OK, I'll list it for you. Recently (and I've mislaid my diary so this is as accurate as you'll get it) I heard Dinosaur, Hugo Largo, Yargo, Jah Wobble, Deighton Family, The Triffids, Lee Perry, Tuxedomoon, Close Lobsters, Abdel Aziz el Mubarak, 10,000 Maniacs, Bongwater, Mardin Hill, The Chills, Tom Waits, Blue Aeroplanes, They Might Be Giants, Momus, Thirteen Moons, Dead Can Dance, The Pixies, The Sugarcubes, Big Black, The Oyster Band, Spacemen 3, Band Of Susans, Palace Of Light, Eric B & Rakim, The Verlaines; I heard Whooping Cranes, The Crystal Set, Bleached Black, The Jean Paul Sartre Experience and The Mice on import, The Flux albums, John Cale, Gabby Puhinwi and five Creedence albums on re-release, and SIX Peel sessions, one Celtic music, one Debris and one free UG cassette on compilation. Naturally there is more, but lists are like bad records — they can go on forever. ● Then you hear these people talk. Even John Lydon, who you'd think might have dissolved in his own self-importance by now, turns up at an interview half-cut and, instead of conforming to the cynic-ridden irritant, reels off all these truths and why he can't shut up when he sees them: child abuse, city decay, Brit-country decay, Margaret Thatcher, nuclear insanity ("SAVE ME!" John screams . . .) PiL music could be nothing more than an arsewipe, but instead it tries hard. "At the moment, PiL music is pop — vicious pop. Hard pop. Full of drama and dynamics. It's not mean, I just pose questions. I would hope we're enjoyable too, Witty. Sarcastic. And serious. Thought-provoking. All at the same time."

So what if Johnny smoked all my Marlboros? I mean, I was impressed. Lydon could have given it all up and gone to Stock, Aitken & Waterman, men who turned down the opportunity to produce Gaye Bykers On Acid because "anyone calling themselves that don't take themselves seriously. We take ourselves seriously". And that from Pete Waterman, a man who thinks the most classic record he's been involved in is Bananarama's I Heard A Rumour? I'd much rather talk to Donny Osmond, which I did a fortnight ago, and even Donny was talking out against the PMRC censorship situation in America, and the freedom of expression that even his Mormon church can't control. Intelligence! Imagine what might have happened to PUPPY LOVE? People like Donny actually refresh you because they see their limitations and they also do a fair amount of hoping. I'd much rather spend my time with people like the Triffids' David McComb than the five who make up Lightening Strike, who say things like, "We're not musicians, we're a gang who just happen to have guitars over our shoulders." I mean, are these guys living on the same planet as me? This bluff and self-generated aura is what leads to the music press' 'GANG' scene pieces. Please. At least David McComb considers his work as following tradition and lets his narratives tell the story. Anyone who feels that "if I had to choose one type of music as the highest form of art created by man beyond Shakespeare and Chaucer, I'd say the girl-group sound," has got to have known PLEASURE in his born days! Now that's what I call ENTHUSIASM. "There's nothing else culturally, it's like something like Everest, some of that Phil Spector stuff," says David, getting his syntax in a tiz. Music does that to you, you know.

THE AMBASSADORS

Somewhere To Hide

Unicorn PHZA 12 NM C ● Shaky modernist sidetracks from this three piece whose vocal play offs never quite work. The thoughtful approach and slowed pace doesn't enhance things, the lack of power resulting in a microscopic examination of their many blemishes. There are some decent ideas here, but there isn't quite the style to turn it into hit material. And there's a novelty too as both sides feature the same five tracks. A strange idea, but a little half-baked all round. Johnny Eager

HEIDI BERRY

Creation CRELP 023

C ● ● 1/4. Cast in the mould of an already mature Marianne Faithfull or Nico, the fragile floating voice of Heidi Berry wafts across six songs that while thankful having no contemporary reference point, are polished and well-performed enough to sound distinctly late 1980s. The only weak song is in fact the opening Out Of My Hands, and once past that, Firefly is a collection of beautiful melodies, heavenly piano, and an often crisp rhythm section. Houses Made Of Wood is the high point, if only because it has the vital hook some of the other tracks lack. Not necessarily a star in the making, but let's hope this is just the beginning. Tony Fletcher

BLOOD ON THE SADDLE

Fresh Blood

New Rose ROSE 126 P ● ● ● YeeeeeeeeeeeeeeHar! Get gone and slap 'em till they bleed pardners 'cos here's where it's at; maximum cowboy country musick.

Bob Berg, Hermann and Annette rattle along at a stompingly fast pace on eight and mosey slower on two o' them than ten tracks. Check out the geetarin' on this — that guy's fingers are movin'! Heck, though, cousins, y'all should buy this jus' fer to hear Baptist Church Blues; it's a beeyoot! All in all this is sweet as a belly full o' moonshine an' that's rough! Yeeeeeah! Daz Igy meth

BLUE AEROPLANES

Spitting Out Miracles

Fire Records

P ● ● The Aeroplanes' Kerouac-comes-home-to-play mix of poetry, jazzy jives and infectious riffs never sounded so polished. This, their third LP, positively rings with Dire Straits-styled commerciality — why, lead crooner, Gerard even intones a little like Mr Knopfler — and they've got a wealth of material here to back up the promise. The added bonus (and something that is sure to satisfy their cult following) is that Gerard's scribbling lyrical wit wins out, against the instrumental backdrop, through its caustic, carefully constructed realism. Ah, rock with sentiments intact, that's good. Dave Henderson

R CAJUN AND THE Z Y DECO BROS

Pig Sticking In Arcadia

Discethnique FN1 LP01

R ● ● Well, you wanted something different, and this sure fits the bill. Brought out on Discathrique's new sister label, this is cajun music taken well and truly back to its roots and produced African style. Mixed by the Mad Professor and produced by C D Veitch, this basically takes Paul Simon's Graceland idea to its logical conclusion. Thus, the music is more effective than the diluted bayou bash usually parading under the name of cajun, while nicely demonstrating the common bond so many ethnic musics share. Forget red beans and rice, this is black eyed beans and mash — enjoy! Carole Linfield

Children

Mister HaHa Records (PO Box 51, W Islip, New York, 11795) ● 3/4 It's hard to work out just how a seven piece can come across so minimally, but it's Children's understatement that saves them from cute clichés. They live in an American pure pop world, sketched out on Blondie, The Cars and B-52's — twin girl vocals, pop-sequenced rhythm throbs, part beach party, part street corner hangout.

Children are aptly named, because they all they sing about are variations on boy/girl playgames — smitten, confused, made-up or dressed-down, which Children wear with an ironic glint in their eye. Well, it's not Sonic Youth. . . Martin Aston

CHRIS AND COSEY

Exotica

Play It Again Sam BIAS 69

RR C ● ● As with contemporaries Yello, Chris And Cosey are capable of compiling superb backing tracks in search of a song, but the lack of "tunes" and inspiring vocal performances in their respective repertoires inevitably hold both back.

Parts of Exotica will sound great in the clubs, while other tracks are perfect for those more reflective moments, but from being great British innovators (via the Germans) in the late '70s as half of Throbbing Gristle, Chris And Cosey now seem to have been caught up and overtaken by everybody else and their producer. Alex Bastedo

● ● ● MEGA A godhead uprising

● ● HOTSY Tasteful and tenacious

● TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish

DRAB No bullets, means no hope

THE CLOSE LOBSTERS

Foxheads Stalk The Land

Fire

P ● ● ● Anyone can write a good riff, a neat sequence of chords, and anyone can chime it right or jungle like mine. Anyone can approximate what makes all the other garage sound great. The 'indie' scene can manage all that sleepwalking but who's willing to ~~delude~~ delude like The Triffids, Go-Betweens and CHILLI men, and The Close Lobsters will now bring tears to your ears. They can ~~slap~~ slap, they can ~~trap~~ trap guitar-indie, but here are glorious, loping, searching songs, songs that have had ideas stretching them around.

Like Buzzcocks had songs during punk, so The Close Lobsters wipe away 99 per cent of all known 'indie' attempts to write songs. The dark horses have won the race. Martin Aston

DAMAGE

Lim Off The Board

B/Celuloid CBGB 1001 RTS ● ● It's safe to assume that the intent of Damage is to get close to the ~~sure~~ sure of real physical and mental harm than to any — what's the ~~damage~~ damage, ~~damn?~~ illogicalities. As the sleeve tells us, the experience of Damage is an ~~clearly~~ clearly aim to bring in a car accident, you can taste the metal. This ~~delusion~~ delusion is physically air-tight — a two-bass, two-guitar-nailed, suffocating ~~flail~~ flail of ~~metal~~ metal, brambsticks and rabid disgust; Majority Tyranny and Count Me ~~Not~~ Not are typical of Damage's sprayed message. Don't think too much about ~~the songs~~ the songs — just feel the damage, and bring along your own oxygen supply. Martin Aston

DAN

An Attitude Hits

All The Madmen MAD LP 009 C ● ● Yep, its thrashpop time again with this, the second album from ~~Darlington's~~ Darlington's darlings of dynamite demolition work, DAN. It's not ~~exactly~~ exactly a marked departure into original aural landscapes but compensation comes in the form of bags of energy and the brilliant voice of Jools, who somehow manages to make the bum notes sound not only okay but vital. There's a certain childish charm underlying all the punky noise that gives this band that little bit of something special; once upon a time... are you moshing comfortably children? Daz Igy meth

DEATH IN JUNE

Brown Book

NER BAD VC 11

RT ● 7/8 Death In June's floating ambience and wantonly oblique posture has provided some moving and provocative music in the past, and the trend looks likely to continue. They've become more lyrically intense, more structured, and musically more palatable. In terms of immediate accessibility, though, Death In June appear to display a few tattered edges on Brown Book, as they try to steal into the front parlour in a pin stripe. Brown Book lacks that convincing finishing nail, but it keeps you on the edge of your chair in a kind of uncomfortable manner. Ripley

FELT

Gold Mine Trash

Cherry Red B-Red 79 P ● ● 1/2 Not as definitive as Cherry Red claim, Gold Mine Trash, as compiler Lawrence said, wasn't his idea of the best of Felt but a concise introduction to the 'accessible' side of one of Britain's most elusive post-punk enigmas while they were on C-Red (1980-85) before signing to Creation. Consequently, there's nothing from Felt's first pair of crystalline and mostly instrumental albums, but all the seven inch singles — Something Sends Me To Sleep, Penelope Tree and Trails Of Colour Dissolve (actually a B-side) are included. Felt's guitar-tingling introversion grows bolder and more effervescent with the two tracks from The Strange Idols Pattern and the three from Ignite The Seven Cannons (one song from each is represented here as an original demo version), the latter supplying Primitive Painters, still Felt's most ecstatic perfect moment. Martin Aston

FOC

Northwest Skyline

MCM Records LP 010 RR C ● A disappointing LP debut from Steve Diggle's trio. The shadow of his former group — Buzzcocks — still hangs over FOC, and despite the ten years between then and now, Steve has not moved far enough away from the chainsaw guitars and neurotic-boy-outsider ethic to establish an identity of his own. One song — Just Like Mr Trendy Said — opens just as Love You More once did, and without a co-writer to bounce off, the songs become little more than one-dimensional power punk cast offs.

I really wanted to like this album, but it's hard to see it appealing much beyond old Buzzcocks diehards. Julian Henry

FOLK DEVILS

Goodnight Irony

Situation 2 Situp 19 P ●● A retrospective collection of Devils singles 1984-85 plus three previously unavailable courtesy of their new label. The Beggars camp will probably be an ideal home for a band thriving on the dirtier, more animalistic and repetitive downside of rock 'n' roll. The Doors, The Birthday Party and The Cure all get a frequent look-in, but it's The Fall that prove the most insistent influence, particularly on Evil Eye and Albino. All the indie hits are present — Hank Turns Blue, Beautiful Monster and the wonderfully-titled Brian Jones' Bastard Son. A good opportunity to catch up with a healthy back catalogue. But as Ian Lowery's umpteenth Folk Devils line-up gets ready for a fresh assault on the indie charts one can't help wondering... has their moment been and gone? Tony Fletcher

GAYE BYKERS ON ACID

Drill Your Own Hole

Virgin V 2478 ●●●

How strange and slightly fantastic the Bykers are. Now signed to Virgin they've put together a distinctly courageous album for their debut shot in long trouserland. On Drill Your Own Hole, they opt for effectively commercial melodies treated in a distinctly interesting and "different" manner. Those people who had them bracketed as a trite rock band can think again, for here the Bykers get closer to Pink Floyd, the Cabs playing punk and other hybrids that you'd never imagine. Gaye Bykers haven't bothered to stick to whatever formula the media created for them, instead they've foisted a whole new bag of faded washing to their flag pole. Classic stuff, and they're so young too. Dave Henderson

CLIVE GREGSON & CHRISTINE COLLISTER

Mischief

Special Delivery SPD 1010 NM C ●●½ There's something still stirring in the "folk" revival. Such a draggy phrase for sure, but this phenomenon could quite easily have ground to a halt were it not for the width of music involved. Gregson and Collister verge close to the John And Beverley Martin bittersweet ballad, fleshed out on more than one occasion by some neat guitar. The most effective tracks are when Christine Collister's soul is bared. Poetically invoking a middle ground blues between teen bedsit, major label chart potential and moody, mesmerising eloquence, making No Word Of A Lie on side two well worth getting into Mischief for. Dave Henderson

THE GUN CLUB

Mother Juno

Red Rhino RED84

RR C ●●● The Gun Club are back, almost sober, with Cocteau Twins' Robin Guthrie producing and a bunch of songs that are just excellent. Can it really be happening? Sure enough.

Mother Juno is probably the greatest move that The Gun Club could ever have made, fusing their rampant guitar-rock style to a more thoughtful set of arrangements. Each song has their former power, but now the key notes are given greater effect by the space that they're allowed to breathe in. Superb stuff. Johnny Eager

HAPPY FLOWERS

My Skin Covers My Body

Homestead HMS085

C ¾ This is a real promising blend of Sonic Youthisms and Big Black crunch, until... Mr Horribly-Charred Infant and Mr Anus begin to sing, or, er, scream. Then all of this clatter instantly turns into toilet music for toilet heads.

Jenny Tried To Kiss Me At Recess is the funniest joke a five year old would hear all year. Mom, I Gave The Cat Some Acid is the more sophisticated eleven year old humour. Actually, this band might have achieved the impossible: what it would sound like to throw up while yelling at Mom simultaneously. The joke's on you. Scott Murphy

CHARLES HAYWARD

Survive The Gesture

Ink Records INK 31

NM C ●¾ Hayward's past, when he lined up as one third of This Heat, produced a pretty noise and a cohesive percussive break. Now his rambling vocal lines — like old sea shanties — and distinctive drum patterns (he's well known for playing everything plus the kitchen sink) have been tempered through his time with Camberwell Now, and, gone solo for 40 minutes, he gets back into the excessiveness of folkie tinkling lullabies, producing the kind of albums that Robert Wyatt's self questioning times might have suited. Deep and distinctly original. Dave Henderson

ERIC HOKKANEN & THE OFFBEATS

Heartland HLP 002

R ●● This is hokum country that reeks of innocence and naivety in the way only pure country music can. These guys don't have any of that mutant undercurrent; this is pure and simple, the way mamma used to bake it. These guys talk about buddies and dimes, they play a mean fiddle, and they write tunes with names like I Hope I'm Asleep At My Funeral. Thus, the keynote is authenticity, and the price your pay for that is a lack of any real surprises. Still, plenty of unblemished melody for the aficionado, with a croonin' gem of a weeper in Yesterdays Are Haunting Me which'll bring a lump to the most stubble-ridden throat. Carole Linfield

THE LEATHER NUN

Force Of Habit

Wire WRCD 08

NM C ●●● All the hits (?) and more (15 tracks in all) from the dastardly Swedes, providing a neat potted history of the decadent ones, that's for yuppies only (it's only out on CD, folks!). If you need any convincing that these guys can produce gristle and sweat, wrap your lugs round this for a feast of aural delight. Don't let the hammerhead chords of Prime Mover or the infamous FFA blind you to their more esoteric talents, either; savour Jesus Came Driving Along and Desolation Avenue for the more flavoursome side of the Nun.

This little taster will also prove that there's more to them than the sexual nuances displayed with their cover of co-patriots Abba's Gimme Gimme Gimme (A Man After Midnight), too — and ably demonstrates that despite this occasional heavy handedness, these lot are a habit to be encouraged. Carole Linfield

MALCOLM'S INTERVIEW

Breakfast In Bedlam

Special Delivery SPD 1006

NM C ●● Folk or what? York-based quartet Malcolm's Interview may have some of the classic trappings of your average roots combo, but the sound they produce reaches much further than that. On Breakfast In Bedlam they straddle a selection of styles and introduce a commercial veneer to their truly melodic songs. A keenly assembled sound, they harmonise around Josephine Swiss's lead vocals and make the tracks stand up for themselves with added sprinkles of harmonica, accordion and keyboards. Pretty strange name, though. Dave Henderson

UNDERGROUND

PLATINUM HEART

THE BRIAN MARSHALL ORCHESTRA

The Spy With The Platinum Heart

Disques Noir BN 2001 RC ●● Do we take this with a large pinch of salt? Supposedly the long-lost soundtrack to 1967's drug-influenced 'banned cult film' of the same name, the music itself sounds just that bit too hi-tech, the film stills adorning the sleeve just too studied to make the concept totally believable. But while that mystery remains, the music at the heart of the matter is as perfect a period piece as can be imagined. And it's not just John Barry rip-offs a la Wheelspin and Operation 'H' but a tailor-made Shirley Bassey titles sequence Masquerade and dance floor numbers like Frisco Disco and Tuxedo Tussle, all contributing to as rewarding experience.

Be it that long-lost soundtrack or a perfect pastiche, The Spy With The Platinum Heart won mine instantly. Tony Fletcher

SEXTON MING

Old Horse Of The Nation

Hangman HANG 6UP

RC ●●¾ Mr Ming's first solo album, and pretty madcap it is too. Here we have one of life's true eccentrics establishing his role as God-like being through 13 maniac chants. All sung in a voice fit to grate carrots over a guitar that sometimes plays in tune, Old Horse is something of a drunken night out treat. Johnny Eager

MINIMAL COMPACT

The Figure One Cuts

Crammed Discs CRAM 055

NM C ●● Big in Benelux, Minimal Compact's fourth LP is good, but unlikely to win them many new friends on this side of the Channel.

There is plenty here to get your teeth into — side two's opener Piece Of Green is an immediate highlight — but although the songs are fine and the production is good, the overall feel does tend to get a little samey. Bass driven travelogue tales performed by independent bands with European accents have always gone down great guns on the Continent and lead ballooned in Britain — four albums in, I'm afraid I see no evidence that the situation will reverse for Minimal Concept. Alex Bastedo

THE NEW DAY

The New Day

Mourning Glory Records (13923 Old Village Lane, Sugarland, TX, USA)

●½ The New Day? Chuckleguffawyuckhawhaw. More like that-was-that-weekend-when-we-played-Faith-and-tripped-out-and-I-was-certain-I-was-Robert-Smith. Not for nothing is The New Day's record label called Mourning Glory. If you hallucinate alongside this, you'll agree that this is The Cure's Faith and that every track sounds like Primary or Inbetween Days. As echoing voices melt into phased guitars and keyboards climb the slippery walls, my head nails itself against the door. Another wonderful old Cure album for your pleasure. Martin Aston

PIETER NOOTEN AND MICHAEL BROOK

Sleeps With The Fishes

4AD CAD 710

C ●● This is an album that could have gone either way. I've never been solid with Clan Of Xymox and their rhythmic guitarpop, though they've begun to grow on me; however, I couldn't have foreseen their mainman Nooten battling it out with former Eno/Hassell sidekick Michael Brook. But here it is.

The result rings ambiently into oblivion at the hands of Brook's arrangements. Keyed into that drifting Eno-esque ambience, the proceedings are spiced with Nooten's vocals, but he plays it so downbeat that the mood sticks like a claustrophobic trenchcoat. Fact is though, there just isn't anyone around doing things of this grace and magnitude anymore — apart from, in places, Dead Can Dance. So this will do quite nicely thank you very much. Dave Henderson

PIXIES

Come On Pilgrim

4AD MAD 709

C ●●¾ This is a remarkable eight track set. There are so many good things that I can summon up from my favourite record collection to equate with Pixies' sound that Come On Pilgrim just begs to be inserted in the rack for posterity. Mixing all styles in an eclectic fusion, Pixies breathe deep in a huge open hallway that they've created all by themselves. There's a scary undertone but some keen pop, as sharp as you like, just begging to be played again and again. Social comment, witty lyrics, a bit of slang and a future talking point for sure. Excellent. Ripley

POPPI UK

Popée Ook

Dead Mans Curve DMC 018 RR C ●● Comes across like a mix of oddest Talking Heads, Noseflutes and Stump-like jerky quirkiness; but spazzing around the floor with a certain unpredictability all its own.

This is a collection of 'stuff' released over the last couple of years on the continent by these persons from Holland. Delving in we find maniac dancing and do the Disco Soweto, perform agit-pop gymnastics to Multi-Purpose Coffin and swing along to Great Man's Apes. Come on in, the head casserole is fine! Daz Igmeth

THE PRIMEVALS

Live A Little

New Rose ROSE 125 P ●● $\frac{2}{3}$ The Primevals' Scottish location, sub-psyche name and myth of insensitivity and loudness is soon dispelled on Live A Little, which totally disproves any such immoral branding that the group may have previously received. The Primevals play tortured pop instead, a flowing guitar overture lubricated with excellent vocal performances and some fine arrangements.

Live A Little is a more than worthy suggestion of The Primevals intent. Keep your eye on these people. Dave Henderson

PSYCHO

Hosebags From Hell

Manic Ears ACHE 009 Re C ●● Classic slice of American hardcore, from Boston band Psycho. If you thought that all metal/thrash/hardcore sounded the same then think again. Psycho inject new life into an old formula with brilliant arrangements, an ultra-tight rhythm section and the most dynamic guitar solos this side of Hendrix. Sadly, the vocalist follows the more traditional path of hardcore shouting, but occasionally develops his own style to good effect as on, strangely enough, the only cover version, a slightly rude Like A Virgin which closes the album. All in all, a highly recommended LP which proves that Boston has more to offer than just a silly sounding baseball team. Frank Pigg

PUMP

The Decoration Of The Duma Continues

Final Image Fib 3

RR C ●● The Pump duo took their musical training through a million home recorded cassettes as MFH. They dragged their ideas through a knowledgeable void and developed it in bigger studios. Now, some years later, their masterplan unfurls on this, their debut LP. A monstrous concoction, it has some funky beats beneath the affected, multi-layered music that boasts everything from trad to new age. But the really neat move was to wheel in chief executioner Karl Blake to intone the moody vocals on Lung. Fuelled with a manic guitar, the second side hits off at breakneck speed, while the vocal interludes and interruptions on the third track make all the difference in light and dark after the first side's intensity.

Almost a great album, almost unbearably hypnotic, Pump need more tools to colour with, but at least they're on the right canvas now. Dave Henderson

THE RAILWAY CHILDREN

Virgin US 7 90636-1

●●● A US import remixed by Ged Yeates, Re-union Wilderness now features eight tracks plus the bits from Brighter that appeared on Factory. So, if earlier in the year you missed out on the "up north schoolies" who were writing bittersweet pop, well, here's your second chance, with bonus bits too. A fine album already, it now boasts a few extra hi-tones and surely points to a mass acceptance by the middle of next year. Great pop! Ripley

RED JASPER

England's Green And Pleasant Land?

Vixen VIX 101

Re C ● Red Jasper play a neat line in pot belly rockerilla, tackily joining folk and rock in a brash chunky style. Sadly the production on this album lacks any kind of dynamism that this much-gigged outfit no doubt attain when they're trashing their tunes at Chesterfield's Old Etonian or Retford's Nasty Arms. Red Jasper's thumping folkisms probably go down a storm after seven pints of Dog's Bladder, but they don't do so well at home with a bottle of Cotes du Rhone. Ripley

HENRY ROLLINS/GORE

Live

Eksakt 034 Re C ●● A bizarre marriage made in hell. Ex-Black Flag man, Henry Rollins spins out on side one with his new band in a live situation, while on the reverse side, Gore blast the rafters live too. The strange thing is that Rollins sounds a little undressed without Black Flag's powerchord drive and direction, and Gore sound like they're just dying to be Black Flag circa the group's instrumental metal phase. It's a funny old world that needs a little push at times, now think what we'd have had if Euro's Gore had actually played live with Henry! Dave Henderson

ROOT BOY SLIM

Bedrock BED LP4

P ● $\frac{1}{2}$ Root Boy Slim will still be releasing albums when the bomb goes off and they'll still sound as timeless and authentically R&B as ever. Doused in bittersweet tales of wine-sodden unrequited love, Root Boy's sandpaper throat runs the classic tack and should enliven those late night hics. Johnny Eager

ROYAL CRESCENT MOB

Omerta

Moving Target MT 009 RT C ●● If Haircut 100 had wanted to be Gang Of Four and were good enough to manage it, then Ohio's Royal Crescent Mob might have thought, 'hey, who's been listening in?' This mob are just so damn funkadelic as well as commercially viable, throwing up rhythmic trampolines on which they bounce off some straight rock-soul but also more trickier 'No Wave' guitar dissonance. In other words, this is a bit of an intellectual if still organic rumble through the jungle of funk moves, moving in on the sound of Material and Bill Laswell. RCM can steam or relax, cruising on harmonies or harmonicas, but they always manage to get down. Join them. Martin Aston

RUBY BLUE

Glances Askances

Red Flame RF53

NM C ●●● Scotland's fast becoming synonymous with lyrically adept, melodious music, and this debut puts the Celtic Ruby Blue well into that elusive category. Rebecca Pidgeon's vocal is cool, esoteric and assured, aided and abetted as it is by Roger Fife's ripe talent. Somehow, I suspect there's a large range of influences brought to bear on this LP; personally I thought of Joni Mitchell, the Beatles (on The Quiet Mind), Clannad, Kate Bush... but particularly Peter Gabriel (imagine him singing Just Relax, especially).

It's rare and pleasing to find a group who solely rely on melody and make it work, and as such this one deserves to go all the way. And, if they can keep their eclecticism harnessed without stifling the infinite variety, they will. Carole Linfield

THE RUTS

Live And Loud

Link Records LINK LP013 ●● Described as an 'official bootleg', this collection of the latter day Ruts is unsurprisingly of dubious quality, yet clearly captures the raucous punk of the doomed foursome. Unlike many live LPs, the audience isn't too invasive and Malcolm Owen's abrasive vocal is audible, all of which goes to capture a band which is, in hindsight, steeped in sadness. Just as their career looked set to reach unprecedented heights, so Malc blew it on heroin, just too early to make him a legend, just too late to be a punk hero. Still, for those who remember them this is a fitting tribute, and includes their bids for posterity in Babylon's Burning and Jah Wars, not to mention an embarrassing rendition of Blue Suede Shoes. Carole Linfield

SALVATION

Diamonds Are Forever

Ediesta CALCLP 22 C ● Salvation, to be quite frank, would be to shout bollocks! There should be no confusion as to what this is; a poor man's Mission with poppy overtones and a voice even weaker than that of Wayne Missionary. Okay, to be fair, the playing is competent if not very good but this bunch need to stray from the well-trodden path a bit more, know what I mean? Use this record for anything other than stimulating your pleasure centres. Daz Igmeth

THE SCENE IS NOW

Total Jive

Shadowline SR0587 Achter de Hoofdwacht 7, 6711 VW Nijmegen, Netherlands) ●● $\frac{1}{3}$ Difficult to access at first, Total Jive starts to get the neurons firing only after three or four plays; the rock backbone being a base for many strange and unexpected out-growths which seem ugly at first; purpose becoming apparent through familiarity.

This, in fact, contains a few gems in the shape of Sartre's Acid Trip, 10-Day Space Shuttle Mission, A Man's Coconut and Kid Ory's Nightmare — great titles, huh? Well worth your time if you can spare it... go on, don't be shy... Daz Igmeth

SCREAMING TREES

Even If And Especially When

SST SST 132 P ●● $\frac{1}{4}$ Will SST sign up every band who follow the trail left behind by Husker Du and The Meat Puppets? Screaming Trees are another new world rock band who kick up dust storms instead of knocking back the free cocaine, who strike out in that taut, blustering guitar-swirl — H-Du, M-Pups, Dinosaur, the blurry end of REM. The Trees often use British garage-psychedelia, Merseybeat and West Coast signposts as cornerstones for their dense tussle, and there's the rub. The electric organ only calls for a more authentic '60s backwater. There are enough labels and signs to hang Screaming Trees on, but you might as well hang all those who are still going to love this attitude. Martin Aston

Boy, are things getting hot in this cupboard! All I've got at the moment are a coathanger and some more weird things to play. Crazy Backwards Alphabet are driving me insane. Why are these guys so intense? Their self-titled album (SST through Pinnacle) is a really claustrophobic nightmare with jazzy twists to screw your head up.

More airy is Peter de Havilland's Bois De Boulogne, a collection of intriguing instrumentals and chants on Venture through Virgin. First off it sounds like a harpsichord soundtrack to a Woody Allen film, then it's a concerto on blow pipes, then the piano comes out, echoing. Good one. Sadly Lester Bowie's attempts to be magnificent on Venture fail as his trumpet proves to be less than versatile. Similarly Michael O Sullivan's piano variations on Venture fail to really shift enough in variant timescapes (man).

The French label, Les Disques Du Soleil Et De L'Acier (BP 236, 54004 Nancy Cedex, France) have always been a source of interesting less-than-orthodox music and now seems like no time to stop. Following their Sprung Aus Den Wolken LP, they present a new album of short instrumental pieces from Pascal Comolade entitled Bel Canto. Drifting between affected romanticism and keyboard crescendo it's an awesome, almost frightening, listen.

Jan Sissala/Zixt Ess mble emanate from the same label and have an album out called Desert Islands Dusks. In parts it wavers between opera, melodrama and sleaze, but falls flat when it gets too jazzy à la Zappa.

Still in France, the wonderful DDAA release their long awaited Object DDAA, a groovy illustrated 12 inch package with a selection of exquisite tracks (crossing all manner of acoustic possibilities) and tracing their career of compilation commitments through the early '80s. When toffs in pin stripes reckon that Laurie Anderson is art and music personified, just let them take a listen to DDAA, then they'll really get to grips with and comprehensive catalogue of other releases, is available through Illusion Productions (15 rue Pierre Curie, 14120 Mondeville, France). Don't miss this one.

THE SERVICE

George's Duty Free Goulash

Pravda Records PR 3728 (3728 North Clark St, Chicago, ILL 60613, USA) ● 1/2 It's easy to see how you could fall head over heels for The Service. Their US strummer-in-the-summer rock, with archetypal gargled vocals and near pop stature, is charming, but they never quite did it for me. Perhaps the swinging guitar sound was just too sickly sweet, or these ears might not have been at one with their lyrical bent, but The Service, although enterprising and entertaining, aren't quite as essential as they'd like to be. Ripley

SISTER RAY

Random Violence

Resonance 33-8706 (Box 213, 1740 AE Schagen, The Netherlands) ● 1/4 Well, you'd guess that these Ohio guitar welders were a little Velvet Underground influenced, but they've certainly hidden it well if they are. Instead, their thrashing, churning sound is closer to a sub-psyche revolution that's spinning off at different angles. On Random Violence it's random direction time, as each track suggests a new angle or a different facade for the Ray boys. Not a classic, but suggestive of something good to come. Johnny Eager

SKINNY PUPPY

Cleanse, Fold And Manipulate

Netwerk NTL 30011 RR C ●● The Skinny Puppy image of death/gore/glam/terror/combat (you know, to put it in a nutshell), has saved them and their music, placing them in the upper echelons of the soon-to-be-popular-yet-again pseudo electronic movement. With Front 242, Portion Control, Nitzer Ebb, Cabaret Voltaire and many more of that ilk receiving a reasonable amount of interest for their fleshy but firm dance music, punctuated with tapes and loops, it's a good time for SP to re-introduce themselves, and this new LP is a regular tour-de-force.

Possibly the group's weakest area is the actual song structures, but they make sure that there is enough going on in there, in terms of cross-rhythms, to make the LP move and it all comes wrapped in state of the art "art". Nice one. TC Wall

SLAUGHTER JOE

All Around My Hobby Horses Head

Kaleidoscope Sound KSLP 003 RR C ● 1/2 Ahuh! This is such a difficult record. Slaughter Joe, house Creation producer, man of distinction in different pop sounds, has made an album. But, while totally listenable, enjoyable and quite charming, it has so many carbon copies — no, not interpretations, just copies — of the mid-'60s Byrds and Velvets sound, that it's unbelievably kitsch. The desired effect? Well, OK, there's not a lot of music originality here — sound performances and a good production perhaps — but this just isn't anything new. It's everything old.

Worse still, the closing cut, a cover of The Byrds' Wild Mountain Thyme shows the desperation of such a project. Nice LP, but why? Dave Henderson

Perfect Prescription

Glass GLALP 26 NM R ●● 1/2 Perfect Prescription finds the three space cadets... sorry, men, indulging in a trip of a lifetime that seems to have used Lou Reed's Street Hassle epic as a springboard to flight. Their dense throb of psychedelia initially comes on like a young, dwarfish Hawkwind, but with Ode To Street Hassle, Spaceman 3 settle down with Reed/The Velvets' trance-drone of bowed violins, sad guitars and drifting, dislocated voices and tempos. Like The Shamen, Spaceman 3 inject their own idiosyncratic serum into the psychedelic host, keeping it valid. Waiter, there's a microdot in my soup... Martin Aston

SOFT TOILET PAPER AND LOCKS ON THE BOG DOOR TOUR 21st Oct - 8th Nov

SPERMBIRDS

Something To Prove

Manic Ears ACHE 007 RC German hardcore outfit with a supposedly ex-GI vocalist, whose lyrics reach new heights of subtlety and taste with one song I'm Gonna Come All Over Your Face. The music only occasionally stumbles out of mundane thrash with the band briefly mimicking jazz and funk on a couple of intros. It's all about as shocking and predictable as a new Five Star album. Re-enlist now! Frank Pigg

SURFIN' LUNGS

The Biggest Wave

Beat Int BEAT 1

RC ● 7/8 An old style 12 track album from the Lungs, whose manic desire is to cling to Beach Boys harmonies and live out tuneful love on the beach charades. They're a lovable crew all the same, and The Biggest Wave survives the nasty tidal scourge of bad vibes (man) by being cutesy and quite well played. Better still, the Lungs are capable of writing some quite powerful tunes. Johnny Eager

MARK T AND THE BRICKBATS

From Middle East to Mid West

Waterfront Records WF034 RC ●● A truly cosmopolitan record. This is the second Brickbats album and it continues in the style of Johnny There, which first launched the band's eclectic initiative almost two years ago. By taking their musical sources from literally everywhere and applying a sparse recording technique, the band have come up with an LP that defies description, other than 'pretty weird'. This will be a strong cult seller as there are enough fringe jazzers and folkies mooching around to keep a slap-happy outfit like the Brickbats in lentils and cabbage soup for another year or so. Julian Henry

Guitar Guitar

Shanghai HAI 110 C ● Guys who are in it for love, not money? Well, let's just hope that East Anglian five piece 32/20 aren't hoping to be the next D Straits or George Thorogood, and they're just working this bristle-strewn bar room sound out of their system. As a rousing pub rock outfit, with more than a hint of cowpoke slide guitar, they're probably ideal to knock back a few lagers to, but the songs here aren't strong enough, and their tunnelvision clasp to their influences never allows them to pull all the right punches. Dave Henderson

LES THUGS

Electric Troubles

Vinyl Solution SOL 5

P ●● 1/2 Forget about The Ramones' last set — if you want some real, leathery-smelling rock 'n' roll stuff, strictly brought up to '87 standards, then you can only go for Les Thugs. That's 'Les' as in France, and 'Thugs' as in a French group getting mean, threatening and vicious on vinyl.

Electric Troubles is worked out to a tee — riffs run like sleek electric trains, carrying a cargo of open-gob harmonies and guitar-breaks as merciless as they are brief. Les Thugs sing about Dead Dreams, Legal Frugs and Bad News From The Heart; all wonderfully thuggish at heart, but all sentiments that get buried under the relentless charge of their streamlined runaway express. Martin Aston

Demon FIEND 97 P ●● 1/4 There's something haunting about Treat Her Right. From the front cover painting of a cheating wife about to be caught red handed, through to the wood veneer and stamped back cover. Once inside the mood stays as this Cambridge, Mass four piece wander down a dusty trail, kept in check by a darting harmonica and some bluesy, downbeat, playing. Treat Her Right make the most of the leaving-things-out-to-make-them-count adage and should be crying all the way to the bank. Dave Henderson

THE TRUFFAUTS

Fanny

Sputnik PUT 3 RC ●● More frisky power-pop, this time spun out by these Francois Truffaut-fixed West Germans who sing in melancholic English. Well, whatever next? The Truffauts sound teen-naive and peachy-keen, pulling on those buzzing '60s beatpop feelings and those close harmonies. A possibly helpful comparison, already made by Pop Noise magazine, are The Church and their earnest pop classicism. On occasions, The Truffauts almost slip into a new-wave mod groove, but never go the whole hog. Martin Aston

THE UNCLAIMED

Resonance 33-8707 (Box 213, 1740 AE Schegen, The Netherlands)

●● This kind of tinny pop — held together with masking tape and enthusiasm — from LA's The Unclaimed, comes perfectly packaged in a superbly tacky sleeve with hazy freak-out graphics. The essential parallels of Music Machine, Seeds and Count Five are scrawled on the jacket and the noise emanating from the groove is something akin to twee pop ready for a '60s beat film. Shake! Johnny Eager

VARIOUS

The Bride

Crash Records (305 Swanston Street, Melbourne, Australia) ●● There's something almost comatose about some of the things that waddle up from down under. White Cross aren't an upfront onslaught, a powerhouse of noise or any such infection, yet instead they're a harmonious whirlpool that kind of attracts your attention while remaining in the background. Like all good stormy relationships, White Cross creep up on your blind side and catch you whistling tunes from their latest. There are rock clichés thrown to the frets and strummed invocations running amok, and, rest assured, White Cross look suitably austere and bedraggled on the sleeve of this LP. Intoxicating and at once refreshing too. Dave Henderson

Concrete CPRODLP 002

P ●● The dedicated among you will have no real need for this album, filled as it is with names-to-drop rather than totally out of the air artists. However, all ten tracks here are specially remixed or commissioned, thus enticing the more diligent of you to purchase.

You won't be disappointed, either. Among others, there's Chakk, Stump, The Dave Howard Singers (with the LP's prime cut, Yon Yohnson III), Por-nosect and even the seminal Cabs, with the previously unreleased (It sez here) Doom Zoom. Pleasantest surprise is Quando Quango's Lowrider, produced by 400 Blows, which delivers a light 'n' fluffy rendition of the much covered War opus.

Buy it for uneducated kid siblings, at least. Carole Linfield

Head Over Ears

Play Hard DEC 007

RR C ●● 1/2 An LP compiled by Debris magazine, which has been published since December 1983.

All eleven tracks are exclusive to Debris, taking in live Fall (US, '80s, '90s) and Big Black (Dead Billy) and studio Railway Children, A House, Twang, Prince Kool, TOT, King Of The Slums and vinyl debuts from Kit and Swivel Hips. The choice of music avoids any typecasting of what independent music might now stand for (the jangle is at a minimum), and the fact that Debris don't just dangle the big names for their own self-promotion makes all the difference. All this and a 48 page issue in a gatefold sleeve. Martin Aston

Indie Top 20. Volume 2

Band of Joy Music TT 02 RR C ● 1/2 Wow! What an inspiring collection of independent musical sounds; there's jangle pop, a little bit of rap, jangle pop, some rocky stuff, jangle pop and even some pop that's a bit jangly. Don't you just love drippy vocals and slushy music to death? So does this record! About 70 per cent treacle rock with a few detours thrown in is not my idea of a top twenty record so. But these are the records that charted. So you've probably got most of these tracks anyway. Daz Izymeth

In Tape IT 47

RR C ● 3/4 The history of primal In Tape, wrapped up and made available for under four notes! What? Just 14 tracks here, some unreleased, and you get the idea that the In Tape bank balance should be moving in the right direction. Sadly no Terry And Gerry, but there are 14 acts who all deserve mentions for one reason or another. The classically wonderful Yeah Yeah Noh stand pug-nosed above the rest, but Janitors, Membranes, June Brides and Gaye Bykers can't be ignored. Add to that The Weeds and Heart Throbs, plus the ever pushy Creepers, and it's a queasy equation that doesn't mix, but produces some interesting smells. TC Wall

Make Ready for Revelation

Bite Back BB! 04 C C ● 3/4 This is a remarkably good album for such a new label. Portsmouth's Bite Back present eight diverse acts who have more than a wodge of gold-dust in their sleepy eyes. Paul Groovy's '60s stylings are well impressive, the mighty Twelve 88 Cartel power through on a colossal wave of noise, while Steve Austin, Uncle Ian and Strange Men With Guns all manage to sparkle. Best of all must be The Cranes, because they sound so different from anything else. Add to all that the poppier side, with Radical Dance and The Bushables, and the Bite Back national flotation doesn't seem to be too much of a far off possibility. All for the price of a 12 inch... sample and behold. Dave Henderson

Music From The Dead Zone Two: USA

Dead Man's Curve DMCDZ 02 RR C ● 3/4 Dunno about the Dead Zone

bit but it's all pretty odd stuff. Of course, odd can mean both good and bad; as is effectively demonstrated on this latest DMC sampler.

Recommendable oddness is supplied by Corpses As Bedmates (atmospheric disturbance), Little Fyodor ("We're all dooomed"), For Against (quite nice, really), Smersh (screams and woohs), Psyclones/Schlafengarten (groovy and beaty), Boy Dirt Car (rocking strangeness) and The Haters (interestingly annoying). So then, what of the other five bands featured? How much do you like to be irritated? Daz Izymeth

VARIOUS

Perdurabo

Cathexis CABLA 2 RR C ●● A compilation album document featuring ten left-field outfits, each with their own quite unique reading of music, what matters, and group perspective. The acts themselves are each outspoken autobiographers, whose pencil-sketches of contemporary life are unquestionably awe-inspiring. Band Of Holy Joy's lyrical bent plays off remarkably against the slurpy slime-rock of La Muerte, while Attrition and The Legendary Pink Dots prove they've grown into powerful outfits, and A Primary Industry, Heads On Sticks and The Wolfgang Press all suggest that they'll be vital before long. Fine stuff. Dave Henderson

Sick Sick Sick

ID Records Nose 15 RR C ●● This album lives up to its name. Three groups are featured, Demented Are Go, Skitzo and The Coffin Nails, and the 15 songs included were recorded live at the Klub Foot in April of this year. A glance at the sleeve reveals the nature of what is contained in the grooves — a full blast, hell-for-leather, smash-and-grab psychobilly workout, with DAG coming out on top with a slightly more colourful repertoire, ie songs like Human Slug and Pervy In The Park. Regular visitors to the Klub Foot will find this album a rewarding purchase. Julian Henry

The Sound And The Fury

Big Store/EFA (Zeisigweg 2, 4355 Waltrop, West Germany) Never mind the Raw Cuts, here's The Sound And The Fury...! The young and striving Big Store label has put all its energy into releasing a sampler compiling uprising German guitar pop.

Well known bands like The Truffauts, Flowerpornoes, Broken Jug and Strangemen all take part. In addition, the rest of the 12 bands reach international standard. The Sound And The Fury therefore is a hopeful stock-taking — convincing me that the next Goldrush (after New Zealand) will take place somewhere between Hamburg and Munich. Jan Cux ●¾ What a long strange trip it's been. Please find enclosed eight dangerous subversives now plying their trade through an array of tantalising thought control methods. Some of them are old, some of them are new, and inside the stark sleeve there's a magazine about other sound terrorists who're vying for position on your psyche.

The glowing tributes go to Zoskia, who're heading into a dancefloor full of men with megaphones; the terminator visits Etant Donnes who solo on dentist drills. It's a weird mix between the accessible, the esoteric and the noisy that mainly succeeds. Ripley

Underground Resistance

Reaction Records UNREST 1 ● These kind of albums seem like a good idea in theory but inevitably fail to deliver. What we have is a collection of groups bound together for some slim regional reason (not musical), putting them all on one LP lets them have a folio of their work, but as a cohesive album or decent package — the sleeve is awful and there is nothing in the way of info about each act — it kind of falls down. I hate to sound totally down on the project because there are some good tracks/songs/bands featured, but there are a higher percentage who need to work a lot more on their chosen craft. Trying. Dave Henderson

WALKING SEEDS

Skullf

Probe 13 ●¾ The Seeds play hard, unearthed, powerdrill thug music. Skullf throbs and violently makes the needle skid across the grooves. The aggressive, throaty diatribes are further aided by an overload guitar sound that makes you wonder if the studio equipment was faulty when it was recorded. But hell, this is angry music that scalps the rind off cheese and discolours lager. Hard but fair, in a strange sort of way. Johnny Eager

THE WATER WALK

Water Walk

Netwerk NTL 30013 ●¾ A glint in the Netwerk chainmail as The Water Walk unleash another branch to the label's identity. Moody and atmospheric, the reverb rebounds neatly on all sides of this strummed pop opus. It's that dreaded word . . . hypnotic . . . that first comes to mind, but TWW live on to play another chord, turning in some sound songs along the way. Expressive and courageously trying new things, this is well packaged and well worth your attention. TC Wall

Freud 16 ARK 27

●¼ They are difficult to place, these Webcore people. Based half in Cornwall, half in London, mixing musical styles like they do residences, they manage to wiggle their toes in the bleached sand of Oxford Street while smashing bottles on a nuclear free landscape. Webcore peek through a crack in the door and it's difficult to make out whether they're hippy punkers, PIL outcasts or Hawkwind in suits. Disco dancers with elephant boots, they trounce the scratchy irreverence of jazz, scraping their fingers on rock's ugly face. Mixed up for sure, but banging the right dustbin lid and making a powerful din. Dave Henderson.

YUNG WU

Shore Leave

Rough Trade ROUGH 188 ● Pleasant day trips into Neil Young's faded denim pocket often end in plagiaristic headaches — well, so say the old soothsayer. But, not Yung Wu. Perhaps their intentions aren't as blatant and that's why this rolling strum thunders in with its head held high. A nostalgic look back for southern rebels, who've let their hair grow and still have the checked shirt in the closet. Yung Wu is an offshoot of The Feelies, the preppie/nerd garb is thrown to the wind, and there's emotion in those notions. Dave Henderson

THE ADVERTS Peel Session

Strange Fruit [P] Ah, magnificence! The Adverts perfectly summed up the real facet of punk's original purpose — the DIY amateur-hour of the music, the sublime way pop got bashed on the head by volume and simplicity, and the cartoonish glint in the eye. Bored Teenagers, One Chord Wonders and Gary Gilmore's Eyes — a holy punk trinity — are all included. MA

ALIEN SEX FIEND Here Cum

Germes Anagram [P] Yet another new single from the Fiends, this time leaving behind their dance orientated tape cut up soundtrack and opting for a similarly raucous sound, spiced with teeny drum machine, large slabs of guitar and various protruding noises, behind a ranting tale of germ warfare. Riveting. TC W

BABY A No Respect Specter

[P] Formerly Baby Amphetamine, this second single with its second hand steals, sucks. Listen to that Beastie album again girls! R

BAND OF SUSANS Blessing

And Curse Furthur

[RT] In line with other Blast Firsts (Furthur is a subsidiary), Band Of Susans (yup, there are three Sue's here) mould more blissful American guitar sculptures, hooked up to a murderous, nervous beat. There are guitars everywhere — all over the sleeve, and in the grooves (guitars are chasing each other's blue touch-paper) layered into a burning pyre on which smoulders four songs. Strawth! More 'New Wave' disco-nance. MA

MARTYN BATES The Look

Of Love Cherry Red [P] Ex-Eyeless crooner, Martyn Bates gets a headlock on this Bacharach/David chestnut, but it's all a little too slow, too down. Martyn sounds a little pleased off that "she's got the look" too. Not very romantic. R

BEHEST OF USHURA The

Savage New Birth [RES] Minimalistic croonalong that sees Joy Ushura tickling her tonsils over a Discult tin beat. There's something a little haunting and quite memorable about this monotone effort. Enticing and evocative. DH

BFG Higher Than Heaven

Attica [RE] A more pacey offering than their previous one, Western Skies, and not so bad at that. Still open to flak on the Sisters/Mission front but an identity is being formed and this is sure to please a few people somewhere. They aren't incapable of conjuring up an atmosphere and deserve a listen. DH

BIG STICK Crack Attack Buy

Our Records [RES] This is a frightening, and frighteningly good, record. Big Stick's Dragging on Blast First whetted a few appetites, and it shouldn't be too long before someone picks up this classis for UK release. Till then you'll have to raid the import stores to hear this breakheart rap and tape loop cut up, that can only be fully explained/enjoyed when you're holding it to a throbbing deck. The flipside features three tracks that sound like the feeling you get after reading chapter three of The Wasp Factory. Mean. DH

BLACK ALSATIAN

Something Intense

[P] The sound of swinging Rochdale, spiked with a harp-sichord, trudging under a brim-sichord bass, this is a downer that claws you into submission and begs more plays. Cool and annoying, their next step is the most important. Doors with no handles. R

BLAB HAPPY It's Turned

Out Nice Again Wisdom

(Wisdom, 39 Medway Street, Highfields, Leicester) Formerly raved about in the Tip Sheet, and following label interest from all over the shop, Blab Happy prove that there's more to Leicester than leather and lust with four embittered pop twangs laced with charm and individuality. Not a top notch production but a bargain for £1.50 including postage and a natty sticker. DH

BOB What A Performance

Sombrero [C] Bob possess some fine things — humour, lyrics that are funny without being wacky — and they're enjoyable to dance to as well. They should play Bob songs in public pools as I imagine you could come up with some pretty groovy synchronised swimming to them. I don't know if it's just because I'm in a good mood today but I'm tempted to say that there is genius at work here, furthermore, buy this record and blow those blues away. Celery in your lunchbox with a milk chocolate Penguin for afters isn't enough for a growing girl — you need a bit of Bob in your life! JD

THE BRILLIANT CORNERS

Delilah Sands SS20

[RE] The Corners push ever closer to the pop market and eventual radio playlisting with another remarkably chirpy tune. Davey Woodward's pen must be dribbling with poptones and, after the twee but assured Brian Rix single, Delilah Sands re-affirms just how potentially massive this group could be. JE

THE CARDIACS There's Too

Many Irons In The Fire

Alphabet [P] Yes, it's them again, ringing up, sending records, being arty and "wacky", all in the cause of earning a few quid. The Cardiacs' success totally baffles me, but their quirky art-school pop could easily match anyone from Deaf School to Split Enz, as they swerve into pop-jazz land. This group are gimmicky and they may just make it into the big cattle market. They're bloody annoying though. DH

THE CARETAKER RACE

Somewhere On Sea

Roustaabout [RE] A sticky 45 which offers four slabs of self-conscious crooning from the Race. A heartfelt affair which lacks something in depth and vocal elegance, leaving the group struggling to keep their plectrums active against a tide of janglers with sharper songs. DH

THE CORN DOLLIES Be Small

Again Medium Cool

[RE] The second single from The Corn Dollies sees them joining the much touted M Cool label (and remember we touted both label and group first, so there). And it's really a rather mega slice of stummed pop, with an edgy vocal line leading the Dollies through a perfect verse/chorus affair. Sweet. DH

CUD You're The Boss

Reception [RE] Sorry to use other yardsticks, but if The Three Johns were heavily taken with Joy Division, then the result might be CUD — witness the heavy, repetitive drive and the neurotic swaying rhythms. This also wins Most Muffled Production (topin of the year, but if anything, it helps solidify the mass of grim guitar and concrete drum patterns). A record that sticks to you like soot. MA

DEATH IN JUNE To Drown A

Rose NER [RE] Compelling ten inch three tracker from the revamped Death In June, with added ambience courtesy of ex-S Switchblader Rose McDowall, Coll's John Balance and several others. A floating, haunting melody with Rose's Pin-Prick vocal line teasing the acoustic strum and brass chorus. Exquisite. R

THE DESERT WOLVES Love

Scattered Lives Ugly Man

[RE] Perfect pop for hopeful romantics. The Wolves play dangerously vibrant music with a convincing zestful zeal all its own. Fine stuff. DH

THE DREAM SYNDICATE 50 In

A 25 Zone Big Time The Dream Syndicate's anthemic acid daze seems to have become a little more balanced on this new 45. Still in evidence is that lush guitar sound, those burning, heartbreak, vocals, but now it's tempered, building to an awesome climax. The second coming, no less. DH

DUSTDEVILS The Dropping Well Roueks RT C God, what a noise! What a grinding feedback-drenched splooge! The Dustdevils have their volume switches jammed on, they manage to get the microphone working half way through and make a jagged frenzy of a song along the way on the top side of this three-tracker, the rather clawing Mother Shipton. Have they no shame? Good! DE

ENGLAND UNDER SNOW Stupid September Opus RT C Swoon. Or rather SWOON, or even MELT like a snowflake. EUS are just two boys, with two acoustic guitars which sculpt angles, sparkles, and wistful pipe-dream lullabies, with the occasional accordion and string accompaniment. Soothing. MA

EXIT 13 Perfect Dream Squad Records RT C The Exits' third single is a likeable stab at what they call 'psychedelic folk'. It includes a painfully authentic Roger McGuinn guitar and some very paisley-flavoured lyrical content. In fact it'd be hard to imagine a more determined tribute to 1967. JH

THE FALL Hit The North Beggars Banquet The Fall follow up their chart hit, There's A Ghost In My House, with a self-penned stormer powered by a simple two chord thrust and that magnetic Mark E Smith drolltone. Not a radio play cert, but a disc filled with character and charisma, a throbbing electronic edge and an authentic bit of sloganeering. DH

FEAST OF FRIENDS Yesterdays Flame FOF (40 Bathurst Road, Winnersh, Berks) Nearly a populist comment disc, Feast Of Friends' debut struggles a little through production, but there's enough of interest on this chunky guitar singalong to get the adrenalin frothing. JE

FIELDS OF THE NEPHILIM Blue Water Situation Two RT C Cor! This is actually bloody good; forget the comparisons and let the guitars slice into your skin, allow the blood to be lapped up by the sandpapered vocals and submit to the crushing wheels of the driving beat; just move back, step outside yourself and groove! DE

KAREN FINLEY Tales Of Taboo Pow Wow Art International This is a puzzler. Originally released some time ago but withdrawn as being obscene, Tales Of Taboo is a heavy dance number put together by Finley (an NY performance artist who doesn't mince her words), ex-DAF person Robert Gori and Mark (I produced Madonna) Kamins. Hardcore in beat and storyline, it's nevertheless a fine record that makes D-D-D-Dominatrix sound like Vera Lynn. Grab it quick, if you can find it (we don't know where it's from), before the purists lock it up for good. DH

FLOWERPORNOS EP Scratch 'n' Sniff RT C Four track EP from this highly talented West German outfit whose jangle is much tinier than their songs deserve. Believed to be pop icons of the post-UK twangalong kind, The Flowerpornos, in fact, write much better songs than many of their British contemporaries. Excellent. DH

FRAZIER CHORUS Sloppy Heart 4AD RT C If we're talking RT C here, this is more a Factory record than a 4AD one, Frazier Chorus' beating heart thumping more in time with New Order's more introverted, romantic electro-pulse. But then again, FC are tree-lined by strings, clarinet, flute, and tropical percussion, and are made of much more pliable, loquacious stuff than New Order. All three tracks on this debut are no less than beautiful, incurably so, and not overkill in sight. DE

THE FRIENDLY FIRES Happier Than You Bug Records RT C More fine danceable pop music from Crawley's finest trio and biggest hope for the Nescafe charts, Five growers here on what a lot of people suppose New Order sound like — melodic, neat with a sharp production. The puss on the sleeve made me sneeze. JD

FRIENDS Far And Away Summerhouse RT C Inside Friends is a big band burating at the seams trying to get out of a little band's trousers. Pop with zest and sparkle, the occasional horn and a sing-a-long-a-jangle that's worth its weight in Smarties. JE

GREEN RIVER Dry As A Bone Sub-Pop RTS From the dark closets of yesteryear, Seattle's Green River drag out the Stooges and Hendrix's big bad metal-blues in a shower of guitar punk grunge. There's slow (PCC) and fast (Unwind) but it's all pretty threatening, loud and full of mean fire. MA

HOUSE OF LOVE Real Animal Creation RT C A frenetic but slightly too anaemic variation on the pure-1985 garage-punk beat; House Of Love have collared the adrenalin upsurge and ambience but have let the song get all misty-nostalgic. MA

THE HUNTERS CLUB Animal Lover Trash Can RT C Greasy splatoon rock with pimples on the frets. The Hunters Club play chunky cock rock that disappears under a riff too big for a man to drag his tonsils over. Still, that's rock (old style). JE

THE INCREDIBLE ZOMBIE ROCKERS Machine Stops Abstract RT C A trio made in hell (well, South London, actually) whose blurb reveals a yearning for Cream, Groundhogs and Motorhead. Wah! How untrendy, but just take a listen to the four cut on this EP and you'll not only see those thin parallels, you'll also hear one of the biggest sounds of the year. Potentially, The Incredible Zombie Rockers are the kick up the bum that irreverent musos have been deserving for some time. More strength to them, too. DH

JACKDAW WITH CROWBAR Sink! Sank! Sank! Ron Johnson RT C Another bizarre slice of 'fun' from Jackdaw, this time it's a little less structured than their debut demented disc, opting for a more formulated, lyrical approach. Still poetically and politically sound, it's a riot of fun and excitement. R

THE JACK RUBIES Lobster Idea RT C This is a pretty special single. Hot on the heels of the group's well received Be With You 45, Lobster underlines how good the Rubies are in both songwriting and delivery departments. Why, they even turn their hands to a rather oblique, but heartwarming, cover of America's Horse With No Name sloucher too. Classic cuts here. DH

JEANETTE Leo Survival RT C Some time ago Jeanette seemed destined for stardom through her dance orientated soulfulness, but it never seemed to happen. Instead Propaganda broke through — effecting the noble Euro-chin — now, though, Propaganda have been replaced by the rather shoddy Act and Jeanette is back with a new 45 that's gushingly enjoyable. Leo is a brave song set in modern times and powered by a drum machine. Jeanette's tickling throat shakes in all the right places and there's a song that begs to be heard. Eloquent. DH

THE JILTED BRIDES Bad Vibes Trash Can Records RT C Sort of gothic, sort of psychobilly rock... whatever the category it don't mean much. It's a goodie and that's the most important part. In fact, all four tracks here are si decento. Particularly Greed, which is flippin' wig-driftingly scrummy, and here's the main points of the news again; buy. Bye! DI

JOY DIVISION Peel Session Strange Fruit RT C Bernard Dicken on synth and guitar? JD In 1979 were at their peak of meshed melodic beauty and harshly fractured rhythms. Love Will Tear Us Apart and 24 Hours are especially overwhelming, full of drama, solitude, and Curtis' more elegiac despair. Sound Of Music and Colony are hardly much worse. Classics. MA

KILL DEVIL HILLS What Comes After Roustabout RT C If The Long Ryders could have stolen this melody, they would have — a fine stomp of a song with a country-rock underbelly, rous(t)ing chorus, grazing Gibson guitars and, uh, do I detect unnecessary American accents? Otherwise, fame comes after, if they can keep up the pace. MA

KREATOR Behind The Mirror Noise RT C German hardcore. Heavy riffing, shouted vocals and a 'Great wacky guitar solos of our time' entry. You either love it or hate it. Me, I love it. FP

THE LARKS All Or Nothing Girl Exaltation The Larks drop their pretensions and gunshields as they aim head on for Mike Smith's left hand. Pure pop with a reggae edge that might just break the charts, it's a musical step backwards if anything, that should keep them in haircuts for years. JE

THE LA'S Way Out Go! Discs Formerly raved about in Tip Sheet, The La's debut is more than justification for Go! boss Andy Mac's advance fee of four free Housemartins albums and a packet of cheese and onion crisps. A breathtaking ballad, a petit pop song and an art sleeve too. Great. DH

LAST PARTY Tree Shada

Idol Records IC Third single from Last Party, and a rippling bicep of pop irreverence it is too. Floating in on a sea of glistening guitars, this tune of "love and things" is pleasant enough and tonally succinct — as all anthemic tomes of troubled life should be. Still more strum than tunefulness, but on the right tracks. DH

LOWLIFE Eternity Road

Nightshift FFC Another giant step for Lowlife as the shroud of echoey experience begins to push their music forever uptown. Eternity Road suggests that it'll eventually lead them to a much wider audience as their reverberated obliqueness now seems to be coloured with much more in the way of human endeavour. Sharp and subtle — a confusing coupling, as ever. R

MCCARTHY The Well Of Loneliness September

RTIC Now The Smiths are no more, maybe once again, from the ranks of beautiful independence, the great listening public will find a band to cherish. And you won't go far wrong by putting McCarthy into this category — this single, their first away from Pink, is the filler for that gaping hole in your record collection. A record you will still be playing in three years' time. Discover McCarthy, because in the world of part time pop stars you won't find anything else as poignant as the happy well of loneliness. Natural yoghurt for sure! JD

THE MEKONS Hole In The Ground SIN/Cooking Vinyl

RRIC The northern madness continues in a dishevelled smuttily wrinkled country gaberline. Whisky in hand and tormented up-tempo roustabout in motion, The Mekons make sure that their legendary status will continue. DH

MIAOW The Code Factory

P This is a more complex approach for Miaow. Their unkempt untidiness was alarmingly embracing on their first two singles, but this new found "timing", added to a bigger, more far reaching set of sounds, makes for beautifully haunting music. A classic that just has to be played again and again. Superb. DH

THE MIGHTY WAH! Peel Session Strange Fruit

P God, what do you say? The first side is absolute prime time gargantuan Wah! stuff like Story Of The Blues and Better Scream, all anthems and hard guitars and peaks of spirit and nerve, and then side two is the tepid Weekends and the finked-out Yuh Learn. A game of two halves, I suppose. MA

MIRRORS OVER KIEV Take Me Down Imaginary

FFC Melodic and harmonious pop that spirals beneath a lacklustre, almost disappearing, vocal line. Still, it's quite nice all the same. JE

THE MONKEY RUN Waiting For A 409 Intense

RRIC The Mancunian Monkeys combine their first two singles, add a touch of an extra track and mix it all up into a new 12 inch shape. Showing off their pop bent, rampant guitar banging style, and general skills at writing catchy pop tunes, it all seems to make some sense. Expect more from here. JE

THE MORRISONS Storm

Playroom Discs RRIC After their hit flexi comes a four track, 12 inch EP. Dexterity, musicality, croonability and simplicity lyric-wise says The Morrisons will never be Orange Juice, but they're dead nice to listen to when you make breakfast. Easy listening with a spring in the heel. JD

NEW CHRISTS The Black Hole Citadel SIN (Import)

Machismatic, charismatic, cinematic... The New Christs' rock 'n' garage is about as new as Christ Himself, but it smoulders with style. Doors overtones swing in and out of a tightly wired R&B-stained surge. If rock had a colour code, The New Christs would be black and blue. MA

THE NEW YOU Whispering Down NY Records (Tel: 01-407

1932) A lulling smoocher featuring a luscious lead female vocal line, a xylophone played in someone's bedroom and a charming arrangement fit for a latter day Piaf. Music with sex and sexuality, humilily and style. R

NUMBER FOUR JOYSTREET Stephanie Golden Pathway

ReC This, a charmingly attractive 45 packaged in an extravagant fold out sleeve, is the latest Number Four Joystreet release from the obscure but perfectly formed G Pathway. Pert pop spruced up with cello, violin and guitars, it embraces a tactile female vocal line that makes you want to take the whole thing to bed with you. DH

THE PASTELS Comin' Through Glass

NMC Scotland's Industrious Pastels come up with another fine pop tune. Sparkling with tinkling Christmas bells and the threat of a huge orchestra bursting in, it should be blaring from radios as another marvellous English summer drowns in a torrent of rain. Ahhh. TC W

PJ PROBY Hardcore Savoy

Onomatopoeic (279 Deansgate, Manchester M3 4EW) PJ's career has been wracked in true rock 'n' roll scandal. The bump 'n' grind of real life gets laid bare and the latest chapter takes yet another dubious turn as he teams up with "Madonna" (?) for a lyrically suspicious sex romp, supposedly recreating the horny antics of Elvis and Priscilla Presley. Yes, get your kicks here, plenty of four letter words, guaranteed to be banned and a scratch dance beat too. Nice. R

THE RAINPALS A New Day

Rainpal EE C The Hollies revival starts here, and don't it just sound good to hear this kind of perfectly formed guitar pop? The Rainpals are a real group who write real songs and can sing them too. Great. DH

THE RAW HERBS Don't Bury Me Yet Medium Cool

RR C It's not easy for The Raw Herbs to follow such a smoochily infectious 45 as She's A Nurse, but they seem to have managed quite admirably on this evocative tour de force. It's that voice ringing in your ears that pulls the country-esque ambience through the hoop and makes it really work. . . it's just smart. DH

THE SAVOY KING COCAINE BAND Raw Power/The Liquidator Savoy Amoral (279 Deansgate, Manchester M3 4EW) Iggy's Raw Power plus The Liquidator are given the extended rock-hard knees-up cosmetic lift, all clattering concrete drums and electronic throbs with all the ambience of a dungeon. Both fit nicely in with Savoy's ongoing scheme to terrorise the good 'taste' of rock classics with the slur of defilement, parody, cynical sleaze, ordered chaos and 'bad' taste. MA

THE SCREAMING TREES

Asylum Native RR C Difficult for the Trees to follow their super-duper Iron Guru, but they can't give up now, can they? Asylum precedes their A Fracture In Time LP, and bodes well for the future, as it follows the same formula as Guru. Dance music fed through a rock synth and churned out like mince. Their best cuts are when they get past the vocal segues. TCW

FRANK SIDEBOTTOM

Timperley In Tape

RR C Frank's back! And on this dangerously groovy disc he offers several pastiches, in fine Pinky And Perky voice, including Vienna — which becomes Oh Timperley — Born In The USA (Timperley) and Pennsylvania 65000 (now Timperley 969 1909). Yes, strange is the word. JE

THE TRIFFIDS Peel Session

Strange Fruit P From 1985, The Triffids' admirable blend of the darker sides of country, blues and rock 'n' roll heartbeats, as witnessed in Life Of Crime, Chicken Killer and Lonely Stretch, works just as well in its more ramshackle, sawdust-spittle intimacy as it does with studio-money. A companion piece to the In The Pines album. MA

TWO BIG BOYS Monkeys

Bedrock/Big Boy C Two Big Boys play a slouchy romantic song or two, backed by a drum machine and something that sounds like a string quartet. Keenly arranged and produced, they deserve wide attention and acclaim for their daring at least. Sure, it's got pop written all the way through, but it's performed in such a unique way, you can't help but love it. Graceful. DH

THE VERY THINGS Let's Go

Out One Little Indian C The Things have come a long way since I saw them hazily thrash around at the ICA in their dressing gowns. The marvy Motortown single is now followed by a supremely produced opus which suggests that their film noir excesses are heading them towards a credible bridge of John Barry and ABC. . . and twice as sexy too. DH

WE FREE KINGS Still

Standing DDT EE C Frantic Clash groans over a fiddle-heavy throb that's more in line with rockability than folk. Real Celt rock with a spit and a swear. JE

WMTID Transfascist Rouska

RR C Rouska's role in the scheme of things gets a new dimension with this extra powerful pulsing opus from WMTID. A belligerent bustling rhythm with all its hands in the right pockets and its feet toe-tapping in synch. TCW

ROBERT WYATT Peel Session Strange Fruit

P From 1974, Wyatt was more absorbed with his post-paralysis shock and despair than the more political crie do coeur of his later Rough Trade recordings. Alifib and Sea Song are stunning, sad drifters, Soup Song is more uppity and mocking while his cover of I'm A Believer (once a hit!) is as wistful and ludicrous as ever. Everything here is invested with ideas out of jazz, poetry, surrealism and Wyatt's unique brainbox. Essential '70s history. MA

ZARJAZ The Inter Block Rock Kaleidoscope

RR C Zarjaz's past releases have seen them doing something akin to a string quartet or harp-sichord ensemble in sympathetic Clockwork Orange classicist mode, but now they've gone down into the subway to play terror games. The new Zarjaz play guitars and look like freaks from Rollerball. Making the sounds that Sputnik tried to, they're really rather good too. Like Bolan on a skateboard. R

21 UNDERGROUND

April 1977. Seventy badly dressed Mancunians wearily drag their Newcastle Brown bottles towards the crumbling wooden appendage which, through a heavily intoxicated vision, might pass for a stage. We are in a smelly shack known, for obvious reasons, as The Squat Club. As it is situated arrogantly adjacent to Manchester's plush and pretentious Contract Theatre, The Squat Club seems to be the perfect place for punks to gather.

