrissey on the cover — "it could backfire on us but that's the chance you take".

Second, the production is as good as you're likely to hear on an independent single anywhere, courtesy of Dave Fielding of The Chameleons.

Last, and most important, the song is a big improvement on last year's Civil Servant debut. Red Rhino, the record's distributors, obviously agree since they intend to package the two singles as a 12 inch for export and home markets. This support may explain the quiet confidence which, as hard as one might attack it, won't crack. Unlike many groups, The Monkey Run show no great desire to change the world overnight. Maybe the days of revolution are long gone.

LICK THE TINS

An old tramp in Newcastle, County Down was a figure of fun for local kids who used to follow him around and give him a hard time. Kilburn based post-pop, post-folk band LICK THE TINS remembered him when it came to giving themselves a name.

Very romantic. Like the story that they were discovered busking by Pat Collier (ex-Vibrators bassist) who decided to produce their near hit, Can't Help Falling In Love. "There's an element of truth in that," says singer/guitarist Ronan, "But this busking thing's a pain in the neck, we did play in bands, and lots of other bands busk."

Lick The Tins are in a bit of a dilemma, though. The mixture of styles they put out "disappoints folk people" and, Ronan adds, "pop fans are also disappointed". Searching for a constituency is complicated by the fact that their label, Sedition, isn't really indie, yet neither is it a major Major.

"They'd like us to do novelty covers, folksy versions of well known tunes."

Subsequently the group's The Blind Man On A Flying Horse LP is very flat compared to the live LTT experience, "it was really rushed, written in the rehearsal room." It's still worth a listen, but to find out about LTT you really have to see them live. It can be mighty confusing. Hendrix, Tom Verlaine, a lot of New York New Wave, but also The Chieftains and Dick Gaughin are all invoked. So do yourselves a favour. Ian B Bourne Dressed to skate?

— “You don’t have to be a complete wanker,” — reckons Bad Dress Sense’s Ed Shred

Dontcha just get sick of all these groups pretending to be best buddies and then recording their part of the album on different continents? Aintcha just sick of all these groups who stick together and make the same albums over and over and over and over again?

Why not be in three groups all at once, all with your own choice of friends. Just because you want to, then you can record what you think is prime stuff, not because you have to under threat of your label confiscating your skateboard?

Take it from Ed Shred, guitarist and on-stage vocalist for supreme pop hardcorists The Stupids, who’s also one quarter of Frankfurter alongside Tommy Stupid and two American friends.

But he also has his own band, Bad Dress Sense, formed with friends Ed met at Romford Skate Park. Variety, as Kelloggs will tell you, is the spice of life.

“The attitude’s the same as The Stupids — I do everything in Bad Dress Sense and Tom does most everything in The Stupids, but I’m more a fascist than Tom because I won’t let anyone do anything,” says wet liberal Ed (he writes, sings, guitars, blah blah). Already the line-up that’s released the eight-track album Goodbye . . . It Was Fun has splintered. Expect a new line-up in October, “under the same name . . . if the album sells well!”

BDS don’t thrash as condensed and spitball-like as The Stupids, but veer more towards a rockier hardcore, driven by Ed’s love of Washington DC hardcore bands. They’re also less of a Stupids cartoon and far more earnest.

Ed: “Bad Dress Sense songs are far more conventionally serious than The Stupids, although some of their songs are, but people don’t know that. I wanted to say something serious with the lyrics because Tom doesn’t let me write that many for The Stupids as he doesn’t want them to be too obviously serious. In Bad Dress Sense, I like to say things, but not to say ‘f the government’ or ‘we don’t want no nuclear bombs’, because, apart from the fact it’s been said before, you aren’t going to do anything by saying it. If I could write about my relationships with people, and the way people treat each other, then if people could read the words and understand them, they could maybe see you don’t have to be a complete wanker all the time.”

Why is the only picture on Ed Shred’s bedroom wall a picture of Debbie Harry? Is it because he’s a complete wanker? Is it because he’s only just moved into his new digs? Can you believe everything you read?

“Hahahaha! Tom and I did this interview for Smash Hits and we gave them all these skating terms that only Tom and I used, and then the London Evening Standard ripped them off! Like ‘choda’ means anything thick, so we said, Tom’s wallet was thick with hot girls’ phone numbers! Then the Standard said a ‘choda’ was a wallet full of girls’ phone numbers, hahahaha!”

“Who are you calling badly dressed, Stupid?” The Eds thrash it out

VIDEO CATALOGUE

IKON 2 Here Are The Young Men by Joy Division (60 mins). A rough cut but historically essential video which includes the infamous Love Will Tear Us Apart promo video.

IKON 3 A Factory Video by various Factory artists (60 mins). The beginnings of Ikon, mapped out with New Order, A Certain Ratio, OMD etc. A little dull and for Factory devotees only.

IKON 4 Taras Shevchenko by New Order (53 mins). Good live footage of a young and rather dodgy New Order, from the Ukraine.

IKON 5 A Factory Outing by more Factory sons (60 mins). Another Factory compilation, better videos but the music seems erratic and, at times plain boring.

IKON 6 Dowie by John Dowie (60 mins). Surprisingly funny live show from the man who is now to be found in Rory Bremner's gang.

IKON 7 Pleasure Heads Must Burn by The Birthday Party (60 mins). Fans will, no doubt, be familiar with this already, others may like to wallow in complete incomprehension.

IKON 8 Perverted By Language Bis by The Fall (56 mins). Tap room rough, terrace mad and my favourite video of all time.

IKON 9 The Final Academy Documents by William S. Burroughs, etc (120 mins). Watching a cactus grow seems thrilling by comparison.

IKON 10 Feverhouse (a film with music by Biting Tongues) (50 mins). Evil passion and dark secrets, enjoyable, in a perverse sort of way.

IKON 12 Shorts by various luminaries (60 mins). Far superior to the early Factory compilations, Cabaret Voltaire, Durutti Column in fine form plus the Blue Monday video. Recommended.

IKON 13 Flickering Shadows by Ivan Unwin (60 mins). Interesting mixed version, good to watch, bad to buy.

IKON 14 Sons Find Devils by The Virgin Prunes (60 mins). I love it but only after two bottles of wine.

IKON 15 A Scenic Harvest From The Kingdom Of Pain by SRL (53 mins). From the Survival Research Laboratories. Important but horrible.

IKON 16 Domo Arigato by The Durutti Column (55 mins). Vinni Reilly hates this, but I find it quite superb. Straight concert footage.

IKON 17 Pumped Full Of Drugs by New Order (52 mins). Jittery but essential.

IKON 18 The Child And The Saw, a film by Danial Landin and Richard Heslop (30 mins). Too morbid, too contrived.

IKON 19 The Tools For Better Labour by Tools You Can Trust (50 mins). The perfect/imperfect cocktail of music(?) and visuals. Watch for Messy Body Thrust.

IKON 20 Kato Gets The Girl by Severed Heads (60 mins). Better than it seems, but hardly worth a purchase.

IKON 21 Show Me What You Look Like by Brian Nicholson (50 mins). Nasty and, for all the worst reasons, compelling viewing.

IKON 22 Liaisons Dangereuses by Liaisons Dangereuses (60 mins). Dated and for the devoted.

IKON 23 Radio Dog by Nick Turvey (20 mins). The year is 2004, post civil war Britain . . . the radio plays on, God help us.

Hi, I'm William Burroughs.
Would you rather see a cactus grow?

IKON, the video wing of Factory, nestles above a TV repair shop in sunny Altrincham. Mick Middles opts for a late night session and tunes into endless footage of Joy Division, New Order, The Birthday Party and The Fall (as well as a few flickering film noir excerpts)

- Just imagine, if only for one hideous minute, how unbearable it would be if the British public were to accept a full blooded invasion by MTV or a comparable organisation. How terrifying it would be to be subjected to a 24 hour mush of relentless promo videos, unashamed adverts that restrict, even further, the aesthetic scope of the music and the imagination of the viewer.
- But the chances are that, as a reader of Underground, you will already have a well developed aversion to promo videos. The need for some kind of alternative would appear to be blatantly obvious and yet, incredibly, the British music press has remained consistently apathetic to any kind of independent video.
- As the video wing of Factory Records for ten years now, Ikon have evolved from their imaginative but scruffy beginnings to their skilful but still low budget outings of today. Their videography boasts such classics as The Fall's Perverted By Language and such out and out disasters as the William Burroughs Final Academy Documents (120 minutes of mind tumbling tedium). Still, everyone makes mistakes and Ikon have always been quite prepared to make theirs in public, fortunate as they are to be subsidised by the huge sales of their New Order videos.
- Originally based in the cellar of Tony Wilson's Didsbury home, Ikon have recently wrenched themselves free from the centre of Factory confusion, at least geographically, and now base themselves proudly above a TV repair shop in plush Altrincham.
- In this environment, inhabited on this day by members of Biting Tongues who were in the process of physically building the set for their forthcoming video, I met Ikon stalwarts Malcolm and Mike. They looked, brilliantly, like the antithesis of Ikon's hyper trendy veneer. Like myself, they were baffled by the lack of interest in independent video.
- Malcolm Whitehead: "In that sense I think we have failed. I thought that, in the wake of Ikon, an entire independent video industry would evolve but it just hasn't happened. I don't know why but we have always found it so hard to get press attention. Considering that is the only way we can effectively reach people, it makes life difficult."
- The Ikon videography is an untidy but intriguing mixture of concert recordings, music 'shorts' and artistic experiments. The latter category is vague and exists as an exciting hobby to Ikon's more lucrative ventures. Would they move into feature films?
Malcolm: "Yes, definitely, but they don't sell. It's the music videos which sell so perhaps we could mix the two. I'm working on that idea at the moment."
- The possibilities are limitless. It's interesting to note that there is massive interest in independent video from both consumers and those seeking some kind of involvement. All that is needed is for the media to recognise this. One thing remains certain. The larger and more powerful the deadening promo industry becomes, the greater the need for an alternative.

TIP

● Style guru, short haired man about town and press officer for New Order, The Dave Howard Singers, Happy Mondays, Mighty Mighty and Pop Will Eat Itself, Dave Harper wraps his ears around the latest lorryload of tapes sent into the Tip Sheet by the nation's young hopefuls. A sprightly, vitriolic and opinionated music person, Dave unleashes quips a-plenty . . . Julian Henry, the long armed chrome addict of Underground mansions, takes notes and sketches his facial movements. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content, delivery, presentation and potential. Er, well, let battle commence . . .

DAWN AFTER DARK (20 Goode Avenue, Hockley, Birmingham B18 5QJ) are a group of good ole' fashioned rockers. Their handout tells us that they're doing this because they like making a racket, and that they consider rock's most important item to be a leather jacket. The handout also included instructions like 'Don't be a selfish bastard, write about us', all of which went down rather well with our resident Public Relations expert, Dave Harper. "Yes, I like the handout," he says, "It's both snotty and self-depraving." So would you want to do PR for this group? "No, because despite being fairly well played, I don't actually like the music. Also, I don't particularly like the look of this bloke on the left here, in the picture. He's got a naff haircut." So, after a promising start, Dawn After Dark come a cropper in the hair-styling department.

I HAD SEX WITH JOHN MERRICK'S REMAINS (65 Alexandra Road, Balby, Doncaster, South Yorkshire) were responsible for Dave stabbing himself in the leg, not due to their music unfortunately, but because the large box they sent required hacking to bits with a hunting knife just to get it open. While grappling with the box Dave accidentally sunk the knife into his thigh, though serious injury was avoided, and we were able to proceed with the review.

The group are a "sampling" trio from Doncaster who record with some imagination and attempt something new. I asked Dave if he was a fan of this sort of thing. "No," he replied, emerging for a moment from the piles of cassettes and unopened packages that he had been foraging about in like some sort of giant badger.

1 1 0 1

THE SOUND ASLEEP (Flat 1, 25 York Road, Hove, East Sussex, BN3 1DJ) have released a single in the past on the Vinyl Solution label, and this new demo of theirs is, quite frankly, rather good. The press cuttings enclosed included a humorous little story about their drummer, who so happens to be an Insurance Broker by day and a vile punk rocker (or something like that) with The Sound Asleep, at night. "A nice PR angle," reckoned Dave, and we both had a good laugh. The band's music does not fit into any ready-made pigeon hole which must be an advantage, and it's both noisy and melodic, tuneful and loud and thoughtful without being dull or old-fashioned. Dave and I agreed it deserved to win the coveted Tape Of The Month award, which means the group get a free trip to Los Angeles to record their debut album. (That's a joke by the way).

THE SPACE CAKES (contact address lost!) succeeded in keeping Dave entertained for some minutes with a fanzine-type thing included with their tape, which told us all sorts of interesting information. They reveal, for instance, that they think a-ha's recent Manhattan Skyline single is the best record of all time, something that I come quite close to agreeing with.

Dave pointed out that they would draw comparisons to Half Man Half Biscuit as they come from the same part of the country, and we both agreed that there was nothing really different enough in the music to write home about. "When you listen to them, it could really be almost any group who have come out since 1979, but their handout stuff is pretty good," concluded Dave.

4 4 8 6

THE WARHOLS (813 Chesterfield Road, Woodseats, Sheffield S8 0SQ) will already be known to regular readers of Underground. They have had one of their tapes reviewed before, and from time to time they phone up the editor and yell a torrent of insults down the line in the hope of securing an interview. This time they've sent us a package which includes what looks at first glance to be a wad of pound notes, which we presume to be a bribe. Of course it turns out to be a phoney bag of loot, so we shall continue being rude about them for the time being.

What do you think Dave? "It's a fairly straightforward rock sound which is well played and no doubt pulls in good crowds when they play live," he says. "They come from Sheffield, so you can tell them that they're as good as Treebound Story. The money they sent us is an interesting idea and I think I'd be a lot keener on them if it was real money, but as it is, I see this as being no more than a cruel prank."

8 5 2 9

PETER COYLE (61 Hope Street, Liverpool 1) wrote 'Help' on his cassette in big letters. I wonder what he means. "Perhaps he was in the film," suggests Dave. His cassette didn't receive a terribly detailed audience as Dave ripped it from the cassette player after about 20 seconds. "Typical white, angry, industrial, urban funk — very Mark Stewart," he said. "From a PR point of view I wouldn't touch it because journalists would just say, it sounds too much like such and such a person." A later listen to the cassette in its entirety bears this out, but Peter Coyle's cassette is not without merit. The vocal mish-mash on Fascist Scum for example is rather attractive, likewise some of the percussive ideas, though his hamfisted approach to lyrical content appears to smother everything else.

3 6 2 2

(By the way, sproggoes of the Sheet, Peter Coyle is an ex-Pale Fountain. Stranger still? — ed.)

UNTIL WE SLEEP (046274 2656) sent us a fine package full of interesting details about the band, only they forgot to include one thing: The tape. Oh well, don't worry, we'll review what you sent and see if we can imagine what you sound like boys. The biog talks of a creative, powerful, commercial rock sound, a description that had Dave looking dejectedly at the floor. Then he picked up their picture and stared dolefully at it for a few moments.

"It's depressing isn't it?" he said, pointing at one of the band who has long hair. "I'm quite glad in a way we don't actually have to listen to this as it appears so predictable. This fellow will probably end up owning his own studio or being a session musician I suppose, whatever, it'll be something dull. I imagine them wearing drain-pipe jeans and big red bumper boots. There doesn't seem to be one original idea in their handout or appearance from what I can see."

2 2 1 4

CANCEL (Postbus 1386, 8001 BJ Zwolle, Holland) are a four piece who look pretty gruesome but sound quite good. Their tape was most welcome coming from the continent, but Dave turned quite pale when he noticed one of their songs was called Eyeballs For Dinner.

"I don't like that idea at all," he grimaced. "Otherwise, it's quite good, though possibly because our standards have dropped since we started this reviewing session." Charlie from the group writes us a very friendly letter, and says that he hopes we "Keep us the good work" here at Underground. We return your compliments Charlie. Interestingly enough, one of Cancel is a female and is called Marleen. Marleen is the first woman to have contributed to any of the bands so far this week, as far as we know, which makes for a fairly shocking statistic. Can we have more tapes from women please?

5 2 0 1

WEST PARK AVENUE (c/o 55 Padstow Road, Pype Hayes, Birmingham B24 0NH) struck Dave as being rather neurotic as their package was not only covered in staples, but was also delivered by registered post. Obviously the group feel their music to be of enormous value. Dave's critique though, was brutal and to-the-point: "What a terrible name. They sound like a wine bar. The music is much too clean and careful, though the song underneath sound promising," he bleated, referring to the track Thank You. Their handout tells us that they are four lads who intend to storm the country . . . ummm, they score big points for optimism at least.

7 3 1 5

THE EMPTY HEARTS (61 Aberford Road, Dulton, Woodlesford, Near Leeds, West Yorkshire LS26 8HS) tell us that they want to create a new kind of psychedelia. Their tape arrived in a PG Tips wrapper which certainly illustrates some sort of freedom of thought, but later in their letter they suddenly admit that they "hate shamblers".

I wonder what the shamblers have done to deserve this. Anyway, Dave had some positive comments to pass on their tape. "It's got a bit of something close to originality in it, because it's the first tape we've listened to that doesn't actually sound stupid," he says. "That said, I certainly don't feel any inclination to listen to it again," he decreed as the tape came to an end.

6 3 3 4

MOUSEFOLK (54 Treefield Road, Clevedon, Avon BS21 6JB) have a name that might suggest they sound like Noddy or Bill And Ben, or even the Wombles come to that. But, of course, it's a cunning disguise, a trick to send you in their direction, and when the tape starts there's a sudden grinding thrashing that fills the air. Yep. Punk rock again.

In fact they call themselves one of Bristol's top punk bands. Good grief!

When they slow the tempo down they sound like the Velvet Underground. Dave was a bit non-plussed by it all. "It's alright," he said. Then we both dawdled around for a few moments and couldn't think of anything else to say so we took the tape off.

5 7 2 2

THE TALLY MAN (Basement Flat, 17 Lambourn Road, Clapham Common, London) sent us their cassette inside a loaf of bread. Both Dave and I were ready to down tools and scoff it until we noticed that it had gone mouldy, so we had to listen to the tape instead. What can we say? Guitary? Strummy? Nice voice? Yes, yes, yes, all of those, but a little too non-descript for our selective and usually bigotted tastes.

The saxophone was controversial, as it came from the lips of one Gary Barnacle who was, according to Dave, Kim Wilde's horn man (in BOTH senses of the word, I gather) at some earlier stage in his career. Unfortunately for The Tally Man, Dave is allergic to saxophones, so he wasn't too keen on the tape. The Underground view is a little more lenient, and concludes that The Tally Man have definite mainstream pop potential.

2 4 8 5

Confessions Of A Pop Icon Number Three: Life On The Open Strasse

The neon departure lounge sign flickers the legend: 'Be sick in the sea, Buy your sweets duty free,' and you know you are about to leave this sceptic isle on another "Tour abroad".

Most bands with a little effort and a hoarding size phone bill, can organise these debauched excursions, with Europe being by far the easiest to arrange.

Immediately one realises certain things.

Fact 1: Most foreigners speak better English than what we do.

Fact 2: Hiring a minibus is imperative, as your loyal driver's cry of, "Gosh, look at that Parisian Baroque Police Station shaped like a penis," only increases the feelings of alienation in the minds of the 12 poor souls scrunched up in the darkened bowels of the Ford Transit, their view obscured by the colossal wall of sleeping bags.

Fact 3: Take your own sound engineer, otherwise your great three minute pop song may manifest itself somewhere between the launch of Apollo II and a Be-as-one-with-your-intestine relaxation tape.

The biggest shock abroad is the discovery that most of the concert promoters organising your bookings actually want you to enjoy yourself, and liberally sprinkle your dressing room with crates of unpronounceable very strong lager, nutritious food and other goodies to satiate your childish cravings. The horror of appearing next to the fruit machine at The Crowbar Night Palace in Waddley High Street begins to fade.

Border crossings are now much easier in the EEC, with a piss-taking glance at your embarrassingly out of date passport pic ("so you've stopped wearing the school cap sonny") being the only intimidation from the armed car park attendants; but expect trouble when returning to Blighty, as British customs love to break down your belongings into their constituent parts and think nothing of peering up your bottom for that secreted bottle of whisky.

FRANCE: Large audiences, but difficult to discern through the racket they make, whether they love you or would like to cut you up with big pointy knives.

HOLLAND: A favourite. Friendly, fun and good audiences, with Amsterdam being a good place to witness Death Race 2000, re-enacted totally on bicycles.

SPAIN: Only for bands in matching green lurex trousers with open frilly shirts who sing "La, La, La, La," over discarded Ultravox tunes.

GERMANY: Will snigger at your refusal to eat their gigantic sausages and still love bands who play obsolete farm machinery.

SWITZERLAND: Healthy folk with healthy bank balances. Famous for Toblerone and Steve McQueen jumping his motorcycle over a barbed wire fence.

BERLIN: Where you can stare glumly at "The Wall" inspired by man's lack of ability to sort out anything. (Berlin is not a country, really.)

Finally, try to tour in any Communist country. You'll be amazed to find that no-one there actually wears cardboard clogs or overcoats made from compressed cabbage leaves, and through strict quarantine laws they have managed to completely eradicate diseases, such as, McDonalds Tummy, Wrigleys-chewing-gum-of-the-shoe and Smug Prat Archer Syndrome.

SCRATCHING AND SNIFFING!

The Muskrats bringing back the smiles

Money mad Muskrats in paisley pyjama plot

San Franciscan label Subterranean have always been renowned for focusing on neat talent, for introducing the world to new acts that are different — from Flipper to Monte Cazazza — and now they've come up trumps again with The Muskrats.

■ One of their frenetic tunes declares "We're just a folk band from the East side", but of course, they're not. Manically played tunes, from the back catalogues of truck drivers, Gene Pitney, Rod McKuen, Buddy Miles and everyone else that you can't imagine, get the wash-board and bongos meet fuzz guitar, or strummed acoustic, treatment. On Soul Francisco, their new album, they murder a few classics, break into Focus' Hocus Pocus, sing a lament to Linda Blair like The Exploited might have done, and get soulful in a real Richman way on the flip.

■ The Muskrats are more than a novelty act too. See reviews page for details of how to get the album, and treat yourself.

SEX SCANDAL

From Omaha with love come Digital Sex, purveyors of a luscious brand of pop that manages to fuse the Summer Of Love with the English 'indie' rock boom of the turn of the decade and the post modernist school of Crepuscule thinking to produce a most inviting threesome.

■ Even the most cursory listen to their recent CD release on Sordide Sentimental, Essence & Charm, will reveal that for the most part, the sexy ones play the Euros at their own game, mixing up an intriguing hybrid of Joy Division/New Order, Cure, Names, Eno, etc, and washing it down with an even measure of Byrds/Left Banke type vocal stylings that'll have even the North Bank rioting in the stands.

From the one-second magnum opus of "ALL" to the buzzsaw pop of "Clean Sheets" the rock gods of bonusdom do not let up on the concept of maximum fun. Faster-than-light guitars from Karl and Steve, clockwork drums from Bill, and the everyman vocals of Milo make this record the best of all. Includes Coolidge and eleven more tough tracks.

INDIE TOP 20

VOL II HITS VINYL!

Such was the success of the cassette tape Indie Top 20, a second volume has been compiled with one or two format changes. Instead of chrome and small box, the new set will be available as a vinyl double with a cast list that'll excite the meekest of palettes. Available through the Cartel as you read this, it has tracks from Crazyhead, Pop Will Eat Itself, Three Wise Men, Renegade Sound Wave, Bambi Slam, Close Lobsters, The Flatmates, The Pastels, The Soup Dragons, Mighty Mighty, The Beatmasters featuring The Cookie Crew, The Beloved, The Chesterfields, Voice Of The Beehive, All About Eve, Michelle Shocked, The Passmore Sisters, Blue Aeroplanes, The Brilliant Corners and Talulah Gosh. Now, that's what we call... oh you know!

Morrissey on the spot

Johnny, it was really nothing...

You can accuse Morrissey of many things — controversiality, preciousness, stubbornness, self-indulgence, self-pity, acid wit, charm, honesty and good conversation, but not of giving up the cause.

"I still feel the same intensity as I felt before Hand In Glove became a real thing, so I am still desperate to get these things said and done," Morrissey said earlier this year. "The only major thing I worry about is that the flow of records does not remain even, and that somebody, somewhere is going to make a mistake which will trip us all up. And that's quite harrowing."

Little did Morrissey know it would be Johnny Marr...

With Marr unavailable for comment — hidden away in Paul McCartney's left trouser pocket for all we know — and all the useless stories swilling about in the pignen of music news desks — Morrissey to join Frankie, Roddy Frame to join The Smiths, Harry Cross to join Corry — the only thing we can be certain about is that Morrissey rather likes Oscar Wilde and James Dean and that he and Johnny Marr have had a little row over something or other.

The Smiths as a concept (Morrissey's word, not mine) has been a good testing point for the way the British media — music weeklies as well as dailies — goes about its business. How many times have you read 'Morrissey — the man, myth, mouth' line, where the subject 'rarely recognises the actual interview in print, which is very strange. It's like being painted by an artist, and you sit for them, and then you see the picture, painted by someone else, and you wonder, why?"

But Morrissey admits he's good copy, though "I imagine modern music journalism is a very dull, restricted job so it gives them more scope to write about the man, the myth and so on." But how does Morrissey manage to keep asking for it?

• Only the other day The Daily Fib was dutifully relaying a comment Morrissey was supposed to have said along the lines of "if the Queen Mother dies tomorrow, I would be there cheerfully banging in the nails in her coffin."

Morrissey would rather bite his nails than pick up a hammer!

• "It didn't occur to me that people would consider the title The Queen Is Dead offensive," Morrissey said, stretching all credibility to the max, as though his anti-royalist feelings weren't known anyway.

"The song existed and I thought it so strong, it deserved special attention. I also wasn't aware of another group with such a high status who were trying to compile a thoughtful language, so to see The Queen Is Dead as a title between In Touch, A Kind Of Magic and Picture Book, was enjoyable. It wasn't so much punk outrage, but more literary."

• Literary... now there's a word of another fact

Mozzer keeps an eye out for new guitarists wishing to drop in.

3 UNDERGROUND

Daily Fib who, constantly to this very day, still refer to Morrissey as The Moors Murderer Pop Star because of The Smiths' Suffer Little Children commentary (from the first album). Morrissey: man, myth, monster...

"I wouldn't mind if the one-dimensional personality they use was quite largely attractive but in many instances, it isn't. The Sun is really implying that for some inexplicable reason, I'm actually a Moors Murderer. They always refer to me that way!

"Once the mould is cast, you're trapped, and the only way out of the big fat bubble is by doing something so extraordinarily divorced from how things are now that it's ridiculous."

- Singing "hang the D-J, burn down the disco" throughout Panic only compounded the pressure, with daft accusations of racism, although joining Frankie Goes To Strangeways might be the giant step he's looking for.
- As well as a replacement for Johnny Marr, that is.
- Of him, the man said: "discussing Johnny and how we work is something I really don't like to talk about because I feel that the one facet of The Smiths that should remain precious should be the working and living situation which I don't want to give over so that people can juggle about and prise holes in it, because it it tends to happen with everything else. I feel that if one door remains closed, then it should be this."

And Johnny Marr walked out that very door...

So, Strangeways, Here We Come. Meanwhile, as Morrissey sits tighttipped over a very uncertain future, Marr shacks up for a sec on stage with A Certain Ratio, the Ron-Wood-Bryan-Ferry-Wings-Mick-Jagger-Talking-Heads-have session-will travel already tucked away. The pressure on Marr to come up with music that's as essential and demanded as The Smiths' will be as strong as it'll be on Morrissey. But the more silences that are left, the greater the need to fill it, or given Morrissey's hard-done-by-wallflower case, the need to pick holes. As the stories surrounding The Smiths become more strained and exaggerated, so the actual truth, when it emerges, becomes more malleable and the issues clouded under a wave of scepticism.

So where is the new guitarist going to come from?

Wherefor art thou, Mozzer?

"Oh, mother! can feel the soil falling over my head"...

For Pete's sake, someone get him a gardener before we bury our most articulate pop spokesman.

Red Harvest foretell Hungerford massacre

"What a lonely boy, in a quiet town, in the mainstreet, behind the curtains, with a shyness in his heart and mind he killed a million. . ."

Remind you of anyone? In the wake of the grizzly Hungerford action many a collection of riffs and prose are being etched into vinyl by the nation's rock bands. The difference with Norwich-originated Red Harvest's Murder 45 is that it was released the week prior to the dreadful act.

Red Harvest is a Dashielle Hammett novel, which hints at where the boys are coming from. They're an intelligent bunch of ex-University literature types so they take their lyrics pretty seriously. I found them, a couple of days after the massacre, feeling pretty wound up about life. As if they were somehow responsible. And who's to say that on the turntable of Ryan's record deck wasn't his personal copy of the latest smash on Quiet Records. . . Murder. Luckily he burnt the evidence.

Steve: "When I heard the story, I felt really really sick, it couldn't have been closer to what I wrote. The scenario was inch perfect, it's uncanny, psychic almost. How would you feel?"

How I feel is that I'm in the presence of some very sensitive and guilt ridden souls. It's as if they were somehow responsible for Ryan's deeds. Why haven't they called The Sun? Instant notoriety in We Fortold Gay Rapist's Carnage expose! But no! Dark and doomy as they sound, Red Harvest are far too nice to take advantage of such an obviously lucrative situation.

Phil: "We do a song and some idiot acts it out by coincidence. Who'd have believed it? I feel quite ashamed actually, implicated in a maniac's act. We felt it, we expressed it on record, and before you can say 'jack your body', he's gone and acted it out. Others might hear it and get off on the lyrics based on their mental images of the slaughter. It's horrifying, nauseating."

Red Harvest — pretty studied pose, what?

Then again, they did dream it up. Do they object to morbid fascination?

"We're schizophrenics. Mild mannered, moderately educated, not so young people who come up with songs about violent acts and then go home and put our pyjamas on."

So, will they ever recover? Or is future Red Harvest output going to be restricted to the safe subject of love and romance?

Steve: "The next single is going to be the most meaningless lyric ever recorded to counterbalance Murder. It goes, 'Gonna sleep all day, have a cuppa tea, and watch the fishes in the deep blue sea. . .' and that's all."

HMMM! I can see The Sun headlines now; PG Tips Chimp In Poison Cod Plot, or, Freddie Starr Swallows Goldfish. Be warned, Red Harvest have pronounced judgement. Go vegetarian. Ronnie Randall

Dial-A-Tune Goes Pop

They Might Be Giants reveal their Longer-Than-Three Months plan

"The English press just goes through bands, which is terrifying to us," shudders John Flansburgh of They Might Be Giants, who's currently buzzing through a New York telephone line. "I mean, we're in it for the long haul and not just set on being the next big thing which seems to be the only way you can fit in over there." Squirm, shudder. . . "Three months later, it's over, and people are embarrassed that they even liked you. . ."

Panic! How do They Might Be Giants, new masters of the perfect post-modernist pop platter, make people realise that they're not just two smart arses making a drama out of pop culture, but just a friendly duo who seem to make pop like others make animated cartoon features? A group who like to involve the audience by holding up cue-cards and getting them to sing along?

The duo — John Linnell makes two — met at school, while working on the student newspaper, but didn't combine to make a racket until 1983, when they first hit performance art spaces. That'll give you something of a clue to their pop-art — a knowing but hilarious marriage of pop, country, surrealism, polka, folk, cheap guitars, an accordion, a beatbox and buckets of wit.

"I guess we have overactive imaginations," John admits, "but neither of us thought what we were doing was strange until we started to get reviews."

Another way of tackling the bland label-group-audience-relationship TMBG wanted to overcome was to open their own telephone Dial-A-Song service (call (0101) 718-387-6962, 24 hours a day).

"It was a different way to get songs to people. We'd write lots of songs, not all of them the greatest ever written but just to write interesting ones. People get so precious about their songs which stops them from writing so many.

"We've been getting about a 100 calls a day since our album (eponymously titled, out on Rough Trade) was released. The messages people would leave were pretty linear — things like 'that was great' or 'that sucked'. Sometimes people sing us songs back which is interesting, or we get deep poetry, which is really scary. We also get the teen suicides — the weird and crazed calls. We just run out of the house."

Is there a different song for every day?

"Well, we try, but when we're on tour, it's hard to change the tape. Our landlady's daughter comes in for us but she only likes to come in every couple of days, so it's kinda hard."

And They Might Be Giants think their only problems are with the English press? Martin Aston

Well, well, Phillip Boa has signed to Polydor in West Germany and has just been in the UK to record a new single with John Leckle producing. Chances are he'll still be with Ink/Red Flame in the UK, though. And, those fab funsters Whirl wrote a massive missive on Ug HQ's toilet wall to tell us that they hadn't split up, merely that one of their members had gone off to become a Blow Up.

The sparkingly difficult to place Extremes — current single is really good — have written to tell us that their next single is gggggggggggggggggreat and it's a cross between Sonic Youth and Creedence. Can't wait, can't wait.

Wow! Peter Saville claims that his cabbage object on New Order's sleeve is in fact an AIDS virus. Wow! But we just thought it was a cabbage man!

In Yorkshire they've got a mag called Kick Back which for 50p tells you where to go and who did it when they did. Current issue has features on The Alarm, Michael Clark the dancer, Suicidal Tendencies (who get slagged in this month's excellent Skate Muties mag — see Sub-Culture) and other stuff. So, if you're holidaying in Leeds, Sheff or Braders, this is the mag for you.

And now leather rock — a touch better than grebo don't you think? — is here! Two ex-Meat Whiplash people (single on Creation in the '20s) have teamed up with Alex of The Shop Assistants and two other tykes to form The Motorcycle Boy. By the time you read this they'll have supported The Jesus And Mary Chain in the UK and Ireland and probably changed their names, or line up — but not their leather kecks — several times. Still, they're signed to Blue Guitar (Chrysalis to you, mate) and their first single, Big Rock Candy Mountain, is pretty good.

US band, Blackhouse claim to be the first industrial Christian band, now there's a concept for Cliff to chew over, and a threat I'll be bound to Donny Osmond's supremacy. But what will The Crucifixion Of Donny crew do, you know Coco, Doodah And Love-bomb, when James Brown tells Schoolly D that they've cut him up on their new disc?

Big Black deny they'll follow up their covers of Kraftwerk and Cheap Trick with covers of Devo and Bon Jovi. George Michael and Voice Of The Beehive both beaten into submission on techno-invasers machine in a London studio, with Portion Control — no wonder they've only written two new numbers since they signed to London — coming out tops.

Sad to see Chakk's disguised cover of The Isley Bros' Summer Breeze did very little in radio play terms, but good to see Membranes on another new label . . . Glass. Your turn next Factory?

continued over

fiction

Whatever happened to James? Our man will investigate. And what about the Primal Scream album? What a long slow birth it's been!

Link Records should be coming up with Oi! The Pic Disc pretty soon. Ahem. And it'll have tracks from Sham 69, Spizjee, The Angelic Upstarts, Cock Sparrer, Blitz and a bundle more. Betcha can't wait.

Meanwhile, the gloriously graceful Medium Cool label boasts three new releases for next month including 45s from the brilliant Raw Herbs, The Corn Dollies and The Waitones. Also available from them at the mo is a single from The Siddleys which deserves your attention, plus news of an impending new year release from Basingstoke's The Rain. Don't miss.

Rumours surrounding lanky ex-Buzzcock Steve Diggle... it seems his new single will be followed by Northwest Skyline, an album he recorded with his crew, The FOC, and, blushes aside, he performed one track TOTALLY naked, at the suggestion of his girlfriend. Purely to get the right ambience.

This year's threat to the senses is that Big Black's Steve Albini has transformed himself into a producer and Albini prods will be with us before we can raise a gergle. We live and wait.

The UK Electronika Festival makes it to its fifth year and it'll be happening in Stafford on November 21, when, as well as the customary stalls, instruments shows et al, there'll be two concerts featuring a great width of electronic talent including Wavestar, Pete Tedstone, Ron Berry, Quiet Point, O Yuki Conjugate and more. Details for that from Lotus Records, 14-20 Brunswick Street, Hanley, Stoke-On-Trent, Staffs, ST1 1DR.

The aptly named F--- City Shitters sent us a nicely scrawled note asking why they couldn't have a massive feature, etc. Well, do you want to know? You'll have to guess. Further along, Anne Clark wrote a hastily scrawled note complaining too. Well, you just can't satisfy anyone really, can you?

The Shamen didn't write in to complain. We were disappointed. They did however have a run-in with the law when returning to Scotsville last week. Shamen Colin Angus was caught in possession of "something" which he decided to feed to the local border sheep, the police slightly over-reacted, hauling in two mere police cars, two vans and two dogs with handlers. Eventually, the massive haul of 2.5 grammes of "red leb" were found and Angus ended up with a £130 fine. He later admitted, "Marijuana is a very dangerous drug which leads you into unpleasant contact with unreasonable force."

No-one can hold Allan Sex Fiend down, can they? Do they want to? Well, they have a new single and new album ready to roll on Anagram. It's frightening really.

what the el?

● Messers Nick Wesolowski and Peter Moss perfectly supplement the latest batch of el releases with a fine set of press photos that verge on "art". Yes, if label supremo Mike Alway wants to make perfect pop—songs that really last—then the boys with the cameras sure want to take pix to click!

● This is pure Englishness with eccentric written all the way through, and to let you hear the records in question by the acts pictured here, we've got 20 sets of six seven inchers with colour coordinated pic sleeves for the first 20 bright sparks who can answer the question below and submit it to Underground.

● What's more, the first person to be drawn out of the hat on this comp will also win a framed colour proof of the original sleeve artwork to adorn their bedroom wall. Art education starts here!

● Look out next month for an in-depth interview with el boss Mike Alway, but for now, tell us which Derek Jarman film soundtrack was released by el? Answers to Underground/el, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1

Well wot ees thiz? Pulp magazine, a thing full of drawn strips that make you laugh, that have good ideas and don't disappear up their own Rotrings! Yes, Pulp, touted as a visual cassette, is pretty neat, a little thin in size for £1.50, but busting with gud graphix! Get information from The Film Garage (yes, the people who did the fab Star Trekkin' vid), 143 Wardour Street, London W1. Then you can take in the highlights and shaded areas of stories like Stray, The Fluffy Pops, The Man In The Brown Flared Suit, The Midnight Gardner, Art Gecko and even Tadpoles — issue one comes with a supplementary Tadpoles tale too. So, get it! Triv Tel

FORGET MUSIC . . . LET'S ART!

Some Bizzare have opened an art gallery. OhmeGod! Forget the old rubbish about whatever, the first exhibition is just about to close, it features Andy Johnson's paintings (he's Matt The The Johnson's brother) and I'm sure there'll be much more in the weird and odd art frame of things before you can say, 'Steve, hi, how ya doin'!' Interested punters should head down to 166 New Cavendish Street, London W1 and find out what it's all about. Triv Picasso

Now fanzines are a pretty hit or miss affair. I hate to sound like a Which? Guide To Xerox Fantasy, but well, you deserve value for money when you take life and credibility in your hands and send off money and envelopes. It can also be a bit dull when 'zines focus too much attention on music and feature page after page of question/answer interviews with the same predictable bands.

However, you needn't fret because Trout Fishing In Leytonstone takes a look at the real world, too, with well written articles on novelist James Hamilton and dead people like Monty, Bud and Elvie baby. Plus, there's plenty of that funny pop music stuff with Jesse Garon, The Raw Herbs and my bed-partners The Chesterfields. With a free flexi, I'd conclude that every bedsit should have a copy. Johnny Dee (50p & SAE to David, 36 Colville Rd, Leytonstone, LONDON E11 4EH.)

SO WHO ARE THESE GONARS BASTIDOS?

Well, to prove they really exist, and in an attempt to get max press exposure, The Gonars have made up neat packets of their "hair" to give away to their groovoid fans. But lads, guys, hey, wait a minute, shouldn't you be using a less caustic shampoo? Triv Tel

Creeping up on the underside of comics is Ted McKeever's new and wild Eddie Current (Mad Dog Graphics) — "a 12 hour book", starting from the point Crazy Eddie wires his mail-ordered dynamic fusion suit in to his mental hospital's mains and fuses all the lights and alarms, thus giving himself 12 hours of freedom before the repair crew returns in the morning. Scenes of quite mercenary violence occur but the tone of the series seems to be received and manipulated madness, so what can you do? Eddie Current may also be the first unbalanced hero ever to hit town in a pair of fluffy rabbit slippers but, boy, can he tell a good story. Eddie's moral: "justic sucks".

Eddie Current is 1987's most crucial new comic. Eleven parts to follow — one for each hour of freedom. Martin Aston

READ ALL ABOUT IT!

Well, summer-time has given us a bumper bundle of GOOD things to write about reading . . . or something like that!

First off, RAD, you know Read And Destroy, is pretty neat, even if it was once called BMX Action Bike. Debatathon continues that BMX bikers don't like having skateboards in their mag. Funny old game culturecide, isn't it?

Blank Reception 3, (40p plus an A4 sae from Jimbo, Cottage 36, Stoke Bardolph, Nottingham, NG14 5HS) has a free flexi. Whew! What's more it's pretty good as it features The Sperm Walls and they're loud. Best of all is the mag which is riddled with bits and pieces all put together in lovely anarchic style.

Flipside 53 for the summer of '87 is a neat wedge of consciousness too. Inside there's the real juice on The Hangmen, DOA, The Stupids, Visions Of Change, many live and record reviews plus a thousand letters from real crazies. You can get it from All The Madmen at 97 Caledonian Rd, London N1 or the Rough Trade Shop (address on Revolution page).

Another essential US publication is Option of which the September/October issue has just surfaced with a great reviews section and features on Tom Verlaine, Current 93, Karl Blake and Danielle Dax, Dead Can Dance and many more. It's the best magazine Stateside at the moment, always informative, always endearing, and it even refers to Underground as being "designed in a rococo style". Well! Copies available in the Megastore and through the Rough Trade shop among other selected vendors.

The latest issue of madcap mayhem from Skate Muties In The Fifth Dimension is well worth a perusal too. Now available through Revolver and the Cartel it's the kind of gibberish that makes life worth living, so don't miss out. Triv Tel

DAVIE ALLAN AND THE ARROWS

From Paradise To Hell

Sordide Sentimental SSCD 003 (BP 534, 76005 Rouen cedex, France)

●●½ Third CD-only release from SS — the label that brought you TG, Joy Division, Ludus, Monte Cazzaza and a cast of many on vinyl previously — comes in the shape of a spesh from Davie Allan And The Arrows. The mysterious name may not mean a lot on its own, but the music, culled from cult film soundtracks like The Wild Angels will let you understand more. With a guest spot by surf guitarist Dick Dale, this 62 minute CD collection hones in on guitar rock (biker style) and the play off against orchestral and filmic soundtracks.

Excellent stuff, vibrant and compulsive, like a late night film session should be... with energy, excitement and exhilaration at a premium. Yes, hot poop, no less. Dave Henderson

THE AMEBIX

Monolith

Heavy Metal Records HMR LP99 ●½ There's something a little undecided with Amebix. Firstly they seem to have forsaken their tuneful (?) punkette roots, as displayed on their debut Alternative Tentacles album, opting for a more straightforward no-nonsense noise that's grunted and heavy handed in a neo-death metal romp. Somehow it's not as menacing as the Venom/Anthrax style, less song worthy than the US wave of speed thrash merchants and not as interesting and cult-possible as, say, Virus and any other manically illustrated skate style band. What Amebix have going for them is loud and reasonably obnoxious though, so they can't be all that bad. Johnny Eager

ATTILA THE STOCKBROKER

Libyan Students From Hell

Plastic Head PLAS LP 009 [RT] ● Old Attila fuses his ranting rants with his venomous folk readings on this moan-a-longa platter. Why, there's even a rap which lends that throaty Stockbroker whine to gargle in self-exploring prose and further witticisms. This kind of stuff might be fine after a few bevs down the old folk club, or at your regular anti-whatever rally, but do you need it in your home? One laugh and the joke wears a bit thin, and all you're left with is music that's sub-standard and a message you've already got. Johnny Radic-al

JOE BAIZA AND THE UNIVERSE CONGRESS OF

Universal Congress Of

SST SST 109 [RT] ● Maybe it's something they've put in their water, but Greg and Chuck of SST have always shown a leaning towards what you might call the expressionist brain-scanning end of guitar-rock, or the acid-frayed dribble-doodling of those with their foot stuck on the sustain pedal. There are just two tracks here — Certain Way carries across two sides at a total of 29 minutes — and while I have nothing against all progressive possibilities, Joe Baiza and his mates paint a mood picture of glistening glissando guitars that makes Pink Floyd's Atom Heart Mother and Ummagamma sound like Husker Du. If the intention was along the lines of Hendrix-mannered fly-me-to-the-sky-isms, Baiza & Co forgot to take off their iron chains of existence. Martin Aston

BIG BLACK

Songs About Fing

Blast First BFFP 19 [RT] ●½ Steve Albini's gnarled sawn-off thrust and adrenalin guitar rush makes for throb-time in the body zone. Big Black cock the mechanism, cast a cheeky grin on a cover of Kraftwerk's The Model, then turn the intensity control to full. It's a napalm attack that sticks to your skin like burning party-jell, spiced with hundreds and thousands, a prickly sensation that's as all-consuming as it is repellent. Big Black have a pent up angst that occasionally explodes on this brazen alcohol-soaked album.

Awarded the tag of being "trendily alternative" by more alternative underground workers Stateside, the Big Black hard hitters still manage, through their aggression and obstinance, to come on as convincing. Dave Henderson

BLAST

It's In My Blood

SST SST 106 [RT] ●½ Ferocious slamdancing, and multiple injuries, will probably be incurred when this album gets played in the home. Yes, you can have a gravel-tongued maniac and a barrage of guitars pummeling you into oblivion, recreating the sound of a live show in a sleazoid joint, in the comfort of your own inner ear. But watch out, this twisting, disturbing explosion of chords has an underlying complexity that makes it real uncomfortable after a while. Take in small doses. Johnny Eager

●●● MEGA A godhead uprising

●● HOTSY Tasteful and tenacious

● TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish

▶ DRAB No bullets, means no hope

BLEACHED BLACK

Bleached Black

Relativity 88561-8151 [RT] (import) ●½ Bleached Black may be asking for it by having Husker Du's sound engineer produce their debut, but even so they have a nervous, soaring quality that wipes away at least some of the comparisons. Bleached Black lean more toward the clean pop end of the caustic Husker Du spectrum, sharing Buzzcocks' streamlined serrations and The Jam's teen-spiff re-energies; like the latter, they screw up their reverence for Revolver-era Beatles and general Merseybeat with overdriving rhythms, here snapped into shape by jarring, spurting guitar harmonics. Despite their name, Bleached Black are as much the candy apple as they are grey — spine-shivering rather than crunching — as their songs are held together by acute dream-melodies as they accelerate, raw harmonies with their hands on the throttle. It's a pop record, on it's way to near perfection. Martin Aston

THE BOLSHOI

Lindy's Party

Boggers Banquet BEGA 86 ●● Trevor Tanner's determination to make The Bolshoi really count has paid off. Lindy's Party is completely confident, commercial, professional, and dangerously catchy. The Bolshoi's path to charidom, stadium success and eventual US mega-acceptance is well in hand, with this album standing as the culmination of their previous testing 45s.

If Books On The Beach was a non-kill for The Bolshoi, then their most recent single, Please, and the one... [RT] are the capitalising of the Tanner trials and tribulations. It Has Always Been will be carressed for generations. TC Wall

BONGWATER

Breaking No New Ground

Shimmy SHIMMY 000002 [RT] ●● Close down the psychedelically mental guitar patterns and tune into the Bonga, a conglomerate whose six tracker heads near to a completely expressive scene (man). Breaking No New Ground does move in new circles, regurgitating the old into a wash of stagnant confusion, a bittersweet puddle of tuneful lust thrilled by short wave threats. Nice. Johnny Eager

BUBBLE PUPPY

Wheels Go Round

One Big Guitar OBGLP 9004 ● A new album from the BPs who turned their hands to things back in '69 when their Hot Smoke And Sassafras caused a ripple Stateside. Now, with the revival of interest in Texas rock, they're back with a new LP including a repatched reworking of their hit. Sadly they sound more than a little bit too mellow. They haven't weathered too well. Johnny Eager

CASSANDRA COMPLEX

Feel The Width

Play It Again Sam BIAS 68 [RT] ●¾ A live double from the Cassandras, which shows off their rampant churning grind over four sides, Feel The Width is a monstrous din that is difficult to take at times. Recorded on cassette then enhanced, it's like banging your head against a wall of speakers — and at 90 minutes, it's a lengthy process that gets a little painful after a while. Some of the songs succeed in making it all worthwhile, and the group's cover of Throbbing Gristle's Something Came Over Me is a welcome bonus. Ripley

BILLY CHILDISH AND SEXTON MING

Which Dead Donkey Daddy?

Hangman HANG 5UP [RT] ●●●●●● OK, so I went over the top on the star rating! But this LP is over the top, out of its head and stuck in another time zone. A piss-take of substantial proportions, these two drunken brain scramblers mix Tom Waits, trad Chinese/Japanese koto music, folk, blues and all that stuff into a strange blend of totally listenable dross. This is funny. Funnier than fun itself... and crap, but somehow superb. Strange people and eccentrics need only apply. Johnny Screwbrain

BREAK AND FINGER UG!