Four males and one female lift themselves from the crowd and assemble on the stage. They look, with the exception of the female, like a Tarmac gang. Even in this slovenly environment, the band's dress sense seems stunningly drab. The music they begin to produce completes the scene. A clumsy rock base is topped by a tinkly and wildly out of tune keyboard. But there's something about that singer . . . something exquisitely menacing.

"THE PSYCHIATRISTS MUST BE KILLED" he spits, with charismatic menace. Instantly I forgive him for wearing the most horrendous pink silk shirt known to man. At the front of the crowd, three fanzine editors duck as the singers' mic stand swings dangerously close to their heads. It is probably at this point that they decide to interview the band called The Fall.

Four months later, Fall manager Kay Carroll yelps with delight as the song, called Psycho Mafia, spits fourth from the tiny Dansette on the mantelpiece. The surrounding flat is a vision of downmarket Bohemia. Sixties underground posters hug the walls, cigarette ends spill from the ashtrays and beer cans congregate by the feet of Mark E Smith. He smiles with a faint whiff of cynicism as John Peel's voice replaces his own embittered drawl. John Peel has just played his first Fall record. Nobody realises the significance of the occasion.

As we are in 1977, we must realise that the music press of the day, whilst being full of spirit and fire, is also full of rather embarrassing naivety. Tony Parsons and Julie Burchill, in search of a figurehead for their battle against the National Front, stumble across a bunch of antagonistic proles called The Fall at The Marquee. Impressed by the band's spirit, by their working class appearance and by their undiluted 'northernness', the deadly duo invite Smith and Carroll down to the NME offices. The idea is to attach the tag, 'The band who stand against the NF' to The Fall's shoulders, placing the band on the cover of the said organ. The idea is despicable. Furious at being seen as pawns in the NME's patronising little game, Smith and Carroll erupts and a huge argument is followed by Burchill running tearfully out of the office. Parsons, meanwhile, assures the offended pair that his intentions are honourable, that the scam is more than a mere ego trip. With timing that is, at best, unfortunate, Nick Kent pops his head round the door. "Tony," he states in excitable tones, "Are you coming? We are all having our pictures taken."

This isn't to be the first time The Fall refuse the chance of an NME cover story as a matter of principle. Needless to say, the band Parsons and Burchill regarded as the great working class hope, fails to receive a single mention in their diatribe of the times, The Boy Looked At Johnny.

Ten years later, Mark E Smith sits smugly in the Prestwich house he shares with his wife, Brix. He scans The Fall's discography with pride before handing me this impressive list. Substance indeed. My mind flashes back across the memories provided by the astonishing 20 singles and 12 albums. Remember The Buzzcocks pastiche, It's The New Thing? The totally dry Totally Wired which dented the top ten in New Zealand, or the hilarious football hymn, Kicker Conspiracy? No band has ever captured the absurdity of ordinary working class life as effectively as The Fall. Mark E Smith has consistently used the surrealism of his own back yard to colour his bizarre aural poetry.

Significantly, Mark and Brix's house is situated less than 100 yards from Smith's former primary school. He clearly still loves the area and literally dreads the day when his fame may elevate him, no doubt kicking and screaming, from his beloved ordinariness. Still, with the chart activity of their cover of R Dean Taylor's There's A Ghost In My House earlier this year, Smith was flirting with this possibility.

"The hit record did make things easier for us," he states philosophically. "Since then it's been better for us when we play. It is weird round here. The people are dead proud of The Fall. They are genuinely pleased for us which surprised me because, just prior to Ghost, I was dreading it. We do get kids standing outside the house, which I've always had to some extent but now it's nine or ten-year-olds which I don't really like."

There have been other breakthroughs this year. I, for one, never thought I'd see The Fall playing Reading, or, even worse, supporting the godawful U2.

"Reading was . . . well, I wouldn't like to be in that scene. It was really depressing to see 20,000 Quo fans all aged about 35 and all pissed out of their heads. There were about 3,000 people at the front to see us and 20,000 behind them throwing stuff. As far as U2 is concerned, I didn't want to play it. We actually played to do them a favour as the previous band dropped out, but the press attacked us for playing for the money. To feel the hatred from the U2 fans was great. I know U2 are all religious and we must have seemed like a bunch of Satanists to that crowd. They bombarded us but we didn't care, we could handle it. Incidentally, The Mission flopped after us, as they did at Reading . . . ha! Well, the idea was to play those big gigs and then stop playing until January."

However, in the midst of this gigless period – their first for nine years – The Fall have released a single. Called, rather aptly, Hit The North, it sees the band in a fiery hip hop mood. With a nod towards the scene that has replaced the northern soul phenomenon.

Hit The North aims to take Smith's subversive genius back onto the northern dancefloors. It's a noticeably attractive record: is it, I wonder, a play for a second hit? Smith shrugs before admitting, "Yeah, maybe. I don't see why not, there's nothing better up there."

Which is hardly the point, but never mind. There is another project at hand, a new record label which should see Smith delving into his extensive back catalogue.

The label will be called Cog Sinister Records Limited. The first release, on November 28, will be a compilation of Fall stuff from the Rough Trade period. I don't wish to exploit this, it's simply a way of letting people get hold of old Fall stuff. I have all the old Fall tapes stored upstairs and all the publishing rights. This stems back to the days when I used to rip contracts up. I just didn't believe in them which, I'm telling you, was insanity at the time. But now it's proved worth it, it was worth starving the band for."

Believe me. The Fall have endured their fair share of lean periods. Happily, although hardly encumbered by wealth, Mark and Brix are languishing in hard earned mild comforts. Brix slides home from an Adult Net practice session in her BMW as, get this, two leather Filofaxes sit conspicuously on the table.

Brix exudes ambition. A single minded, competitive and highly talented lady, she literally shakes with frustration at a minor set back. Apparently the present members of her spin off band The Adult Net (amazingly, Mike Joyce, Andy Rourke and Craig Gannon) have displayed a reluctance to go on tour with the unit. The conversation begins to drift towards the sordid demise of Joyce and Rourke's former house of employment, The Smiths. Not wishing to hear the gruesome details I drag Mark E Smith out and away in the general direction of the local off licence. Outside in the street a gang of repulsive 13 year olds search for ways of causing pointless trouble. Mark E Smith looks on with an uncharacteristic wistful air.

"I used to be just like them, causing trouble in the streets. I used to think it was really good."

He is openly proud of these kids and their unpretentious local sass. Unlike certain other Mancunian stars, Smith has not evolved into a paranoid tragedy. He has more sense than that. He is, quite uniquely unchanged.

Mick Middles puts it all in perspective

Mark E Smith transcends the pop paranoia! The Fall follow their Ghost with a throbbing anthem for the wastelands,

RE-REwind

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackages boasts some real gems. . .

AMERICAN BLUES

Do Their Thing

See For Miles SEE 99 Ch Texan rock with a blues chaser from the late '60s. American Blues featured Frank Beard and Dusty Hill, who later went on to be ZZ Top people. The album was originally released through a subsidiary of MCA, after the group had been seized from the Texas melee, but the reaction wasn't so hot and the band were soon dropped.

Quite unlike the Top-styled material you might expect, or even the rootsy blues their name suggests, Do Their Thing is a powerfully produced rock record that stands up much better, in hindsight, than many of their contemporaries. Well recommended and not just for ZZ Top fans. Dave Henderson

BONZO DOG BAND

Keynsham

Edsel XED 235 P According to Rolling Stone, this Bonzos album was their last fling at something, that didn't quite pay off. After the reasonable success with Urban Spaceman and all that stuff, the group's final fling at conceptual rock humour produced Keynsham — a kind of sleepy village story, narrated by Viv Stan-shall and illustrated by some of Neil Innes' wild tunes — punctuated with things like dentists drill solos. All in all, it's bizarre stuff that Python enthusiasts might like, Half Man Half Biscuit fans will say is close, but too dated, and I, Ludicrous fans will totally ignore. Good first time laughs though. Dave Henderson

CANNED HEAT

Livin' The Blues

See For Miles SEE 97 P From '68, this See For Miles re-issue features the better half of Canned Heat's third LP release — which was originally a double of the same name. Pretty confusing(?), but don't worry, for what we have here is some of the finest, and most innovative music that was being drummed up in the late '60s.

Canned Heat's "boogie" tag, never gets foresaken but there's more diversity to events and side one's classic cut, Going Up The Country still sounds as fresh and essential as ever. But, perhaps the most intriguing track is side two's 20-minute Parthenogenesis. An ever changing, swiftly drifting affair, it breaks into verse, instrumental break and distortion in the mould of, say, a film soundtrack, or the way in which The Doors intermingled influences and sounds on the title track of their Soft Parade LP. Classic stuff, indeed. Dave Henderson

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMEN

Yesterday And Today Volume 2

Fundamental SAVE 31

RR C More country/bluegrass classics (recorded between '62 and '71) recounted by The Country Gentlemen. Unique in their stylised delivery of the standards, the Gents offer a hybrid emotional squeal that the uninitiated might have only heard in terms of the Flying Burritos' latter day Rick Rogers-focused albums. Here it's for real though, as their working of This Land Is Your Land easily displays. Excellent fare that should impress country-hungry youths, seasoned campaigners and Byrds/Gene Clark/Dillards fans everywhere. Dave Henderson

Clay Records CLAY 26 P In the wake of America's blister-and-blood hardcore productions, Discharge's seriously underproduced punkoid thrashing harnesses half the power. But there's no denying the force, commitment or adrenalin punch in Discharge's epileptic anger, or the hoarse, acrid voice they provided for Britain's punk diehards. Yes, punk grew up and all their little sisters and brothers became new romantic lovers; 1980-86 tells of the storm before the calm — the fight to preserve a subcultural solidarity in the throes of adversity. Goodbye, Stoke-on-Trent, anyway. Martin Aston

FAIRPORT CONVENTION

Heyday

Hannibal Records HNBL 1329 Tracks culled from '68/'69, when Fairport Convention were putting together Unhalfbricking and being generally acclaimed. What we have here is a set of radio session, cuts that stray somewhere further afield than the Fairport's recognisable sound, even throwing in a wealth of truly original readings of other people's material including Gene Clark's heartfelt Tried So Hard, Leonard Cohen's downtrodden Suzanne — which somehow sounds uplifting here — and The Everly Brothers' Gone, Gone, Gone. A fine set that more than deserves your undivided attention even if they do occasionally drift into Radio 2-land. Dave Henderson

FOREST

Forest

Zap ZAP 2 RR C A curious re-release, this. Are Zap hoping that this rarity from 1969 might catch some of the downwind created by the present populism of folk, or are a million young minstrel fellows waiting for this evergreen set of songs? The "cutting edge" of folk '87 doesn't seem to have time for the winsome, whimsical serenading that Forest charmingly weave around their plucking of 12-strings, mandolins thrust against harmoniums, harpsichords and pipes. Forest can be lush and as fresh as a spring fair, with earnest triple-harmonies in tow, so they're worth a visit. And this long-deleted Harvest LP now provides the opportunity. Martin Aston

DOBIE GRAY

Sings For 'In' Crowders That Go 'Go-Go'

Kent KENT 071 [P] Doobie Gray's 1964 Crusader/Charger period of lost and rare sides made into a prime album that displays his gritty soul style, accompanied by his most potent backing brigade and that distinctive northern soul rhythm. Punched out with vibes and featuring the classic title cut plus the northern stomper Out On The Floor, among 14 tracks in all, it's a real treat to hear the less immediately locatable sides including the excellent Monkey Jerk and See You At The Go-Go. This is a great dance music collection that highlights the lack of innovation in a lot of latter day soul music. Dave Henderson

JEAN KNIGHT

Mr Big Stuff

Stax SXE 003 [P] Aha! Jean Knight's '71 Fantasy/Stax album with that classic title cut — and the original gross-out sleeve — gets a re-release, and you can just hear why all and sundry have tried to copy, or cut up, Jean's hit over the last year. That apart, the rest of this LP follows a similar funky-sho-'nuff line with wailing horns, throaty Knight vocals and that guitar rattle holding the rhythm down. There's not really another track of the stature of Big Stuff, but soulful shoes won't be offended by this package. Dave Henderson

20th Anniversary Release

Seal Records SLP 2 Yes, we all know what happened. The Nice were great circa their eponymously titled platter, then they went on to get boring and Keith Emerson emerged as part of ELP. But what of this, pre-nice Nice, when they were a four piece with Davy O'List, when they were more akin to Pink Floyd than throwing organs around a stage?

Well, the truth is it's not all that good. O'Listr seems to have been on a par with Syd Barrett, personality-wise, but his classical training never let him break free of the limitations, the only real positive stroke here being made on the instrumental cover of America, from West Side Story, which pointed the way to The Nice that were nice. Dave Henderson

SAVAGE REPUBLIC

Ceremonial

Fundamental SAVE 22 Prime time US music from a couple of years back. This is Savage Republic's second LP, with four tracks remixed, which boasts a growing of character and a development of playing style from these ingenious West Coasters. Ceremonial's instrumental sounds flow like a sea of polluted memories, spiced in places by vocal dribbles as each tiny piece of the group's make-up is washed clean. Savage Republic are a cultural art ensemble, aware of their surroundings as much as their musical routes, they make sounds to breathe in, creating vast chasms of fulfillment as mountainous regions explode. Phew! TC Wall

Angels With Dirty Faces — The Best Of Sham 69

Receiver Records RRLP104 With the current crop of thrash trendies trashing up the charts, the timely release of a Sham package puts the yobs of yore in a whole new context. While their anthemic stompalongs never had the ring of authenticity at the time (it was left to the Clash for that) and their politically controversial following (detested as it was by the band) always left something of a sour taste, now they seem almost ahead of their time. Nostalgia can also blunt the ridiculousness their somewhat simplistic lyrics, so that even the beery, football terrace mentality of 'Hurry Up Harry', 'Borstal Breakout' and 'If The Kids Are Unlited' (yes, they're all here) raises a smile. Lager top, anyone? Carole Linfield

'GUITAR BOOGIE'

Jumpin' Guitar

Zu Zazz RR 245 [Ch] This is a throbblingly full-sounding album considering the conditions under which it was recorded. Arthur recorded these tracks back in 1945, playing an unamplified guitar and managing to make his fingers do all the talking as he briskly whisks and rattles around and across his guitar. With jazzed specials like After You've Gone and Stompin' At The Savoy given a downhome fireside feel, the inspirational vitality makes it easy to see where later outfits on the guitar beam got some of their ideas from.

As I say, not a quad CD sound, but hi-fi and full of life nevertheless. Johnny Eager

THE STAPLE SINGERS

Beatitude: Respect Yourself

Stax SXE 001 They did it first, well almost! The Staple Singers gospel classics of the '60s and '70s, creamed with soul and sweat, made for some of Stax's most notable UK chart positions. And, in retrospect, this music is still as finely attuned in the personal comment department as it ever was.

There's two kinds of Staples here, which is more apparent than on some of their other LPs. Pa Staples' vocal line on Respect Yourself is perfectly delivered in a gritty Covay blues/R&B vein, thrown against his three daughters' more airy hollering. The opposite effect is achieved on a collection of more straightforward gospel tunes that the girls give gusto to. Whichever way, this is a keenly paced LP, with more than a handful of standout cuts. Dave Henderson

THROBBING GRISTLE

Nothing Short Of Total War

Cause For Concern CFC 1

[R] [C] Way back when TG were a strident, but finally terminal case, London's Cause For Concern mag filched some out-takes for a cassette-only release which marginally put the Throbbing doctrine over, but at times slumped into teething uncertainty. And now, in the fullness of time, this "collector's item" has made it to vinyl. Not a classic — as in the group's studio LPs that're available through Mute, but an interesting aside that catches more than a couple of the combo's more monstrous effects in full flight. Dave Henderson

TOMMY TUCKER

Memphis Bad Boy

Zu Zazz Z2001 [Ch] This is a record with an odd tale dragging behind it. It feels like a wind-up, when they tell Tommy's story — like it's fresh from Dallas with smut, but who knows? They don't even go on to tell about his Hi-Heel Sneakers mega hit, instead the sleeve tells of Tommy going to jail, after doing various dubious deeds and eventually dying in an apartment fire. Sure enough, the guy's career kicked off in the late '50s and his Miller's Cave for the Hi label, two versions of which are included, is a pretty hot tune. More followed, but it seems few were interested, but, from what you can hear on this rare set, they should have been. Johnny Eager

VAGINA DENTATA ORGAN

Music For Hashasins

Temple TOPY 12 [R] [C] Released from 1983, when this was a limited edition, it's hard to paint an accurate picture of VDO, but read Psychic TV's rational defence in the last UG for guidance. "Listen carefully to these recordings, you might discover your true will. It is highly recommended as background music to your sexual games and blood rituals." You never can tell.

The intense, guttural utterances of this record — split into two parts, Trained To Kill and Sexual — go right back there, to unknown pleasures and confronted fears. Sounds like the growl-regurgitated breath of ravaging wolves and the curdling rasp of possessed human tongues are tape-looped into an unnerving aural experience, especially on a comfy Sunday afternoon in London, NW2. "Functional to play only at selected times..." Now it's your turn... Martin Aston

VARIOUS

The British Psychedelic Trip Vol III

See For Miles SEE 86 [P] This is a fantastic collection. When I used to live in the strangely-deserted junk shops of the far north, various obscure records with ridiculous names would arrive, immediately to be snapped up by our gang who were keen on mind expansion. Imagine our surprise when these dusty gems — on the whole — turned out to be bizarre mixtures of sounds and styles that mixed diverse elements such as Love, Byrds, Velvets, Dead, Hollies, Beatles, Merseybeat and northern soul. Everything that we'd been weaned on.

They were treasures, and so are these. Volume III's roll call could easily have been plucked from those self-same shelves. Boasting 20 tracks it weaves through such luminaries as The Outer Limits, The Cuppa T, Jason Crest, Virgin Sleep and more, while waving a flag for acceptance with Bolan's prime movers John's Children. Could it all have been so long ago? Well, what the hell, this is nostalgia time. Let's taste that dust again. Dave Henderson

Louisiana Blues

Ace CHD 211 Smooth and sweet collection of tracks that deny classification. Sure, the Jin label, set up in '58, was based on the blues, but their catalogue includes a surprising width as shown on the out-takes here, which span the '60s. This is more akin to a genre all its own, mixing country, rock 'n' roll, swamp and all its affiliates. Here, within Jin Records' tasty roster, are the kind of things that'll turn hairs grey, shake a tall feather and make dead lemons sparkle again. On show is Rockin' Dopsie, Cookie And The Cupcakes, Carol Fran, Duke Vallery and Junior Cole, among others. The names might not mean much, but the music will shake you out for sure. Dave Henderson

NEXT MONTH IN UNDERGROUND * WE DON'T KNOW, ACTUALLY!

Well, OK, we have a rough idea.

That ADI NEWTON feature will finally be translated into English (or nearest offer), then there'll be a SWANS thing. Oh yes, THE MEAT PUPPETS will be waving from America... and Johnny Dee has gone 'on the road' with THE CHESTERFIELDS. Dedication, huh?

So that's generally what's happening!

Next issue of UNDERGROUND is on sale on Friday November 20. . . so check it out*

Two D&V's

One Little Indian's distinctive visual packages, hi-tone production and creative business sense has made them one of the top independent stylists during their brief history. The story starts here . . .

A Sugarcube

- Life, as our grandmothers will tell us, is just one game of snakes and ladders. It's not as simple as RIGHT or WRONG. More a case of UP, DOWN, UP, DOWN . . . which can apply to the running of a record label as well.
- This is the simple story of such a label. They used to call themselves Spiderleg and they belonged to Flux Of Pink Indians. Now, everybody concerned was fiercely committed, musical and political idealists, and everybody tried to do this the RIGHT way but it kept on going WRONG . . .
- Now read on . . .
- "We've lived communally since 1977 so the bank support us," explains Derek Birkett, a Flux and OLI official as well as our narrator of this tale. "We all work and the money gets pooled which pays the rent and buys the food. It came from working with Crass who were brilliant to us – they gave us the money to make our first record. Then we saw other bands that we wanted to work with, said we wanted a label like Crass's and they gave us the money and told us to do it! They are the inspiration for what we've done. So we worked with The Subhumans and started Spiderleg."
- GOING UP . . .
- "Spiderleg was run as a co-operative and as well as Flux Of Pink Indians, we drew in others who shared the same political and musical ideals, but it just got out of hand. We had so many records, it became like a full-time job to run it all. It became very business-orientated which wasn't what any of us wanted to do, so we packed it in and gave all the bands their records back, and told The Subhumans to put their records out on their own label which became Bluurg Records. We kept thinking, because The Subhumans were selling two to three thousand records a month at that time, that we'd lose all that money but the fortunate thing about living communally was that there's always one person who'll say, 'let's stick to what we started out saying or we don't do it at all', and it's worked . . ."
- GOING UP AGAIN . . .
- AND DOWN . . . "On reflection, us and Crass didn't work hard enough at it. We got disillusioned with it when it became a big machinery, getting too involved with the making of the music. We ended up going up our arses politically, because we got into the situation of almost telling people to go out and fight. We were getting these little Youth Anarchy groups from Bradford saying they were hassled and what should they do, and little Asian support groups writing to say they were getting beaten up by skinheads, and at first we'd tell them to turn the other cheek because trouble escalates, but they'd write back, saying that a brother had been stabbed, so we'd end up saying fight back. So we ended up acting like generals sending the troops off to fight while we were sitting in our house in Wood Green in London.
- "What with Wapping and the Miners' Strike/Class War and Conflict were getting very militant, and we had seen on the miners' pickets, how the more force you use, the more comes back. So we felt alienated and pulled out. If there was any mistake, that was it. Copping out rather than sorting it out. We knew what we wanted to say but it sounded out of order."

- AND UP AGAIN . . . "When the label packed in, we had a big discussion about what Flux Of Pink Indians wanted to do. We took two years off and saved up 5,000 and then went back in to do the new Flux album, Uncarved Block. What had happened when we had Spiderleg was that we had worked with other people, so we thought that the best way to work a label was to deal with people who love what we do. Also the best way to run it was to get one person to run one part, so first Sue got a job at Mayking Records' pressing plant. I wanted to engineer as well as produce so I got a job as a studio engineer and Tim got a job down at Southern Studios in distribution. It took us two years to get it together again and run it all ourselves."
- AND EVEN THE UP CAN BE DOWN . . . "It all got out of hand again. The Flux album did really well, as did the AR Kane single, and we did The Babymen single which had legal problems because it mentioned the Royal Family, and we initially had to sell it mail order which was a huge problem because there were five of us running it from the house, dealing with 250 small orders a week, like a mail-order company. Then the D&V single did really well. But the business reality is that you have the records to the Cartel, and you have a great cash flow problem. We were getting in so much good stuff that we kept recording it and getting it ready. We've still got an Annie Anxiety album to come out, a Flux single and half an album, plus The Sugar Cubes album and three singles and an album from The Very Things all stacked up, so the business side started to fall to pieces again."
- DOWN AND DOWN . . .
- "Also our sleeves are really expensive. It seems to be another way of getting across the message of what the bands are saying. We've always chosen what we wanted to do and done it and then seen the best way of approaching putting it out. We made a conscious decision that the business side of it should be the last consideration. Like we've just repressed our double album The Fing C Treat Us Like Pricks* which we deleted two years ago, which became a big deal because of all this rubbish that's happened with the Dead Kennedys record. Although the album was pressed and printed four years ago, nobody would touch it, so we had to get plates made in America and printed in France and sent back over, which was a nightmare."
- BUT THERE'S ALWAYS SOMETHING ON THE UP . . .
- "Going back to the sleeves, they're a very important part of what you're saying, whether it's political or something like AR Kane's single, where the sleeve was very important to them. I've always liked lovely packaging. It's how Paul White got involved. All the sleeves I liked, like Test Dept, Erasure and Foetus, were mostly by Paul, so I played him some tapes and asked him to work with us but that we didn't have any money. He agreed to work with us until we got off the ground. Same with Adrian Sherwood who helped out on Flux's Uncarved Block and the Loudspeaker single. I worked on the Lee Perry and Mark Stewart records in return.

- "The basis of the label is that we set up a core of people and then pull them in, like our co-producer, Andy Shulman who's such a brilliant musician. He used to be in Gentle Giant but he had a huge independent record collection and was really in tune so I asked him to co-produce with me. So we have the facilities to work with the best."
- AND CAN YOU BELIEVE DOWN AGAIN?
- "Yeah, we just got carried away in the studio with all those records stockpiled up and ran up a £24,000 dept – they gave it to us all on credit but we just couldn't get any more time. Brian Bonnar at Mayking was concerned that we were going to get swallowed up by a major label so he gave us a hand. He gave us £6,000 to get The Sugar Cubes' tapes back but we needed serious funding. Fortunately Brian loved the music and the artwork so we went with him. More important, he's a real good businessman. Every week, we have a meeting and he helps us be realistic, like with release dates. Our motives were artistic but the business side is still reality."
- ONE LITTLE INDIAN'S ADVICE ON THE UP-AND-DOWN LIFE OF A LABEL . . .
- "It's difficult because it's the same thing as making blanket statements about politics. We get people coming round who are starting their own labels – the only thing you can tell people to do if they haven't got all the things open to us is that you have to be really careful. We obviously ran in and did too much. You get very successful labels like Stiff who go under because of cash flows. There's so much more to making records."
- "It's become a business again but I suppose what you do is to try and retain control and draw in people to help you out."
- AND MAYBE TO WIN THE GAME AFTER ALL . . .

Treat Us Like Pricks

Circuit Breakers

Alcohol And The Common Man

- "I always worry that transcribed interviews make us appear to be people we're not." John Hyatt.
- When interviewing The Three Johns you're treading on a foundation of preconceptions, laid by the many who've gone before and compounded by repetition and misunderstanding. The trouble is this: complex individuals they may be but interviewing the Johns is just too easy. There's no fumbling for that headline because this band come packaged with an all-inclusive set of journalistic hooks by which to turn a tale; politics, booze and belligerence. It's got to be a winning combination, but for who?
- I have two of The Three before me – Langford is absent, off wearing his producer's hat in Greece. As I brace myself for intellectual intimidation, Hyatt and Brennon guide me to the nearest Leeds hostelry to tell me about their latest Never And Always 45 on Abstract and a few other home-brewed truths.
- This is hardly the vision of hard men of rock 'n' roll I'd expected; soft-spoken, kind-eyed Hyatt reconciles his stomach with home-made steak and kidney whilst Brennie bemoans his hangover and laments another night of excess. A picture to form . . . are the Johns really. . .

DRUNKEN ART SCHOOL MARXISTS?

- Hyatt: "I've always thought your job is very difficult. You have 500 words in which to say what The Three Johns is, therefore, the way that you present it is going to be false because of what the initial premise is. So a lot of the early interviews presented us as drunks which we're not. We don't drink so as not to think, in fact, I find I think better after a drink. So the first thing that was written was 'drunken art school Marxists', and that became the repeated attitude."

ANTI-ESTABLISHMENT?

- It was Brennon who made the statement that rock 'n' roll by its very nature should always be anti-government and anti-establishment. But what happens when a rock band become an establishment? The Johns have the right criteria; it could just happen.
- Brennie: "Like U2? Well, yes, that's how it works. It's big business enterprise. Like everything else it's capitalism, and people have vested interests."
- Hyatt: "It couldn't happen with us though. It happened to Bob Dylan in the 60s because there was a market for what he was saying, therefore he was promoted, became famous, became an institution. Now, there isn't considered to be a market for what we're saying, therefore, we don't become famous, therefore we don't become an institution. It would only take a major company to hype us and we'd be as big as U2 but they're not going to do that because of what we're like. They tried it with – oh, I've tried not to mention them – The Redskins!"

SUBLIMINAL INDOCTRINATORS?!

- Whatever you say, these Johns are presenting a hardline politic in the emotive gift wrap of a good song.
- Brennie: "Subliminal indoctrination? That's a big question. I don't think it is at all because the people who dig us are already there, already like-minded."
- Hyatt: "And we're not didactic and if it is didactic it's accidental. That tends to make you think of anthem-type choruses which we've never gone in for. It's didactically saying 'think for yourself'. It's didactically anti-didactic! How about that!"

PUBLIC ANARCHY – A THREAT TO THE GOVERNMENT?

- Hyatt: "I must say I don't think it's possible for any individual to be a real threat. But I would be very surprised if there isn't a police file on me. As soon as you realise that you go way over the top. I want a big fat file!"
- Brennie: "I know my phone is tapped – if it isn't it's been doing some very strange things! It's basically down to severe paranoia and megalomania on the part of the government."
- Hyatt: "Or rather the silent state – the silent right-wing power that runs this country regardless of who's in government."

DISILLUSIONED?

- Hyatt: "I have been disillusioned by the music business, yes, it's the best thing that's ever happened to me. It's made me think. I used to see David Bowie on the cover of the NME and think it was fantastic. He was like a God. Then we're on the cover of the NME and I thought, what a joke! It used to really worry me. Did people think of me like I used to think of Bowie? Probably not but it's a thought. It's a complete contradiction, it's not me. The me in the interviews is not me. Probably when you write this interview I'll read things I've said but it won't be me."
- Brennie: "Things get de-contextualised, but basically we've learned by other people's mistakes, so we were aware of the problems that we could come up against. Basically it's to do with keeping your feet on the ground and not being destroyed by the business."

The Three Johns throw up over the capitalist grape, Alex Kadis passes the Kleenex

COMMODITY WRECKERS!

- It was Brennie who made the statement that music shouldn't be treated as a commodity.
- Hyatt: "When I say that I can't stand the music business it's because it's just so dull. The things that finally get through the sieve of capitalism are just so bland because that's what society's about."
- Brennie: "That was one of our original points. We all swapped instruments, not to deliberately play badly but to avoid convention. We can play well, honest! We just want to keep putting things out that slightly wreck the parameters of what rock and roll is supposed to be."
- Hyatt: "That's why World By Storm was a misdirection. It was too commercial. Basically, we were asked to do that by Abstract, or rather coerced into producing more commercial singles so we did, it was dead easy. But our audiences didn't respect us for it and although we didn't sell out 'cause we didn't make any money, politically and personally I felt I'd sold myself out. That's why Never And Always sounds like it does. In the future we're gonna stick to what we want."

FLEAS IN THE EAR OF THE WORLD . . .

- Hyatt: "At first I was dead against having children." What changed your mind, John?
- Hyatt: "Biology! Hahahahaha!! But it does worry me. I want to bring up a real fighter."
- Brennie: "I was worried too. There's so much evil to fight against. I thought, 'what am I making here? Cannon fodder?'. But now I've got a nine-week-old daughter and she means more to me than anything else in the world. She's completely protected. It changes your whole life, but it doesn't stop you doing anything you want to do. It's wonderful. Hyatt'll soon find out – his wife's got eight weeks to go!"
- Hyatt: "I'm really excited that me and Liz are gonna have a kid, it's just the waiting that drives you mad! That's what I mean about the me in interviews not being the real me. I mean, I'm really in love and Liz never even gets mentioned. It's a very, very macho business and even if I say things like that they never get mentioned." (There, they just did, John.)
- Brennie: "Who wants to read it? That's the problem. The music industry is geared towards selling itself as frivolous, provocative, let's shag everything in sight, which is wrong. None of our music is about that."

SO WHAT ARE YOU ABOUT, THEN?!

- Hyatt: "I was just thinking, this grape grew in Italy as a grape and now we're drinking it as wine in Britain. It's gone through the capitalist system so that we can buy it here and drink where we shouldn't be drinking" (ie well after hours, readers!) "and that's what I write songs about. It's a really complicated idea to put across in a song. You need a lot of songs."
- Brennie: "His lyrics are brilliant. In fact we're the best rock 'n' roll band on Earth!"
- Hyatt: "One of us always says that!"

Explosion in the centre zone!
Blow Up get squiddy about ice cream!

I'd never spoken to Nick Roughley before — a man of flowing locks, white denims and lead singer of Brighton hopefuls Blow Up. I always thought 'you moody bastard', but he always made me laugh — his self-confident swagger around town, the way that when he played with 14 Cool Bears he upstaged the singer by standing behind him sneering and generally loathing... pissed off.

- "I wasn't into ancraks," he says. And so to Blow Up...
- Nick was into Chelsea boots, while Josh (the group's manager) was into rock 'n' roll mythology, Alan (guitar) was into eating meals at regular times, Trevor (ex-bassist) was into drinking a lot and falling over, and Chris (drums) enjoyed hanging around...
- It was then only a matter of time, then, before they formed a band and, under the guidance of some keen bullshitting from Josh, signed to that independent dinosaur... Creation.

Poofs in anarchy!

Frazier Chorus get sloppy

I must ask you this 'cos it's vexing me: is your attention span being curtailed by life in the '80s? I know it's s'posed to be, but I've checked and I'm sure mine's not. I can still cope with more than buzz-word TV (take a bow Network 7) and buzz-word pop (Age Of Chance, gawd bless 'em). I can still cope with a bunch of origi-punks turned nice, playing Anarchy In the UK in a "poof music" style. I can cope with Frazier Chorus and all their delightful contradictions.

- I am prepared to do poof music in front of all those bondage-shit, drug happy punk rockers! This is Tim, the singing and principal writer of the Chorus quartet. From Brighton to your sloppy, floppy hearts, folks.
- There's also Kate (flautist, who played on the Mad Professor's Dub Me Crazy albums, and is "the only together person in the group"), Michele (keyboards/percussion, with a kitsch fetish and the original baseball jacket with Frazier Chorus emblazoned across the back) and Chris (clarinet, graduate of 'Destructive Music' at Brighton Poly).
- Frazier Chorus have a single, Sloppy Heart, out on the 4AD label. And you can think "So what" in your pathetic reductionist way, and you'll — if you'll pardon me — be a wanker. Frazier Chorus are not The Cocteau Twins just as the Cocteau Twins are not Colourbox. Nor, despite the wind instruments, are Frazier Chorus Shelleyan Orphan. 4AD über tuhrer Ivo has been known to say they could be the next OMD, and there's a kind of sense in that.
- Tim sings like he's whispering confidences into your ear, and indeed that's exactly what he's doing. "Happiness, hate, love, someone leaving you, someone coming back," and lately... cars.
- An album, Sue! (all connotations apply), will follow Sloppy Heart, and will, says Tim be "a ripper".
- "Don't make us sound too pretentious," adds Kate. Right on. John Best

- How to get a record contract (part 121) by Josh Dean: "I saw Alan McGee every month or so and kept winding him up saying I was the manager of this bloody great band. I kept promising a demo — but really there never was one and there was never going to be. Eventually I played him a really bad quality rehearsal tape and McGee said 'well I thought it was going to be crap, but fing hell, it's brilliant!'"
- Stories followed their debut gig — £5,000 on a video, 25 grand advance, a deal with WEA to follow the first single and, more recently, that Blow Up was merely a vehicle for Nick who was being groomed for Roxyland.
- What flavour ice cream are Blow Up, Nick?
- "Melon. Fresh and tangy. Fresh and twangy."
- What's your favourite colour?
- "F off"
- Looks like a bit more grooming is in order.
- "Most bands go about things the wrong way. Pissing about with demos and support gigs for years. We decided to skip all that; we were a bit cheeky and got away with it." By the time of their third gig they were headlining in London — but reviews were predictably sour and instantly labelled them as a '60s copycat band. In fact far from spelling instant recognition, signing to a "cult" label like Creation has meant a bit of an uphill struggle.
- The band's first single, Good For Me, was played for the first time on Janice Long's 'singled-out' show, on the nation's number one fun station, Radio 1, and was greeted with bed-wetting enthusiasm from the studio guests, Jon Moss and Pepsi (half of everyone's fave throwaway pop band).
- Pepsi: "I must say I was jumping up and down on my seat."

- Moss: "It's one and half minutes long, that's rock 'n' roll. I think it's nouveau moderne, actually. This is the sound of tomorrow."
- Long: "You like it then?"
- I think they did, Janice. If anything, Good For Me was the sound of yesterday beefed up a bit, hardly nouveau moderne — which is a term usually used to describe a variety of interior decorating, I believe. The single only added to the strength of the '60s tag, though, making it harder for the band to deny the reference and far easier to embrace it (and why the hell not?).
- Blow Up have recently acquired a permanent bassist in Zeiss, who will hopefully add a bit more friendliness into their live performances. I'm sure they don't mean to look aloof, but Nick always looks so... pissed off.
- "People say, Nick Roughley, he's so cool, he's too arrogant. I don't think of myself as being that. It's just that when I relax my face it looks cool — I can't help it. People think 'What's the matter with him, the moody bastard?'. I'm always being hit, usually in takeaways late at night, people walk up to me and hit me or say things like 'Are you a girl?'"
- Nick is in fact a girlie.
- To be honest I'm not completely certain if I like Blow Up or not. Live, the aloof air sort of puts me off, but the records are springy enough for me to bob to. There's a new 45 out on Creation this month, so decide for yourselves. I sort of get the feeling that up to now they've been faking it, but pretty soon they're going to have an orgasm. They came pretty close recently when they played a "happening" in a friend's kitchen with one 15 minute song — that had the audience, I'm told, "freaking art".
- Cool, huh? Johnny Dee

The latest wave!

Surfin' Lungs portray envy and charm

How many bands tout the 'surf' prefix before their name, only to turn out to be some kind of fourth rate garage band? But, if there is such a thing as a 'genuine British surf band', then The Surfin' Lungs are it. Although they are based in Bracknell (Bracknell beach boys?!), The Surfin' Lungs possess the spirit of The Rip Chords and the charm of The Fantastic Baggys. There's more to them than torchbearers to the memory of Jan And Dean — the Lungs are a damn fine pop group.

- If their debut Cowabunga album on Big Beat paved the way, then I'm sure their latest long player on Beat International will open all the remaining doors. They write great songs, too! But why surf music?
- "We just love it," says Chris Pearce, singer and chief Lung. "It's as simple as that."
- But do you surf?
- "We've tried it but we're all crummy surfers. But then we don't do any songs that claim we're 'hanging ten' and 'riding that wave!' It's always someone else."
- Bass player Steve Dean agrees: "None of our songs are about bragging. Whether it's car songs or surf songs — it's always someone else."
- Chris: "If there's a recurring theme in our songs it's envy."
- Bearing in mind that the spiritual home for every surfer boy lies way over on the other side of America, do the Lungs ever feel California calling?
- "It's just a bunch of images to us," observes Geoffo Knipe. "It's probably nothing like we imagine it."
- Chris: "I don't think the reality is important. It's like The Avengers TV show — they had a certain image of England which everyone wanted to see and they didn't let reality intrude on it. All those things in The Avengers are really there but they made sure that they didn't include things that would spoil the image."
- "I guess our music's a bit like that!" Chris Hunt

Filming for fun!

Marden Hill's bustling biopic

Three scenarios from the world of Marden Hill:

- 1. A white sports car, probably an Aston Martin, speeds down a winding French lane. It's raining and the girl's headscarf is flapping in the wind. She turns to her tweed-jacketed boyfriend and asks, "Happy darling?"
- "Happy." He smiles and changes up a gear. . .
- 2. The camera pans down from the rooftops to a crowded Piccadilly as red buses and taxis grind past. A girl in a red mini-skirt steps from the tube station and heads down Shaftesbury Avenue. The newspaper vendors turn to watch her, a traffic warden whistles and she laughs as her handbag swings against her white plastic mac. She's happy just window-shopping. . .
- 3. A pitiless sun burns on the desert sands, cracked weather-beaten faces grimace, the saloon doors sway in the breeze, scrub rolls down the empty street between peeling wooden house fronts. There's a sound of nails being hammered into old wood and a rope creaks then stretches. . .
- They would be great films but so far only the soundtracks have been made by Marden Hill. Unable to see the films I thought I'd meet up with Pete and Mark of this enigmatic group. Wouldn't you?
- "Actually, we did make a video for our first single. We were called Sixty Minute Man then, it was called Spies On 45, all old Shadows and spy themes, but we couldn't release it because we'd used some dialogue from the Bond films. Then we became Marden Hill, although we sometimes revert to being Sixty Minute Man, when we want to do the Shadows, surf and spy themes."
- Marden Hill's new single, on El Records, has its B-side performed by Sixty Minute Man (under the guise of Marden Hill, naturally). That track, Hangman, is the last film scene I described. The A-side, Robe, is the second scenario. It's almost unbearably happy, a real swinging brassy, fake '60s jazz romp.
- "Yeah, it is pretty cheerful. Mike Alway" (El team coach) "told us to go in the studio and think Top Cat, so we did, and you can hardly sound miserable with that in your head!"
- These are genuinely creative people who make records for the right reasons. They have no financial dependence on sales, so they can simply enjoy making records. One day all bands will be like this. Hoxton Leonid

The unwillingly ill at heart!

Breathless cough and splutter in pro-pop mood!

It's crazy that I should be sat sitting here, 400 words at my disposal, trying to sell you Breathless, a band who in any world worth saving from nuclear annihilation would be bigger than Anne Diamond and a million times more darkly sparkly.

- Still, who cares about the planet when you can leave it on the wings of Gary Mundy's firmament-splicing guitar, buoyed up by the voice-of-an-angel vocals of Dominic Appleton, 4AD understood that when they drafted Dom in to sing on The Jeweller, Strength Of Strings and Tarantula on This Mortal Coil's Filigree And Shadow LP last year. And a moment of religious realisation will pass through you too when you hear Into The Fire, the most starkly affecting track from their untitled second LP due out any second on their own Tenor Vossa label.
- Breathless' problem (professionally speaking — personal later) is one of perception. They don't fit in. They're truly psychedelic, yet, understandably for such intelligent folk, balk at the word. They refuse to accept the fundamental trivialisation that is at the heart of our every perception of psychedelia.
- This is both what holds them back and what makes them fascinating to those in search of more. They can never play up (or rather down) to a part, and therefore misunderstand a basic tenet of pop (that groups should be unambiguous), while encapsulating a basic tenet of life (that ambiguity riddles our every molecule). This puts them either into a wondrous elite or makes them complete non-starters, depending upon whether your brain waves are spiky or flat.
- Breathless, meanwhile, just sit and shake. Nerves, y'see. Rattle when they walk. Puke before and after playing.
- Dom in particular. "I have this terrible stomach. When I was about 16 every four weeks I'd get stomach cramps and vomit. It was very confusing. I had to go to the hospital and have all these X-rays and I thought 'Oh my God, they're going to find a womb inside me. But they didn't. . . I was a little disappointed actually."
- There are few turns of interview where a Breathless ailment doesn't crop up.
- Talk about performing and you'll hear about their latest pills to ward off the shakes. Talk about food and you'll hear about Gary's desire for a drip to avoid the chores of mastication. Talk about the past and you'll hear about his time as an agoraphobic Croydon lad unable to get on the school bus. Talk about pets and you'll hear about Dom's allergy to anything with hair — he has five goldfish — including, of late, the opposite sex. And these people are supposed to project themselves as a Rock Band!?
- Listen, if you're not going to take my word for it (ask anyone, they'll tell you how trustworthy I am), there's only one thing for it, I'm going to have to invent a scene for Breathless to spearhead. . . Er, how does this far-out movement, where everyone's deeply into neo-miserabilist bands with male singers who look like Charlotte Rampling and sound like aural-marcarsite, grab you?
- Gods, I tell you. Shy Gods. John Best

Breathless, but breathlessly enigmatic! Hiding in the shadows of neo-miserabilist noirism (ya dig?)

BACKS RECORDS COMPETITION RESULTS

For those of you still wondering about the answers to Backs Records extremely difficult quiz from issue six, here's the answers.

- 1 For which band did Andy Gill play guitar?
(A: Gang Of Four) Easy
- 2 Name the five labels that The Higsons have been on?
(A: Romans In Britain, Waap, Two-Tone, Upright and R4) Not easy
- 3 Which other groups are the members of Big Zap from?
(A: Gaye Bykers, Janitors and The Bomb Party) Quite Easy
- 4 Who compered last year's Ideal Guest House cassette?
(A: Ted Chippington) Sort of easy
- 5 What was the title of Bogshed's Peel session EP?
(A: Tried And Tested Public Speaker) Bit difficult
- 6 James Taylor's cover of Blow Up is from the film of the same name. Who starred in the film?
(A: David Hemmings) Difficult
- 7 Which legendary Cambridge band featured members of Jack The Bear and The Bible?
(A: The Great Divide) Oh yes, very, very easy

So now you know. Only one person got it right, and that's SA Jeffries from Reading. He will now be appearing on The Krypton Factor.

The Bolshoi demand bad press!

- "Trevor Tanner's determination to make The Bolshoi really count has paid off." The words of our very own TC Wall in his recent review of the group's Lindy's Party LP, and never a truer word has been spoken by an UG scribe! You can probably count them on the fingers of one hand — current bands who, while maintaining precious indie adulation, would do very nicely crooning to the masses on TOTP. The Bolshoi are one of the few who seem to be actively capable of completing the transition without essential loss of credibility! While their previous Friends album played a safer game, Lindy's Party is a harder affair, raw and more adventurous. A new Bolshoi is emerging and Jan Kalicki (drums) and Nicki Chown (bass) know why.
- In the past . . .
- Nick: "We never really made compromises but we spent too much time listening to other people."
- Jan: "We only ever made one real compromise and that was our single Sunday Morning. It was a bit of an experiment but it still didn't get any airplay because they objected to the lyrics. We can't bloody win!"

- Nick: "Friends was a bit ahead of its time really because we were too clever for our own good. It was too polished. I listened to it last night and I still like it, but we're better live and that's what we've tried to capture on the new LP." But for the present. . .
- Jan: "This time we wanted it to be a lot punchier. Our label, Beggars Banquet, were loath to let us produce the album ourselves, but we wanted it to be like, f you, this is what we do! We're a lot happier."
- Nick: "We are always changing because 'interesting' is a key word for us. If we stuck to one musical style it would cease to be interesting. If you look at our singles they've all been very different. It would have been easy after. Away to do another song similar to it, but we didn't want to take the easy way out. That's why Lindy's Party is so diverse. It's ten completely different songs."

And as for the future. . .

- Jan: "You wait till the next show. You should see what we've got up our sleeves! The live show has to be entertaining or a gig is just a gig!"
- Nick: "The audience gets bored and we get bored."
- Jan: "Even my mother likes our show now. She came to see us recently and she loved it!"
- Yes, but are we finally going to see The Bolshoi on TOTP?

- Nick: "Well, we've started to get bad reviews for the first time ever, which we think is a good omen. Before now we've had single of the week and the record's done nothing!"
- Jan: "Our single Please really got slagged — Melody Maker reviewed it twice just to emphasise how bad it was — they called us The Bolsite!"
- Nick: "If the press don't like Lindy's Party it's got to be a good sign!"
- Errr . . . cancel that intro Alex Kadis

Foxhead uprising

Close Lobsters debut LP severely damages UG scribe!

- "Let's make some plans so they can go wrong." Let's Make Some Plans.
- That's what I like. There's a lot to be said for not having the vaguest idea what you're doing. Especially when you're talking media manipulation.
- Close Lobsters don't know. Haven't got a clue. And while all the clever money (alright, all the money) was away primping yer Primal Screams/Shop Assistants/Lemon Drops/Fuzzboxes and all their petty, pretty plans for world domination, down the less desirable end of C86 Avenue, Close Lobsters were just flaring like a Catherine wheel to themselves and going nowhere.
- "You can reach for the stars of heaven, it doesn't mean you'll ever get there." A Prophecy.

- Doubt shadows Close Lobsters' songs, but somewhere between the self-deprecation and anti-belief lies something far more delicious than a chorus of strumpets baying for attention. There lies dignity, and now — because they've never been under pop's microscope — there lies a modestly great body of work.
- Foxheads Stalk This Land (Fire Records) is the album. It's not the new thing (in fact it's already vaguely old-fashioned). What it is, though, is spirited and oblivious to what it should be doing. For these reasons I recommend it.
- No-one should expect to call a song Sewer Pipe Dream and have people like it (which I'm afraid is inevitable when it says "and you look at me with those big brown eyes" in reference to a cow!). And what kind of Paisley tough boys sing about "kissing the flower in bloom"? Paisley tough boys like Close Lobsters, actually.
- Sometimes, chief Lobster Andrew Burnett will unconvincingly mutter in interviews that he's a star waiting to be discovered, and even for this pathetic charade of press chicanery, I love them dearly.

- On every tightly faceted Close Lobsters gem is a glint of fire to light up their romantic eye. The panicked "don't let it slip through your hands" refrain of In spite Of These Times. The way the line "I reluctantly threw a boomerang" echoes off into the ether in Foxheads. Ah! The little things that get you!
- Best of all, though, is Mother Of God, something of a modestly proportioned rock 'n' roll behemoth, with its main repeated lyric of "Never repeat those words" and a slow churning, burning, melody that scorches and finally bursts into flaming crescendo, and might have me mouthing the words Velvet Underground if I really wanted to indie-ghetto-ise them. You may be close. You may even be a lobster (in which case stay away from the funny wicker pots). But you've got to be something else to be a Close Lobster! John Best

Devils in disguise

Kill Devil Hills get tingly

- Just released: a 'churlish yet chewable cud of sensible rock' called What Comes After, the debut single from four-piece guitar bandits Kill Devil Hills — two of whom sit in the pub and tell me why folks should give them a listen.
- Paul: "When you go to see a good live band you just get all tingly and get totally lost in it — there's a certain depth; a base thing that separates emotional music from something like Rick Astley or whatever; you get stirred inside and it lifts you . . . though we can't say we'll lead you to the promised land if you follow us — we're not the Pied Pipers of Leyton!"
- Phil continues: "The best thing about us is that we're a hybrid of a lot of things; but if a song sounds too similar to something we've heard then it just gets rejected."
- Quality control from the Killies, that's Alex on vocals and guitar, Paul on guitar and vocals, Jon on bass and Phil 'the most beautiful drummer in pop', and a band identity almost communal.
- Paul: "We're all really close — we've grown up together as friends; it just happens that we play in a band together; music being the only thing we're all passionate about. . ."
- Paul: "We're not a 100 per cent love song band, and we're not spouting 100 per cent Clash rhetoric — we're a little bit of everything, really; there should be some sort of middle ground and that's what I think — and hope — we do."

The lip-curling Devil Hill bros

- All things to all people? I don't know about that but, as their press handout says, they are 'aggressive yet stylish, intelligent yet direct'. Find out for yourselves; get the single today and look out for them in November when they'll be playing the live circuit. Like the man says: get lost! Daz Igmeth

Leather Nun's dingy beginnings and tattered past has taken them from post-industrial heavy metal to the shores of the Americas. Now signed to IRS, Stateside, their independent youth on Wire Records (both in Sweden and the UK) and before, has been examined and released on a brand new compilation, Force Of Habit, which will appear on vinyl, cassette and CD in the States, and in CD format in your very own street. ● Leather Nun's guitarist, Bengat Aronsson, or Aron to us, casts his mind back for Dave Henderson.

that Primerover was really good, and we wanted to get it released. . . I think we approached about five labels and Subterranean gave us the most positive response." Probably the most interesting track on this record is FFA, though. A lament to fist-f*cking that's illustrated with a clenched fist soaked in gel on the sleeve. Guaranteed to cause a stir? Created for effect? Or was this a true-to-life thing for the Nuns?

"We used to live in a flat above the largest video porn store in Gothenburg and we used to watch them a lot and they're quite funny. I mean, you don't get horny watching that kind of thing."

Natural guys! And no doubt dubious and "dangerous", now that people might actually think again about what FFA is about. The record re-appeared briefly in Britain through the Obsession label, but disappeared a couple of years back, just around the time that the group signed to the newly-born Wire label, a twin-base partnership pairing Sweden and the UK (which is currently branching out in West Germany and the US, too).

The group's reputation was already beginning to cultivate the cult status, and gosh, they weren't even totally Wired yet.

SLOW DEATH OF THE WARM LEATHERETTES

I was there, I was there! Yes, me, Dave Henderson! Slouched at the back of the Scala cinema for one of their February '80 all-night sessions of film and general weirdness, I was there. This time Throbbing Gristle's Industrial Records were holding court, and in the arena were a howling squidge of barbed, cranky or just plain exhausted high-lifers. Films of bikers' bottoms, Kenneth Anger's Scorpio Rising, art, art, art and more art filled the luxurious hall, and in between all this the Throbbers played, as did Monte Cazazza — a San Fran weirdo joined by Tana Ernolo Smith on guitar (and I'm-Really-Expressing-Myself pained facade). Finally, around four-ish, The Leather Nun kicked into action . . . and central London has never really been the same again. Sure, it was a "happening" of sorts, a mental test, an SAS-style self survival experience . . . but heavy metal and extra volume? At four?

The die-hards and the dead awoke to hear the grumbling consciousness of Jonas Almqvist and his Swedish cohorts extolling the virtues of Slow Death. The pale got paler.

Aron: "That was an amazing night, we were just happy to be part of it. You really felt like you were involved with something, the response was so amazing."

So how did you team up with Industrial?

"Jonas had been in contact with Gen from the group for some time." (That's P Orridge, now of Psychic TV, for the younger members of our audience.) "Jonas was a music journalist then and the whole industrial thing really interested him. The label had been in action for some time and Gen prompted us to get together properly and record some material for a single. That was the Slow Death EP. We recorded it in our apartment and we were really surprised at the reaction it got."

So how were other Swedish bands reacting towards what you were doing? Were you out on a limb?

"We were totally out on our own, but that didn't really bother us. Even the Swedish press didn't understand what we were doing. That hasn't changed either, we still have a pretty bad relationship with the press in Sweden."

But if anyone thought that the initial noisy metal tag was going to tie Leather Nun down, they were in for something of a surprise. What's more, they even moved away from the industrial umbrella — which by that time was beginning to concentrate solely on TG and their activities.

Leather Nun's next release happened in California, on the ludicrously good Subterranean label.

"The contact for that came through Monte Cazazza who'd been releasing things solo, plus stuff with Factrix, over there. We'd done recordings of five new tracks and we knew

STUDED RELIGION IN CIRCUITRY BLOW OUT

Once the Wire label was set up to expose the burgeoning Swedish undercurrent (now developing nicely into the Euro upper echelons of pop/rock reality), the head on collision between Leather Nun and the foaming punters of world city became a reality. The group's first release for the label was the 506 EP, a set of rock-based, but hauntingly orchestrated, songs centred around the esoteric title track.

So what's in Room 506?

"We don't know. It came about one Christmas when Jonas was in London. He got invited to a party in a hotel but the room number was wrong and he got really pissed off because he missed the party."

As you would. See, natural guys!

"Anyway, it all started from there."

Then you followed that with a live LP? Rock literati always claim that that's the worst thing for a "new" act to do . . . to make their first LP a live thing.

"But so what? We do that with every release, we never worry about what people will think. We do records that are sometimes bad, sometimes good. We're irrational, like the group's personalities. We can't just do ordinary rock songs."

So what do you think of the release that followed that, Desolation Row?

"That's got a good A side, but a badly-produced B side."

As you can probably tell, The Leather Nun are something of a law unto themselves. They don't stand on tradition, they don't play by the rules, but do they like Abba?

"What! Abba! What do you think?"

But you covered their Gimme Gimme Gimme — and in doing so thrust the Nun image and imagery into households that were otherwise content to suffer the sins of contemporary bore-o-pop.

"That was just something that we wanted to do, and the record label was really keen for us to do it too. Both groups are Swedish, and in a way it was a catalysing of Abba by Leather Nun."

A frightening thought. And do you have anything else in common with Abba?

"No."

No plans to record with Andrew Lloyd Webber and produce drab "rock" musicals like Chess?

"No."

The success of Gimme in all unexpected corners had brought the group to the attention of a confused music hierarchy as well as a glut of new enthusiasts. And, in time-honoured style, they opted to assault a totally different area for their next single (instead of following the miserable Bananarama cover version route to trauma).

The new single was Pink House, a sketchy slice of comment on America and its shortcomings, which was created by Jonas and Aron attempting to recreate the climate of America — where Aron had been living for some time. And next . . . well, an album, of course!

THE LUST TRUST AND THE STEEL GENERATION

After a virtual torrent of 12 inchers greeted with praise, pondering and preposterous confusion, Leather Nun's first album, Lust Games, was laid to vinyl. But, Aron, can you listen to it now?

"It's a good album, there are quite a few good songs there. It was done at a good time and a lot of the songs are pretty strange, but when you get really close to something like that it makes it very difficult to sit down and enjoy it. There are some good things there, but eventually the music gets beyond the group and you get to the point where there's about ten people deciding on what the sleeve should look like. Then it can feel like you've lost contact."

A single, I Can Smell Your Thoughts, was lifted from the LP and remixed, further enhancing the Leather Nun 'less than normal' reputation.

"That was a good thing to do, though, as that remix let me listen to the other tracks on the album. It re-introduced me to the record."

Another track from the album, Jesus Came Driving Along, began another chapter of LN life, when the movie moguls picked up on it for last year's brat pack flick Dudes. So what's that about, have you seen the film?

"No." Another mystery. But does that kind of recognition get you excited like, say, the Scala event did?

"No. I think we've been involved in music for some time now and that kind of excitement has worn off."

What about signing a deal in the States with IRS, surely that must have felt good?

"Sure, they're a company who work well and we're looking forward to doing things with them."

And do you think you'll move into chart territory like other IRS acts have managed, like The Bangles, REM, you know, that kind of thing?

"Oh no. I can't see anyone moving Leather Nun, we're too heavy to move."

More recently — like around six weeks ago — Leather Nun's second and most perfectly formed album was unleashed on the world, with the single cut Cool Shoes further enhancing their left-field fun approach (!) being a kind of rap-a-longa-strangeness. The LP, Steel Construction, reaped great press response, and further oiled the fountain pens of the cross-channel enthusiasts. The sound now has veered not to pop, but to a uniquely European structured rock sound that's glazed with effected oddball interludes and spiced with a melodic bent that could convince even the most strung out of AOR purists.

So Aron, what do you think of Steel Construction?

"It's totally different from the first LP. . . . I can listen to some of it, I love to listen to some of it, there's like a nerve in it."

Yes, a raw edge that's still sparkling with energy. Steel Construction is brimming with excruciatingly accessible noises that make you just want to play it again and again. We'll, you've probably read the reviews. You've probably got the record! And now you can catch up on the group's back pages with this finely packed compilation set.

Is it a 'Best of', as it were?

"Well, I . . . well, it was compiled by IRS for America really. We don't want to argue about these kind of things. It's what they think is right for that market, and we think they know what they're talking about."

What more can you say? And just what will Leather Nun be doing to promote this release — and the brand new Steel Construction package?

"Well, we'll be on tour briefly, for about three weeks, then I'll be going to the States for about four months to recover (I've promised myself this for ages). Having been involved in the production of that LP, playing live, writing and all that, I'm really ready for a break. I've quit my job in Sweden, which I was trying to do at the same time as the group, so I don't know what will happen next. I suppose I'll just cool down."

Will you come back a new man?

"No way."

Love And Rockets

reputation continues to grow, their new LP, Earth, Sun, Moon portraying their new-found depth. Scott Murphy follows them to Nottingham to find out more Watching them during a soundcheck for their first UK gig is quite a while, you can't help but think that Love And Rockets have a completely positive sound. Seeing Daniel Ash harmonise with David J, while Kevin Haskins provides a backbone, it's clear that there is no Bauhaus, no Jazz Butcher, and no Tomes On Tall; there is just one band. Trying to perfect a sound which is unmistakably theirs. What's theirs is part of an evolutionary process in itself. Their first album, Seventh Dream Of A Teenage Heaven, was filled with ambience, the kind of album to listen to when, well, it's gloomy both outside and in the house. And their second LP, Express, was for the rock and roller in all of us.

Ash on Express: "It was an electric sort of album. Electric drums, electric guitar, very big sounds. It was getting boring, like a rock and roll circus. All those clichés."

So now they've come to their third album, Earth, Sun, Moon, an album that Ash claims was in the back of their minds even during Express. It's minimal, wearing the T Rex and Beatles influences on its sleeve, without any sort of apologising. Only two tracks, Mirror People and The Light recall the loud sounds of their second release. It's the way Love And Rockets want it. As for its critical thrashing — "Don't believe what you read," asserts Ash quickly. "For us, it's very different from Express as a complete album. As far as we're concerned, it's a big progression from the last record."

For them, that's all that matters. Critics are tossed off with a quick remark. Audiences are merely there because they want to be, not because the band asks them to. The band's only requirement for continuing is themselves.

And it goes deeper than that. Daniel makes the revelation that "It's quite schizophrenic".

What is? The band. It's divided. But it's that division that makes them healthy.

"A lot of the time it's like usually splits down the middle between my songs and David's songs. I observe an audience that likes one half but not the other. Generally speaking there are tracks that cross over. But, there are two halves."

David interjects: "I think it's more than that." Lyrics bear the difference out. While Ash is questioning someone's darkest night, David J is waiting for the flood. It is those opposites, with Haskins as quiet mediator, that creates the term Love And Rockets.

Although opposites in some ways, the band collectively spews thoughts on a range of topics that ultimately fuel their lyrics.

Ash on religion: "I was brought up in a Catholic school and you were taught to fear God. At least you were when I was there. All the little stories they tell you like 'If you don't go to confession your soul will get blacker and blacker'. All that symbolism. . . It's just a load of bollocks."

David J: "That's why I like the religion of science, because it's beyond prejudice. I feel that it's very close to the truth."

Ash on luck: "I don't believe in luck. If a man bet a thousand dollars on a horse and won, then he was predestined to win that money."

David on music: "That whole business about being retrogressive and not breaking new ground. I quite accept that. I don't think that is necessary to make something that's valued. John Lee Hooker or Hank Williams, Sr made the same record every time but it was a good record."

It's those same opinions which have forced the band to play a great deal more in America than Great Britain. Over there, the popular demand for the band's blend of today's psychedelia has given them a bit of time to assess that country and its lifestyle.

Haskins on America: "In the States, if someone sees some bloke driving down the road in a Rolls Royce, people will go up and say 'That's a beautiful car'. Whereas in England, they would say 'That sod, how did he get a hold of that?'. That's a generalisation, but. . ."

It's almost a parallel of the band. Love And Rockets are in a tour bus. They drive to their first destination. It's standing room only as the full to capacity club can't hold any more people. Then, days later, they perform before an indifferent audience; the opening chords of Mirror People ring out, as Ash peers over a gaggle of Bauhaus shirts. . .

THE CHRYSANTHEMUMS

An enigma, man! A surrealist dream that touches taboo areas in the name of pop. But what are THE CHRYSANTHEMUMS about?

"We like pop music," admits a 'mum, and yes, that's pretty obvious as their debut LP, Is That A Fish On Your Shoulder Or Are You Just Pleased To See Me, perfectly portrays. When I say debut, there's a little confusion here, as the reverse of the sleeve reveals that the year is 2030 and this is a re-issue of the 1987 LP, going on to explain the group's meteoric rise up to the end of 2030, suggesting a further two albums by the end of 1990. What's more, they plan to stick to this game plan and place themselves in the perspective that the sleeve explains. Now, get to the bottom of that one.

Probably more factually, for now anyway, the two main Chrysanthemums stand up and are recognised as Alan Jenkins from The Deep Freeze Mice (a Leicester conglom with a penchant for sporadic LPs of the psyche-pop kind) and Yukio Yung (leading light in many an electronically motivated pop outfit for Hamster Records).

"I suppose we're like-minded people," muses Yukio. "We're pleased with the album but it doesn't seem to be doing terribly well, even though it got some good reviews."

And how does it feel to be incredibly hip?

"It's good, it feels incredibly good to be stopped in the street and asked for your autograph," is the sarcastic reply. "I suppose we feel like we're people's poets, but we don't want to be laughed at, we'd rather be laughed with."

Now that's a difficult one, but there's plenty of grins on the first LP so they could be on. But what of the future (apart from recording those scheduled LPs before 1990)?

"We'll just keep recording, we're past the phase of worrying. We did think of covering a whole LP, like Tales From Topographic Oceans by Yes, or something. I've never heard it, but the lyrics are unbelievable."

Yeah, like, wow! Dave Henderson

LAUGH

The pressure of being a member of a group that everyone wants to make a joke out of has slowly got to them. One left to become a doctor, another to pursue a design career, a third to become a Smith (Craig Ganlon to be precise), while the others just laughed. Martin Wright (vocals/guitar), Martin Mittler (bass and original member), Ian Bendelow (Craig's mate and his replacement) and "the fabulously monickered" (thank you, press office) Spencer Birtwhistle (drums) are left behind to carry the can (ned laughter).

So, Laugh's most hated question: "It's quite a dynamic name," says Martin W, "and people always remember it. It also sums us up in a way because we are very serious about what we do but we don't take ourselves that seriously. And there's no exclamation mark after it either!"

There's so much more substance to Laugh than a false exclamation mark might say: they'll even talk about it. Laugh's first single Take Your Time, Yeah/Never Had It So Bad deals with life-before-optimism and angles on bedroom boredom, to which their second single Paul McCartney (both on the excellent Remorse label) shapes up an answer.

"Our new single is intended as a message to the hapless, hopeless, already forgotten bands of today, and those of Paul McCartney's stature, content to wallow in the security of their previous successes, along with the majority of today's bands who seem satisfied basking in the shadow of their idols."

Instead of jumping on the guitar bandwagon, Laugh are jumping ahead, literally, because of their impulsive northern soul leanings. Independent hi-NRG!

"Whatever the guitars are doing, we try and make the drums and bass get a real dance feel, because we all like dancing, and think dancing's really important because it's equated with having a good time. When we recorded Paul McCartney, me and Martin went into the other room to see if we could dance to it—if it was in the right time and all that. That's how we judged it!" Martin Aston

From the back, it looks as though 1000 VIOLINS have been regarded as taking The Smiths' classic trail of jangle 'n' regret no further than The Smiths did, but t'aint so. They have their own way of spelling 'shit', 'confusion', 'disappointment' and 'melancholy'. Now free of Dan Tracey's Dreamworld label — "we were getting let down too much while Dan was concentrating on his own band, The TV Personalities" — the group have signed up with Pacific, usually Americans who license Brit-indies but who are now expanding to steal some of The Cartel's distribution business. The new Locked-Out Of The Love-In single is on Dreamworld, but the forthcoming If I Were A Bullet, Then For Sure I'd Find A Way To Your Heart won't be. A stab at a love song?

"Not necessarily. It's just about people, not just necessarily between a boy and a girl. To me, maybe I'm being a bit big-headed, it's obvious," claims lead violinist David.

My head is small, very small.

"It's about getting constantly let down and people not caring, acting too self-interested. But if I were a bullet. . ."

Then you'd get through for sure. By their titles and sentiments, 1000 Violins seem tainted by this gap between hope and grimy reality. Songs like I Remember When People Used To Ride Bikes. . . Now We All Drive Cars: "We like a lot of things that have gone and past — things like 90 per cent of music now is utter rubbish as bands rely on producers and not songs."

Songs like their second single, Please Don't Sandblast My House: "Some things are best left as they were — like shitty blocks of flats. Ten years later they admit they're mistakes."

1000 Violins have also been known to sing The Walker Bros' The Sun Ain't Gonna Shine Any More. Yes, yes, life's often shit, and someone's got to say it on behalf of the silent minority. Martin Aston

THE RISK

Guernsey, one of the Channel Islands, is hardly famed for its spate of indie-pop bands; in fact, it's hardly ever been famous for any music. . . There's only ever been one band of consequence, to emerge from its shores, namely THE RISK, a young and aggressive duo who have released two albums in the last four hectic months. Frontman Mark LeGallez admits that they face more than a slight geographical disadvantage, being far closer to France and the continent than they are to Britain, but they seem to have made a fine job of overcoming it undertaking extensive tours of the US and Europe. In fact, they've played almost everywhere except England. LeGallez explains that they've just not had the time to do so, yet. It seems that The Risk are well on the way to being Guernsey's biggest musical export since Barry Grey's Joe 90 theme. Invitation To The Blues, their new Unicorn album, was actually recorded in Grey's converted German machine-gun bunker in Guernsey earlier in the summer.

Lifting influences from Elvis Costello, The Jam and a spate of '60s R&B stars, as well as dressing with an eye on the sharper side of Italian style, is bound to align The Risk with the now underground mod scene. LeGallez is quick to point out that, although the band have their roots in the mod scene, they've grown to include a much wider range of influences and styles, as Invitation — a strong slice of power pop tinged with hard brass arrangements — demonstrates.

DIESEL PARK WEST

Still, although their chosen name might suggest otherwise, DIESEL PARK WEST aren't a garage group, but an energised rock group who have already been harnessed with "pomp-proportioned stadium-rock" reviews. I'd say they're just guilty of magnifying guitar ecstaticus, West Coast harmonising and swelling melodies through a post-U2 1980's production (even, if DPW's John Butler says, they record on eight-track). It's rock, but rock naturally has peaks, no? "The immediate kind of image that rock 'n' roll or heavy rock has is a kind of semi-boziness," says John in defence, "with all these well-dodgy bands, or empty-shell bands as we call them, who pout and

THE GO HOLE

THE GO HOLE have created their own Open University. And they've opted to try "pop" music and how it can affect your life. But they blew it by sending out the wrong demo to Tip Sheet.

"It was a mistake, but who cares?"

They recorded a single themselves, the gloriously joyful Flight Of Angels.

"We're really skint now."

And after a touch of media attention, it got picked up by Pinnacle.

"We're always having to ring them up, like we have to ring up to get gigs and everything, it's really hard work."

But, guys, that's the game. It's confusingly confusing too. It takes time to learn the ins and outs, to get stuck into the real tasks and avoid the things that don't matter. You've got to be careful what you say.

"But we're a split personality. We say things to please people, to get an effect, to annoy."

And that seems to ring through to the music too. The "raunchy" sound is quite raw and aggressive ("it should be more raw") and is emphasised by the beat. My, you can hardly believe that there's just three of them.

"We're out to con people in a way. The label, Big Pop, is us too and that means we have to adopt a different attitude when we're being the label, than when we're being the group."

Uh, yeah. Pretty schizophrenic guys! Dave Henderson posture and strike their chords, but we think there's a link between being able to play loud and stridently but with some depth and vision — maybe with some undercurrent of weirdness."

What, like the admission of playing football on acid on the sleeve of When The Hoodoo Comes (their first single, on Food)?

"Usually we get beaten because we're the worst team, but the few times we've taken acid, we've played like Brazil! We were tremendous! But I don't think it's good to extol the virtues of acid, like this is the new hip drug again, and if you take it, you're somehow in tune with what's going on, because that's what happened last time, and I think that was wrong."

Footballers on Acid!!! Now there's a name. But the only certifiable returns Diesel Park West will get from this song are great billowing transfer fees from Large Record Companies United. Martin Aston

VEE VV

"Heh! C'mon now! Vee VV, your time has come!" Words uttered by fanzine editors nationwide, as Vee VV sent them into an irrepressible state of hysteria in the wake of their previous two releases, Kindest Cut and last year's Boom-Slump 12 inch. 1987 sees the punky Membranes (nah, make it funky James Brown) soundalikes putting together another slab of punky funk/funky punk.

Vee VV avoid getting hot and sweaty over the fact that Stump, The Shop Assistants et al get swooped off to major labels, while they are still slogging 'round the country supporting The Cradle, dragging their rolling bass and cutting guitars merrily in pursuit.

So the class of '87 steps up another gear, sleeps in another Transit van, releases another single. Now, that's something to look forward to. Dave Potter

● This month's Tip Sheet is another "thingy" from the house of Julian Henry. This month he teams up with legendary pal of the good guys, John Peel. Together, in the confines of Broadcasting House, they discover the dangers and delights of this month's demo bag. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1.

BANDUNG FILE (0494 813506) come from High Wycombe and went to some lengths to amuse us by sending their tape in a plastic gove. You really have to HAND it to them (get it?). Our star guest critic, Mr John Peel, was stoney faced though as he grappled with the glove trying to get it open, and it eventually took some deft handiwork with a pair of BBC scissors to extract the tape. John, it transpires, gets sent cassettes and records in all manner of bizarre disguises - he has seen it all, as they say - hence the lack of raised eyebrows at Bandung File's determined efforts. Their music was vaguely industrial with a few synth noises, and failed to register many plus points.

"I expect this sort of thing would go down better with Janice Long," he commented.

So would the intercoms be buzzing in Broadcasting House, as news of the Bandung File cassette's arrival in Radio 1 was relayed from office to office? "Er, no," said John. "I usually expect these bands to send material to both Janice and myself - of course I would dearly love to be able to answer the band personally with a letter, but due to the sheer volume of tapes, it's impossible. All I can say is that I do listen to everything that I'm sent."

The mountains of cassettes and records that surround Mr Peel in his office bear this out, and one can only ponder at the unhappy twist of fate that gives a DJ like Mike Smith an office full of researchers and assistants while JP is left to fight his way through ever-increasing piles of records and tapes single-handed. With tears welling into my eyes, the points were awarded.

3 5 2 5

SYCHOTOBE (8 Conniston Road, Newbold, Chesterfield, Derbyshire) did not make many friends with their mantle.

"What a crappy name," were John's exact words. Still, he seemed fascinated by the group's photograph which he studied for a few moments before passing across the room. It revealed four young men with longish hair, three of them wearing sunglasses, staring with a rather po-faced expression at the cameras.

"I don't usually pay much attention to pictures," said John. "In fact usually they go straight in the bin." But what of the music? "Well, it sounds a bit like the Gaye Bykers to me, I wonder if this lot come from Leicester as well?" We only listened to one song by Sychotode, and I asked John why this was. "You can usually tell what they sound like, if they're interesting or not, by one song . . . the problem with this sort of thing is that you can tell straight away who they've listened to, who their influences are." One thing that did keep John's attention for more than a few moments was the rather interesting piece of painted metal work that the group had stuck in with their package. Perhaps if we'd been reviewing this for Copper Beating Weekly they might have scored higher points, but as it is

THOSE FAMOUS RED SHORTS (65 School Lane, Standish, Wigan) managed to cheer John up for a few moments with their name which presumably he interpreted as a homage to his favourite football team. A conversation about groups with 'Red' in their name ensued.

"I used to like Simply Red until Mick Hucknall slagged me off in a Melody Maker interview," remembered John. "It struck me as being very odd as I'd had a perfectly friendly conversation with the bloke a few weeks before in the BBC bar . . . anyway, I went home and threw all his records away after that."

Back to the music. "A lot of people might say this is no good because it sounds like it's cheaply recorded, but I think it sounds rather interesting," decreed JP. I cravined, agreed. The group play normal instruments like guitars and suchlike, but their appeal is in their application, which shows some imagination and no little songwriting talent. A moody vocal sits on top, a trifle maudlin but attractive nevertheless - this group therefore score handsome dividends in the points department.

BURNING BABY (no address sent) prompted John to reveal one of his pet phobias - Jiffy Bags. "It came about when the National Front used to send various people turds in Jiffy Bags I think," he said. Happily, Burning Baby had not pursued this same line of self-promotion, though it must be said that their package contained all manner of useless junk, like torn up bits of paper, lists of books to read and lp pieces. Their music was an intriguing mess of spoken vocals, chopped up guitars, and the sort of drumming you'd expect from someone with his arms tied behind his back.

"I like the ideas but I don't think they see it through terribly well," said John. "It's all very well if you're going to do this confrontation stuff, but you've still got to be able to do it well; if they keep at it they might get better. I went to see The Butthole Surfers the other day, and though I didn't enjoy it I was impressed and a bit disconcerted."

CONSPIRACY (159 Lidgate Lane, Dewsbury, West Yorkshire) had sent a tape to John inside an Oxford Dictionary, a gimmick which successfully attracted us to their package. Their music contained a slightly confusing combination of a hip hop beat which suddenly turned into an Eagles track for the middle eight. "There are some quite good ideas here," said John. "It doesn't pull it off completely as it's not hard hitting enough; if you're going to do this sort of thing you've got to be aggressive about it." So had this been a little bit more muscley, would he have phoned them up?

"If I like a band's tape or record, I always call them and get in contact; we could then possibly have them in for a session." For Conspiracy though, such an opportunity does not seem to be on the cards. "Again, this is something that I think might be more suitable for Janice," says John.

GUTTERSNIPE (30 Rydal Way, Enfield, Middlesex) sound a bit like The Vibrators used to. Or maybe even The Ramones with a manic lead guitarist. "Ten years ago I would have thought this was fine, but now, in 1987 . . ." John tails off and looks dejectedly at the floor. The group are compiled of ex-Cock Sparrer, Infected Cut and Size Paranoia members plus a gentleman who used to clobber the biscuit tins for Jimmy Pursey. So they are obviously an outfit with a pedigree.

"They strike me as the sort of band who people would like to go and see live," says John. We cannot disagree with this. However, a stab at the charts would seem unlikely, though a healthy 'indie following' could result from a period of active Guttersnipe self-promotion. While the tape is clattering away in the background, John explains his current career as a journalist for The Observer. "Thursday night is my gig night," he says. "I see the band that night, and then have to get my review in by the following morning at 11.00am - it works well, as it means I have to concentrate on something intensely for a short period. I don't actually read interviews that bands do as a whole, as you have to wade through so much rubbish - I wish journalists would just write more of what they saw."

GIANT TREADS CLEAN (8 Brinford Road, Penn Fields, W'ton, WV3 0BA) evoked an interesting geographical comment from John. "These days you see a tape from Manchester and you find that it's usually more interesting than a tape from, say, Liverpool. This one's from Wolverhampton, so you don't really know what to expect." We listened to the cassette for a few moments in silence in order to redress this situation, and discovered an unusual sound that suggested a degree of original thought, and proof that groups with guitars don't all have to sound the same. "You have to hand it to them for getting away from the norm," said John. "Though I do find it a little off-putting the way that the singer goes 'Ooh-ooh'." The Underground view of the band is that with a period of development and a little more of those horn blasts, good things could be anticipated for the curiously titled Giant Treads Clean.

HORACE (c/o Jan Valentin, v.a Vinterg 228 703 44, Orebro, Sweden) excited us with the foreign stamps stuck all over their Jiffy Bag. What is happening in Sweden, we wonder? Errr . . . well, not a lot judging by this tape. John didn't like the chiming guitars, and I wasn't bowled over by the well-trodden rock avenues that the group seem bent on pursuing.

"It's a bad sign when groups send in great wads of words and lyrics," said John, waving a great portfolio of carefully typed sheets of paper about his head. "It means that they think they're terribly good, but it usually means they aren't. It looks like this lot seem to think they're rock outlaws or something when they obviously aren't. I mean, look at this fellow," he said pointing at the band picture. "This one's almost bald!"

It was true. There, among three fine young men with trendy quiffs and crops, was one poor soul with a bad attack of the billiard ball. What hope is there for Sweden with an effort like this?

"I don't mean to be hard," said John, perhaps reading my thoughts. "In a few years they might sort themselves out, but they will definitely need to re-think."

2 2 2 2

PIG (Skalitzer Strasse 49, 1000 Berlin 36, West Germany) made friends with John immediately and without fuss. "Any band with a name like that starts with an advantage," he explained, adding that Pig was the nickname for his wife. The strictly unbiased nature of the review was further borne out by my own admission that Pig were in fact personal friends of mine, and that my audience with Mr Peel had been engineered solely to bring their cassette to his attention.

The group have in the past contributed to various Genesis P Orridge and Neubauten records, a fact that seemed to interest John.

"I often wish that German music actually sounded more German," he said, as Pig's thundering metallic din chundered away in the background.

"There's a Foetus quality to this sort of music, only I've a feeling that the singer is pushing himself a bit hard as it sounds a bit forced," John said. Then, just as the conversation was threatening to penetrate further intellectual depths, Peter Powell walked in the door, drawn not by the music, but in search of cigarettes. A conversation about forthcoming appearances on Wogan ensued, and sadly, Pig were forgotten.

5 6 4 7

THE VOLUNTEERS (0774 892110) made their way onto the cassette deck just as John started tucking into his supper for the evening (a rather colourful combination of pickle, pitta bread and cheese). "Perhaps this group will get a better listen now I've got some food in my stomach," he muttered between mouthfuls. Meanwhile The Volunteers made their debut at Broadcasting House with a neat, if unsuspectacular performance that was notable for their singer's husky growls. "I'm not so keen on harsh voices," commented John. "It sounds like he's forcing it. A lot of the time when people sing like this, they don't really sound like they mean it."

Still, some signs of efforts at originality and spirit were apparent – despite the odd heavy metal guitar solo – and so the band scored above average in the points stakes.

THE BEANFIELD (20 Lynegrove Avenue, Ashford, Middlesex) sent us a cassette which resulted in an animated conversation on the merits of pop music. John admitted that he'd just about had enough of twee guitar combos and lemonade bands, but confessed an admiration for chart big-hitters such as Madonna and Terence Trent; The Beanfield contributed to the proceedings with some very mainstream and clean-cut Alison Moyet-sounding songs.

"This is too much for me," declared John. "It just doesn't seem to have much to offer, and it sounds like it's been done much too many times before." In the current climate of weedy white soul copycats though, the Underground opinion is that this might just have what it takes to impress those with the cheque books. Too feeble by half to make the ground shake here though.

WHIRLPOOL GUEST HOUSE (24 Dunedin Avenue, Hartburn, Stockton On Tees, Cleveland) touch a soft spot in my heart, coming at the listener with a dreadfully commercial wink and a nudge that's hard to turn your back on. John did not start a dance of joy as the tape spun though, despite a grudging confession that it was "well done and had a certain depth".

Is this not the sort of thing that a major label might sign? "Well, that's a complete mystery to me," the great man countered. "I've never understood the success of Curiosity Killed The Cat, though I'd agree that more pop music should sound like this. If I heard this on the radio I would turn it up, whereas a lot of the time I find myself turning it off."

So, Whirlpool Guest House partially succeed where others have come a cropper.

FLOWERSHOP (The Basement, 19 Ermine Street, Huntingdon PE18 6EX) wrote saying they'd appreciate a review in our magazine, and so of course we oblige. The band boast a primitive '60s delivery topped with an aggressive vocal, though there are a couple of problems – they don't know when to end a song, and seem unaware of the drawbacks of playing fast. A nice touch in Byrds-style harmonies though.

Mr Peel remained silent for a few moments before passing comment. "It's one of those things that I'd like to like but there's nothing there to keep me interested. When I listen to tapes like this, I begin to wonder who they think they're appealing to. I mean, it's well-rehearsed and I'd probably like them if I saw them down at the pub, but I can't really see where they're going to. It's agreeable I suppose, but it doesn't really inflame the passions."

That's the trouble with pop music I suppose, it's such fun to do, but we often forget about all the poor blighters who actually have to sit down and listen to the stuff.

If you want your tape reviewed and graded (remember, two ex-Tip sheets, then send them to The Tip Sheet, Underground, Seelight Publications, Greater London House, Westwood Road, London, NW1 2DZ.

JOHNSON ENGINEERING (Top Flat, 319 Kennington Road, London SE11) won the prize for the best name and the best package as they included nice looking bits of paper, like Xeroxes of all the Johnsons in the telephone directory. Perhaps the strain of the reviewing session was beginning to take its toll, but we gave them the award anyway.

"The only problem here is one of identity," said John. "There are lots of bands like this – most of them are Belgian – and not many of them have the quality they need to push them through. A tape like this should be saying 'Don't listen to that crap, listen to this' but it isn't quite strong enough. I think it would have had more impact a few years ago." However, Johnson Engineering should not be discouraged. Their drum machines and sampling tricks sounded fine at the end of the day.

SHEND ON THE RUN

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON NO 5: GET A SESSION, DO YOURSELF A WORLD SERVICE

While reviewing Buck Trillion's latest blockbuster, Harleys From Mars – The Sequel for Guinea Pig Monthly, I decided to idly flick through my postbag. I couldn't find any letters, but I suddenly remembered a question from a reader that was addressed to somebody else. 'What is Peel Session?'

Well... FACT ONE: The first problem is getting one. Put something fabulously interesting in the first 1.7 seconds of your demo tape and you could be on the way.

FACT TWO: Don't use tapes bought in packs of six for 28p on 'Better Dead Than Red Tape' market stalls.

FACT THREE: Make sure you pack the tape well, so it doesn't arrive in little pieces. (Although this could be considered to be avant garde, it cuts no ice, so avoid.)

So Mr Beeb rings you up and says 'you're on'. You now whizz to Maida Vale, in London, to set up for the contracted time of 1pm in one of the voluminous studios. During the inevitable wait for your designated BBC producer to arrive, you can stroll around this labyrinth of recording suites. See the aircraft hangar-sized orchestra studio where, if you shut your eyes, you can picture Andrew Lloyd Webber blowing another blockbuster musical-to-be into his hanky.

When the producer finally arrives, the loyal recording engineers put down their copies of Caravanning News and bugger off to the subsidised restaurant (three course meal for £1), so you have to as well. After your fourth pizza, chips and apple pie, you realise you have to record and mix four tracks by ten pm that very same night.

While feeling this sick, it is necessary to gingerly inform the producer that you haven't quite written the lyrics, and has he got a Merlin Spitfire engine for the noises in the middle of track four? ('Shite' and 'No' are the commonest responses to these statements.)

The BBC have spent huge amounts of the money they charge you and licence fees, (which also gives us the right to watch Benny Hill get older and more crap) on computer equipment, which, as precious seconds tick by, will go to sleep. Strangely garbed aliens are then summoned to fiddle with the slumbering behemoth. Technology is a fickle mistress.

Sessions always seem to go over time and the producer will make it fairly clear he is not too overjoyed at missing the Mission Impossible re-run on the box. Still, through all this struggle, the positives are numerous. You get well paid. You get paid again if the session is repeated. Mrs Higgins from your local paper shop will get her niece in Durham to listen and it may even be released on the Strange Fruit Record Label which zaps your pop charisma all over the globe. All in all, a jolly exciting and useful day out...

The Silos' country guitar class

Here is an American 'song' band that shares the same ring of authenticity as an REM but doesn't sound like them; an American band who draw up water from a country well but don't sound like Conway Twitty or The Long Ryders; an American band who don't sound like Hüsker Dü; an American band who can sing about heartache without wallowing in sentiment, and about sincerity without the sediment. An eclectic American band called The Silos, pioneered by one Walter Salas-Humara, once of Gainesville, Florida but now of New York, New York.

"I'll tell you what sets us apart, and that's the fact we work very hard on lyrics for one, and really hard on producing a sound where all the parts and all the people in the band fit together, with no one showing off. We think about what the song should be about first. We're very careful."

- The Gram Parsons/Flying Burritos country school of thought has been tagged onto The Silos in the past. Any truth in this? "I think that a lot of that comes from not really being able to play a guitar that well," murmurs a modest Walter. "I'm limited so I tend to strum a lot. . ." Ah, the strumming argument. "I play a lot of D over D, you see. . ." Lost me there, Walter. "Right away, if people hear an open D, they think it's country. I also grew up in the south so sometimes I affect a southern accent while I'm singing. For fun! But Bob" (Rupe, Walter's compadre) "is certainly a blues guitarist. The new album's far more rock, I guess."
- Hmmrrggph. I hear country on that LP, entitled Cuba, but scored out of a plaintive beauty, by violins, by open D chords and what could be called an urban definition of country. Martin Aston

IT'S ALL GREEK TO ME!

Anthony Fragos exposes the latest Athenian delights

Libido Blume, a band you may remember from July's review, were born out of the ashes of the semi-legendary Captain Nefos, broken up by bassist, vocalist and main composer Akis, who set off in pursuit of further fame. It was the end of 1984 when Libido Blume took their first deep breath of the grey Athenian smog and began rehearsing and composing as a trio. Nearly two years later, Colours Melting, an LP of extreme sensitivity, made its way into Greece's new rock 'n' roll history. These Blumes know how to write real pop songs, how to "rock" and steal your heart away! Through infinitely melodious vocals, crunching guitars and a merciless rhythm section, their songs, with a touch of psychedelia right in their core, are full of teenage angst and frustration. A few months ago, they released their new album, Brilliant Names And Dames and made a crushing appearance confirming their qualities. It's a truly brilliant mini-LP of five incredible songs. The end of September finds Libido Blume recording new material with Jon (Three-Johns) Langford!! Now this'll be well worth waiting for.

■ The Last Drive started in 1983 as a trash-psycho combo mostly doing cover versions of old rockabilly and garage-punk songs and soon developed into a dynamic rock 'n' roll band, combining all the values they had grown up with. Their obvious '60s punk influence helped them to be loved by a lot of youngsters, in addition to their dedicated psychobilly fans. It was time to go for worldwide recognition. They have already appeared on three garage compilations (Battle Of The Garages Volume 4, Sounds Of Now and Raw Cuts — European Volume), released a seven inch EP on Vox Records and undergone an extensive European tour. This explosion of activity is to be followed by a period of settling down to write new songs, and a single is already due out, probably to be called I Love Cindy.

- You bet!

Lolita Pop in disguise Sweden plays Lolita Pop!

Lolita Pop could easily be seen as the next potential Swedish music export, in the wake of The Leather Nun, Thee Three Monks and The Nomads. But eight years of indie life hasn't been easy. Their British album debut has finally come about after last year's contract with Virgin US was signed, but they've been preparing for it since '82/'83.

■ Lolita Pop's English-sung album is a string of the epic attacks which have brought them their well-earned reputation, one of the most promising Swedish indie acts. To say that they've flavoured their musical language in the American "new wave" tradition — Patti/Television — isn't the full story though. Certainly the New York circuit around '77 ignited their desire to express themselves but, like Echo And The Bunnymen, Lolita Pop found their own way to transform their influences.

■ The deal with Virgin, hasn't really changed the life of Lolita Pop. They still live in Örebro, 200 kilometres from the capital Stockholm and Mistlur Rec, which is putting out Lolita Pop in Scandinavia. (And, Mistlur's now growing into the biggest indie label in Sweden with their other "major" act, Imperiet, signed to A&M for the US.) Mats Lundgren

The Flowerpornoes ask what's German for Patchouli?

PORNOE SECT

"We want to be more famous than the Beatles..."

■ It's a long time since the German music scene has been as healthy as it is nowadays. An "ardent" newcomer are the Flowerpornoes.

■ The Flowerpornoes are megalomaniacs! They believe in their success, are keen on being hyped and are convinced of being pop stars real soon.

■ Their first release was "published" by the West German indie-magazine Pop Noise. After which the 'pornoes had a track on the important Big Store sampler The Sound & The Fury. It's the best song Tym G Liva (guitarist, composer, and singer) has ever written. The guitars are multi-layered — the result is a song with a guitar break that could have been from a Sonic Youth songbook.

■ Their first proper release is the ten inch Wake Up on Scratch & Sniff (a so called sub-label of What So Funny About) that's released in the UK through Red Rhino. The 4-track single contains pure guitar pop, the throbbing songs Neil Young and Bob Mould never wrote. An LP is to be released later in the year and one listen confirms that their self-confidence won't go unrewarded. Jan Cux

The French independent scene is alive and well but not always living in Paris. Although NOX now live in Paris, the group comes from Metz and release their first album, Sessions 84/86, on Dossier Records... from Berlin. Their music is based on heavy hypnotic percussion and metallic guitars, full of warrior chants and strange noises, with production which gives the music an almost live sound, the effects reduced for minimal expressions. Compulsive and intriguing, Sessions 84/86 is one of '87s best French records, placing Nox as the link between Swans and Test Dept.

■ Nox are now recording their new album for PERMIS DE CONSTRUIRE, a French independent which released Coup D'etat, a recent album by Manchester based MUSLIMGAUZE. "Coup D'etat features material recorded between 'HAJII" and

"JAZIRAT-UL-ARAB" (reviewed in Underground's July issue). In again, there's a middle-eastern mood in a more rhythmic vein which gives the music a more appealing edge. This record could easily have been released on Brian Eno's Fourth World series. Also on Permis De Construire, comes the first album by GEINST NAIT, simply called Geinst Nait, which reflects the good taste of French musicians for tough and weird electronics, noises and rhythms, using just tape loops and drums. A new album, L'or Cat, is due out soon...

■ Many musicians would probably kill to play the soundtrack for a Wim Wenders' movie, DICK TRACY, from Nancy, and they were invited to compose and play the music for Tokyo-Ga, a film directed by Wenders about Tokyo and Japanese director Ozo. On this soundtrack record Dick Tracy show their more melancholy side, which just appeared here and there on their previous records.

Psychedically Italian. . . and then some!

Are you ready for a roller-coaster ride into the scented time-tunnel of '60s-orientated rock? If you think that The Chesterfield Kings are weird and the Blacknight Chameleons are far-out, wait till you hear the likes of Joe Perrino & The Mellowtones or The Effervescent Elephants. . . c'mon let's go — whoopee!

■ Like many countries today, Italy has a lively and groovy underground of neo-psycho-garage bands, with a scanty but strong cult following. The compilation '80s Colours, published a few years ago, was the first piece of vinyl to hail the new trend. A Volume Two of this Italian battle of the garages is being compiled right now by journalist Claudio Sgarbi, who figure in the development of the movement through his work on the pages of Rockettella and Lost Trails (this last one a fanzine with a seven-inch record in each issue), and is director of the Electric Eye label (C.P. 144 27100 Pavia, Italy). Let's visit the cities more abundant with living-in-the-past devotees.

■ PISA — The Birdmen of Alkatraz are lissergic prime-movers guided by drummer-composer Daniele Caputo. They have a 12 inch EP on E Eye, Slidin' Off, that displays a skilled and obsessive love for The 13th Floor Elevators and similar vintage freak-outs. The Birdmen's early composition Song For Convict Charlie (yep, Manson, that's him) is a little gem hurled to us through a time-dimensional warp. Unlike the Dukes of Andy Partridge, there is very little humour here, but no sticky nostalgia either. Ex-hardmen guitarist, Maurizio Curadi has formed his own combo, Steeple Jack: the mini-L Serena Maboose (E Eye) shows definite west-coast/acid-rock influences emphasised by a sleeve reminiscent of Rick Griffin. The Liars play a straightforward brand of roots-garage: the trio, lead by singer-assist Alessandro Ansani, can be heard on Optical Sounds, a 5-track 12 inch on support Contrafacci (Viale Com. Zugna 63, 20144 Milano — I). The brains behind these three bands from the city of the Leaning Tower (Daniele, Maurizio and Alessandro) all used to play together as The Useless Boys: their 1981 cassette Dream's Dust Factory is already a mythical relic of the '60s renaissance.

■ TORINO — The Sick Rose moved from a varied psycho-beat-bluesy sensibility, but developed a personal language well rooted in the present. In fact, though they play many covers in concert, only one appears on their first LP Faces (again on E Eye), published after the EP, Get Along Girl, and contributions to international compilations like Declaration Of Fuzz (Glitterhouse Records). Luca Re and friends are excitingly honest and surely among the best neo-psycho acts worldwide.

■ No Strange represent the dreamy edge of the neo-'60s scene. They have already recorded two LPs and a single (Toast Records, via Duchessa Jolanda 13A, 10138 Torino — I). The new album, L'Universo, is a mind-combing delirium, partly in the native idiom, filled with languid sitars, sweet melodies and spaced-out effects. The singer Ursus is also the author of the mystical sleeve art, while Alberto Ezzu provides most of the arrangements and songwriting.

■ Also on Toast are Alberto Serra's Double Beat Five: their seven inch EP Have God!, with his convoluted guitar solo, seems lifted from the darkest hippy era.

■ MILANO — The bands in the Milan area joined forces and put a compilation out themselves on clear vinyl splashed with colours, entitled The Invasion Of The Tambourine Man (Silver Surfers, Screamin Men Club, Acid Flowers, Bad Medicine, etc). The record includes a couple of very twisted versions of Beatles and Zimmerman classics. Four by Art (late being labelled "psychedelic", but their two LPs on E Eye have an unmistakable '60s flavour. Pression are a garage-rock outfit with an aggressive Mini-LP, also on E Eye. Peter Seller and The Hollywood Party have released a single and two cassettes on their own Crazy Mannequin label (Via Montenero 5, 20098 San Giuliano Milanese — I). They've signed to Glass Records, so you'll probably hear more about them soon (and if you've seen the movie, you know what to expect).

IN WITH THE INSIGHT

Spahn Ranch, Glorious Din and Wiring Dept!

■ In these darkening musical times, when many Indie labels seem no different than majors, and records tend to be centered around making money instead of making music, one American label has emerged as a beacon in the darkness. Its home is San Francisco, and its name is Insight records.

■ Insight was formed in 1986 by musicians Eric Cope and Jay Paget, members of the now defunct Glorious Din. The first release on Insight was an album by Glorious Din, Leading Stolen Horses, which contained eight finely crafted, haunting songs.

■ Glorious Din's music centered around minimal drumming, melodic, intricate bass lines, a far-eastern guitar, and patterned, subdued vocals. Their music was very emotional, and this first release explored many varied states.

■ From their beginnings, Glorious Din were constantly active, playing and setting up gigs at the many venues in the San Francisco Bay Area. In the winter of 1985/6, following the release of Leading Stolen Horses they toured across America.

■ After becoming increasingly disillusioned, and generally fed up with the state of things in 1986, Glorious Din disbanded to go on to other projects. Before splitting up, they recorded a second album, Closely Watched Trains, released posthumously by Insight in May of this year. If the first album contained any flaws, it was mostly due to studio naïveté, and unfamiliarity with producer Matt Wallace. All traces of this had vanished by the time the second album was recorded. From start to finish, it is simply beautiful.

■ The intention of Glorious Din and Insight was always to help out other worthwhile bands. The band was never selfish, nor were they particularly trendy or hip. They were just four guys playing what they felt, and getting things together for other bands as well as for themselves. This was why Eric Cope also began a magazine, the illustrious and eclectic Wiring Department. Originally, the magazine served to give exposure to underground bands, such as Faith No More (who have released an album, We Care A Lot on Mordam Records); Trial (who've released one album, Moments of Collapse); MJB (who released one album, How To Abandon Earth, before recently re-forming as Raining House); The World of Pooh, Caroliner Rainbow, Problemist (album Nine Times Sanity released on Sordide Sentimentale); etc. etc.

■ The third Insight release was Thickly Settled, the debut album by a trio from Michigan called Spahn Ranch. Spahn Ranch had recorded a demo after playing only a handful of gigs, which Eric Cope was so taken with that he convinced the band to journey across the US to play some dates on the West Coast and to record the album.

The Spahn Ranch sound is sparse but powerful. Although they may draw from a post-industrial sensibility, their music is never trite or gimmicky.

■ The latest project in the works at Insight is a compilation, hopefully to include 14 of the finest underground bands from San Francisco and beyond, such as Stick Dog, Stiff Legged Sheep, Archipelago Brewing Company, Caroliner Rainbow and Raining House. Insight are distributed through Rough Trade, as is Wiring Department magazine. Both are also available from the source: Insight, P.O. Box 5599, San Francisco, CA 94101, U.S.A. David Katz ■ BOLOGNA — The Ugly Things are true followers of Yankee garage primitivism (and have a seven inch EP out on E Eye). Gli Avvoltoi (meaning The Vultures) have a lovely single on Teast, recreating an happy-sad beat mood and featuring an Italianise version of the Kings' 'A Well Respected Man'.

■ ROMA — Technicolour Dream, unlike the US-oriented majority of Italian neo-psychedelics, look back to English oldies-but-strangers (Tomorrow, Pretty Things, the inevitable Barrett). After a LP on High Rise, Pretty Tomorrow (!), they split into two groups, Sale Dawn and Magic Potion. With unchanged sound attitudes, both ensembles recorded a seven inch single (High Rise, distributed by Supporti Fonografici).

■ MORE EXOTIC TOWNS — There are plenty of bands to choose from, so I'll just drop a few more names. Soul Hunter from Firenze (Contempo Records) revisited Mr. You're A Better Man Than I, the old classic, painting in LSD-hues. Out Of Time live in Brno, out in the country, and suitably adopted a folkish-Byrdsonian style in their only LP Stories We Can Tell (Mail Records).

■ If now you want something wild and sexy, then look for the next three bands. The Boo-hoo' debut mini-LP, The Sun The Snake And The Hoo (E Eye), is an explicit homage to the raw power of The Stooges (including a remake of Search And Destroy). The opening title, TV Krooeger, must suffice for lovers of the splatter genre, who'll understand the general tone.

Follow that Crocodile!

JONAH MOYO AND DEVERA NGWENA

The smartest guitar steps I have seen this season have been those of guitarist brothers Jonah Moyo and Joshua Dube who produce a Bhundus sound, beefed up with brass and congas, and who dance like The Shadows on a hot tin roof. For this is Jonah Moyo And Devera Ngwena (which means follow that crocodile), probably the most sparkling of the African bands in Europe this summer, giving European pop a kick in the sensitive parts, except they're no longer sensitive, being in such a state of atrophy. Comparisons with the Brighthouse And Rastrick Brass Band and with Angie from East End may seem out of place but the origins of Devera Ngwena and The Brigs both lie in the same place. Both arose from the works band to increase industrial prestige, principle that was behind the rise of brass bands a century or so ago in this country. Jonah and most other band members were recruited in 1980 through newspaper ads to assemble a band affiliated with the local (Mashira) mine. A works band!

■ The Angle connection — Devera Ngwena have the distinction of having had an entire soap opera in Zimbabwe based on their most successful single, Solo na Mutsai, which tells the story of a young couple (Solo na Mutsai). This is one of two Devera Ngwena tracks featured on the Earthworks album Viva! Zimbabwe, still a good introduction to Zimbabwean pop and Devera Ngwena's only recording easily available in this country. Must try harder. Snap! John Lewis

Man chased by crocodile

■ Equally energetic, but with a Crampsian bend, are the indie veterans Not Moving, who have recorded for many different labels. Their recent mini-LP, Jesus Loves His Children (Spittle Records), captures well their mature surf-garage style, lead by Dome's flawless guitar work. Pikes in Panic, from Siena, are possessed by the same demon that seized Rudi Protrudi And His Fuzztones; you can do the Mary Dance with their self-produced seven inch EP (distributed by Toast) and only wish for an explosive album as soon as possible.

■ Well, if you're tired of depressive existentialism in black and boring artsy pants, you'll enjoy these sounds. The uncertain mastery of the English language by some of the groups only adds to the outlandish and peculiar fun. Here we leave the time-tunnel, running out of space and breath, but just wait next time for another googolplex of occult and unheard-of names. Vittore "Dizzy-on-Fuzz" Baroni

NEW FROM

SST

BRIAN RITCHIE

The Blend. Giving up the bass he played with the Violent Femmes for guitar, conch shell, banjo, jaw harp and elephant tusk, Brian Ritchie achieves "The Blend" on his solo album for SST. Combining influences as diverse as Sun Ra, Son House and Sonny Bono, he has concocted the perfect blend for the global village. From the untraditionally traditional version of John The Revelator to the hard funk of Alphabet, these eleven songs are THE blend for the eighties.

MEAT PUPPETS

Huevos. Hot on the heels of their amazing Mirage album, the Meat Puppets have done it again with a brand spanning new album on SST. Closer in sound to their legendary live shows, this record has balls. Starting off with the kick in the head double blast of Paradise and Look At The Rain and ending with the brain-crushing I Can't Be Counted On, this record reaffirms the Meat Puppets' status as one of the coolest bands on the face of the planet.

ANGST

Mystery Spot. Like never before, the songs of Angst are suffused with a shimmering glow. On Mystery Spot, the remarkable interplay between brothers Joe and Jon is fully realized with their best-sounding record ever! With a bow to country and folk, Angst take off on a hell bent for leather electric train ride on Outside My Window, Colors Of The Day, Mind Average and nine more songs.

THE LEAVING TRAINS

F*. The second album from the Leaving Trains on SST finds them claiming the throne of true rock! From the "Exile On Main Street" punch of the guitars to the personal words of I Falling James Moreland, this record is the one to play for people who ask "whatever happened to great rock and roll?". Hear for yourself what F is all about.

Always August

Largeness With (W)holes. A cryptic title gives you the listeners the cipher with which to break the mysterious code that is Always August. Backwards, forwards and inside out, the lifecodes that Always August reveal on this album are the keys to a healthy psychic glow. From the stone groove of About Time to the triple-deadbolt lock of Rahsaan Rollin' Cat, the new album from Always August paints a startlingly whole picture of your life.

DINOSAUR JR.: Dinosaur JR. Hot on the heels of their amazing SST debut LP, Dinosaur Jr. releases an EP of mega-sonic proportions. Featuring a mind-blowing rendition of the Peter Frampton classic "Show Me The Way", along with J. Lou and Murph's own classics Little Fury Things and In A Jar.

WIN A PHILIPS CD PLAYER! GET A FREE WIRE T-SHIRT!! SCORE AN EXCLUSIVE LP!!!

Tune into the Underground/Wire Records spesh compilation.

WIRE ★ TAPPED

sample the delights of the Wire label and you'll have the chance to get a totally free collection of the Wire back catalogue, a Philips CD player and Wire Records T Shirt.

What you've got to do is get token three from the centre insert of this month's Underground and add it to tokens one and two from the last two issues. Then just add a cheque for £2.50 (made out to Spotlight Publications) and put the whole lot into an envelope and send it off to Underground/Wire album, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1. . . just one month later you'll get a copy of Wire ★ Tapped LP and if you're lucky you might have won one of the other prizes as well. Talk about value for money?

LET'S HAVE SOME DETAILS HERE. . .

- Side One Wire ★ Tapped, the album features. . .
- The Leather Nun I Can Smell Your Thoughts (previously unreleased)
 - Sing Sing And The Crime Wasted Time (previously unreleased)
 - Man Kian Love For Pleasure (from November 1987)
 - Master Twins Squander (from October 1987)
 - Dirty Work Work Love You, Feel Me (from April 1987)
- Side Two
- Thirteen Moons Night Parade (from April 1986)
 - The Leather Nun Desolation Avenue (from February 1986)
 - All That Jazz Banner Of Love (from May 1986)
 - Tony Curtis Arsenic (from April 1985)
 - Houses And Gardens Dead Days (from March 1985)

The first 50 replies we get for this dynamic historical artefact of Wire Records and the sound of swinging Sweden will also receive a free Wire label T-shirt! Wow!

Then, for selected applications (numbers 127, 163, 204, 281 and 333), there'll be a box set containing a complete set of Wire's previous releases (that's a mere 25 singles and albums).
Wow!!

If all that wasn't enough, if you answer the question on the third token correctly, then you could win a brand spanking new Philips CD player, plus a copy of Force Of Habit — the 15 track CD-only compilation of the Leather Nun, to kick off your collection. Mega Wow! (The winner will be drawn on Monday, December 21.)

So don't delay, get these tokens coming. . . and if you're short one token, you'll have to see next month's issue to see if we're good enough to let you have another one.

YOUR CHANCE TO TOUCH VINYL AND BE CRED!

SO, WHAT HAPPENS WHEN INK MEETS RED FLAME? • Well, if you haven't had enough with the Wire Records/Underground compilation, this month also sees the start of a brand new offer where, yet again, you just have to collect three tokens (the first of which is in the centrespread insert) and in three months time we'll reveal the full SP on the Ink/Red Flame/Underground collection, which will feature PHILLIP BOA AND THE VOODOO CLUB, RUBY BLUE, TACTICS, SLAB, C-CAT TRANCE, SEVERED HEADS, CHARLES HAYWARD and THE MOODISTS among others. • So treasure that token and see what the next value-for-cash Underground compilation can give you in terms of terminal education.

Jes' like DAT! fact

Vinnie Reilly gets the full angle

FACTORY RECORDS become the first company to release product of a contemporary nature in the DAT format this month, when The Durutti Column's The Guitar And Other Machines hits the shops. Doubtless the shops themselves haven't even perceived a racking system for the new, tested medium, but label and group should reap enough press attention to justify the release.

With people still to-ing and fro-ing about the pros and cons of DAT and all its possibilities — and the one and a half grand price tag that the first units have — the question must be, can anyone afford such luxury, and if they can, won't their Durutti Column DAT cassette be a little lonely — the only other releases so far being a handful of classical ones.

The price for this debut DAT is going to be around 20 notes, too, and if you think that might be pandering to technology a little too much, there's a whole lot more in the way of the big sell going on around The Durutti Column as you read this very sentence.

In fact that DAT package is just one of nine releases that you'll be able to snaffle... and all before Santa loads his sled. The album will also be available on vinyl, cassette and CD too, and it'll be preceded by a single from the group, When The World, which will be in seven and 12 inch vinyl formats as well as a video single and video CD (another limited appeal technological development, mainly due to the lack of player units at this point in time).

Following all this, if you've got any pennies left at all, Factory will be releasing a box set of four CDs featuring all of The Durutti Column's output so far. So, hey, let's hear it for Vinnie Reilly and his Durutti's!

Gobsmack special!

Tot get physical for Debris

Manchester's Debris magazine has taken to embracing the vinyl venacular with a compilation of specially recorded material entitled Head Over Ears (through Red Rhino and the Cartel). After a justifiably positive review last month, the slow-reading Underground staffers have had a chance to read the bonus "Best Of Debris" magazine (a 48 page collection of material covering the mag's 16 issues) and, my, my, it's pretty damn impressive. ● Transcending the dangerously narrow waters of pop/rock/art, Debris moves in mysterious ways through Manchester's backwaters with considered extracts on author Raymond Carver, Bill Morley, Oscar Kokoschka, someone called New Order and several other luminaries of life. For the weak-hearted, there's also that vinyl thing included, with contributions from Tot, The Fall, The Railway Children, A House, Prince Kool, Big Black, Twang, Biting Tongues, Kit, King Of The Slums and Swivel Hips. Miss it at your peril.

WHERE IS JAMES KIRK NOW?

Often I've pondered on what that special something is, that something that's missing from the rich tapestry of independent pop in the late '80s. After flicking through my record collection one rainy Wednesday afternoon I decided it was the lack of shy luminaries like James Kirk. James was the man/boy/wonder behind ORANGE JUICE classics like Felicity (which alongside Teenage Kicks is probably the greatest indie pop record ever), Upwards And Onwards and Wan Light. Later, in his own group Memphis, James gave us the breeze that is You Supply The Roses — which to this day still sounds like a chart contender. Sadly, Memphis was shortlived — just one perfect pop record — and nothing has been heard from him since. ● So come on James, where are you? Are you a dustman, a roddie, a journalist for Health And Efficiency? Wherever you are let us know, 'cos believe me you are missed. Johnny Dee

RHINO'S IN NONE CAPITALIST SCARE!

OK, Red Rhino, that groovy mail order company, are so good to people, that they've paid us a million quid to tell the world that they've had a letter from someone in the Paisley area with a postal order for a copy of Laibach's Sub Rosa double A Baptism, but the guy hasn't included his address. Bad news! So, if you're reading this, man from Paisley, get in touch with them and remind them of your name (which they know) and, this time include the address. Go for it and get baptised!

GROOVY SIDES FOR SALE

Remember America? Remember when things were, well, cool? Well, US label K (yes, simply K) do, and they've released six seven inch 45s to celebrate the fact. "These are the first six volumes of our pop underground series," they mutter, "why don't you dedicate a whole issue to us?" Well, let's have a think on that one, but first let's explain to Underground readers that these classy discs are soon to be available through Fast Forward and the Cartel, and what's more, the new LP from The Beat Happening (who briefly rubbed parts of their body at Rough Trade last year) will be on 53rd And 3rd through Fast Forward.

Look Around

(a deep throat vocal line that wobbles all over their bank account. Tear-sodden poetry)

TROUBLE
Riverbed

(gritty guitar roustabouts, with a gyrating pulse and a wayward tambourine)

THE FEW
Rollin' Like The Tide

(a bashful bittersweet chirp along with an underproduced smoothness)

VOLUME IV
NORMAL
Man Thinks Woman

No-One EP

(another three tracker, this time an all girl bedroom strum with mistakes intact)

VOLUME VI
TROUBLE
Tarantula

(heavy metal played through practise amps, that sounds like neat psychepop)

• So, let's look at these first six volumes and let the good people of UK land know what K really stands for.

So, now we know what K stands for... KWALITY!

COMPETITION (OF SORTS) TIME!

- Last month, we magnanimously gave away six copies of the Swans new double, Children Of God and the winners of these little trinkets are R Haswell from Coventry, Steve Fricker from Bournemouth, Jason Peacey from Lancaster, Michelle Gregory from Blyth, Bradley Davis from London and Colin Poxon from Derby.
- We also offered you five Wedding Present stand-up George Best promo t-shirts and they were won by Gary Todd from Bolton, M Brunt from Norwich, Steve Hewson from Goole, Mark Hovler from Weymouth and Anth Magrys from Damington.
- And finally three lucky people get Leather Nun's Steel Construction and an LN T-shirt because they were really clever too. They are Malc Miller from Lincoln, Matthew Rees from Hereford and Dave Radnedge.
- So, watch those letter boxes.

REMEMBER THAT ANARCHO — PUNK-PSYCHE METALLIC OUTFIT THE GAYE BYKERS OF EL CID?

Well, we do, and we've got three 10 inch copies of their last in Tape single, Nosedive Karma, and those Byker boyz have scribbled all over them. We don't want them, so if you do, just answer this question, and if you're drawn out of our purple paisley leopard-skin tiffers you could win one!

Q Which fine city do The Gaye Bykers come from?

Send your answer on a postcard to Underground/Bykers, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1 as soon as you damn well can!

OH YES! Another month over, nearer to Christmas and finally, the release of the Underground/Wire Records spesh compilation.

"It's great, we love it," says everyone. Hooray! What's more we're putting together another tape to give away, but first we're doing another album, it's great, it's cheap, it's... well, did I tell you who was at the pictures when we went to see the preview of Steve Martin's Roxanne. Well! There was Marie Helvin and Bungalow Bill. Not very indie, I hear you say. OK. There was Simon Bates with three cheese sarnies. And he laughed in all the wrong places. No, seriously, though, what's happening in the world?

New Order are not splitting up, man! Barney's doing a solo album for EMI, and they're on sabbatical. Like, the Bunnymen, you know?

Birthday time in the metropolis saw Cooking Vinyl book a tacky Tex-Mex restaurant for their "do", but hardly anyone could get in unless they were sardines, then Beggars had a post tour "iig" at The Fridge with a free bar. Everyone who was there pressed themselves against the bar in a strange press ritual.

Furthermore, Jonathan King rests his case m'lud. He's done a cover of Wild World that sounds like The Pet Shop Boys' It's A Sin to present in court as the East End Boys sue him. It's on UK through Pinnacle... pretty indie, pretty controversial.

Pirate TV is back... again. Well almost, as the Network 21 name is being bandied about again. They had a party at the Fridge (with Meat Beat, Nitzer Ebb and In The Nursery), but still they haven't broken into the TV airwaves. Next year, they say. Next year?

Better still, The Bachelor Pad (we love 'em) have a new single scheduled on Warholasound, while Blast First have shelved all releases — like the new Head Of David LP and their label comp until next year. What is imminent is a compilation tape from For All And None called In Motion with tracks from Son Of Sam (their LP postponed till January due to sleeve and cut probs), Psyche, Hard Corps and more. Blah, blah, and

fiction

Welsh radicals, Traddodiad Ofnus have had their album on the West German Constrictor label seized at customs because it's risqué. Don't know how they can tell as it's in Welsh. But... snooker buff, Steve Davis turns out to be a big fan of Magma and he's paying for them to play in the UK in the new year, as well as hopefully getting them on at the UK Electronika fest.

The Warhols idea of writing their own features and submitting them has been followed by a Christmas card from the group while other labels try the same. Waterloo Sunset sent in a feature on Eleanor Rigby by one of her pals. Not constructively precise or in English, we cannot print any of it as yet. But we're trying. Similarly Martin Aston's near legendary Adi Newton feature — about The Anti Group and Clock DVA — is still at the translator.

Channel 4's Famous For 15 Minutes prog, is set to show off the lovely Jack Rubies among others, and further series are planned.

Back in tape-zine mode, Head In The Clouds are hawking a tape-zine featuring Behest Of Ushura, Scraphead and a bunch of other unpronounceables for £1.50 from 74 Monteth Crescent, Boston, Lincs.

JAMMS have edited out all the dodgy bits from their 1987: What The F's Going On album and have come up with a 25-minute 12-inch which they're selling as 1987: The Edits. Now, that is rock 'n' roll, isn't it?

Food (who brought you Woodentops, Zed Mindperson, Crazyhead and Voice Of The Beehive) have been offered label deals from EMI among others. And, Medium Cool have been elevated to label-of-the-year by the Ugi staff.

Mossa

Robert K Cohen's
Big Comment

after the fact

There's a lot of them about:

Smiths, I mean. Witness the severely sycophantic interview in a recent NME, where James Brown helps Mark E. Smith snigger at The Smiths, and Morrissey is branded as being "a professional Mancunian". If I interpret this snipe correctly, it's ironic to see the accompanying photo, where The Fall pose in front of four professionally-Northern-looking cooling-towers. A much more accurate exposure of The Smiths' preoccupations was, surprisingly, provided by Melody Maker's piss-take of the famous South Bank Show special — and the task was virtually achieved in one line:

"During the daytime we used to hang out at the local abattoir. It seemed a perfectly natural thing to do." *

And talking (via a tenuous link) of Stiff, the final nail in its coffin was the departure of Dave Robinson. The name lives on under ZTT, but not for The Pogues, who've been given their own label. The forthcoming album will be released on 'Pogue Mahone', which, as we all know, was the original name of the band before Radio One got their sanctimonious claws in. ★ That leads us back to Leon Rosselson's

'Ballad of a Spycatcher'. Despite the BBC's granting of airplay approval, the IBA has distanced itself from such a decision by telling independent radio stations to get their own legal advice about the record.

Nothing to do with me, guv; I'm just the bloke who bans things.

Meanwhile, the home of Peter Wright, Australia, was recently the recipient of acclaim from The Proclaimers: Craig Reid told NME, "They're the best bastards going. Dead straight. The government might be a bit corrupt, but I like a nation where a working man gets some respect". 'Dead straight', huh? How about the working aborigine? So far this year, I hear, there's been one aboriginal death in police custody every 11 days. In South Africa, they have a special phrase for racism: it's called maintaining the status quo. Or is it that Status Quo have a way of maintaining the apartheid? Either way, it helps if you play Sun City. It's also nice to know that apartheid is alive and well and living in Britain — at Leicester's Glenfield Lodge Hotel, to be exact, where the Bundhu Boys were refused accommodation, despite having booked four days in advance. I wish them well in suing the hotel manager to death — or at least to bankruptcy, which will probably be more painful.

Now, I always think that letters pages reveal a lot about a music paper. Take Melody Maker's 'Pop! The Glory Years' — a slagging-off of everyone who's uttered a note in the last 20 years (except for Lou Reed, whose anal cavity is given a good polishing by the Maker nose). In response to a complaint about said feature, Caroline Sullivan explained that 'PITGY is intended as a tongue-in-cheek look at this rock thing'. In that case, the whole of MM must be 'tongue-in-cheek', because PITGY is just a highly potent concentration of all the bile usually expressed throughout the paper. "Why is it so difficult to accept that others' opinions may differ from yours?", asked Ms Sullivan of another correspondent. It's a good question, and one her colleagues should be made to answer. Question of the year, however, was the one posed in Smash Hits: Would Mike Peters of The Alarm be buying any BP shares? No, he said, but hailed privatisation as "a good thing for people on the shop floor". As to whether it was Tory bribery. . .? "I wouldn't know about that".

Nice to see him getting his head quickly back in the sand, in line with S.HITS editorial policy.

ABSOLUTE ESSENTIALS FOR SUBVERSIVE LIVING

"IN THE SUMMER I WEAR MY TUBE TOP

AND EDDIE TAKES ME TO THE DRAG STRIP. . ." — Big Stick

Eddie is Ed Roth and he'll take us all to the drag strip, courtesy of that filthy fiend of the freeways, Rat Fink. Ed Roth was the mama of all the hot rod customisers in their glory days, a master of making the goofiest idea into an axle-based reality.

The big car manufacturers weren't falling over themselves to pick up his ideas as Tom Wolfe predicted in his Kandy-kolored Tangerine-flake Streamline Baby profile, but what did Roth care, he was quickly becoming his own one-man industry.

When he wasn't sprayin' and weldin' machines he was churning out t-shirts and over-seeing merchandise. Ravell model kits of Ed Roth's Custom Monsters are still highly collectable (ask Big Black's Albini), the most popular of these was, yes indeed, a Rat Fink 3 million seller.

Now the nasty little grebo's got his own 3-D comic and it burns all cylinders, eyeballs poppin', tails lashin' and cam-shafts grindin'. Featuring: knockabout gag strips; an A-Z of custom/drag terms ("Z is for Zoomic Usplurge Headers" naturally); an interview with Ed Roth; a 3-D treatment of the cover he did for the Birthday Party's Junkyard, and best of all — the centrespread, with layers and layers of the gnarliest 3-D you'll ever see, but mind for the hound of Frankenstein sniffin' round the back of your eyesockets. You've been warned!

Rat Fink 3-D is published by 3-D Zone and can be bought for £1.75 (including 2 pairs of coloured specs) from all good comic shops.

Also in the series and well worth checking out — Krazy Kat 3-D and Basil Wolverton 3-D.

THE WORLD IN PLASTIC AND PAPER

Two confusingly daubed A5 'zines with large dollops of plastic are But That's Downbeat And Ridiculous Sharon and Two Pint Take Home.

Downbeat comes with a spiffy three-track noise from Sperm Wails plus a hard vinyl seven-inch in pic bag with tracks from The Turncoats, Membranes, Dog Faced Hermans and the Wails again.

Meanwhile, Two Pint has a few sentences on groups plus a flexi featuring the rather pleasant Fat Tulips and the angry Rosehips on a cover of The Chesterfields' Ask Johnny Dee.

(Prices are £1.50p plus sae for Downbeat from Elvina Flower, Keeping On Records, The Basement, 125 Wilton Rd, Victoria, London SW1 1JZ and 50p plus sae for Two Pint from Mark at 12 Chatsworth Place, Longthorpe, Peterborough, Cambs, PE3 6NP). Triv Tel

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME!

Gimme donations, Shelter asks on behalf of its campaign for the homeless, and what better way than to swoop your loot for a massive 33 band sprawl of a video? If we're dropping names here, Shelter have reeled in the lot — Shop Assistants, Mighty Lemon Drops, That Petrol Emotion, the Mary Chain, Wedding Present, Stump, Soup Dragons, down to the likes of American entries Sonic Youth and Big Black (both live in London) and New Zealand candidates The Chills, Bats and Verlaines. Hand-held, hand-reared and handsome, some of the quality is D-I-Y-negative in the ideas department, plus the choice of bands conforms too easily to the idea that indiepop is white and guitar-based, but there is absolutely no reason whatsoever for not purchasing, because this is as good a document of the times as it is a cause. Martin Aston

CAT SCRATCH VIDEO!

Jettisoundz release volume three of their Blood On The Cats series in the guise of For A Few Pussies More, a 12-track, 60-minute, collection featuring some of the more tattooed acts on the live circuit. A mix of shot and live footage, some of the acts come out better than the others, and The Riverside Trio and Howlin' Will both appear to be the kind of talent that crave a wider audience. The Turnpike Cruisers' visual escapades are quite commendable while Bad Karma Beckons make their anthemic Six Brides For Jerry Lee seem rather pathetic due to a less-than-inspiring filmic debut. With The Meteors, The Wigs, Restless, Frenzy and Way Out West all in plus-mode, it's a healthy collection overall, and it's available through Pinnacle. Dave Henderson

THUNDER READ!