CLICK CLICK

Wet Skin And Curious Eye

Play It Again Sam LD 879 ● A reworking of primal Click Click material, replete with 3D style sleeve and upgraded drum machine patterns. This is deeply deep stuff — as In Adi Newton from CDVA playing electronic oppression on limited equipment. Here there are no prisoners to boast about, just a pulsing noise that lacks a little melody and begs for the power of, say, Nitzer Ebb. Dave Henderson

THE CHILLS

Brave Words

Flying Nun UK FNUK12 RT C ●●● The process of sheer exhilaration! That's the catalytic effect that Martin Phillips has on the basic elements of a rock outfit. There's no embellishment — no fat — on this, The Chills' debut album, finely tuned and absently intent on pulling at all the right heart strings. From first to last, Brave Words is sweeping, searching and consummate. While it peaks and elates in the lustrous chorus of Rain, Dark Carnival and Night Of The Chill Blue show the more sombre side of the band. Lyrical acuteness and haunting melodies produce songs of innocence and experience at their most endearing; The Chills create melancholy without gloom, fire it with a passion and turn it to a positive, live force. Their humour is no less unique or subtle; the result is a serrated edged invitation to embrace the warmth that is The Chills. Naturally. Alex Kadis

ALEX CHILTON

High Priest

New Rose ROSE 130 P ● 1/2 Sad to say, while Chilton chooses to rest his elbows on the "Chilton" tradition, he stands no chance of rlsking it — no more Kangaroos or Holocausts for you, chub, while out of 12 ditties, seven are safe, manageable covers. A shame too that Chilton's sparse groove never sweats like the funk or R&B strains demand for full satisfaction. There are a couple of neat flirtations with pop, and Chilton's snaky guitar touch is cause enough for grinning, but High Priest is economical, tuneful, neat, fun, and ever so slightly as dull as dishwater. Shame, shame, shame. Martin Aston

DEPECHE MODE

Music For The Masses

Mute STUMM 47 ●●● Depeche's music, like a good wine, always needs to breathe a bit before you can really taste its individuality and nuances. At the first swirl around the earholes, this sounds dry and even doomy in places, but after a few gulps you realise that in fact their pop has gained considerable sophistication. Strangelove's here, as is the new single, Never Let Me Down Again, which is the grown up big brother of Master And Servant, and looks set for a stint in the charts.

Lyricaly, their favourite subjects — sex and religion — get spliced together again, particularly nicely on Sacred, while there's an instrumental, Pimpf, that Laibach would've been proud of.

This might set out to defy its title, but I'd suggest you uncork it and take communion. Carole Linfield

EAR TRUMPET

Bring On The Dirt

DTS DTS 001 Re C ●● 1/2 Experimental music is such a hit and miss affair, ranging from the dangerously pathetic and self-indulgent to the supremely awe-inspiring that it's a difficult thing to rate and categorise. So many people have dabbled and been acclaimed while delivering little more than blips and bleeps, that elevating anyone to "stardom" is not always an advisable pastime. Ear Trumpet straddle all areas, shifting through Wire variations — after all they have Bruce Gilbert helping on guitar — to sketchy Volatrelisms, restrained Dep Mode variations and the greyer areas in between. Bring On The Dirt is an inspiring listen, full of ideas and spine-tingling diversions. TC Wall

THE ESSENCE

A Monument Of Trust

Midnight Music CHIME 00.26 RT C ● 3/4 If you thought The Cure should never have cheered up after releasing Pornography, then Rotterdam's The Essence are the perfect answer to your misery dreams. After this, no-one will ever be able to accuse any band of just stealing, because The Essence simply possess the old Cure's drizzling-grey trance-rock. Singer Hans should see a medium at once, and if song titles like The Waves Of Death, Years Of Doubt and The Death Cell don't convince you that this is the sequel to Faith, then the slow echoplexed throb of the music will. So far everybody I've played it to believes me when I tell them it's the long lost Cure album. But it's also a good Cure album! Meanwhile somebody should be contacting the Trades Description Office. Martin Aston

FREIWILLIGE SELBST KONTROLLE

Continental Breakfast

Ediesta CALC LP 16 RR C ● FSK are German eccentrics who play the kind of tongue-in-cheek, cleverer than thou, art school stuff that Deaf School often lapsed into. On Continental Breakfast the jokes don't bite enough but it's quite easy to see who the initial charm of this record could impress. I think I'll just say, it's really not strange enough, although it tries hard. Dave Henderson

FRICTION

Primitive Touch

Esoteric EST 003 (8 S Main, Mifflintown PA, USA. Tel: 717-4366296)

● 1/2 US five piece whose proficient guitar playing falls neatly on some very Petty-inspired vocal phrasing. On this debut album, Friction present a batch of undeniably melodic out-takes spiced with potential post-country rock and some very "new wave" structures. There's more than a small chance that they'll be impressing more than a few people on both sides of the channel before long. Johnny Eager

GENE LOVES JEZEBEL

The House Of Dolls

Beggars Banquet BEGA 87 ● 7/8 After seemingly years in the middle distance, Gene Loves Jezebel look like they've finally broken free from that restricting neo-goth picture frame, leapt across the ghost of glam threshold and are now beginning to take air in a dangerous zone shrouded with pop uncertainty. It suits them, and their manoeuvres through all previous quarters, and it seems to have placed them in good stead. The recent Motion Of Love 45, and its chart show, should have given us all a clue that the brothers Aston were about to make their most cohesive statement to date — a lush backdrop that teenies and camp followers will caress for years to come. But, like all birthday parties, with sparkling wine and candles waxing over cakes, the longevity of affairs might only last as long as the twins can sustain their popular celebration. Dave Henderson

THE HAPPY END

Resolution

Cooking Vinyl Cook 005 NM C ● 1/2 Fronted by Sarah-Jane Lawrence, she of The Communards mega-hit Don't Leave Me This Way, The Happy End make her ex-musical partners appear as radical as Duran Duran. Even the four instrumentals here have a political slant to them, drawing on the traditional sounds of the brass band, the gaelic jig and a bluesy jazz, all possible when you have a 22-piece ensemble to experiment with!

The vocal numbers stretch across a similar variety of styles, the lyrics telling of class struggle by matter of folk story (The Ballad Of John Henry), declaration (Resolution) or pure political dogma (Singing Of The Socialist Motherland). Such is the range of Sarah-Jane's voice and the contrast of its worthy tones to the relaxed instrumentation that at times this could be taken for a Gilbert & Sullivan political opera. A healthy range of sounds ultimately weighed down by rhetoric. Tony Fletcher

THE HIGSONS

The Attack Of The Cannibal Zombie Businessmen

Waap WAAPLP 1 [P] [C] ● 1/2 The Higsons' zany, brass-laden, beginnings on I Don't Want To Live With No Monkeys tied in nicely with primal Haircut 100 and other such rhythmically inclined bods. Sad to say, the Higgles' history went from charismatic to claustrophobic on a succession of singles which saw their sound head nearer parody than phunk. Attack traces those early steps and throws in a brace of unreleased cuts on the B side, setting the stage, through a series of line up changes, for this Jekyll And Hyde cabaret-come-mutant dance band to disappear into their own backbeat. Fond memories, though. Dave Henderson

THE HOLLOW MEN

Sinister Flower Gift

Pravda PR 6328 (Box 268043, Chicago IL 60626, USA) ●● And here the confusion sets in. These Hollow Men aren't the same as the Leeds duo spawned from A Eldritch's venom, just a US crowd whose subdued power-chords enhance a sub-psyche sound, that's topped with some fine vocal blasts. Highlights are enhanced by good arrangements and varying instrumentation, these Hollow Men suggest greatness in a post US guitar band pose, but even that might be underselling them. Dave Henderson

THE HOUSEMARTINS

The People Who Grinned Themselves To Death

Go! Discs GOLP 9 ●● 1/2 Unfortunately it would seem that the sound that made the Housemartins everybody's darlings last year is now considered passé, and The People... is released amidst a critical, if not commercial, backlash. But it would be silly to expect the Hull boys to change their simplistic approach overnight, and although this is a more polished and produced record than their debut, it is still no great change in style. The simply joyous lightweight pop of I Can't Put My Finger On It is a particular highlight, and the vaguely Dexys feel of the more brooding The Light Is Always Green and more typically Housemartins The World's On Fire are equally strong.

Even though all choruses follow the same formula, and the album's acoustic offering Johannesburg is a bit too righteous, The People... fails to disappoint me. But my own favourite Housemartins record remains the 12" of Me And The Farmer, and quite why the three stunning extra tracks on that didn't succeed in ousting less inspired moments here remains a mystery. Tony Fletcher

HUGO LARGO

Drum

Relativity Records 88561-8167-1 ●●● So what's this — an LP named after Simon Le Bon's tub? Hugo Largo are, in fact, four from across the pond, led by Mimi Goese, whose esoteric, ethereal vocal leads the seemingly countrified proceedings, giving it all a rather freebased folk feel. Eerie stuff, particularly the opener Grow Wild, the drifting Eskimo Song and the sinister sounds of Second Skin. Drum has been sympathetically aided by a co-production from REM's Michael Stipe and, though there's only a taster six tracks here, the mood is both intense and original. Break open the joss sticks, sling on the cheesecloth and let Hugo Largo wash like musk oil over your '80s sensibilities. Carole Linfield

I, LUDICROUS

It's Like Everything Else

Kaleidoscope Sound KSLP 004 [RR] [C] ●●● Possibly misrepresented as a bastard offspring of The Fall and Half Man Half Biscuit, I, Ludicrous are a little more tongue in cheek and charming, a little more precise and clever than their contemporaries. Sure, The Fall handshake is there, but the grinding guitar and text book prose suggest more Financial Times readers than Trumpet watching.

I, Ludicrous are totally unique, while stealing every last spit of English embarrassment and inking it into a set of songs for your bathroom. Even the greatest groan can laugh... and I did! Buy this record. Dave Henderson

Darklands

Blanco y Negro ●● 1/2 The thought of the Mary Chain without the feedback scuffling around their pointy boots was like the perfume without the smell, or the flesh without the blood, but Darklands is an insidious body of work that manages to breathe and walk tall without the life-support.

Talking of life, it's more the promise of a better afterlife than a hope for a better present, going by brother William's gloom-dark appraisals on the title track and Nine Million Rainy Days — the point where the Mary Chain rise above their reinvestment of classic rock styles with a foreboding chill that threatens to black out the rest of the set. But their dazzling juggle of heard-it-all-before-but-goddamn-where? influences — The Beach Boys, natch, but also Nick Cave, the Stones, Velvet Underground's Heroin — all slot in.

The only complaint is that there's no songwriting that startles or shocks you into thinking the Mary Chain can do more; gimme danger, little Reids. But for now, what else can you do but walk down lonely street, check into Heartbreak Hotel and pick up a brochure for the Darklands? Martin Aston

HENRY KAISER

Devil In The Drain

SST SST 118 [P] ● 1/4 Kaiser's esoteric guitar style walks a thin line between Glenn Branca's systems music, Bill Laswell's rhythmic hues and Ry Cooder's more affected soundtrack pieces. This is not an easy going album, but it has its moments, along the road and is strangely magnetic. Difficult to box and categorise, and at times a little hard to stick with. TC Wall

KARMA SUTRA

The Daydreams Of A Production Line Worker

Paradoxical Records PARODY 1 [RR] [C] ●● This lot could put Mr Angry to shame. A typewritten booklet with A level lyrics and proletarian slogans helps the onslaught, as does a totally boring and incomprehensible blurb on the back of the sleeve. Musically, though, there's signs of a few good tunes, even if the vocal occasionally wipes out and the backing goes all tinny. But, yet, there's the odd pleasing ditty eking its way past the 'we are all hostages... the only war is class war' sloganeering. If it is a parody, it's not very funny. If not, then please, get hip — get subtle. Carole Linfield

KING MISSILE

Fluting On The Hump

Shimmy SHIMMY 000003 [RIS] ●● Ah, humour, you remember that? Well, the Kings go for it by the lorryload and break their necks to make it pay by introducing it to some pretty neat (and melodically sound) arrangements. Fluting is a surprisingly short and quite painless trip that budgeons into the senses with a farthing-filled sock. Subtle pop with the odd psycho outbreak gaining the max effect. Nice but a little disturbing, your honour. Ripley

Epic

They asked me to listen to all of these records. All these, like, weird records, by groups with names that were unspellable, unpronounceable. These were records that were unpredictable. So what did they sound like? I'll tell you . . .

something

It's not easy to grasp the difference that separates countries, in terms of music, but let's try and understand. I mean, why is Jonathon Borofsky And Ed Tomney's The Radical Songbirds Of Islam (ROIR tape through Red Rhino) so disappointing? It's labelled new age . . . you start to worry there. And when it bleeps and trembles, you have to check your equipment. You know? There was no concept. Unlike Max Urbain, whose Phlegm Fatale, apart from having a terrible title, is credited as an original videoc puppet theatre soundscore. Like Todd Rundgren's concept album, A Wizard, A True Star, but still lacking somewhere. It's nice (it's through Recommended), but that's all.

Also with Recommended, there's Biota's Bellowing Room. A tie up with US outfit Mnemonists, it's intense music, real difficult music that leaves you still dragging your heels. Get me out of here!!

In Germany there's Der Plan. Yes, a reason to live. Crazy guys, crazy records and their new one, Es Ist Eine Fremde Und Seltsame Welt is no let down. A different distorted view of life that's romantic and eccentric and really quite excellent, and it's on Ata Tak (Markischestrasse 16, D 40000 Dusseldorf 12, West Germany), as is Pyrolator's latest, the almost jazzy/dancy/sleazy pop of Traum-land. Wow! It almost sounds popesque. Like a new Yello (now that the old one is worn out?).

Borghesia are from Yugoslavia and they have a bit of the old Lalbach in their make up. Dragging themselves by the ear to the dancefloor, they're more rabid and dance-orientated but they're still gruff, gruff, gruff (it must be all that vodka). Their album, No Hope No Fear on Play It Again Sam is through Red Rhino. Rhino also handle Attrition's Take Five (a mini-set on the Italian Supporti Fonografica) which is well tasteful, a little challenging and . . . oh, you know Attrition.

RR also "do" Bosho and they have a neat debut LP in Chop Socky — a riot of percussion and noise, with the odd tuneful break — on the German Dossier label. Bosho also turn out on the No Man's Land double, Island Of Sanity, which features groups from New York. Others on show, and of note, include Mofinga, Carbon, Toy Killers, Details At Eleven, The Ordinaires and more. Experimental! Testing! Threatening, no less. That's available through Recommended as is the Rec Rec release Gradual Disappearance, an almost contemporary experiment which fuses Tenko — a Japanese singer — with some crazily strange sessioners including Arts Lindsay and Fred Frith. A disturbing and alluring set.

Other notables this month include Batzman and Kapielski's War Pur War — a bitty, but suggestive, set on Zensor available through the Rough Trade Shop, Rimorimba's Chicago Death Excretion Geometry — a pounding systems set that really moves on Hamster through Backs and the Cartel, plus Gelatinous Citizen's Rhythm Of Industry, a bippy six tracker from GC (Box 10023 Arlington, VA, USA). Worthy stuff indeed.

Other things that might give you plastic (ah-hmmmm) should be new stuff from RRR Records (151 Paige St, Lowell, MA 01852, USA). Write them for a catalogue or wait a couple of weeks when most of their stuff (including releases by Eugene Chadbourne, F/1, Boy Dirt Car, HUM and more) should be available through Red Rhino.

This has been a Ripley report

Tenko overlooks the weird column

LEAVING TRAINS

F

SST SST 114 [RT] [C] ●● A subtle title from Leaving Trains, who veer close to aggressive pseudo pop taking time to get smoochy — in a less than fragrant manner. F is surprisingly a little less angry than you might at first suspect, but you can't deny that the Trains' stylish delivery has spunk. Grinding in a sub-thrash onslaught, punctuated and punctured with melody lines as tingling as an early morning cold shower. This isn't sex music, but it still knows how to raise a sweat. Johnny Eager

RICHARD LLOYD

Real Time

Celluloid CELL 6165 [RT] [C] ●● Richard Lloyd still tackles his guitar strings with verve, venom and momentary bursts of bliss, but his post-heroin solo days are far removed from the dynamic narratives of his time in Television, alongside Tom Verlaine. Recorded live at CBGB's club in April this year, Real Time is solid rather than inflamed guitar exploration; a more conservative, squarefooted pillar of guitar rock than an individually stamped vision of rock. Gladly, Lloyd doesn't attempt to cover any of Television's highlights although he does rework 13th Floor Elevator's Fire Engine as Television did live, while Field Of Fire is Lloyd's own plausible Marquee Moon. Real time and real guts then, but we'll have to wait for the real alchemy Lloyd might unveil. Martin Aston

THE LOCOMOTIVES

Bourgeois Voodoo

Big Beat WIKM 63 ●½ Trad art rock horrorshow stuff from The Locomotives, whose clever clever style leads them up a Deaf School cul-de-sac courtesy of Split Enz and Burlesque. Somewhere here they're attempting to be Roxy Music, but never so cool, and never too offensive to be punk. Instead, The Locomotives tread a murky mid-stream, dodging and dancing into an early in-joke grave. Lyrically this is pretty forgettable, musically it's accomplished but you can't help feeling that that's just not enough. TC Wall

LOVE AND ROCKETS

Earth Sun Moon

Beggars Banquet BEGA 84 ●¾ Side one blasts off with guitars fuzzing along beautifully to a hard beat but by track two things have dipped into the realms of atmospheric rock and psychedelia, filling side one quite sufficiently well. By the end of side two, though, we have been dragged through some very cheesy, drippy, commercial and, worst of all, Yank-pleasing attempts at meaningful music that end up sounding like Bowie meets The Beatles. This is 1987, and this is only half an album's worth of material. Pity. Daz Igymeth

MODERN ART

Stereo Land

Color COLOR 3 [Ra] [C] ●● The cheap spray paint exterior of this primarily pop-a-jangle platter arouses my feminine inquisitiveness and brings back memories of the tawdry Pop Rivets — who begat The Milkshakes, Thee Mighty Caesars et al. But this collection is more directly played, sweet and unquestionably lovable. Modern Art is a conglomerate of one, whose bedroom music escapes the seriously threatening pitfalls of self indulgence to actually sound quite lush. Awesome. Ripley

NICE STRONG ARM

Reality Bath

Homestead HMS084 [C] ●●½ Mega-good. Nice Strong Arm dither and dangle between this and that, suggesting all manner of diverse directions, ending up with a wonderfully structured sound that lapses into harshly strummed rock-pop, thrash on a bad weekend, and AOR with its fingers down its throat. Confused?

The Arm offer commercially viable packages spruced and back-combed into rock with a twinkling aggressiveness and caustic charm. They play rock 'n' roll over someone with the radio on and sound convincing all the same. Brill. Dave Henderson

NOCTURNAL EMISSIONS

The World Is My Womb

Earthly Delights EARTH 002 [RR] [C] ●¾ The Nocturnals have been quiet for some time and this return barrage sees them yet again wandering through yet another soundscape of differing ideas. Gone is the homage to dancebeats, instead looped sound, sporadic keyboard flurries, and echoey corridors are the order of the day. The odd abrasive sound breaks the concentration, bringing the listener back in line . . . wanting more. In a sense it's a little unfulfilling, but NE never really gave anyone what they wanted, not all at once anyway. TC Wall

A reason to live . . . dat's Der Plan

UNDERGROUND

HOTCASSETTE FURY OVERLOAD

TC Wall Worthy and swarthy cassette pets have flooded scans new into Underground, thoroughly disproving the old cassette muso adage that it can't be good unless it's on releases... vinyl.

The enterprising end of the Medway music boom have clubbed their resources and present Habbermouth Vol One, a collection featuring local talent, that can be had through Pinnacle. Like the explosion of varied music that happened in the late '70s following punk's initial outburst, there's more than a scoop of majestic variation in show — plus a brace of names that must have taken many man/pub hours to arrive at, including Blind Lemon Pie, Millions Of Brazilians, Phineas Fogg and more. High quality tunes in the most, in search of cash and arrangements. Definitely worth a listen.

Thick Slimy Whisper are American (contact them through Cheryl Sobas, 655 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, NY 11215, USA) and their self-titled tape claims to be mainly improvised. Now that's a little surprising as usual "improvised" pieces tend to stray into self-indulgence at the drop of just about anything. This one doesn't, and is essentially a bracing listen, flowing between minimal sounds, intense structures and wispy interludes. Very good, and doubtlessly worth a letter to get more info.

The Cranes' Fuse on Bite Back is a startlingly good tape too. The Portsmouth label have been responsible in the past for bringing the world Twelve 88 Cartel and Paul Moody, and The Cranes offer yet another musical angle to the BB back up squad.

Shifting into a reasonably tense industrial percussion mood, it's made more vital and moderne by the delivery and clarity. Like Nitzer Ebb and DAF, and well noisy with it. (Contact: 11 Clarendon Court, Clarendon Rd, Southsea, Hants.)

Back in the States, Fact 22 have more than a Factory edge on their well packaged (and quite humorous) Chatterbox six tracker on Black. Following Big Black's lead, they even do a rough injustice to Kraftwerk's The Model. But it's good and James Towner, the man at the centre of it all, has an eye for good things. You can get details of that at 1230 Bryden Rd, Columbus, Ohio OH 43205, USA.

Minus Bill sent in a tape which was opened at customs due to being on Mental Hygiene Cassettes (PO Box 18873, Denver, CO 80218) no doubt, and the enclosed music does have a certain eerie quality to it. . . but there's nothing too alarmingly dodgy or perverse. Sounding a bit like Attrition, having a good scream now and again and generally coming up with some good ideas, Minus Bill are worth looking out for (especially at customs).

Another from the MHC HQ is the lovingly titled Hic Et Ubique Uno Animo by Human Head Transplant. Unfortunately this little darling lacks a lot in sound quality and fails to let us know precisely what it's all about. Still, Throbbing Gristle at their most noisy on a head on collision with primal Cabaret Voltaire heard through a sock (that is probably not your own), would seem like as good a description as any.

Object Three from Ladd-Frith (those groovy tape people), of Box 967, Eureka, CA 95502, USA, is a great tape set though. A double, neatly glued with a plethora of subliminally sound and beautifully tortured artists, this is one not to avoid.

On show are all the names that others can't even begin to spell. Take for instance the excellent New Jersey duo Smersh, the crazed Floydisms of F/1, Negativland's dishevelled soundtracks, Problemist's disquieting diversions plus Blackhouse — the first Christian industrial band — and a host more with names as nice as Master/Slave Relationship. Don't miss.

OI POLLOI

Unite And Win!

Oi! OIR 011 RG C ● Scots fast lane merchants, Oi Polloi have been a prolific outfit for turning out new, faster and constantly more outspoken material. Unite And Win! is an onslaught of tremendous proportions which lacks something in delivery and sensitivity, opting to thump home its message with a barrage of slogans. Although some of these might be less than praiseworthy, the onslaught makes it interminably difficult to detect what they're going on about. Musically this is a step sideways, in terms of rock this is endless. Dave Henderson

OPAL

Happy Nightmare Baby

Rough Trade ROUGH 116 RT C ● 1/2 Strange, strange. . . even RT's press ad refers to Opal's long-awaited first album as "gorbely grunge from the US of A". A compliment or what? The trouble with this album is that David 'Rain Parade' Roback and Kendra 'Dream Syndicate' Smith's collective ability to light the blue touchpaper under the grid of perfect paisley psychedelic magik and effortlessly retire, has pretty much failed them. To truly ignite and excite, you need to work a lot harder than this heavy-lidded squeeze of Hammond organs and kiss-the-sky guitars. The already released Soul Giver has said everything Opal seem capable of. Suffice to say, Opal have proven to be a dull kind of jewel. Martin Aston

THE OYSTER BAND

Wide Blue Yonder

Cooking Vinyl COOK 006 NM C ● 1/4 More travels from their folk-dominated roots lead The Oyster Band into a more commercially styled sound, with enough rough edges still showing to make it all remarkably sweet, but gruff.

When Christine Collister lends her fast tumbling voice to The Oxford Girl, just three tracks into side one, the hook is taken and the Wide Blue Yonder sounds like your own back garden. Dave Henderson

THE PERFECT DISASTER

The Perfect Disaster

Glass GLALP 027 ● 3/4 Steeped in VU memorabilia — and with a Louis Reed-credited song in tow — The Perfect Disaster play romantic pop music strummed in a deepish depression. The occasional sax break lifts the proceedings, while the mood changes and uptempo interludes further enhance the Disaster's Perfect Disaster. Doomy popettes in groovy threads, this LP is destined to be a sombre cult classic. . . with new stuff to follow real soon. Ripley

PRIMAL SCREAM

Sonic Flower Groove

Elevation ELV 2 ● 3/4 It's been a long time coming but, after changing drummers and producers, it's well worth the wait as Bobbie's boys have come up with a real gem of a debut album. True, it's stuffed full with '60s-isms in its shimmering guitars and heart wrenching harmonies but it's all filtered through an '80s sonic sensibility with sparkling, stiletto sharp guitars piercing the layers of Bobbie Gillespie's fragile, velveteen vocals. Like a best friend, you'll grow to love and treasure this album and it's one that's sure to top all the polls come the end of the year. Dick 'Gushingly Sensitive' Mescal

PUSSY GALORE

Right Now!

Product Inc 33PROD19 ● 9/10 Pussy Galore are destined to become something of a legend akin to snuff video and late night Kenneth Anger movies. After several EPs in the States, an album on Vinyl Drip International, with a few swear words thrown about, this new album on Product Inc is the kind of explosion that many heads won't be able to take.

Like a concept fit for Lloyd Webber, PG burst like a bulbous boil onto the scene from track one. From there on the pace slows and lets you into the action, throwing in the odd freaky bit for effect. The fact is that these cats are too wired to make music. They're out of tune and most likely out of their boxes. If they prick their thumb they'll bleed to death, and the Emperor's new clothes will need a wash.

Right Now! is a thunderous guitar battle, like thrash played by drunks and acid heads. You'll hate it, or you'll "get high", as they say, too. Wacks. Dave Henderson

PURPLE THINGS

Purple Things

Absolutely Free FREE LP 001 RR C ●● The Purple Things transformation from tracing paper rockabilly, through tacky psychedelia has led them up some dark alleys. Now, launching this new label, they unleash an album that almost achieves the dynamism and mystique of the tripped out sleeve. Purple Things are gore mongers with a hangover, screaming and raving for their supper in a super 8 skin flick of their lives. Always twisting the way you least expect and bludgeoning the stereo with their enthusiasm. Correctly insane.