Johnny Thunders' life and times are recorded in black and white for all to see in the 130-page In Cold Blood (Jungle Books). Written by gang-faithful Nina Antonia, it takes Johnny as King, and put-upon guy, rather than probing too deep into his drug problems, or exposing anything New York Dolls fans might not already know about his early days.

Worse still, if you wanted to lose any faith in the guy, just check the cringingly drab picture captions from the pen of JT. One-sided fan stuff that aficionados will swallow whole, it might choke the more thoughtful though. Ripley

BLITZOIDS

Stealing From Helpless Children

Mook Records (PO Box 1421, Lisle, IL 60532, USA) ●● Great album title, even better song titles (The Beard Of Percy, Lobotomy and Try And Stop Us), and what a weird album. It's hard to describe — 'unstitched, experimental jazzy pop that's had too much cheese to eat before going to bed' might be one third of the way there. It's quite Residents-like in its playful anarchy and submerged mayhem, if that's any guide. Maybe 'a protective musical box turning out truly psychedelic nursery rhymes that range from minimalist frenzy to simpering toy pop in the same breath' might be another third of the way. Actually, I think the remaining third better be up to your imagination. Martin Aston

THE BODHI-BEAT POETS

White Light

Dead Man's Curve DMCO!! RR C ●●● Manic funk-jazz fronted by Buddhist punk poet Craig Runyon, which makes the Last Poets sound positively tame. Side one is angry: Hard, funky rhythms and gruff vocals combining to particularly good effect on Peace and Drugs-Jack, two savage attacks on complacent alternative lifestyles.

Side two is more jazzy and melodic with the words extolling the virtues of Buddhism in a way reminiscent of latter day Coltrane. There is some fine playing from the assembled musicians including Ian Caple on guitar, Lol Coxhill on sax and Ric Sanders on violin. Maybe some will find the Allen Ginsberg style of recitation hard to take in places but mostly it works surprisingly well, making this one of the most original and exciting albums I've heard for ages. Frank Pigg

THE BOMB PARTY

Liberace Rising

Worker's Playtime PLAY LP 2 ●●¾ Liberace Rising won't disappoint BP fans, it's loud, lewd and obnoxious in places, just as you'd expect. But, what I can't get to grips with is, how the latter tracks on side one and the beginning of side two sound like a totally different combo. For these tracks, the rock guard is down. After the obvious My Degeneration, can you handle seven tracks where the party gets close to Clock DVA's dance style — with steel toe caps — and sample Art Of Noise, with guitars emblazoned on their lapels? Probably

BREATHLESS

Three Times And Waving

Tenor-Bossa BREATH LP 6 NM C ●●½ There's a lot here that doesn't immediately filter into the thickness of your mind. Breathless are precious and at times sound remarkably huge, overblown, and a touch pompous. . . but they weave such a wondrous spell. Three Times And Waving could be seen as morbid, but at least it's mesmerising, it grabs you by the ears and massages you for a full 40 minutes, never attempting to bully, just to smother you in music. After the second and third play it gets even more intoxicating as it merges into one elongated wash of sound. It's a breathtaking suffocation, that'll leave you gasping for more. Dave Henderson

C CAT TRANCE

play Masenko Combo

Ink Records INK 33 NM C ●●● The progression of C Cat Trance through the tinkly market squares of an Indiana Jones film, through the portals of rock eclecticism and back to the table of ambient obscurity, has produced some fine music in the past, but never have they managed to get the chemistry to click to the level of play Masenko Combo. This new LP houses 50 minutes of intensely unique music, where slim similarities such as New Order in Calcutta or an Asian film soundtrack music gone pop, are the only phrases that can be spread over the proceedings. This is a finely honed and well distinguished LP that lapses into greatness every so often. . . while still suggesting that they have even more to come. Dave Henderson

THE CELIBATE RIFLES

Roman Beach Party

What Goes On Goes On 11 Sh ●●½ Gawd, this is boring. . . into the grey and pink mush that is my brain. . . and I like it! Doing the rock/surf/punk dance thing has become an institution in Australia, with, seemingly, thousands of guitar combo's churning out the same crashing waves of beach rock and seaside punk; a lot like the Celibates, but without the same amount of energy and adrenalin that is present at the Roman Beach Party. Jump up and down, spin around, slam, but for fs sake move! Yeah, yeah, yeah, yahoo! Daz Igmeth

THE CRUCIFS

Wisconsin

Alternative Tentacles VIRUS 53 Sh ●●½ The Crucifs play protest songs in a variety of interesting styles; punky, trippy, folksy and jokey; and wait till you hear the vocalist! Singing, whining and shrieking such dreadful obscenities as "There's gotta be something really wrong here when pigs are allowed to reproduce"; well, really, did you ever? Hope so!

So, great music, good clear-headed lyrics and a vocal style that borders on the ludicrous; this is the formula that will, hopefully, boost this band higher into the field of your vision. Take a listen to Wisconsin; "This is not Disneyland. This is not punkland. This is Indian land. This is Indian land. You must be wondering how I know all these things. . . well, I'm God, so listen up, okay? My will be done." Amen! (Tee Heel). Daz Igmeth

DEATHWISH

At the Edge of Damnation

Metalworks VOV 667 ●● Deathwish are, claims the press release, the best British deathmetal outfit. On the evidence of this album I wouldn't disagree as they whip up a convincing brew of Sabbath-influenced heavy metal and hardcore thrash, that certainly leaves their English rivals standing. Their main asset is the superb guitar work of Dave Deathwish, who somehow manages to be faster than the speed of light, while avoiding the usual mind-numbing cliches. It's just a pity they seem to lack the sense of humour that gives their American and German counterparts the edge. Still, recommended if you don't like the lyrics too seriously. Frank Pigg

DD RANGED

Deranged Records 5D (660 Azalea Rd, Suite 121B, Mobile, AL 36609, USA) ●¾ A subtle rocky pop sound deftly nestles around some dodgier than thou lyrical content here. Some of these DD Ranged folks seem to be busting to get deranged, to act as men in macs — living rock to the max — with more than a touch of self-conscious, self-destructiveness, bred into their music. To the general ear zone, Unfolded is pleasant enough, performed with spark and zest. Stuck tight in the "all lads together" marshland of deep south America, it's a little redneck at times, but it's disturbing enough to keep the interest. Dave Henderson

THE DEEP FREEZE MICE

War, Famine, Pestilence And Miss Timberlake

Cordella ERICAT 024 (8 Denis Close, Leicester, LE3 6DQ) ●●¼ The further developments, and unravelled mind-blowing brain numbness, of the Mice! Well, at least The Deep Freeze Mice can create something akin to originality with their eclectic blend of everything from Yes to Stockhausen — via The Beatles. This mouthful of a title doesn't contain as many of the group's commercially-structured "songs" as previous excursions have, but it's a fine musical montage nonetheless. Investigate and watch the cerebral fluid boil. Ripley

Is

Contempo CONTE 115 RR C ●●● The Difference could easily have slipped through their own self-building process into a dodgy cesspit of vice, self-indulgence and psychedelic nostalgia, but no. Instead, this album is a pretty magnificent creation that sucks and blows fiery guitar pop, trips the light fantastic for the sake of art and its own good, and ends up with a collection of songs that are at first uplifting and eventually an absolute necessity.

It would be crass to say that through one LP, The Difference have introduced a kind of freedom in their sound that most groups never hope to manage, but there you have it. . . The Difference are different, they are passionate and emotive and they are essential ear fodder. Avoid at your peril. Ripley

DIVINE HORSEMEN

Snake Handler

New Rose ROSE 134 D ●¼ This is a pretty par for the course rock record from The Divine Horsemen. Cult popularity and the drab state of US rock might make this LP buyable, but there's nothing really here, other than the sound of Chris D and his cronies treading water. The whole thing is conducted on a low gas burner, and Julie Christensen's vocal lines never get the chance to be more than "supportive". TC Wall

DUMPTRUCK

For The Country

Big Time Records ZL 71492 (Distr BMG Records) ●● Dumtruck (hmm, dunno about the name) occupy that precarious American country-meets-rock arena, as conquered by REM. Occasionally, they reach similar heights (Going Nowhere, Particularly) and do it in fine style. But similarly they do occasionally stray too far towards the rock cliché to fully succeed.

All credit to them for attempting a bit of variety, though there is something of a surfeit of over-dramatic slowies. Certainly, this LP demonstrates their fine musicianship well, particularly on the guitar, which they seemingly bend to their every whim. One to watch, for sure. Carole Linfield

THE DURUTTI COLUMN

The Guitar And Other Machines

Factory FACT 204 D ●●● The Durutti testament turns over a new technological leaf and is available not only on vinyl, cassette and CD, but also in the new squeaky-clean DAT format. And, who better to break this new ground than the Duruttis — whose high-class guitar music has approached meteoric proportions of melancholia?

That Vinni "Mr Column" Reilly hasn't particularly moved mountains to diversify his talented beginnings matters not a jot, because The Guitar And Other Machines is just as unique as his first breathtaking finger-plays on Sketch For Summer from his debut LP. The Durutti Column's instrumental phases and phrases, shows the would-be classicist world of new age music for the thin and tacky nothingness that it truly is, while raising Reilly's work onto a level with of a Glass, Reich or Branca. Exceptionally good. Dave Henderson

EDWARD II AND THE RED HOT POLKAS

Let's Go Polka Vol 1

Cooking Vinyl Cook 006 NM C ●½ In which The Mekons and various other born again roots musicians take the listener on a tour of worldwide instrumentals, from the Scottish reel of The 79th Highlanders Farewell To Gibraltar to the more contemporary The Walls Of Butlins. That the instrumentation stays the same throughout — plenty of accordions and violins, though not a trace of vocals anywhere — contributes to a disappointing sameness that shouldn't be apparent in a collection of such supposedly varied numbers: the ace card of Dawn Run, distinctly cajun in flavour, is played first, and the record fails to then rise above it. But not to sound despondent, for taken in small doses, Let's Go Polka Vol 1 is a good time roots sound destined to entertain. Tony Fletcher

MAX EIDER

The Best Kisser In The World

Big Time ZL 71428 ●● Uncle Max gets into Byraves and Sinatra pose, polishing his smooth larynx with a bar towel on this mouth-fresh set. A big production and some difficult tempos throw the proceedings into a dangerous world of all-embracing croonery, that only occasionally stops a second to upturn its collar. Max has taken his feet off the coffee table and laid his silky sweet sheet music there instead, a fluffy pop cloud, with dollar signs, hangs above the proceedings and you expect him to tap dance at the drop of a cocktail glass. This is sophisticated stuff, do not file under punk! Ripley

FLYING COLOR

Frontier FLP 1022 (Box 22, Sun Valley, CA 91353, USA) ●7/8 Flying Color's songs are bendy plasticine visions, coloured with light and dark reflections of life's happenings. Intriguing, interesting, cherishable tunes that brim with affection and drag a wry smile to cracked lips. Flying Color's only real problem, as they tell their story with a harmonious, almost Hollies/Beatles veneer, is their inability to develop the initial ideas they throw out on track one. Samey for sure, but lovable all the same. TC Wall

FRANK CHICKENS

Get Chickenized

Flying Records STIR 1 ●3/4 The Frank Chickens have enjoyed cult status for some time, yet so far have failed to capitalise on it, perhaps because their act can be interpreted as a rather twee, self-deprecating East meets West act which easily wears thin. It's true that such thoughts rear their Godzilla-like heads on this LP occasionally too. But, having said that, Get Chickenized incorporates some fine instrumentation, some excellent songs and some undeniable lyricism.

Steve Beresford and David Toop played on and produced this opus — they're an independent version of Stock Aitken Waterman, it sez here — so maybe it's more than uncanny that the Chickens look like an Oriental Mel & Kim on the back cover.

There's a nice twist of styles on here, some of which show off the girls' vocal capabilities nicely, and others, like the excellent We Say You Say, which blend a dance beat with interesting lyrics, tipping more than a wink at classics like Tom Tom Club's Wordy Rappinghood. And Chicken Ondo sounds like some kind of Indian chant set to a surrealist backing.

Someone once said that the great Japanese joke on the rest of the world was sushi. Likewise, you're best advised to take the Chickens as they are here — raw and juicy. You won't even get a bad stomach the next day, either — can't be bad. Carole Linfield

GHOST DANCE

Gathering Dust

Karbon KAR XL303 ●2/3 Ghost Dance continue to grind into their basic post-punk-pop style and, inevitably they manage to come up with some interesting sidelines. Gathering Dust features a brace of '86 recordings including covers of Golden Earring's Radar Love, Roxy Music's Both Ends Burning and Suzi Quatro's Can The Can. All are sweet pop and true to their roots, but it's in the group's self-penned output that the real test lies. The majority of it bodes well for the future, but they're still searching for that big one that might just break through to a few more would-be Ghost Dancers. Johnny Eager

HEADS ON STICKS

Second Feed

Dead Mans Curve DMC Q23 ●1/2 Not as promising as you might think; great name for a band, pity the music is so bleeding monotonous most of the time. Fine ideas and some spooky sounds get spun out far further than patience is willing to allow; what starts out sounding eerie or evocative becomes a nuisance through lack of change and, in the end, ends up going nowhere.

Experimentation with the existing sound that they already possess might yield something of real worth, though. Stick at it, Heads. Daz Igymeth

HURRAH!

Way Ahead

Esurient PACE 2 ● Worra bitch! Difficult to describe this live recording of Hurrah! which was specially recorded through one of the audience's sock while the soundman was in vodka heaven. The noise is not good, but the embittered pop of Hurrah! just about manages to shine through the mire. Fans would have forked out the cash on Camden Market for a live tape of this, but on LP the flaws become even more obvious. There will not be a simultaneous CD or DAT package. Johnny Eager

So Cruel

Play It Again Sam BIAS 52 ●1/2 I feel so mellow listening to this album. Eight tracks from Steve that listlessly wander through the recesses of your mind leaving little to grasp other than the Kleenex. There's always been a difficult ground bereft from folk and country, on a road to The Eagles or Crosby, Stills & Nash, and Steve Lake's battered guitar case and sorry tales is slouched on the sidewalk with a dry throat. A commendable collection of sounds and ideas but not something that makes you bust to play it. Dave Henderson

DINO LEE

The New Las Vegas

New Rose ROSE 127 ●● This guy is weird. A touch of funky brass surrounds this Daii-esque crooner who gets throaty over such gems as Wayne Newton Is A Dike?, Stud Pony and The Whole World Is A Hat. Nightclub cabaret sounds with a gory, beefed-up, blood-spattered edge and you know what? Well, maybe not, and definitely don't ask me to explain this rowdy white trash, just open up your ears...and inhale. TC Wall

LOCOMOTIVE LATENIGHT

Centre Town Sunset

KDY Records KDYLP 3 ●● Hot from Kirkcaldy, Scotland, come the LL's with a seven track mini-album. And, despite taking the familiar rock road, there are two factors which separate this band from the rest of the mob; firstly, the downbeat Bunnymen vocal and secondly the gusto with which they perform — one suspects that live they are a truly rabble-raising proposition. This record has all the rawness of a first attempt, and promises well for the future. Julian Henry

THE LONG TALL TEXANS

Los Me Boleros

Razor ●7/8 A six track mini-set from the lads with a wry smile and a Clash cover in their pocket. Rockabilly that shakes and rattles in the perfect style of The Clash's Should I Stay Or Should I Go?, and manages to retain that barbed expression throughout the other five tracks that are on show. Succinct and slightly soiled, The Long Tall Texans holler up a storm, as well you'd imagine, and if they can regain the press interest that they had in their last two singles, this should do quite nicely for them. Johnny Eager

LOOP

Heaven's End

Head HEAD 1 ●2/3 Loop's peppered psychedelia has been acclaimed in the past as a God-head noise that's capable of all sorts of unbelievable excesses. Maybe first time around, their novelty was something to gag at, but even the summer of love, part 14, seems a little distant as the leaves are turning brown. Out of the magic mushroom season, it's unlikely that Loop will be able to turn heads like they did, but that'd be something of a shame. Heaven's End is a stylised platter in its own right, as it grinds and churns through unclassifiable rhythmic hues, leaving guitars to overload for the hell of it. By the end of side two, it's become part of your personality, and you just need another hit to get you through the night. Loop leave you wanting and, as a sales-point that's an ideal situation. Ripley

THE MACC LADS

Bitter, Fit Crack

FM Records WKFMLP 100 More songs about sexual fetish and drinking from the frustration/ale collective. The question is, though, does anybody buy this shoddy dross? Johnny Eager

MCCARTHY

I Am A Wallet

September ●●● Why hasn't this LP been raved about, why haven't people been screaming from tall buildings that McCarthy are the best band ever? I've had this album two weeks and it's already worn out, without hesitation — it's my favourite record this year. McCarthy give us songs of intensity, songs about politics, struggle and irony, coupled with the most accessible melody. There is beauty and romance hidden within this album's velvet glove, it's subversive pop in its rawest form, militant pop in splendour.

I Am A Wallet is an essential purchase not to be shyed away from. Johnny Dee

THE MIDNIGHT CHOIR

Trussed By Buddha

Probe Plus PROBE M16 ●3/4 This mini-album is best summed up by looking at the cover. An indistinct collage of something, which is either gold or a funny brown colour. The group's name is almost undefinable, and when you flip it over the story gets even less clear. Fact is, for the most part this terse, jerky, outburst is quite gold-like in its structure and delivery. The Midnight Choir are unfortunately faceless and will probably find it difficult to impress with their distinct driving sounds, but for those lucky enough to come across Trussed By Buddha, it's an ancient artefact that's worth catching hold of. Dave Henderson releases in the independent sector shock!

CABARET VOLTAIRE's recently-deleted past, on the Rough Trade and Crepuscule labels, gets a timely re-release — as they have their latest washing aired on Parlophone. CD purists can now sample The Golden Moments Of on Rough Trade (through the Cartel), an 11-track set which features Do The Mussolini (from their first EP), Nag, Nag, Nag and Seconds Too Late (from the RT seven inch catalogue), Sluggin' For Jesus (a 12-inch A side from Crepuscule) plus a handful of album tracks spanning their first self-titled affair to their last, 2x45, before the departure of Chris Watson.

The Wedding Present's George Best album is out on CD on Reception (through Red Rhino and the Cartel) with two extra tracks — a cover of Girls At Our Best's Getting Nowhere Fast being one of them. The Cartel seems to be moving frantically into the CD market, with all the major distributors offering material and quite a lot of it being what might seem like surprising choices for the medium. Still, what the hell, it's all about change. . . right?

From our recent history, Jeffrey Lee Pierce's Wildweed solo album from '85 is available on Statik through Pinnacle, while The Fleshtones have Fleshtones Vs Reality on Emergo (again through Pinnacle). As you might have noticed, all the Factory, Mute, 4AD and Beggars Banquet albums are available on CD, but did you know that most SST releases are now available here?

Distributed by Pinnacle, the label has catalogue items that you never even dreamt of. As we sit and wait for the new Meat Puppets' LP

Huevos, the group's back catalogue is available, and yes, that includes the self-titled first album, that's not even been available on vinyl in the UK previously.

What's more, it's excellent stuff too.

Successful ex-SST people, Husker Du have all their back catalogue on CD — including the excellent Flip Your Wig with the brillo Makes No Sense At All — the most recent addition to the list being their psychedelic nightmare double Zen Arcade — that one will knock your socks off.

Similarly all the Black Flag releases are available (and again, a lot of these haven't made it here in vinyl form). Listened to in chronological order you can see how they've changed and changed and changed again, and if you want to pick up on SST, the label, and their changes, check Blasting Concept II, a gory colour clash with tracks from the metallic Saint Vitus, Black Flag, Gone, Minutemen, Tom Troccoli's Dog, Angst and the rest of the crew.

Coming soon in the medium to make you gag, that Durutti Column massive package of all their work, plus a new album on CD and DAT from Factory (through Pinnacle), more back catalogue Front 242 on RRE (through Red Rhino and the Cartel), Pieter Nooten and Michael Brook's collaboration on Sleeps With The Fishes on 4AD (through the Cartel), Derek Jarman's The Last Of England soundtrack on Mute and Mark Stewart's excellent self-titled LP on Mute (both through the Cartel). Dave Henderson

MOTTEK

Riot

Starving Missile Records SMR 037 P ● Hardcore thrash from this German band, with roots planted firmly in the Killjoys' division of 1977. Occasionally the sound gets, as on the surprisingly poppy Torture, but mostly the songs sound as depressingly familiar as their one word titles Loneliness, Nothing, Riot et al suggest. Nice grey vinyl though. Frank Pigg

THE MULTI-COLOURED SHADES

Sundome City Exit

ABC LP14 P ● ● 1/2 There's something that doesn't quite add up here, and it's that lack of an understandable equation that makes Multi-Coloured Shades a lot more than just another post-'80s psychedelic outfit fresh from the garage. Their Stones fixation on the cover of 20,000 Light Years is really more akin to a search for what made the Stones tick than a forged, forced copy. Sundome City Exit boasts an airy independence that can only be praised, and what's more you might just enjoy it too. Johnny Eager

THE MYTH

The Myth

Midnight Music CHIME 003 3M C ● ● It looks like the fashionable heavy rock revival is wimpering out which is a shame for The Myth, who have the potential to be massive if only Zodiac and the Gaye Bykers hadn't got there first with their over-indulgent cabaret acts.

The music is no frills hard rock 'n' roll with the obligatory wailing guitar and growled vocals, more evidence that all you have to do to form a band nowadays is buy a Rockman and swallow excessive amounts of gravel. Still the music is undeniably exciting, get-off-your-arse-shitkicking-stuff, which only gets really embarrassing on the showpiece number Hard-Rockin', where vocalist Wooly D feels compelled to "introduce the band". Frank Pigg

Glory For The Shit For Brains

Ultimate ULP 001 (152 Greville Street, Praham, VIC 3181, Australia)

● ● 3/4 My God! And you thought all the Aussies were into drawn-out sub-Ramones geezer boogie or jangling stuff! Little did we know. No are a boishy trio who fall somewhere between PIL, SPK, Cassandra-Complex-with-a-song and Sputnik (with some creds left). No play powerful music, screeching and throbbing with dancebeats, punctured with jagged guitar and a chanting, remonstrating vocal line that convinces you that left is right. The terminal end of rock, and don't it sound perfect! You bet! Dave Henderson

KATIE PERKS

Shine The Light

Plastic Head PLAS/LP 010 B C ● 1/2 Katie is caught in a strange flux. Respected by poets, purists and the like, her thoughtful prose lose effect through their delicacy on her second album. Sure enough she can sing, but the arrangements are too glitzy, too nightclub cabaret in parts, that some of these tracks end up as real stinkers. Most of it cuts like diamond and allows Katie's trills and tones to break free — alod by a funkier than thou rhythm — but there's always that nagging Toyah-on-tour dodginess lurking that tends to upset the proceedings. Ripley

THE PINK FAIRIES

Kill 'Em And Eat 'Em

Demon FIEND 105 P ● ● From the pub of 1,000 spill pints, the state for the Fairies rests on to of several beer crates. Pretty poetic moodsetter, eh? Well, the world revolves and Larry Wallia returns with the "never-ageing Twink" in another reformed PF line-up. Rockers to the last, these boys have an authentic late '70s drawl that puts them a few crates higher than their contemporaries and makes this LP a listenable foray of guitar rock — not loud enough to be Motorhead, too old to be punk-a-cred, but as Stiff as they come. Sweet, clear production too. Johnny Eager

POP WILL EAT ITSELF

Box Frenzy

Chapter 22 CHAP LP 18 NM C ● "F this grebo shit, HIT THE HI-TECH GROOVE," announces Box Frenzy, but you can f that as well if this is progress. Once upon a time, the Poppies affectionately parodied the indie guitar market and gave us a bit of shafty pop in the process, but by respecting the signs of the times and aiming to be a suburbanised, Midland poppy version of The Beatle Boys, the group have denied themselves any ingenuity. Instead, this is playdough fever, where sample after 'hi-tech' groove after sample is shoved together in between some vapid pop songs so that Box Frenzy is layered like a club sandwich but tastes only like hot air. All Box Frenzy goes to prove is that sampling is easy, the public are gullible and grebo is an anagram for "sham city, actually". Martin Aston

POPULARNAJA MEHANIKA featuring WESTBAM

Non Mexahnka

What's So Funny About... SF 57 RR C ● ● 1/2 Stranger still. This lot are difficult to track down and difficult to categorise. I'm not even sure if the title of this record is correct, but I can say that it's available through the Cartel and that it should definitely be lapped up. At a guess they're from West Germany and their individual mix of cut up scratch records, powerchord guitars and general artistic endeavour makes for a strange blend of very listenable dance-come-rock collage. This is a truly all consuming listen that really gets inside your flesh. Recommended, rash and ranting. Hip! TC Wall

PRONG

Primitive Origins

Split 10-7993 SRD ●● Lead and driving New York Hardcore from Prong on their debut album which briefly appeared Stateside a while back. The response was as vociferous as their music and the 2,000 pressing sold out before the dust had settled on the fretboard. Now available in the UK, it's plain as a pin prick that Prong haven't lost any of their energetic fervour in the meantime and a second thrusting surge of plastic, Force Fed, should follow before side one of this noisy bastard spirals to a close. Fine and exhausting. TC Wall

PETER ROWAN

Peter Rowan

Special Delivery SPD 1005 NM C ●● Bittersweet country tunes, cleansed with accordion and Tex-Mex flavour, leaving a lovesick aftertaste. Rowan has been seen with Seatrain, The Rowan Brothers, Earth Opera and numerous bluegrass groups and, for his first solo UK effort, he's come out smelling sweeter than a tray of chips and salsa. Rowan's bedraggled vocals, and some perfect instrumentation, pull this album close to the country heartlands leaving just enough accessible handholds for the tourist music class to grapple with a new sound. Music of magnificent proportions intoxicated with a Tequila-soaked scent. Johnny Eager

RUEFLEX

Playing Cards With Dead Men

Flicknife BLUNT 041 R ●● 1/2 Songs from the Irish revolution courtesy of Rueflex, on this five track mini-album which breaks their temporary silence. Following their independent number one, general acclaim, and a top 50 single in Wild Colonial Boy on Stiff, the group have finally got their grim-faced trimmed, but not truncated, on this uplifting rock record. Without falling back on the all too obvious folk roots of, say, The Pogues, Rueflex have adapted their rock colours into a powerful platform from which to speak, and in doing so have come up with some quality songs too. Excellent stuff. Johnny Eager

Live Trek

Fundamental SAVE 042/43 RR C ●● Savage Republic's live sorties from '85 and '86 are surveyed and laid end to end on this double album of disturbing noise. This is one of those records that begs to be played at full volume, as guitars wash through the lobotomy and the tinkling of the odd percussion instrument supplies the light and dark. Occasionally there are rough, gruff vocal lines, half obscured, shouted, whispered, as the relentless wall of sound casts a murky shadow over proceedings. Your neighbours may learn to hate this multi-layered cacophony, but your mind will seem larger with its presence. Ripley

SCREAMING TREES

A Fracture In Time

Native NTV 24 RR C ●● 1/2 Screaming Trees live in a twilight world which encompasses all manner of influences, from Pink Floyd to 23 Skidoo. There's ambient music, there's some excellent use of talkover and there's quite a variety of moods, from the eerie to the manic.

My favourites are those that use vocals; without, they sound just too much like so many other "atmospheric" bands that eke their way onto these pages. A prime example is the superb Colesium (sic), which would make a fine single.

Aside from a few indulgences — like having the album's title track run in three pieces throughout the LP — there's more than enough going on here to warrant further investigation and significant future interest. Carole Linfield

SEMINAL RATS

Omnipresent

What Goes On GOES ON 10 RT C ●● 3/4 Smell the petrol slog and burning rubber as Seminal Rats — now there's a street fightin' name! — drive their R'n'B-propelled twin-guitar turbo-rock out of the garage. The Rats drive well out onto familiar tarmac, because we're talking the Stooges-Saints-Ballo Birdman school of motoring. They occasionally slip into a knackered Deep Purple over-ride — F.U.S.T. is Smoke On The Water or I'm a driving instructor from hell — which halts Seminal Rats' concentrated spew and sprawl ride through the ozone layers like their tenses ancestral inspirations, but Omnipresent will still get you there. Seminal Rats smell authentic, and for some, that's plenty enough. Martin Aston

SHARKY'S MACHINE

Let's Be Friends

Shadowline SR 7807 RR C ●● An oddly-rounded disc from this US outfit who chop and change their guitarings at the least provocation. Sharky's Machine are bathed in humour, style and mayhem and their, quite carressable, tunes slip easily from heavy duty agro-talk to sweetly structured moodiness (usually bad moodiness). An inspiring set all the same. Dave Henderson

SHOCK HEADED PETERS

Fear Engine

Produkt Korps PKER 0200 RR C ●● 3/4 Karl Blake's life story gets yet hazier on this split-personality platter. Side one features some mean petering on a studio selection from hell, featuring Say No To Funk and a bag of other heavy-handed anthems.

The flip makes Karl even more of a celeb by showing off the Peters in live setting, during their visit to Switzerland earlier this year. This is gargantuan guitar-maniac stuff with a gritty spittle-soaked whisker gagging in the throat. Fine and fearful. Dave Henderson

SLAB
Dissension

Ink INK 32 NM C This a reverberating vacuum that rumbles and rolls through the backwaters of beyond in search of a better environment. Slab have become like a tarnished pump-action shotgun, loaded with tranquilisers, gritting their teeth and making their throats hurt when they talk. Slab make a gut-wrenching splurge of sound which squeezes its way into your field of vision through a barrage of greys. The secret is to realise that this is far beyond a slowed-Swans variation, it's more like it's rubbing shoulders with the sound of the last train on the Bakerloo line as it slows into the station at Baker Street. As it picks up speed again it makes your whole body vibrate, it takes you by the ankles and makes you do a silly 'dance of the commuters', reducing your feet, in the process, to the sound of a sanding attachment for a Black And Decker. Yeah, these guys really know how to rock out. . . TC Wall

something

A letter from the house of ill health by Ripley

I've had a bad week! Y'know? Bad! It all started when my hangover on Tuesday morning was disturbed by the postman delivering two (not just one, but two) albums by Elliot Sharp. Now Elliott's a daunting guy/guitarist at the best of times, and when your head feels like a Spitting Image puppet he's not the most handsome. But, duty calls.

plastic

The sleeves alone were mind-blowing cross-colour play offs, but that was nothing. As I sweated into my Shredded Wheat, the strains of In The Land Of The Yahoos (SST through Pinnacle) dislodged huge mounds of wax. It's weird! A kind of scraping collage of sound that revolves around a funk bass and some disturbing vocal sounds. People screaming, people hollering, you know the kind of art-jazz-rock thang. Elliott's first body blow was swiftly followed by Tessalation Row (SST through Pinnacle), a temperature-increasing wash of systems music that felt like 1,000 ants pin-pricking their way into my forehead. Too much!

A little light relief was briefly grasped with Re Records quarterly Vol 2 No 2 (which masquerades as an album and 64-page booklet), but the thought of being so inward-looking about music has always troubled me. Still there are some discreet noises on offer from Robert Wyatt, Henry Kaiser, Intellectual Cabaret from

way

Yugoslavia, and several others. But, compilations are hard work, unless they're unique.

At the moment there are plenty of oddball variations masquerading as compilations, none more stylised than Geyser, an Enigma 11 tracker (through the Cartel) which focuses on independent Icelandic music from the '80s. So, now that everyone's tuned into The Sugarcubes, we can cast a be-icicled brow back to their home country and ask, is there any more where that came from? Well,

yes and no.

So what about another Shredded Wheat? And what about Iowa? In Iowa, according to South East Records (208 E Davenport St, Iowa City, Iowa 52240, USA), things are grooving in a particularly raucous guitar mode. I know this because I have heard the 13 bands on their Iowa Compilation. Maybe it was the earliness of the early morning, maybe it was an aversion to derivative guitars but it all sounded like one band, apart from a few notables. The Hollow Men were one of these, Full Fathom Five were another and I couldn't make my mind up about Cursing Birds. . . which is good.

More comps. . . And, Shadowline (through Red Rhino and the Cartel) have The 20th Anniversary Of The Summer Of Love with a fine roll call, including Half Japanese, Shockabilly, Missing Foundation, Bongwater, Artless and plenty more. Now these cats are alternative and so are the strange Japanese acts who supply the tracks for Cordelia Records' (8 Denis Close, Leicester) Obscure Independent Classics Vol Four. They have strange names and sound stranger than strange too.

Now this is an album that you won't believe until you believe it. Oh you know, like the person who ate three Shredded Wheat. Un-Be-Lievable! And not to be missed. What's more, along with a couple of Alka Seltzer it nearly cleared my hangover.

Is it junk mail, though? Or am I just lucky to get such a wide collection of noisy urchins who seem desperate to inform me of their every waking thought? Well, OK, the albums are good to melt down and make costume jewellery from, but what about the formless cassettes trundle into the pounding world?

This month's selection included Cod, Peace And Greenery from Salad From Atlantis. Weird? Hell no. The Salads are limp, rocky and a little uninspiring, but their tape is on Acid Rain, 50 Warmdene Rd, Brighton, E Sussex, and the label also boasts releases from Culturcide, Flux and The Very Things.

Gorwel Owen knows things are better in Wales. Soon he'll be releasing a second Eirin Peryglus single (and they're good), for now there's some commendable moodiness from Plant Back Ofnus on the short tape Pydredd (just £1.30 from OFN, Ty'r Stesion, Llangwyllog, Mon, Gwynedd, LL77 7HQ). Check that one out, and ask for a catalogue.

And then there was three neat packages from German label Amigo (Wiener Strasse 21, 1000 Berlin). They are of intriguing high quality, presenting things that really are different. For instance it was during the off-the-wall electronics and harmonies of Fake Diskurs that I first began to see some kind of, you know, form to life. Hey man, I thought. This is deeeeeeeep.

The other two sets were similarly inspiring. First up, Schewefel offered a retro of their career on the Detailed collection — they play uptempo punk-funk with a shout and scream. Finally, and just before I return to bed to see out the duration of the morning, let me say that the best of the three they sent over was C87: Space Pop — an all-encompassing compilation with contributions from PLO, Charles Lemming, Freiwillige Selbstkontrolle, Camping Sex and more. How strange the world is, eh?

THE SPACE MAGGOTS

Leave It!

Vinyl Solution SOL-6 ●●¼ A fine debut from this Ipswich five piece. The Maggots are produced by The Stupids' Andrew Fryer and on this brief six track show suggest that they're from a long tradition of stylish punk-pop outfits akin to The Undertones, Ramones and Vibrators. Brought bang up-to-date, their lyrical charm and positive sound has all the zip and throttle of '77 with an extra dollop of charm and chuckles. Billed as schoolboy hardcore, it's more soft and lovable than that, while still retaining that all important edge on its contemporaries. Johnny Eager

MARK STEWART

Mark Stewart

Mute STUMM 43 ●●● My God! This is a surprise. The only track from this phase of phased Stewpot. I'd previously heard Stranger and, out of context, it didn't do a lot. Here with a whole backdrop etched and colour-xeroxed by Stewart, Keith Leblanc, ex-Sugarhill Doug Wimbish and Ohio Player Skip McDonald, the story's totally different. This is a nightmarish soundtrack punctuated with radioplay, documentary TV, good near-commercial songs and all that kind of thing. Littered with all the right noises, this is the way forward, the Medusa string that a lot of discredited new musos will never find. Brilliant. Dave Henderson

THE STUPIDS

Jesus Meets The Stupids

Vinyl Solution SOL-7 ●●● The sub-standard mixing of Van Stupid's hardcore guitars must have redoubled their commitment to get it right, because Jesus Meets The Stupids eats amplifiers for breakfast.

This is the benchmark that all Brit-rock of all temperatures must measure themselves by. The album also marks another watershed for The Stupids, because who else is trying to ape AC/DC while keeping their 'future of hardcore pop' on ice? As metal 'core goes, this is premium grade; ragged, bulging riffs skate off Tommy Stupid's brat-bite of a voice, while all around every ounce of electrical tackle fights for attention.

The song titles are typical Stupid irreverence and sloganeering like Dog Log, Bug Blood, Skid Row, (a re-recording of a track off The Stupids' first album), Pigman and Slit Your Wrist, a hilarious full-pelt mauling of Twist And Shout. Not forgetting Ed Shred's input, Tommy's efforts as drummer, lead guitarist, vocalist, arranger and producer (at the hoary old age of 19), qualifies him as bona fide Boy Wonder. Serious brilliance. Martin Aston

THE JAMES TAYLOR QUARTET

The Money Spyder

Re-Elect The President Kennedy 1 ●●● The James Taylor Quartet are being hotly tipped in all sorts of quarters these days and, as Barry Norman would say, why indeed not? They possess all the qualities of a major club act, even to the extremes of looking like Italian bouncers on the back cover.

The Taylor Quartet are aiming for authenticity without stuffiness, and get it right. All of this album is self-penned, and sets the seal on an already burgeoning back catalogue of fine covers. They know their Hamm boys, and they know how to stop interest from slipping. There's real spy movie stuff, like One Way Street, and more atmospheric tracks, too, like The Stroll, which comes complete with birdsong and which begs to have one of those silent 60s black-and-white comedy films made to go with it.

Smart Swiss ski resorts should be queuing up for their services any day now. Break a leg, kids! Carole Linfield

THE THANES

Thanes of Cawdor

DDT Records DISP LP 11 ●● Tune in, turn on and wig out with The Thanes, Scotland's entry in the trans-Atlantic let's re-create the Pebbles LPs contest. What's more, they've done it extremely well. So what if The Chocolate Watchband, 13th Floor Elevators, Electric Prunes, Seeds, Roky et al were all in Baghdad before this lot were in their dads' bags — most groups of that ilk only had one memorable song in them. Of the nine self-penned numbers here, The Thanes could have, um, several. And they also knock out a host of covers for your further delectation. Alex Bastedo

THESE IMMORTAL SOULS

Get Lost (Don't Lie!)

Mute STUMM 48 ●●¼ Comprising of Rowland S Howard, his bro Harry, Epic 'the Map' Soundtracks and Genevieve McGuckin, these souls look destined to be raised to cult status before you can say pass the Tequila. An album's worth of inward looking self-denial, illustrated with compassionate disbelief and all round quality instrumentation, might seem like a totally self-indulgent experience, but These Immortal Souls more than justify their existence (quickly leaping over the cult trappings) by producing some commendable songs, which is arranged in an extremely enticing style. Sure, it's downbeat, druggy, late night music — when you're watching videos with sound down at 4am — but there're times when things like that (and this) are an absolute must. Ripley

THE THREADS

As Yet Untitled...

Unicorn PH2A 14 ●¾ The Threads' confusingly titled album is something of a box of sticky sweets. Some of the centres are exposed and have a kind of unconvincing sickly green colour, while others are rounded and rewarding, all chocolate coated and still physically intact. As Yet Untitled offers eight confections, that suggest a fine line in immediate maturity — but more than a smidgeon of confusion.

A strange problem you might think, but one look at the sleeve reveals that these nouveau modernes are teensters with new plectrums — who probably missed The Jam's first steps, and definitely never heard The Kinks or The Small Faces first time around. Suffice to say, that The Heads' future, although it's unclear which road they'll take, should be well worth following. Johnny Eager

THE TRIFFIDS

Calenture

Island ILPS 9885 ●●● It's a tough place to be, up there on the crest of a press wave, with everyone around waiting to see if you'll sink or swim. Perhaps that's why they've named their LP after an hallucinatory fever that strikes delirious sailors, who imagine that the sea is really rolling green fields, and try to leap into them. Apt, really, because The Triffids present fresh pastures of undulating, verdant music that has just that effect on the listener.

What they produce, very successfully, is heavily lyric-based, hard-edged music, akin to a more muscular Lloyd Cole. And it comes as no surprise, then, that this is a huge grower of an album, with songs that cry out for a few listens, and promise to make themselves comfortable, personal friends in return.

The Triffids know all those secret places where your thoughts go — to lost loves, broken promises — but never, never get maudlin or clichéd. David Mulamb's vocal is versatile enough to let him put strength into some of the songs without forgetting any of the tune, and violins, tambourines and other textured backing enhance rather than obscure the tracks. Carole Lilfield

VARIOUS ARTISTS

Censorship Sucks (Jello Aid)

DDT Records DISP LP13 ●●● Where the Edinburgh-based DDT label shows its art is in the right place by donating all upcoming proceeds from the sales of this LP to the No More Censorship Defence Fund.

It's a pretty mixed bunch jostling for space in the actual grooves, with the likes of B.M.X. Bandits, Meat Whiplash and The Membranes rubbing shoulders with The Pastels, The Shamen, Fini Tribe and The Cateran. In all there are 16 would-be altruists taking part in this fund-raising extravaganza. Some of it's groovy, some of it isn't, but the cause should be enough. Buy this record and help make a stand against the new moralists. Alex Bastedo

VARIOUS

Diamonds In Darkness

Midnight CHIME 00.35 ●●● 1/2 For a mere 99p, this compilation of Midnight's crop of '87 is something of a bargain, even if you don't like a couple of the takes. It's an ideal opportunity to investigate a bundle of names that've been mooted but possibly not sampled so far and, without picking faves, there's one or two of the acts who you'll want to pursue. For me, The Myth and Spanish outfit Carmina Burana were impressive, but for 99p you can make up your own mind. Dave Henderson

Dub Attack 1

Music Of Life MO DUB 1 ●●● There's something to be said for the version excursions, the dub excesses and the late night mix-ups that produce music that doesn't have to stick to the usual stipulations of pop/rock/dance/reggae or whatever. Dub Attack features the alternative mixes of some of the classier dance sides from '87 and it sounds pretty hot too. With Derek B, Spyder D, CJ Mackintosh and Vicious Rumor Club in the mix, things are decidedly upwardly-frantic, and that's just the bare bones. Here, the onus is on the feet, but there's some brain-numbing mixing that will give those ears a few problems in the balance department. This is a throbbing overkill selection that makes its mark in just the right place. Now, if only people spent their lives making these sounds as A-sides, then the spirit of adventure would never die. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

OST of Derek Jarman's The Last Of England

Mute Ionic 1 ●●● The sound of Derek Jarman's semi-autobiographical/futuristic/holocaustic new film suggests that there are a lot of things twinkling in the Jarman brow that Sebastiane and Jubilee never even hinted at. The film is a cross between his personal Super 8 tracts, flickering through without direction and the more authoritarian and scripted parts. And the two extremes are shown off by contrasting styles of music of this fine album, with Simon Turner's spacious efforts given room to breathe next to the more esoteric contributions of Diamanda Galas, Andy Gill and Mayo Thompson. It's an intriguing and quite intoxicating mix that makes you listen hard. An excellent production. Dave Henderson

WE FREE KINGS

Hell On Earth & Rosy Cross

DDT Records DISP LP10 ●●● 1/2 A very fine debut LP from these Scots folk-punksters, combining their traditional approach featuring fiddle, cello and reeds with more obvious rock conventions.

It's at once energetic and thought-provoking stuff, political and polemic. Singer Joe Kingman sounds even gruffer and angrier than Joe Strummer, and there is something of the feel (though most definitely not the instrumentation!) of early Clash in the more up-tempo songs, as well as the more obvious Pogues and Men They Couldn't Hang comparisons. But that's just easy pigeon-holing. We Free Kings have indeed succeeded, as the man said, in creating their own unique brand of high-octane rock and roll... with a twist. Makes me ashamed to be a Sassenach. Alex Bastedo

Westlake

Creation CRELP 019 ●●● A former member of The Servants, a Head label combo who were strangled just after birth, David Westlake steps out with several Triffids on this his first solo effort — a six-track mini-album. It's an effortless wash of tinkling chords, which floats tearfully by as David tells tales of his inwardly-searching life and times. It's the kind of spread that'll fit nicely into a mug of soup on a cold winter's day. A downhome by the fire affair, with a terminal depression not really possible. TC Wall

WHITE FLAG

Sgt. Pepper

Wetspots WETLP 001 ●●● 1/2 "Kill yourself, kill yourself, kill yourself, kill yourself", goes the chorus on yes, you guessed, a song called Kill Yourself; a punk-energised rocking thing that lays on the irony good and thick; something that White Flag are pretty darn good at it would seem.

Lyrically, we're talking disillusion, discontent and the resultant resolve while, musically the ride takes us close to the Buzzcocks and Hüsker Dü Counties but never actually near enough to detract.

According to the liner notes on Sgt. Pepper the Caboose was driven by H.P. Lovecraft and Philip K. Dick, acted as Brakeman; dig where these guys are coming from; back from the Dead Zone with a smile and a song! Daz Igymeth

YARGO

Bodybeat BODY 002 ●●● 1/4 There's something quite magnetic about this debut album from Yargo. As a Mancunian outfit, who've been namedropped here and there, put in line with Afro-funk, called dancefloor types, been raved about as an alternative Manchester sound, they've got a lot to play up to... and they do it quite admirably on this slow building album, which contorts itself around as many padded corners as it can.

To say it's Afro-funk couldn't be more confusing. That term is such a transient phrase that's more associated with the likes of Osibisa than anyone else. Thankfully Yargo sound nothing like Osibisa, they do, in fact, sound very, very good. Sweet, enduring soundscapes, with a decisive dancebeat when the need arises. TC Wall

A BEATBOY The Honeydrinker Waterloo

Sunset [P] An odd single from this Belgian duo, where their lack of numbers enables them to come up with a minimal sound that seems to work. Guitar and drums for this duo, a sleazy accent attempting to be American and just finger clicks makes the top side ring out, while the flip moves along nicely in an R&B mode. DH

A HOUSE Heart Happy

Blanco Y Negro Eventhough there's something uncomfortable about the order of words when the title is sung, A House's third single — and first for the major-distributed Blanco — is a tempestuous guitar orgasm which sees the frenzied Irish folk flex their united throat muscles. Keen. DH

ANONYMES ?3986 no label

(tel: 01-450 6119) A strangely alluring disc that features three young French friends, and an English chap. Anonymes have a rather big sound that more than impresses on the title track, but it's the flipside, the longer, more driving No One Feels, that really sets them apart. TC W

BITING TONGUES

Compressor Factory [P] The Tongues change course yet again, this time fondling their instruments in a swish explosion of sound that bounces straight from the chase sequence of Bullitt to your dancefloor. A toe-tapper with pulse on overload, moody, mean and meaningful. Great! TC W

BLISS Your Love Meant Everything Survival

[B] [C] Downbeat jazzy doodles from Bliss — who've been tipped to do everything from "make it" to cleaning the most stubborn of stains. Whitey soul that sparkles with a blue-eyed understatement. Expect to hear it on the radio too. R

BLOW UP Pool Valley

Creation [R] [C] Far more pop and less hippy than Good For Me, with multiple-orgasm harmonies and hooks. This single makes Blow Up into Creation's most commercial band, destined for better things. Pool Valley, incidently, is where we catch our buses down Brighton way — I never thought you could make it sound so "groovy". A hit and some sex symbols in the making — and you can mashed potato to this one. JD

PHILLIP BOA AND THE VOODOO CLUB Kill Your Ideals Red

Flame [M] [C] The first Leckie-produced slice of Boa aims for the large market stall of Europe on this pastiche/play off of Sonic Youth (with additional guitar by Membranes' John Robb). Loud and shattering, it further signifies that Phil is going to be one of the biggest German talents to escape the confines of Eurosludge for some time. Excellent, and a cover of Fire on the flip for good measure. DH

BOGSHED Excellent Girl

Shellfish [B] [C] Something's going on chez Bogshed, and it's not the sound of paint drying. This new 45 sounds more like Talking Heads after five pints of real ale — with a sparkling line in wit and wisdom thrown in for good measure. That Phil 'Shed has the nous to be an English David Byrne goes without saying, and this single offers the first signs of the group's width and ability while still retaining those rough edges and frantic interludes. JE

THE BOY HAIRDRESSERS

Golden Showers 53rd & 3rd [B] [C] First there was The Vaselines, now 53rd & 3rd give us some more "cheeky" perverts in the wonderful Boy Hairdressers. On first listening, this is a very sweet and almost angelic single, that is until you realise what's going on. Another curious note is the obsession with using "Ambrosia" in the lyrics — have the boys got a fetish for rice pudding too, I wonder? Up yer bum! JD

CHRISTIAN DEATH Sick Of

Love Normal [M] [C] Black sheep with a deathly glare, Christian Death shake their chains on these two tracks which further enhance their cult status. A big production and a sound that really justifies their potential, it's a shame that one of the songs, The Loving Face, is so weak. Still half is better than none. R

CHRISTIANHOUND Not Guilty

Constrictor [R] [C] West German protest music with a punky backing and a Phillip Boa seal of approval on this pro-Biafra/anti-establishment disc. Frightening enough, Not Guilty hangs in there with melody, overdubbed effects and a taikover that's as sharp as a knife. And all proceeds to the defence fund! R

CLAN OF XYMOX Blind

Hearts 4AD [C] This must be the Clan's most commercial-sounding release to date as Pleter Nooten comes in from the cold to offer the world a bared soul, a simplistic sub-funk electronic sound, and a wheezingly fleeting guitar to finally lift the proceedings. And 4AD? The hits just keep on coming. TC W

THE COOKIE CREW Females

Rhythm King [C] Mean rap from the Cookies who've always threatened something. Previously restrained, this is by far their most convincing performance to date, but they're still in the stylised standard rap mode — a little more jazzy perhaps — and it makes you wonder where groups of this kind can go next. R

THE CRETINS Always On My Mind Saturn (Angelo Plate

Grefestr. 3, D-1000 Berlin 61) Up-tempo singalong pop in the live vernacular. The Cretins are much better than their name suggests as they float briskly through this made to order poptone. Nice but just not enough yet. JE

THE FACTION Listen Buddy

Crook Cassettes (tel: 0388 762262) Wild cut-ups of Maggie T on this near-danceable 45 from The Faction. Neat but not quite as impulsive as MARRS. DH

FADELA N'Sel Fik Factory

[P] Rai music from Algeria? The sound of people wailing and gnashing? Well, if you want musical education this is the meat. TC W

THE FAMILY Blumen Ohne Duft Scratch 'n' Sniff

Dave Henderson, TC Wall, Ripley, Johnny Dee, Johnny Eager, Alex Bastedo and Marlin Aston

ing around Charlie Manson's antics, The Family opt to croon-along in pro-Chas mode over powerchord guitars. Actually, it's pretty good in a funny sort of way, but where can they go from here? DH

THE FLATMATES You're Gonna Cry Subway [R] [C]

More perfectly-formed pop music from these excellent tunesmiths. The 12 features an extra two tracks which further underline the teamsters ferocious guitar forté. JE

PABLO GAD Who Is The Terrorist? Rhythm King

[C] Smoochie reggae with an electric snap, which makes this Gad single almost too catchy for words. Whether reggae purists can attune to this genre sideswipe is difficult to say, and it'll probably have even less success with mainstream ears. TC W

THE GARGOYLES The Magnificent Church

Reasonable [R] [C] The 91st best band in Hull seek re-election following another colloquial onslaught on the senses of the pop-buying public. A hint of reggae, a smile and the claim that they're in league with Frank Sidebottom can only further damage their hopes for next season. DH

THE GROOVE FARM Surfin' Into Your Heart Subway

[R] [C] Available in both seven and 12 inch, it's the latter that shows off the true prowess of these Farmers. After two singles on their own label, the six tracks on their debut Subway 12 inch provide more than a touch of barbarous balladeering steered by bolshy guitars. DH

GUERNICA Deep Sea

Diving Solid [C] Deep pop from Ireland's Guernica and the potential of a bigger deal is possible if they've got a couple more songs like this in their locker. Sweeter pop but there's a twist in the handshake that counts. JE

HAPPY MONDAYS 24 Hour Party People Factory

[P] Happy Mondays confuse by releasing a 12-inch with a similar title to their acclaimed recent LP. The track wasn't on the album, but is a strident rhythmic thingy with all its bits pointing in the right direction. Excessive and excellent. R

THE HEART THROBS Bang

Rough Trade [R] [C] Former In Tape signing, and constantly mentioned through a torrent of letters in Ug, the Throbs have certainly come on since their first shaky 45. Bang is uptempo, up in the emotional bits and sung in purely pureness of mind. A finely-rounded song, flowing straight to numerous bedrooms and broken hearts. Fine. DH

HOH/CURRENT 93

Crowleymass Maldoror

C Current 93 team up with Icelandic combo Hoh for a special Crowley Celebration, and it's all set to a neat disco beat. Special mixes and chanted vocals make the whole thing swing — suggesting that Current and Zoskia might be heading for a subversive dancefloor beneath your house soon. Keen. DH

THE ICICLE WORKS High

Time Beggars Banquet They're a strange bunch, The Icicle Works. Their dangerous Press Play about Neil Young, their loud guitar noise, their flirtation with the charts, and what do we have here? Well, High Time becomes not before time and, through the two A side tracks, bangs home the idea that they've suddenly become rather splendid at inking fine pop tunes. A touch of soul, a hint of "rock menace", but all in all the kind of anthemic delight that Big Country couldn't even begin to comprehend. DH

IN THE NURSERY

Compulsion Sweatbox

C Yes, please! What a strange hybrid. The Humberstone bros, based in Sheffield, display the kind of mix-down that makes rock worthy again. This track is a dead ringer for Laibach playing the John Barry songbook — with a touch of Yello for good measure. Everything in its place too. DH

JASMINE MINKS Pure

Jasmine Minks Esurient

Communications RE C For purists and jangle-frenzied only. This live recording is less than good quality, but spreads a touch of life into an aching heart all the same. JE

GREG KIHN BAND Jeopardy

Beserkley Kihn recovers from his absence and unleashes some more of his primetime pop, with that all-important US slant, onto the scene. The flipside has a rock-out version of Jonathan Richman's Roadrunner too. Nice. JE

KITCHENS OF DISTINCTION

The Last Gasp Death

Shuffle Goldrush (93)

Ravensbury Rd, London SW18) quite like this single — even though it reminds me of the Bunnymen a lot. The Kitchens have the obligatory silly name, play good rock/pop songs and have spirit. Watch this space. DH

THE LEATHER NUN Lost And

Found Wire NM C Culled from the Steel Construction album, this is Leather Nun in a reasonably haunting mood — with a commercial edge thrown in for the bigger market. Lost And Found works much better in the context of the LP, but this should keep their name on everyone's lips nevertheless. R

THE LEGENDARY PINK DOTS

Under Glass Play It Again

Sam RR C The Dots, now based in Holland, still play it in a strictly pre-glam brain-scraping mode, brimming with mind-expanding lyrical content and stuffed with more sentences than Ronnie Biggs can boast. With strings more concisely produced, LPD sound prim, proper but still totally out on a limb. Charmingly quaint. R

THE LIVING ROOM Big

Problem Dream Bleep (82)

Chancellor Street, Glasgow G11

5PW) Jazzy, loud and obnoxious, this raucous scraping sound comes as a tetchy flexi which is difficult to scratch out. Art in the making, well almost. TC W

M4ALICE Darker Than Fair

Genetic (tel: (0234) 215279) Dark and dingey goth splodge with a grinding guitar edge and little or no dynamics. M4Alice are going to have to try harder, and explain their name a lot. JE

THE MAGIC BASTARDS A

View Crook Cassettes (tel:

0388 762262) The MBs are a strange lot. This cassette-only four-track set features some rollicking rock music that should delight musos from bar stool to tape deck, but their image leaves more than enough to be desired (and imagined). This is rock music that deserves a wide audience but looks unlikely to do so through independent means, as the music itself isn't alternative enough to attract attention. JE

THE MAGIC BASTARDS

Strange Glory Crook

Cassettes (tel: 0388 762262) Mellow strumalong on seven-inch vinyl. The basses aim for the charts, get well produced, break into harmony and ask, can BBC2 do a documentary about us? DH

MAGNOLIA SIEGE All

Washed Up Primitive

JM C What a bloody noise that guitar makes as it scrambles to rip the tweeters from the woofers. Magnolia Siege are wrapped up too tight for rock 'n' roll, too lightweight and catchy for hardcore and not trippy enough to be hippy. A quandry, and a record that throws shards of plastic across the room as another plectrum breaks. Hmmm. TC W

THE McALLISTERS Too

Much Money Propaganda

Jolly Good RE C The McAllisters have lots of good ideas, lots of heroes, and love to rush themselves into oblivion to expose all of this on one piece of vinyl. There are five tracks here, thrown into the Mcshredder, where they come out as a beaty sub-psyche nonsense, all sugar-coated and unripe. It's a struggle and no-one wins in the end. The rematch promises to be better, though. JE

MAN KLAN Wanting And

Waiting Wire NM C

Taken from the upcoming Flesh Machine album, Man Klan's second UK release is a spiky massage with hysterical guitar histrionics thrown in for width. Chunky. R

MASTER TWINS Squander

Wire NM C The femme duo that are the remains of Master Twins And Blond Jesus, play gutsy flesh music with an electronic slant, a big rock stadia throat and a certain pop sexiness that should appeal to perverts and DJs everywhere. DH

MEATMOUTH Meatmouth Is

Murder Factory P A tacky northern rap over a dangerous (?) rhythm that makes Coronation Street sound hip for NY dancefloors. Northern accents, talk of the Hacienda and all the predictable Bronx-a-thon out-takes make this record at best a joke, at worst serious. Yuki R

METRO TRINITY Die Young

Cafeteria RT C Pardon me while I mop up the bucket o'tears these four pained love-lonesome-lost lyrics have caused me to shed. The tugging electric and weepy acoustic, simmering organ and pleading voices don't help matters either (sob) neither do these plaintive folksy melodies (bawl) that could be Postcard, Kitchenware or just Bloody Melancholy Records. Heaven knows someone's miserable now (apart from me). MA

MINIMAL MAN Mock

Honeymoon Play It Again

Sam RR C A four-track 12-inch from Patrick Miller in cahoots with various Tuxedo Mooners. Bass-driven tales of angst and too much lager, the overall effect isn't too unlike a slowed down DAF with more going on, or a more minimal Moon. None of the songs are duffers, though my money goes on side two's offerings to win over the punters. AB

OF A MESH Broken 109

Records (109 St Marks Place,

NYC 10009, USA) A four-track EP that crosses the bizarre line between flailing guitar rock/Red Lorry Yellow Lorry and a kind of gothic New Order. Strange indeed, but very pompous with it, Of A Mesh do the kind of thing that could have been huge some time back, but with so many acts in the same cul-de-sac it might be a little harder now. DH

ONE THOUSAND VIOLINS If I

Were A Bullet Pacific

Pa The Violins have fallen into many an uncomfy bracket in their brief history. Orange Juice, The Smiths, well this, their most pop-orientated, and well-arranged, offering to date has more akin with Matt Monro than Matt MacMorrissey. A fine ballad with bitter refrain that just snaps the corpuscle line. Ahhh. R

OTWAY AND BARRETT Last

Of The Mohicans VMS

PRT Spirited new sound from this reprobate duo — who according to the scam couldn't get it together to tour and this was all, they could come up with for their new LP. Still, it's folksy balladeering and uptempo Lowe-meets-Costello beat. Ah, real indies, real style. Punky, too. JE

THE OYSTER BAND Rose of England/Edward II & The Red Hot Polkas Dawn Run

Cooking Vinyl NM C Compilation 45 featuring the Oyster's cover of Nick Lowe's Rose and a sample of Ed's polka LP. Pleasing in itself, as a disc, the Oyster's sideswipe is the vital track leaving the polk's to dance around their direction. JE

THE PALOOKAS Run Rabbit

Hollow Planet C The problem with The Palookas is that they don't know who to steal properly. Eclectic nightmares come alive as they mix bad fairytales with Doris Day soundtracks and Psychedelic

Furs noises over some half-decent song structures. It's a mess. A mess, mess, mess. And, until they clean up their room and get a little better at arranging their plunder they'll float in the indie wasteland sporting polo necks and pointy shoes. R

THE PERFECT DISASTER

Bluebell Glass RM C The Disaster continue their fuzzy rise to notoriety with Bluebell, a song with a decent enough melody line and a good chorus break. A classic new rock song that should appeal to everyone one from Pstels fans right through to those Mary Chain. All they need now is to pretend they're Scottish. JE

PINK INDUSTRY Don't Let

Go Cathexis FF C Yeah, Yeah, so it sounds a bit like the Cocteau's, no? So f what? This is also the real wonderstuff. Ian Broudie's production — glossy but hypnotic and hard-hitting — has given the band a big helping hand, showing off Jayne at her breathy and seductive best, allowing the bass to sigh rather magnificently, guitars to chime and keyboards to soar...oh sod it! Just buy the bloody record and see what I mean. AB

POISIE NOIRE Timber/White

Nights Antler C Poisie Noire's dance vision gets more relaxed on Timber — the most thought-provoking of these two erotic Euro slices. The more up-tempo White Nights suggests that their techno cred and melodic squint can be teamed to great effect. This kind of music is too good to be just mindless dance fodder. R

POTATO 5 Gotto Go Racket

Re C Carrying a torch for Ska in this metal wasteland, Potato 5 wrap themselves around the commanding presence of Mr Laurel Aitken and offer a double A side 12-inch on their own Rackit label — the radio edit and extended mix of the rock-steadyish Gotto Go! and the magnificent Burning Fire. Dick Cuthell (Specials, Madness, Boothills) has produced a smooth mix that still contains the fire that makes this band so good live. Burn in heaven. S

THE PRESSURE GROUP Only God Is Perfect

Poltrou (tel: (0482) 26006) Another band from Hull, but no "wacky" tag, just some devilishly catchy tunes in search of a bigger production and a bout of grooming. Four tracks here that bode well. A decent sketch, now let's see the picture develop. DH

RED LORRY YELLOW LORRY

Open Up Situation Two So the Lorries revert to their original name, leave Red Rhino and head for the metropolis. The result of their first recording bout is, inevitably, more of the same. High-powered rock that'll go down a bundle Stateside. The sound gets a little bigger but you just know they'll be strutting in the stadia for years to come. TC W

ELEANOR RIGBY Kiss Me

Quickly It's Christmas

Waterloo Sunset P Recorded in a shoe box, this Rigby romancer isn't bad in song creativity and ideas but the sound quality is dire. TC W

THE ROSEHIPS I Shouldn't

Have To Say Subway

Re C Stoke-on-Trent's Rosehips warble and just about keep in tune on this noisy blast. Not quite the most romantically intense of outfits, they play it breakneck most of the time, doing themselves few favours. Title track is best as the tempo slackens and allows a bit more room. TC W

SAQQARA DOGS World

Crunch Fundamental

RR C Now, this is really different. A New York combo who produce a musical noise that fuses all manner of ethnic elements, a touch of classical structure and brings it out to sound as fresh and immediate as any contemporary rave. There are three short tracks, which have a unique intensity and a listenable edge, and one longer, just over nine minutes, piece which bulds and collapses with all its beauty unfettered. Exquisite. DH

SIGMUND UND SEIN FREUND

Sacred/Secrets Antler

Records RR C Two 12-inch singles sold separately but quite difficult to tell apart. Reverse graphics suggest that these chaps are schizophrenic, but their shouting, smoothly rounded with a grating backdrop, sounds depressingly similar on all eight tracks. Still, this kind of post-Throbbing Gristle, Cabs guitar sound, with a touch of Germanic exalating, makes quite enthralling listening. R

SINGLE GUN THEORY

Exorcise This Wasteland

Netwerk RR C Rhythmically intense electronic driving music from the Canadian Netwerk label. SGT play essential sequencers with a female vocal line drifting in and out like a badly-tuned car stereo. Atmospheric. DH

THE SMITHS I Started

Something I Couldn't

RT C Did EMI get bauked? Who gets the cash? Did the indie win? Who is the new messiah? Didn't Nick Kent look a prat on The Smiths South Bank Confusathon? Well, another great single, anyway. DH

SPIT LIKE PAINT A Happy Song Hollow Planet C A four-track EP from this new look Spit, and there's something odd about just how they're trying to do what they're doing. The production here is gruffly uneasy, all vocals and drum slaps, when you just beg for something great to break through. It doesn't, but their honky-fonk sounds neater on the instrumental take. TC W

STITCHED-BACK FOOT AIRMAN Shake Up In Tape

RR C A four-track 12-inch from SBFA — who've been remarkably quiet for a spell. There's something here that reminds me of The Godfathers without the heavily be-suited image and Epic contract. Instead, SBFA produce shaky pop, have worn elbows in their strangely-patterned shirts and they cut their own hair. Funny old world, isn't it? JE

SUDDEN SWAY 76 Kids Forever Rough Trade

RT C The Sway gets ever-more shaky as they attempt a newer than new line in contemporary rock operetta. Starting with neo-footie violence, wandering through a misspent Saturday afternoon, then ending up at Annabels' club... it's just like true life, and twice as entertaining. R

SURF DRUMS Black Tambourine Kaleidoscope

RR C A finely-crafted blend of belted-out vocals and twinkling, twangy guitar from Surf Drums. A regular thirstbuster, all wet with the perspiration and excitement of teenagers going ape. Yes, this is geeeeroovy. DH

3 ACTION A Breath Of Fresh Airgency Eidiesta

RR C Third 45 from Hull's answer to The Banana Splits. Punky roots take a squidgy organ drive and some "ba,ba,ba,ba,ba" outbursts and make a noise for best effect. Excellent. JE

THREE DANCERS Seventeen

Dilettante Disques FF C This is very reminiscent of something, with its pivoting guitar and spun-out vocal style, but I just can't place it. A real front runner in the left-field strum-a-pop stakes, Three Dancers could cut it if they get a few more hooks into their songs. R

TRADDODIAD OFNUS Hwyl

Constrictor RR C Welsh-speaking Trads offer a spesh limited edition sample of their upcoming Constrictor LP on this phlegmy-45. Braced and bolshy, it's got a sound all of its own, that's spikey and angry at just about everything. Great sound that's destined to break and persuade in a kind of harsher-than-harsh manner. DH

VARIOUS The Phase III Mod Bands Unicorn

NM C More variations from the grandchildren of mode, and as ever, different levels of performance are reached. The Key opt for Style Council city and sound good, too, The Sons Of Jet are "wacky Kinks" and suck, The 2nd Generation are authentic and hot, and The Switch sound like a Beatles B side. JE

WILD ANGELS She's Black And White Supreme

THE WOLFHOUNDS Me Idea

P A rollicking return to form from The Wolfhounds as they embark on phase 17 of their career with the aid of Idea Records. Me is bracing pop with its sleeves rolled up and a verse/chorus exchange that'd bring a smile to Morrissey. Excellent. DH

STOP PRESS

ANIMAL CRACKERS Small Loud Song Wild Orange

(Herzogstr 88, 8000 Munchen 40, West Germany) This is a really strong debut seven-inch from this German outfit. A distinctive guitar sound that sounds quite "new", dare I say, wrapped up with a neat vocal style which really works. They have a mini-album soon, so look out for it. DH

GOOD AND GONE Methil Box Demon Ridge Records

FF C The result of 18 months arguing, Methil Box's four tracks has its fair share of pent-up aggression looking for a stoolpigeon, if not quite a final solution. Good And Gone's three-man assault is punky fervour topped and tailed by a gnarled sweaty blues feel and wayward rhythms, like a stripped-down Screaming Blue Messiahs. The aural equivalent of a snakebite. MA

• Miaow haven't played things by the book during their sporadically-publicised history. But three singles in, it seems that they've traded their shaky hesitancy, the soulful slouchiness that made their first two singles, maybe hasty, but haunting, for a new superbly-choreographed minimalist sound. Maybe you've logged them as thrashing hopefuls or even hopelessly too small for their creative boots, but take a listen to the newie, Break The Code on Factory, and you'll have to rethink all those neatly-perceived convictions. And are they a typical Factory band? Well, what's a typical Factory band these days? That Northern label is fast regaining its status of creative launching pad and home of the constructive musical misdoers.

• All this praise though? The Walter Raleigh-style elevation of Cath Carroll also means meaningful men? Can such a heavy burden be bestowed offspring of Wire and throwing Muses, rest on their shoulders? Ah, shucks, you guessed. . . see them. What's more, I'll put my money on them turning your head inside out, if you'll give them a chance.

• Cath carries a glass of dry cider and looks bemused at the enthusiasm. But I'm not just trying to be nice. I really hate Miaow as something that's so far from living from a tremendous fraternal embryo. Don't you ever get that feeling about things?

• "Well, yeah, I suppose. Like with Big Black who I saw a lot when they were over here. I even went on the tour and sold merchandising as one of my enterprising part-time jobs. I was just amazed at what they could do live, at the way they mixed and layered rhythms. I don't think that really comes over on their records. And their drum machines, wow, I fell in love with it."

• Thus built the third phase of Miaow. The rhythmic intrusion, the sculptured sound, but we'll go back to that later, maybe. Suffice to say, the BB's approach, if not their gummy noise, was a teeny bit influential. But long before Steve Albini's sweat dripped over aging English enthusiasts, Miaow were in the first throes of getting catty. Their first single, on their own Venus label, was the highly underrated Belle Vue — a scorcher which played off guitars and first introduced the world to Cath's embracing vocal styles — which were further enhanced with self-sung harmonies, overdubs and the like. Of course, people couldn't listen to it with their ears immediately, it became necessary for rival music factions to expose her writing career (which was never hidden), and the inevitable snipes began. Politics in fish paper. . . who needs it?

• Surprisingly (the author winks in chuckles), the band got a little pissed off with this, and its continued occurrence — and now they don't bother with press chat, leaving Cath to do the honours. So, what's all, those inkiies don't know what they're missing.

• Looking back though, what does Cath think of Belle Vue?

• "I've got to steal from people said about it really, really, like a '50s table. . . at least it's not what I think they meant. At least it's not made out of rock, that's how people referred to it."

• Mmmm, yes. And you once wrote, so poetically, Cath? Well, Belle Vue may have its imperfections, its limitations, but it goes with charm, it has a style all its own, it suggested, well, quite really.

• "But in a way we couldn't really follow it up. People said we were crap live. . . like, disorganised. We were too many different things after Belle Vue. We've moved to London from Manchester, Chris, the drummer had a jazz style that didn't really fit and the new bassist, Ron was developing into an intense dance style."

• Add to that the transient nature of fourth members who sported guitars and eventually keyboards and you sort of begin to wonder why Factory picked up on the group. But they did and it was Tony Wilson who fronted the money for the drum "thingie" which allowed Chris to switch to percussion.

• New member, Joe, was recruited (he's hurriedly likened to The Doors' Ray Manzarek as I try to impress the prowess of the aged ones' Soft Parade title track), and the line-up, at last became more stable.

• "Except Ron just sits in his room getting more complex bass lines, now!"

• By now the changes had begun to ring out, and although Joe wasn't on the group's second single (their first for Factory), it certainly showed a new found width which Miaow were keen to flaunt and eventually develop.

• "When It All Comes Down is my favourite of our singles so far, it's more competent than Belle Vue and it's more of a song, in the classic sense, than the new one."

• With musical maturity building through the assistance of new equipment, new managers and Factory's keenness to work more with the group, due to New Order's temporary sabbatical for one reason, the floodgates for Miaow-mania are obviously open, and the all new Break The Code is likely to be followed by a plethora of releases. But why is it so different?

• "Well, it was written on the night of the election and it's about the effect of America on the UK, but it's very tongue-in-cheek, illustrated as a love song between two nations. . . I dread to say it, but I suppose it's a very rosy spectacled view of things."

• "It's something that I've always been interested in, that whole East/West thing and this is just one of the ways it came out."

• And the minimal qualities, the sub-stick

Two sides of the rock/pop explosion providing two varying sounds, and two diverse reasons for competing in the game.

MAN KLAN

duced performance? Is that a new angle, new sounds for a forward-looking band?

• "Sure, in a way, but that simplicity was to get the song over in a more effective way. It's a strange song that isn't immediately effective and it needed that kind of treatment to make it work. I'd never have thought of it before but we were beginning to experiment in the studio, look at gimmicks, try out sounds to enhance the song. In the old days, it was all different kinds of things.

• "For instance, there's a sampled tug-boat hooter on the record. Pretty good, eh? And before you ask, we won't be able to do it live, but that's what studios are for, isn't it?"

• Damn right. And a continuation of that experimentation, and development in the song arrangement department looks like a certainty for Miaow.

• "We're certainly thinking of an LP early next year, but first we're hoping to work on a couple of singles, hopefully with producers who've had some success already."

• And is the plan still to subvert through a pop-political statement?

• "Er, well I think we've learnt a lot in our brief history, I mean I know a lot more now. I mean, I'd quite happily wear a red nose and sign to Virgin if I thought it would advance the group. We tried the independent thing, played here and there, er, paid our dues, and just couldn't develop any grass roots support for whatever reason. We just got pissed off with all that and decided we had to move on from that."

• And the political facet of Miaow? Does that take a back seat in search of success?

• "Not at all. We've just learnt that you've got to win sympathy and empathy for things, you can't just force things down people's throats."

• And will you end up on Top Of The Pops? Will it trouble you about the under-skirt-camera-angles and the glitziness of it all? "No, I'll be wearing bicycle clips. We'll got on anything as long as we can play. We'd even present the acceptable face of perversion on No 73, if they asked us."

• Hmmmm. Can't wait.

★ Man Klan play by the standard rules of rock, but how can anything from them be considered as vaguely normal, when the whole operation begins in Sweden and crunches to your heart through a brash gesticulation of leather and fur. Man Klan are, dare I say, "raunchy". They have difficulty in translating their thoughts and ideas into English speech, but their songs stand up for themselves, and as we head into the new year, it's those songs that'll become more plausible to a much wider audience, as they release their debut LP, Flesh Machine.

★ Having begun their career some seven years ago, when vocalist Carita Palmroos met Jackie Pazda (for the uninitiated, Carita is a streaky blonde steeped in rock glossaries, while Jackie is a guy with a tune in his strum. Between them they write Man Klan's material), it wasn't till about '83 that they met up with Harry McGee (Wire partner, in a pre-Wire mode), and recorded their debut single, a 12 inch for his fledgling Electric Gardens label.

★ Titled Introduktion, the four tracks included a cover of Led Zeppelin's Immigrant Song and some musical muscle that set down the group's intentions right from day one.

★ "Yeah, we were making music for ourselves," recalls Carita, "I suppose we still are now. But I sing in English, as it's important, even though it's for ourselves, that other people can understand what we're trying to say."

★ So, is it difficult to write songs in English, to get through the language barrier and get your feelings over?

★ "No, that's not a problem."

★ Of course, Introduktion soon became redundant as state of the art Man Klan ("We got bored with it very quickly. We can't listen to it now.") and Wire's initial circuit board was being installed with Narry still keen to get Man Klan in on the act.

★ "When Wire was formed, Harry asked us if we'd like to do something for him and, again, that became a four track 12 inch, Boys Of This Territory."

★ "The music had developed by then, we'd become a lot more mature."

★ And the next step? An LP of course. The classic guidelines of progression, business acumen intact, and the gradual exposure of Man Klan is well in hand. But how far can they go? And is there enough depth beneath the obvious sexual rock titillation that the group, with Carita as figurehead, so readily exude?

★ "We can go as far as we like, but I never want to become old in the spotlight. I want to retire before I get to be like Mick Jagger — not everyone can retain the personality of a BB King, you know!"

★ So which rock stars do you still appreciate. Who do you think has weathered the storm?

★ "Iggy Pop. I saw him earlier this year and he still looks good."

★ Oh come on, he's really frazzled!

★ "Well, maybe he's a little bit old."

★ And what's he got out of rock music, other than a few scars?

★ "I don't know."

★ So what do you want to get out of it? Are you willing to travel? Do you think you'll have to take Man Klan to the rest of Europe and to America, to get what you want?

★ "No, I don't need that. I had motorbikes and did all those kind of things when I was 16. Now I want a big house and an E type Jaguar."

★ Ah! The classic rock dream. But can Man Klan bring you that kind of lifestyle? Is Flesh Machine going to set you up and sell Man Klan for you?

★ "I think so."

★ Well, she could just be right. Flesh Machine is out at the start of next year, and it's a pouting, leatherette set, with Jackie's caustic guitar hanging over the rough edges. A pumping, driving music that's got rock stamped all the way through... Maybe it hasn't got an Immigrant Song just yet, but the preview single, Wanting And Waiting, which is in the shops just about right now, makes enough noise to knock the most cynical of musos off their stack heels.

★ I can't see Man Klan breaking into the pop market, but the wider recesses of rock/stadia and the big money league seem well within their reach. Just plug them in, and zip up the jacket. Dave Henderson

RE-REWIND

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackages boasts some real gems. . .

BRITISH NORTH-AMERICAN ACT

British North-American Act

Antar 007 RC A pop psyche classic, so the story goes, that's essentially rare, placed in the right time zone and begging your psyched-out attention. But the group's clumsy "undecided" name, gives it away. They really aren't that sure what they're supposed to be. . . and seeing as they disappeared into relative obscurity afterwards, it seems that things didn't get a whole lot better.

These are commercially-aimed songs that sound hopelessly out of date now. All humour is lost, although there are some quite intriguing arrangements and deliveries.

Wordplay and what it's all about also pose a lot of questions. Strange. Johnny Eager

COUNT FIVE

Psychotic Reaction

Edsel ED 226 P Perfecto mono sounds from The Count Five on this compilation which spans their finest octaves. No, it's not the original Psychotic R LP release which followed the success of the single of the same name, but the title track and a host of suitably acidic pop tunes are on show. A 13-tracker, it boasts several hands on Buffalo Springfield's plectrum, while exposing the group's rockier/off the wall side, too. There are, inevitably, variations on the title track included, but the majority of this palatable guitar-burnt onslaught sounds uniquely different. Dave Henderson

DR FEELGOOD

Be Seeing You

Edsel ED 238 P The Feelgoods' blast of Canvey Island rhythm 'n' blues went through a few interesting phases, but by the time of this '76 album they were swimming against some heavy water. It's an authentically tinny sound, but Wilko Johnson's dramatic tomfoolery on guitar is absent and the songs don't really bite. Even covers of 99 And A Half and the Homer Banks chestnut 60 Minutes Of Your Love don't add up to much, and the cover, in all it's sub-Prisoner pose doesn't help matters. In itself this isn't a bad album but compared to their Down By The Jetty (available on Edsel ED 160), it kind of pales. Dave Henderson

CHRIS KENNER

I Like it Like That

Charly CRB 1163 CI Chris Kenner's career, from primal howling and soulful crooning, had more than its share of ups and downs. These tracks are the majority of his most memorable cuts, including Land Of 1,000 Dances, of course. The majority come from the early '60s, the latest being circa '67, although he did record after that date, including a period between a prison sentence and his death, from a heart attack in '76. For me, the finest takes must be the earliest when his voice was still pretty raw, but ultimately soulful. Kenner's knack for carrying a melody line over and above the instrumentation sets him apart from many of his contemporaries and kinda suggests that he should have been a lot more successful than he was. Dave Henderson

ELLIOTT MURPHY

Apres Le Deluge

Fan Club/New Rose FC 034 P A singer-songwriter who's acclaimed as a neo-God in European circles — and even likened to Dylan and Petty. But, speaking as a prat, I must admit I've never been over-enthused with his glistening pop stubble and tooth-paste smile. This LP has some decent enough songs, but Murphy's wailing rockyness seems more than a touch dated. TC Wall

NRBQ

Through The Eyes Of A Quartet

Demon FIEND 57 It stands for New

Rhythm And Blues Quartet, but that really only tells the roots of this NY four-piece. This is a special set compiled by the group as their choice for 'best of' and it features quite a few memorable tracks. Real American driving music, like Me And The Boys, is more or less necessary fodder for motoring across the Atlantic and, if anything, this four piece were a little too early for their own good. Maybe a little bit unkempt to be seen as tunesmiths in league with Steely Dan or the Doobies, but close to Big Star — for a rock quota — and inspirational to many subsequent UK artists. Dave Henderson

GARY NUMAN

Exhibition

Beggars Banquet BEGA 88

CI Gary's back pages, as briefly hinted at recently through a repeated chart entry, is capitalised on with this 36-track collection of his finest, and strangest moments. Plugging into all things Numan, this set lets you know that Gary's had some pretty wee-yud times, why, he might even have lost it on occasion — like, Stormtrooper In Drag — but for the most part this is fine stuff which sounds even more authentic given CD clarity. Up next, his four BB albums will be submitted to the laser. The revival starts here. Ripley

ROBERT PARKER

Getta Steppin'

Charly CRB 1174 CI A strange compilation, from Robert Parker's past and just past, which puts his classics, Barefootin' and the wonderful Let's Go Baby (Where The Action Is) next to two late '60s Silver Fox tracks, You See Me and The Hiccup, and 10 '70s cuts. It's all still prime dancefloor groovy, but that swampy neo-funk of the '70s tracks can't match the majesty of those two kick-off tracks (which re-charted earlier this year). Choppy dance steps all the way to the soulful farm. Get out the black-eyed beans. Dave Henderson

THE SHOWMEN

Some Folks Don't Understand It

Charly CRB 1165 CA There's the beginnings of a great story on this album, and such a fine collection of harmony singing too. The Showmen give us 16 tracks, recorded in four sessions in '61 and '62, featuring special unissued takes, false starts and 45 cuts. Pretty flawless stuff with that vocal intonation of General Norman Johnson beginning to warble on Valley Of Love — suggesting the kind of thing he'd be going onto later as leader of Chairman Of The Board. Fine succinct recordings featuring the excellent It Will Stand, that some might remember as Rock 'n' Roll Will Never Die. Grooved! Johnny Eager

JUMPIN' GENE SIMMONS

Goin' Back To Memphis

Hi HUKLP 416 P A masterfully-compiled album featuring Jumpin' Gene, whose main claim to fame was the '64 hit Haunted House. A gimmicky track that didn't quite represent the man's fully country croon, boogie, soul and blues sound and general rock 'n' roll awareness. The subsequent LP, following Haunted House, supplies three of the tracks here, the rest is made up of unissued tracks and selections from his single releases over the years. All in all it sounds remarkably good, especially the rather arresting I'm A Ramblin' Man. Dave Henderson

HUEY 'PIANO' SMITH AND FRIENDS

Pitta Patti'n'

Charly R&B CRB1164 Huey 'Piano' Smith is the man best known for songs like Don't You Just Know It (massacred for an Amazulu hit a while back), Rockin' Pneumonia & The Boogie Woogie Flu (both included here), and Sea Cruise (which isn't, but which is apparently providing Huey with enough royalties for him to enjoy a happy retirement in Baton Rouge, Louisiana). But there's a vast amount of his relatively undiscovered New Orleans r'n' b material presented here, reaped from a variety of Huey's disguises.

The album traces Huey's work through the 60s up to 1970, presenting a valuable retrospective which deserves your attention. They really don't make 'em like this any more. Carole Linfield

THE SONICS

Live: Fanz Only

Fan Club/New Rose FC 033 P This has got to be one of the most tinny, tacky and badly-recorded albums ever, fans only, for sure. But on these six Prime '60s cuts, the energy of The Sonics claws into the air and hangs like a threatening hammer. Four covers and two self-penned tracks make up this crackling cacophony that's passionate if you can manage to stick with it. TC Wall

Total Zap-variation freak scene!

Dave Henderson digs Frank Zappa on CD, (awho!)

FRANK ZAPPA's name, and that of The Mothers Of Invention, has been mooted, lambasted and exalted through many a climactic pop change since his Orson Welles-styled excesses on his first album Freak Out, through to his more recent jazz-infested fusions, his classical sideswipes, and his guitar histrionics. The man is a legend, crazier than the Residents, more innovative than many of his contemporaries and a keen peruser of more law suits than The Sun.

Last year, after freeing his back catalogue — which hangs at close to 50 albums, he released Grand Masters, a box set of his work which included some of his rare early material (which changes hands on vinyl for £30 a throw), now remixed and remastered. Some said he'd ruined it, and with the nine album set retailing at around 100 quid, a lot never got the chance to find out.

But all that looks set to change now, for a dotting CD generation. Through a deal with Music For Nations (who're distributed by Pinnacle), 32 of Frank's albums are set to be released in their laser-tooled finery and new found explosive sound. On the Zappa label, the whole cast of this mammoth release schedule hasn't quite been finalised yet, but the first four releases are already on the streets, and there's a few surprises in store too.

The Mothers Of Invention's Freak Out (CDZAP 1) features the full 14 tracks of the initial double US release — the original UK version being slimmed to a single album — and through the wacko haze, the longer tracks still manage to sound as direct and radical as they did at their inception. With their Edgar Varèse influences, which have subsequently reared their heads in everything from Cabaret Voltaire to Philip Glass, new psychedelia to scratching arrogance, Freak Out is still something of a classic.

Frank Zappa's Hot Rats (CDZAP 2) was Frank's guitar showcase which arrived following the demise of the Mothers final "gigging" format. Always a popular one in the UK, Hot Rats is considered to be very dated by US audiences, but it shows the tingle of the latter day jazz-fusion music that became synonymous with Zappa around the late '70s/early '80s.

The Mothers Of Invention's Uncle Meat was originally a double LP for a film which the group hadn't had the funds to finish. It always boasted a different set of sounds, and it now contains an extra 40 minutes of music entitled Uncle Meat Film Excerpts One And Two, where the band doodle, and dialogue confuses the issue. Nonetheless enjoyable — in fact quite intriguing to listen to and try to visualise — these extracts further enhance the Zappa myth and legend, and make up the last recordings of the originals Mothers line up (the rag bag team who were replaced by real musicians).

Finally, Frank Zappa presents Cruising With Ruben And The Jets, a 13 track set from the Mothers (thinly disguised as a doo-wap band) which revolved around pastiche and parody of all those tunes that guys sang to their dates. Frank's attempt to become a household name inevitably convinced people that he was still a weird mother...

Anyhow, the next set of releases haven't been finalised yet, but they'll be ready around February time and could well feature such delightful albums as Absolutely Free and Lumpy Gravy. But beware, Zappa's career was/is long and diverse and if you get into Freak Out it doesn't follow that you'll thrill to Sheik Yerbouti or even Weasels Ripped My Flesh. Great titles though!

THE PRETTY THINGS

SF Sorrow

Edsel XED 236 P The world's first rock opera, pre-dating Tommy by about a year, gets a re-issue and pretty good it sounds too. The Pretty Things came from the UK rhythm and blues overdose and developed into a psychedelic trip of some note by the time they put this 1968 disc together. Guitars fly off the wall and overload, while harmonies rule the airwaves as the story unfolds, and little did we know that they'd sound as contemporary as they do today. Owing as much to The Beatles, Stones (guitarist Dick Taylor was a Stone in his previous shirt), as any new psychedelic sound, SF Sorrow is really good to have around again. Don't miss it this time. Dave Henderson

THE RAMONES

Leave Home

Mau Mau/Demon MAU 602 P Was it really so long ago? Huh? The birth of the Gabba Gabba chant, The Ramones' '76 flurry. A mouthful of glue dribbles back into the world and says, hey, 'nothing much has changed with da brudders'. This prime piece of headbanging power-chording sounds even more current than the group's latest, more dehydrated fodder, all the classic tracks — Suzy Is A Headbanger, Shock

Circuit Breakers

Weird desert shit!

The Meat Puppets dehydrate and get goopy!

"We're the only band to come out of that Phoenix desert region," Curt Kirkwood decides as he chews over a lumpy McNugget. What about Alice Cooper? The Tubes?

- "Sure, but The Tubes went to San Francisco and Alice Cooper went straight up to Detroit and played on that MC5 circuit. Everyone who ever made it out of Phoenix split straight away."
- Six years of desert-baked records; living in the perfect climate of Phoenix, Arizona (perfect for TB, asthma and allergy sufferers, cacti and geriatrics, they tell me) has done something to The Meat Puppets, drying out their heavy metal roots, forming a crust on their country boogie, simmering their West Coast pop airs, as well as burning and/or frying their collective minds. At least, so the story goes.
- Between Meat Puppets I and II, Up On The Sun, the mini-LP Out My Way and Mirage (all on SST), critics have been forced to work out the Pup's strange brew of... well, what? Country-beat metal buzz-sawing psychedelic implants?
- Putting your hand inside the Puppethood, you find that brothers Curt (guitar) and Cris (bass) will mention their teenage heroes, a whole line of weighty progressives, like Gentle Giant, Led Zeppelin, Black Sabbath, Grateful Dead, ZZ Top and various jazz people, before they met drummer Derek Bostrom, who dragged them along to see Iggy Pop at a time when ex-Damned guitarist Brian James was in Pop's band. The boys admit to British punk having a big influence on the band; groups like Slaughter And The Dogs, Eater, Johnny Moped, the grime at the bottom of punk's garbage pail ("some of the funniest, crankiest, most hilarious stick-it-in-their-lughole stuff," guffaws Cris), although Curt refers to Meat Puppets Mk I as "extreme heavy metal, like Iron Maiden on acid".
- Nowadays Meat Puppets sound more like Steve Miller on acid or ZZ Top on Miller Lite, and names like Chet Atkins, Joe Pass, George Benson, Ennio Morricone, George Jones and Glen Campbell are reeled off Curt's chicken-breath tongue, tasting of country and jazzy fusion.
- What did that heavy metal sound mean to you then, Curt?
- "Groovy-bitching-vibe sound, come-in-my-pants sound, finger-my-girlfriend sound, take-drugs sound, get-kissed-by-Mommy sound. Beauty!"
- "I just love Led Zeppelin, you know."
- "That's kinda like seeing The Singing Nun on TV... far beyond the stars."
- Out there under the Phoenix sun, imaginations obviously run wild. Space, the endless frontier, that kind of thing?
- Curt: "The land is also beautiful, the rocks, the mountains, the foliage, it's got its own ecosystem. Then you have Phoenix, the most plastic, garbagey..."
- Derek: "Mormons on one side of you, retirees on the other."
- Sun-punk, desert punk, cow punk, prairie punk, call it what you will, there's an undefiable stir to this doodling. At least that's what Cris calls it. He also calls it 'goop', as in, "the goop that we squeeze out has a lot to do with Curt and my natural guitar-doodling. We just have a real guitar language".
- Another reference to The Meat Puppets sound is Cris's comment about the "get that, animal thing that forced Elvis to jiggle. So people know what they can come to us for".
- The Meat Puppets can sure rock and they sure can roll, but what can people come to you for?
- Cris: "It's not happening here, but in America, a band that's really popular are The Grateful Dead, and there's a resurgence in the use of psychedelics too. Suddenly, there's a lot more acid around. A lot of kids are getting back into music to sit around and get into, as opposed to just one part of their lifestyle."

- Are The Meat Puppets psychedelic then?
- Curt: "I don't think so really. I think that psychedelia is too integral a part of everyday life to set aside on its own. I think that everybody is completely manifesting their own trip at every time. Everyone is completely taken over by their trip. It's all mental. I don't take acid either." To go up another level of consciousness, you mean? "I don't need drugs to do that. You can do it with music... although I'm not knocking drugs either."
- The Meat Puppets' new album, Huevos, gets into the spirit of its predecessors. The record adapts influences, ideas and imaginations and makes it a living, breathing fungus that can survive in any marketplace.
- "Musically, it's a cross between the first album and Mirage," says Curt. "It's not willing to be as wilting or dependent on harmony or arrangements."
- Huevos is much closer to the current Meat Pups live experience — goops of choogling acid-rock, plenty of fast, hair-tossing doodling, dry-throated brotherly voices, a fat oven of boogie wah-wah rock, a feverish frying of the senses, baking right there on stage, all self-sufficient, these dust devils...
- Cris: "Huevos is eggs in Spanish but it's also slang for balls, a willingness to hang, to take a situation as it comes and deal with it or make it the way you want to. We called it that because we can do whatever we want."
- So if you can stand the heat... Martin Aston

The Pups get gooped!

From Leeds, with noise!

CUD break the post-industrial mould!

CUD survey the post-industrial void

CUD have been playing on and off for about a year, and like most bands with an eye on the main chance they have just released their debut single. It's a three track EP released on Reception records, which fact fans may recognise as being The Wedding Present's own label.

- So, are CUD just another dour-faced, post-industrial band from Leeds with several greasy chips on their shoulder? What about the name? Sounds a bit 'goth' to me.
- "No, it doesn't," protests bassist William. "We just wanted a three letter name that looks good on posters. Unfortunately it backfired a bit; when you see it in the press it looks so small. I also like the other possibilities of the name; that we might get chewed up and spat out by the record industry. In the beginning we had lots of cow references."
- Like the name, the band's artwork is big and their songs are bold. Check out You're The Boss (Out To Lunch Mega Mix) as a prime example of boot-in-the-face neuro-beat dance rock. Delicacy is obviously not a priority with CUD.
- "We just like the idea of our songs being short, sharp shocks," explains William. "The reason our sleeves are quite bold is because of the state of the music industry. These days, if you're trying to get on a major you've got to be professional about it. We're all artists and that helps. We don't want to do scribbly indie sleeves. We want it to look good in the window of the record shop."
- So are you just humourless men from the North? Can you pass the sense of humour test? Do CUD possess one?
- "Oh Yeah!" shouts William, "especially when you see us live. We don't want to be known as a comical band but if you saw us live you'd see what jolly fellows we are."
- Check out their first EP or see them live. CUD are a band who evidently owe more to Benny Hill and Tarby than they do to post-industrial Leeds. Ian Dickson

The big BANG!

Heart Throbs love the sound

The Heart Throbs and their history is short but sweet. Their first single, Toy, was released on In Tape, it was met with general indifference, and Rose — from the Throbs — forwarded a mildly angry letter, but forgot to insert the poison-soaked razor blade. That's life, you see.

- So why are we writing about them now? Why does their new single get a rave review? And why are they destined to be bigger than big, and twice as good looking? Well, they just are. OK?
- Better still, why have the two dyed-blond sisters, Rose and Rachael insisted on changing their second name to Carlotti?
- "It's about a character who destroyed men," enthuses Rose.
- You into that, then?
- "Well, we're not really into torture. . . although Mark," (he's a boy H Throb, as is Stephen); "confessed to having an interest in mental torture recently. But let's not talk about that."
- No, what we should talk about is Bang. The Heart Throbs new single on Rough Trade. How did you end up there?
- "We just went in and said 'Look, you need us. You've lost The Smiths, you need The Heart Throbs.'"
- Somehow I can't quite believe that Rose and co had the spunk to actually do that, but after hearing Bang, you know it's not that far from the truth.

- Sure, the gory image still lingers beneath the group — which might seem a little strange as these pulsing Hearts come from darkest Reading — but the songs, the moodiness, the style and charisma of The Heart Throbs is real easy to tune in to.
- "I suppose our stuff is haunting, pop music with a distinct taste."
- Yes, I can hear that. I'm happy with that summation of Bang, too. The sleeve featuring a female crash victim lying prostrate and bloody through the window of her motor, is made more striking by the pink background colour which makes it look quite harmless.
- "Yes, it's almost peaceful, quite moving."
- Just like a heart throb should be. Dave Henderson explode into the land of rock averageness!!!

- "The Zombies are ready for you now. . ." A Mr. Dave Formula, yes — that Dave Formula, ex-Magazine and Visage, leads me through a blackened passage to a disused ante-room beyond his Strong Room studios. "This is all very austere," I think, indulging in a little well-earned trepidation. The room is dark except for the floor which writhes with the light of tiny candles casting three ominous shadows across the peeling walls. There's one conspicuously empty chair; I assume it's for me, I also assume it's rigged! All is silent until one snigger and then three completely hysterical Incredible Zombie Rockers let up a roar of self-congratulatory laughter. Quite right too, they had me going for a while back there! "Make yourself at home," says a Zombie, little knowing the nemesis that awaits him — he fell through his own chair only minutes later! Confused? I was. I'll start again shall I? From the top then. . .

Trousers, haircuts and tennis racquets. . .

- Jason (drums): "I started playing the drums when I was 13 and when I was REALLY young I used to put on shows for my parents. I'd bang on cushions and my sisters used to play tennis racquets!"
 - Gavin (vocals and guitar): "Yeah, I remember putting on a gig in our back garden. Our lodger had this really smooth guitar and my mum had just bought me this microphone — I don't know why, I suppose she just thought it would be a good thing to buy me!"
 - The point I'm making here is that The Zombie Rockers are young enough to remember this like it was yesterday. Formed in '84 by brothers John (20) and Gavin (17) McClafferty, the band reached its final and present line-up in '85 with the arrival of the relatively mature Jason Wilkinson (21)!
 - John: "People do take the piss out of us for being so young like recently in an interview we did with Charlie Dick (who he?) in RM where he referred to us as a 'pre-pubescent power trio'. But I don't mind that, although, we're not presenting ourselves as an alternative Musical Youth — you know, here are some young kids, come and make some bucks out of us. We're just a band playing a style of music more competently than most other bands."
 - He's not wrong there and it isn't just the exuberance of their youth which make The Zombies special; it's that hard-edged rock hitting out with a tamed savagery which places them well beyond the experience afforded by their years.
 - Unlike contemporaries with whom they are bound to be compared, Gaye Bykers, Crazyhead et al, The Zombies' name belies their image. I have before me, here in this broken atmosphere, a clean-cut studious type, Billy Idol as the young, sharp-featured man he nearly was and what can only be described as a mellowed-out, bespectacled hippy with the most disarming smile ever!
 - Jason: "The lack of image is quite deliberate. We don't want to look how we sound — even down to the record sleeve which we did in blue and white which is quite passive and calm. We like that contrast — if we all looked wacky on stage it might detract from our sound."
 - John: "And our music is our prime concern."
 - Gavin: "Our music is our image man! We produce the music — it's the Zombie Rockers you're listening to, not a haircut or a pair of trousers!"
 - The divine irony, of course, is the fact that the sound which comes via The Zombies is profoundly heavier than most of the image-conscious noise which fuels those obsessed with grime and greboism. Just one listen to their Machine Stops 12-incher on Abstract Sounds is proof. The other irony is that while they live for rock and roll as much as the next chappie they all manage to find time to take degree courses at college — except that is for Gavin who's "Essentially dossing but learning pottery!"
- Muddy Waters, Cream, Creedence and Mrs McClafferty?!*
- Gavin: "Our music is everything we listen to but we're not into sounding like anyone."
 - There are some serious influences here: The Damned, Spear Of Destiny, but Creedence? Cream? Even I can hardly remember. . . and who's Mrs McC?
 - Gavin: "It's our mum — she's responsible for everything! Our mum is right on, she is!"
 - John: "We were brought up on that stuff 'cause our mum had all those tapes and used to play them when we went on long journeys in the car, but that's not our only influence."
 - Gavin: "Yeah, we've been through various styles. We played the garage scene but dropped out 'cause that's retrospective, then we were rockabilly, then we had a go at psychedelia. . ."
 - And now?
 - Jason: "Now we're a group that hasn't come to a head yet. It's a reaction against something. . . but I'm not sure what it is!"
 - Neither am I, but who cares, permission to rock out please!

Zarjaz gets a little funky

That Jaz feeling!

Zarjaz comes clean, in true Baroque fashion

- "Hi, I'm Jemima."
- I looked up and there she was, a raven-haired bombshell with looks that could melt ships and a body that launched a thousand ice cubes. . . her arrival had sent me into a spin. But deep down I knew we could never be close; she was a goth, and besides I had a job to do.
- "I'm Zarjaz Baby's official interpreter," she announced as she bundled me playfully into a waiting cab.
- "Huh?"
- "Yes, Zarjaz Baby speaks a mixture of neo-Roman, Tudor English and modern day language, all will be revealed."
- Who was this guy Zarjaz, and what did he want with the youth of our nation? I'd heard he was a bigshot in the Kaleidoscope Sound Organisation; a thinly disguised front for a certain Slaughter Joe Foster's designs on ruling the world, or at least regaining the Mary Chain production credit he still feels is owed him. Together Zarjaz and Foster had devised The Inter Block Rock, an unholy fugue of earth-shattering, futuristic guitar noises with a hypnotic beat and lyrics that owe more to Sigge Sigge Sputnik than they surely ought to. . . My God, I was beginning to talk like one of those Underground hacks.
- We reached our destination; a crummy wine bar in Wapping. It looked like some sort of sick tribute to Laura Ashley and it wasn't afraid to say so. . . in neon! To my surprise, the dame took me down a side entrance and into the basement of the joint. My knuckles whitened as I faced the gloomy darkness of my ever-nearing confrontation with HIM!!
- I mustered all my nervous energy and in a fit of not-inconsiderable bravery I hot-gumshoed straight into the interrogation room. The sight that I beheld in those pulse-racing moments stopped me dead in my tracks. There was Zarjaz Baby sat bathed in candlelight and dressed somewhat alarmingly in a 17th century gentleman's outfit.
- He was listening to some ambient music on a portable tape recorder; some schmuck he referred to as "Master Vivaldi," another Kaleidoscope hoodlum I figured. My mind flashed back to the sleeve shots on Inter Block Rock; padded shoulders, space age boots and pseudo-orthopaedic cod pieces. Then with a panic I remembered the 'probing questions' that I had with me, carefully designed to bring this sucker to his knees; "Why the Sputnik outfits?", "Aren't you a bit old for playing spacemen?", "Aren't you jumping on the futuristic bandwagon a few years too late?" etc. All worthless against the man's fiendish ingenuity. I had forgotten the first rule of my job, expect the unexpected.
- I decided to play it his way. I asked him where he was from.
- "Tu desna ray am I from another time," he said with a vacant stare.
- Oh shit, I had forgotten about the language barrier.
- "He says that many people say he is from another time," purred Jemima with a grin.
- What was going on? Was I being set up, were they taking the piss or was he a nut? Probably all three, I figured. Through his interpreter, he said he was a "Baroquably", a Roman, people's voices were living inside his head, people from all ages including the future.

gush

... an enthusiastic tirade from Prince Muso

Gush my way!!!! Such is the magnificence of all things rock this month that even the criminal Bad News are playing blinders all over Britain! Backstage, Nigel 'Flu' Planer, Peter 'Hitchcock' Richardson, Rik 'Wanker' Mayall and Ade 'call yourself a real guitarist' Edmondson were released — nay, joined, if the horrible truth be known — snaffling live — count them — bottles of champagne after one particular sell-out show in the Midlands. That's how GREAT they are!!

Bad News' ravaging all-out success is a great success for all. Because it means that any rock band with the slightest bit of and conquer the world! Look at grebo rock for a start! Look at Queen for seconds! At least the news signals the return of Rock in Excelsis and potentially the end of Curiosity Killed The Point Of Music's influence.

Nah, maybe that's pushing it a bit far, but rock has at least proved that it has a future, simply because it has a present. Did anyone catch one of The Triffids' latest orgasmic shows, or see The Gun Club's miraculous born-again concerts or hear their album Mother June? What about Swans' louder-than-God debacles around the country? There was Sonic Youth and Big Black and Butthole Surfers gigs in recent months — yards and yards of guitar string fever and inferred madness, twisting and coned like electrical snakes, writhing around the feet of gaping Brit-audiences, the poor dullards that we are. In America, this sort of stuff is compulsory! Dinosaur haven't even bothered coming to play here, because they're TOO GOOD for you! Instead, as a reader from AN Other paper pointed out, this week you can see and partake in Cher, Joe Cocker, Bob Dylan, Donny Osmond, Shakin' Stevens, Marillion, Elaine Paige, Cliff Richard, Supertramp, Barry White, Yes and Eric Clapton.

Did punk ever exist? "Thank God for Napsin Death", says the stupefied fan, but I say thank God for the new Stupids album, Jesus Meets The Stupids, where our only real rock band — our answer to AC/DC, don't you know? — knock old Jesus out and take his place as God's right-hand maidens. This LP won't meet its match all decade probably. Did guitars ever sound this good?

We could always mention the new Dumtruck album and tour around about new — at least they tried to be a good folk-rock Television — or the long-awaited return of Echo & The Bunnymen — may this be the future of stadium rock if it's here to stay — or the imminent arrival of France's rock-throttling geniuses Les Thugs who are like a lightning strike at your little firman. Then you have the fact that The Jesus And Mary Chain got thrown off The Roxy Show for not miming properly, like a sickly pierrat clone.

This is a GREAT SIGN, because in their own petulant way, the Mary Chain prove that it's the MUSIC that counts. Look at Bad News; do you think they'd get screaming children and the odd nipple-fed adult milling around them like rabid dogs if they just told jokes on stage?

Nah, it's the harmful and revitalising JOLT of ROCK music hurtling down from the stage. I never saw hysteria at a Jasper Carrott gig, did you? Put your Christmas turkey through your amplifier this year, and see what happens. It might well sound like the Bad News album, but then you can't have everything.

NEXT MONTH — GREBO DISCOVERS ROCK MUSIC SHOCK. TUNE IN

- I asked him if he was familiar with the drug LSD. He said it was like a brother to him. Of course, it was all fitting into place now. The guy was completely fried, a mutant from the '60s who lay sleeping until Kaleidoscope and the evil Slaughter Joe awoke him to undermine the moral fabric of our unsuspecting children.
- I made a quick getaway and caught the first cab down to the megastore. I rushed up to the singles counter and bleated out, "Zarjaz, Inter Block Rock, Kaleidoscope Sound."
- "It's out of stock," said the sales assistant, "we only ordered one copy, but we might order another one in three weeks time when the demand has died down a bit."
- I praised the Lord for Richard Branson; again he had saved the nation's youth from their unhealthy desire for non-chart independent music. But for how long were we safe from The Zarjaz? Watch this space. Ian Dickson

03 UNDERGROUND

From Pebbles to Bam Bam

Bam Caruso rustic psychedelia explored by a poetic roady-weary Vachel Booth

The Walker Bros

The Prisoner

St Albans. A quaint little city in Hertfordshire or a playground for malevolent id monsters? Depends who you care to believe, the tourist guide or Walking Seeds. It does seem a perfectly normal place at first, the citizens mill around at ease, performing their day to day tasks! But take a trip down Ridgemont Road and as you twist away from the railway track it's hard not to notice that the houses are numbered in reverse order from the main road or that the dead vegetation makes the paving stones look like old Small Faces albums covers. (Are you sure about this, Vache? — ed)

- Little thing, I know, but enough to make you realise all is not quite right. The source of the disturbance is plainly an old house festooned with plum trees and with a car parked in the drive bearing a 6 of 1 Society (the Prisoner fan club to you) sticker in its rear window. This is the house of Bam Caruso.
- Up in the attic Phil Smee and Richard Norris are busy hatching more plans to ensure that St Albans remains the psychedelic capital of the UK.
- Bam Caruso launched its operations four years ago with the release of four albums, including two volumes of Rubble — madcap collections of forgotten mid-'60s psyche pop — and the start of an ongoing series that forms the hub of the label's modus operandi.
- Phil: "That was obviously a direct reaction to the American albums that had come out and that we'd all bought. Apart from a couple of dodgy bootlegs, there was no English stuff. So that was a prime target for us."
- Richard: "A lot of people that get into the '60s thing, get into the American stuff through compilations then they get to know a little more about it and discover the English stuff. There's a lot more going on, it's not all fuzztone guitar and garage vocals. There's a lot of arrangements."
- Phil: "It's a lot more experimental. It's also more of a pop thing than the American equivalent which seems to be more rock."
- Bam Caruso's pop intent was stated with their very first release by The Left Banke, the archetypal '60s psychedelia-tinged pop group. The recent Walker Brothers album, luckily scooped from Phonogram archives, maintains the tradition. The course of Bam Caruso's re-issue programme doesn't always run smoothly though and a lot of stuff they've wanted to put out has been denied them. The latest Rubble was to have featured material from the Morgan Blue Town label, including the (English) Smoke's banned-by-the-BBC single, My Friend Jack (Eats Sugarlumps), the ginchiest English psyche single ever. Unfortunately the deal fell through.
- Phil: "The bloke who was running that company has a very strong lawyer/accountant. We basically had a lot of fun talking to the guy who owned it, but his partner was a complete waste of time and saw it as an opportunity to make money. We tried to convince him that that's not what we're into doing and he wasn't going to make a lot of money whether he likes it or not and he just played the old game of trying to screw more money out of us. I think secretly he knew he wasn't going to make much money so he wanted to make sure that any money he got was upfront. He wanted something like 12 grand in the end so we told him to go boil his head."
- "RCA said, 'If you're going to get Bucks Fizz to do the TV adverts and come up with £10,000 in advance then we can talk about it...'"
- Richard: "That makes things complicated, you never know when stuff's coming out."
- Bam Caruso is much more than just a re-issue label, there's a roster of new talent that, though not necessarily revivalist, carries on the spirit of the old material. But, more of them in Phil and Richard's selected discography.

Phil: "These aren't in any particular order but this has to come somewhere near the top of the list, all the Left Banke stuff we've done has been great. I'm a big fan."

KIRI 071 NICK HAEFFNER 'The Great Indoors'

"One of the other biggies. He's one of the people who's definitely got his approach right as far as we're concerned. He's a slow worker it must be said, everything he does is the result of months of thinking about it but when it appears it's wonderful. He's not the biggest seller we've got but every single review has been complimentary. Unfortunately it's gone to his head."

KIRI 024 Rubble One: The Psychedelic Snarl

KIRI 044 Rubble Five: The Electric Crayon Set

"The first Rubble's still one of my favourites, and I think The Electric Crayon Set. When I was doing the four we took from Decca/Deram I tried to make each one slightly different. There was the Deram one, mainly pop, then there was this one which was like Psychedelic Snarl, a snarly one. It's got some good stuff on there that really works, the others are good but they're more floaty."

KIRI 046 HEARTS & FLOWERS: 'Now Is The Time'

"I've got to single this lot out. As far as I'm concerned Hearts And Flowers are the true epitome of cosmic cowboy music. The epitome of country and bluegrass music with the electric edge. The Byrds are famous for but the Hearts And Flowers did much better. The songs are picked from all sorts of places — Donovan covers, songs by Arlo Guthrie."

Richard: "They're contemporaries of Buffalo Springfield and The Byrds who always get overlooked. They're just as good as the others but 'cause they've got such a silly name people don't really know of them. There's an old copy of Jackie... or an American equivalent, which has them all going ice skating together: The Byrds, Buffalo Springfield and Hearts And Flowers."

KIRI 052 PAUL ROLAND Danse Macabre

Phil: "A big seller for us and rightly so. We both wanted his new album to be something special so we forced him to leave his beloved eight-track and go into a different studio with musicians and strings. It really worked very well."

KIRI 066 THE PRISONER SOUNDTRACK

"The Prisoner is an oddity. We licensed it from the 6 of 1 Appreciation Society 'cause they were going to do a cassette only, but we decided we would love to do an album with them so we did it. In fact it was really popular. We had an agreement with them that we would delete it after a certain amount of copies, which we did. Which is a shame 'cause we could have sold thousands more."

KIRI 076 THE WALKER BROTHERS Live In Japan

"This one we put out as a sort of gamble not knowing if people would like it. But it turned out another piece of the Bam Caruso jigsaw, people really do like that sort of stuff when it's presented to them."

KIRI 095 JOHN'S CHILDREN A Midsummer Nights Scene

"This is coming out soon, it's a goodie. It's been bootlegged but it's never been done properly. There's all the singles here plus some very rare stuff including Midsummer Nights Scene of which there were only 50 copies ever made."

KIRI 077 THE GHOST For One Second

"I'm particularly proud of this and it's one of the 1st records Bam Caruso bought outright, we didn't just licence it like we did most of our things... and a fat lot of good it did us."

KIRI 058 THE PALACE OF LIGHT Beginning Here And Travelling Outward

"This cost us a small fortune that most people could record five or six albums for. It's one of those albums that does grow on people, there's lots of strings on it, a girl who plays for the Communards arranged it all. A lovely album, a lovely bunch of guys. They're a very, very introspective and serious bunch of people. They know what they want and though we've got to grit our teeth and pay through the nose for it, in the end they come up with the goods."

KIRI 047 THE KOOBAS Barricades

"This got written off at the time mainly because no-one had heard of it but we got a lot of mail saying how much people really like it."

MARX 075 ILLUSIONS FROM THE CRACKLING VOID MARX 085 MEANWHILE BACK AT THE RANCH BIG DAN IS FIGHTING FOR HIS LIFE...

"A couple of samplers, retailing at about three quid, total loss leaders for us. We're gonna put out another one when we get to 100 records and that's gonna have some bonus stuff on it that's not on anything else. We realise there's a lot of records we put out that people aren't gonna shell out money for having not heard 'em, so let 'em hear 'em."

KIRI 082 THE SEEDS Evil Hoodoo

"The best of the Seeds. This should be out soon and we anticipate it's gonna be a good seller 'cause although the Seeds albums are not difficult to get, they're available in America and Germany in various reissue packages, there are four or five albums on the original catalogue plus a sixth or seventh if you count Sky Saxon's last one. To get 'em all means you're gonna pay out a lot of money and you're also gonna get about 30% listenable music and 70% hardgoing. What we're doing is putting together all the ace tracks on one album and it's going to be such a playable album. Can't wait till that comes out."

"What else? Dear old Plasticland, of course, who should be coming over soon. There's the Rabbi Joseph Gordon single which is now deleted and goes for a lot of money. It came as a total surprise to us but it turns out to be someone quite famous!"

Richard: "Luckily we saw the funny side..."
Phil: "And we decided not to sue Phonogram."

When Michael Gira wrote the title track of his glowing new album, Children Of God, he didn't discover until afterwards that there once was a religious sect of the same name that used young girls to seduce converts with sex. We only discovered that after the interview.

Extracting information from the mind of Gira proved just a little bit difficult. But Martin Aston and Liz Evans tried. Yes, they were very trying.

The setting: a dark corner in the Mute/Product Inc offices. We sit surrounded by cardboard boxes. At the desk in front of us is Michael Gira, singer and writer of Swans. He wears a ten-gallon J R hat and puffs a fat cigar. We look like the jury, he the accused (or vice-versa). It's raining hard.

Liz: "Gloomy in here, isn't it?"

Martin: "Is this the kind of atmosphere that's the perfect setting for Swans music?"

Gira: "No, not particularly. I don't consider us to be gloomy."

M: "Is your music entertainment?"

G: "Certainly — that's part of its purpose. It's certainly not educational. We entertain by making small dramas; by telling stories; by working certain emotions and certain states of mind."

L: "Depressed states of mind?"

G: "I suppose that would be a very easy and surface way to look at things, but people these days have a tendency to interpret anything that's serious, or that cuts through basic levels, as depressing, because they're used to vapid pop. Our music is serious. It's strong and it's powerful, but I don't see that as depressing. In fact, I see most of our music as ultimately uplifting."

M: "So you aren't trying to upset people?"

G: "Of course not! I'm trying to make something that I feel is relevant to my life and, ergo, other people's lives."

M: "It's just the nature of Swans music — the huge repetition, the sheer volume, the heaviness of it all..."

G: "Are you talking about the new album now?"

L: "It seems a lot softer now. There seems to be more of a feminine aspect to it: is that Jarboe's influence?"

G: "Well, I don't know, is feminine soft? I don't think so. There's a lot more harmony and melody in it, for sure."

M: "So, have you mellowed out at all?"

G: "Hhh..." (exasperated noise) "I've just become interested, and so have the band, in other things. We've just trans-muted, that's all. I don't know whether it's mellow. Probably some of the lyrics are more cynical than they've ever been. I'm more interested in songs and also in very hard repetition — but I have to move on."

L: "Do you ever feel you are being pretentious?"

G: "No, because I'm very critical of myself. I know I'm being honest. I never do anything that is strictly for the sake of effect, or promoting a certain image of myself."

M: "Beyond your image of yourself, there's a school of thought that sees bands like Swans as glamourising squalour. What do you think of that image?"

G: "Which bands are like Swans?"

M: "Well, I was thinking of someone like Nick Cave. He once said 'Life is a sewer and you have to crawl through it to survive'."

G: "What have we to do with Nick? Nick's a nice guy, I like him. What has our music to do with his?"

M: "Perhaps there is a certain attitude that could be shared."

G: "I don't have a certain attitude, I'm really a sort of blank sheet."

M: "Really?"

G: "Yeah! Besides which, we don't have a pre-occupation with squalour, or with doom. I'm not interested with doom so much as I am with honesty. I mean, would you say that Leadbelly was interested in doom because he sang the blues? So why, therefore, when I sing my own kind of blues am I grandified as being doomy? I'm just talking about the things that matter in my daily life and using them to construct structures that people can perhaps get something from. I don't see that has anything to do with doom."

M: "But do you feel 'Life is a sewer'?"

G: "I don't make any pronouncements on life, because I'm just a tiny little person who is barely able to survive. I just work with the kind of perceptual things that I've learned and so I can't generalise about life. It's a total mystery to me."

L: "Is there any humour in Swans?"

G: "A lot of irony. I don't know whether that's humour or not."

M: "Where's the irony? You don't poke fun at people, do you?"

G: "No, it's in the juxtaposition of images; in the entendre throughout the words."

SQUAD

Gira: makes mountains out of muscles

L: "What makes you smile then?"

G: "I don't really like that kind of question."

L: "Why?"

G: "Cos it's too personal, and that's self-indulgent in public..."

L: "What questions would you like to be asked? If you don't talk about you or the music what do you?"

G: "I have explained the music to you, but I'm not going to sit here and be an advertising machine and spiel out about Swans hoping to make good copy."

L: "Did you see the write-up in the NME, where James Brown claimed that you only make the music you do because you couldn't compete with the likes of The Pet Shop Boys?"

G: "Yes, it was a really snide, idiotic, naive, vulgar interpretation. The guy obviously has no life experience whatsoever. He's obviously got no brain, he's a journalist. He thinks that people make music consciously to be in some historical mode. You can't do it like that, you do it out of personal necessity and you do what you think is honest for you yourself to do. Basically he can suck my cock. I was quite angry when I read that, in fact I was thinking of beating his face in because it's really the ultimate insult, it's like saying 'They haven't the guts to buckle down and become an advertisement for themselves'."

"I see, but not nostalgically, that in the '60s there was a really vital force in music that was culturally very important and widespread. Music was breaking a lot of boundaries. Nowadays the record industry and media have become so expert at selling and moving product that they have no relationship whatsoever to culture. It's just that the structures have become so codified and claustrophobic that there's no room for us now."

L: "Are Swans commercial at all?"

G: "No, I just think we're the music that should be on the radio. I really resent, and think it's absurd, that we're really relegated to the category of independent alternative. I don't like the 'indie' world or the 'alternative' world, because, to me, people basically pretend to be pigs in any world they're in — they want to carve their little bit of power and self-aggrandisement anywhere they are."

L: "Anything else you want to add?"

G: "Yes, I hope you enjoy the music, because it is enjoyable. We don't want to hurt anybody."

ROAD → SOMEWHERE!

One Chesterfield

Two Chesterfields

I clambered over sleeping bags, amps and guitars-with-names into the deep recesses of The Chesterfields tour van. I closed the door with the broken lock and off we sped; along motorways, highways and long boring flat bits; past towns and villages; over bridges and through illogical one-way systems, to faces, places and riders unknown. But before the driver puts his foot down let me introduce you to the West Country's premier pop boys:-

DAVEY PLAYS GUITAR AND SINGS — when he sings all his veins stick out and he looks like he's squeezing his body into a shell. Davey is most of the time puzzled, confused and bewildered but he has a theory on staying sane "on the road" . . . "I pretend we're still in Yeovil and we're playing different venues in Yeovil every night." Yes, Davey travels 1,000 odd miles to play in Yeovil.

DOM HITS DRUMS and is acknowledged as the good-looking one, he's got his head in a biology revision book — skipping school! Dom is always first and longest in the bathroom — he's that kind of boy.

MARK PLAYS GUITAR while standing on one leg and picking some fluff out of his ear. He's the newest member of the band — previously he sang songs about eating arms in a group called Pop Parker. To my disgust he's got sideburns. "I used to work in a petrol station," (that's his excuse). "Jimmy Somerville came there once," (poober), "on his bike, he bought a Mars bar."

SIMON BUMBLES ABOUT ON BASS AND SINGS TOO — he's the organiser, with a thousand bits of paper in his denim jacket. Simon is infatuated with pop — he owns over 3,000 records and one pair of trousers. He dreams sleeves and merchandise, bass-lines and videos where hot water bottles tumble out of suitcases.

The Chesterfields discover the worst route to circumnavigate Britain. Johnny Dee goes too!

Two Chesterfields playing Macbeth

Tell me about pop Mister Chesterfield.

"The Chesterfields are a pop band in the same way that The Beatles and The Smiths were pop bands. Pop is big, bold, commercial, bright and us!"

The Chesterfields play pop, guitar pop with strong melody and memorable tunes. On this tour they are previewing some of their newest and best songs — Better Smile, Last Train To Yeovil and Goodbye — these are songs that are instant, rich with pop's past, every bit as classic as Up, Up And Away or Pleasant Valley Sunday — songs that are gonna be HITS!

"I'VE GOT A PAIN IN MY CHESTERFIELD!"

Disaster struck the day before the tour commenced. Simon was walking through the streets of his normally tranquil home town, daydreaming about pop music, when a bearded thug elbowed him in the chest for no apparent reason. Upon a visit to the doctors it was discovered that he had a fractured rib. He was allowed to go ahead with the tour with the help of some very powerful painkillers, which made him feel 10 years old.

"I feel groovy," said Simon Chesterfield bobbing up and down, on Wednesday.

"ARRRRRRGH, don't make me laugh," he said clutching his chest on Friday.

By Saturday, the effect of the pain killers had worn thin and we had to drive him back home from faraway Newcastle.

"NO, I THINK YOU'RE THE WANKER ACTUALLY." — THE GIGS.

I only went "on the road" for four gigs — Bristol, Glasgow, Edinburgh and Newcastle — not as dedicated as you thought eh? But quite honestly touring takes so much out of you no-one would want to do it out of choice — unless you've got a gearstick fetish of course, or a dashboard fetish even (er, hi Mark!)

Bristol was a triumphant home game — a cinch. From loving Bristol we headed north to an overnight stop in Liverpool. In the morning we went to Brookside to spot some stars. Dom was a bit rude to Rod Corkhill.

"God, isn't he spotty," he chuckled, disgusted that he didn't know the wonders of Biactol, not realising the van window was open. All the same 'Rod the pld' waved us off to Scotland.

Glasgow wasn't exactly a wow (except for the extraordinary orange pizzas and red coke). The Chesterfields didn't go down too well in a pseudo, trendy nightclub called Fury Murrays — which had London prices and a clientele more into drinking till three than seeing a pop band from England. Edinburgh was better — only about 35 people turned up, but they were a good-humoured and friendly bunch. "They were all good looking," saus Simon, "did you notice?"

However, one "good-looking" member of the audience insisted on shouting "anoraks, anoraks" throughout the set — bloody weird some people!

They played Newcastle next, to a University hall full of sweaty, smiling, good-looking faces high on the sound of electric guitars. It wasn't until afterwards that Simon collapsed, eisematically, over a table and had to be taken to a hospital to be prodded by nurses.

Davey got so restless waiting he decided it was time to "do some drugs" — he subsequently crushed a polo mint on an amp and snorted it up through a Scottish pound note. All he could smell for hours was mint. "Doesn't this service station smell nice," he kept remarking. MOTORWAY MADNESS

Those road cones that litter our motorways for no apparent reason had an uncanny knack of hypnotising our van driver (bloody hippy)

"You just can't get the hired help these days," Simon told me, disappointed that we didn't have someone more "good-looking" behind the wheel.

As we drove through the night from Newcastle, those blue signs with knives and forks were the one thing we looked forward to — anything to get away from Radio Belgium.

"We've been to nearly every service station in Britain," Dom informed me as we drove into one, "we collect serviettes."

Two crazed Chesterfields

What strange, surreal places they are. Restaurants that sell dry, stale Danish pastries wrapped in six layers of Cellophane; middle-aged lorry drivers in JPS jackets slumped over plates of jumbo sausage and chips; gift shops that sell useless tat; and everyone that works in them has a Birmingham accent. I was convinced that these stations were run by aliens whose only conception of mankind was from one episode of Crossroads. But that's just the kind of stupid idea that goes through your head at 4.50am in a service station, it's called 'motorway madness' and we were all suffering.

Simon: "Oh, this is the one made entirely of matchsticks."

Mark: "No this is the seashell one."

Davey: "Shakespeare mural, that one."

Dom: "Isn't this the one where we saw Eddie Large."

Simon: "I'm sure it's matchsticks."

Journalist: "How many cuties does it take to change a light bulb?"

Simon: "It is the matchstick one."

Journalist: "Two, one to change it and one to write a fanzine about it."

Simon: "How do you know when a cutie's been in your fridge?"

Davey: "Oh f off."

Mark: "There's matchsticks everywhere."

WHERE'S DEAN MORIARTY WHEN YOU NEED HIM?

Now I know why so many bands split up, it's not musical differences after all — it's being stuck in the back of a stuffy Bedford van for years on end. Keeping hold of my sanity for a few precious moments more, I asked Brendan (their ex-guitarist) why he left the band.

"His farts mainly," was Davey's reply (known for rip-roaring botty burps himself).

These and many other wonders are things you discover "on the road" with The Chesterfields — a pop band, not a Hula Hoop!

We were back in Yeovil at last — after five sick, tired and drunk days. We said our weary goodbyes, Mark leaving me with this unsavoury question.

"Why do service station toilets always smell of cheesy smeg?"

I don't know, ask Jack Kerouac.

CRED NEW ACTS TO IMPRESS THE BOSS

CRASH

"Once I wished that our music was this car I saw in New York — an imported Mini covered in purple fake-fur — it was really great." So muses Mark Dumais, a tall, dark, fluffy-headed Baltimorean, a singer and songsmith, who, along with guitarists Kurt Ralske and Bill Carey, makes up the nucleus of Crash.

Yes, three all-American boys, who originally met in New York, but have now settled in London in order to delight the jaded taste-buds of us Brits with their throbbing blob of "bitter chocolate-covered lime sherbet" sound.

What are you really here for, then?

Mark: "We came here to escape from New York — because New York is a sucked orange. We don't want to talk about New York. There's no scene there, there's nothing going on there, it doesn't exist anymore."

"Now, what do we think about music? Well, I write all the songs, so they're all to do with my inner thoughts. As far as lyrical content goes, you can compare me to perhaps someone like... Harold Pinter — I don't write directly and I'm certainly not writing about common things."

Kurt: "I think your approach is more Russ Meyer-esque."

Mark: "Hmm,"... eyes rolling... "Well, I certainly do believe in a good dose of fun and sleaze..."

What do you aim for?

Mark: "Total guitar atmosphere. Right now we are going for a neo-bubblegum approach."

That sounds a bit sweet and sickly to me.

Mark: "Yeah, it could be. Hmm, I've always liked that kind of music, though. It's not contrived, it's not intellectual. My view of the greatest song is a song called Sugar On Sunday by The Clique, a '60s group, which is very garagey. It sounds very grungy, but the song is so sterling and clear — it's the height of perfection."

So, can Crash reach such peaks? Suck them and see! Liz Evans

THE KREWEN

The Krewmen have just released their third album, Into The Tomb. Hot on the heels of Adventures Of The Krewmen and Sweet Dreams, the latest vinyl offering is, in their opinion, by far the best.

"There's quite a mixture of styles on the new one," admits guitar-man Tony McMillan. "There's some heavier stuff and some songs that have mellowed down a bit as well..."

So The Krewmen — bold psychobilly adventurers — have mellowed out in their old age?

"It's just us trying to sound different instead of crash-bang-wallop at 90 mph all the time," says Tony. "Just something that happened naturally, it's the way it came out. If every song begins to sound the same, you get stuck in a rut and you lose a lot of enthusiasm."

The band recently completed a tour of Germany and were surprised at how well known they were on the continent. The next step in the plan for world domination sees them having their first television appearance on MTV in the States. Singled out as one of the lucky "up and coming bands" to be featured in an MTV special Rock Over Europe, The Krewmen were filmed in and about their local town!

"We arranged a gig in Basingstoke so they could come down and film us. They interviewed us about our home town and what it's like living there. One of the camera guys lives in Hawaii and he was going on about how he'd love to live in Basingstoke, saying it was a great place — and he comes from Hawaii!"

There's no accounting for taste. Chris Hunt

B-SHOPS FOR THE POOR

The rumble of wild elephants dancing? That's how the eccentric Bromley experimentalists, B-Shops For The Poor, would describe their sound — a complex mesh of bellowing saxophones, backing tapes and the odd vocal tossed in for added flavour.

The centre of activity revolves around the four sax-players — Dave Petts, Jon Dobie, Louise Jamieson and occasionally Steve Blake — at times augmented by Carol Jones' bass guitar and Andrea Morgan's squawks.