Johnny Eager

THE RAMONES

Halfway To Sanity

Beggars Banquet Bega 89 ● 1/4 I have friends whose lives were changed by The Ramones back in '76. In their cupboards they keep decrepit torn jeans they wheel out every time da boys are back in town. They are already in a state of frenzy over da brudders' impending visit, but whether they will buy Halfway To Sanity is questionable. Most haven't bought a Ramones album since Road To Ruin.

With Clem Burke drumming on this album, (since departed to be replaced by old-timer Markie), Johnny, Joey and Dee Dee are unsure whether to stick with the sound that made them famous (Bop Till You Drop, Weasel Face), go down the hardcore path they initiated (I'm Not Jesus), follow their poppier instincts (Go 'Lil Camaro Go, A Real Cool Time) or hark back to their Spector-produced hits (Bye Bye Baby). As you've guessed, they try a bit of each and end up confused, unsure, and frankly a bit of a mess. I'll be bopping with the best of them come The Ramones tour, but I bet they won't be relying on these songs to get us going. Tony Fletcher

Document

IRS MIRC 1025 ●● I wasn't keen on what seemed to be REM's rockier beginnings on side one of this album, but as it rolled on, that magnetic Michael Stipe groan stuck the hook in again. The last track just about killed it though. When someone "does Wire", as REM do on their cover of Strange, there's not a lot you can say. It doesn't work. Side two returns REM to their positive ways and, continued playing of side one rounded off the rockier edges. Document is a step forward for REM, but the trouble is I liked them just the way they were. Now if we'd asked The Ramones to move on I wonder what might have happened? Cor, rock music! Makes you think don't it. Dave Henderson

THE RISK

Invitation To The Blues

Unicorn PHZA-10 RT C ● 1/2 This is such a strange LP. The Risk, from the Channel Islands, played extensively in the States to good response, then returned to the UK to record their debut album, Loud Shirts And Stripes, which received good reaction and developed their already growing following. Now, with their second LP, they seem to have lost their way a little, with only half of the tracks standing out as quality pop, while the remainder flounder as trite parody of rock 'n' roll throwaway. Undoubtedly, The Risk have talents in the songwriting area, but they need time to nurture that, rather than to be rushed into half finished recordings. Ripley

THE SMITHS

Strangeways Here We Come

Rough Trade Rough 106 RT C ●● It pains me to consider Morrissey and Marr's last long-playing collaboration as anything less than a masterpiece, but The Smiths have demanded such high standards, and so often delivered (though never over an entire album, part of the quality of genius being its fallibility), that nothing less than the best will do.

The best here is the mocking attack on an evil music industry, Paint A Vulgar Picture, which features a classically Smiths mid-pace riff and Morrissey at his most acidic. However, when he cynically cries 'Best of! More of! Satisfate the need, slip them into different sleeves! Buy both, and be deceived', is he oblivious to the fact that The World Won't Listen/Louder Than Bombs qualify for inclusion as part of the above crime?

Stop Me If You Think You've Heard This One Before is up-beat Smiths at their best, Death Of A Disco Dancer at their most ironically intense, and it is intensity that runs through these grooves with an almost depressing consistency. Johnny Marr frequently abandons his distinct guitar motifs for a fuller, but less unique sound, often using the piano to do so, and Morrissey is noticeably short on the humour that made The Queen Is Dead the best of their four proper albums. Strangeways is of course a great record, but that's not enough. Tony Fletcher

SWANS

Children Of God

Product Inc RT C ●●½ That Swans have managed to transcend their self-imposed early barriers is something impressive. It's easy to stick in the slowed groove and plug away, building that cult for all its worth, but to move on, to introduce new soul, and new souls is a tough one.

Children Of God has its moments of avant garde, but now it's more leftie bankie style with Jarboe groaning in delightful self-pity, and acoustic rambles given more room to breathe, on this double set. Sure, there are the hard-edged tracks that are Swans through and through, but Children Of God dances to a different synth.

Still inward looking, self-examining, fuelled by fireworks and gunshots, wracked with effects, and shrouded in echo, Swans play a noise that's suddenly attained far more layers, much more variation than all of their previous releases put together. Disgracefully compulsive. Ripley

THIRTEEN MOONS

Origins

Wire WRLP 004 NM C ●●½ I've never been over sure of Thirteen Moons' lilting gentleness, often suspecting them of an imminent tearful disappearance into lush nothingness at the drop of a plectrum, but this new album is something else, a hardy affair that revolves, on side one, around some intricate strings and embracing guitars. Although the lyrical aspect still tends to erode some of the interest, the magnitude of the melodies on Origins is quite awesome. Beauty in plastic, indeed. Dave Henderson

3 MUSTAPHAS 3

Shopping

Globestyle ORB 022 P ●● The westernised humour that's prized its way into the Mustaphas' "authentically created" sound makes them nearly 100 per cent more approachable than the many musical variations and diversions that their "authentic" labelmates have taken. The instrumentation is as sharp as can be, while the humour is kept bubbling with lyrical interjections, and even a rap section half way through side one. Shopping is funny, while being musically sound, it manages to translate the group's infamous live show into the confines of your home (something that many bands never manage). All in all, this is a good one, though. Johnny Eager

THROWING MUSES

The Fat Skier

4AD MAD 706 RT C ●●● The Muses' latest mini-album signals a new era in their development — now signed to Sire around the world but sticking with 4AD in the UK — with six new tracks playing off against an elongated, encapsulating and all consuming version of Soul Soldier from their debut album.

On the new tracks on The Fat Skier the sound is developed into a new, even more radical, light and dark sound which whips and breaks against the traditions of rock in a frenzy of emotion. This is an enlightening tornado. Essential. Ripley

TIN STAR

Somebody's Dreams

Special Delivery SPD1004 NM C ●½ New country from the unlikely urban confines of Los Angeles. Quite what makes it 'new' rather than 'old' country is hard to define, though Playboy and MTV are namechecked in the opener American Summer, Don't Give Up is, umm, socially relevant, and Mind Over Mattress could have been part of the Boothill Foottappers set two years ago. The duel male/female vocals add a rougher edge, but are at their best when giving the other a chance to sing solo, as on the up-beat highlight, Sorry Doesn't Work anymore. Whether any of this will catch on in limy land is another story entirely. Tony Fletcher

UV POP

Bendy Baby Man

Extra LP 1 RR C ● The long lost John White, whose brief flirt with Cabaret Voltaire some time back spawned UV Pop, has returned. Then he was a solo performer and totally out of control. Now, he's a pop missionary, without the big songs that he needs to succeed, backed by a real group. From start to finish this album lacks that kind of killer blow that was always possible in his former guise. Shame. Ripley

VARIOUS

Keltia Rok

Sain 1412M RR C ●½ Celtic Rock to you, pally; long live the Celtic tongue! You could be forgiven for thinking that there were more pressing matters to consider, but, whatever the motivation, this compilation stands defiantly speaking in tongues very hard to understand unless you happen to be fluent in Irish, Cornish, Welsh, Breton, Scottish or Isle of Man lingoese.

The musical styles vary from annoying folk to punky pop to groovy back to drippy crap and there's probably half the album that's dustbin-worthy; the other half interesting if not good. One for the serious musicologists only, this. Daz Igmeth

VARIOUS

Medway Powerhouse Vol One

Hangman HANG 4 UP Re C ●● The kings and queens of tinny trash, past and present, assemble their previously unreleased noise on a squirmy collection straight from the Medway delta. Varying in style and content, the music makes and breaks on its own terms with typical Milkshakes, cutesy Del-Monas, James Taylor's distinctive organ sound and back pages from The Prisoners and Thee Mighty Caesars. The beauty of this collection, where other specialised garage grunge has failed, is that there's enough variety to keep the whole thing moving along quite nicely. And for new fans, this is a good place to check the roots, rights, whys and wherefores of The Milkshakes and their sons and daughters. TC Wall

VARIOUS

Mindless Slaughter

Anhrefn 010 Re C ●½ A worthy Artists For Animals compilation featuring some fine talent, some drab but well meaning types, and some in-betweenies. Variation of style is slim but the by-word is angry and the aura of the assembled is genuine and easy to associate with. Top points to Yr Anhrefn, whose positive pop punk is developing nicely. Cheap, Membranes and The Three Johns, who all come in flag waving, are also worthy of your attention. TC Wall

Nettwerk NTL 30007 RR C ●½ A good chance to check out the Canadian Nettwerk catalogue now that their releases are going to be more readily available in the UK. On show here are 11 tracks from the two sides to the Nettwerk facade. Side one kicks off with the poppy and occasionally doomy home sounds of Grapes Of Wrath, the beaty Dole, the twangy Water Walk, the flowing Pretty Green and the lazy Tear Garden. The second side gets a lot more meaty and electronic with some better known acts including Skinny

Raw Cuts Volume Four: Australian Nitro

Satellite RAW 4 RC ●●½ They're maaaaaiaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaad! Down in Australia they're still opening their lager with their toenails, they're still drinking gasoline and spitting out caustic noise with their foot embedded on the accelerator. On show here are some of the noisiest bastards you're ever likely to hear. From the second track in, where Liz Dealey And The 20 Second Sect burn the carb into oblivion, you realise that you've always been searching for a gal like Liz. She's loud.

From here it never lets up with class takes from Coneheads, Bloodloss, Fear And Loathing and yet more. Yuk! Johnny Eager

THE VERLAINES

Juvenilia

Flying Nun UK 010 RT ●● There's something deep and cherishable about The Verlaines' rich pop mountain. They can slip through enough of the sleeker new wave, dare I say, rock trends, tip their hat to The Cure (on a day without make up) and twang the kind of US pop that'd make a New York four-piece proud to sing country tunes dressed as The Beatles. Yes, it's a cross breed, that's even more alarmingly listenable due to the fact that the enclosed tracks are taken from the group's years spanning the early '80s.

In that form Juvenilia suggests that The Verlaines are heading swiftly into a large bull ring, with enough of the 'songs that count' in evidence to make them worth checking further. Dave Henderson

THE WEDDING PRESENT

George Best

Reception RC ●●● Ah. This is brilliant. The Wedding Present bit their lip, dug their heels in and have made a real classic. Rated among the Stumps, Chesterfields, Bodines and suchlike of this world, The Wedding Present haven't fallen fowl of big label posturing or been blown away in a drudge of nothingness. Instead, George Best is a chemical equation which allows lyrics and rampant guitars to share the same plastic mac, without serious questions being asked.

A joyous and harmonious album featuring some of the finest pop music to emerge since the halcyon days of Josef Buzz Juice And The Gang Of Girls At Our Doodah. Now that's telling it like it is. Right? Johnny Eager

WHOOPING CRANES

That's What I Need

Zip Records ZIPA 002 P (import) ●●½ You can cross a bridge in America these days that will take you all the way from a town called REM to one called Husker Du. Now the view is fantastic but it's just that the congested traffic spoils the trip. Whooping Cranes make a fine, abrasive blur of three-man rock-pop with songs that suggest dips and reefs hidden under the surface, but they mostly sound just a bit too aware of the beautiful guitar vistas they've imagined rather than those they've discovered for themselves. For all that — and there's a definite glance over the sun-baked deserts of the Meat Puppets too — this is still beautiful, restless Americana scenery, stamped by duststorm guitars and harmonising plains, where Whooping Cranes go to feed. Martin Aston

A Flock Of Rotations

Red Rhino REDLP 68 RR ●●½ Here's the complimentary recordings to accompany their Assault And Mirage tape which was covered in these very pages last month. As such it's more pleasant atmospheric to massage the inner ear as their music doodling sets up a reflective and relaxing swell of looped effects. Ageing hippies may remember similar instrumental works from the likes of Cluster, Eno and various other German synth fanatics but still, this is none the less compelling. Dick Mescal

And, the poor unfortunate who won a night out with Spizz, who knew that Spizz incarnation circa '81 was none other than SPIZZLES, is Simon Birrell.

Furthermore, the 12 winners of exclusive ROIR compilations, on matted vinyl, are Phil Read from Cardiff, Dave Stamp from Reading, Dave Hutton from Barrow, Hiroshi Sekiguchi from Tokyo, Jos Vernooj from Amsterdam, Marc Gascoigne from Nottingham, Dave Scott from Weston-Super-Mare, Phil Coersion from London, Paul Farrington from Cambridge, David King from Bow, Gary Kelleff from Glasgow and James 'I'm too clever to be reading Ug' Finnigan from New York. They all knew that James White is also called James Black and that the link between On-U Sound, Dub Syndicate and Tack-head is Adrian Sherwood. Pretty international crew, ain't they?

single life

The also spuns, by an Ug! scribe

Andy what happened? Yes, you, Andy Gill, former brain-numbing jangle-heavy guitar welder of Gang Of Four, how come you've made an awful jerky sub-Funkapollitan 12 inch called Dispossession on Survival (Backs)? Yuk! Stick with The Bohol if you want pop. Their TV Man on Beggars Banquet suggests that their album will have been worth the wait.

Back to the dodgers though, and witness (or don't) The Trojans' Gaelic Ska on Gaz's. As the life suggests, a mixed up, messed up thing. Even worse it might even take off on the radio. No such luck for ex-Banshee guitarist John McKay who's re-emerged as Zor Gabor. His debut is a reasonably good single, Tightrope, which starts well with strings, then spirals into a heavy-handed affair. Cloze.

Jeremy Cluck has quite a reasonable single, Looking For A Place To Fall on Tuff Enuff, which he "does" with Rowland S Howard and a couple of ex-Swells. But isn't this cowpoke chic a little misplaced? Not sure(?).

Talking of cowpokes, I can't help but draw similarities to The Pain Famine's The State Of Art (which has some dodgy lines about Dali) and The Eagles. Now we definitely don't need that! There's real art with The McTells though. Their hastily scrawled sleeve for their EP on Truffaut, has a lead track, Jesse Man Rae, which is well good. Now these lads realise that you have to look deeper and cut loose with some meaningful lyrics. So get it.

Jim's Twenty One have a tale to tell, they're three English people in Belgium (20 rue du Conseil, 1050 Brussels, Belgium), and they've made a heartily tinny noise that it's pretty easy to fall for. Twang with no bass sounds and a grating production. It's great and it's on Tulp.

From the Netzwerk roster, Moew's Wanting has the disarming of a subdued Yazoo, charming but not earth shattering yet. A deeper soul croon can be found on Rhythm King's updated Funky Sensation '87, by the impressive Gwen McRae... a stylish affair.

Meanwhile, new Dreamworld act The Looking Glass delve deep into technical record production by using a mere inch and a half of vinyl on their debut 12 inch, Mirrorman. Flowing pop arrives by the chord-load, but is this enough? Ah, just dig those tinkling pianos.

Crash, all the way from the USA, play floatingly fleeting stuff, dressed to the nines in pop slush finery, on their Bright Colored Lights on Remorse (Revolver), while Jah Wobble, yes him, turns up with a grumbling affected slice of ethnic stuff on Island Paradise for the Wob label through Southern Studios.

Eleanor Rigby has another stab at pop fame with Take Another Shot Of My Heart on Waterloo Sunset, an '85 stiff that's now available through Pinnacle. The girl has some pouting talent but is severely dogged by the arrangements, the tackiness of the packaging and the weakness of the delivery. Big labels should whisk her away and create another Tracey Ullman.

Into A Circle's Forever resounds with the large arrangement that such luminaries as ex Southern Death Cult and Strawberry Switchblade helpers might expect, but this Abstract single doesn't make it in enough of the right quarters to win out.

Meanwhile, in Scotland the well packaged Vasellines support with Son Of A Gun, an electronically tinny plodder on 53rd And 3rd through Fast Forward. Just as tacky, almost like a sub-Dexys meeting a sub-Sputnik, is the messy and unconvincingly inane Pop Icons' single Boy Leaves City on Huge Big. The ideas are interesting here, if a little second hand, but the end product lacks the continuity and coherence that would make it something worthy.

From Auckland, New Zealand come Armatrak and their latest four track EP of power-mad chordplay for the German Gift Of Life label (46 Dortmund 1, Richard 12, West Germany), a noisy post-psyche chummer that'd do The Membranes proud.

A Witness get yet more loud and caustic in the cause of Ron Johnson's world takeover week, with a new three track 12 inch, Red Snake (through Nine Mile and the Cartel). Strange really how bittersweet and torturous that harmonica can be when it tries to peel bits from your eardrums.

ANTHONY ADVERSE Imperial Violets el [P] Old Ant's pre-Raphaelite poise and pose is beat-boxed, sweetened and dressed in flowing white. Upmarket romanticism that threatens something tangible and memorable but is just one silk sheet short of the necessary lushness. MA

BIG BLACK The Model Blast First [R] [C] Big Black's swansong parody of Kraftwerk, backed with a cover of Cheap Trick's He's A Whore, in perfect pastiche sleeve. As ever they're musically caustic but it's quite an intriguing play-off when they thrash their knuckles against the clinical austerity of Germanic non-humour. Like Sonic Youth's Madonna blitz on into The Groovy, this is a substantial side that'll establish the band in a lot of hearts that might otherwise have gone unpunctured. R

BIG SUR Dancing On The High Wire Hands Like Feet [E] [C] With smooth atmospherics like this beset by an undercurrent that sets the feet hopping round the room, this Glasgow band will not be long in the indie camp. Pop with a strong beating heart, a nod towards jazz and an appetite for the charts. DM

THE BODINES Slip Slide Pop A springy fresh juicer that will refresh the thirsty among shoppers and maybe put to rest the accusations that the LP from which it came is a disappointment. Even so, it is still their worst single to date. JD

THE CHILLS House With A Hundred Rooms Flying Nun UK [R] [C] Another plaintive cry from The Chills. Is there no end to their source of charm? This is, perhaps, a more commercial outlet for the New Zealand Flying Nunners; it may lack the saddening impact of a Pink Frost or the emotionally soul-stirring kick in the pants that was I Love My Leather Jacket but House With A Hundred Rooms is a grower. Child-like in its wisdom it bares all the essential hallmarks of another damned fine piece of Chills revolving plastic! AK

COCO, STEEL AND LOVEBOMB Crucifixion Of Donny — Love Puppy Melody: Rhythm: Noise [R] [C] Brilliant scratching cut up and total distortion of the old Donny trembler. Extra voice-overs, scratch effects, James Brown, Schoolly D and a cast of many put in an appearance. This is a big must. TC W

CONCRETE GOD Toytown God Phlox [P] Now these chaps have a little bit of style. Verging on Tubeway Army voice-play, punctuated with Pete Waterman's name and a big production, Concrete God play sensual dance music with a rhythmically precise edge. R

CROW PEOPLE Cloud Songs Meantime [R] [C] Four songs and a wide mixture of styles; New Model Army, Hawkwind, The Cure and other things are in here somewhere but the sound is the Crow People's own. Promising stuff and no mistake. DI

THE DAVIDSONS Muscle Jerks Cake [R] [C] Seven tracks choc-full of Midlands humour and including a brain-death version of Gary Glitter's I Didn't Know I Loved You schmaltzer. The Davidsons are a wry smile, effortlessly body breaking through anonymity into the brutal outside world... like Stump with their pants on. JE

DIESEL PARK WEST When The Hoodoo Comes Food [R] [C] Latest Food signings, DP West claim an admiration for Moby Grape and you can hear a little of the US phrasing amid this big, big, big stadia-in-the-sky production job. A fine debut from a band who could very well, with songwriting ability kept in line, be frontrunners as the "next U2". Wow! TC W

THE DINNER LADIES Muscle In The Bud Hannibal Gentle folk akin to Saturday summer special with a lyrical bent and English romanticism thrown in for good measure. An annoying little tune that'll haunt you all the way to your next pint of real Dog's Bladder ale. JE

DIRECT HITS Snakes And Ladders Forbidden/Fire [R] [C] Mod re-treads produce sweaty summer pop for wet afternoons with their own self-styled Battered Beat. Lacks bite and inspiration with the distinctly dodgy demo feel not helped by the dull production. DM

DREAM Desires Black [P] [C] Dream's thrashing guitar sound, that's clear as a bell, is liberally smothered in a tasteful vocal line. The resultant pop onslaught is undeniably memorable even if it's a little reminiscent of The Wedding Present with a few of the rougher edges sanded down. DH

THE DURUTTI COLUMN The City Of Our Lady Factory [P] Difficult to describe this new chapter in Vini Reilly's guitar manual. Floating into another sandstorm, awash with the usual Durutti lushness, it even boasts a vocal cover of Jefferson Airplane's White Rabbit. Whatever next? TC W

THE EXTREMES Eat My Dust Destiny [R] [C] Two diverse diversions, one to a jammed in Television noise, the other to a tempered grey rock tone. The Extremes play fine music that smells of magnitude, style and a decent grounding in musical history. Enjoy the education. TC W

FLAMIN' GROOVIES Shake

Some Action ABC [P] It seems to be about the 55th incarnation of the Groovies' Shake 45 and it still sounds good. A classic song with a looser than precise production bringing it into the '80s. Still, can't help loving the '77 Sire version, but that's just me. DH

GEAR DADDIES She's

Happy/2-18 Gark Records (4100 44th Avenue South, Minneapolis MN 55406

USA) The Gear Daddies may pedal-steel a soft-rock country thang that at a distance recalls bland-outs in the company of Californians, but in reality, Martin Zellar's song and voice have the same naked nerves and mournful withdrawal as a group like The Replacements. These are tense, hurtin' songs, one a ballad, the other poppier — sad and serious country that refuses to toe the Gram-Parsons-was-here line. Watch out for them. MA

GENE LOVES JEZEBEL The Motion Of Love Beggars

Banquet You might think they're a bunch of lipstick wearing pansies, you may hate their seemingly nouveau cock-rock lifestyle, you may even be a little jealous, but even the deafest of abusers can sense the quality of this anthemic opus. Well, I can, anyway. R

THE GO BETWEEN'S Bye Bye

Pride Beggars Banquet The Go Between's pull a couple of tracks from their recent Tallulah album, and they still sound just as fresh as the day they were conceived. Magnetic, poetic and charming with something akin to an oboe embracing a subtle strummed melody. Summer music for romantics. R

THE GOLDEN PALOMINOS Boy

(Go) Celluloid [RT C] The Palominos' structure changes every track and their new album, Visions Of Excess, promises to be a gem. As a taster, this classic slice of nouvelle pop, featuring Michael Stipe, Jody Harris and Richard Thompson among others, tells a little of what we can expect on the LP. One listen and you'll know not to miss it. DH

THE ILLUSTRIOUS CUTLERY Scarecrow North West

[RT C] Something a little closer to something that really goes somewhere. Yes, that's it! The Illustrious Cutlery have a bizarre, tambourine shake-a-long rhythm, a loose guitar and an acidic highlight of keyboard and lead guitar making this Joe Foster-produced 45 much more than revivalism, greater than good and awesomely listenable. Like rock records should be, memorable, desirable and able to stand up to repeated playings. DH

THE KING OF LUXEMBOURG

The Trial Of Doctor Fancy

[P] To my mind, a more realized and memorable pop artefact than anything from his Royal Bastard album, spinning winsome Herman's Hermits yarns and other such twerpy pop-sickie gemstones with a whiff of decadence. The flamenco accompaniment is just the icing to this table of evil and corrupt table manners. MA

MALCOLM'S INTERVIEW The Finer Points Of Feeling

Special Delivery [NM C] With previous releases on Eggs Will Walk and Cooking Vinyl, Malcolm's Interview offer a strange hybrid of post-punk meets folk vitriol that rounds itself neatly into aspiring pop music tinged with the kind of large vocal phrasing that suggests another Fairport Convention circa '68. Not to cast them back in time though, for MI have a kind of current charm and delivery that sets them aside from folk revivals and pop put downs, they are in act quite unique. Excellent. DH

MARDEN HILL Robe/

Hangman [P] Robe is a roguish, jazz-swinging finger-click of pop, all filmic caricature and ace trumpets, sideways on to John Barry theme land, but flipped over, Hangman is harsher and more vital — a gripping and moody surf ride through Spaghetti West with a hangover. James Taylor and Lester Square, where are you? MA

THE MULTI COLOURED SHADES 2000 Light Years

From Home ABC [P] The Stones' chestnut given a fresh sound by this German psychecome-pop combo. A deep lush aura that spirals before it claws into your inner sanity. Quite a tickler really. R

THE NOSEFLUTES Heartache Is Irresistable Ron Johnson

[NM C] Five tracks from the strangely bizarre and alarmingly peculiar Noseflutes. The title track sounds almost African as it throws down a dance gauntlet only for Rotting Honeytoon to trample its good intentions into the ground. The 'flutes are on their way to being a quite unique outfit with a finely honed sound. DH

BOBBY SCARLET Mosquito

Dead Bug Records

[RT C] Now this is what I call "sexy". All of Bobby's songs seem to have some sort of sexual double entendre. On this occasion, Mosquito tells the story of a dream where even then, in dreamworld, "you want to get inside my jeans". It could be quite an innocent request for a bit more pocket money. JD