Having lifted their name from Brecht, does their anarchic sound carry any weighty message?

"We are political in a musical sense — gaining freedom through discipline — as each of us has a particular part to play within the group. All the rage that we might contain within us is really thoroughly eliminated on stage."

Attempting to catch the spirit of Sun Ra/Evan Parker/Globe Unity, with their "carefully constructed chaos", B-Shops have caught the attention of a diverse section of admirers. From shopping centres, to arty warehouse parties, to a session on Radio 3's Jazz Today — despite their anti-jazz stance — their most recent foray was to provide backing music to The Cholmondeleys dance company.

So do they deliver bilge or bargains? To which the B-Shops message is: "B-there or B-square!!!" Liz Evans

THE BRILLIANT CORNERS

What are the strengths of BRILLIANT CORNERS?

"Boundless energy, enthusiasm and stamina."

"Politics."

"Working class!"

"Not afraid to go from one style of music to another. Not afraid that if we don't use fuzz guitars, all our indie fans will leave us. Not afraid not to sign to a major for £30,000 and a shit deal, but we will sign for £100,000 non-returnable advance!" Hmmm!

Add to this shopping list; serrated pop tunes, wry and expressive lyrics, bristling guitars, a stumpy trumpet, brilliant corners, not-quite-there-yet brilliance.

Bristol's Brilliant Corners are strong enough to prise themselves out of a guitar-pop mire because they want to be pushy, stropic, articulate, independent and not routine. Their new single Delilah Sands may begin "ba-ba-da-da-da-da-da" but penman Davey — a man with a cherubic, bashful, golden grin — has more in common with traditional English art-pop than the newer indiepop breed: The Kinks, Small Faces, through to Madness and The Monochrome Set. Irony, cheekiness, jauntiness, discerning pop. ("I'd bite you if I had the teeth" — Delilah Sands).

After a bag of 45s, Delilah will be followed by an album in Feb. And how will people take it?

"When people hear the new album, they'll say, 'slightly eccentric English coalminers' sons, have they been listening to The Small Faces? too much, these lyrics are a bit social but far too personalised, let's have more songs about sugar and candy'..."

Yes, of course they will. Martin Aston

THE DARLING BUDS

"We've never played rugby, we don't shag sheep but we must confess to owning wellies and we do take the occasional walk over the hills!"

Andrea, Darling Buds' vox harmonical, attempts to dispel the misconception that beyond the Severn Bridge there lies a civilisation suspended in time, where modern culture stops and ancient mythology begins! It's a distinction which appears to be more apparent to the music industry than to the rest of us; The Darling Buds will vouch for this. Hailed by Peel as the best of the shambling bunch, the furore over their debut If I Said 45 released on their own Darling label still thrives. They're now going to commit themselves to a third Radio 1 session — an achievement greeted by relative unanimity, you'll agree. Is it that aggressive Welsh curse at work again?

Harley: "Yeah, it holds back the art. If you do something and

THE WONDER STUFF

A short while ago a compact, brilliant record called Unbearable by The Wonder Stuff hit the shops, the accompanying video even got shown on Night Network and enjoyed coverage on Euro MTV (on a four hour rotational basis). Can't be bad!

"The single," admits Miles Stuff, "did as well as we'd hoped. . . the whole thing's really snowballed for us."

Within the first two months of formation, the band played with The Fall, New Order and That Petrol Emotion, attracting attention for themselves and that good, good single. So who or what is Unbearable about then? "Oh God! If I had a pound for every time. . . it could be about anybody at all; I mean, if you go round telling everybody what your songs are about it takes away the mystery, don't it?"

True, I s'pose. Okay then, what is The Wonder Stuff for?

"It started as a reaction against all the shit local bands; we'd just seen so many bland outfits — we just wanted to inject some character into the scene. . . but, basically we've got a few songs to sing and that's why we're here." Daz Igymeth then don't get any attention it gets depressing. I'm not saying Wales is depressing, it's just that there's no attention focused on it. A&R people won't come to Newport, they all want to know when you'll be playing in London. And journalists don't come to Wales to review gigs either. Wales is easily forgotten. The only Welsh bands getting any attention are the ones who're singing in Welsh."

The experience of the past has meant the Buds' machine has to be an independent little one, but what about the future beyond the next Peel session?

Andrea: "Well, we'd love to release another single, what band wouldn't? But we've run out of money. We can't afford to publicise the record or to finance the label, and we're just not in the know. It's sad because there's a lot of good performers to have come out of Wales."

Shirley Bassey, Tom Jones, Bonnie Tyler, Shakey. . . Alex Kadis

MALCOLM'S INTERVIEW

On the one hand you've got indie-pop-punk, like The Fall, Josef K, Shreikback and Stump, and on the other you've got folk-world-greats, like Nathan Abshire, We Free Kings and The Louvin Brothers. Somewhere in between sit York pop folkies MALCOLM'S INTERVIEW.

Brought up on a diet of back room punk and tradi-rhythms, MI are the spoiled brats of a folk-singing generation, too stupid to tell them not to listen. The interview sound meshes folk song feeling with screaming guitars and a hipshake beat.

I don't give a damn what people think. The English roots thing has got it, though it's been driven underground, so it is down to people like Malcolm's interview to dig it out.

"There's a simplicity in folk song, a razor edge style of playing and a lyric which can turn a statement or situation on its head, examine it, make fun of it, or condemn it," says guitarist Jon Townend.

Jon lists The Watsons as influences, alongside Richard Hell And The Void-oids. He draws his inspiration from the hard political edge of folk song writers Ewan McColl and Dick Gaughan.

Finger in the ear — just say hey nonnie noe.

The band who once lost a guitarist to The Batfish Boys have their first album, Breakfast In Bedlam, out now and it's a cracker. Hitting off with a thrash version of Ewan McColl's Moving On, this piece of plastic

THE CORNDOLLIES

It seems that the name of this combo has been foisted around the recesses of wherever for some time. When Underground first breathed, they were gigging and sending out demos. We lerved the first 45, Forever Steven, then everyone said they loved it! Then they signed to Medium Cool and their latest single, Be Small Again, was released at the same time as a new Raw Herbs single and the best thing that The Waltoners have uttered so far.

Lead Dollie, Steve Musham has a bunged-up nose, but he's quick with the explanations.

"Well, we met in Kings Cross, although we're from Dalston, and we were sort of helped by HAMMA — a Hackney conglomerate who've attempted to promote gigs, help bands and all that kind of thing. The first single, on the Farm label was part financed by them and by Pyramid, a rehearsal studio we used, as well as by ourselves."

And, how has that done?

"Pretty good, it's still selling and I think it'll be out on 12 inch soon with an extra track. I mean, it got favourable reviews and we've sold enough to cover the costs."

But if that was a success, what made you move to Medium Cool?

"We sort of got to know The Raw Herbs through their club The Cool Trout, and they were impressed with our sound and the single because it had been produced by Robert from The Go-Betweens who they really like. We played a few times with them and Andy, from Medium Cool, thought we'd fit in with the other bands on the label, so he asked us to do a single."

The resulting release was Be Small Again and the response has been even more positive than that for their debut. So where to now?

"When Robert gets back from The Go-Betweens tour we'll be going into the studio to demo 12 songs which we'll record in the new year, hopefully with him producing, and that'll be our debut LP."

But that makes it all sound too simple. . . y'know no problems? Why's that, and how come other bands can't get into the same situation? "I suppose it's because we just try to keep it really simple and direct."

And, of course, they can write pretty damn fine songs too. That does help. Dave Henderson displays the new indie folk at its best.

It's out on the Special Delivery label (SPD 1006) and is released to coincide with the single (taken from the album) Finer Points Of Feelin'/Blow The Man Down (SPEC 45002). Mike Hirst

ROTE KAPELLE

"Over the years a Rote Kapelle sound has developed. We have harsh rocky verses, which I sing, and then we go into a really good pop chorus which Margarita sings, so it's really distinctive. You get bands like The Membranes who do the harsh bit and anorak bands who do the sweet bit, but we've stumbled upon both," says Rote Kapelle's singer Andrew Tully.

Sometimes being in Rote Kapelle can be an ordeal. A series of less than memorable live appearances have virtually driven them from the stage.

Although they've been around, in one form or another, for almost six years, their first release was The Smelly Dinosaur EP in November 1985 — and since then they have only been producing records at a rate of about one a year.

But they generally prove worth the wait. Their last mini-LP, It Moves But Does It Swing, proved once again that they are one of the most innovative of Edinburgh's Kwik-Fit bands, with interchangeable members.

"The challenge is that Rote Kapelle take so long to do anything, but when we do get it together we can write really good, innovative songs. The other bands are, in a way, rehashing old rock and roll cliches, we're not. You can't buy a Rote Kapelle record by anyone else. If you want a Shop Assistants record you can buy a Primitives record, but nobody sounds like us."

If things go to plan the New Year should see an unprecedented surge of vinyl activity from the band, with two singles in relatively quick succession, followed by an album in the spring, possibly to be produced by Colin Newman of Wire.

"He rang up and said he'd like to do it, as long as we're prepared to totally re-think things and be really open about how we record it, which sound really interesting."

And perhaps a little risky?

"Well no, he likes what we do. I don't think he'll want us to sound like a Bulgarian male choir." Trevor Pake

THE DESERT WOLVES

When you meet a group, but you've never heard them play, you invariably ask the old question — 'What do you sound like?'. And often as not you get the vague uncommitted answer — 'sort of poppy, y'know?'. But anyone who describes their music as "The Four Tops with guitars" must get full marks and

HOW MANY BEANS MAKE 5?

Things began when Bob Lucas (vocals, guitar) practised a few tentative songs in his London bedsit with ex-Only Ones bassist Alan Mair, with Mair's son on drums. Things went well, so he moved to Brighton (as you do, like), where he then met up with some people of equal taste and drinking habits. After much debating, How Many Beans Make 5 were born. Apparently that name is a beatnik-come-Zen phrase from the '60s.

"It's one of those things you're meant to think about for about ten years, then understand what it means," says Jon Sands, their amiable lead guitarist.

"We like it," pipes bass man Mark Marabie, blowing the froth off his beer, "because you can't immediately put us into a category."

But that's where they're wrong — because How Many . . . (oh, what a mouthful) fit neatly into a 'minimalist-thoughtful-lyrics-Buddhist-guitar-sexpot-pop bracket of prose-filled artists'. They perform songs with hooks, wonderful fiddly guitar bits, un-fancy but sound drumming (provided by the band's heart throb William Cox), which could be sure-fire indie or maybe even major hits once discovered and unearthed by someone with an ear for quality. So far the only recorded work has been one track, Lilly, on a local compilation on HAG (nothing, unfortunately, to do with Harry Cross' Hole Action Group). But live performances more than compensate for this lack of output by being fun and filled with extraordinary angst-ridden love songs like I See You Every Day, My God It's Boring my undivided attention. This is how Dave Platten describes The Desert Wolves, the new version, that is. 'New' because this is actually their second coming, the first having petered out a couple of years ago after they had looked odds on for success. Already they've gone a step further; their debut single, Love Shattered Lives, having been released on Ugly Man records.

and Just A Joke My Dear, all sung in a trebly tone, aching for a George Harrison harmony.

The Beans have no ambition to become A-Ha, but they feel it would be an incredible injustice if a single never saw the light of day. Until then, however, they are content to carry on writing hit after hit in their bedrooms. Very Zen, I must say! Johnny Dee

The Wolves mark two includes new faces in singer Martin and drummer Craig, but the old nucleus of Richard, Nick and Dave himself remains. Listening to both sides of the single, it's obvious there's a thoughtful songwriting unit at work, with nods of appreciation to both Motown and Postcard. "Yeah, the new songs have a more 'crafted' quality about them. We're also looking beyond exclusively guitar based songs — I think you have to."

Manchester is currently throwing up 'guitar bands' at the rate of one a day. The Desert Wolves stand apart from most in that they want to play music to make people dance — witness the single. That's a fairly modest aim which The Desert Wolves can easily achieve. Craig Ferguson

● This month's Tip Sheet sees veteran Chelsea fan Julian 'Osgood' Henry team up with 'Wee' Pat Nevin, of Chelsea and Scotland, for a dabble into the chrome bag. The event took place on the even of Arsenal v. Chelsea, a game in which Pat scored a throbbing goal but ended up on the losing side. Ah! That's life! The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1.

CELESTIAL ORGY (Dennings, Walsingham Road, Kingsbridge, Devon) sent us their cassette in a rather dreary looking brown envelope. Did the future of rock'n'roll lie inside? Pat seemed to feel so, so he plucked it from the pile, and thrust it across the room at me. How disappointing to find Celestial Orgy's offering to be a disjointed sub-Goth workout. "I didn't know Siouxsie was still sending her tapes around," joked Pat, presumably in reference to the singer's maudlin delivery. Perhaps a cassette of this nature would be better received amongst Pat's team mates? Kerry Dixon for one? "Oh I doubt it," said Pat. "Kerry's more into soul and Tamla stuff. I used to try and sneak on tapes and videos like this to get the rest of the team into music, but they weren't really into it. I remember when Frankie were first on The Tube, I videoed it and put it on. They liked it because of the girls, but you could tell they weren't really interested. . . then six months later the record was a hit and they were all dancing to it." For Celestial Orgy however, the immediate future does not look quite as promising. "I suppose people still like this sort of thing, and perhaps with time they will develop," concluded Pat diplomatically.

you can hear they sound quite good. Given time to develop, and presuming they don't get hung up on any one style, I'd think they could produce something quite interesting." Rummaging in amongst their handout Pat suddenly unearthed a review of the band by Steve Sutherland, a senior Melody Maker writer who is famous across the world for his prediction that Underground would fold within six months. Oh well, we all make mistakes. Anyway, on the subject of Uncle Ian, Steve can be considered an expert. "When I was younger I used to trust reviewers and actually go out and buy records that certain people would say was good. It doesn't really happen like that now, but if Steve says they're alright then I do still tend to trust his judgement a bit." Uncle Ian's tape meanwhile, some 15 minutes in, had become rather more obscure. It sounded like there was a huge bumble bee buzzing around the room.

BOATS NOT SHIPS (114 Hanover Street, Swansea, South Wales) kicked off the proceedings (sorry, no more football puns) with a likeable, if low key, stab at familiar guitar pop. "This used to be my sort of thing," said Pat. "It's very Orange Juice and very Josef K, and they do it quite well. It's relatively pleasant, though I'll bet someone like John Peel gets a lot of tapes like this. I can't say much more as it's hard to judge a band on just one listen, I find I'm always changing my mind about groups. When I first heard The Sugar-cubes I thought they were rubbish, but now I listen to their record the whole time." So, will Boats Not Ships be receiving the ultimate in critical praise, a rave review in Pat's column in The Bridge News? "Well, I don't tend to write so much about music these days, I'm more into things like the New York Art scene," replied Pat, revealing just one of the many diverse interests that have helped make him become the international cultural celebrity that he is.

THE PAKISTANI BROTHERS (19 Lister Close, Beechdale Estate, Walsall, West Midlands) romped home to win the Tape Of The Month award with a sound that had Pat likening them to Foetus. "This tape has the same sort of anger that you hear in Jim Therwell's music, and I really like that," said Pat. "They would be even better if their stuff was better produced." Do you buy many records of this type I asked him, or do you prefer to go to gigs. "Well, I do both really. Foetus is my favourite of this sort of thing, but I like bands like Swans as well." The Pakistani Brothers included a bold and well-produced Emergence Sheet which contained fierce graphics of guns and muscles, and informed us that 'the noise that came forth was that of the gods — uncontrollable, unpalatable and unapproachable'. Pat spent some time chuckling over this, and later, in order to demonstrate his liking for the band, actually requested to listen to the tape again.

UNCLE IAN (0705.833021) produce a sort of sub-Skidoo noise that teeters uncertainly towards pomp rock before collapsing just short of becoming horrible. Pat rather liked them. "From what They sent one in before, though this time they include a letter saying don't slag us off or else we'll send you a real one. Well. Over to you Pat. "Well firstly I think the packaging is brilliant, only don't send me one! Reading their letter it seems like they're not completely happy with the tape, and speaking personally, I wouldn't send something off unless I was pleased with it. There are some good ideas in the music though, and I quite like the Indian strain." Pat then went on to explain another occasion when he was reviewing records. "I was doing the singles for Record Mirror. Without really thinking, I slagged off a Depeche Mode single, and a couple of weeks later, I saw them on Breakfast TV being asked who their favourite football team was: They said it used to be Chelsea until they saw my review. It made me think a lot about commenting on a group's music." Action Direct therefore can take heart. There will be no more slaggings in Underground. We think your music is wonderful.

BRADFORD (0254.61235) had a promising debut on the Tip Sheet a few months ago, and this, their second demo, went down well with our present critic and Wizard Of The Dribble. "Hmmm, the songs are really quite pleasant. Their image is a bit surprising considering the music they make — I never used to be terribly impressed by the skinhead look, but that was all blown away by Chris Dean of the Redskins." Bradford, needless to say, do not come from Bradford. Why they couldn't call themselves Blackburn I do not know, but there you have it. However. Back to Pat, who was still chattering away. "Yes, they have definite potential, I can certainly see where a group like this could go if they got close to the charts."

GODSPEED (21 Roxbrough Park, Harrow-On-The-Hill, Middlesex) made Pat laugh with their handout which contained Mad Max style cartoons of the group adopting various manly poses. "Oh, they can't be serious," gasped Pat, as the tears started to well up in his eyes. "Look at their names like Jez and Pinto. . . why they should be called Rock Jockstrap or Dirty Overalls or something!" The music churned out in the background, a sort of Zodiac, Bykers, hm hotchpotch of indeterminate purpose. Having encountered this sort of thing fairly frequently since fulfilling my role as Tip Sheet Chief Executive, it was hard to muster much enthusiasm. Pat, however, obviously rated Godspeed's efforts as amongst the all-time comedy greats. "You can't take this sort of thing seriously," he said, "And I think it's a lot of fun." I looked at him sternly.

RACHEL'S PILCHARDS (63 Parkhurst Road, Holloway, London N19) described their tape as being a 'new phenomena in music'. The new phenomena we agreed with. The music part, we are not so sure. While listening to their cassette, which included spontaneous and uncontrolled whistles, shouts and various banging noises, Pat picked up some oranges that were lying on the table and started juggling them in the air with great expertise. How impressive it is to watch a real sportsman perform. It wasn't long before he dropped them however, and we both turned our attention to the music. "It's not an easy listen, is it?" commented Pat. "It's good that someone like Peelite will play stuff like this, but I find it a bit hard to handle. I think these people must live on a different planet to me." Perhaps they are Tottenham Hotspur supporters or something equally strange.

Later on, a full listen to Rachel's Pilchards cassette failed to reveal any hidden depths or meaning to their efforts, a fact that is borne out by their less than impressive points score.

THE BLIMEYS (0525.382624) have a name we both approved of and listed amongst their influences many of Pat's favourite bands. "We are back in the bedroom," the Chelsea no. seven commented as the tape began, in reference to the primitive quality of recording. The music was commercial and poppy. "It's a bit disappointing not to hear the voice a little clearer," said Pat. "The tape quality is rather poor so it's quite hard to make a reasonable judgement, but in the band's defence it should be said that we tend to forget the basic resources that are available when you first start recording." What a sensible thing to say. Why isn't Pat Nevin currently running CBS Records? Or for that matter the Government? Perhaps when the day comes for him to hang up his Puma football boots and Commodore-endorsed Chelsea football shirt, he may consider such a role. But for the moment, he is only our guest critic. Here are more reasonable comments: "We only listened to a couple of songs, and I wouldn't really like to sit in judgement until I'd heard some more." However, time was passing. Four hours into the reviewing session, the Underground side of the squad was visibly lagging. Despite a schedule that meant he had to be taking the field against Arsenal less than 24 hours later, Pat insisted on another tape to listen to, though.

ANOURAGRAN (01.735.6515) sing their tapes sometimes in French and sometimes in English. Their tape arrived in a funny pink mesh that had Pat puzzling and inspecting it for some moments before he turned his attention to the music. "It's not really my sort of thing," he admitted. "I seem to be listening to a lot of hip hop and classical music these days, and although I listen to lots of music, I'm not really as close to it as I was a few years ago. The vocal on this isn't bad, only it doesn't really reach out and grab you like it should." Then, suddenly and without warning, Pat treated me to the legendary wit that has made him such a colourful figure in the Stamford Bridge locker room: "Hey, it's not really breaking the barriers of rock music y'know?" he drawled in an American accent. How we both laughed. Anyway, Anouragan, who are apparently a two piece and are based in London, will not appreciate our fooling around at such a crucial point in their musical careers. We returned to our posts as professional reviewers and awarded the points.

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON NO 6: THE INSTRUMENT OF YOUR DESTRUCTION

When you've asked Slasher to join your group, because his dad owns the Twistaway mobile disco — and he can provide the big black boxes, that the sound comes out of, at either side of the stage — you have two main worries. WORRY ONE: What instruments shall we play? and WORRY TWO: How the hell does one write songs?

To solve the former, plump for the humble guitar, for, with a few little electronic boxes, with names like "Muff Grabber" and "Sludge Grinder" (sex sells everything, so it comes as no surprise, that the "Mr Perky What-a-Racket" effect pedal was a commercial disaster), even a complete novice can make a continuous three minute noise. These effect pedals can be expensive and even bands like The Cure and the Banshees have had to share the same one for years.

Then there's drums, which now come in handy box form. And, although most machines sound despicably biscuit-tin like, after a gig they will not have an argument with their girlfriend, say sphincter-clenching things to the NME interviewer, and they won't leave you to pack their equipment away.

Keyboards tend to be expensive, but they can make more noises than Roy Castle, yet rarely shout "Record Breakers", and never tap dance.

A bass guitar can be presented to the group member who has difficulty tying his shoelaces, as with only four strings, his dexterity will remain reasonably untested.

Then come saxophones and other screechy-blowy-things which are bloody annoying at rehearsals but may be worth putting up with if it's Slasher's chosen instrument. Trombones are by far the crappiest blowy-thing, unless you're compiling a Walt Disney cartoon soundtrack, when they're essential for the dancing broom scenes.

The AA Book of Roadside Musical Instruments carries a comprehensive list of other choices open to you.

Next up is writing songs, and that's a piece of piddle. Unfortunately, writing good songs is a different kettle of frogs entirely, and certain things are best known.

The word "subtle" is a bugger to rhyme, and "window" is not much better. If you are a psychedelic band, write songs about gnomes running up hills, whereas if you're a heavy metal band, songs about long legged, big breasted women from hell, who want it all the time are a safe bet. If, on the other hand, you want to be a chart success, your song must have a strong 'hook' line. This basically means that you must repeat three short words incessantly, until people name their babies after them.

Finally, lyrics about famous people are popular at present, and I think Mr Kipling the cake manufacturer, has been sadly neglected.

Ug reader, Simon Birrel goes on the town with Spizz

When Spizz says he's taking you on a Big Night Out, don't doubt his word. I did, and the consequence was thousands of fallen trees, millions of homes without electricity, roofs blown away. Yes! It was the night of the Big Blow. Come the morning, TV commentators would be blaming the weather and calling it an act of God. Pah! More like Spizz God! I know, I was there, and you can read my world exclusive report on the carnage only here, now, in your super soaraway Ug!

Oxford psychology student Simon Birrel was the lucky (?) winner of the Underground/Hobo Railway Records Big Night Out, after he correctly named our hero's ever-changing moniker in 1982 as... well, I can't actually remember offhand, and to be fair, even Simon couldn't recall it on the night, but to be sure it was either Spizz '77, Spizz Oil, Spizz Energi, Athletico Spizz '80, Spizzles (that's it, bozo — ed), Spizz Energi Two, Spizz Orwell, Spizz & the Astronautics, Spizz's Big Business or Spizz Sexual.

Ten years on and the self-proclaimed Media Messiah cometh for a seventh reincarnation as a 100 percent pure, unadulterated, no additives included, Spizz, with a re-recorded version of his one time hit, Where's Captain Kirk?

What y' see is what y' get, slimmed down and hanging out in the Soho offices of Hobo. And the game was on immediately, as we settled down quizzily to a glass of the finest Australian champers we were rudely interrupted by the appearance of a rather ample and naughtily schoolgirl.

Decorum prevents me from relating what happened next, and Simon might find his love life on rocky ground. I do, but suffice to say Tom Brown's Schooldays, headmaster study and wobbly, wobbly, wobbly, was the order of the day. Still, it gave us all added vitality, so, after Simon had added a few extra backing vocals in preparation for the 1997 remix of Where's Captain Kirk, we were off, gliding through the steam-soaked streets of Chinatown. Bluesman constantly flicked at my wrist. Simon declined the invitation of a smutt, non-alcoholic half in the basement bar of Madame Kinky's porn palace, so it was straight into Spizz's local, the Crown Club Chairmen.

Our time in the Crown passed joyously as the sound system pounded out a constant diet of past Spizz specialities. The Messiah busied himself on checking if the landlord had a public broadcast licence and if not would he cough up some royalties on the spot? I think it was a joke. In true rack 'n' raw tradition, Sime was constantly plied with Coke, though he did seem to get rather the wrong idea by using the straw to suck instead of sniff.

Fortunately, at this point, the Daughters of God arrived in an extended Chevy, a 90ft long monster with all the trimmings which smoothly whisked us around the narrow streets of Soho for the remainder of the night.

In we drove, seven in the back, and a mere 10 minutes later we found ourselves 100 yards down the road at the Pizza Express.

(Well, it's a bit of a job making a U-turn in these cars.)

Luckily, it was just long enough to catch an episode of Only Fools And Horses on the colour TV, down a few cans, that Spizz had kindly liberated from the supermarket, and frantically jig to Madonna's Causing A Commotion on the stereo.

Spizz and Birrel jamming

The Pizza Express found Spizz vainly trying to convince the three secretaries on the next table that he, The Pop Messiah (himself), was in fact a bona fide star.

"Simon won a night out with me," he exclaimed. "Oh! Yeah! What was second prize, two nights?" retorted one of the girls.

And so on... Spizz, ever the man for the main chance, eventually dispatched the tiresome trio to Tower Records (open till midnight), with firm instructions to purchase three copies of his latest opus from the chart return bill.

Another hour passed in the back of the Chevy, looking for dossiers on which to unload our pizza doggy bags and milking the stores of the passing populus.

Suddenly, there we were, another 100 yards down the road and confronted by the fearsome Limelight bouncers (gentle giants in designer clothes).

Quickly we were herded into the VIP bar where we were able to rub shoulders with the likes of, well, ourselves actually. It was empty, but they told us that Alex Higgins had been drinking there the night before. Then again, he'd been drinking everywhere the night before.

The VIP bar is done out like a Victorian library, dingy, dark and dour. The ornate picture frames that cram every spare inch of wall space lack paintings, perversely containing mirrors to enable the famous and fortunate few to keep a constant watch on their hairlines.

After that excitement, we decided to take another 30 minute ride around the corner to finish off the night at the Wag Club. This breathing space allowed the mask to slip as Spizz and the girls proved their fallibility by porking out in the car. Not a pretty sight.

Once inside the club, Spizz lost little time in hitting the vacant upstairs dance floor to flail wildly to the only rhythms of his own re-recorded version of Where's Captain Kirk? much to the bemusement of an ultra-cool clientele. Downstairs Manchester's Yargo knocked up an efficient set but by then it was all over for me.

Henry, our chauffeur, had joined us in the club, outside the wind was beginning to howl and bite, and anyway, a girl asked me home. Hope you enjoyed it Simon. As you can see I kept my promise not to mention that naked stripogram who spanked your booty.

FRINGE BENEFITS

Raw Herbs are not an American band. They are, however, absolutely brilliant, well, so says Johnny Dee anyhow. . .

There must be something in the water in East London — currently bands from that particular neck of the woods are popping up 10 to the dozen, on labels like Roustabout, Sombrero and Medium Cool. One such band is The Raw Herbs — a band that doesn't quite fit into the modern conception of independent pop sounds. They see themselves as a million miles removed from fads, polka dot anoraks and fanzines. They believe they fit into a procession of good, honest, rock 'n' roll from the '50s, '60s and, less so, the '70s and '80s.

The kind of music they play has its roots in the past, but they've brought it up to date. The "good, honest" rockin' sound of The Raw Herbs makes them unique in the current climate. The Raw Herbs have more to do with Jerry Lee Lewis than they do Edwyn Collins — they even drop Creedence Clearwater Revival nonchalantly into the conversation.

I'm getting ringing wet on my way to see The Raw Herbs, a band who just happen to be on an independent label — but want something better — who can blame them, they know that they're good. After drying myself I sit in their flat accompanied by Derek (vocals) and Kevin (guitar); Steve (bass) and Brian (drums) are conspicuous by their absence.

Kevin: "We want to be number one in the charts. With luck we will make it. It doesn't matter how great you are, you still need a degree of luck. It was luck that we got a Janice Long session — it's a vital ingredient.

But what happens if you don't get lucky?

Kevin: "You find yourself in a similar situation to someone like the Go-Betweens, in 10 years time, people are going to wonder why on earth they weren't massive. I don't want that to happen to The Raw Herbs."

But unless something radical happens, it will. Independent labels are being treated with more and more disdain by major labels, and music critics. Even if, like The Raw Herbs, you feel you don't belong, you are destined to be tarred with the same brush (get dismissive, brief reviews, etc. . .)

Derek: "We're not an independent band, we're a band and we just happen to be on an independent label."

Kevin: "We are not snobs, we don't want to stay in our comfortable little area."

The latest single, Don't Bury Me Yet, is one step in the right direction towards pre-luck triumph — it's catchy, lyrically competent and (heaven's above) commercial! It tells the story of 'the boy that came home' — a song, almost American in subject and delivery. The first time I heard it (yuk, yuk, yuk) Green On Red and (yum, yum, yum) REM immediately sprung to mind.

Derek: "I find that disappointing. We're nothing like any of those American bands."

Okay, so why are you different?

Kevin: "All those bands, and most bands in fact, are beat-orientated, we've got swing."

You couldn't thrash to The Raw Herbs, it's more of a sway from side to side as opposed to a manic stomp in an oily garage. Also there is something more creative and structured to them — the guitars complement rather than destroy; the drums brush away at the back leaving plenty of room for vocal harmony.

Keeping with the American reference though, the vocals do seem to be that way inclined — if not a mid-Atlantic drawl, a Michael Stipe-whine does rear its fluffy head. However, it's just the way Derek sings, it goes with the swing!

On Don't Bury Me Yet that voice is so "hard done by" and charming — it wavers and flutters with bravado, almost as if John Wayne is singing it from the saddle. All this, the harmonies and the sing-a-long possibilities make it a corker of a 45 in anyone's book. Frankly I couldn't give a hoot on Casey Jones' whistle if a vast army of aging cynics think otherwise — I recommend it with the conviction of Victor Kiam.

The Raw Herbs have other songs too — like Holland from the Janice Long session — where the vocals meet their true wild and woolly potential, it's sung with an abandon and a touch of hate missing from their vinyl contributions. Then there's the first single, with its arresting title, She's A Nurse (But She's Alright) — convincing me that, yes, The Raw Herbs are a band for everyone to love and let's paint that in big letters.

Live, The Raw Herbs, are a tonic. So many bands just stand there and it's all a bit of a chore, they'd rather be sitting in front of the telly.

Kevin: "We move about a bit."

Oh come on, you can do better than that. Let a fan tell you about it. . . "the loveliest guitar, everything gelling perfectly. . . something just GOES and live there's PRESENCE. The way Derek MOVES, tosses his fringe (and what a fringe. . .) That's more like it.

Kevin: "We're also a friendly band, we talk to each other on stage."

Derek: "And we even talk to each other off stage too!"

Kevin: "Yes."

Derek: "The Raw Herbs is the most important thing in our lives and we enjoy it."

There is something just so right about this band, it would be appallingly tragic if they didn't make it to Saturday Superstore, Smash Hits, teenagers ripping off their shirts at airports. You can even pretend you're a pop star to a Raw Herbs record sing in the mirror with a tennis racket as a guitar. Whatever it is The Raw Herbs have got, it's something hot. That mixture of blues, country and rock 'n' roll, those songs, hooks, sex, swing and something in the water has just got to spell success. Be the first on your block to faint at a Raw Herbs shindig. Remember Elvis Presley started on an indie too!

Icicle Works change their pop socks and sound obscenely good

Work out in wonderland

● "Eh! Are you goin' down to the lavvy? My littlun's just gone down there, make sure she goes properly will ya loov — ta very mooch!" It's Liverpool all right and there's little room for that brand of southern suburban conservatism which sometimes leaves the average Londoner cringing with embarrassment over the most reasonable personal request! We're in the heart of the city centre, sitting in one of Lime Street's less salubrious cafés. There are no Bunnymen eating sardines here and no Beatles paraphernalia adorning the walls. It's fitting. It's real. It's apt because I'm here with The Icicle Works vocalist/guitarist Ian McNabb and bassist Chris Layhe. The Icicle Works have always, it would seem, been one step beyond the realms of acceptable behaviour which indicates that a rock band is precisely that. Both socially and musically they are a band who refuse to toe the line and have even been known to flirt with non-conformity under the shrewd gaze of fame itself!

It all happened in '83 when the Icicles had their biggest hit ever with Love Is A Wonderful Colour which reached slot 15 in the national charts; and then. . . nothing — well, nothing much. It was just confirmation for that section of the music press who take delight in sniffing out the latest one-hit wonders. Britain deemed The Icicle Works fit for the graveyard and ceremoniously buried them to boot!

Now it's almost 1988 and they may just happen again; had the band ever really gone under I'd say that this could be their most powerful resurrection yet. I WILL say that the Icicle Works' new 45, High Time, has all the blatant commercialism of an Evangeline with the added angst and urgency which completes the formula for a well-crafted chart giant.

Ian: "I always thought it was quite catchy but it was never written as a single." With a tour to promote and an album to follow in the spring on Beggars Banquet, the Icicles prepare to talk shop and discuss the total-pop-experience and the impending occupational hazards that are part and parcel of life as upwardly mobile young demi-gods!

Occupational Hazard No.1 — The Dreaded Promotional Party!

Ian: "We dread those!"

Chris: "The trouble is that the industry thrives on that sort of thing so we just have to put on our trendiest jacket and make the best of it. We usually end up in a corner and get drunk, then we leave early and everyone says, 'Oh, what a boring bunch they are!'"

Ian: "I once had to go to a Cult party because my record company said there would be a lot of media people there and I thought, 'Bollocks!' The last thing I want to do is stand around with half a lager talking to some bleedin' journalist about my latest album — I'd rather discuss something that interests me! Once I got stuck with this bleedin' twit from the NME who I had to be nice to. He said, 'You know, I don't like your music at all but I think it's good that I can say that and you don't hit me,' and I was thinking, 'Well, really I should hit him!'"

No.2 — Night Network!

Ian: "Once you have a hit you have to go on chat shows and do all sorts of horrible promos — it happened to us with Love Is A Wonderful Colour. I keep thinking that if High Time is a hit we'll have to go through all that again. I mean — I could never go on that bloody awful Night Network thing and pass comment like I was some sort of oracle — that's kids' stuff. You're just doing a job so why should you be held up as a voice of authority?"

Chris: "The thing is they're only interested in you until someone else comes along."

Ian: "I know that some people think we're being deliberately awkward but we're not and I know that I come over as incredibly world-weary at times — but we're still excited about being in the band and we still want to be successful."

Chris: "It's just that we've learned an awful lot about the music industry and most of it is very superficial."

Ian: "We're a band, not a performing circus act!"

No.3 — The Press (naturally!)

The Icicle Works have never catered to the press — at least not in recent years, consequently, they'll never be good copy and although that's bad, it's good for obvious reasons.

Ian: "Most bands will tell you that they're God's gift to popular music. Obviously we think we're good but we're not going to turn around and tell you we're the best band in the world because there's no such thing."

Chris: "It's just that we're really down to earth. That's the trouble."

Ian: "I agree it's an attitude that comes from living in Liverpool but we weren't always this way. We used to be really cool 'cause everyone else was! We used to say, 'don't say blah blah blah 'cause they won't like it and don't do this or that 'cause they'll say that about us,' and then we suddenly realised that it didn't matter anyway. Whatever anyone says about you doesn't make the slightest bit of difference in the long run — at the end of the day it's how many records you sell that's important and anything else just confuses the issue."

No.4 — Categorisation

Whilst we're on the subject of confusion, The Icicle Works have always defied satisfactory categorisation but Ian and Chris can't see the problem!

Ian: "I never understand why the press have so much difficulty categorising us. I think they should just see us as a er. . . a group! A group who write songs — it's as simple as that."

But is it? The Icicle Works never stand still long enough to tell! They disagree that they play Americanised music:

Ian: "It depends what you mean by 'Americanised' — I always think of Bruce Springsteen or Bon Jovi. I suppose I sing in an American accent a bit but not like say, The Waterboys — It doesn't offend me but I don't really think that we're Americanised in fact I think that some of what we do is incredibly English."

And whilst their eponymous debut LP was pure pop counterbalanced with a lyrical obscurity, The Small Price Of A Bicycle was a rougher-edged affair. Following the compilation album, Seven Singles Deep, came the third PROPER album, If You Want To Defeat Your Enemy Sing His Song, which seemed to embrace all sides of the band. Whilst reflective of past styles it was by no means retrospective and glanced in a direction that would indicate that the forthcoming LP, at present entitled Blind, would logically be a more definitive work. Thankfully not so. True to form the band have thrown the proverbial icicle in the works once again and this album is more fractious, essentially more beautiful and diverse than ever.

Ian: "I know you'd have expected a more 'they've settled down now' type of album but what's the point? If something isn't going to evolve and change what's the point in doing it?"

Still, it must be said, something is emerging — be prepared for an album which sounds more confident and, dare I say it, more ICICLE WORKS?

Chris: "Yes, well that's because we produced it ourselves this time and also we are very good at what we do. I know it sounds big-headed but we're not kids anymore, we've been together a long time now and it all gels so much easier these days."

It's always been an issue but even more evident than ever is the odd coupling of subjects within the album itself. 223, a mouthpiece for a new McNabb persona — a sleazeball with a lust that would shame Mr. Mindwarp's warbling antics into impotence is found to be juxtaposed with the aching pathos of Starry Blue-Eyed Wonder.

Ian: "Well, people do it in books and films, don't they? Why should an album have one kind of image or personality? Starry Blue-Eyed Wonder is a nice reflective song and 223 is a dirty blues song, but why shouldn't you do that?"

Indeed. And why not have optimism posted on sentinel duty opposite pessimism and where do the harrowing images of social injustice in Blind come from?!

Ian: "Well, Blind is about someone who sees things that he knows aren't right but the issue is too big for him — he isn't prepared to do anything to change them — someone a bit like me I suppose."

And what of the sentiments of unresolved love in Little Girl Lost and High Time — where are they from?

Ian: "Well, my lyrics are usually other people's lyrics! Little Girl Lost was written because I Liked The Doors song Lost Little Girl! I'm not very good at realising situations — I like them to be half-realised so that I can make them better! I do a lot of stealing indirectly!"

Wouldn't it be easier, simpler to conform once in a while?

Ian: "The minute you starting bowing down to what's expected of you, your days are numbered because your heart's not in it."

The magic word. I'm suitably confused and reassured, it's good to know that some things never change and never stay the same. . . (?)

letter from america OUR ROVING EXAMINE

Tony Fletcher develops the US picture

Like that beautiful girl you once mischanced to go out with, Princeton, New Jersey is on the surface exquisitely charming yet insufferably boring underneath. With the choice of salad dressing being the extent of nightlife variety and crime so insistent the police deem it necessary to hand out $60 fines for U-turns, it can be surprising to find the local college radio station playing the Sex Pistols and the Butthole Surfers back to back in the middle of the day.

College radio has been almost singlehandedly responsible for the growth of the American underground over the last few years — without it, REM would not currently be in the Top Ten here, The Cure and The Bunnymen would be without the foothold they cling to and such diverse types as Sonic Youth, 10,000 Maniacs and The Replacements would have nowhere to grow, develop and be seen in the enormous American marketplace.

Such is the growth of the college radio genre that several trade papers exist to report on the trends and playlists of the 1,500-odd stations, and the biggest of these, CMJ (College Music Journal), recently held its seventh annual 'Music Marathon' in New York City. Such seminars are of course curiously American and business-orientated: booths are rented not only to major labels throwing their latest young hopefuls at all and sundry but to young hopefuls throwing themselves at major labels, showcases occur at all clubs in town (any date performed to less than 2,000 people in New York is generally considered a "showcase") and stars are brought in purely to be seen (as in the case of Mike Peters, who got three sentences in for his 7,000-miles round trip but in the week of The Alarm's third album release, it was still a worthwhile trip).

But this time round there was a healthy political undercurrent to the whole shebang, with Abbie Hoffman and Billy Bragg providing keynote speeches, Nicaraguan musicians performing live and the likes of Jackson Browne, Little Stephen, Graham Nash and Nona Hendryx joining Hoffman, Bragg and Peters on a well-attended "Politics Of Dancing" panel. The assembled college and indie label reps got in on the act with frequent assaults on major labels and commercial radio, whose reps could take solace from the fact that the real biz gathering, the New Music Seminar, generally excludes such riff raff.

This politicisation should be welcomed. As Abbie Hoffman observed, "student activism is an oxymoronic term equal to 'military intelligence' and 'educational TV'" but even so, the facts are that on campus demonstrations against apartheid, American imperialism and the moral majority are on the rise, and that enough support has been drummed up for the Sandinistas for Reagan to have to seriously question an invasion.

Yet for all the rhetoric and idealism, a Metal Marathon was allowed to run parallel at a convention supposedly set up for "new and experimental" styles, while the alternative artists got bogged down in arguing whether you could do what the fk you wanted to on a major label if you were strong-willed enough (Metallica), whether or not you could do what the fk you wanted to on a major but that you should get £10,000 non-recoupable on the video anyway (Stevie Nicks) or whether anyone who really did what the fk they wanted to, gave a fk anyway (Lydia Lunch). This language reminded the assembled DJs to play the Big Black album when they got back to campus and the rest of us that there's a real world out there somewhere. . . It's just that you rarely find it in New York.

Vote Republican!

One of the most startlingly original and graphically individual labels in the States is Independent Projects. After bringing the world a selection of strange and wondrous fruit, in the shape of Camper Van Beethoven, Ten Foot Faces, For Against and more, figureheads Savage Republic greet the world with renewed vigour, newer plans and something of a plethora of new music, too. The group themselves have recently had their back catalogue, two albums — Tragic Figures and Ceremonial — re-issued on Fundamental, their mini-set, Trudge is available on Play It Again Sam and a new collection of live recordings, a double simply titled Live Trek, hits the shops this week, again on Fundamental.

- A fine set of guitar-scrubbed recordings, it tells little of the next move from Independent Projects, but when Savage Republic toured Europe recently, Bruce Licher and Phil Drucker revealed that IP is soon to transmutate into Nate Starkman And Son (named after the building in which the IP label and Licher's trusty printing press are housed). • So what's Nate going to be up to?
- "Well, we plan to release quite a bit of material," admits Bruce, "and Fundamental Music in the States have given us carte blanche to do whatever we want, so we'll be plundering the underground scene to unearth new acts."
- "First up," continues Phil, "there'll be the third LP from LA's Party Boys, and that's called Daddyland, then that'll be followed by the debut LP from White Glove Test from San Marcos, which I produced, and a double LP from Drowning Pool which consists mostly of recordings from cassette only releases." • With warnings of further releases in the new year and claims of "no onions in the bunch", the duo were soon off on another trek. Ah, these must be the real explorers of life's strange recesses. Dave Henderson

INTERNATIONAL REPORTERS TRENDS IN TROPICAL CLIMES

Trash Groove Girls sport the latest post-industrial schlock look

Go-Go Valkyries

The Trash Groove Girls are on the Düsseldorf-based What's So Funny About... label. They are pop art, teenbeat, sugar pink go-go Valkyries — a product of their time! Playing Hohner and beatbox while Düsseldorf burns, they are currently hip-stepping (rather than goose hopping) through gigs at sex clubs in der fatherland with Eine Kopulationsshow as support, and at the New Music Seminar in NY they exploded onto the European and East Coast scenes "with loads of press/TV etc and bags of notoriety and controversy and scandal... it's been great fun". John Lewis

ITALY

They're really rockin' in Roma

■ In previous issues of UG I introduced some Italian psyche combos, but this does not mean that we do not have our share of reelin'-and-a-rockin' bands down here. Some of them are even good.

■ To start with, you can go for Shock Treatment, which is the title of the debut album from the Party Kidz (above), an energetic five-piece from Turin who play basic beat-rock with the rapture of angry teenagers. Expect clashing guitars and swinging Vox organ, with shouts alternately in Milton's and Dante's idioms. The name of the label tells it all: Super Beat Mess (distribution Toast — Via Duchessa Jolanda 13A, 10138 Torino, Italy).

■ Rebels Without A Cause is another group with a straightforward "classic" rock attitude. Just hear Rock Me Baby, the first track on their mini-LP Naked Lunch, and you will understand that this time the tribute to Uncle Bill

Burroughs has nothing to do with cut-ups and weird electronics. These James Dean devotees offer you five original cuts of juvenile urban rock-blues, sharp and simple. From the label of Italian psycho-renaissance: Electric Eye C.P.144, 27100 Pavia, Italy.

■ What happens when an American student with a Greek surname, George Koulermos, settles down in Bologna, central Italy, and still wants to play his guitar? He might put together a group of natives and call them Wild Strawberries, get a nice lady to play sax and cast tarot cards, then record a whole album and title it Resistenza: eleven ditties depicting the joys and horrors of America from the detached eye of the exile. The sound shifts from rock-ballads à la Tom Robinson to exotic influences of salsa, reggae, funk, fusion and R'n'B. Not a band you can easily stick a tag to, pleasantly unpretentious though. On SubRecords (distr. MaSo, Via Roma 20, 52027 S. Giovanni V.no, Italy).

■ And now a true curiosity for Zappophiles. Sandro Oliva (And The Blue Pampurios) in fact sound like a perfect clone of Hairy Frank. Of course, the lyrics are in Italian so you will miss all the dirty jokes. But to be fair to not-so-young-anymore Oliva, I must add that the music is very well played, with all the doo-wops and flashing guitar riffs in the right place. The man seems decisively capable of escaping the role of Zappa-spoof and obtaining personal praises in his own right. The album has an ultra-kitsch cover and is called Aria Malsana (Unhealthy Air) on Spittle Records (distr. Toast, as above).

■ Last but not lost comes the free-jazz-rock-punk mixture of the Tuscan ensemble Cudù. Just in case you're wondering, Cudù is the name of a horned antelope. Their mini-LP Neck on Urgent Label (distr. MaSo) still had the old five members line-up, and sound like Captain Beefheart meets the Contortions in four tracks sprinkled with sax and guitar improvisations. Cudù, now reduced to a trio, are all veteran and crafty musicians, led by Paolo Lotti, who had his first free-form solo LP out in 1978. Cudù now play a more condensed version of their self-concocted "acid jazz" style, and aren't beneath doing a Velvet cover now and then. On the way to the presses now are a limited edition sculpture-cassette (!) and the first full-size album. Vittore Baroni

The Blend. Giving up the bass he played with the Violent Femmes for guitar, conch shell, banjo, jaw harp and elephant tusk, Brian Ritchie achieves "The Blend" on his solo album for SST. Combining influences as diverse as Sun Ra, Son House and Sonny Bono, he has concocted the perfect blend for the global village. From the untraditionally traditional version of John The Revelator to the hard funk of Alphabet, these eleven songs are THE blend for the eighties.

MEAT PUPPETS

Huevos. Hot on the heels of their amazing Mirage album, the Meat Puppets have done it again with a brand spanking new album on SST. Closer in sound to their legendary live shows, this record has balls. Starting off with the kick in the head double blast of Paradise and Look At The Rain and ending with the brain-crushing I Can't Be Counted On, this record reaffirms the Meat Puppets' status as one of the coolest bands on the face of the planet.

ANGST

Mystery Spot. Like never before, the songs of Angst are suffused with a shimmering glow. On Mystery Spot, the remarkable interplay between brothers Joe and Jon is fully realized with their best-sounding record ever. With a bow to country and folk, Angst take off on a hell bent for leather electric train ride on Outside My Window, Colors Of The Day, Mind Average and nine more songs.

THE LEAVING TRAINS Always August

F*. The second album from the Leaving Trains on SST finds them claiming the throne of true rock! From the "Exile On Main Street" punch of the guitars to the personal words of Falling James Moreland, this record is the one to play for people who ask "whatever happened to great rock and roll?" Hear for yourself what F is all about.

Largeness With (W)holes. A cryptic title gives you the listeners the cipher with which to break the mysterious code that is Always August. Backwards, forwards and inside out, the lifecodes that Always August reveal on this album are the keys to a healthy psychic glow. From the stone groove of About Time to the triple-deadbolt lock of Rahsaan Rollin' Cat, the new album from Always August paints a startlingly whole picture of your life.

DINOSAUR JR.: Dinosaur JR. Hot on the heels of their amazing SST debut LP, Dinosaur Jr. releases an EP of mega-sonic proportions. Featuring a mind-blowing rendition of the Peter Frampton classic "Show Me The Way", along with J. Lou and Murph's own classics Little Fury Things and In A Jar.

WHAT A YEAR! WHAT A YEAR!

AS you probably know, the majority of deaf musos claim that there's been nothing good in the music scene all year. . . apart from Dylan coming over, oh yeah, and Clapton on The South Bank Show. But what the hell, we know what's going down and Underground will continue to tell you all about it through '88

Selected recollections from '87 can be found on page 20, along with our writers top five singles and albums (overall Underground charts are printed below), and on page 24 our brave pundits predict what will happen in '88. • For me, '87 was another year of discovery and a widening of scope in music. The success of third world music, The Bhundu Boys, the folk revival and Michelle Shocked's Texas Campfire LP, the coming of age of bands as diverse as RS Mearns, The Wedding Present, The Bomb Party and The Very Things all made life worth living. While new acts continued to amaze and names like Frazier Chorus, Zarjaz, 1, Ludicrous, Traddodlad Ofnus, The Heart Throbs, CUD, The Raw Herbs, The Corndollies, The Sugar Cubes, The Waltonones, Children In Adult Jails, Saqqara Dogs and Slab! all made a mockery of the mainstream's tunnelvision. From America, Dinosaur, The Meat Puppets, Fluid Waffle, Three Colours, For Against, Negativland, Big Dipper and Tiny Lights all impressed. . . and still the hits keep on coming. • Next year promises to be even better with new albums from The Woodentops, Icicle Works, New Order, The Mighty Lemon Drops and The Soup Dragons all set for February, but that's just the acceptable tip of the iceberg. The best thing about it all is that nobody really knows what's around the corner. . . but if you keep plugged into Underground you'll have more idea than most. Thanks for your support, Dave Henderson

QUESTIONS, QUESTIONS, questions. . . Paul from Zinger is trying to trace a combo called The Murrur Troop who submitted a tape to Hybrid many moons ago, unfortunately he lost their address but would like to "do something with them" now. Their tape was recorded at the Flying Pig 8-Track, apart from that he knows nothing. If you're out there, contact him at (01) 371 0326.

The SAF publishing house — who brought the world a convoluted Cabaret Voltaire book some aeons ago — have a new product imminent, it's a 256 page look at less than normal artistes entitled Tape Delay by Chris Neal. Contributors include Nick Cave, Genesis P Orridge, New Order, Laibach, Lydia Lunch, Tibet, Test Dept and more more more. It'll be £8.95, and can I have one for Christmas, mam?

What the world needs now is Adverse Drivel, a 'zine for 10p plus a sae from 1 Seagull Close, Kempshott, Basingstoke, Hants, RG22 6QR. Inside there's lots of scribbling, things about individualism, a guide to the planets in Blakes 7, comment, poetry and reviews.

The magazine trade must be the one to be in at the moment. There's a glut of entertainment, and some shaky also-rans out there, not least of all being the rather long drawn out prose of Sniffin' Rock. On the bright side, the new ish has a fine flexi featuring Crash, The Sting-Rays and Fixed Up. Better still, but just on the horizon at the moment is a double issue of Flipside and a new Chemical Imbalance, which features a four track hard vinyl disc (with tracks from Firehose, Leaving Trains, Slovenly and Opal) in a pic bag. All three are through Shigaku.

Mutations is quite a bracing read for all the synthy-types. They rave over Mute, list the best labels, B sides and stuff, then feature Black, I Start Counting, Erasure, OMD and more. Bracing, indeed, and there'll be a new issue any minute from Jim Baboon, 41 High View Road, S Woodford, London E18 2HL.

Away from the paper and ink, let's look at some scandal. . . The Wonder Stuff getting arrested under suspicion of stealing a mortuary nameplate (Gak). And, what about The Shamen splitting up for a night while in Italy? Seems they were so stoned they couldn't find their own hotel rooms and one of them thought he was a member of The Mekons. Ugh! What?

Frank Sidebottom offspring Little Frank and his cohorts Little Denise, Amoeba Frank and Little Buzz Aldrin, who go under the name of The Beastie Puppets have had an injunction slapped on them by Def Jam. It seems their version of No Sleep Till Brooklands was deemed dodgy. So the newly named Yo! Discs (daughter of Go! Discs) can't release it. And to think, the year started with Charts compiled from top five selections from the Underground scribblers, as featured in our record round up of the year on page 20.

Michael Jackson stopping The Beastie Bobble Hats using The Beastie Beatles' I'm Down. Ah!

The Volunteers, who were drubbed by John Peel in a recent Tip Sheet, dropped us a line with their telephone number (0744 892110) so that anyone who wants to hear the inadequacies, or otherwise, of their singer for themselves can give them a call. Maybe he's going to sing down the telephone. Who knows?

I suppose it's been a sad month really. You know, we haven't heard from Wreckless Eric! The Warhols from Sheffield have stopped writing to us! But then again, there is a letter from Mousefolk. Bristol's best "punk" band sent us a really doomy photograph and promised they'd improved. Bearing this out was their flexi (which is 30p plus a s&e from 54 Treefield Rd, Clevedon, Avon, BS21 6JB). Wow, what a bargain!

Every Friday from now on, you can catch up on Sudden Sway's '76 Kids Forever soap by telephoning (01) 223 8991, where the whole thing will be updated and a world of Angie and Den excitement can be yours.

For a more detailed and intriguing train of thought, you could catch Mike Keane's The Genetic Journey — a collection of The Royal Family And The Poor person's writings and art since whenever. Very enlightening and quite challenging, it's in a limited edition of 300 and details can be had from Mike at GAIA, 10B Cathedral Mansions, Husskisson Street, Toxteth, Liverpool 8.

Mike is currently working on a compilation called Kaos Magick which should materialise around March with an LP featuring Coll, Chris And Cosey, Sleep Chamber, Bourbonese Qualk and others, and a booklet with cover designed by former Pistols' artman Jamie Reid. So keep watching the skies.

Issue five of Skate Muties Of The Fifth Dimension is a real hoot as usual. It takes a mere month to read and has more humour than your average copy of Pravda. An excellent read that can be had through Revolver and the Cartel.

The second coming of Viz is upon us. Their annual (yes, it's much better than The Beano), The Big Hard Number Two is carefully lining up in the "Toilet Humour" section of your fave bookstores at this very mo. Recommended for maximum guffaws.

There's been a shake up with the ranks of the increasingly popular Flatmates, with Joel replacing the departing Rocker on the drum stool. It seems that Rocker has decided to concentrate on his day job as a dentist, while the group reap the rewards of their successful new groover You're Gonna Cry on Subway. Next up for the Flaties will be a new single from the group and that'll be overseen by Wedding Present producer Chris Allison.

after the fact

Robert K Cohen's
Big Comment

I stepped in a copy of The Sun the other week, and Gary Bushell slithered out of the T.V. page, moaning about 'Cagney and Lacey'. His main objection to this undeniably crap show was that Lacey and "her drip of a husband" disapproved of their son's fixation with militana and war films.

"Presumably if he'd been wearing make-up and listening to The Communards they wouldn't have batted an eyelid".

No, I don't suppose they would, Gary, but don't worry your pretty little head about it: if he had, it never would've got on American T.V. The Sun, of course, is all about sexual stereotyping, so they should take note of Timbuk 3's 'All I Want For Christmas', released in aid of the Stop War Toys campaign. Danny Baker, in NME, called them "sour brooders and nosey interfering crusaders", but I think he was joking. In fact, I'm not sure Danny Baker exists: I mean, he made Pet Shop Boys 'Single of the Week', say no more. Would I, then, be right in thinking he's the alter-ego of the NME staff, sending up the management's 'depoliticisation' policies, e.g. don't swear and possibly even don't slag off singles for fear of offending someone. It's odd that while NME is being slowly throttled by its masters, Melody Maker — also owned by Holborn Publishing — continues unscathed with its boring, spiteful preoccupations. Maybe it's because they spend more time knocking the readers than artistes. Every week, the letters page is half-full with impotent complaints about 'unfair' reviews — for instance, the recent accusation that an All About Eve gig had been assessed by someone who had no knowledge, let alone liking, of the band. Simon Reynolds replied that most MM staffers had "dismissed them at first whiff as appallingly winsome Fotherington-Thomas waffle".

In that case, I wonder who commissioned the full-colour cover treatment accorded A.A.E. only a couple of weeks previously? Unfortunately, I can't think of any witty suggestions. Nor, I'm sure, could Melody Maker, in the circumstances: the brief spark of humour that hit the T.T.T. pages recently has faded and died. ● The inspired 'Ten Ron Wood Masterpieces' (very bad pictures of Bob Dylan, Shane MacGowan, John 'n' Yoko, etc.) has given way to Top Ten Punctuations ('Van Der Paragraaf Generator'), Ten Animal Noises ('Michael Quackson'), and Ten Skin Afflictions ('Pimpily Red'). Yes, ha ha. Well worth 50p. Which is all you'll need (plus £17) to see 'Quacko' at Wembley in July. Mikey, in announcing his schedule, took the opportunity to lambast record pirates, whose occupation "hurts us all... Criminals should not profit from our love of recorded music". Why not? They already do, even without the pirates. By the way, Michael, I notice your tour is being sponsored by Pepsi: it must be awful not to be able to afford to finance your own gigs. ● The Pogues, alternatively, have no need for sponsorship — or if they do, they're too proud to admit it as they take off on a quick trip round America with Joe Strummer (replacing the laid-up Philip Chevron). Or have they already been to America? This is, after all, the January issue, but it's on the streets in mid-December, and written at least a fortnight beforehand. Why, I don't even know who'll be No.1 for Christmas. At the moment, The Proclaimers could have a chance with their watered-down masterpiece, 'Letter From America', though in truth Rick Astley is more likely to make it: he's already a No.1. ideally, it'll be The Pogues and Kirsty MacColl's 'Fairytale of New York'. But then, Pogues might

Joe Strummer and Shane Pogue compare dentures

Perhaps to tell of the whirlwind of feelings that once took me by surprise. Maybe to unbridle the horses and saunter home through silent moonlit lanes. Definitely to tell off Sally and the look in her dark brown eyes that thundery Thursday.

UNDERGROUND

SNAPPING AT THE HEELS OF THE INDUSTRY!

Fierce Records is a label with a difference. . . they have a couple of Jesus And Mary Chain records and a couple of Charles Manson releases. Confused? Dave Henderson listens in. . .

Charlie M sez: "Have a better one!"

and the latest releases from Sky Saxon and Angus McLise. The Fierce reputation and family has grown. The Fierce House band, Shame — featuring Kid Broken bits Charles has recorded extensively and a new single (just 100 copies) should be with the world soon.

This can't be the route to massive expense accounts, record company-style success and what have you, but Steve doesn't seem to mind. More importantly, Fierce is the spanner in the works that the current music scene is lacking. More power to Fierce. . . but don't tell anyone I said that.

Already the locks have had to be changed twice at Fierce HQ, but the subversion continues. Plans for the new year include a whole host of new singles. . .

- "Yeah, Sonic Youth"
- But aren't they as first First?
- "Manson"
- And
- "Manson" — Fierce Family."
- No doubt modelled on Charlie's collection of young girls. . .
- "Yeah, it's such hard work. And then there's The Kray Cherubs."
- What? Savage Pencil's band?
- "Yeah, and the Pooh Sisters. They're the best indie anorak band of all time, and their single's called I Know Someone Who Knows Someone Who Knows Alan McGee Quite Well. Then there's JAMC, Aleister Crowley and The Beastie Boys."
- Er, well I can see the solicitors rolling up their sleeves already.
- "But they don't know how to get at Fierce. They don't know where we are. . . and neither do you."
- But what will you do if they do get to you? What could you do as your swansong?
- "Well, there's the compilation, Now That's What I Call A Bootleg to come yet."
- Right! See you in court.

• FRIGHT 001 THE LOVE AND TERROR CULT Charles Manson (LP) £15

• A real sweet one, allegedly an original release of Charles Manson's LP which he recorded before he was sent down for the Sharon Tate murders. It features the legendary Cease To Exist which the Beach Boys "stole off" according to Charlie. What's worse, he's really pissed off about that and he'll be bringing Foster Steiner down on the Wilson boys if he ever makes parole. This record is supposed to have sold 200,000 copies and the authorities, for some reason, won't give Charlie a platinum disc. £15000

• FRIGHT 003 REAL TEARS Shame (45) £15

• "Shame are an actual group who featured Kid Chaos in his pre-Zodiac Mindwarp days — you know before he started splintering bits off his body skateboarding."

• FRIGHT 004 RIOT The Jesus And Mary Chain (45) £40

• The legendary MC arty fact with the sound of a group leaving the stage early and having the PA trashed by angry kids. The package, limited to just 100 copies, as are all the other 45s, also contained a torn piece of fabric purporting to be from Bobby Gillespie's shirt, a badge, some USB chocolate which looks suspiciously like a Milky Bar, a postcard, a syringe and various other bits.

• FRIGHT 005 SICK CITY Charles Manson (45) £15

• A single culled from the album which amazingly didn't make it to Our Tune on the Simon Bates' programme.

• FRIGHT 008 SLEEP TERMINATOR Photographed By Lightning (45) £10

• Another single by an actual band. PBL are acclaimed as a progressive psychedelic band from the Swansea area.

• FRIGHT 009 INTERVIEW Sky Saxon (45) £15

• A rambling, bumbling overdubbed chatathon with Sky Saxon that's been done over the telephone. A lot of thinking, thoughts on life, and what have you follow, while the happy punter can sit and fondle a piece of Sky's shirt, a bag of 'Sky' cubes, a Dog-God badge and a Sky Mail Order list. The list itself has some real beauts, including Sky lovebeads for £20 and a lock of Sky's hair for a mere one million dollars. Hmmm, a snip!

• FRIGHT 010 TRANCE Angus McLise (45) £25

• Angus McLise was the original Velvet Underground drummer and this 45 is his only commercially available recording. In time-honoured Fierce style the record is one-sided and comes with sundries including an Angus chocolate bar (which looked distinctly like a Coffee-flavoured Club biscuit), a pack of scented ciggie papers, an incense cone, a "Far Out" badge and an Angus mail order list. The list included such things as a set of three Krsna Mantra albums for £20 and the meaning of life (for a mere £3.75).

• So far, there's just one other release to add to this list and that's the limited edition (10 copies only) LP Searching For The Mary Chain album which has been offered for around £90. The catalogue number is, rather sweetly we thought, ALAN 1

- "Hello"
- Hello.
- "Hello, is that Underground?"
- Yes.
- "This is Steve from Fierce. . . you know the Jesus And Mary Chain Riot record."
- Oh, yeah, how's it going?
- "Alright. I thought it was just Underground wrote a bit about us. I mean, we're really alternative, we've got lots of records out, they change hands for a fortune and we've got lots more coming."
- Right. But aren't they outsiders, like you're illegal?
- "Not really."
- But you've done a Mary Chain single, haven't Alan McGee tried to sue you?
- "Well, he tried, but my partner's lawyer is the same as Madonna's and I think that scared McGee off."
- Steve's partner in Fierce is Kid Chaos, ex-Zodiac Mindwarp guitaro, and currently infiltrating The Cult. A man who's broken seven assorted bones in three different skateboarding accidents. Could it be the power of Alan McGee getting revenge?
- "Nah."
- Anyhow, in its brief history, since that debut Manson album, the Mary Chain Riot single

ACHWGHA NEY WODEI

Triptyque

NIR NIR872 RR C ●●¼ Achwgha Ney Wodei present a mystery fit to give fellow countryman Monsieur Pierrot a headache. Here is an art box (each painted as part of a huge canvas), inside are three records and no information, on the back there's artchat. In the grooves (at 33 there's sprawling untogetherness, at 45 there's quirky noiseplay), there are sounds and squeaks... a few people resort to playing "instruments". But what's going on? They're still hard at it on side six (if a little more rhythm-orientated, but what do you do next? And, is that a timebomb ticking?)