THE SHAMEN Christopher Mayhew Says Moksha

[NM C] Words of wisdom from great drug guru Chris, set to music — with a tasty verse/chorus and thumping bass drum — by the lovingly blitzed Shamen. A post-pubescent beat combo more akin to The Beatles on speed, The Shamen produce a sound that massages the exhibitionist inside and eventually finds release with some tastefully tempered wordplay. These boys are heroes. JE

69 TRIBE Bikers Feralette

(2012 West End Avenue, Nashville, TN 37203, USA) Well, my my. This sure as hell relieves itself all over the Crazyhead, Zed, Pop Won't Grebo Phenomenon — making them all sound as angry as Dumpy's Rusty Nuts. 69 Tribe spit out an anthem to leather chaps and chapped behinds with immortal drug references, talk of "chicks" and all those other filthy things. Superb. Cough. DH

SON OF SAM A Dangerous Age For A Woman Rouska

[RT C] That Son Of Sam began as a hybrid industrial disco outfit — all ideas and no songs — it's kind of surprising to witness the affectionate soulfulness of this classic cut. Busting a catgut with a neat laidback guitar line, it still whips up in style and breaks with the best of them. This lot are waiting to be thrown to the top of the pile. DH

THE SOUP DRAGONS Soft As Your Face Raw TV

[RT C] The Dragons, rise to fame looks pretty much on course now, with their affairs being directed into the big league with the help of an orchestra and song arranger. Soft As Your Face lacks the group's guts and grit, leaving the onus strictly on songwriting prowess, of which the group have enough to just about survive. But this is, make no mistake, a cabaret offering, a ballad fit for Tom Jones, Sandie Shaw or Maggie Moon, nothing more nothing less. DH

THE SUGAR CUBES Birthday

One Little Indian [RT C] Anyone who can curl a cute lip and talk about "counting freckles" can't be all bad. The Sugar Cubes are sweet, as you'd imagine, an after-taste of Iceland's Kuki ready to break into a commercial "rock" market currently occupied by very few. Expect them to be pretty massive pretty soon. DH

THESE IMMORTAL SOULS

Marry Me Mute [RT C] A real oddity this, straying between rinky dink cabaret piano and bar room Post-Cave-isms to an almost fully theatrical pop-rock onslaught. Quite embracing, but pretty indescribable, except to say "drawl, slither, squirm, creepy", does that mean anything to you? No, me neither; features Rowland S Howard too. R

THE THREE JOHNS Never

And Always Abstract [P] You never had it so good, and you never knew that the Johns could sound like this! Approaching PIL, mixed and minced through Sherwood's trembling hands, Never And Always is a throbbing thunderburst that's busting at the adrenalin-soaked seams. Churning! R

3 MUSTAPHAS 3 Shouffi

Rhirou Globestyle [P] More music from the market of a 1,000 Indiana Jones out-takes, courtesy of the Harlesden/Willesden community skiffle band. Give a man a fez and he'll tell you he's Tommy Cooper, call yourselves 3 Mustaphas 3 and you can make near authentic music too. Sweet. DH

T REX Peel Sessions

Strange Fruit [P] Forget the history-tampering Tony Visconti remixes and take this to your heart — T Rex and Marc Bolan at their most ecstatic and abandoned. Elemental Child is Bolan the guitar ego, tripping to his own reflection, while Jewel and Ride A White Swan are psychedelic Bolan, the precious walf-child finally turning on to pop. T Rex at their peak. MA

TUBEWAY ARMY Peel Sessions Strange Fruit

[P] Back then (1979), even Tubeway Army sounded original. I Nearly Married A Human is six-minutes of spacey-synth whimsy but Down In The Park was Numan's best, a pale-white neurotic outsider's anthem viewed through the eyes of Bowie's Germanic glare — a beautiful gloom tune. Beam me up Scotty. MA

Dave Gedge is a talkative chap . . . and a thoughtful one at that. The telephone line crackles at times, making his enthusiasm run into a sea of words, as he gushes with stories of The Wedding Present's debut album, which they've lovingly titled George Best. But more of that later. First let's go through the Gedge diaries and get to grips with The Wedding Present back catalogue, their slow but assured rise to album band status, and their other lives and loves. First the singles . . . Go Out And Get 'Em Boy!

Go Out And Get 'Em Boy
 "We wanted to make that a real statement, we'd sort of burst onto a scene when a lot of things were happening . . . you know like The Redskins and the Creation bands, Age Of Chance, too. At that point there seemed to be lots of good new bands arriving and we wanted to make a pretty extreme record, give it an extreme production without being pretentious. As a song, looking back, it's still alright, it still stands up."

Once More
 "We thought about this one, we intentionally tried to make it different from the first single, so as to show that we had some versatility, but really it's the one I'm least happy with — even though it still goes down really well live. I think it was like a clichéd rock song in a way. It's not really representative of The Wedding Present."

The Sun Can Wait
 "This is one of my favourites, it's the one that really brought about our trademark of the fast guitar sound. It was supposed to be a double A side, but we didn't really have the budget to do the B side properly. It sort of sounds like you're playing it with a 15 year old needle. It embarrasses me when people play it in clubs too, the sound is so bad."

My Favourite Dress
 "My Favourite Dress is on the album and it created a lot of interest in us when it came out as a single. But in the end it came to nothing. Several big labels were supposedly interested, but in retrospect I'm really glad we kept our independence and stuck to the road we were on."

In addition to these four classic slivers of rampaging pop music — for the uninitiated, the closest marker to The Wedding Present's sound is a frantic interaction fusing high speed guitar, a throbbing rhythm section and bleeding heart vocals, like Edwyn Collins playing Gang Of Four — the Pressies have also racked up three Peel sessions, a Janice Long session and an Andy Kershaw session.

The first two singles have been combined on a 12 inch and Strange Fruit have released one of the Peel sessions with plans in hand to release the group's Janice Long session.

"I think the Janice Long session was my favourite for the BBC, although they've all been enjoyable. The one on Strange Fruit obviously spread our reputation, as it was one of the label's early releases . . ."

And the group's cover version of Orange Juice's Felicity from that session became a talking point and rekindled a few memories. In fact the group have covered a couple more noteworthy epics in their time (showing their skeletons early on).

"Yeah, we did Felicity because we're all big Orange Juice fans. I still really like them, whenever I'm down I can just put on their first LP and it cheers me up. We also did Gang Of Four's Essence Rare — that was Shaun, our drummer's choice — and on the album's cassette and CD version there's a cover of Girls At Our Best's Nowhere Fast. I think they're my favourite group of all time, well for this week anyway, they just wrote such perfect pop songs, you know? They sang them in real English accents and talked about things like walking along the Champs E'lysee."

Any plans for other covers?
 "We're thinking about Blondie's Presence Dear at some point."

Now, that should be interesting.

Aha . . . Love of music; a democratic band, The Wedding Present exploiting their Englishness, revealing their roots. But Dave, who are the other WPs? Introduce them, please.

Keith; bass.
 "Keith has been a close friend for some time, he's very shy, if he was on the other end of this phone you wouldn't get much out of him. He's really talented, but he has to be driven to do things, like write bass lines."
 Shaun; drums.
 "He's a lot louder. His heart's in the right place and he's really honest. So much so, in fact, that he'll change sides in an argument half way through, or change his mind mid question."

Peter; guitar
 "He's only got about three records, he's more interested in football. He's the kind of bloke who'd spend £40 to go and see Leeds play in Brighton, which is strange, because he's from Manchester."

Yep, a motley crew, with Dave Gedge on guitar and vocals. The Wedding Present, this is your interview. So, tell us about the album.

Why's it called George Best? A flawed masterpiece? A talent gone askew?

 "Well, it just seemed like a good idea. George Best summed up the spirit of a time when things were happening, things were important. He's a legendary figure, a kind of celebrity from a time gone by. I never thought that a week after we'd finish the record we'd be having our pictures taken with him."

And what did he think of it?
 "He was pretty good about it all. He didn't really know what to make of it."

So what do you make of it, now that it's ready to roll in every format known to man?

"That's really difficult to say, I'm too close to it."

Well, I'll tell you, Dave, it's real good. It takes a bit of getting into, the whirling guitar won't make it easy for pseudo-yuppies to understand, but once inside, the noise is more than fine. And the words? Like real life!

"I suppose they are taken from real life experiences, things that have happened, but you have to add snatches of this and that, interesting bits you've heard to make it more singable. The way I sing means it's got to be written in a kind of conversational style too."

And the northern twang? Is that straight from a Smiths-aligned

The Wedding Present release their first album, George Best, after a string of live successes, numerous radio sessions and a string of highly acclaimed singles. Vocalist and swash-buckling guitar player Dave Gedge, dials in for an earful of probing conversation with Dave Henderson. Let the inquest begin!

love of Rita Tushingham and other such black and white film stories?

"No, more likely it's from Coronation Street."

So, is there insecurity there in the lyrics? The way the songs are orchestrated with those clashing guitars it sometimes makes the spoken word difficult to follow. Are you hiding in there?

"In a way, I suppose. There's a certain degree of insecurity in the lyrics. I suppose the guitar is there to supplement what's being said."

And how does that affect your audience?

"The thrashing guitar has put some people off, it's aggressive and boisterous and as we've gone on, got bigger, I've noticed that we've been getting less and less girls at our live shows and that's a shame as I'd like to think that we play pop music for everyone."

But it does seem that success is coming The Wedding Present's way (whether it be male dominated or not). George Best is a classy album, tinged with heartfelt pop, supported by bolshy playing and there may even be the odd pop song there too.

So, despite no big deal (and long term pension plan) as yet, do you think this album will force you into one, or aren't you that bothered?

"I don't think we are. We've been looked after really well by our manufacturers and distributors Red Rhino, they've invested in us, given us all that we wanted, and the contract we have is all in our favour. We're earning enough now that we don't have to be on the dole. It's not a brilliant living, but at least we're progressing in the right way, and we've also seen how so many other groups have failed when they've gone to bigger labels."

So do you think you'll still be doing it all in ten years time?

"I don't know. Pop music has such a limited appeal, and I've got a short concentration span, I'll probably get so bored I'll just give it up eventually."

So you don't see The Wedding Present on the cabaret circuit next century?

"No, not really."

In a way I'm kind of glad. At least this way they'll churn and grind out their evocative pop for some time to come, providing records as uplifting as Orange Juice's first along the way. Enjoy!

WALKING FLOORS Escape

Primitive RM C Trashy drum-click behind a real drummer and four tracks that sound like a hybrid made in heaven, between Wire and The Small Faces. Pretty damn strange and good with it. R

THE WALTONES She Looked Right Through Me Medium

Cool RM C Everything you might expect from Manchester's breeziest band. They play a very special brand of pure, total pop and have a singer with the best, boldest, most infectious smile this side of Whalley Range. JD

THE WONDER STUFF

Unbearable The Far Out

Recording Company

RM C "I didn't like you very much when I met you... and now I like you even less", sneers the singer over some quality power 'pop' that's rather rollicking in a real sense; unlike pantomime funsters Pop Will Disembowel Itself, this lot sound like they mean it. Short and to the point and that must be good. Alright? DI

YOLA TENGO For The

Turnstiles/Asparagus

Song Coyote SN (import)

YLT's beatnikish Feelies-Television guitar combinations always threaten to break out of their muted, semi-droning ways, but never do, and therein lies their tension and fascination, if not always their full potential. Their cover of Neil Young's Turnstiles finds them with ants in their pants, and their guitars suitably respond. MA

REwind

The music so far, re-released, repeated reported on!

With the re-release onslaught being taken in hand by more than a few new labels who've seen the success of Ace, Charly and Demon, and the second wave including new boys like Bam Caruso, the switch to hi-tech has come with Demon (and Ace to some extent) putting out some of their quality releases/compilations on CD. Who would have thought that The Byrds' Sweetheart Of The Rodeo or The Flying Burrito Bros' Gilded Palace Of Sin would ever have made it to CD? And, then again, who could have predicted the success of Jackie Wilson in retrospect (his best rock 'n' roll sides make it to CD as Reet Petite, while there's a couple of CDs from Creedence Clearwater Revival this month, through Ace's tie in with the Fantasy label).

In other ports, there's vinyl revivals for a selection of Flux Of Pink Indians LPs on their own One Little Indian label — now they are a band worth checking, especially on Uncarved Block. Not strictly re-issues perhaps, but good all the same as are Sonic Youth's EP and Confusion Is Sex packages which have surfaced on SST and predate the group's current wave of Blast/First releases.

Legendary Harvest-label outfit, Forest have their debut self-titled LP out in limited edition green vinyl on the Zap! label through Revolver and the Cartel, and on the soul front, Dobie Gray has In Crowders That Go 'Go-Go', an album of his greatest on Kent. From Stax through Ace, there's Jean Knight's Mr Big Stuff LP — a title track which has recently been covered by numerous people, The Staple Singers' Beatitude: Respect Yourself, and through Fantasy/Ace, ex Dramatics' crooner L.J. Reynolds asks you to Tell Me You Will (in his own silky sweet style).

Through the new Cartel branch New Routes, there's a host of Sun and Rhino releases and repackage including a wealth of Johnny Cash material, albums from Gentrys, Jerry Lee Lewis and Charlie Rich on Sun, plus a selection of Nuggets (psychedelic packages) and a throng of Monkees albums on Rhino. For further information on New Routes, try giving them a call on (01) 359 0427. That'll cheer them up. Dave Henderson

And now this month's selections reviewed. . .

BARBARA ACKLIN

Groovy Ideas

Kent KENT 072 P Barbara Acklin's career in the deeply dug northern and balladeering soul circuits has placed her in good stead for cult status and collector awareness. With so much to offer in terms of silky sweet vocal lines, hinged to thumping backbeats and tinkling piano arrangements, this compilation, spanning the late '60s and early '70s, certainly gives a neatly inked thumbnail of all of her endearing qualities. Sweet and tear jerking in all the right places. Dave Henderson

CHUCK BERRY

Rock 'n' Roll Rarities

Chess DETD 206 Ch Excellent double set from Chuckles McBerry featuring demos from the man — complete with inter song chattering and unreleased takes from the Chess vaults — including take 15 of Beautiful Delilah, no less — plus a version of Johnny B Goode where Berry informs the piano player that he shouldn't be playing Roll Over Beethoven.

Neat stuff, cranked up even further with a smattering of classic album tracks that are well worth investigation too. Dave Henderson

RAY CAMPI

The Very Best Of

Juke Box XS LP 103 Swift Campi was one of the legendary mid '50s Texan rockabillys who, in the mid '70s turned up on the Californian Rollin' Rock label with some stomping anthems. It's from that period that this collection is taken. From the 18 tracks on show most are stand-outs, especially Rockin' At The Ritz, Quit Your Triffin' and Tore Up. Snakey G

ROKY ERICKSON

Casting The Runes

Five Hours Back TOCK 007

Re C Collector's fodder indeed as some shaky tape manipulator rediscovers this sleazy live outburst from Roky Erickson. So, amid re-releases and repackage of every other Erickson incarnation in every format, here's something of a curio featuring the man live in Texas circa '79. What's more, there's a lot of previously unheard material and it's delivered with a Roky body punch that's well stylish. This may be just the ticket to introduce yet another generation to the ex-13th Floor Elevator — that's if people can find it through all the other albums. Johnny Eager

ROKY ERICKSON

The Holiday Inn Tapes

Fan Club FC 030 P Wahoo! Roky, live! Roky, live in a hotel room! Roky live in room 424, Holiday Inn, Red River, way back in December '86! Woo!

Well there it is. Roky, strumming and singing, just about in time, order and tune, through some old faves, Peggy Sue Got Married, True Love Ways, The Times I've Had and That's My Song from the Holly back cat, plus a batch of self-penned tracks — Lo-fi for purists and strange people especially. Johnny Holly

JOHN FOGERTY

John Fogerty

Fantasy FACE 507 P Post Creedence Fogerty with the lead take, Rockin' All Over The World, showing the way for Quo and their ilk — without the ham-fisted theatrics. John Fogerty's swamp pop takes a bit of a back seat as the onus stretches more to 'rock'-tinged work outs, but the heart is in the right place and the end product retains that kind of down home aroma that wafts around all good melting pots. Soulful stuff, and all topped with that throaty whine that made Creedence's past so potent. Dave Henderson

THE 4 SKINS

A Few 4 Skins More

Link LINKLP 015 A haphazard re-packaging of The 4 Skins, first two albums and incarnations. The double kicks off well with a side of reasonable songs, but the going gets a little tarnished, in fact beyond recognition, on the live flipside. Meanwhile on record two, Roi Pearce proves he can actually sing and the more tuned and tuneful melodies just about win through.

But politics and power struggles aside, do we really need to be reminded of this very basic and seemingly pointless music? And do we want to relive the furore of Southall and the questions it threw up? I doubt it very much somehow. Johnny Eager

JIMMY MCCRACKLIN

Blast 'em Dead

Ace CHD 219 P McCracklin is best known for his '58 Chess hit, The Walk, and for co-writing Tramp with Lowell Fulson, but this 18 track collection is from an earlier period ('52-'54), when he was on the Duke/Peacock label. Blast 'em Dead features his Jumpin' blues band on Pleasin' Papa, She Felt Too Good and Blues And Trouble among others. Snakey G

NINE NINE NINE

Separates

Fan Club FC 027 (New Rose distribution, French import) NineNine Nine's punk aggression, notable songs and pop bias was soon smoothed as their bank balances were weathered through the turning of the tides. On Separates, from '78, the shirts are neatly pressed and the music is given a more clean, fully sheened sound. And, as they scuttle closer to 'punk rock' legend, that hint of dastardly independence and indifference fails to make much of a showing. Perhaps not the best of the group's albums, but a high quality production on a tearful memory. Johnny Eager

JOHNNIE TAYLOR

Who's Making Love . . .

Stax SXE 004 P Johnnie Taylor's deep throat gravel tongue vocals, lavishly foamed with soulfully-styled horns make for perfect pop soul. Each carefully orchestrated three minute slice of heartbreak and divorce further enhances Johnnie's 'kiss but don't tell' image, leaving the blues shouting in the cupboard with a pre-funky overcoat. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Bay Area Blues Blasters

Ace CHD 224 Bluesy and downbeat collection of blues wailing tipped with some precocious guitar breaks. Mainly from the early '50s, this set features such namedrop luminaries as Lafayette 'Thing' Thomas and Baby 'Pee Wee' Parham among others and, as the onus clicks back and forth through the tales of the downtrodden and forlorn, something of a unique, soiled-but-in-suits ambience takes over the proceedings. The Bay Area sound may have developed into some dodgy punk kerrang of late, but it had its heart in the right place in pre-Elv days. Johnny Eager

Posh Hits Vol One

Posy Boy PBS 8138 ■ Best from the Posh Boy catalogue finally available through Jungle in the UK after four years on import. Just 16 examples of how America took to punk including the seminal breakthroughs of Black Flag — a tempered version of Louie Louie — Agent Orange, Circle Jerks, Nuns, F-Word!, TSOL and more. It's all varied and expressive with probably the most quirky salvo coming from Baby Buddha on the demented and drawn-out drum machine patter of Your Cheatin' Heart. Good enough though. Dave Henderson

YOUNG JESSIE

Shufflin' And Jivin'

Ace CHD 225 ■ Ouch! This guy has the tinniest guitar in the history of the world. What's more, it rattles and creaks all over the show. Jess is an ex member of The Flairs — in fact one track here features him with the group — and through his solo work-outs, which are chronicled in fine tinnily moneroe here, he's developed the kind of legendary dirtbox boogie-woogie backdrop that a post-jazz, near big band crooner such as he can really bend a larynx muscle to. Shufflin' And Jivin' breaks its reins to throttle the world and scrape away excess wax. Fine and totally unfettered with a treble-making guitar giving that edge. Dave Henderson

Give Us Creedence!

Creedence Clearwater: the facial hair minority!

• Ace Records have snapped up the Fantasy catalogues and part and parcel of the fine collection of stuff that'll be winging its way to the world, are five Creedence Clearwater Revival LPs. Who? Well, Creedence have been acclaimed as one of the seminal US rock 'n' roll outfits, a group whose 45s had a message, evolved through some fine compulsive pop music. From their soulful roots, and their phase of elongated neo-rock anthems in their earlier days, they eventually went on to produce some of the most powerful music that was loosely termed

"swamp rock". Leader John Fogerty eventually went solo and penned Rockin' All Over The World, which was eventually covered by Quo. Creedence's Bad Moon Rising ended up as key theme in American Werewolf In London and a clutter of contemporary bands in London's current pop twang cited Fogerty as inspirational.

• The records in question are Creedence Clearwater Revival, which perfectly illustrates the group's R&B/deep soul grounding; Bayou Country, where the rock 'n' roll hammer begins to click; Green River, often acclaimed as a classic with three minute pop a-plenty; Willy And The Poorboys, another gem with a countryesque slant added and some reportage lyricism; and Cosmos Factory, featuring an extended I Heard It Through The Grapevine which hit in the US as a single, and Travellin' Band and Up Around The Bend that charted in the UK.

• Essential listening, rock history and educating too. Dave Henderson

GETS THE SCAM ON THE WIRES THAT ARE BUZZING

Perry For President

Scratch reveals the meaning of life!

Lee "Scratch" Perry is wearing an electric blue jump-suit, lime green felt hat, and shocking pink squeezey rattle. He has a new LP, Time Boom — De Devil Dead, a sterling, dub-fracture collision between Perry and Adrian Sherwood's Dub Syndicate, but mysteriously, Mr Perry refuses to discuss his working relationship with Mr Sherwood, which is rather a shame. Nor is he particularly keen to discuss the record. "Let's talk about the future," he says, "The plan is to kill evil, to destroy evil and bring forth good — to get rid of Satan, to get rid of The Devil, to get rid of Lucifer, to get rid of the Devil-followers. That's my main plan — to clean up this earth, to make it clean again and make it a holy land without fearing of thieves and fearing of robbers and fearing of liars, and fearing of hypocrites and parasites, yes?"

- And what's the most immediate evil to confront?
- "Lies. Lies are the most terrible evil on the face of this earth. Lies make everything bad".
- So how do you operate in the music business — which runs on lies — without going crazy?
- "I stick with fate, stick with love. Right? Stick with peace, stick with unity, and I won't have no problem. Seeing, hearing, speaking, smelling, will guide me from destruction and from distortion."
- (He keeps his wits about him).
- There must be another sense though, surely, to sort out when the eyes and ears deceive . . .
- "Well there are the senses for when we are sleeping, when we dream it's another life and life is a dream. People think the dream world isn't real, but it's real. What I'm living this morning is what I dreamed the night before."
- What did you dream the night before?
- "Well, I could see a new world about to happen, where poor people could have a fair chance in this new world, by selecting themselves a new leader and a new guide."
- Do you see a major leader like that coming along?
- "I am the universal world leader. (Ah-ha!) I see myself as the first President of the Universe. I see myself as the Lord and King of the Universe. The Emperor of the Universe. I see myself as that. I am positively sure I can run this world, I can run this globe, I can run around this equator . . . with or without money. What make me think so? Because my words are perfect, my words are honourable, and through my words all things are possible".
- This has been a short magazine featurette on behalf of Lee "Scratch" Perry, whose new record, Time Boom — De Devil Dead, is available at all good record stores. Now, let's look at the weather. Marc Issue

MONARCHY MAYHEM and FISHPASTE

Clapperboard clash!

Jackdaw With Crowbar in film fun

"Look . . . up in the sky . . . Is it a bird? Is it a plane?" No, it's a bleedin' tractor!?! The Night Albania Fell On Alabama, from JWC's first single, sees them delighting in humanities revenge on the American deep South. Jackdaw's new Ron Johnson single, Amarillo, is about America punishing its own. Character building, y'know? Over to you Steve.

- "Amarillo's the place where they did a lot of the early nuclear testing, using soldiers as guinea pigs, that sort of thing. The main industry now in the area is the manufacturing of plutonium. They figure the radiation levels are already so high there that a little leakage won't make much difference!"
- Steve's place in Jackdaw With Crowbar is alongside his buddy Adam working on the group's visual side. Live, the songs are accompanied with a 4 screen barrage of celluloid images, the effect of music and images together is a massive sensory overload.
- "Our films are really too much to take in but I think that's a better way of using films than with a group of these slow moving avant garde films that other groups use. I went to see Test Dept the other month and I found that really offensive, all the Joy Through Strength Nazi imagery. The films didn't seem to have anything to do with the music except to say 'We are a bunch of Nazis'.
- "When me and Adam put together a film for a certain song we pick out themes and images and build up a picture that'll enhance the music."
- Jackdaw's own appearances are regally rare, but they're trying to sort out a package exchange tour with the Dog Faced Hermans, Death By Milkfloat and one or two other groups. If they're fish waving and crow caterwauling in your area soon, don't miss it. Vachel Booth

Lee 'Scratch' Perry, not the slightest bit off the rails.

Forget the album!

Paul Housemartin Heaton talks footie . . .

The noble sport of football has always been more than just a hobby for The Housemartins, and their interest in it goes further than simply naming their debut album after some hopeful and fictitious score-line.

The Housemartins sponsor two teams named after them in a Hull boys' league. Though by their own admission, both teams are 'not too good' (are they trying to tell us they lose all the time?) the involvement is an obvious source of pride.

"When we got our first advance we weren't too sure what to spend the money on," explains singer Paul Heaton as to the team's origination. "We saw a local team advertising for a kit in a window on our street, seeing if they could get one from jumble, which we thought was a bit sad. So we approached them."