Triptyque is a great concept, an enthralling listen and a bugger that asks more than it tells. Now, where is Miss Marple's number? Dave Henderson

THE ADAMS FAMILY

Sometimes I Wonder

Spiv Records Spiv 3 PR C ●½ An interesting debut from this self-confessed 'six-piece power/pop/rock band'. Well, what it lacks in power it certainly makes up for with ample doses of pop and rock! While tracks such as Of You and Memories demonstrate a serene aspect in the band, Sometimes I Wonder and Back Street City Life are catchy ventures into the backwaters of the town they call Gothsville!

It's a look we've all seen before and the sound, at times, is no less familiar, but for all that The Adams Family use it well. Vocalist Jaki Florek insists that she's not a singer at all — more a performer. Despite the inevitable Slouxsie-isms, if her live act is something as good as her 'coming out' vinyl, she should be received with Munstrous applause!! Alex Kadis

THE ADICTS

Fifth Overture

Fall Out FALL LP 042 ● A meagre, motionless Munchkin noise from punk's grandchildren. The Adicts have grown up and realised that they'll have to sell out to the pop squidge to make the big bucks; unfortunately this banal 12 track collection is highly unlikely to get them any cash action — more likely to provide a few raised eyebrows from the writers of Feeling Groovy. Lads, stick to what you're good at, or jack it in! Johnny Eager

AGNOSTIC FRONT

Liberty & Justice For...

Rough Justice JUST 8 PR ●●¾ Thrash, thrash, energy, riffing, noise and the vocalist is looking to score a hernia judging by the sound he's making. Yes folks, it's hardcore city and another angry bunch of chord-infested songs is flung violently to the floor like a cancer-ridden goblet of sour phlegm. Splat! Looking around it's hard to distinguish this one from the rest already curdling on the pavement.

But... If it's alive and induces those adrenal glands to secrete the sacred juices then all is not lost. Anthem, Hypocrisy and Crucified are the cream of the eleven tracks, the rest being good-ish but a tiny bit familiar. Daz Igy Meth

GG ALLIN & THE HOLY MEN

You Give Love A Bad Name

Homestead HMS069 C SH Why Homestead would want an artist on their label who languishes in a pit of his own excreta is a mystery, but here it is...

Trashrock and punky distorted guitars back Allin's vocals which sound as though emerging from a slashed throat, or maybe that's wishful thinking. The sub-moronic rantings deal with sex, violence and violent sex; things come to a head on the typically pathetic I'm A Rapist — "You ain't shit to me but just a piece of meat."

Allin needs castration not record sales; the best thing about this album is written on the cover; 'Warning: this record sucks' — how apt. Daz Igy Meth

ANNIE ANXIETY BANDEZ

Jackamo

One Little Indian tlp 4 C ●● The sound of a dehydrated needle, the jazzy Parisienne sleaze and sampled-sludge of techno development, the grind of the '80s and Annie Anxiety's crackling larynx make Jackamo a little something of special proportions. Annie gets anxious and croons with soulful brashness over some of the most enlivening arrangements and creative treatments this side of debagged dub and beatnik swaying. Jackamo is a huge, spacious album that lulls you into its intense epicentre with a smooth and wholesome action. Moving and magnificent. Dave Henderson

A POPULAR HISTORY OF SIGNS

Taste

Jungle Freud 17 RM C ●½ A Pop His O'Signs were always a little less than successful in the achieving department, usually due to lack of recording funds, poor finishing and the difficulty in getting their politico-pop to sound tactile enough in a fast-widening pop marketplace. In retrospect this LP shudders rather than flows with some fine tracks playing off against some fine sentiments. In the end mix, no-one really wins, but at least the Signs kept their credibility intact. Dave Henderson

THE ASTORIANS

Guffahw

Peg In Hole PDI 9008 (167 12th St, Brooklyn, NY 11215, USA) ●● The Astorians come shrouded in a cartoon cover, throwing seven finely-formed pop tunes to the wind. American and unabashed they wander through Beatles-esque guitarplay, dabble with the SST uptempo branding iron and please the ears with their astute lyrics and charming delivery. Not the future of rock 'n' roll, but a chiming noise fit to blast from any open-top chic-mobile. TC Wall

- MEGA A godhead uprising
- HOTSY Tasteful and tenacious
- TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish
- DRAB No bullets, means no hope

AUTOMATIC DLAMINI

D Is For Drum

Idea IDEALP 001 PR ●●½ The first album from Idea displays the width and songwriting potential of Automatic Dlamini to its full extent. With a couple of singles already in the bag, this selection develops their rhythmic interests, colours the events with some affectionate harmony lines and reaches classic status with some exceptionally good songs. Automatic Dlamini sound as if they're already veterans in the professional market, just slotting in another classic album to enhance everyone's record collection. Nick Brody

MARTYN BATES

The Return Of The Quiet

Cherry Red BRED 81 PR ●¾ It takes time to get into former Eyeless In Giza front person Martyn Bates' strange nasal drone, but if you're willing to wait then this first solo LP should please. Return Of The Quiet mostly sounds like a grand singer/songwriter LP, liberally splashed with soulful aftershave, sounding sleek and desirable like an ad for Cadbury's Ripple. The problems come when the synths sound like synths, making the simplistic arrangements sound hollow. For the most part, Bates wins through, but it is going to be love or hate in the vocals department. Johnny Eager

JELLO BIAFRA

No More Cocoons

Alternative Tentacles VIRUS 59 PR ●●¾ Your legs will turn to Jello after you've sat back and taken in this double-album's-worth of spoken word Biafra. This could have been a mega-yawn but the key here is humour and, even though some of the characters mentioned might mean little to us Brits, the assassination is fascinating. Censorship is the main fare, but there's also room for Vietnam, the Space Shuttle, Reagan and more. This is something you shouldn't miss, a perspective that's worth focusing on. Dave Henderson

BIG DIPPER

Heavens

Homestead HMS086 C SH ●●¼ Big Dipper have blossomed into a fine pop concoction following the success of their mini-set Boo Boo. Heavens is a more accessible version of the Dinosaur-brand of rock 'n' roll, with plenty of open spaces and bags of healthy air. Big Dipper face the world with an authority akin to Talking Heads and an armoury of tunes that're fit for kings. Don't miss this classic album. Nick Brody

BLACK TAPE FOR A BLUE GIRL

Mesmerised By Sirens

Projekt (8951 sw 53rd Street, Cooper City, Florida 33328-5135, USA)

●●● Once, when I was young, I got a really bad cold, well flu actually, and after partaking in multi-vits, Sanatogen tonic wine and liberal doses of Night Nurse, I drifted into a stupor while John Peel was playing some ambient partnership between Eno and Cluster. Momentarily waking, dreaming of falling down huge chasms and then floating over my school, there was a kind of affectionate safety in the sounds. The dream seemed to last forever and became indefinable from reality. Similarly, this album induces the same set of emotions, and I'm sure I stayed awake throughout. BTFABG play seedy sexual fantasies and background music for films that get explicit on Channel 4, it floats... and clears the mind. Dave 'I wear my loons with pride' Henderson

THE BODEANS

Outside Looking In

Slash SLAP 22 ●● Not to be confused with the dreadful Bodines, this three piece hail from Waukesha, Wisconsin, and present a clean, effective rock 'n' roll that's sort of REM meets Steely Dan. Which means to say there's lots of voices, some insistent songs, and a clean, uncluttered guitar.

Occasionally, it's true, the spectre of American AOR rears its ugly head which could alienate those who get hooked by the purer raunch.

If there's finally going to be an injection of a more harmonic rock into the charts, the BoDeans are the sort of band to cross over and provide it. Let's just hope they don't wear towelling headbands. Carole Linfield

CAMPER VAN BEETHOVEN

Vampire Can Mating Oven

Rough Trade RTM 205 LP RM C ●● The Van's produce their last seven tracker for RT before departing to that great Virgin warehouse in the sky. More country folk and strange-blankets-for-jumpers-music, with a reel and a roll thrown over their shoulders for good measure. Musically it's as insane and off-the-wall as ever, but you never can tell, just what Camper VB are up to, as they wend their way through life. The sleeve notes' forced humour can't raise a grumble, but I bet you'll be whistling along to the classic opening cut, Good Guys And Bad Guys, before the end of the track. It's just that kind of album, from that kind of band. Johnny Eager

THE CONNELLS

Boylan Heights

TVT Records 2540 (59 West 19th Street, Suite 5B, New York, NY 10011, USA) ●● $\frac{1}{3}$ The Connells follow last year's Demon album with a US domestic release which further develops their pop bent. Still rolling beneath a sea of strummed guitar, Boylan Heights resounds to more powerful melody lines, more distinct arrangements and the kind of coy commercial awareness that could soon introduce them to a much wider audience. There's huge potential here, and it's only just begun to be realised. Dave Henderson

THE CREEPERS

Rock 'n' Roll Liqueur Flavour

Red Rhino REDLP 82 RR C ●● $\frac{1}{2}$ The Creepers continue their trad rock slam dance, with the inevitable touch of northern humour ending up with an enjoyable — but less challenging — album. On their last set, Miserable Sinners, it seemed that they were destined to create a much bigger sound, a more powerful workhorse on which to launch their ideas, but here we have 12 tracks that somehow lack the continuity and delivery that you might expect. Now things are more subtle, more choreographed and their jokey laugh-in style doesn't really suit. Johnny Eager

THE DAMNED

Mindless, Directionless Energy

ID NOSE 18 P ●● Vintage Damned from '81, caught live at the Lyceum when Rat spat, the Cap'n played guitar and Smash It Up was more than just a rule to live by. Well, you know the score... this is fast and frantic, with Dave Vanian gobbling the classics from Fall to I Feel Alright and Love Song, all rounded off with Paul Gray's pumping bass and an irreverent cover of Ballroom Blitz for good measure. Ah! They don't make them like that anymore. Nick Brody

ANNA DOMINO

This Time

Les Disques Du Crepuscule TWI 777 P ●● $\frac{1}{2}$ As time goes by, you'll find Anna Domino still sitting in the shade of pop's glaring crassness, when she should be one of the firmament's brightest stars. This This Time is aptly named because if we don't notice Anna this time around, she might as well think about going out with a Rolling Stone bassist or investing in some upper silicone inserts. Her third album finds Anna even more accessible, spinning on cool, sophisticated, fragile surfaces, swimming from a gloriously free electro-pop to a precise but luxurious blend of soul, funk and torchlit balladry. Tugging melodies glide by as though on a cushion of hot air. If you think Anna is playing at pop styles and ice wouldn't melt in her mouth, stick with the record because by the third play, the textures and tones are such that you could perceive Anna as a female equivalent to a David Sylvian — cool, but elegant dreampop with a questing heart. This time then! Martin Aston

THE DROOGS

Kingdom Day

Music Maniac MM011 RT C ●● $\frac{1}{4}$ Somewhere on a strange closed-down train link between hard rock, The Cramps and psyche-pop (you can see why it's closed down), the stirring noise of The Droogs is beginning to disturb passers by. Kingdom Day has the unnerving energy of a lost soul searching for its final resting place, brought to life by stinging guitar forays and interjected with abominable tirades. For all that, the sound is tempered in a way previously unheard, and the end result is a sound pattern fit to pop (well, just about). TC Wall

Live At The Bottom Line, New York

ROIR A-152 RR C ●● $\frac{1}{2}$ Exceptional quality on this live tape, as Vinnie Reilly flexes his fingers yet again and creates an enthralling ambience on an eleven track set. The Durutti Column always seemed to be a touch too tight to last — their musical prowess almost strangling their ability to progress — but through a string of intriguing releases the grass hasn't grown under their feet and even live, as this tape displays, the songs are powerful enough to succeed. Nick Brody

THE ELECTRIC LOVE MUFFIN

Playdoh Meathook

Buy Our Records BOR 12-012 RIS ●● A ten track debut, from Philadelphia's "best undiscovered band", which suggests that they'll soon be on more than a few lips in the nearness of time, despite their ridiculous name. The Electrics play Husker Du-paced gut-rock with bravado and fast-thrash wrist action, all they need now are a couple of beefier pop sounds — they're almost there already — and they could break into the big league and give up the Philly bedsit.

Playdoh Meathook is instantly likeable and signals to high level notoriety. Buy it and see. TC Wall

ETON CROP

And The Underwater Music Goes On

Ediesta CALC LP 33 RR C ●● Headfed-pop from Holland's Eton Crop who could, within the confines of a single album's worth of material, be compared to the likes of anyone from the B52's to the Smiths, from PIL to Talking Heads. We're talking off-the-wall and strange when the going is good, as admirably demonstrated by at least half this record. Daz Igyemeth

FAITH NO MORE

Introduce Yourself

Slash/London SLAP 21 ●● Faith No More's second LP (their first was on Mordam in the US) turns up on Slash with the kind of power and finishing that you'd expect from a metal combo. Better still, Faith No More have the old rock adages in their back pockets, leaving their playing hands free to explode into a taunting tirade of guitar noise that fits snugly around their lyrical strangeness. Faith No More have a touch of nastiness in their make-up like a blob of chewing gum stuck under a table, but they're consistent in the performance, leaving you groping for more. Dave Henderson

FORTUNATE SONS

Karrezza

Bam Caruso KIRI 093 NM C ●● A competent and heart-warming album that falls somewhere in an American heritage between Springsteen and Creedence. The Fortunate Sons are fortunate indeed in that they have some fine songs to their name, added to their obvious ability to deliver these songs incredibly well. A dingy slice of filmic US, from dusty backroads to blitzed-out bar rooms. Recommended. Johnny Eager

FRACTURED

No Peace For The Wicked

ID Records NOSE 17 RR C ●● $\frac{3}{4}$ Smiling rather than screaming rock-abilly for all the Klub-goers in the audience; catchy toons played at a fair pace and if that's all you want then this'll suit you fine and dandy; what this means is that although feet tap and fingers snap, it's a sure bet that you've heard it all before. Sure enough, by track seven it's very thin and looking down in the gob... but wait! What's this? A cover of Big John (live rendition) saves the trapped miners and the record from a horrible fate. Not a brilliant disc but, hey man, who cares about that? If you have to do the Chicken then this is as good as... Daz Igyemeth

FUEL

The Back Of This Beyond

Nightshift NISHI 203 FF C ●● $\frac{1}{2}$ Forfar muso, Hamish Mackintosh has put together something of a fabby album in The Back Of This Beyond. Singing and playing all the instruments might lead to parallels with that man who wore paper clothes, Todd Rundgren... and in hindsight you wouldn't be far wrong in your assumption, because this sumptuous platter has something of the depth of a Rundgren recording. Obviously steeped in psychedelia, dragged through a commercial treadmill and plucked from obscurity, Fuel (or Mackintosh) is an emotionally consuming listen. Nick Brody

GAME THEORY

Lolita Nation

Enigma 3280-1 P ●● This Game Theory album looks totally confusing, starts in a radio-fried haze and eventually breaks into a collection of finely-

New Releases now confirmed from Red Flame and Ink Records for October, November and December 1987.

On the Red Flame label, the first LP 'Glances Askances' by new Scottish signing Ruby Blue, is now on release. A wonderful blend of melodies and styles. A sheer delight and a must for the autumn nights. The new 12" single by top German band Phillip Boa and The Voodoo Club 'Kill you Ideals', has the voodoo percussion in full flight matched by some mean guitar from Herr Boa. Two tracks on the B-side include a great cover of Arthur Brown's 'Fire'.

On the Ink label, the three heavyweight LP releases are now finished and ready for release. Charles Hayward's first solo LP 'Survive The Gesture' is an inspired and deeply original record. Powerfull songs and lyrics speaking volumes about our individual and collective state. The first LP by SLAB!, 'Descension', features some of the heaviest music made this decade. Funk is turned on its head, hip hop on its end and fused together by some stunning noise. The fourth LP by C Cat Trance, 'Play Masenko Combo' is their best yet. Now up to full strength as a six piece band, the new line up has produced a sizzling fusion of Afro-Arabic rhythms welded together by pumping funk patterns.

The Ink Tour in Europe featuring C Cat Trance and SLAB! begins in Holland on January 21st and finishes in Germany on February 4th. Exact dates and venues will be announced shortly.

The new mini LP by Australian band Tactics, has been postponed until January 1988. The title will be 'Holden Interview' and release is projected for the last week of January.

constructed melodic building blocks. Game Theory have a distinctive lead vocal style with Scott Miller, and a quite unique line in backing vocals which picks out the two girl/two guy harmony/disharmony idea really well. This is the kind of album that'd be coffee table-essential if it were on Warners, as it is, Game Theory will probably still have to sweat it a little to gain their quota of success. Dave Henderson

GEINS'T NAIT

L'Or'n Cat

Permis De Construire (26 rue St Julien, 54000 Nancy, France) ●¾ The second album, from these slow ambient French people, is an all-enveloping splurge of colour — on ghastly red vinyl too. With little in the way of hand-holds for the majority of the record, it bubbles and troubles into the background, occasionally breaking free to clatter a few pots and pans and demand attention. Aspiring to be awkward but having a penchant to be friendly nevertheless. TC Wall

GREAT PLAINS

Sum Things Up

Shadowline SR 1087 ●¾ Great Plains play the all-American story, wrapped neatly with ribbons and bows, sparkling behind a thousand celluloid images that Brit TV throws out as the small screen version of the land of the free. Sum Things Up sees the boys looking inward, breaking through musical styles and ending up with a blitty, but biting, picture of life in wragged jeans. With tongues firmly in cheek, there's enough brightness on display to blind the meakest of musos. This is an album to live with, to take out in the car and eventually to take home to mom. TC Wall

THE HAFLER TRIO

A Thirsty Fish

Touch TO-9 ●½ This gets one and a half stars not because it's average, but because you'll either love it or hate it. Lovers will hear the ambient noiseplay of the Eraserhead soundtrack, the cohesive obscurist constructions that make up "difficult music", the things that have been explored for aeons by Nurse With Wound and lesser mortals. Haters will think it sounds scary. They'll think it's crap and will opt for the next Rain Parade album. You take your chances... Ripley

HALF JAPANESE

Music To Strip By

Bad Alchemy BAAL 11 ●● Just 22 tracks here from Half Japanese, a virtual cesspit of inventiveness, surrounded by the slings and arrows of the modern world. Using up the American musical variations from jazz to beat, from folk to soul and all points in between, Half Japanese are a classic collection of lunatics who more often than not succeed in making excellent music — faltering just now and again into a dodgy mistuned uptempo splash of uncontrollable frenzy. Dave Henderson

THE HEADLESS HORSEMEN

Can't Help But Shake

Resonance 33-708 (Box 213, 1740 AE Schagen, The Netherlands) ●● The Horsemen's gritty vocal lines and bittersweet pop-psyche makes for authentic Byrds-cut and Beatles jacket music. Deep down, they're a long way down the nostalgia tubes, paddling against progression while they hum and strum some meaningfully bizarre pop tirades. Alluring and remarkably embracing. Johnny Eager

HITCHCOCKS

Skinny

Nightshift NISHI 204 ●½ The Hitchcocks have some rather pleasant songs that could quite easily stand them in good stead with major label support. The seven tracks here are more akin to an underproduced Spandau Ballet than the Smiths/REM tag they've been emblazoned with. Whether they're pretty enough, or bland enough to succeed in the paltry pop market can't really be measured yet, as they certainly still need time to grow. Dave Henderson

IN THE COLLONADES

In The Collonades

Joker ITC610 (Box 200 99, s-104 60 Stockholm, Sweden) ●¼ A growling six track set from this Swedish outfit, who log in as part of the Westernised leather splurge. In The Collonades are hot to trot, but they add little to the already developed UK/US chunky guitar axis... they need time to develop further. Johnny Eager

THE JETSET

Vaudeville Park

The Dance Network Stereo Work 6 ●¾ The Jetset's rather designer-designed image of Monkees/Dee Time and all things good from the swinging '60s is a nostalgia point that you'll either love or hate. Even though they've already moved far beyond their plagiaristic beginnings, it's easy to see why people might not be overtaken for this new album, but they'd certainly have missed out if they chose to ignore it.

The Jetset have matured into a harmonious, well-structured, perfectly-arranged, and well orchestrated team of youths who wander from The Hollies' grating vocal style right through to The Beatles' anthemic utterings. It's fine stuff with an irreverent waltz to The Kinks and a cherishable aura through every plastic plea. Ripley

THE KINGS OF OBLIVION

Big Fish Popcorn

Bam Caruso KIRI 064 ●● The scam says that Bam got this album instead of an Accents' LP from some Hollywood label. Reputed to have been lost for years, since '67 in fact, it is half of a double set by a group who claim that Zappa ripped them off. Supposedly recorded on a 15-track machine, it has all the hallmarks of Freak Out Zappa with a bit more clarity as well as the weirdness of Zappa's later work, plus a touch of the Mothers' Ruben And The Jets. Whatever, it's a great listen, really mind-expanding (man), but the authenticity of this dippy trippy hippy stuff is still unproven. What the hell, enjoy it anyway. Dave Henderson

KMFDM

What Do You Know, Deutschland?

Skysaw SAW 4 R ●½ Germanic wit and wisdom over a thumping dancebeat makes What Do You Know, Germany? into a scholarly exercise in self-discipline, a kind of sub-industrial funk — with just enough to make it accessible. Most of the tongue-in-cheek "rock" humour which is spiralled into the songs shows up the band for the cleverly orchestrated act they are, but on occasion, like on the all-too-obvious Zip, they suffer the indignity of novelty laughs that really wear thin before the said offender is finished. For the most part, KMFDM have the caustic edge of a pidgen-English Foetus, and a driving production allows them yet more scope for their chunky tirades. TC Wall

LAIBACH

Baptism

Sub Rosa SUB 33006/7-9 ●● A lavishly presented, and thoroughly enjoyable, experience on this hugely anthemic double set from Laibach. The full colour gatefold sleeve resembles a classical album and the sound inside doesn't detract from that image. Huge slabs of dull string-music — intoned with chanted verse, taped introductions and climactic expletives — makes them so far removed from their contemporaries and admirers that Laibach are in danger of a huge backlash when Joe Public realise that they are in fact classicists and, above all, artists. When the day of realisation comes, this cacophony of sombre music will be the ideal funeral march... and then, perhaps someone will try to explain why Laibach are so good. Dave Henderson

LAZY LESTER

Rides Again

Blue Horizon BLUH 002 ●¼ Legendary Baton Rouge bluesman, Lazy Lester refuels his harmonica and voice box for this album's worth of tunes, which was recorded earlier this year when Lester visited the UK. Relaunching the Blue Horizon — which threw up the likes of Fleetwood Mac during its first inception, Rides Again looks set to keep blues enthusiasts and students of gritty vocal lines happy for some time to come. Dave Henderson

MARIE & THE WILDWOOD FLOWERS

Marie & The Wildwood Flowers

Radium RA 028 ●¼ There's something of the Nico in Marie, as side two trails to a halt with an accordion-accompanied waltz. She croons in a jazzy beatnik-style with her perfectly throaty pidgen-English slur making the whole show go up in a puff of Sorbonne cigareete smoke. She is in fact from Sweden, and this LP suggests that there's still more music to come from Sweden that can challenge the staid UK scene. Investigate. Dave Henderson

MEN 2ND

Red Tape

Antler 070 ●● A hybrid concoction made in Belgium and produced by ex-Hula Mark Albrow, Red Tape is an infuriatingly dense mass of guitars, electronics and effects which breathes through its lighter moments — exploding into frantic action when you least expect it. This is a promising debut from Men 2nd, a name that should be loaded in the memory banks for later. Ripley

MERVYN AND THE MERINGUE BEARS

Supper At Maulynvia

Summer Studios SS101C ● A cassette-only release, which does little for the braincells as it tries desperately to produce good pop muzak without the spit and slobber of the real world, and the slings and arrows of technology. Mervyn wants to be contemporary and populist a la Tot Taylor but ends up sounding like a crusty rice pudding. Johnny Eager

Huevos

SST SST 150 P ●● The Pups are a pretty difficult triad. What's going on here, on their latest consolidating album, is difficult to say. Previously they've moved this way and that through country, punk, thrash, rock and pop, but Huevos shows no new direction, no new persona, merely a more mature, considered sound — still essential, rewarding and commercially conscious, but somehow just waiting for the next move. Huevos will guarantee them a bigger reputation, a greater following, but you can't help but feel that their next release will be the most important, and possibly the most impressive thing they've done. Nick Brody

Teenage Spectacular

New Rose ROSE 132 P ●● 1/2 R Stevie Moore is one of those American oddities that people hail or dismiss as "eccentric". Of course he's eccentric, but he also writes very good pop songs, and on Teenage Spectacular he manages to edit a touch of humour into those songs, by way of intercut "wackiness", various effects and the breadth of styles which he adopts. R Stevie should be sponsored by the American people as one of the few realistic pieces of rock 'n' roll history they have left. . . and you should pick up on this album to complete your education and give you something to whistle in the bath. Dave Henderson

MUTE DRIVERS

Lighten Up Vol. One

Irradiated MD001 P ●● 1/2 Now this is where we came in, isn't it? The Mute Drivers have a little something that's been missing from the independent rat race. These people aren't hoping to hear the sound of cash registers clinking, but neither are they adamantly demanding to be obscure and totally independent for the sake of it. Instead, the onus here is on making music that's challenging, angry, angst-ridden (if you must) and inspiring. Outspoken and choking on spirit, The Mute Drivers have produced an album's worth of personalised faves, wrapped neatly in a silk-screened and hand-written bag, smudged, bruised and bom from pressure. The end product is not clean cut, Wet Wet Wetter, Dire Straits or difficult, just pop with flaws, rap with venom and noise with feeling. Dave Henderson

NEGATIVLAND

Escape From Noise

Rec Rec Music Rec Rec 17 Rec ●●● This is the album that all future "strangely odd" records will be judged by. Beyond Cabaret Voltaire, TG, The Residents, and the plethora of descendants throughout the world, Negativland's third LP is released in Europe on Rec Rec from Switzerland, but should also be available soon on SST. . . and what an album it is.

Like a radio show nightmare, fusing popular music with self-questioning doubt, Negativland, have produced a contemporary work of conceptual genius that's basically beyond description. Fuelled by the group's work in live radio broadcasting, and their exploits in creating soundtrack and popular music, an album of magnificent proportions is lurking inside the beckoning and bizarre sleeve. Do not miss. (The answer to the question is; No! There is no escape from noise.) Dave Henderson

THE NEON JUDGEMENT

Horny As Hell

Play It Again Sam BIAS 78 RR G ● Whether this machismo diatribe and tacky inner sleeve is supposed to be tongue in cheek, funny, or whatever, the musical offering on Horny As Hell fails to improve the shoddiness of the event. They used to be a reasonably average "new rock" act, but now the Neons have discovered a few dance beats and have attempted to rap, while adopting a pidgen English street jive, only to fall off their Nike platforms and land flat on their faces. Unsexy drive! Ripley

THE OLYMPIC SIDEBURNS

Dixie Truck Stop

White Label L38755 G ● Songs from under the ocean, more Antipodean fodder from this fivesome whose "rock-out" button is stuck in the on position. Leathery and lathered, the Sidles play in the classic goodtime rocking mould but add little in flair. They look and sound gritty and unshaven and Dixie Truck Stop is as much a US B film soundtrack, showing on the back of a broken down diner car, as the title might at first suggest. Rock with all its roots showing through. Johnny Eager

OVERSOUL SEVEN

Edge Records 001 (2692 Main PO, Vancouver, BC, Canada V6B 3W8)

●● 1/4 What a confusing name. I tried to enthuse over the telephone to someone, you know, about how good this bunch are, but they couldn't even take the name in. Still, who cares, this can be our little secret. Oversoul Seven, from Canada, are a three-piece outfit who trim their sound to make it sound close to a full-scale orchestra. This is melancholic melody music, with tongue-in-cheek charming lyrics over a guitar strum that's fit for everyone from Medium Cool to REM. Soulful and surreal. Ripley

PANKOW

Freiheit Fuer Die Sklaven

Contempo CONTE 113 RR G ●● 1/4 The crop of Italian acts that have emerged have been, rather inevitably, strung out on US/UK influences, but not Pankow. About five years ago they were developing a quite unique dancefloor variation, fostered in industrial percussion and brimming with punky prose, now they have a brace of releases, centred around this album, to fully expose their talents. They shout loud, sweat and generally outflank Front 242, they hit harder than Test Dept and they have a dub understanding which is helped by the mixes of Adrian Sherwood. This is certainly an album to live with. Ripley

THE PARANOIACS

We're The Teenage Lovers

Play It Again Sam RR G ● Tight Oz-style "swamp rock" from, um...Belgium. While sounding spectacularly similar to the Lime Spiders, The Paranoiacs lack that band's manic edge, and that's the drawback. Although musically competent, there is none of the pure desperation that underscores the best of the swamples. Only three of the six songs (strangely all on side 2) work up to any kind of fever. As for the lyrics? They're incredibly uninspiring. They may be teenage lovers, baby may have said goodbye, but there's no hurt there. Songs without blood. Scarlett

PARANOID VISIONS

Yob

FPOAD FOAD2U2 P ● 3/4 Unkempt gob-gargling live shot from Paranoid Visions. A seven-tracker which liberally assaults the inadequacies of U2 with lead vocals taken by a reasonably pissed-off (and inevitably pissed) Vono Pox. Straight and hard, thrashing all the way to the final cut of (I'm Not Your) U2 Clone. Johnny Eager

THE PLAGUE

Naraka

Immortum Records PL001 (P.O. Box 7070, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10163-6026) ●● Here is the news; Gothic shlock horror rock! Get these titles; Murder, Vampire, Suicide Queen, Paradise Of Pain and the best one of all, nay a near-classic, Never Die! "I have the mark of Cain, I am one of the special ones, Don't give me the last rites, I'll live forever in the afterlife... I know that I'll never die..." Poetry!

This is tacky fun for those of us who don't mind a female vocalist who has a range that starts with cutesie Slouxsie and ends with a stuck pig. Sorry Margot; don't put a spell on me! Okay, she's not bad! Daz Igy Meth

THE PLASTIC DOLLS

The Morning Lasts Forever

TV Records TV 5680 (Marnixstraat 67m, 1015 VC Amsterdam, Holland)

● Morning after taste rock from this guitar-toting Euro team. With more than a tip of the tuning fork to the distant Americas, The Plastic Dolls' eclectic sense from blues/R&B/country through to punkorama/neo-metal makes for many lagers and general staying up late music. Nothing new here, but a noise that leopard skinned toe-cap wearers will just lerve. Ripley

PRETTY GREEN

Pretty Green

Netwerk NTL 30014  ●●½ More than a touch of Byrds-circa-Sweetheart Of The Rodeo is brought to mind by this promising debut album from Pretty Green, but that isn't at all a bad place to start. Pretty Green leans banjo next to dobro guitar, it offers a Gram Parsons-meets-McGuinn vocal embellishment from Ed Blocki, and wins through with some fine playing and arrangements from the assembled Greenies. If at first the nouveau country tag puts you off, you must persevere, as this is a really rewarding experience. Nick Brody

THE PLEASURES PALE

The Pleasures Pale

Heresy (PO Box 19492, Cincinnati, Ohio 45219, USA) ●● When the man talked of an American Smiths, I didn't think he meant a four-piece who — from 5,000 miles away — had studied Manchester's sons so closely and perfected the sound so studiously, that they at times make Raymonde appear positively original. If titles like Monday Mourn or All About Men do little more than hint at The Pleasures Pale's major influence, then the distinctive riff of Barbarism Begins At Home that is hammered out on Uneasy's Disease or the carbon-copy Morrissey vocal nuances displayed on But She Didn't, ram the point home. This is a shame, because when they concentrate on their own talents, as on the closing, acoustic It Could Be Heaven Just As Well they prove to have a perfectly promising talent of their own, while No Joy is a strong enough song to stand up to any comparisons. When they get over this Smiths fixation, The Pleasures Pale will be worth watching. In the meantime, I remain astounded. Tony Fletcher

BILL PRITCHARD

Only Half A Million

Third Mind Records TMLP 23  ●●● Only six months after his debut offering, the Walsall wonder returns with a vastly improved brand of guitar balladeering that proves less is more. Bill's dropped the synthesiser and stripped to a deceptively simple guitar, bass and trumpet, aided by a sweet female backing hum that recalls the Prefabs (Sprout, not Beatles). Yet it's a remarkably full and melodic experience. The multi-lingual bard lets Francis take a backseat to a swinging '60's bedsit London brought up to date. Up The Junction seems the perfect filmic reference point. Ronnie Randall

RHYTHM PIGS

Choke On This

Konkurrel Records K 001/105 (P.O. Box 14598, 1001 LB Amsterdam, Holland) ●●½ Great combination of hardcore, country rock and jazzy bits too. The words come via the school of hard reality; no walking in the perfumed garden for these Pigs, the Censorshit lies too deep to be avoided. That's not to say they wallow in it though; check out the black humour of Malboro, Man or the thrashed emotion of Elegy. Throbbing energy from one of those American bands that have evolved along a line that starts with MC5 and a penchant for flag burning. Distant cousins make good. Daz Igymeth

THE RHYTHM SISTERS

Road To Roundhay Pier

Red Rhino RED LP 87  ●●½ Compulsive harmony music from the Laek sisters who utilise brother Billy plus a herd of folkies for instrumentation. The resultant album is a beautifully succinct and immeasurably individual albums worth of close harmony songs that split sides and let the tears roll. The Rhythm Sisters were on the recent Famous For Fifteen Minutes Channel 4 prog, if you didn't catch them then, don't miss your chance with this marvellous LP. Ripley

ZOOZ RIFT

Water II: At Safe Distance

SST SST 137  ●½ More from the endless mid-life crisis of Zoogz Rift, as the domestic disaster area of his life spreads even closer to home, while the central laugh lines get ever cloudier. Sure, Zoogz is a grin, but at best he'll never break it, apart from on a novelty ticket. After so many albums, the whole story gets a little dog-eared. Still, he's definitely one of life's real eccentrics. Johnny Eager

PAUL ROLAND

A Cabinet Of Curiosities

New Rose ROSE 135  ● Gosh! What a theatrically tricky platter! Paul Roland's latest offering sees him reverse yet further into the land of nod, taking his self-indulgent meanderings and string-driven things with him. Hailed as Barrett-esque, supported as a true pop-psyche spirit, this Cabinet Of Curiosities is little more than a trite selection of hammy nursery rhymes sung by someone who has little or no dynamism in his voice. Nick Brody

ROOM NINE

Voices... Of A Summers Day

C'est La Mort CLMLP002  ●● Room Nine's debut album is a stylish stab at post-psychedelia with more than a touch of primetime pop-orientated Buffalo Springfield thrown in for good measure. Not content to balk at that starting point, the US three piece have developed the sound into a much bigger, more contemporary sound, that washes over the listener in wafts of spine-tingling noise. Exceptional. Nick Brody

THE RUMBLES

Jump To Confusion

AFM MC20825 (Box 18449, Rochester, NY 14618, USA) ●●½ Wow! What a great name... what a great album! The Rumbles are a three piece with a pure pop vision. Played out in rock's new post-Talking Heads land of "anything goes" — as long as you can wrap it around a melody line — The Rumbles stumble into a simplistic set of arrangements which are elevated to God-like proportions by the three pieces' obvious understanding of each other. All singing, all strumming, Lanay Depalma, Jim Hule and Denise Wearne make music to make your mouth water (and your knees wobble). Dave Henderson

THE SAPPHIRES

The Sapphires

Swingin' Door SWN 001 (Last Time Round, Box 14645, Chicago, IL 60614, USA) ●●¼ The Sapphires brand of guitar-powered pop-arama, fuses some quite abrasive overloading next to some effectively fluid verse/chorus creations. Assembled on the wax dummy of new rock, The Sapphires opt to stab their way into your senses with a fine line in comment mixed with some uplifting playing. Sceptics may don the 'another American guitar band' hat, but this debut suggests that there's much more lurking behind this swingin' door. Ripley

SEX CLARK FIVE

Strum And Drum!

Records To Russia (1207 Big Cove Rd, Huntsville, AL 35801, USA)

●●¾ Wouldn't you just guess? There are only four in the Sex Clark Five. Still, they're pretty damn good at making a row. If these cats were English they'd be endorsed by everyone from Subway Records to 53rd And 3rd, they'd get a gig at The Beatles reunion do, they'd give Thee Mighty Caesars a run for their money... and probably buskat Euston Station on their nights off. This is good time summer music with its shades on, a romancing glint in the eye and a glass of New York Seltzer (serve ice chilled) in its hand. Wah! Just right for facing the fifteenth winter of discontent. Dave Henderson

SHERIFF JACK

What Lovely Melodies

Midnight CHIME 00.34  ●½ Jack is a lad. No? And this, the man's second album, further illustrates how he falls flat on his face into the "quirky song quagmire". You see, Sheriff Jack writes some good songs, some decent "melodies" but he has to add a line, a trick, a joke at the most impromptu part of the proceedings. This makes his albums not funny after the first play. All that's left is the memory that Jack was the lad who farted during the mayor's speech. Johnny Eager

SON OF SAM AND THE GOOD SHEPHERDS

Rich And Famous

Rouska CONCORD 27  ●●½ So here are Son Of Sam, at last, with that all important album. Held up for cover inaccuracies, sound sadness and general production difficulties, Rich And Famous has been well worth the troubled brows and beads of sweat. Past the frenetic monosyllabic sound of their youth, SOS finally sound like they're making the noises for factions as diverse as the beat-pop renegades, dancefloor dilettantes and post-industrial serious haircuts. Rich And Famous sounds like the perfect pitch has finally been reached. Whether a culled 45 can break them to the whole world is an important question, but while we wait we can be convinced that they've definitely got the sinew-flexing muscle to win through. Ripley

New sounds of intensity

Dave Henderson samples something new from Dossier Records

• IN A swiftly groovy move, Red Rhino distribution in York (through the Cartel) have picked up the full catalogue of Dossier Records from West Germany. Amid a flutter of excitement, the first batch from the catalogue throws up more than a few surprises, and several pleasures too. For those who couldn't get hold of the excellent Chrome box set on Subterranean (now deleted), one of the albums exclusive to that set, The Chronicles I is available on ridiculous multi-coloured vinyl. Containing four abrasive play-offs of fuzzed-guitar and growling vocals, it more than underlines their cult-like reputation.

• Less accessible, perhaps, is Rhys Chatham's Die Donnergötter, a collection of three pieces treated as if they were classical compositions. With namechecks for Varèse and Boulez, it's a sound somewhat like Zappa on a tangent with Glenn Branca's multi-guitared couplets, or even Philip Glass getting down with The Ramones.

• From Robert Previte comes Dull Bang, Gushing Sound, Human Shriek, a six track set taken from the soundtrack of a video entitled Bought And Sold. Without visual stimulation it lacks a certain something, but the compulsive rhythmic patterns are quite inspiring after a while.

• David Fulton's Don't Ask moves more jazzwardly AWOL than Previte's soundscapes. With the assistance of Chris Vine, Jim Fryer and Glenn Jubille, this second part of his trilogy moves in a controlled minimal circle while the guys "really express themselves". Very intense.

• Still reasonably intense is Research's Social Systems, a nastily abrasive set of guitar mayhem and sampled keyboard sounds that verge into rock, pull out and get avant, then sound more than a little chunky at times — with a touch of horns and what have you. Six tracks on offer and tastefully perverse they are too.

• There's more of a palatable twitchy electronic hue to Frontline Assembly's They're a Canadian band focused around ex-Skinny Puppy member Bill Leeb, and their eight track album, State Of Mind, has the inherent background tapes and pulsing beats that you come to expect from selected electronic genre stylists. It's a fine album that deserves further listening.

• . . . As is, Het Zweet's self-titled album. A mixture of deep murky tape loops, explosive rhythmic outbursts and effected chorale humming, it builds into a powerful monolithic noise that's fit to burst. Intensity without self-indulgence.

• There are three further Dossier releases currently just at the test pressing stage and all of these should be worth looking out for. First is Stano's Daphne Will Be Born Again — a highly coloured neo-funk affair, with a few ambient interludes — which shows the Irishman off to his full potential. A junior Sylvian in the making.

• From New York there's the quasi-classical multi-layered sounds of Controlled Bleeding. Moving yet further away from their brazen beginnings, they offer a highly tasteful set of sounds, while, finally, E Chadbourne and J Rose team up for Kultural Terrorists, a kind of mish mash of string instruments, found sound and general frantic strumming and bowing. Chadders don't let the weird tag slip for a second.

STICKDOG

Stickdog

Smudged Septone S01 (833 Broderick #5, San Francisco, CA 94115, USA) ●● 1/2 Stickdog split themselves in two on this dynamic debut album. One side they're quiet, peaceful but haunting, laying thick streams of sound on top of the stagnant air, while back to back they're an anguished scream spiced with some remorseless gritty ambience and silt open by a searing guitar. Stickdog are at the moment a psychotic cocktail of oppressive perversion with axe-wielding homicidal tendencies. Family music, indeed. Dave Henderson

NIKKI SUDDEN AND ROWLAND S HOWARD

Kiss You Kidnapped Charabanc

Creation CRELP 002  1/2 Is it ill-conceived to suggest that this album is nothing more than self-indulgent jamming from two tanked-up rockers who sound only marginally able to comprehend what's going on? If Sudden and Rowland Howard were not the cult figures they are, would this album even warrant a second listen? It's difficult to say, but this one-dimensional downbeat moan, has little to do with songs and performance. TC Wall

SWAMPTHRASH

Don't Make No Never Mind

DDT DISPLP 12  ● 1/2 The thought of this rampant procession of Benny Hill themes, littered with paralytic back-slapping good time banjo breakdowns isn't as appealing as it should be, but the music itself is a powerful enough earwash. As a gimmicky noise, Don't Make No Never Mind will reap remarks about spittoons and sawdust and disappear into the void of good fun while it lasted nothingness. They can always use it as stock western background music for The Two Ronnies though. Johnny Eager

TALULAH GOSH

Rock Legends '69

Constrictor 26  ● There's an idiot at the NME thinks the Talulah's Testcard Girl is a Swell Maps cover. It's not, it was written by bassist and arch-Black Sabbath fan Chris way back in his early punk daze in a band he shared with Angus Not-A-Razorcut-Anymore. And though it's ace-fab, it's still no reason to buy Rock Legends.

The main meat of this disgraceful sell-out stroke/rip-off is torn from the flesh of the singles. Spit these out and you're left with My Boy Says (featuring ex-Talulah Liz Price), Way Of The World and Testcard Girl. Of these, the first is on the last Shelter LP and the others are soon to be combined on a quicksilver follow up to Bringing Up Baby.

Just because you're the greatest pop band ever is still no reason to release a record like this to keep up a profile while you swot for your exams. Come the revolution, pop stars like these will be first up against the wall! Holly Wood

TAR BABIES

Fried Milk

SST SST 101 ●● 3/4 This is even closer to the psychedelic nightmare that SST once had — before they lapsed into heavy metal and came out smelling all new age. Tar Babies are intense. They have pop handholds, they step over melody lines with hob-nail boots and pay their dues to the pop excesses of the Stones, before breaking into a churning morass that's closer to jazz in construction. Tar Babies seem to occupy a musical dimension that has no rules, even then they seem to be breaking the code at the least possible opportunity. A fine LP. Dave Henderson

TEST DEPT

A Good Night Out

Ministry Of Power/Some Bizarre MOP3  ●● Broad as they are, it must get wearisome at times attempting to carry the weight of the whole world's struggles upon your shoulders. To listen to Test Dept is to feel guilty about not being brought up with an outside toilet and tin bath on a cobbled street. Most of the punters Test Dept appeal, nay, plead to/for can't afford five or six quid from their dole or redundancy for a bit of plastic.

On the other hand, this record wants to identify with every working class activist between here and Vladivostok. Bagpipes, brass bands, jigs, rolls, Russian raves, military pomp. . . and all this on one track. Humour isn't a commodity they deal in, the same fault that makes communism seem such an unpalatable option to the British. At times Test Dept sound more like the government propaganda they po-facedly mock. Ronnie Randall

THEE MIGHTY CAESERS

Punk Rock Showcase

Hangman HANG 7UP [R] [C] ●●● Raucous, tacky, tinny, squeaky, noisy, fluff on the needle boisterousness from Thee Mighty Caesers, who whip through 14 punky out-takes from their past for no other reason than they're there. Mad, bad, glad, and frantic, another for the archives only to be consumed after six cans of Hoffmeister. Nick Brody

THIN WHITE ROPE

Bottom Feeders

Zippo ZANE 005 [P] ●● 7/8 I wasn't overkeen on this American mini-set from the Ropes, but it sure grows on you after a while. Licensed from Frontier, it shows Thin White Rope to have more than a few different attitudes and approaches as they mix their drawl and scowl with some decent enough strummed pop and a slice of country-come-R&B Influences. Thin White Rope sound like they're on the road to somewhere and their next should be even better. Johnny Eager

13 ENGINES

Before Our Time

Nocturnal NOT 1 (Box 19550, Detroit, MI 48219, USA) ● 1/4 A confection, coated liberally with Only Ones-styled vocal dollops, made in Michigan that ultimately transcends its oh-so-obvious rootsy trappings. But, like Peter Perrett had his hand in Lou Reed's pocket, the Engines version of the shady side of town, relies a touch too heavily on its predecessors. It's rock 'n' roll territory though, and this near-groovoid vision drifts close enough to the real goods from chord to chord. More soon we hope. Dave Henderson

THIS SCARLET TRAIN

Fimbria

Nightshift NISHI 202 [FF] [C] ●● 1/4 On a Feltist plateau, a trickling Vinni Relly guitar sound and some bittersweet lyrics make This Scarlet Train stand out from the twang-hungry crowd. The light glints against their sharp-steel strings, they offer just six songs and get away with murder in the name of art. OK, in simple terms, this is a finely paced, well-polished set of songs which suggests that we should all have heard of This Scarlet Train before... or at least claim we had. TC Wall

THRILLED SKINNY

Piece Of Plastic

Hunchback HUNCH 001 [R] [C] ● There's not much in the way of information with this disjointed 90mph thrashout from Thrilled Skinny. The songs are reasonable enough, and that guitar sounds like the frets have been toned down with a sanding block, there's even a hint of piano now and again to provide some contrast, the problem here is it's all a little bit too undefined because of the total lack of production, arrangement and polish. Johnny Eager

TMA

Jimbo (c/o ILA, PO Box 594m, Bay Shore, NY 11706, USA)

● 1/2 Appearances can be deceptive. While the lavishly-illustrated sleeve would seem to suggest a post-apocalyptic experimental project at work, reality brings us 14 prime slices of US hardcore. Hard to believe at times that this furious wall of sound is the product of a mere three pairs of hands, but nevertheless they charge through songs with such harmless titles as Ode To Clancy, like men possessed. There's hardly a single let-up in pace, energy and aggression, rarely a chance to catch more than a chorus line or two of lyrics, and hard-core fans worldwide will love it. The rest of us — we must be content with the sleeve. Tony Fletcher

THE TURNPIKE CRUISERS

Sleaze Attack At The Edge City Drive In

ABC ABCLP13 [P] ● The Cruisers try so hard to be American that their vocalist, Richard King, has probably done his throat some permanent damage in straining to reach those low notes. This is barroom rock (with a rockabilly veneer only just showing) with cheap toilet humour thrown in for effect. As pastiche it may be funny, but for kicks it fails to impress. TC Wall

THE UV'S

Crayon Jungle

Zinger ZINLP 3 [P] ● 3/4 Gritty guitar pop with a classic verse/chorus construction allowing The UV's to weave a sultry spell over the proceedings. The UV's have a leather-jacket arrogance and a crinkly smile on their faces. . . like The Ramones getting lyrical instead of the usual deadpan slur. Crayon Jungle is a colourful exercise that could quite easily impress the millions of Aussie acidic rock casualties. Dave Henderson

Out Of Our Idiot

Demon Records X FIEND 87 [P] ●●● The various artists in question all have Elvis Costello in common — ie, this is a collection of 'rare and unreleased cuts' featuring Elvis Costello & The Attractions, The Costello Show, Elvis Costello & The Confederates, Napoleon Dynamite & The Royal Guard. . . see?

And a fine collection it is too, cramming in a stupendous 17 tracks (count 'em!) sweeping together classics like Black Sails In The Sunset, the magnificent Turning The Town Red (as featured on TV's Scully), Imperial Bedroom,

So Young (that's the previously unreleased bit) and a superior version of Yoko's Walking On Thin Ice.

Forget the socks or deodorant — any Elv fan will want to see this gaudily packaged goodie at the bottom of their bed come Christmas morn. Carole Linfield

VARIOUS

Rockin' It Up

Lost Moment Records LMLP 12 [R] [C] ●● They call this 'the ideal rockin' stockin' filler' and that's a description I would struggle to better. Contained are contributions from Howlin' Wilf, The Krewmen, The Long Tall Texans and The Surf Rats among others. Anyone who has ever visited The Clarendon in West London will be familiar with the majority of these performers, they do what they do at 100 mph and stop just long enough for a refill and a trip to the toilet. Julian Henry

Buzzcocks: Yeeps, primal punk, Seeds-style

VARIOUS

Seeds IV: Punk

Cherry Red BRED 80 [P] ● 1/2 This is the weakest of Cherry Red's collection of music from the bygone independent new wave days, which is surprising as punk was one of the motivating forces behind the boom. What we have here is a mixture of classics, from The Buzzcocks, Dead Kennedys and The Flies, plus a handful of also rans and less eloquent descendants. As record buyers of the time discovered, not everything that sported the correct graphics, played by people with the correct attire was worth saving up for. I mean, do you remember Stinky Toys? Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Surfin' In The Subway

Subway SUBORG 4 [R] [C] ●● End of term compilation from the Subway stable and the reports vary. . . but the standard is pretty high. It's pointless to pick and choose here, everyone will have their own faves, but what the hell, I reckon The Flatmates and The Chesterfields win hands down on what's a rather hip-wagging collection. The Groove Farm sound promising, Razorcuts, Rodney Allen and Bubblegum Splash all have their own worthwhile variations and The Rosehips dig themselves out of the relegation zone with the best tracks I've heard them do. All in all, it's surf's up! Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Sweat

Trance Records TRLP 4.00384J (Line Records, Box 605220, D-2000

Hamburg 60, West Germany) ●● A compilation pulling together some of the most cherishable pop music that is fuelled by guitars. With sounds culled, mainly, from the last few years, you get the chance to hear Camper Van Beethoven rubbing plectrums with Billy Bragg, That Petrol Emotion, The Doctor's Children plus older cousins Richard Hell, the dB's, Ed Kuepper and Willie Alexander. Filling in the gaps are some tuneful types who won't spring to mind as easily, but the potential and character is certainly on show. Nick Brody

JAH WOBBLE

Psalms

Wob Records WOB 7 [SRN] ● 5/8 Close, but not as close a shave as it should be. Jah Wobble's temporary sabbatical ends with an itchy bitsy album that's scraped together from time gone by and filled in places with threadbare diversions. There isn't enough holding Psalms together, but there are enough pieces of quality to make this an album worth hearing. Alcohol steadfastly stands as the best track, while Bim Sherman's lovers-croon holds up well, for the others there isn't enough going on, but they have their moments. Nick Brody

YO LA TENGO

New Wave Hot Dogs

What Goes On GOES ON 13 [SRN] [C] ●● 1/2 The Yo La's are in a semi-clad middle-distance, well, at least that's how this album seems to be as it rolls off the deck. It's a fine album, a loveable set of tunes — all put together with the greatest of ease. Fine arrangements, a great performance, and those songs, too. To the uninitiated it could be mistaken for an above-average collection of Peter Astor songs. . . steeped in rock history, but moving closer to your heart, shaving inches from the passion-o-meter. Better still, it has its unique qualities, too. Yo La Tengo are the natural songs of rock 'n' roll's heritage, the guitar tune for your bottom drawer. Well, apart from all that, away from the microscope, Yo La Tengo are a smooch (does that need any explanation?). Love it to death. Dave Henderson

A CHUD CONVENTION Patient Sorrow Circle RR C Criminal union of A Grumh and Skinny Puppy which results in a lot of gobbling noises fed through an echo machine. It can't be healthy. NB

ALIEN SEX FIEND Stuff The Turkey Anagram P The Fiends don't quite top Slade for Xmas banality, but it's a nice stab at Bernie Matthews and a chirpy enough tune. JE

AUTOMATIC DLAMINI Me And My Conscience Idea P

My God! This is a great single. A fine slice of new pop from the Auto's which sounds as if it's destined for the warmth of many a heart. Simplistic, repetitive guitar lines are topped with percussive elements, a great near-spoken vocal line and a superb chorus break. DH

THE BACHELOR PAD Do It For Fun Warholasound RR C Another warped and wonderful evocation of noise and the way it affects the world, from everyone's fave Scots outfit. The Bachelor Pad seem to have no reason to exist other than to make explosive sound anagrams that stick in the ears and make you feel good. Hooray! DH

BAM BAM AND THE CALLING Scraping Off The Shine Great Pa

The Bam Bam's play a finely-tuned version of upbeat rock pop with all its dimples grinning. Crunchy, like a good wholesome noise should be. JE

BLUE AEROPLANES Bury Your Love Like Treasure Fire P

I hate to sound rash but I have to say it, the Aeroplanes simply get better and better. Bury Your Love is a commercial treat which manages to avoid the pitfalls and clichés that would so easily classify it as just "another" indie single with mainstream potential. Its distinction is quality. That and the most luxurious harmonies and acute lyrics effecting a gritty vocal intensity. AK

BLUE FOR TWO Stay Casey Radium RR C

A touch of the growling Tom Waits dies a Dragnet style-orchestration, makes for a hugely embracing slab of film noir plastic. A Swedish duo — one's a Leather Nun, you know — who make contemporary jazzed-out soundscapes for the keen living generation. DH

THE CHESTERFIELDS The Janice Long Session Night Tracks P

Successfully strummed pop sounds from the very precious Chesterfields. When will these boys be the bizarrely big hit band they deserve to be? Four fun-filled frolics from '86, all singing, all smiling, all waving kettles. JE

CLOSE LOBSTERS Let's Make Some Plans Fire P

In these subterranean waters the fish who love the Lobsters seriously outnumber the fish who don't, I know. Personally, I've never been fussed one way or the other really — until now, that is. This rather glorious 45 may just be the essential tonic needed to buck up the don't knows and don't cares among us. Let's Make Some Plans is an infectious jingle which grows with each verse and jangles its way to a most sumptuous climax. Proof that you don't have to be loud to be heard after all! AK

THE CROWS Takayama Survival P C

Plastic cock rock with screeching and pouting as the main pastime. The Crows have the sound of a big band in the Cult/Mission mould, the question is...do we need another one? DH

THE DAMNED The Peel Sessions Strange Fruit P

A frisky five tracker from way back when the safety pin was art, and The Damned were at their most destructive. From late '76 this pack of worrying headbutts still sounds as fresh and pertinent today, and you know you'd be daft to miss it. NB

DINOSAUR JR Little Fury Things SST P

A psychopathically groovy 45 from the Dinosaur camp, with an accessible draw, a sharp hook and some devilishy tasteful lyrical content. The flip even features a dangerously impotent reshaping of Peter Frampton's Show Me The Way. JE

DISCO 2000 I Gotta CD KLF

Communications C Dance-floor beats from the house of JAMS. You can just about hear Bill Drummond encouraging us all to "Drop the bomb" on this essentially straight uptempo track. Could easily crossover and the hand-crafted skateboard-distracted-leads-female-front-persons could make it into a top ten hit. My, it even out-hypes Alan McGee's Baby Amphetamine nursery rhyme. NB

ELECTRO HIPPIES Peel's Session Strange Fruit P

A nine track thrusting from the Hippies. Colled from July '87, which lets the world and his conscience do some politically-sound thoughts, if you can strain to hear the words through the breaking guitar strings. Sentiments intact, but frantically disappearing up their own horse power. JE

ENGLISH BOY ON THE LOVE RANCH The Man In Your Life New Rose P

Featuring Dave Ball on soundtrack and Jamie Jones on voice, this exceptional single is an incredibly fine epic, busting in leatherette NRG, boasting a sexless mix and displaying danger around every rubber corner. Fascinating and fluctuating. R

FIFTH COLUMN Steel Town North West RR C

The Column rock out in a near-commercial vein, dropping a jaw in amazement at their cooler than cool Americanised honky dance-floor sound. Shaking the boundaries of pop iconoclasm and introducing a touch of social comment, Fifth Column are potential movers. DH

FRONT 242 Masterhit Wax Trax RR C

A US maxi-12 from

Belgium's hardest electronic outfit, which further enhances their gravel-scratched image. Three versions and some more apocalyptic hand waving from the discordant dancelloor. R

JESSE GARON AND THE DESPERADOES The Adam Faith Experience Velocity RR C

A more grim, trim and proper sound for the Desperadoes on their third single to date. Swinging pop with a comment in the backteeth and a smack on the nose. Desperately grand. NB

GENE LOVES JEFFREY Gorgeous Beggars Banquet

More pouting pop that should see the Jezzies rise to chart infamy if we weren't in such torrid semi-pop times. A ballad with bounce, beat and a fine style in chorus breaks. DH

INCA BABIES Buster's On Fire Constrictor RR C

Another indie classic from Constrictor in their limited edition series. This time, the much maligned Inca Babies prove that their musical verve has moved some way away from the typecasting they suffered in an earlier life. Rollocking guitar music with a commercial turn of phrase. NB

KING OF THE SLUMS EP Debris RR C

My God, this is different, and good with it. King Of The Slums have been prepped by Debris magazine and present four demented slices of guitar grunge scratched to pieces by a manic fiddle screech. Excellent and slummy! NB

BRIAN LADD Hammerhead RR Records (151 Paige Street, Lowell, MA 01852, USA)

Two elongated guitar adrenalin-rushes from Psychones man Brian Ladd. Bridgegoing and bushwacked, Ladd rattles through the history of contemporary guitar, spiralling like a nuked-out mega-hero who's hang-gliding into oblivion. Yeah? Weird? NB

THE LAST CRY EP A Day Like Today (11 East Hill Drive, Portlago, East Sussex)

Big production, fording the shoulder of Simple Waterboys and the U2 connection. Stopping briefly to mention A Flock Of Seagulls. The Last Cry could be huge, but are ultimately empty. NB

LOVE TRACTOR Party Train Big Time Chunks, funky rock music, with a dancey beat and some gimmicky slinging, on one of the few redeeming factors from their pretty uninspiring This Ain't No Outerspace Ship album. DH

THE MIGHTY LEMON DROPS

The Janice Long Session

Night Tracks CD The Drops, from early '86, with four thrusting guitar pop sketches — including a cover of The Teardrop Explodes' When I Dream. Exceptionally pristine considering the speed these sessions have to be completed in, and full of emotive strum, too. NB

MKULTRA Immobilise Mute

CD Oh bear, is it going to be incredibly uncool and very Emperor's new clothes to admit that I can't hear what's going on here? A bulbous beat, some man shout in the background, a vase falls off my shelf and Frank Tovey is involved. Yipes! No it did nothing third time either. R

NAGAMATZU Lift Off

Motorcade CD Nagamatzu's left-field charm and dance-orientated weirdness has matured with the development of new technology and, on this multi-faceted 45, they display two diverse and products in the brace of Lift Off and the dream-like Flipside Sunlight Home. Fine stuff indeed. DH

NASA Boy King And The Lizard Girl Fun After All

CD Colossal metallic rock, glam make-up, pondy tape background, Eastern-daylight market noises and four diverse tracks from Nasa. Wavering into the passing pouch, Nasa opt for a more meaningful, well-arranged noise which works best on the two Eastern-influenced songs. Ones to watch. DH

NEW CHRISTS The Black

Hole Citadel CD (Import) Maelstromatic, charismatic, cinematic. The New Christs' rock 'n' garage is about as new as J. Christ himself, but it smoulders with style. Doors overtones swing in and out of a tightly wired R'n'B-stained surge. If rock has a colour code, the New Christs would be black and blue. MA

NEW ORDER Peel Session

Strange Fruit CD Four more from the vaults as New Order get intense and moody, circa '81, culminating in a calm after the storm on the exquisitely delicate Dreams Never End — with Barney's vocal line sounding more like a tortured choir boy than his usual angst-ridden prose. DH

NEW ORDER Touched By The Hand Of God Factory

CD More Germanic-orientated electro-beat from Manchester's finest. New Order will chart, become even more of a household name and make everyone's evening better with this marvy slab of Euro-toot. NB

THE NOODLES Dead For

Nothing Gougnaf Mouvement (140, rue de theatre, 75015, Paris) Harder than the Hard-Ons, spunkier than the Spunk Bubbles, The Noodles — probably unintentionally — recall raving Nouveau Australia Guitars-Wave, throwing up an epic wall-of-sound that manages to stick, while on the flip, they nail down 1987's sharpest pop hook-tack. An irresistible name, an irresistible way of negotiating the 60's garage-beat. MA

OFRA HAZA Galbi Globestyle

CD A specially remixed slice of Eastern promise from Ofra as Galbi gets cut-up and truncated by The Cold Cut Crew. Truth of the matter is, it sounds pretty damn neat and should enhance the lady's reputation and introduce her to a new audience second time around. TCW

OH'DEV Hundred Times A Whole Constrictor

CD Limited edition, coloured vinyl, and a grating guitar noise that's fit to squeeze pimples. Oh'Dev blast it like they're set to sign for SST, coughing up the prose with a neat line in self-depravation. NB

PANKOW Boys And Girls

Contempo CD A superb Adrian Sherwood-production, as Italian hardcore dancebeat fundamentalists, Pankow cover Prince's Boys and Girls with brazen sexuality, thumping, pumping and erotic. NB

PANKOW Gimme More

Contempo CD Marvy seven-inch from Pankow's new LP, Freiheit Vier Die Sklaven, that skips and trips manically into the stogy bits of the brain. NB

THE PASSMORE SISTERS A

Safe Place To Hide Sharp

CD The Passmores get closer and closer to the poppier-than-pop sounds that deliver them the bags of cash they deserve. Not as immediately vibrant as their former bedsit hits, but appropriately loveable, and major. R

PIONEER CORPS Pioneer

Boy Nightshift CD Big pop drongo-land, with a thumping keyboard tirade, a dancebeat and the smell of bomber jackets. The reason and relevance of pushing such a record on independent terms seems strange as this begs for big label exposure, a plugger and a request on the Simon Bates show. NB

THE RAMONES Merry Christmas (I Don't Want To Fight Tonight) Beggars

Banquet Run of the mill Ramones. A chunky guitar, tap-tap drums and throbbing bass behind that Brudder-rap. Christmas with the Gabba Guys! Phew, what a concept. JE

SCHOOLLY D Parkside 5-2

Jive Schoolly switches to Jive but keeps the rap bubbling on this typical slab of unconscious sloganeering. Best bits are on the flip with the exceptional Dis Groove Is Bad and a cut and scratch explosion on Housing The Joint. DH

THE SEA URCHINS Pristine

Christine Sarah CD At the crux or central pivot of bubble-blowing pop? Incisive anorakorama? Well, whatever neat cupboard that The Sea Urchins get locked in, it's sure to have "twee" stamped on it. Hopefully, though, the perpetrators of such a deed will have the sense to listen to this fine single before they pass final judgement, because these Urchins have some fine songs. NB

SEVERED HEADS Hot With

Fleas Network CD Aussie Heads in pop shock! Hot is a track from their soon to arrive new album, and, in its original form, it sees the group getting close to commercialism. The extended explosion is, of course, more exploratory and testing...still crazy all the same. TCW

SANDIE SHAW The Janice Long Session Night Tracks

CD A revived and revitalised Sandie Shaw with four tracks from May '86 that act as a giant thank-you to Morrissey for coaxing and coaching — why there's even a charming piece of kitsch '60s pop in Steven (You Don't Eat Meat), a Shaw/Langer tribute to someone or other. Better still is Sandie's cover of Patti Smith's Frederick and Lloyd Cole's Are You Ready To Be Heartbroken, plus the added bonus of a trickling Girl Don't Come. Superb. DH

SH DAUMUR Killed A Man With A Shovel! Lakeland (Tel: (0702) 612256) This Icelandic outfit offer three taut and testing punkette diatribes on this musically tempered single. Shoestring enterprise with reason but unlikely result. NB

638:938 Atavistic View...