Though they get along to see their prodigies play and proffer advice when possible, Paul regrets they've only been able to take a training session themselves once. One reason might be because The Housemartins themselves — long-serving stalwarts Paul and Stan along with new signings Norman and Dave — seem to be taking to the football pitch as often as the stage these days.

Spurred on by their success winning a charity knock-out contest, the four Housemartins and assorted 'celeb' friends have just spent September warming up crowds at grounds like Leeds and Norwich with matches against the feared Soaps team, comprising members of Eastenders, Brookside, and Emmerdale Farm.

Somewhere along the way, they might even release a new album and make a musical tour, but that's pretty unimportant for now.

Paul's own loyalties are to Sheffield United — whom he has been following in the flesh since the tender age of five — and a lifetime ambition was fulfilled late last year when he got to play against childhood hero Tony Currie in a testimonial at Bramall Lane.

"I didn't take much of it in," he confesses. "We played a gig at the ground before the match and at halftime we had to go off and do a gig in Newcastle. I was a bit scared to stamp my authority on the match, so I just scuttled off to a corner. There were loads of real stars playing — nobody really knew who I was."

Asked to explain the wonder of the sport, Heaton resorts to the tongue-tied clichés that prove there just might be a budding Brian Clough lurking in there somewhere.

"Football is . . . *ing brilliant," he finally decides. "To watch a good match live is all it's about."

And The Housemartins' new album? It's a record of two halves Brian. Tony Fletcher

Dave, Paul, Norman and Stan model this year's designer football kits.

PTV sex, sacrilege and subversion!

THE UNDERGROUND INTERROGATION SQUAD

(WELL, ALEX KADIS) BRING JUSTICE TO THE FORE AS IT CALLS UPON PSYCHIC TV TO ANSWER CHARGES AGAINST THEM.

"Assume this phone is tapped." That's the stark message on the PTV HQ telephone. "Is this a joke?" I probe. "No it's perfectly serious and THEY open our mail too." The voice carries with it the intrigue of one who has resigned himself to the consequences that come of being one of rock's most consistent subversives! The world wide Temple Of Psychic Youth network has caused a stir amongst the powers that be. Its advocacy of an alternative attitude towards existence and its constant thwarting of authoritarian values has led Genesis P. Orridge and his fellow luminaries to be the victims of Special Branch surveillance for some years. So, what's with all the fuss? Does subversion, perversion and sacrilege whet your appetite? But is it all as spooky as it sounds? Have PTV discovered the secret to a happy life or is the temple just another mind game, an alternative Moonie manifesto for the lost and unstable amongst us? PTV take the stand and attempt to clarify . . .

Charge 1st. Sexual perversion!

Gen: "Well, one of my more obvious crusades has been to open up a new vision of sexuality. We don't advocate promiscuity but we do advocate rediscovery of a potency within yourself. I don't believe in homosexuality or heterosexuality — just sexuality. My wife Paula and I don't have a monogamous relationship but that doesn't mean that I don't believe others shouldn't practice monogamy. We do have sexual relationships with people involved with us but we don't find it a threat because we have something that is very special. Scott (guitar) lives with us at the moment and he shares our bed but he could never touch what Paula and I have because it's too strong. Sex has become a very controlled thing. We're taught to feel guilt and inhibition because the authorities can't touch your sex. It's the one thing they can't get inside and they hate that. Margaret Thatcher can't get inside my cock while I'm coming — she doesn't know what I'm feeling and she hates that!"

Charge 2nd. Perverting the masses with pornographic videos!

Gen: "There's nothing perverted about them unless you're looking at them in a very narrow and inhibited way. I'll let you watch them if you like. C'mon.

"See, anything untoward there? Anything harmful? There's a few naked bodies there but it's mainly torsos. Paula's in some of them and she's looking very lovely I must say!"

Charge 3rd. Selling subversive and harmful literature . . .

Gen: "Er . . . well, we've got a stall in Camden but that's more a communit . . . on point really. Scott's been running it for some time. We just sell PTV paraphernalia, books and magazines that we think might be worth reading or are of some value. That's all!"

Charge 4th. Having an unhealthy obsession with Brian Jones (i.e. very old, dead Rolling Stone).

Scott: "We did the Brian Jones thing and released Godstar in remembrance of him because he was saying it was ok to express yourself in different ways but due to society's pressures he couldn't go on. The drama and passion of that is represented in his death and we borrow that and bring it to life so that the significance of his example isn't repressed."

Dave (bass): "I see the BJ thing like the Elvis Presley thing. You never realise what people have achieved until they're dead. Just think when Michael Jackson dies! Our kid's kids will be dealing with that! They'll all be crying over him and buying little souvenirs and dolls!"

Charge 5th. Running a secret torture chamber where a lot of very funny business goes on!!

Gen: "What torture chambers? We've never had one! I don't know where that one came from. Probably because of The Nursery. It was an adult playroom with adult playthings in it. It was a room in our house where people could go to act out their sexual fantasies without inhibition or shame. No one was supposed to discuss what they did in there — it was totally private — and no one ever did. But that served its purpose and we needed the room for something else so we dismantled it. It no longer exists."

Charge 6th. Sacrilegious acts of symbolism!

Scott: "Well, that all depends on what you mean by religion. If you mean in the conventional sense then I guess we would be looked down upon by the moral majority of Christians."

Gen: "Again, I can see the threat. Religion has been the one major form of control for centuries. Tell people that it doesn't matter what they do down here because they can redeem themselves in heaven and they'll believe anything."

Charge 7th. Conspiring to create a deviant organisation which aims to undermine the power of our Democracy and bring about the downfall of civilisation as we know it. (Good grief!)

Gen: "Firstly our 'Democracy' has no emotional concern for the average human being. And The Temple Of Psychic Youth has no manifesto. People can still be ordinary and be a part of the temple. We're proof of that. We've taken the chance to live out our dreams publicly and we're nothing special. We do say that everyone is a Temple member, they just don't know it."

What about the right to a freedom of choice?

Gen: "It has to be that way because we do not believe in exclusion or exclusivity of any sort. We merely include people. People have been encouraged to compete and to fight instead of caring and sharing and understanding."

Paula: "Our ideal is to have people living together and learning together."

Scott: "It's there if people want it. We don't stand around on street corners handing out leaflets!"

Matthew (drums): "You make it sound like you need a membership card or something. We're not like the Moonies you know. We don't all go off and pray together!"

Dave: "It's like the McCarthy trials. 'What did you belong to PTV for?', I'll just deny it all. I'll say, 'Genesis who? I've never heard of him. I'm sorry but I've told them this before, next time the police raid us I'll be the first to buckle under!'"

Gen: "Well, I hope that's cleared up some of the misconceptions. People can come into this on whatever level they like because when it comes down to it there's a lot of fun in what we do and we're a band making rock music."

Abuse the abusers!

A Primary Industry threaten Tarbie

What have Debbie Harry, Wyndham Lewis and Jimmy Tarbuck got in common? They are all being mucked about with by A Primary Industry.

- Following their cover of Blondie's Heart Of Glass on Sweatbox, API are turning their attentions to poetry, and one Wyndham Lewis — a writer/artist/anti-figure who used to hang out with people like T S Elliot and James Joyce. The result is an EP with three songs — two using Lewis' poems as lyrics, an instrumental, and three readings, recorded in 1940 by Lewis himself.
- API admire Lewis because he was "anti everything that was popular," which they claim is "a bit like us really." The influence shows through, with Lewis talking about "maximum saxophone clatter" and "sculpture of sound" in one of the poems on the record, both apt descriptions of API music. "Being intellectual is better than being a moronic shambling band," is API's raison d'être. They detest Talulah Gosh and even go so far as to challenge them to a "scrap." They think Sonic Youth "sound like a bloody hippy band," and add, "what's so anti-establishment about getting out of your head anyway?"
- Will they go as far as Wyndham who used to get up in the morning, eat some raw meat, choose a number at random from the phone book — dial it and abuse the person who answered, then go out and glare at people?
- "We are as hard as our music suggests," is the ambiguous reply. Is there anything API do like? "Hip hop, Nitzer Ebb, and Front 242 is all good non-hippy hard stuff." And who's next for the API treatment? "It's a continuing series, it could be anybody — Jimmy Tarbuck or Bruce Forsyth or maybe a Latin hip hop tribute to Pelé." Christopher Mellor

Texan rhythm killers!

Long Tall Texans; three go mad in pop-a-billy mode!

"Bruce Springsteen once said that he wanted to be driving along in his car and switch the radio on and hear himself on the radio," recalls Mark Denman of the Long Tall Texans. "I wouldn't mind that."

- Well, they may be light years away from success on a Springsteen scale, but with every vinyl release the Texans increase the probability of Mark's ambition becoming reality. The latest release is a gutsy no-nonsense EP on Razor, coupling Poison, their favourite track from the Sodbusters album, with three new songs, most notable being the rough and ready appeal of Saints And Sinners.

Would you let one of these people teach your kids? Probably.

- "It's a slight change of direction from the album," says Mark. "It's a bit more commercial. It's certainly not heads down no nonsense pure psychobilly, which only the Meteors can do! Most people describe us as psychobilly but I'd hate to be compared to some psychobilly bands that are around. I think there's a lot more to us than that, we're well away from banging out the straightforward 12 bar songs. But having said that we've got the double bass right up front in our sound."
- The full Texans line-up comprises Mark Carew on slap bass and vocals, Theo on drums and Mark Denman on guitar. Mark, at 29, is by far the oldest member of the band (the others are 21). He is also an ex-teacher. But now that he's involved with music, some of his values have changed.
- "It's not particularly good to have too deep thoughts about the sort of music we do. When it comes down to it I think we're fast and lively, not the sort of music to philosophise about. In general it's just good fun music." Chris Hunt

Thingy and the Things!

The Purple Things indoctrinate Daz Igymeth

The Purple Things are NOT a psychobilly band, unlike the Vibes, from which three Things, drummer John, guitarist Johnny and singer Gary, come, the four-piece line-up being completed by bass man Mike (also one of The Weeds). Gary says "The one bastard problem that's plagued us all along is that everyone connects us with what The Vibes were, but this band has a totally different sound; it's a HARD noise, chaotic, LOUD."

- To prove this, two new pieces of product: the single Kingsnake and the eponymous debut album — recorded live in the studio, allowing for some spontaneity and freak-jamming — with a rather gory cover painting by Gary making for a quality package on the in and outside. Gaz's lyrics cover such topics as paranoia, inner thoughts (!), hypocrisy, the death of a blues singer and "tripping", although you can forget any handy labelling, chums.
- "I'd rather be associated with bands like Big Black, Head of David and The Butthole Surfers, there's no way that that music is commercially valid — not a chance in hell — we're never gonna conform!"
- I like Gary! We go on to rant and rave (quite rightly so) about plastic America and the folding green dream, we talk of forest defoliation and the rape of the earth in the search for quick cash crops and pasture to graze burger cattle, leaving the ground barren for years after; just so besuited crud-heads can surround themselves with consumer durables. It's bloody sickening that not enough people bother to think on a global scale and on this much, me and Gary concur. Daz Igymeth (OK, Daz the ambulance is on the way — ed)

It's Spring 1981, Porthcawl. Welsh twins Michael and Jay Aston leave their native village in delicate search of a personal liberation. The following years are an emotional few; gradually a music emerges, fraught with the vulnerability of a tentative success but suffused with an undaunted passion for honesty and recognition. Anyone who is familiar with Gene Loves Jezebel will already have been touched/charmed/embraced by their endemic brand of colour and texture and those who haven't probably never will — its potency is something you either love or shun — its spectral radiance says, "I just dare you to be indifferent!"

It's summer 1987, Oxford. After almost a year of Stateside elevation and British chart celibacy, GLJ are back with a vengeance. Flaunting the ultimate line up, James Stevenson on guitar, Peter Rizzo on bass and ex-Spear Of Destiny drummer boy Chris Bell, a new LP on Beggars awaits release, preceded by the gloriously uplifting Motion Of Love 45. And in the autumn . . . that long awaited British tour!

While flimsy strands of the new mix drift across from the adjacent studio a stray Jezebel languishes here and there in Virgin Manor's lush surrounds, anticipating, reflecting on the story so far . . .

What's the fuss about

REM?

Peter Buck explains

At first, we wanted to be like this . . .
 "Murmur was just a magical kind of record. We went in and recorded it and didn't think too much about it, but it turned out really right. This was the album that was done completely on instinct. Its influences were everything — all rock 'n' roll. It was rock 'n' roll pop songs, mixed up with this strong, thick, soupy mix. We went out of our way to make a record like that . . ."

• And then we wanted to be like this . . .

"The production on Reckoning was really stripped down. After doing Murmur, it was more thoughtful. We knew what we wanted to do a little bit more. As a reaction to Murmur, we wanted a little bit less moodiness — to be a little bit more clean sounding. Empty almost."

• And then we wanted to sound like this . . .

"On Fables Of The Reconstruction, we made real pains to make a record that was too referential to modern music. It was still a rock 'n' roll record to some degree but we made a point not to do things with rock 'n' roll."

• And then we wanted to sound like this . . .

"With Life's Rich Pageant, we consciously tried to take away some of the moodiness and the, uh, sound qualities that had become associated with us — the thickened vocals, the very widened sound. We wanted to see what you could do with all that stripped away and how the songs would stand so we wanted a clean record, more straightforward."

• And then we thought this would be cool . . .

"Our record company suggested Dead Letter Office, and at first we thought, nah! But it was fun. No-one has to buy it — just as long as people knew it was a collection of B-sides and not the new album, which was made pretty clear."

• And then we made the new album like this . . .

"Document was more, 'let's go and see what happens'. It had more scope for us. Don Gehman, who produced Life's Rich Pageant, was real directed in that the album was geared to be radio-ready, whereas Document was a little less of that, a little less worried about the commercial side, although we felt Pageant wasn't a commercial compromise because we felt the songs suited that sound anyway. Here, we didn't reject any material just because it didn't fit in with the tone of the album. So the songs are very scattered, very diverse, although I would have liked the album to have been more left-field in the end."

• "I've said this before but records should reflect the band and where they are that year. Every record does that for us." Martin Aston

The Love generation

Gene Loves Jezebel on GLJ and stuff!

JAY ON GLJ:

"Through history and chance we've got together with the people in the band and we're really close friends and we get on really well. There's an understanding there and they're such brilliant musicians. Love it and love them!"

ON THE NEW LP:

"This album is like saying, 'we know what we've got and we know how to use it.' It's right and everything just fits. It all makes sense and it's a real adventure. The whole thing is just gorgeous! We always believed we had something special even when things weren't going too well for us. Now it's time to stand up and be counted. It's all a part of our existence, the feeling that we want to be alive and to embrace the day as opposed to hiding away."

ON SEX:

"Sex is a common denominator between us all. Love comes into everything, it's something everyone understands. Sex does feature a lot on the new album but we're not into glam we're into glamour and there's a big difference. We're very much romantics and we do seek beauty and truth and we do try to articulate for other people what we've found and people obviously do like it."

ON MIKE:

"Being in this band has tested my relationship with Mike, certainly. It would have been different if we'd both had separate jobs — it would have been very easy to have had a cosy, you know, see you at certain times of the year, everything's cool and I love you to death type of situation. But we're stuck on the road together, we write together, we have fun together, the rest of the band love it and wouldn't work any other way."

MIKE ON WALES:

"I sometimes think back and wonder why we put so much energy into being different. We fought everything while we were there. When we were just 17 we lived in this house by the sea with some very . . . adventurous people and the police were always round! Our family accept us now but at the time our brothers could never really cope with their camp little twin brothers! The people there are threatened by the way you dress and talk — you mention homosexual to those guys and they want to put you through a window! It's because it's so enclosed there. I guess we could have put on the right kind of shirt and cut our hair and got on with normal life but I know why we didn't. Ordinary life is very boring, very ugly and very repressive. It's just horrible."

ON THE NEW LP:

"Oh God, let me think . . . it's still as intensely personal as it ever was, that's still our expression. Two tracks, Gorgeous and Up There are both celebrations of someone that's very beautiful to you. Up There is our most up front sexual song so far, I think. There's more withdrawn stuff that goes back to the shadowy side of GLJ. There's a song called Every Door on which Jay does the most breathtaking vocal. It's heaven, it's Avalon, whatever. It's perfect, he's just captured something. But we've definitely made the album of the year, without question, I think . . ."

ON JAY:

"Initially Jay relied a lot upon me. I came down to London and found a place to live and a job and initially formed the group. If I hadn't done that he'd have stayed in Wales. But he's a lot more confident now, he's grown as a result of that and that's good. We're good friends."

ON BEING TWINS:

"It's strange. For a long time we fought it and wanted to do things on our own. And four years of being referred to as the wacky duo can be very wearing! We're not Bill and Ben and we're not Tick and Tock. We've gone well beyond the twin thing now. It doesn't feel like we're twins. But the band wouldn't work any other way. They believe that the strength that we have is a result of the two of us being together — that's what makes it special. Things have worked out well. We've learned a lot about each other and it's very hard for either of us to get in on the other's act these days — we're very protective over what we do. Sometimes there are periods of disaffection and we rarely write together anymore but I won't know if that's a good thing or not until this album has been out a year or so."

ON THE FUTURE:

"Well, we'll just have to see . . . we're always conscious of the fact that in the music business you're only as good as your last three minutes. By the same token your next three could be your best. We don't want to be at the top all the time — who needs that? This is the only place we could be right now, though, the music business, because it's the only thing that has the drama and the stress level that makes life . . . not worth living but . . . worth HAVING." Alex Kadis

CIRCUIT BREAKERS: HOTTEST ACTION FROM THE PULSE FIT TO BURST

Circuit Breakers

Grrrr! We's Beeg Blagi!

Black from the grave! Big Black eat melons and quit!

Big Black's farewell to London, at the Clarendon, Hammersmith, is a triumph in the face of abominable conditions. Once things get going the dehydrating throng at the front of the audience refresh themselves by tearing into a batch of water-melons that have miraculously appeared in their midst. The pulp gets everywhere but mostly over Steve Albini. Albini stands centre stage, his arms and torso drip pink gunge.

- Big Black's set spans their career from the early Pidgeon Kill right through to Bad Penny and Fish Fry from their imminent LP. At the climax of the show, Albini squeaks "This is the one they all write about" and the group lurches into Jordan, Minnesota and go on to plumb new depths of aural buggery. Once they've forced that knot in your stomach they just don't let go, they take a masochistic pleasure extending the song into a maelstrom of feedback. Dave slaps his bass on its stack, stands back and grins; Santiago dashes his guitar repeatedly against the stage; Steve, with four of his strings slashed apart lays down his guitar and drops on it first one can of beer, then a second can of beer, then a huge bloody great flightcase. Big Black walk off.
- That's the end of Big Black. Except for the encore, a maniacal excursion-length run-through of Wire's Heartbeat, with assistance from Lewis and Gilbert from that very same combo.
- "God! That kicked my dick right across the room!" enthuses Albini later on. "I used to listen to those guys when I was 15 years old! Up in my room with my headphones on; Pink Flag, all that."
- Big Black records have been coming thick and fast the last few months; Headache (a double EP package) followed closely by Sound Of Impact, the live 'official bootleg', the recent single, a cover of Kraftwerk's The Model, and now the Songs About Fucking album. There's been no slackening of purpose, the new LP is on the same blistering level as Atomizer, but this is more rounded and harder hitting. It's both sad and admirable that they're taking the rare step of jacking it in at the peak of their powers.
- "I think it's a good time for the group to finish," says Albini. "Even if Santiago hadn't been going to law school I think this would be a good place to finish. We've achieved more than I'd hoped for in the last couple of years, I don't think we should try and extend the group's life too far, I'm real proud of what Big Black have done and wouldn't want anything to shit on that."
- Albini wants to start a new group at some stage but his plans won't include Santiago or Dave.

SKATE THE DISEASE! Virus wheelie in with a therang!

Brighton's Virus finally have their debut album, Pray For War, released this month on the Metalworks label. Catching the group when they were a humble, throbbing, three-piece of Henry Heston, Damien Hesse and Tez K&lor, who create an awesome thrusting noise, which breaks at finger-cracking pace, it's already impressed speed-freaks far and wide, being picked up in the States by Profile and in Europe by GWR for simultaneous release.

- But if you think that's the story, forget it, the latest scam is that a fourth member, Coke, joined the group earlier this year, offering them a wider scope and a new hybrid of metal and powerchord thrash. In this new format gigs with Suicidal Tendencies reaped pro-gamma press and general interest, the skate-frenzy-in-the-UK further enhancing their reputation, while the group's concept of post-nuclear holocaust music looks destined to be debated in the halls of the intelligencia for years to come.
- A tour in Europe and the States with The Cro-Mags should further spread the disease. In the meantime, all budding skatettes should burn off to their local dealer and plug into Virus' Pray For War. . . and wait for the bomb to drop. TC Wall

Henry Heston and Coke compare tattoos

- "Dave joined Big Black from Savage Beliefs and he's got his own projects he wants to get back to. Whatever I do I won't be backing away from the achievements of Big Black. I want to try and strip things down even further, not to make them empty but to get rid of all those little indulgences, the things that get in the way of the group being as direct and to the point as possible."
- Albini's life seems to be in constant flux; he has so many irons in the fire it's maybe not surprising Big Black had to end. He writes criticism and fiction (an impressive short story appeared in a recent issue of US mag Forced Exposure), he also runs Ruthless Records, his own label, and puts in time as a photo retoucher. He even sets his name to work, backstage at the Clarendon he signs record sleeves and copies of Grim Humour fanzine with tell tale anagrams; Elvis Eat Bin; Eli Stab Vein; Evil Sin Beat. (Huh?). So that's the end of an earache, end of an earner? Well, somehow I think you'll be hearing a lot more of Steve Albini. Like it, or not! Vachel Booth

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF C VOLTAIRE

Steven Mallinder recalls the early CV singles, tracing the origins of Seconds Too Late

Headkick EP

the beginning, a four track EP.

"It started out when we sent some rough tapes out to various people, like Richard Boon at New Hormones and Jon Savage who was then at Sounds. One went to Geoff Travis at Rough Trade, he came down to see us playing the Lyceum with Buzzcocks and The Siits and offered to put out a single. We didn't want to pick out just two tracks, so we did an EP. Basically it was put down to live, straight onto a Revox, which we used to put our backing tracks together for live work. It was all done in one take at Western Works, a rehearsal studio that we shared as we got more and more gear for it.

"There was only a small Sheffield scene then, mainly us and the Human League with other bands like Vice Versa (who went on to become ABC). It was more electronic and less funk then, although the North's got a lot stronger soul tradition anyway, and it was all quite harsh but also very glam rock-ish, that's something that everyone seemed to miss!"

Factory Sampler EP

a double single pack on Factory — all the other 45s here being on Rough Trade — with the other sides given over to Joy Division, the Durutti Column and John Dowie that now changes hands for vast amounts of money.

"We played a lot with Joy Division and both of us, along with the Durutti Column and Manicured Noise, played at the first Factory club at the Russell in the six weeks that Tony Wilson had the club. So Tony asked us to supply two tracks, Baader-Meinhof and Sex in Secret, for the sampler. It became a toss up between Rough Trade and Factory for the first album, but Rough Trade supplied us with a mixing desk and four track tape machine so..."

Nag Nag Nag

their most renowned single.

"This was our first time in an outside studio. We went with Geoff and Mayo Thompson into Berry Street studios, which was a 16 track then. I think it's done around 90,000, it's just unfortunate that it's taken seven years to sell them!! We certainly never realised that it would become known as such a classic, especially as it was unanimously slagged at the time! That's why I've never taken much notice of what journalists say. The public always choose what they want."

Silent Command

"We had our own four track studio by the time we did Silent Command, which was quite reggae-ish, and again was put down live. We then went on to do the Voice Of America, our second album. Virtually every number we did got recorded at some stage, if not released. We were much more live orientated then and songs were rehearsed with that in mind and then adapted for the record. The technology of the time meant we couldn't be too premeditated, so nearly everything was done live, in one take, which was good anyway. I've always believed in spontaneity."

Seconds Too Late

the one on the free tape with Underground!

"After Voice Of America we'd made enough money to get an eight track recorder and this was the first thing we did on it. I think we sold the old four track to Howard Devoto. So we did it in a day with Geoff Travis mixing. Not that Geoff was really a mixer, but a guiding outside influence. Of all our early stuff, I really like Seconds Too Late — although I hate my vocal. It was meant to be deadpan but it turned out too dead!"

Three Mantras

a walk on the wild side, with its two tracks coming in at over 45mins.

"When we came to do Three Mantras we'd got to the stage where we'd done LPs and singles and we wanted to do something different, we didn't want to be too obvious, so we ended up with over 20 minutes on each side — not really an LP or a single. The title came about when we all got pissed and someone mentioned calling it Two Mantras, as the two tracks were Western Mantra and Eastern Mantra, and someone else said why not Three Mantras? It was only afterwards that all the symbolism, that some people picked up on, came in."

Jazz The Glass

issued as a double pack with Walls Of Jericho on a 12 inch and Jazz The Glass on seven.

"This was our surf song! Jazz The Glass being a '60s west coast saying for 'to surf a wave'. It's sort of a pre-Cramps Cramps number for us! We were always into surf music and The Beach Boys. Our reference points have always been more common place than people think, it's just our interpretation that's not quite so obvious.

"It wasn't long after this that Chris Watson left. Why did Chris leave? I don't know, I still haven't worked it out! He was a diabetic though, so he had to watch his eating and sleeping habits, and I think he got offered a job with Tyne Tees as a sound engineer. Before he left we recorded three numbers, with drummer Alan Fisch, that he had been involved in so as to wrap up everything we had done together; to sort of neatly finish off that period. We then, having done a benefit gig and record for Poland, did a few numbers with Eric Random on guitar and Nort on drums, and it all came out together on the 2x45 LP.

"Looking back on those days if you got some studio time it was so precious, you just had to use it to the full and finish off what you intended to achieve. Nowadays we tend to be more conscientious and more critical of what we do." Dick Mescal

HOMESTEAD DISCOGRAPHY — (SELECTED)

HMS 015 DINOSAUR Dinosaur

"Hey, have you heard their new album on SST? Brilliant! This isn't as developed as that one. We're still trying to work out if they're rude or just artistic but either way, they're one of the best bands in America."

HMS 039 STRUNGOUT ON JARGON Death Of Samantha

"Incredibly ambitious and arrogant group, a very theatrical bunch. A noisy rock group in the Cleveland tradition of The Pagans. Close to the first Dream Syndicate album maybe."

HMS 044 THE HAMMER PARTY Big Black

"Bulldozer is just massive, Lungs is a skeleton of what they went onto. A cute drummer."

HMS 048 NAKED AT THE BUY, SELL AND TRADE Great Plains

"Most underestimated group in the entire world. A rock group, a pop group . . . who can you compare them to? That's a hard one."

HMS 067 PHANTOM TOLLBOOTH Phantom Tollbooth

"The token progressive band on the label, although if it wasn't for punk rock, they probably couldn't have existed. Equal parts speedmetal and Fred Frith."

HMS 069 YOU GIVE LOVE A BAD NAME GG Allin & The Holy Men

"The New Hampshire wild man. Completely fed up. Best expression for him is Rock."

HMS 072 SKAG HEAVEN Squirrel Bait

"No more. The three guitarists hated the singer and drummer and vice-versa. The only band to come out of post-hardcore with any dignity intact because they listened to other records except hardcore."

HMS 075 THE ICE MACHINE Breaking Circus

"A really tall band. A rock band like The Three Johns are a rock band. They definitely have empathies with British groups in the post-punk period, late '70s/early '80s, Wire, Magazine, even The Jam."

HMS 077 BOO BOO Big Dipper

"Our surrogate supergroup, like Asia. Ex-members of Volcano Suns, Dumptruck and Embarrassment. What's that you just said?"

Salem 66

HMS 078 FREQUENCY AND URGENCY Salem 66

"They keep having problems with their guitar players. Yeah, they're a pop group but they don't make any particular effort to be clean."

HMS 079 THE WAILING ULTIMATE Various Artists

"Our cheapest way of trying to trick people into thinking some of those bands are still on the label. If people are confused by this label, we put out great records and this compilation shoves it under their noses."

HMS 083 DON'T GET ANY ON YOU Live Skull

"The big deal among New York veterans. Yeah, they're sick of being compared to Sonic Youth. They're a lot more nasal — the total nose experience group."

HMS 084 REALITY BEACH Nice Strong Arm

"From the forgotten side of Texas, a band that rocks out. A rock group in the same way that Sonic Youth are, in that they aren't so concerned about songs as they are about making noises that match the ones in their heads."

HMS 085 MY SKIN COVERS MY BODY Happy Flowers

"Pioneers of pre-teen industrial rock. They're seven years old, and called Mr Anus and Mr Horribly Charred Infant. The best of Half Japanese and the bits of Psychic TV that didn't suck."

HMS 087 BUMPER CROP Volcano Suns

"Musically, it's Ted Nugent and Cheap Trick played by a man with a square head. Spearheaded by ex-Mission Of Burma vocalist and drummer Peter Prescott. They think they're a pop band writing for teenagers."

Home on the Homestead

Gerard Cosloy introduces the world to Nice Strong Arm, Indian food and Homestead Records

Martin Aston subscribes to the game plan

WAIL!

"I don't know what our ethics are. I left them at home."

ETHICS.

"We put out records by bands we like, merely for that reason. If they might one day sell a whole ton of records, that would be neat. We'd like it to happen but that's not the first thing we think of."

A typical Gerard Cosloy press release on behalf of Homestead Records in New York read: "We've included some of the recent press clippings about Band X for those of you who don't know who they are. I mean, you should check out the album anyway, but we're really into impressing people with reviews by famous writers."

CHOICE.

Big Black, Sonic Youth, Naked Raygun, Salem 66, Squirrel Bait, Volcano Suns, Dinosaur, Breaking Circus, Phantom Tollbooth: action paintings that speak far louder than any famous writer's wonder-words anyway. Homestead, in-house label for the New York-based Dutch East India distributors, got there first in all of the above cases, which sure impresses the likes of me. People are so impressed with Homestead that they've even awarded the label a 'Homestead sound'. That's 'Homestead' with a hardcore 'h'.

"Those people who see us as hardcore look at our advertising more than they listen to our records. There are no hardcore bands on Homestead, and I can say that proudly."

SAY IT LOUD, GERARD.

"I usually associate the American hardcore scene with Dead End street. Almost any good American hardcore band would be ashamed to call themselves hardcore because of all the things associated with it these days. Hardcore used to be independently produced stuff that didn't all sound the same. It had exciting bands that were combing different kinds of music, real aggressive, raw things. Today, hardcore might as well be heavy metal with shorter hair. It's just another marketing term. It doesn't bother me that people think of us as a token hardcore label. As long as our bands don't end up having their images tarnished, it's OK."

PET SOUNDS.

So Homestead are an old-fashioned hardcore label and a present-day record label with a stunning low-priced sampler ("to encourage poor people to check us out"), The Wailing Ultimate — 14 mostly metal 'n' shell shards piercing the veneer of complacency that's rooted at the core of much independent music. It's music that pulls at the crease, corners, fixtures and fittings of contemporary guitar-rock until the form can only be imagined after it's been heard, and not before. But will people ever get beyond the aggressive, uncompromising noise image?

"People are put off by that but it's kinda silly 'cos if they take the time to check it out, they'd find those bands writing actual songs — bands who consider themselves pop bands, just as much as The Beach Boys do. I think the label fits into a very rich pop tradition. Bands like Big Dipper, or Salem 66 or Death Of Samantha, I see as pop. They just don't necessarily have anything to say about child abuse."

EVERYTHING'S GROOVY.

You've just heard the new Live Skull and Nice Strong Arm albums on Homestead, and you're looking forward to the Happy Flowers and GG Allen & The Holy Men debuts. You flip open another beer and feel pretty pleased with yourself.

ULTIMATELY.

"We're not anti-pop but we're anti-Indian food this week. We're the most anti-record label in America, I think you can call us that."

THE FINAL WORD.

"Hey, keep reaching for the stars!"

TOTAL NAMEDROP: CRED NEW ACTS TO IMPRESS THE BOSS

A CAST OF THOUSANDS

"I know that we could write five songs about the situation in Northern Ireland right now and we would be the pride of the NME. Artistically that's where our striving and our blood comes from, our personal angst, but we don't want to touch just the token Lefties, we want to touch hearts in a global sense."

Dave Harvey, lyricist and voice in A CAST OF THOUSANDS speaks on the morning after the night before when two bombs exploded in Derry. Very much participant in the sad exodus to London, the band follow in the footsteps of many of their Derry contemporaries which include Bam Bam And The Calling and That Petrol Emotion. Jim Harvey, he of the mystical guitar solos, continues: "We are a part of that exodus, I know. New Tomorrow which is on the B-side of our single (the v. fab Nothing Is Forever) is about that. We could tell you tales about Northern Ireland that would make your hair stand on end, but what's the point? That's only one facet of A Cast Of Thousands."

"We could be like Gaye Bykers On Acid and put on the funny glasses and lie, saying that we take mushrooms every day of the week. OK, We've all done that, we've all taken acid but we don't need to use that as an idea for our band. To me that denotes that there's a weakness somewhere in the music and it's short lived. We're taking our time. To me U2 have succeeded. They've done the perfect thing in terms of reaching people right across the border. We're along those lines."

The band release their debut LP Passion on Fun After All shortly. They promise it will uphold this sentiment. If their single, Nothing Is Forever, is a reliable yardstick then I know they tell the truth. Alex Kadis

THE DOONICANS

So who are these DOONICANS, and do we really need another attack of cowpunk/folk/gaelic/whatever? Six self-confessed northerners who all met in London, their debut 12 inch for Probe Plus, Fisherwoman's Way, is currently making waves (sorry!). But The Doonicians might still be discarded as 'the-year-before-last's-trend' if not for their distinct twin vocal attack in the shape of Leah Gordon and Emily Dunbar.

"I write pro-women songs from a folk angle," says Leah, responsible for The Doons' lyrics, "songs about dirty women. They're very pro-woman, very celebratory, and there's always quite a lot of sex in them for some reason. The good thing is we're backed by blokes — there's something slightly irritating about all-women bands."

Leaving The Slits, The Go-Gos and The Nolans out of this for a moment, drummer Duncan reveals that live they are "very manic", with a lot of instrument-swapping and no set-lists. Pogues comparisons are thrown aside after an encounter with the live show, he insists.

So what of the future? Do The Doonicians plan to take their rough'n'ready sound to a major for purifying and ignominy?

"We're all hedging our bets —

WILD ANGELS

WILD ANGELS, with their slide-guitar rock and past records that take in the whole spectrum of a particular Glasgow sub-scene (Bourgie Bourgie, Flesh The Jazzateers . . .), have so far produced one single (She's Black And White), two live performances and a strong, mutual disrespect for a lot of their fellow Glaswegian musicians.

As guitarist Douglas MacIntyre explains: "The first time we played we got a rough ride from the 'Glasgow Scene'. I think at that point we were probably the most hated band in Glasgow. Which is pretty good really . . . People seem to like us a wee bit better now though, so we might be getting worse, I don't know."

So why the antipathy?

"With a lot of Glasgow groups it's like career-rock, they're either chasing deals or they're chasing their own arse . . . The best thing about Glasgow is that the Pastels sold more copies of their L.P. in three weeks than Love And Money sold in a year. Which puts it all in perspective after the money that's been spent on Love And Money. I think that's healthy."

And are Wild Angels really so different?

"Yes." Trevor Pake

just looking at it from a distance," says Leah cautiously, while Duncan is positively unenthusiastic. "We like to do everything ourselves — it wouldn't be so much fun if someone else told you what to do. Besides, we don't seem to be doing too bad."

Nice to see one group in Total Namedrop not merely searching for the nearest dotted line. Tony Fletcher

ZODIAC MOTEL

Message as follows: "The ZODIAC MOTEL is total freedom; total abandon, it is our piece of art/heart. A communication from the retro, hell, pure duo-sonic — the drone; the cutting lazer is our weaponry. The stage now a battle ground, the soldiers sweeping in. New Vietnam napalm plectrum strumming screaming helicopter, blade versus skin, 53rd And 3rd, energy is our key — a crossfire response, I totally feel the charge, my heart starts pumping the cute adrenalin. F it out, spew the words; the world spins in our eyes." Vince Lidd (vocals and psycho poetry) from sonic assault beauties the Zodiac Motel is a man with a mission, namely to "burn out the malignant growth that pop has become."

Along with fellow conspirators Gene on drums, James on

FASTER PUSSYCAT, KILL KILL

A head-onistic collision of attitude and inspiration, FASTER PUSSYCAT KILL KILL, are commodity rock with a view to a thrill. Originally conceived back in '86, in the wild lands of Leytonstone, by Chris Paris (vocals) and Adam Ross (guitar), the Pussycats were the result of a burning desire to flaunt it and form an outfit with more than just a dash of palatable posturing and pouting. Charged with raw enthusiasm and Oh-so-much vanity, their music, like their clothes, is a paradoxical fusion of leather and plastic, a sort of pre-arranged rendezvous for image and integrity. But which comes first?

Adam: "Well, the image is important because we've got to look like our music. To us the two go hand in hand but the music is the most important thing because it's US writing it — that's where we are — and without it there'd be no foundation. But it's the combination of the two which makes the real impact."

So there lies the strength of this band, I suppose?

Adam: "No. It lies with me. My songwriting, my guitar playing, my immaculate hairstyle and trousers . . . oh, and Chris's pert little bottom!"

Sounds like the purrr-fect combination to me. (Ouch!) Alex Kadis bass and brother Vince Retro on screaming, burning guitar, Vince Lidd has the enthusiasm, the spirit and the music behind him in sufficiently large quantities to make his dream the new reality.

It's been a couple of years since the birth and an album (The Story Of Roland Flagg), and, more recently, the single Sunshine Miner (a four track meisterwerk) was released. But they've not been quiet.

The live buzz that the Zomo's create on stage cuts deep and maximum energy levels are maintained from start to finish; animal chemicals in motion; something wild that will be captured on the next single release, due in the autumn, on Swordfish records.

Until then another mutant pearl of wisdom from Vince; "Acid is wonderful, the government should make it compulsory. The country is full of zombies so why not make them real zombies? We could all be entertained, and feel — to death."

Distort! Daz Igymeth

FRIENDS

William Jones of FRIENDS is in London to see record companies and journalists after a glowing Tip Sheet review of his band's demo.

"It's great," he enthuses. "Suddenly, out of nowhere, people are starting to like us. We even got contacted by Arista in New York — they've read about us and want a tape . . . it's weird because we're so un-American, there's no blues, soul or funk in Friends; it's just straight English pop."

Based in Stockton, William formed Friends with four other mutually inclined souls (average age 20). Inspired partially by something called punk rock ("I was a massive Buzzcocks fan") and partially by a love of melody, William is now the driving force behind the band that he sings, plays the guitar and writes songs for.

A first single was released on Summerhouse earlier this year, though it failed to make much of an impact. The new single, Far And Away, is out on September 14 and should put the band on the indie map, thanks to a solid chiming guitar sound and William's whimsical almost Smithesque vocals. Julian Henry

BOURBONESE QUALK

Creating art's a dirty job, but someone's got to do it. When you're talking to Simon Crab you're talking about heavy duty industrial art funk ramble. You're talking post-nuclear rhythmic horror . . . Sound terrorism. To be precise, you are talking BOURBONESE QUALK and that is weird.

Since the departure of Steven Tanza, Qualk are a solo act, allowing Simon more scope to get off on his tower block obsession. His rooms are crammed with photographs, illustrations, diagrams and art pieces based on blocks. Street plan views adorn the kitchen wall, the current album features stills from a tower block video, and Simon claims to have scaled most of the blocks in London. It's what you call an obsession. Yet he lives in a railway terrace.

That apart, this nervous, hesitant, but good humoured lad is the outlet for some bizarre continental rock/art musical releases. Take Qualk's French tape album, which is cocooned in a hand painted plaster toy car. Destroy the car to hear the product? Needless to say no-one does hence history's least heard LP.

The rooms are peppered with such artefacts, and Simon, himself, is currently publishing a book printed on plexiglass. Art for art's sake?

"My work is an attack on the repressive attitude," he then informs me of the near completion of his anti-capitalist bomb. A little wonder that will erase computer tapes and electronic records. "It is harmless, it only hurts tapes."

Yes, whatever you say, Simon. Ronnie Randall

HEY MAN, I'M, LIKE, ER, TOTALLY TOTALLED!

The floating oil lantern explodes in north London!

A photojournalistic experience from Ronnie Gurandall

The interior of the New Merlin's Cave, near New Cross station, is like some Walt Disney wonderland. Yogi Bear breakfasts with Fred Flintstone over acid-faced porridge, surrounded by vacuum cleaners and wands. The kitsch wizard, cauldrons and dark doomy mountains are woven into the carpet. It's intimate and intimidating, a perfect setting for a happening, particularly the psychedelic beanfeast that greets my eyes as I breeze past the delectable doo "dollies" who are to be laid back to actually ask for the entrance fee.

★ Inside, the confrontation is brutal. Brian Jones' pageboy haircuts show sparkling dandruff stars over velvet-inked shoulders beneath the ultraviolet lightning. Fluffy white shirts, figure hugging strides and pointed slip-on boots are the order of the day. Aye! It's back to the '60s, and don't spare the horsepower of the E-Type.

★ Of course that's not the whole story. The swingin' '60s covered a five-year time span, which then, as now, meant a fashion and trend turnover every bit as bewildering as the last five. Thus such revival events as tonight prove a toxic cocktail of crossed and blurred styles. In 20 years time we may find an '80s resurgence that encompasses grebo, B-boy, punk, flow romantic and all points east of Krakatoa, you dig?

★ This latest incarnation of the psychedelics scene seems to have, generally, settled around British beat rather than San Francisco flower power threads. Dominant materials are PVC, lurex and nylon. Cut-away polo neck mini dresses and skirts, skinny-rib tops, kiss cuts and bulbous earrings, vinyl kinky boots, Mary Quant, Twiggy, and Bridget Riley's Op art. It's all weird shit, kind of. And there's music too.

★ With five acts on the bill the compact venue is crammed with band members and close friends. There's not that much room for curious outsiders, so the atmosphere has a good "karma". I skip over the scatter cushions and cross-legged hippy contingent to reach a vast tub of glowing green fairy liquid solution that passes for bubble blowing blub. Allowing us to add our own additions to the inevitable, though impressive, oil lantern projections and stained glass gothic slide imagery. The talk is all of LSD and other (tongue in cheek?) acknowledgments to the clichés of the scene.

★ One of the few concessions to the '80s is that video rather than Super 8 records the proceedings for posterity. The ultimate aim may be to recreate the party scene from Midnight Cowboy. Here We Go 'Round The Mulberry Bush, but it's of a distinctly Carry On variety. And as I say, still there's music.

★ Music that comes primarily from the Purple People Eaters, a blitzed-out cross between Syd Barrett-era Pink Floyd and the doomy Doors. Each song is pinned by that cheap Peddlers-style Hammond organ sound, the result being an amalgam of every British youth culture film of the mid to late '60s — three piece suits smoke hash and kiss topless blonde haired chicks in weird scenes from the tin mine.

★ Head People Eater, John Blank, preaches prose like "We're here to stimulate your imaginations, not fill them." Heavy! Vacant looks are the order of the day, while the idling dancing and go-go girls are everything you might expect from a generation raised on old American sit-com re-runs. It's role playing, but then, isn't it always?

★ For the umpteenth time, John Blank informs that "This is for any Doors fans out there... Let's groove it." Ignoring the fact that if we weren't Doors fans we'd be having a pretty grim time, as little else seemed to be on the menu. On the People Eaters through the Wild Things, Surrounds, Morticians or Fungus Boxes, the ghost of Jim Morrison haunts the proceedings.

★ During the grand finale on Children Of The Sun, the old Misunderstood, er, classic, J B goes total-freakout-frenzy, smashing his tambourine into matchsticks. Not quite the who, I know, but he's well into it.

★ "C'mon, let's groove, shake it baby," and so on. The cliché euphoric anthem into the night. It's a happy scene with plenty of willing and converted converts. Groups unashamed to admit the past without much contemporary justification.

★ The Merlin's Cave event is merely a side order to the main dish at the weekly Alice in Wonderland in Soho. But you've got to ask questions about the relevance of a scene that sticks like super glue to the sounds of 20 years ago. As the grins and skateboard gears are prizing, you've got to add to evolve to excitement not simply to read. It's all great fun and entertaining, but isn't that how they describe pub rock? Good on 'em.

New tape demos reviewed

TIP

This month's Tip Sheet is collated by dangerous Dave Henderson, after a brief flurry with TC Wall, Ripley and Johnny Eager (the listening panel). Each month we grade band's demo tapes and have a panel, or celebs, to give divine judgement. A&R men, DJs, press officers and general musos have done disservice to the column in the past, next month, John Peel will offer his wisdom. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Let's go . . .

INDESCENT are from Bristol (no address) with two gigs under their belt (attendances were 137 and 253, they inform us) and their recorded-at-home demo boasts five tracks from the four piece. They tried to bribe the panel with "a milk shake" for a good review, and, well, their tape is rather good. Yes, it's under developed and lacking a bit in confidence (especially in the vocal dept), but their churning guitar sound has some style.

5 6 4 5

THE CREATURE COMFORT (061 256 2919) threaten imminent assaults on London from their Manchester home. To prove that they've got an all-consuming knowledge of their fretboards, their tape offers a foray of blistering guitars on the kind of glam/pop that the Dolls would be proud of. They probably strut their stuff, and have a certain degree of potential in these biker-is-best days.

5 6 4 5

THE OUTSIDERS are from London (01-493 5961) and their lusciously titled Big Big Demo has five tracks of strummy pop that sound right up the big lads' streets. Yes, these boys have style and can write really good pop songs. This tape goes in a large paper bag to Go! Discs. Hitsville.

7 5 5 7

THE JUSTICE LEAGUE OF AMERICA (0734 422856) offer little in the way of information, but they have a nice graphic image on the box and a pretty big sound (incorporating synth and a demanding bass line on the first number). We couldn't think of anything it sounds particularly like, but if you can imagine Ian Curtis fronting Simple Minds, with song arrangements played like West Side Story meets Dragnet, then you're on the right lines. Best tape so far.

7 7 5 7

JOE LATIMER AND THE LOVE GARAGE are from Cornwall (26, Florence Terrace, Falmouth, Cornwall, to be precise) and play chirpy pop with a chiming guitar, and some tempting harmonies. The basic sound of the drummachine drags a little after a while, but there are good songs here. Voice-wise it's a little flat — on one level — but there's potential hereabouts.

3 4 3 4

IZIT (01 808 4549) are from North London and have a tuneful reggaeified keyboard thrust on their one track demo, I Shot The Deputy. Oh, come on mister big label, these lot sound ideal for frittering away a clothing allowance and getting on Top Of The Roxy. Actually this is quite a memorable little tune too, even if it's not that new. Now there's credibility for you. Eh?

8 8 7 8

izit a bird, izit a plane . . . izit tape of the month

SHEET

THE GEEKAIS (0743 64157) come in a box made for secret agent wallets and call their tape Open Channel Nine. A terrible name, right, but the music is well worth a listen. Past the valley of psyche-mod plagiarism, these chaps seem to hang onto The Monochrome Set's guitar style, and Hugh Cornwall's phrasing while offering a little pop posturing too. This is a concept piece that works with some dry humour, but it's difficult to see how it could be marketed. Enjoyable all the same.

7 6 8 6

ALL FOR MOTHER (01769 3739) are another enterprising outfit with a few London shows under their belt. Their four track tape has a big bolshy sound that revolves around a chunky guitar/bass. Topside there's some neat harmonies and vocal verses driving their songs into the near-commercial market. What's more, they've got their act together when it comes to sending out stuff to the media and A&R hods. Expect to hear a whole load more.

8 8 8 7

NIKOLA: EUGENE are another long haired be-shaded combo from Leicester (0533 701197) but there's a difference here. The sound, although slightly soiled due to obvious lack of production — and a little overuse of reverb in places — is more of a huge aftermath-of-rock noise, waiting for a money carrying patron. Expect a vinyl release soon and big improvements along the way.

Nikola: Eugene fashion this year's Leicester look

6 6 5 5

SHAKE APPEAL (08832 63809) appear to be from Oxon or thereabouts, consisting of five rebellious noise mongers, who specialise in going "who-oooooo" and letting their guitarist get the upper hand. Like MC5 with their shirts on fire, Shake Appeal have something to go for and sound like they could very well make it in a Shock! Horror! Exposé! type way. Loud, obnoxious and perfect for the late '80s.

6 5 3 6

The Thunder Flowers overawed at their review

THE THUNDER FLOWERS (0224 640089) recorded their two track cassette on 24 track and they'd like you to remember that (it's on the box). It shows too. The quality is impeccable, and although the musical direction from The Thunder Flowers isn't anything new, any budding A&R person busting a gut to sign a sub-U2, Then Jerico pop outfit need look no further. The songs fit here, the group's only real problem should be their sock colour and complexion.

7 8 4 7

AUDIO RESEARCH (04868 25227) have a C60 in a collage package adorned with many-a-phrase from the good guy's pretentious phrase book (like... On A Mission From God). Available for £2.99, it's hardly a demo, more a way of life as it industrially grinds into the psyche. Nothing new, but a good way to pass time on a long train journey.

3 4 3 0

ALL OVER THE PLACE are from somewhere called Herstmonceux in East Sussex (0323 832510) and have a neatly packaged two song tape accompanied by a very brief hand written note. Hardly enticing, but the music certainly makes up for that. Facts are difficult to grasp, but the harmonies of Vanessa and Tracey — over some plum strum and simple beat — are the main thing. Instant similarities would point to Marine Girls, but V and T have a little more melody and lipstick in their presentation. This is one of the most marketable groups so far.

7 6 5 8

If you want your tape reviewed and graded (remember two ex-Tip Sheeties have already signed major deals), then send them to The Tip Sheet, Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London, NW1

SHEND ON THE RUN

Confessions Of A Pop Icon Number Four: Picking A Band Name And Getting Your Pic Taken

One thing every combo needs in this world is promotion, not the extra sixpence Uncle Casper got after 82 years of loyal service, but the 'I'm over here behind this hedge and I'm bloody interesting' publicity machine.

FACT ONE: Pick a short name for fun and profit; otherwise, as with Curiosity Killed The Cat, your logo can only be emblazoned on long merchandise of dubious promotional value, such as curtains, javelins and bed linen. Also how many times has one seen 'Curiosity Kille...' sprayed on walls due to the artist's aerosol becoming extinct or his demise at the hands of the SAS graffiti snatch squads with death-spitting machine guns. Conversely Matt Whateverhisnameis of The The can get 200 scrawled vandalisations from one felt tip. This is known as having a 'shrewd Promo Head'.

Right, so you've got your moniker sorted. It's now time for the all important promotional photographs.

FACT TWO: Blurry grey smudges, pretending to be photographs individually processed by partially trained Youth Opportunity Interns at the Tru-print photographic penitentiary (plus the free dispensing wallet that conveniently jettisons your negatives onto the nearest wet gravel) are not appropriate. But we all know some lens-bedraggled chappie who can tell the difference between his f-stop and his elbow and will happily swap his usual bumble bees, derelict sheds and barbed wire montages for the glamour of show biz.

The next step is composition. For instance, if you are a heavy metal band stand with your legs apart next to a customised bulldozer. If you are a country and western band stand next to a drunk, truck driving divorcee, or wear a cowboy hat. If you are The Thompson Twins stand next to a dog's bottom.

Next proppy is your eyes. Looking in different directions, as though you've lost your football, is still popular; or you can peer into the camera with an I'm-standing-in-an-empty-room-and-it's-a-bit-of-a-labyrinth, piercing glare.

Another not very useful hint, in case one of your group be shorter than his compatriots, is that The London L-R Yellow Pages compensates for those vital inches and can also be used to find a real photographer when your budding Beaton buggers it all up.

"O.K. we've done the photos, but what about the other forms of promotion we've heard of, such as, badges, T-shirts, pillow cases, small bags of white powder, nylon scarves and sexual favours."

Sorry, but of this, I know nothing.

Milkmen: dead good, pal!

Who's Bucky Fellini? The Dead Milkmen know who!

They kick off their new album, Bucky Fellini, with the ringing chant from The Sweet's Ballroom Blitz! They write songs with titles like The Thing That Only Eats Hippies, (Theme From) Blood Orgy Of The Atomic Fern and I Am The Walrus! They call themselves Rodney Anonymous, Dave Blood, Joe Jack Talcum and Dean Clean! They come from California! Hacks have called them "scruff-rock" and "snot-rock!" I will love them evermore for penning "hanging out in the commode/listening to Depeche Mode/You look like some kind of toad/why are you a moron?"

■ "First of all," whines Dave Blood, "I wanna clear something up, that although we've been called the young snots of the year, we all carry handkerchieves. We have no problem with that. No stuff runs out of our noses."

■ And extracting the urine from whatever was within their grubby little hands, but especially trends, people, habits, bad habits and any kind of self-indulgence paraded by 'rock stars'!

■ "It was out of boredom. We'd get together every Saturday and play for six hours. If you want the attitude angle, it's just that we don't take anything seriously, including ourselves."

■ "We called the album Bucky Fellini because it's got that art-faggoty title, y'know, real arty people are going to play it by mistake, like, 'these guys must be soooooo depressed.'"

■ Aren't you just jealous of all those real musicians who have good tunes and a good image?

■ Rodney: "We were considering buying Sonny & Cher's old image..."

■ Dean: "But Bimbok 3 got it first!"

■ You can get Bucky Fellini, Eat Your Paisley and Big Lizard In My Backyard on Enigma Records.

■ Meanwhile, The Dead Milkmen's greatest influences are The Power & The Glory by Graeme Greene, Bob Dylan, The Beatles, art, late night TV, and beach party and horror films, "anything where the monster eats a girl on the beach."

CLOUDBUSTING Sprung Aus Den Wolken

(Jump Out Of The Clouds)

Sprung Aus Den Wolken have been doing this and that for some time in the shadow of the Berlin wall. Tie ins with Ein-sturzende Neubauten and other Berlin luminaries led to several releases, the most recent of which is The Story Of Electricity on the French Disques De Soleil label.

■ Consisting of two brothers, Peter and Kik, Sprung have just penned a deal with UK label Cat And Mouse for a new album, but endlessly releasing plastic anthems is far from what they're about.

■ "It's all a master plan," claims Peter, "it lasts seven years and the Electricity EP was one year in. We're trying to prove that things can happen, that people can express themselves. No-one wanted to release Electricity but when it was released it got really good reviews."

■ So what's at the end of the masterplan?

■ "I don't know, we're open minded about things, what we're documenting here is our progress, our lives. We have to work to get money to record, we film ourselves working. That becomes a film. We use our environment to create our backdrop."

■ And what's the title of this masterplan? What does it all hang on?

■ "It's Brand New Planet. Because this planet is full, and wrong. We need a brand new planet, a better place. Through creativity we want to prove that people don't have to step back from their own imagination. They can use it."

■ Peter expects there to be two more Sprung albums next year, and the duo's hope is to work with Adrian Sherwood. Now that should really be something. Ripley

The Real Sounds Of Africa

Real Sounds live and infectious

One of the common attributes of shamans from Siberia to Java is the conquest of death, to die and come back from the dead, at least in ritualistic form. The Real Sounds, on stage, go through the same thing. The band all die and Mashura Nzou, the animal skinned dancer swishes them all back to life, in time for Kanyinda Coco the conga player to play a solo and a half, lying on his back, conga held on his legs dead-fly-wise.

■ The Real Sounds are Zaireans, normally resident in Zimbabwe, but based for the summer in Brighton. The show finishes with a football match; Tornados v. Dynamos, horn section in green shirts, guitarists in blue — the band is nearly large enough for two teams, but inevitably the score is 0-0 as there is no room on stage for goal posts.

■ Real Sounds are not politically motivated. Song content is more domestic as in the group's album title, Wende Zako, (You Must Leave), a marital reference rather than a political directive. Singer/spokesperson Ghaby expresses reservations on bands dabbling in politics. They are a jobbing band with an awareness of the relationship between the likeability of their music and the living they make. He expresses it as a balance between tradition and the need to work. Ghaby says there is more emphasis on melody in their music than many Zimbabwean bands. They have blended their native Zairean pop, which has something (roots) in common with Latin styles, and blended this with the Zimbabwean mbira based shona style.

■ Irrelevant academicism though, Real Sounds rhythm is just too hard to resist. They invite dancing through some kind of musical democracy and a contagious enthusiasm which gradually envelopes everyone leaving grinning barmen banging trays with bottles. John Lewis

HASSAN ERRAJI

● Something of the stuff blues legends were made of, alive and well and living in Shepherds Bush; The blind Hassan Erraji has played his way from Marrakesh (where he played his first gig on a homemade instrument, aged ten) playing a variety of Moroccan instruments and percussion. Two solo tapes are available and he can be seen playing in the UK solo or with his group, Arabesque. John Lewis

The Big fact

Bang! — Shock, Horror!

Yes, although many of you probably didn't even know that they had split up, Gun Club mainmen Jeffrey Lee Pierce and Kid Congo are back together, with a line up that is completed by Romi Mori on bass and Nick Sanderson on drums. Not only are they alive and kicking but they are about to unleash a brand new album, curiously entitled Mother Juno, and even more curiously produced by Cocteau Twin Robin Guthrie.

Tracking down Jeffrey Lee and the Kid was not too easy as they live a nomadic lifestyle, visiting various studios on different continents and living in different cities to each other. But your intrepid U2 reporter catches up with them just before they fly out to Portugal to get the low-down on the past few years, a trip that takes them from New York to London via Berlin, Tokyo, Amsterdam and most points in between.

So, you guys, what happened?

The Kid kicks off: "We just fell apart after spending a really long time together making the last record, and spending an even longer time touring for it. We got really sick of being together and doing the same thing, so we took a break. Of course when we split up, we all said we're never going to see each other ever again, but what do you expect when you're in a band?"

What about you, Jeffrey Lee?

"We were trying to branch out when we did the last album, the Las Vegas Story, but nobody quite understood it. We put so much into that record and the last tour that we really wanted to see some sort of response and instead we just got disenchanted. So we just split for a bit and now we just do it 'cos we like to do it and don't give a shit if anybody else likes it or they don't."

So what about the new LP and the choice of Robin Guthrie as producer?

Jeffrey Lee explains: "As far as I'm concerned, I'm really happy with it. The ballads have a little Cocteau touch to them which I wanted. That's why we chose Robin."

The Kid butts in: "We really admire their lush sound and he has a great ear."

Jeffrey Lee: "We needed him for the ballads because most producers of The Gun Club would do everything over the top and aggressive when that's not necessarily everything we want to do. When we get a slower number it's supposed to be a bit more ethereal, a thicker sound. What we were trying to do with the Las Vegas Story, which we had to fight to get anywhere near, he was going to know right off."

Kid: "He knows when we say we want something loud and aggressive. He understands that as well. It wouldn't be interesting if you didn't stick your head on the chopping block. Why bother doing something that you know would be safe?"

Admirable statements and even more so because they've gone with an independent, Red Rhino, when rumours has it that they had been offered vast sums of money by the majors.

So is this true, Jeffrey Lee?

"Nah, we'd have taken it! That story must have started because we got offers from Elektra and Geffen. But those people all speak the same language."

The Kid elucidates further: "This happened to us five years ago when we started getting offers. They come in and say you're really great, but let's get a session bass player, a session drummer and there's this Danish heavy metal producer who'll be great for you! Do this, do that and we'll make lots of money!"

Well, The Gun Club have always been as much about attitude as anything else but then Jeffrey Lee has some useful information on record companies' attitudes. "You always knew a liar 'cos they keep changing their story. Red Rhino's story never changed. We kept our part of the bargain and they kept theirs. In fact, when we brought back all those tapes from Berlin they couldn't believe it. Tony (K from Red Rhino) said, 'My God, you guys actually went and worked!'"

So back to the new LP, Mother Juno, which sees The Gun Club adding another string to their bow with an impressive, fuller sound and a haunting ballad or two. Well, Jeffrey Lee?

"I don't want to limit myself to one kind of thing. It's not necessary to carry on the Cramps/swamp/voodoo/ghoul/mad-psychobilly/blood dripping/trash horror/B-film stuff."

So succinctly put, eh?

"There was a hell of a lot of time invested only in The Gun Club and that's when things got tense and became unsatisfactory. Now that we spread around more, we use The Gun Club as a central station and as a result, we write a lot better songs."

So the assorted solo projects that all the members of the band are involved in are going to continue, an arrangement that the Kid firmly believes in as well. "We've never had to keep The Gun Club as our only band. It means we don't have to worry about merging that side of ourselves. I don't see why we can't have our cake and fing eat it!"

He certainly has a wonderful turn of phrase! Among other projects, they talk about Romi's band, in which she gets to realise her ambition to be a singer, as well as pondering about plans to form a blues/R&B unit, complete with horn section.

Above all they show a desire to turn up in the most unlikely places and insist that The Gun Club recording output will be more frequent from now on. In fact they are already talking about the possibility of a single and musing over producers for the next album, mentioning Steven Spielberg as a man they would like to work with. Certainly an interesting, if unlikely, idea!

Well, sod the over-analysing of the LP, except to say it's more manic tales from the edge, in typical, rivetting Gun Club style — so shoot on out and investigate for yourselves, it's been well worth the wait. Story by Dick 'One Handed' Mescal tv for the masses

Snub TV report by Martin Aston

As independent music faces a potential decline in radio exposure, and while The Tube has still to be replaced by a sympathetic TV show, so America has been given a new bi-weekly TV music programme, made in Britain, about the British independent music scene.

Called Snub, the show is presented by Brenda Kelly, editor of Britain's only independent music trade paper, The Catalogue, and co-produced by Kelly and Southern Studio's Peter Fowler.

The idea for Snub was first proposed to Kelly by an American who saw The Catalogue (before UG was published, bub!) who realised that here was a whole pile of information and music culture that America knew next to nothing about, and that wasn't being accessed on American TV.

"Snub was just a crazy idea that we didn't think would happen because none of us had any money and I'd never made a TV programme before," says Kelly. But Snub was in fact bought up without a pilot show even being made, purely on the strength of the idea, by Nightflights, the weekend programmers for USA Network, America's largest cable network.

And the initial results? "During the first shows, the ratings doubled," enthuses Kelly, "which is a sizeable jump. Everyone in America wants you to have everything short and snappy, because people are always channel hopping, but people stayed watching Snub because they couldn't believe it was actually on! On the West Coast, we had more viewers than NBC, ABC and CBS at the time the show went out.

"There's just so much dross on TV," Kelly frowns. "There's certainly room for something that tries to present music that's a bit harder and more challenging in an unconventional format." Aye, folks round these parts know that scene.

King Bambi sends a pic to his homeland or live in the studio (Snub will film a band if there's no video available, and they figure they're worth it) are (deep breath) Cookie Crew, Bambi Slam, World Domination Enterprises, Soup Dragons, Mark Stewart, The Very Things, Leather Nun, Hula, Fini Tribe, Phillip Boa, The Stupids, The Three Johns, Tackhead and many more of your cunning indie champions. "What we're trying to do," Kelly goes on to say, "is provide some sort of commentary on the independent scene — not in an overtly political way, but putting forward why there is an independent thing happening, without being obvious about how people are different."

Eight shows young, Snub are currently looking for international as well as British licensees. We could do a lot worse than having Snub hit our barren screens, that's for sure.

Meanwhile, contact Snub c/o Southern Studios at 10 Myddleton Road, London N22. "We want your videos!" Snub says, turning back to face the cameras.

World Dom hit America

Because Snub is made in London, it naturally reflects British independent music, although that's no hard and fast rule — Swans and Iceland's Sugar Cubes were on show four, while New Zealand's Chills are prominently featured on show seven. Already included on video Achwgha Ney Wodel have an enormously confusing, but ultimately rewarding project in progress through NIR (Box 244, London SE1 5AZ). Their box "thing" will contain three 45 rpm 12 inch records, 10 colour postcards and, in a limited edition of 1,000, the front of the box is made up of a part of one of ten huge paintings commissioned by ten different artists.

Punters requiring particular paintings on their box "thing" should write to NIR for the postcards, then they can select which one they want. And you thought making records was easy? Dave Henderson

SCANDAL AND stuff in the factory of Underground! Well, actually not quite, but did you know that Jah Wobble drives the trains on the Northern line? And there's a search going on, because For All And None (Box 87, Ilford, Essex) who release tapes and things (including a live Portion Control one recently), are looking for Save Us to contribute a track to an upcoming compilation.

Did you know that ex-Buzzcocks and Magazine person Howard Devoto has signed to Beggars Banquet, as have The Lorries who have reverted to calling themselves Red Lorry Yellow Lorry?

The Irregulars sent a miserable letter begging us to write about them, but they forgot to put their address on it so we can't.

The Drumsticks' Revenge Two is a 'zine with a well dodgy cover but it is packed with wholesome fodder inside. The ish includes things on The Wonder Stuff, The Sect, Dawn After Dark, Bambi Slam and it's all well written stuff — it's available from 9 Aspen Way, Newport, Shropshire TF10 JEE.

Product Inc's upcoming schedule includes releases like a Young Gods CD, a Last Few Days single, a Skin album and CD, plus a label compilation with things from Noad, World Domination Enterprises, Keith Allen, Viv Stan-shall and more. Oh yeah, lots of things from World Dom too, in every format imaginable.

Cheeky Sheffield combo The Warhols decided, since we didn't want to interview them, they'd contribute their own interview to Ug!, and here's a brief extract...

"When will we be hearing the new single?"

"It's all in the can, we recorded it in Plumstead."

Gripping stuff, eh? More next month.

And much more from Gary Numan. The guy everyone loves to be derogatory about has his back catalogue re-issued on CD, and pretty tasty it sounds too. Recent interviewers have been greeted by

fiction

Gal's more open and humoured front, including lines like: "I've had a hair transplant, you know." Wow!

Following the Bam Caruso label's subsidiary Disque Noir's debut into the filmic music market with the soundtrack to The Spy With The Platinum Heart, they're hoping to release soundtracks from The Billion Dollar Brain, Rosemary's Baby, Valley Of The Dolls and Beyond The Valley Of The Dolls, as well as music from Mission Impossible. There'll also be special projects featuring "sexy French people", and they'll include releases from Brightie Bardot, Francisco Hardy, Jaques Brel, as well as Serge Gainsbourg and Jane Birkin.

Just when you thought it was safe to do something or other, Karl Blake is back with a new line up for The Shock Headed Peters... and a new LP too. The Fear Engine is a half live and half studio album which will be on the Produkt Korps label through Red Rhino.

And you thought we wouldn't mention Wreckless Eric this issue? Well, he called the all-action-Ug desk, yes the one that keeps falling to bits, to tell us that he and Bian (ex The Men They Couldn't Hang) have just done a string of London dates at strange art school venues under the name of The Mystery Group. Aided by a 15-year-old drummer and with Shane Poguey McGowan as their roadie, their battered Transit hasn't been seen since.

If you've been lucky enough to get a free flexi in this issue, featuring The Video Nasties, Graham And The Mushrooms and Justice Multifury, you might like to know that all three will be at the Psychedelic Garage at the Clarendon in Hammersmith on December 11. Also playing are the Cannibals and punters will be lured in and offered freebies and souvies, too. Bargain time.

Oh, yes we were going to have an interview with Adi Newton this month. You know, tracing Cleek DVA and The Anti Group, but Martin Aston couldn't understand it all. Next month for sure, though!

Robert K Cohen's
Big Comment

Has anyone noticed

Melody Maker's recent resemblance to Smash Hits? I mean, we've always tolerated the pointless inanity of the Talk Talk Talk section, but now they're printing letters from 'David Sylvian's Pony-tail' and the like. Where will it all stop, I wonder? Maybe I'll ask 'Andy Rourke's Stash' in NME. Which takes us neatly to a tale of two Marrs. One, by the name of Johnny, has written a single with Bryan Ferry and joined The Pretenders. If this palaeontology (study of fossils) represents the great plans for which Johnny felt compelled to leave The Smiths, then the future looks bleak. The present, seems bright for M|A|R|R|S, however, who got to number one despite the alleged dirty tricks of Stock, Aitken and Waterman. Although SAW eventually dropped their injunction against Pump Up The Volume, they managed to squeeze 500 quid out of another group, Now The Party for daring to put the initials of the great triumvirate on the cover of their single, I Feel Good All Over. Stock, Aitken and Waterman are ample reason to name 1987 the Year of the Court Case. Or will it become the Year of the Blank Tape Tax? No. The government have aban-doned the idea, but I've no doubt that, like the hanging debate and Cilla Black, the issue will return to haunt us. But who can doubt they will call this the Year of Censorship? ★

after the fact

Victims of censorship, Jello B (above) and Big Black

Jello Biafra's defeat of the fascists in America was a very minor victory, considering the 65,000 dollar legal bill he's been stuck with — itself enough to frighten people into self-censorship. Indeed, That Petrol Emotion, who wear their politics on their record-sleeve, should beware of Virgin Records, to whom they've just signed. The retail department of the organisation has already banned the Dead Kennedys' Bedtime For Democracy album, not to mention Big Black's Songs About Fing. And talking (as we were) about democracy, October was the time the Official Secrets Act met the music industry, with the release of Leon Rosselson's Ballad Of A Spycatcher. Billy Bragg, guest guitarist, says the idea was "to test the extent of freedom of speech on the radio". This it did, for there was next to no airplay. Even so, it outsold its original pressing of 2,000 copies. As well as championing the cause of free speech, young Billy Bragg was to be seen, during the Brighton conference, playing a benefit for the Labour Committee On Ireland. That guy plays more benefits than Michael Jackson has hot face-lifts. I'm glad I mentioned this, actually, because 'Wacko Jacko', who owns the rights to numerous Beatles songs, refused to waive royalties for a recording of With A Little Help From My Friends in aid of muscular dystrophy. A spokesman from the music press said that there'd been a lot of these charity things, and "There comes a time when you have to draw the line".

I quite agree. I mean, if Michael Jackson carried on waiving royalties, he'd probably be broke in a million years.

ABSOLUTE ESSENTIALS FOR SUBVERSIVE LIVING

FILMING AGAINST THE TIDE

Derek Jarman continues his less than orthodox film career with The Last Of England (which opens this month). A tale filmed in Super 8 and transferred to 35mm, it features old Jarman family shorts intercut with new footage in a typically surreal tale. An integral part of the action is built around the music, and Mute Records will be releasing the soundtrack LP featuring contributions by Simon Turner, Diamanda Galas and Barry Adamson to coincide.

NOW LET'S JUST TALK CHROME!

Premonition Tapes, from the town that used to produce stainless steel and have two footie teams (er, Sheffield isn't it?), give us the pleasure of Psycho-Terrorist Weapon, a short tape loop reportedly used by the Atheist Militia as an instrument of torture. Hearing is believing, as the saying goes, so why not send £2.25 to Paul Mills, 69 Kangdon Street, Sheffield S11 8BH and the secret of eternal torture (?), or whatever, can be yours. Dave Potter

THE BIG BANG

Brighton's Instant Video label follow up their sporadically excellent Suck compilation video, after working on the Honey and Coco, Steel and Lovebomb singles, with a new package titled Timebomb. Featuring 60 minutes of variable eye-boggling visual delights, it's extremely entertaining, with the only reservation being that footage of cars going along roads is getting a little boring.

Camera cherubs for a day include Coco, Steel etc on a cutesy cut-up scratch called Don't Crash, an extract from World Domination's upcoming film featuring Hotsy Girl, a quite erotic outburst from Swans, Big Stick's bizarre Dragracing (a must), live footage of Test Dept, Bambi Siam's excellent Don't It Make You Feel and a vid of Laugh's Take Your Time, Yeah, which features some of the most talented dancing imaginable. It's a gem, and there's lots more of it too. Don't miss it; it's available through Red Rhino and the Cartel.

BLABZINE !!!!!!!!!!!!!

Have you noticed something? Fanzines are shrinking, they've all gone half size. Could be an EEC regulation, who knows? Anyway, seven of them were crammed into the Eurosize letterbox at Ug Mansions, and here's what they said!

THE COCA-COLA COWBOY issue three is 30p and features your standard Sonic Youth-are-pretty-strange interview plus things on The Boy Hairdressers among others. The most amazing thing is the centre page, which is full of lists of things that someone or other likes. Hmmm, good idea! It's from Scotland, from Paul B Henderson (no relation), 5 McAslin, Townhead, Glasgow.

TEXAS FEVER issue one is 30p from James at 5 Brookhouse Gardens, Highams Park, London E4 6LZ. There's enthusiasm and collage layouts in a riot of hard to read typing. I don't know what it's about but we laughed when we read it. That's good, isn't it?

PERTURBED issue four is just brilliant and it made some Ug people roll about the office and turn green. There's a million pages and it takes the piss out of everyone, with stupid songword parodies, bad competitions and good interviews. Get it from Peter at 14 Overlea Avenue, Acocks Green, Birmingham B27 7UN. It costs 50p.

ECHOING THE BUNNYMEN issue four is a little expensive at 50p plus sae. For some reason it's not all about the Bunnymen, and a lot of the Bunny bits are from other places. Not a quality affair but if you're an enthusiast try Peter Allen at 1a Shepherd Road, St Annes On Sea, Lancs.

SO NAIVE issue two is daft. It has a doodles page, an article called "a pervy look at Robert Smith", features on Rosehips, Talulah Gosh and some riotous graphics plus, yes-you-guessed, a flexi of Bubblegum Splash and the marvy Darling Buds. It's 50p from Mike at 39 Cromwell Road, Sprowston, Norwich NR7 8XH. FLORIAN BOHM AND CROSSED OUT CONVERSE issue one is different. At 30p plus sae from Brookfield, School Green Road, Freshwater, Isle Of Wight PO40 9AU, it's a mind blowing experience that mixes "art" that looks like it's been carved into a school desk, strange drawings, interviews, stuff on skateboarding and general strangeness. Worth a try.

NO CLASS issue 11 isn't A5, but folded in half so that we'd review it. Huh! Unfortunately there's something wrong with its quality control as it includes acts such as Screaming Abdabs and Mourblade, but there is an interesting Chumbawamba feature. From 37 Hodder Drive, Perivale, Middlesex UB6 8LL.

HELL HATH NO PAINTBRUSH!

Latest exhibition at Some Bizzare's gallery (166 New Cavendish Street, London W1) features the work of Val Denham who's done a sleeve or two for the label in the past. An optical treat, the exhibition runs till November 10, so get there, culture vultures!

gush

... an enthusiastic tirade
from Prince Muso

Are you still complaining? Maybe you're just reading all the music press and believing what you read about all these scenes that divide groups up. Did grebo exist as a scene before the press made it so? Was there a shambling club before the press said so? Even though C-86 wasn't that much cop, did every band really sound the same until the press said so?

Why are you still looking for loopholes? There you go, thinking everyone is a stealer when all music is a derivation or deviation of other musical languages ANYWAY, and that everyone EVER is betraying principles, attitudes, causes like it's some ROCK HOLY GRAIL.

JEEZ! I keep talking to these guys and hear these records and they seem to share the commitment and realise what's at stake. You might say, "BLIMEY WHERE HAVE ALL THE GOOD GROUPS GONE??" But have you thought, "BLIMEY GIVE ME A GOOD AUDIENCE" on behalf of the groups who fight out of pigeonholes all the way through interviews, supported by the like of YOU?