Ediesta CD The sound of gyrating Wakefield? Well, this should neatly knock the varnish off the northern stereotype in all its post-Sputnik finery. A synth hard-core explosion that doodles all over Roxy Music's Re-Make Re-Model and adds a few glittering ideas of their own on the surrounding four tracks. Exceptionally good! R

THIS POISON The Fierce Crack EP Reception

CD Reception certainly seem to be turning out some fine records, and This Poison look likely to keep the ball rolling with this abrasive guitar flurry which wraps itself snugly around a strapping arrangement on a commercially-honed set of tunes. NB

THE UNDERLINGS Centurion

Midnight Music CD The third vinyl offering from the Un-derlings — who were born from the remnants of S-Haters — sees the expansion of their sound into a huge, emotive wash which intoxicates the air in the same way that primal Cure and their grumbling Germanic A Forest recordings did. Loud and proud, with a splash of bigger potential. NB

GENE VINCENT The Last

Session Night Tracks CD This one's been talked about for ages...the final radio recordings from Gene Vincent, which were done just 11 days before his untimely death. It'll be no disappointment either. Be Bop A Lula, Say Mama and Roll Over Beethoven are joined by the deep ballad Distant Drums in this 1971 set which is destined for many a collectors pillow. NB

THE VULTEES Kick It Out...

Waterfront CD (Import) Ultra-frantic, ultra-yearning, high octane modish garage pop from Australia with overtones of soaring Anglophile stomp-pop a la Kinks, Jam and Undertones. In The Vultees' own words, an "adrenalin shove". Essential for collectors. MA

WIRE Peel Session Strange

Fruit CD Exceptionally grand session from Wire, as they parade through a box of guitar effects units and even summon up one track, Culture Vultures, which never made it to any of their albums. There's something refreshingly new about Wire, and this recording is ten years old. DH

THE WYGALS Passion Rough

Trade CD Finely fashioned American pop that could pass for either Lone Justice or Salem 66 without many problems. The WYGals, in fact, have much more to offer with the voice of Janet Wygal making them sound like a hot tip for '88. DH

YEAH JAZZ Sharon Cherry

Red CD A stirring, and oddly dated-sounding, single this. It could be late '60s, it could be late '70s power pop, whatever is it doing here in 1987? Sharon is welcome however, partially due to the singer's impressively nasal drawl and partially because it smells so strongly of the real world. Good stuff. JH

Y LLWYBR LLAETHOG Yo!/Tour De France

Anhrefn CD Pulsing impulsive and impetuous, the second single from Welsh howling, rap, scratch hip-hop merchants, Y Llywyr Llaethog is a slice closer to the edge. More refined than their debut EP, Yo! dubs out, while Tour De France reaches scratch-out frenzy. Marvy. TCW

RE-RE-REWIND

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackages boasts some real gems. . .

THE CHAMPS

Tequila

Ace CH 227 P Now that Tequila has established itself in the Enalish pubs, and Tex-Mex food has become the staple chew for the rock paparazzi, it was only a matter of time before this re-issue appeared. The Champs "novelty" hit charted again earlier this year, and here it's surrounded with similarly-paced sax-driven instrumentals with the occasional word like, "Sombrero" thrown in for good measure. I could have lived without La Cucaracha, but tracks like Experiment In Terror — with its exotic swaying film noir hue certainly make up for a few indiscretions. D Henderson

THE FUGS

Refuse To Be Burnt Out

New Rose R56 P This live album from '84 snook out briefly a couple of years ago and created a touch more interest in this '60s angst-ridden beatnik duo — who poetically linked peace, hippy, CIA, Nicaragua, banning the bomb and the like. Music with comment played like Jefferson Airplane before they discovered success or Country Joe And The Fish when they knew how to swear. What they're saying is fine, but some of the musical excursions — like the reggae outburst — we could live without. Nick Brody

JESSE FULLER

San Francisco Bay Blues

Ace CH226 P Jesse Fuller is one of those gritty gravel-tongued singers who's made unique by the fact that he's a one man band who backs himself on a selection of instruments, including a 12 string guitar and something called a fofdella (which is played with the big toe). Pretty strange eh?

Culled from '63 this album's an intimate experience with Jesse chatting away in downhome style between each track, and a delivery that's a cross between Lonnie Donegan, Val Doonican and those old classic blues obscurists. Yeah, well strange! Nick Brody

AL GREEN

Greatest Hits Volume Two

Hi Records HIUKLP 438 P Al Green's story reads like a perfect film script for hapless desperates. A full cycle from gospel beginnings to the bad side of town and back to the church for salvation. His vocal style is unique and those distinct horn arrangements from Willie Mitchell really make the whole thing cook at the right temperature. Heartbreak soul with all the right emotions flowing forth, the original of Take Me To The River, the exquisitely Painful Living For You and more besides. Dave Henderson

ISAAC HAYES

Hot Buttered Soul

Stax Records SXE 005 P Hayes first gold LP in the States, this is a seriously weird late '60s concoction of, erm, psychedelic soul, I suppose.

Rumbling through in a seemingly stoned haze, Isaac breathes, broods and grunts his way through a 18 minute and 40 second version of By The Time I Get To Phoenix. All rather tedious excepting the smaltzy One Woman, and the early Marvin Hagler hairstyle Hayes models on the LP cover. Jim Reid

JESSIE HILL

Y'All Ready Now?

Charley Records CRB 1169

Ch Jessie Hill was a native of New Orleans during the late '50s, and had a hit record with Ooh Poo Pah Doo. That single is included here, in addition to 15 others that were recorded prior to his departure for Los Angeles in late 1962. The result is at times striking, though Hill's prowess falls short of being one of the truly great black voices. There is, however, enough variety and colour to make this record a worthwhile purchase. Incidentally, Hill is now, according to Jeff Hannusch's sleeve notes, an occasional cab driver back in the city of New Orleans. Julian Henry

CHUCK JACKSON

A Powerful Soul

Kent 073 P Chuck Jackson has the kinda sad eyed, booming vocal that's made for pop melodrama. And that's just what you get on this value for money 16-tracker.

Well crafted R & B, plenty of 'angels in heaven' female backing and Chuck's soulful, growl in his throat, protestations. Stand out number is Don't Believe Him, Donna replete with aah — ey, "Don't believe him, he's lying", chorus-pleading from the gals and straight down the line crooning from Chuck. Real pop romance. Jim Reid

JERRY LEE LEWIS

Keep Your Hands Off Of It!

Zu-Zazz Z2003 Ch A complimentary shoulder-rubber to Charly's Jerry Lee Sun Box Set, is this 12-track set taken from Sun recordings between 1959 and 1962, which have previously been unreleased. The man's in fine form, the tape rolls and you even get the engineer talking, making this historic artefact more than affectionate in its presentation. For fans and the mildly quiffed everywhere. Johnny Eager CHD 217 P The Ace catalogue has become a reference library for anyone interested in the genesis of R&B and the blues. These four albums are beautifully packaged slabs of history, dusted, documented and brought fresh to a new audience. Yet while Johnny Taylor — strong and powerful — BB King — majestic shafts of guitar — and Jimmy Nelson — rootsy and swingin' — are fine examples of the blues, Nathan Abshire's cajun music is the real revelation here.

His Pine Grove Blues set has the taste of the Louisiana swamp about it — a genuine folk music powered along by deliciously upbeat accordian and fiddle. If you liked the soundtrack to this summer's hit film The Big Easy, you could do worse than hunt out Pine Grove Blues. Jim Reid fiddle music that's topped with the neat harmonies of the three brothers, and the inevitable downbeat lyrical content on a fine selection of songs. Nick Brody

THE MILLION DOLLAR QUARTET

The Complete Million Dollar Session

Sun Records CDX20 Ch A special double album set featuring all the known recordings laid down by the Million Dollar Quartet on December 4, 1956. The team involved happened on each other in the Sun studio and were comprised of Elvis, Johnny Cash, Jerry Lee Lewis and Carl Perkins — hence the price tag name. The resulting set of recordings is a gentle jam-session-run-through of 40 tunes, some in part, some as suggestions, some in full. Mostly first take material, although there are three cuts of Don't Be Cruel included, the atmosphere is intoxicating even if Jerry Lee is trying too hard at times and Elvis gets deeply into Spitting Image style parody. Why, there's even requests for gospel faves and suchlike, which the boys gladly oblige. Not a perfect collection of classic material, but an intriguing insight into the personalities and memories of the assembled quartet. Dave Henderson

THE NEW ORDER

Declaration Of War

Fan Club FC 031 P The New Order were an offshoot from The Stooges circa '74, featuring Ron Asheton and Scott Thurston, plus former MC5 drummer Dennis Thompson. Declaration Of War was recorded while Iggy and James Williamson were laying down Kill City. Hardly the greatest of recordings, in the quality department, but The New Order obviously had some forceful ideas in their repertoire as they show on this gritty upbeat rock-out. Sadly the group disappeared just a year later and this album is the only remnant of their brief career. Dave Henderson

RUTS DC AND THE MAD PROFESSOR

Rhythm Collisions Dub Volume 1

Roir A-151 RR G Originally released back in 1982, this comes from a Ruts line-up post Malcolm Owen (heroin overdose, 1980) and is dedicated to his memory. A collaboration with Reggae engineer/producer Mad Professor, it's a heavy dub record with very little about it that could be called punk, other than its rebel-roots, but that's not to say that it's not an excellent record, it is. Reggae riddims and elastic basslines skank along, and the Prof throws in some echo, reverb, loops, delay and all sorts of trippy bits to keep you on your toes. Altogether a bloody fine swansong for the Ruts. Daz Igymeth

MONGO SANTAMARIA

Mongo's Groove

Beat Goes Public BGP 1001

P Mongo is not from Chester. Yes, he's in the Latin groove, he has a cool hat and his big hiteroonie was Watermelon Man. That slinky jazzed-fusion sound develops through this album and works best on the instrumental takes which soon develop into a kind of bigger than big band sound that's perfect for any gangster flick. Of course there's more to Mongo than soundtracking, but that essential edginess in his music is the thing that really makes this LP work. Johnny Eager

THE STOOGES

Rubber Legs

Fan Club FC037 P Legendary sessions of The Stooges recorded between their Raw Power and Kill City albums. They lack a lot in clarity and delivery (they were recorded in rehearsal) but Iggy and the Stooges collectors will love this. A free seven inch supplies one of the best tracks in I Need Somebody, while the album's stand out cut is Johanna. Dave Henderson

CAL TJADER

Cal's Pals

Beat Goes Public BGP 1003

P Cal Tjader plays the vibes like he's totally zonked with the whole thing. This is an album of Latin meets sleaze, collated from some of the man's most frenetic beats since 1954. In a time when striped t-shirts ruled the world (well, according to celluloid documentation), this music would have been rife in coffee bars where men stopped to prune their goatee beards. Authentic enough and twice as satisfying, Cal's Pals kind of slips the carpet from beneath the Blue Rondo/Matt Bianco connection...and in the process gives the whole genre a little more cred. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

The British Psychedelic Trip Vol Four

See For Miles SEE 206 P The trouble with these all encompassing timespan collections is that you really have to live with what's going on, a good 20 tracks here, for quite some time. When this collection was going on, between '65 and '70 I was more intrigued by Lou Reed and missed out on a batch of home grown talent that still sound bizarre to this very day. This is a good album, but it takes work to get into it and to become fact-hungry about The Timebox (who featured Mike Patto and Ollie Halsall) and Double Feature (who offer the wonderful Baby Get Your Head Screwed On). Still, what are you going to do through the winter? Invest in See For Miles and get a different kind of Open University course. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Do It Fluid

Beat Goes Public BGP 1002

P Listening to this six track collection of rare grooves from this new sweeter-than-sweet label, it really brings back the feeling of how we've been duped in the UK. What did we get? Well, we got The Style Council and their bastard buddies giving it a neo-'70s funk angle, an underplayed and underproduced averageness which somehow managed to chart. But now we have BGP, so let's hope that Paul and the bozos will jack it in for good. Do It Fluid mixes and matches between Patrice Rushen, Blackbyrds and more, supplying the kind of uptempo dance music that you need to hear. Latin influence, string-driven and bouncing with emotion. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Whole Lotta Drinkin' On The Block

Folk-Star GFCL-104 Ch A cohesive collection of deep south blues-come-folk recorded in the mid '50s in southern Louisiana. Culled from Eddie Shuler's Goldband label, it features a superb set of wailing sounds from such diverse luminaries as King Charles, Left Hand Charlie, Clarence Garlow and Charles Sheffield. They may sound like the cast of a '50s cop series, but they sure can holler and strum. Some of the recordings haven't quite attained the digital clarity you might like in today's techno age, but there's plenty of soul sitting in these tracks. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Zydeco Birth

Folk Star GFCL-103 Ch This collection of early '50s cajun/blues is available for the first time in the UK, thanks to Charly Records. Three artists are featured — Boozoo Chavis, Clarence Garlow and Thaddus DeClouet — and although the quality of recording is primitive, the album works as far more than just a reference point for early cajun fans. The sleeve notes tell of Eddie Shuler (the label's original owner) working in his TV shop, and building his own studio for the bands to record in — it was soon to become the focal point for musical expression in southwest Louisiana. This record is crammed full of great music and history. Julian Henry

DIONNE WARWICK

The Original Soul Of Dionne Warwick

Charly R&B CDX 18 Ch This is the definitive collection of '60s recordings by Dionne Warwick. A total of 32 songs are included, all of them produced by Burt Bacharach and Hal David, and packed with loving attention to detail by Charly. Walk On By, Are You There, Wishin' And Hopin' and so on and it all still sounds — some 20 years on — just as potent and evocative as the day they were recorded. For once, here is a record that deserves the description of 'Classic'. Julian Henry

BUCK WHITE AND THE DOWN HOME FOLKS

Buck White...

Fundamental SAVE 33

RR C Exceptional strumalong country music that revolves around the beautiful harmonies of the White family and Buck White's impulsive mandolin. Recorded in '72, these tracks are timeless, floating above any categorisation, sounding as old as the hills but still able to pluck at the heartstrings. If you ever wanted to dabble into the world of bluegrass, get out the black-eyed beans and tune in. Dave Henderson

THE YOUNGBLOODS

Point Reyes Station

Edsel ED244 P A baker's dozen from latterday Youngbloods, culled from late '69 through to their swansong recordings in '72. From the period after their much-acclaimed Elephant Mountain album of '69, these recordings reveal The Youngbloods after they'd transgressed the post-folk R&B sound, introducing a more plaintive strummed sound which works best on tracks like the traditional Will The Circle Be Unbroken. With four live tracks included too, this is a bitty but enjoyable album, that still sounds remarkably fresh for its age. Dave Henderson

WORLD MUSIC DOMINATION ENTS!

Get those sampling machines warmed up!

The National Sound Archive has teamed up with Rogue Records (through Nine Mile and the Cartel) to make some of their valued recordings available to the general public. Through a series of well-researched, well-presented and well-documented releases, the label and archive hope to remove some of the mysteries of music from other parts of the world, and the first two releases look likely to let the game take shape immediately. • The first platter is a six track collection of Manding Music From Mali entitled Ba Togoma. Performed by Sidiki Diabate And Ensemble it features kora and bala (a wooden xylophone) instruments plus various vocal interludes.

And that's closely followed by Music Of The Takano And Cuna Peoples Of Colombia, which was recorded in 1960/61 and has since been digitally remastered. Probably the most amazing of the first two initial releases, it features such exotic instruments as a wing-bone duct flute, a snail-shell flute and a deer-bone flute. Nick Brody

LUCKY COMPETITION WINNERS!

Yahoo! Yes, these three honchburgers have all won an autographed ten inch copy of Gaye Bykers On Acid's Nosedive Karma EP on In Tape. They are... John Pinnington, Lorna Doherty and Marvin Hanks Moor. Awhooo!

The year that was . . .

1 9 8 7

Dave Henderson, taking a fractured tumble through the year of the big gale, Vanables' return to Spurs, the demise of Eammon Andrews and Gorby's chess game with Ron, asks, what ever happened to good music?

JANUARY 1987

A kind of void ran through the independent world (a Christmas hangover), releases were still trickling through, Throbbing Gristle released CD1, a CD would you believe, through Mute. . . the floodgates of a new medium opened. Strange Fruit's Peel Sessions were beginning to bung up the charts, Big Flame decided to call it a day and their closing salvo, Cubist Pop Manifesto on Ron Johnson, finally hit the stores. The world waited with tongues wagging, for the new album from The Pastels which arrived just as the month closed. . . allowing the group the chance to be the first flavour of '87.

FEBRUARY

Miaow released their first Factory 45, the finely rounded When It All Comes Down, and still the Peel Sessions kept on coming. . . with Spizz being revived and the world not realising that by the end of the year his wonder-youth treatment would have sent him back to his teens. The hip-hop groove was well worn in by Feb, and Schoolly D's Saturday Night was met with a touch of censorship, while the first rumours of Alan McGee's Baby Amphetamine hype began. Age Of Chance got some serious cheque books waving after they remixed their cover of Prince's Kiss. They beat The Primitives to a deal, but the Prims got raved about generally with their You're Killing Me single on Lazy. The Bambi Slam came out punching for the new Mute partner Product Inc, while hot cultists were gagging over Wiseblood's Dirdish album and Coil's Horse Rotorvator LP. The Soup Dragons toured, with My Bloody Valentine in tow, deals were touted, The Railway Children released their second Factory platter and ended up on Virgin.

MARCH

Erasure got chart-handed with their It Doesn't Have To Be, raising much chatter about Andy Bell's voice and its similarities to Alison Moyet. Yawn! Vince Clarke slept through it all. The James Taylor Quartet's cover of Blow Up reaped much praise throughout the press, Laibach took to covers too and "did" Queen's One Vision, leaving The Vicious Rumour Club to run out dancefloor hep with their Whole Lotta Love retread. The Throwing Muses' 12 inch, Chain's Changed impressed Sire enough to court the group for their autograph. Cherry Red announced a series of compilations featuring prime new wave singles that have long since been lost. . . and a special preview issue of Underground was given away with Sounds. Boasting a cover featuring Voice Of The Beehive — who were soon snapped up by London, it featured reviews of the best of the year's LPs so far, and these included Phillip Boa's Aristocracies (the group have since signed to Polydor in Germany), Chumbawamba's Starvation, Charity And Rock 'n' Roll, Michelle Shocked's bittersweet Cooking Vinyl set Texas Campfire Tapes and so on and so on.

New acts focused on included JAMS, and The Stitched-Back Foot Airman. The Subterranean label of San Fran was profiled and we asked the burning question, whatever happened to Vic Godard and The Subway Sect?

APRIL: UG ISH ONE

The first issue proper of Underground hit the streets in a riot of overprinted colour, and tacked on booklets about the history of independent records. Big Black revealed that they hated audiences, Rose Of Avalanche told us their fave covers, Slab took cover honours, Skin got deep, deep, deep and we welcomed the return of Beserkley Records (sadly, a week later their distributors went bust). Firehose were touted, having risen from the ashes of The Minutemen, The Butthole Surfers' marvy Locust Abortion Technician was liberally showered with praise. Laibach's Opus Dei established them as Yugoslavia's most soulful outfit, and new acts exposed included ex-Easterhouse people The Cradle, plus A House, Crazyhead and The Stupids and their skateboard fixation (yes, and then everyone wrote about them). Oh yes, some rag said we wouldn't reach issue six.

MAY: UG ISH TWO

A split cover between

Renegade Sound-Wave (those naughty dancefloor types), the reformed Wire and the groovy Pulp thinly disguised an issue crammed with rave reviews for The Meat Puppets, Lowlife, Yo La Tengo and Thee Mighty Caesars, while Laibach were grilled, AR Kane were introduced, and Tackhead and The King Of Luxembourg got a look in. Stephen Edney from London Records reviewed the demo tapes... and he showed quite a bit of enthusiasm for The Tier Garden, while Julian Henry searched haplessly for APB.

JUNE: UG ISH THREE

cover, as they were on the road in Nottingham, while McCarthy and The Wolfhounds shared a Transit with Martin Aston through Europe. The Cramps revealed that they were to release a live album from their last tour, The Band Of Holy Joy reaped maxi-press with their More Tales From The City album and The Shamen were similarly enthused over for their Drop LP. Sonic Youth's Sister surprised everyone by being dangerously commercial and new bands embraced by Ug included D&V, Son Of Sam, The Blooduncles (who immediately went off and signed to Virgin) and The Raw Herbs (hooray!). Both Anrhefn and Cooking Vinyl labels were looked at, and Pete Astor revealed that some of his favourite things included Bob Dylan, Nick Cave, Van Morrison, Iggy, Syd and Hendrix.

JULY: UG ISH FOUR

Another ne'er do well claims Ug won't make it till Christmas. Oh, you of little faith. The New Music Seminar in the States sees people who do like the mag, The Chills get a rousing reception over there and we get the Bunnymen's approval and an interview... sadly their following LP, The Game, doesn't live up to expectations. Schoolly D gives a totally unpunctuated flow of consciousness and tells the world the problems he has with his gun inside his suit. 4AD release Lonely Is An Eyesore as an LP, CD, cassette and video and got a total thumbs up, Josef K's history got revisited on their excellent Young And Stupid LP and Rosemary's Children's Cherry Red mini-LP was superb. Portion Control signed to London only to be dropped in October, The Panic Brothers gave folk an even better name, The La's got raved about in the Tip Sheet by Andy McDonald who was reviewing the tapes... he later signed the band to Go! Discs. The Shend started his monthly column by revealing how to move to London and start a band, The Jack Rubies, The Dustdevils, Surf Drums, Dub Sex and The Waltones all got a look in and Jon "Bionic Beat Box" Beast enlightened us all with his wit when he told us that he once created a collage called "You Made Me Fart! In His Blue Movie". To think he went on to fame and immorality as a Timebox meglomaniac, (but sadly that little beer-spilling venue closed at the beginning of December after just 32,000 groups had performed there – on one night).

AUGUST: UG ISH FIVE

Finally, Primal

Scream released their debut Blanco album... and to a good response too. Depeche Mode were on the cover of Underground, and inside they revealed the secrets of their new album, Music For The Masses. Sadly, Snakefinger died while on tour. Save Sex from Belgium gave away a condom with their new disc on Antler, The Chesterfields' Kettle came in as a perfect pop sweetener, Crazyhead's second single, Baby Turpentine, was released and lodged itself at the top of the independent chart, and Ronnie Randall took to the road with the Third Mind Roadshow. Inevitably, he missed the bus. ROIR, the NY tape-only label, was officially launched in the UK and we asked the burning question, is there life after cuteness for Talulah Gosh? We also exposed I, Ludicrous as being ludicrously good. Finally, the current banned product list at one of the UK's largest retail record outlets was printed, and it turned out that anything punky, especially Jello Biafra — who ended up in court a mere month later on a censorship charge — was definitely taboo.

OCTOBER: UG ISH SEVEN

So we made it past ish six, yeh, boo, sucks... and Underground dived headlong into the chromaholic market with a free cassette featuring eight tracks of magnifico proportions from the history of contemporary rock music. Lining up next to each other on Rhythm And Noise were Cabaret Voltaire, Sonic Youth, Throwing Muses, Depeche Mode, The Normal, The Shamen, Lowlife and Clock DVA and on the cover were The Wedding Present. Rumours about the future of the confusingly-split Smiths came and went, and Red Harvest's Murder 45 foretold the Hungerford massacre. They Might Be Giants opened their own dial-a-tune line and Big Black split after covering Kraftwerk's The Model. Albums of note, apart from the Pressie's George Best, were The Chills' Brave Words, I, Ludicrous's It's Like Everything Else, The Smiths' closing shot Strangeways Here We Come, while single of the month was by The Sugar Cubes — who subsequently made it to the cover of everything from Icelandic News to the weeklies. Inside Ug, we talked to PTV, Gene Loves Jezebel, Virus and Mal from the Cabs (who recounted those early releases). The Homestead label was profiled and new acts talked about included The Wild Angels, The Doonicans, The Dead Milkmen and The Purple People Eaters.

NOVEMBER: UG ISN EIGHT

An exclusive preview of The Fall's Hit The North smasheroonie sat smugly next to the revitalised Gun Club — talking about their excellent Mother Jobs LP — and while John Peel reviewed the comic tapes, we looked at SNAP TV, The Bils, Laugh, 1,000 Violins, The Risk, Bleed From The West, Kill Devil Hills, The Bolshoi, Frazier Chorus and The Three Johns. In more depth, Love And Rockets, The Leather Nun and the One Little Indian label got the once over. Medium Cool fever hit the world with powerful new singles from The Raw Herbs, The Waltoners and The Corndollies, and there were fine elongated album shots from The Pixies, The Close Lobsters and Blue Aeroplanes, as well as the news that Bam Caruso were launching a film soundtrack label, Disques Noir.

...to make it to Chris ... hooded. And, in a cram-packed issue last month, Minow's third single, Break The Code, won cover honours, Man Kian's Wanting And Wellint, and a preview of their soon to be released Flesh Machine album on wire. The Durutti Column released the first DAT package — featuring their new LP The Guitar And Other Machines — and The Meat Puppets, Icicle Works and Raw Herbs all explained why they're so groovy. The Fall released Hit The North, The Icicle Works new single, High Time, proved that they really are that good and Chelsea's Pat Havin' reviewed the demo tapes. News features included The Stupids, Jesus, Angst's Mystery Spot, Slab's Descension and The Bomb Party's Liberace Rising. The Swans did some serious arguing with Ug staffers, Johnny Dec went on the road with The Chesterfields, and we introduced the world to The Incredible Zombie Rockers, CUD, The Corndollies, Zarjaz and The Heart Throbs, while simultaneously offering a compilation of Wire Reports, greatest tracks and artists for a mere £2.50. What's more, we also made a second offer for a compilation of Red Flame/Ink Records greatest, and that's become a reality by next month's issue. ...so keep tuned.

Underground prophets stare grimly into the air and predict much ado about all sorts for the coming months — so just keep this close at hand and check if they were spot-on in a year's time!

PETER PERTURBED 3 4 88

Birmingham lights back! Three hopes for '88:

- 1 Sun Drums — Two gorgeous records in '87 and a whole lotta good vibes ahead of us.
- 2 The Atom Spies — Idiosyncratic beat-boy space cadets with a Bid-esque frontman.
- 3 The Capitols — and out of the ashes of The Nightingales rose something even greater, complete with accordion player!

JULIAN HENRY 3 4 88

- 1 The La's, from Underground Tip Sheet to world glory.
- 2 Any Rhythm King release, the best record label in the Harrow Road.
- 3 Are You Scared To Be Happy? fanzine.

JOHN BEST 3 4 88

I'll see God in a Dead Can Dance live coruscation; regress through previous states of consciousness; brutally disembowel the chit-chatters at the back in a primal blood orgy; suffer incarceration at the hands of a society frowning on ritual slaughter but eventually find freedom via a successful law suit against the video shop that rented me Altered States in the first place.

VACHEL BOOTH 3 4 88

The Reversibles — God-damn genius racket!
Awesome Grooves — A TOTAL sound experience.
O-oh Chango — Olive Dog with his soft shoe shuffling sister, one or two ex-Ruts and a couple of girl clarinet hooters. Frst single. Fraternise, very soon.

CAROLE LINNARD 3 4 88

REM will conquer the world. AR Kane will emerge as a supreme force in British music but will remain tantalisingly enigmatic; other names to drop at trendy parties are Smart Wolves, Happy Mondays and Ruby Blue. The James Taylor Quartet will undertake a country-wide tour of Pontins to rave reviews and will be subjected to a few zwd suggestions from old ladies. A record company will send me a T-shirt that doesn't shrink in the wash.

RIPLEY 3 4 88

Noise as a commodity will return in force. Throbbing Gristle will reform, teenage youths will perform a homage to Einsturzende Neubauten and everyone will catch up with the now defunct Negativland. Actually, '88 will see the usual old rubbish happening, the dreamers will meet in bunkers, William Burroughs will probably peg out and Nurse With Wound will sign to Virgin.

MARTIN ASTON 3 4 88

They Might Be Giants will be loved for their folk-pop, weird-pop, art-pop, chart-pop, polka-pop and for pointing out the humour in seriousness.

Dorothy, (that's Gina and Vicky from The Raincoats, a quality as yet untested, but sure to prove one of Britain's most sublime textures.

Les Thugs, French rock 'n' roll greats who go beyond the usual garage-rock grunge to a rock that's as sleek as it is combustible.

DICK MESCAL 3 4 88

The Wonder Stuff have the right sort of rebellious attitude that should give them super stardom.

The Jack Rubies, with two excellent singles under their collective belts and a live show that has now been honed to perfection, will move upwards towards national acclaim.

Bam Bam And The Calling; on the heels of That Petrol Emotion comes another Northern Ireland band who burn and splutter on a short but powerful fuse.

ROBERT COHEN 3 4 88

1988 will be the year REM, That Petrol Emotion and The Pogues either make it massive or disband in disgusted despair. It'll also be the year Thatch sells off shares in Great Britain. Think I'll buy Chelmsford

NICK MIDDLES 3 4 88

A precocious arrogant brat named Johnny Dangerously will, armed with a songwriting talent that would turn Elvis Costello green with envy, begin to make waves before the summer. Yargo will sign a huge deal and begin to attain legendary status. The Waltonones will meet Simon Bates.

CHRIS HUNT 3 4 88

Cambridge United in a 4th Division promotion race, love, peace and understanding for all. The Jim Jimlines will take their infectious enthusiasm far, The Sandkings will do something delicious with harmonies and The Moments will set a lifeless indie scene alight with their hard, sharp guitar pop. Dead crucial!

CHRIS MELLOR 3 4 88

Morrissey will make a cut-up dance track with Derek B called Hang The DJ, and get the number one he always wanted.

A new ten year rule will come into effect — all famous musos who have been working for longer will be forced to stop — farewell Mick Jagger, Paul Weller, U2 etc etc.

A new radio station called Noise FM will start broadcasting feedback, white noise, and other mayhem — all in glorious stereo.

DAZ IGYMETH 3 4 88

The bike boots of Kill Devil Hills will stamp all over your spotty, poppy backs, The Zodiac Motel will be applying a psychic, sonic scalpel to the fatty tissues of your brain and, lastly, The Wonder Stuff will polish up your dancing kneecaps to a fine sheen. Resolutely ripping!

ALEX KADIS 3 4 88

My money's on Abstract dead certs, that despicably young and talented groove thang, The Incredible Zombi Rockers. Another safe bet should be The Low Gods who are conveniently featured in this issue's TND. Given sufficient airing their excellent songs will be temptation enough to prise open even the rustiest of A&R cheque books! Watch out for rank outsiders Faster Pussycat Kill Kill who could be in with a chance provided they can find a haircut upon which they all agree!

JOHNNY DEE 3 4 88

Reserve: My favourite brand of sentimental guitar pop.
The Doris Days: Scrummy acoustic melodies for romantic intellectuals;
North Of Cornwallis: excellent vocals and a shopping basketful of smashing, catchy songs.

All three heartbound and chart-bound, for sure.

MATS LUNDGREN 3 4 88

Probe Plus is taking over the dirty noise trash; just listen to the Walking Seeds LP Skull, or Cyclic Amp's Ugly As Power and The Midnight Show's Trussed By Buddha.

The Great Leap Forward debut album will stun the world.

Age Of Chance will reform with the remains of Big Black.

DAVE HENDERSON 3 4 88

Miaow will record and release a glorious debut album and the press will promote them as the "new" Pretenders.

Medium Cool will get in the national charts with any one of The Corndollies, The Waltonones, The Raw Herbs, The Siddleys or The Rain.

The 4AD share floatation scheme boosted by incredibly groovy Frazier Chorus debut LP.

Party poopers!

The Bomb Party

have come of age with Liberace Rising. Let the world of rubber rise up in praise!

"Oh, really? Are you prepared to commit yourself to that statement?" Did I really just tell Hispanic sex God and Bomb Party joke man Andy 'Jesus' Mosquera that his lyrics are observant, contemporary and relevant?! Hardly a fitting statement when considered in the light of past press condemnation, I know, but nevertheless an appropriate description and judging by his reaction, a rather tender subject.

I know what you think: The Bomb Party are another bunch of dipsomaniac beer-swilling bozos, hooked on trad grebo sexism and inverted snobbery; controversialist champions of the thrash ethic, catering for a minority of nomadic goths feeling short-changed and disillusioned after The Cult got wise to a situation! Of course, the band themselves have done little to rectify the image. Their 'alternative' interview technique leaves a lot to be said in favour of stuffy old protocol! I'd hate to dispel a good myth — after all we thrive on them don't we?

So I'm pleased to be able to confirm that I found the band in the local watering hole where Andy was demonstrating his vast repertoire of bottom anecdotes and faux pas. Indeed, Sarah Corina (bass), Leszek Rataj (guitar) and Steve Gerrard (guitar) all seemed equally well versed in tales of the nether regions and there was much talk of projectile bananas and willies in matchboxes. A right old rumpus, there's no denying it! But get The Bomb Party in conference and it's a different story. Perhaps it was the sedatory effect of the Ug drinking chocolate, or possibly a certain justified pride in their excellent, recently released, Liberace Rising LP on Upright, who knows? Either way, the touch paper had been set alight and the grebos were ready to explode into serious conversation!

WHAT'S A BLOODY GREBO?

Well it's as good a start as any!

Andy: "What's a bloody grebo? It's just a word someone invented — it means nothing."

Sarah: "The thing is that no-one is prepared to put us into a category — to really commit themselves to a statement."

Andy: "I think that's 'cause there's nothing really obvious to latch onto with us. We're not grebos and we're not bikers or any of that shit."

Andy: "I don't know why people have attempted to put us into this grebo thing. Whenever I've liked a group, I've liked them for what they gave me, not what they were. When I used to sit in my room and listen to Iggy Pop and Lou Reed I liked them because they gave you something special — themselves. They didn't say, 'I'm a junkie, I'm a transvestite, I'm a grebo'. At the end of the day I'd rather have a small minority relate to us for what The Bomb Party is, for real reasons, rather than a large mass of people who like you because your hair is long or your zips are broken."

That takes care of what they're not. So what are they?

Andy: "We're experimental. But we don't feel that we have to keep saying it. It's like the difference between The Butthole Surfers and The Swans; The Buttholes don't have to say they're experimentalists to be taken seriously, whereas The Swans say they are experimentalists and they're about as risque as a bloke wearing underpants in a nudist colony! What I'm saying is that of course we're not just bloody grebos. We are experimentalists but we don't have to say we're political and we credit our audience with enough intelligence to suss it out for themselves."

AND IT'S GETTING BEYOND A JOKE...

Reactionary words from the humorous one, eh? It's not the first time that the BP's intentions have been doubted or misunderstood: In fact, one critic went as far as saying that there was no danger of taking them seriously at all!

Steve: "Saying that you can't take us seriously is like saying that you can't take Woody Allen seriously. You have to see beyond the joke or you're seriously missing the point."

Andy: "It's so frustrating. We're all qualified and capable of doing £500 a week jobs, but we choose to do music because it's the most important thing to us."

So why cloud your sensibility with comic presentation? Andy: "I think people flock to comedians because life is tragic and life is wonderful and the best thing to do is to laugh at it. If you can laugh at the most gruesome things in life then it's a salvation, but what happens is that through journalists and lazy people and ourselves not presenting things in the correct way the meaning gets lost and people miss the point."

Steve: "I think that we just have a healthy cynicism."

Sarah: "We don't go on stage to be deliberately wacky and jokey, we behave how we feel and that's just us being natural."

Bomb Party with token erection

Andy: "I think we're people who stand back and look at the world, for us it's not a matter of life is being born and dying, it's what goes on in between, that's important, the process involved and not the end product."

Presumably, it's dangerous talk like this which results in the BP being branded as anti-social, amoral animals!

Andy: "No, I think it's 'cause we don't accept dogmatic values and we say 'create your own values'. We try to be honest and to be true to the essential things in life. To get the best out of life. The best doesn't mean money in the bank it means to have lived your life and before you die to have become a better and wiser person. All the taboos about sex and drugs are just shit. I feel that to kill someone in anger is more justifiable than going to war and killing someone in cold blood just 'cause the state justifies it. You're right, it's dangerous talk but it's our attitude and because of it we've been seen as immoral."

THROWAWAY? LIKE HELL WE ARE!

Shocked yet? I wasn't. Sure, there's always going to be that cock-eyed view of the world as seen through the learned eyes of The Bomb Party, but listen beyond the dense layers of Liberace Rising's construction and it falls into place quite succinctly really. Quite some progression!

Steve: "I think we've come a long way in the way that we say things. I think we've grown up a lot since Drugs, our first album."

Andy: "I think our situation in life has changed too. Different things have happened and we've become more sophisticated in our approach. I think we were late developers."

And have the critics noticed that development at long last?

Andy: "There's a Spanish song on the new album El Savor Del Amor — the taste of love — and that song has been totally overlooked simply because people don't understand Spanish but I'm actually very proud of those lyrics — they're the best thing I've ever written — it's poetry."

Steve: "Yeah, they're so good he won't tell anyone what they mean!"

Andy: "It's just a straight love song, really. But we didn't put it on the LP as a gimmick which seems to be the opinion — I mean, I'm Spanish so why not sing in Spanish — there's a few Spiks in England."

Steve: "Perhaps they'll buy the album then!"

Perhaps they will. True rock revelations or sophisticated bullshit? The choice is yours. I know what I think and what the hell, as they say in Andy's home town, yo se que solamente rock y roll pero yo ciera — now there's profound for you! Alex Kadis

The James Taylor Quartet get organ-ised!

With the prevailing indie trend for anorak-clad-shambling-despondency and sub-Buzzcocks riffs 'n' romanticism, the success of The James Taylor Quartet is nothing short of phenomenal. A year ago it would have been inconceivable for a Hammond organ-based group, with a hip line in Booker T/ Ramsey Lewis-style instrumentals, to be challenging hard at the head of the indie charts. But challenge they did, and following the Blow Up single and the Mission Impossible mini-album into the indie charts is the first JTQ long-player, The Money Spyder.

"It's an album in the true sense of the word because it was recorded over a period of a year in different studios, in different towns, in back gardens, in bedrooms, all over the place," says the man with the Hammond. "The whole thing is to present an album of instrumentals and for it not to get boring — which is a rare thing with instrumental albums."

The mini-album saw the JTQ arrange a selection of songs as diverse as the Sale Of The Century theme and Simon and Garfunkel's Mrs Robinson. The new album is bnmming with self-compositions.

"Our own songs are much more challenging and draw from all angles of inspiration, you can show what you're really into a lot better, it's not just a jazz thing or a film theme thing."

Jumping to conclusions I would have thought that the JTQ had driven themselves into a very brave, but nonetheless narrow, dead-end with their jazzy organ approach to pop. Aren't they going to find their avenues of progression restricted?

"No, I've thought about that," explains James. "If you think about it really, what we're doing is the bare minimum, there are no rules. We've started using singers, we can use brass, we can use a whole orchestra. We can go where we want and how we want with the basic idea of making good music using Hammond organ. There are so many possibilities. . . We're good, but I want us to get better and better, none of us are ever satisfied with what we've got, we always want to push further."

Immediate plans include a trip to Germany to do what the Quartet enjoy doing best: "playing in small cafes and bars with the audience around you." Vinyl plans include a single that sees the band utilising the services of a French girl voice for the Taylor arrangement of The Girl From Ipanema. And if that doesn't storm the staid bastions of the Radio One playlist then. . . well, I'm lost for words! Chris Hunt

The La. means we're moody, man!

The La's earn 'totally normal' tag!

Ask The La's why they signed a recording contract with Go! Discs and they'll all start chattering away in broad Liverpool accents: "Aw, it's that Andy y'know. . . he's just got it. . . he really seemed to mean it y'know. . . and like, all the others seemed keen, but you could tell that Andy was into it more. . ."

- The Andy they refer to is of course Andy McDonald, the self-styled Mr Nice of Pop and chief executive of "West London's Hippest Record Label" (his words, not mine), Go! Discs.
- Six months ago The La's were based in Liverpool and playing regularly to enthusiastic crowds, and the usual gaggle of dithering A&R persons, when their manager sent a demo tape to the Underground Tip Sheet. The guest critic was Andy McDonald and he was so bowled over by their cassette, he didn't just demand a copy to take home, he actually went off and signed the band up. Eat your heart out Victor Kiam.
- Now their debut single, Way Out, is receiving flattering critiques from DJs, journalists, Stephen Morrissey even, and the band are installed in a West London flat where they are free to lounge about drinking beer, and reflect on the twist of fate that brought them and Go! Discs together.
- "We're really pleased with the way things are," says bassist John Power from beneath his mop of curly hair. "It's not like it's any big deal with Andy, or a big thing to try and get through to him about stuff we want to talk about. He only lives up the road so it's dead convenient."
- "I think scousers have got a talent for telling if people are genuine or not," adds drummer John Timpson. "There was a lot of other people around telling us we were brilliant and that, but we could tell that Andy meant it. He's not really into it for profit margins, it's more like he actually gets a buzz out of seeing a band make it, and that means something." Trying to talk to guitarist/singer Lee Masters is not easy, partially due to a taxing recording schedule which he says has left him fatigued, but also due to the surrounding roomful of people.
- Questions about songwriting are answered with an aggressive stare that other journalists confirm as being par for the course.
- Suffice to say his songs manage to combine enormous chart potential with the finest pop/rock heritage. We are talking Pete Townshend, Peter Perrett, John Lennon, Buddy Holly, Ray Davies here. . .
- I leave the La's drinking beer and arguing with their manager and soundman about different types of studio. They all get up and politely shake my hand as I depart, and like the owner of their record company, seem such nice people. It makes you begin to wonder if they really are completely normal. Soon the rest of the UK will have the chance to decide. The La's deserve to be absolutely massive! Julian Henry

Fit to pop!

James Taylor: a thinking guy

Hearts made of glass!

The Waltones go totally ga-ga!

"People laugh behind my back, I can see their smiling faces." (She Looked Right Through Me)

I had a dream the other night, James Knox (vocal and harmonica of The Waltones) was walking through the streets of Manchester talking to himself. "Oh shit, I'm talking to myself," murmured a blushing James. He then tripped up and landed on his face in the middle of the downtown shopping centre. A crowd of shoppers gathered around him, grannies clutched their Morrisons bags tightly as they stared down at the young man. James laughed loudly, picked himself up, wiped the gravy off his jumper and ran away singing a Shangri-las song. (Are you feeling alright, Johnny? — Ed.)

- The thing that makes the Waltones stand out, is the strength of their songwriting — they've got more than a couple of good songs (they've already had two singles this year, Downhill and She Looks), why, they've got a shopping trolley full!
- James: "Essentially we are a melodic, British beat group."
- Mark (guitar): "It's pop..."
- But not bland.
- Alex (drums): "No we've got good, strong songs. They're not whimsical in any way."
- The Waltones write love songs — love songs where girls are taking the piss out of you, where you are knowingly making a fool of yourself — but most of all they're pop songs. Meaty, beaty, big and bouncy. Voice, guitar, bass, drums and blues-wailing harmonica — early Rolling Stones with grins and plimsoles. (eh?)
- Smiling's a pretty damn un-hip thing to do onstage, but James does it with style. It's corny, it's a 1957 Colgate advert, but it's loud and infectious — nothing like the kind of sick-inducing "I'm a horny Glaswegian" zip-emblazoned-on-the-faces of Wet Damp Moist. This is a loveable smile, a brighter smile, a better kind of smile.
- Cheeeese?
- James: "The first time we played, I just smiled, it just seemed natural. Now I do it without thinking."
- Manny: "People think you're an eccentric, James. They come up to me and say 'I saw your lead singer the other day singing to himself in Oxford Road'."
- Eccentric or not, James is a bit of a calendar boy, I can see Waltones glossy poster mags in the sweaty palms of disco dollies. Better buy some Blu Tack before the demand gets too much. Johnny Dee Tongue twisters!

Biting Tongues spit out the vinyl!

I used to hate Biting Tongues. It wasn't a wild, casual kind of hate either, but a vicious irrational hate. The kind I'd normally reserve for the likes of ELO or Leslie Crowther.

- They were so irritatingly pretentious. I'd see them literally invent an entire live set prior to walking on stage. The result would be half an hour which sounded like Dennis The Menace constructing a garden shed and yet passed, amazingly, for spirited white boy funk.
- But thankfully, Biting Tongues have softened over the years. While normally this would be considered as a gradual relinquishing of ethics, to be followed by a hasty scramble for the readies, with Biting Tongues it is to be wholly encouraged. They are now eminently listenable and yet manage to sound quite unlike anything else on this planet.
- "We used to enjoy confusing people," states the Biting Tongue called Howard, rather confusingly, before adding, "We would deliberately produce an unlistenable noise just to upset the audience. I think we found it satisfying."
- "I found it immensely satisfying," claims another Biting Tongue, this time called Graham. He seems to relish the band's esoteric past. But Biting Tongues are out of the closet. Their new flagship is a brilliantly evocative single, Compressor, which sits proudly in the centre of their Ikon video compilation, Wall Of Surf.
- Howard: "I think it's fair to say that Wall Of Surf is a genuine extension of the music. It isn't flashy. It isn't trying to sell anything. It's taken us 18 months to compile and I think that is represented by quality, although it's very much quality on a shoestring. The point is, if you are not sympathetic towards what we are doing then you could quite easily label it as pretentious or self-indulgent and justify those criticisms. It does need to be viewed with an open mind although it is far more accessible than anything we would have done a few years ago."
- Biting Tongues have become filmmakers. This new title suits them. Maybe their wilderness years were spent helplessly splashing about because they had yet to stumble across their true medium. The Compressor segment of Wall Of Surf is the finest piece of creative video I've witnessed this year, in fact it's the ONLY creative video I've seen this year. Granted, with a relative shoestring budget, Biting Tongues have managed to step aside from the promo video norm, independent or otherwise.
- I don't hate them anymore. Their self-indulgence, which still fuels their every movement, has become interesting, invigorating even. The only problem they face now, is how to choose the correct road from the network of possibilities they now face. After spending 18 months with their eyes glued to the viewfinder, Biting Tongues will now have to regress to the position of playing live gigs in order to promote Wall Of Surf. Ironic really but, then again, with gigs in America beckoning, the prospect of playing live has become an oddly desirable option once more. Mick Middles

Ruby's in the dust!

Pure Mcpop from Ruby Blue

- Like most nouveau artistes, Ruby Blue are pretty sure where they're going.
- "Even though there's major label interest, we're never going to compromise our feelings or music," says Rebecca Pidgeon. "We'll have to have something written in to say that we'll at least co-produce our stuff, that's an important part of our music. We don't want to be pressurised into becoming a commercial machine."
 - You know how it goes. . . Good looking actress goes home to Edinburgh in the holiday from RADA, meets up with old school chum Roger Fife, and they make wonderful music in the bedroom. Next thing you know, their demo has been waved enthusiastically in the air by Ink's Dave Kitson. The result is Ruby Blue, a band who blend classical ideas with rich production, to make supremely sophisticated pop music.
 - Influences? Let's say Joni Mitchell, Kate Bush, The Beatles, Peter Gabriel. . . the culmination of which is the dauntingly good debut LP, Glances Askances.
 - "We don't try to think about what everyone else is doing, just concentrate on ourselves. In time we want to develop a style which is just Ruby Blue," says Roger.

- For a band with such obvious chart potential, they're not big fans of today's "scene", man.
- Rebecca: "The current music scene is desperately upsetting — the charts and the things you hear on Radio 1 — especially compared to what you used to be able to watch Top Of The Pops and see something you actually liked. . ."
- Them were t'days. . . and Ruby Blue just might bring them back. Carole Linfield

Scratching frenzy!

C-Cat Trance extend the eight minute barrier

John Lewis, main-man of 'Afro-Arabic fusionists' C-Cat Trance, did not greet me in his vaguely famous Arab head-dress. In fact, he seems to have forsaken it altogether: certainly, he hasn't worn it for any of the past year's gigs. Mind you, there's only been one of them.

Still, almost as famous as the head-dress are the C-Cat cats, one of which sits on my lap as I ask John why he's moved to Brighton, leaving his band behind in Nottingham. He tells me he's attending Sussex University.

Your starter for ten: what are you reading?

"African and Asian Studies".

Of course.

"and Psychology."

Psychology. That reminds me to ask about C-Cat Trance's hypnotical connections. John says the 'Trance' bit is coincidental, but anyway, he's soon to release "a sort of relaxation/hypnosis tape," which is, "music by me, and script by a doctor acquaintance of mine who uses hypnotherapy a lot."

He seems suitably relaxed about the fact that the C-Cats are in two camps, 200 miles apart. The resultant problems are, apparently, "not insurmountable."

"People will come for the weekend who perhaps wouldn't have bothered coming across Nottingham for an evening, so in terms of recording the new album, it hasn't presented any difficulties so far."

Said album is Play Masenko Combo, and it was recorded in nearby Eastbourne — well, why go to Montserrat when the 'Showpiece and Suntrap of the South' beckons?

It (the album) seems deliberately less 'westernised' than the last one, Zouave. The vocals are well down in the mix (as we say in the biz), and with four of the seven tracks extending beyond eight minutes, it's about as far as you could get from a collection of traditional pop songs. John affirms this as a conscious manoeuvre.

"I've never felt particularly comfortable ending a song after four minutes or so because one felt one ought to. So I haven't bothered this time". Fair enough, but while most pop music is a bastardisation of some kind of folk music, C-Cat Trance often present their chosen genre in a concentrated, almost pure, form. This must render it inaccessible to many Western ears, and it has earned them accusations of trying to 'ghetto-ise' themselves.

"I'm glad you think it's pure. . . It's not deliberately aimed at being inaccessible. It's the kind of record that I would buy if I heard it, therefore to me it's accessible."

Which leads me to wonder whether the lack of British record sales has been of great concern. The answer seems to be no.

"The pleasure that I derive from doing it is in making the records. Selling the records is something I don't particularly involve myself in. I could spend all day, every day, phoning shops to make sure they were stocked, and hustling people, saying, 'You've gotta write about our band', and 'You've gotta give us some gigs', and 'We really should be on your TV programme, because we look really wacky', but it probably wouldn't make any difference in the long run, anyway." Shoot out at cool trout!

Jesse Garon And The Desperadoes tell crap jokes!

There is something about Jesse Garon And The Desperadoes that just makes you smile. Maybe it's those groovy bass-lines, the friendliness they exude, or it could be because they are "a pretty goddam well-connected band". Yes The Desperadoes are fun, but not tacky fun! With it fun.

THE JESSE GARON AND THE DESPERADOES GUIDE TO... JESSE GARON AND THE DESPERADOES

Margarita on Bruce: "Bruce is the boss, he used to have long, curly hair. He keeps trying to put Led Zeppelin riffs in our songs."

Bruce on John: "John is very, very old. We try to keep him on his feet. We just about keep him ticking over."

John on Fran: "Thank you, Bruce. Fran is the singer with the band, she opens her mouth and she sings. She's quite a good singer."

Fran on Margarita: "Margarita is our colourful, opinionated, self-styled drummer. She's the tower of strength in the band."

Margarita on Angus: "Angus plays bass. He's quite messy — he leaves the sink dirty in the morning."

Angus on Andrew: "Angus is the big ears of the band — the loving couple. He's very understanding and listens to all our problems. He formed the band, so we kind of worship and look up to him, like a dad."

THE JESSE GARON HIT FACTORY

Andrew: "There's two kinds of love song. There's — "oooh the flowers are growing, the sun is in the sky, I'm so happy and I'm in love". Then there are the ones where the boy, or girl, in question breaks your heart."

Margarita: "The new single's about Andrew's heartache as usual."

Fran: "I sing a very meaningful chorus that goes — "la, la, la, la, la" — a bit like Bobby Gillespie."

Are all your songs about love?

Angus: "Not all of them."

Margarita: "We used to have a song called Cemetary Of Jews which certainly wasn't a love song. A bit goddam gothy actually."

Andrew: "I find it difficult to write political songs, because you're either ambiguous and people don't know what you're talking about, or you've got to mention big words like 'Nicaragua'."

Margarita: "And you sound like Sham 69."

Andrew: "We're all pissed off that Scotland voted Labour and we're under a Tory government. I thought I should write a song about it, because it's pertinent, but I couldn't because it's too important."

Angus: "We are really a very socially aware band."

Andrew: "We are The Style Council."

How do you feel about people dismissing you as just another superficial and twee guitar band?

Margarita: "Surely anybody with a bit of taste can see through that. We're pretty goddam commercial though."

Why?

Margarita: "There's nothing obscure about us we write really melodic tunes."

Angus: "We think quite a lot about labels. We don't want to stay on an independent forever."

Margarita: "We want to be snapped up."

NO BLEEP 'TIL THE COOL TROUT BASEMENT

Live, Jesse Garon And The Desperadoes are very appealing and likeable. Andrew tells awful jokes that embarrass the rest of the band. Generally they enjoy themselves.

Andrew: "Last time we played in Brighton this guy rushed up to me in the middle of the set while I was backstage tuning up, snorting coke, etcetera. I think he was Australian. He goes: 'Get back up there immediately, you're so talented'. All I was doing was breaking strings and telling crap jokes."

What do you do on tour between gigs?

Margarita: "Angus and I have a travelling gynaecological roadshow in the back of the van. We have stirrups and a pointed stick. It finances the tour. Angus does the stirrups and I do the pointed stick."

DISCOTHEQUE FRENZY — JESSE RIDES 'EM RAW

The Desperadoes are not startlingly original but they are pretty goddam well connected at what they do — basic guitar pop.

Margarita: "Something you can dance to and that reminds you of things. Something that makes you feel brilliant."

Angus: "We try hard."

Andrew: "We're not Black Lace yet."

Fran: "But we're thinking about it." Johnny Dee

SON OF SAM

SONGS, MURDER, STARCH and FAME!

Son Of Sam on the pop spiral with blood on their hands...

OK, what's the easiest way to categorise Son Of Sam? They're a group with the name of a murderer — a bizarre murderer who was instructed by his neighbours' dog. They kicked off playing inaudible dance music, they did a feminist 45 called Dangerous Age For A Woman, they're from Leeds, they're three guys and they've just released an LP, with The Good Shepherds in tow, called Rich And Famous (subtitled Eight Songs Of Greed). That's pretty much it, I suppose.

"Actually," pipes up Chris Bishop, centre-stage Son, "there's more to the name than that. When we originally thought of it, it was like England being the son of Uncle Sam image, but people tend to grab the obvious thing."

And that seems to be the thing with most of Son Of Sam's visual nuances too. The obvious photographs of guns and eastern bloc regalia looks, at first trendy, then a little threatening when linked to the name. Why, their label's even pseudo-Russian with it's red Rouska logo and constant stream of marketing devices, like badges, political pamphlets and the like!

Rouska tsar, Martinski looks bemused at the idea... "What?" he mutters in Leeds cityspeak.

But let's get back to Son Of Sam and their strange progression from obscurist throbbing noise to today's plausible pop for all people.

The first faltering steps were released on the Leeds label Final Image with a simplistic cover and the grand title, The Golden Age Of Disco. The noise was hostile, the album was cut at 45 and decidedly low-fi as a result. In total, little happened, Chris moved to London, and to all intents and purposes Son Of Sam had been strangled at birth.

"I was in the process of trying to do things in London and totally by surprise there was a knock on the door and there was Richard," Martin of Rouska's partner, "suggesting that I should get back to Leeds and resurrect things."

Martin: "Me and Richard had heard the Son Of Sam record again and we'd forgotten just how good it was. We just thought, you know, these lot are better than the rest of the rubbish that's about, what are they doing now?"

"And we were doing nothing," continues Chris.

The resulting union came to fruition last year when Son Of Sam provided a stand-out track for a Rouska four-track ten-inch compilation called Profane Nine, that was followed in March of this year by the chunky dance sound of One KBPM.

Hot on its plastic heels came Dangerous Age For A Woman, a surprisingly different sound that saw SOS mellow in construction, while becoming more outspoken, in this case on feminist issues.

"I think people could easily say that it was just a token gesture, but I think it goes beyond that. It baffled a lot of people too as they only knew us as the band who did One KBPM and this was so different."

And the new LP follows the same route, being more song-orientated, more soulful, less obvious, say. Chris has done his studies into song construction well. He knows how to put things together for the best effect and how to exploit his co-Sam's. The other two current members, Robbie on keyboards and Slim on guitar and other things, were augmented by The Good Shepherds on the album, a unit that now boasts a female singer, who Chris claims will enliven English music and generally allow people to shed some of the wax from their ears. Chris and Slim's involvement in creating new songs for her will culminate in a, dare we say, commercial mini-LP in the new year through Rouska, allowing Chris in his mantle of Son Of Sam to get more edge into SOS and allow them to be harder again.

"Well, that's on my mind at the moment but that may not happen when it comes to it. The idea behind Son Of Sam is that we change with every release, so people don't know what we will do."

So how does Chris see Son Of Sam ending up? In which direction will they go?

Chris: "I dunno. I mean when I say we'll be getting harder, that's what I feel like at the moment, but I've always really liked slushy things like John Barry, that string sound, it would be impossible just to exclude all that."

There isn't a definite plan and easy box to put Son Of Sam in and Chris' self-criticism, coupled with his desire to write good songs has made him a discerning character who won't take second best — and who isn't totally satisfied with anything the group have done yet.

"I suppose the happiest I've been with anything is 80 per cent, it's just taken so long to learn how to do everything, you know going through The Beatles' songbook from front to back to learn how to do it, then when you've grasped that, you find out there's another way to do it, then it's a question of balancing the two."

The strangest thing in this equation and re-education is that Son Of Sam are so close to a point when they can tell the name, and the music, back to the Motherland — America. But will that name be a problem, similarly, will the imagery make it difficult? As Son Of Sam get bigger, and closer to the bosom of a generation still hungover from the lip of Mary Whitehouse and the moral majority, Son Of Sam, the guns, the hardcore image is going to hit some brick walls.

"I hope that people can see through all that, can see the irony in it, but you can never tell if people will. In a way it's even funnier because being a group we're just like the rest of the industry who are basically going out and demanding money from people with menaces."

Well, perhaps Mark Knopfler et al don't quite see themselves in that way, but I can see your point. So Son Of Sam are there for the challenge!

"Yes, rather than dealing with easy subject matters, we tend to work more in the dark and hope that people will understand the implications, we hope that we can make something out of the grey areas."

People groping for answers through music could do worse than follow up the Son Of Sam experience. It isn't cut and dried, it's not a simple way to understand the complexities of life, but it'll make you happy and sad... and pose sufficient questions.

The name may not be a simple pastiche of the original Son Of Sam, but the group's bizarre approach to life is nearly as irrational as Sam #1's idea that he was instructed by his neighbour's dog to dispose of courting couples, then spraypaint his name across their cars, like an artist signing his work.

AD LIBITUM AND. . .

Mary: "Right, Alex, this is a quote. OK — get this down — we'd like to just say the film industry is full of more shit than the music industry and the music industry is full of shit!"

Robber and Kev: "Yeah, we'll go with that!"

Mary: "It was filmed on location in London, Essex and Kent."
Robber: "Actually, it was the Gobi desert. C'mon Mary, let's be a bit exotic about this, please. Right, it was filmed in Bahrain, Vietnam, Chernobyl. . ."

Mary: "We wanted to document what was happening to us, the whole thing is basically the story of our situation. We're not so pretentious as to say it's a comment on the music scene but it is a comment on what happens to bands like us. A satire? Yeah, it is a satire. We're a satire band, we've always been the sort of satire that people can't dispose of or ignore because it's not a throwaway satire like Zodiac Mindwarp. . ."

Kev: "It was a good way of enabling us to live out our fantasies which we were able to do because we were given a lot of money!"

Robber: "Basically, it was us making a film about us making a lot of money and overspending by about £100,000! That's what it was about!"

Kev: "We spent £200,000! We now owe about £50,000 and we now have no money. THAT'S what the film was about!"

Mary: "Obviously, we'd never done a big budget film before so we didn't really know what to do and certain people did take advantage of us."

Robber: "Namely Debbie Mason who had champagne dinners. Namely Mike Pike who edited it and who f us off and David Bartram who took the piss out of us even though he was our friend. But I'm not squabbling about it. THE FILM WAS SHIT!!!"

Mary: "Basically we signed to a major and we wanted to make a product and Drill Your Own Hole is a 1960's early '70s philosophy concept which is a dreadfully unfashionable thing to do."

Mary: "It wasn't shit but it wasn't how we had envisaged it."

Robber: "The next one will be a thousand times better."

Kev: "May I remind you that you are talking to two people here who are more pessimistic than someone waiting on Death Row!"

Mary: "Well, it's the old case of learning by your mistakes. When you delegate things you're bound to lose a bit of what you originally intended — that's what happens."

And folks, that's what happens when you invite Gaye Bykers On Acid to participate in a little improvisation! These recently initiated thespians are sitting behind a steadily growing pile of empty glasses, it's several rum and blacks into the evening and it's probably not the best time to ask them about their brilliant new Drill Your Own Hole film released on Virgin's subsidiary Purple Fluid Exchange. "You can't say that interviewing us isn't exciting can you?" says vocalist Mary as Robber stuffs another flatful of Twiglets into my mouth. No Mary, always exciting, always a pleasure but never an easy task, and now there's this celluloid repository of wit and wisdom thing with which to contend!

Directed by the, hem hem, aforementioned David Bartram, and written by Alas Smith And Jones' Paul Davies, Drill Your Own Hole is, superficially, a visual ode to the wacky-byko-humour and cynicism. Theoretically, it's the story of a naïve young rock band who are unwittingly drawn into a game of chance and endeavour — that's rock and roll! A jucious red-lipped oracle invites the boys into the shrewd world of commercial success and all its wranglings with the immortal line, "Hello boys, would you like to play with me?" An offer not to be refused by any normal, healthy, hot-blooded young Byker I'm sure you'll agree! Once hooked, the ball is whisked, Lion, The Witch And The Wardrobe-wise into the world of The Game. Very War Games, and very intriguing. What follows is a series of confrontations which our heroes must deal with correctly in order to gain maximum credit points and achieve the ultimate goal—PAY OFF! In actual fact it means much more as the stars of the silver screen explain — only this time we'll stick with the script! Let's start around the middle of the film, which is as good a place as any; the beginning never seems to be a logical outset with these people!

The band have just gone down like 'a pork trough at a Bah Mitzvah' at a redneck bar in the back of beyond. Suffering essential loss of points, the oracle advises them on their next move.

ACTION!

And here I quote: "As you may know, music journalists are a sub-human life form just below tape worms on the evolutionary scale. Your task is to persuade these pitiful retards to give you some good press."

OK, I'll rise to that bait!

Mary: "It's a cliché! The whole thing's a cliché! The band's a cliché! Basically, it's the age old thing of thinking that most journalists are full of shit — which they are!"

Except that Gaye Bykers On Acid have always done very well out of the music press. They've been one of the few bands intelligent and sharp enough to realise that they have to be endearing before they can be shocking! Whatever the technique — and it's always changing, they've managed to capture the attention of scribblers everywhere!

Mary: "Of course! That's why we called the film and the album Drill Your Own Hole. We knew it would get bad press."

And any press is good press...

Mary: "Some of the quotes that you hear in that scene are actual quotes. The thing is that we've been seen as unintelligent and mindless individuals but we're as complex as The Sisters Of Mercy and they're seen as some kind of well of wisdom!"

HEY! HEY! WE'RE THE MONKEES!

After a disastrous appearance as The Lesbian Dopeheads On Mopeds on Credibility Knox, the band continue their search for credit gain and board The Zen Express to Vegas. They have a choice of two buses; the 1968 and 1976. The occupants of both indulge in various rock and roll shenanigans indigenous to their respective species. And in the true tradition of exquisite Bykie irony, each ends up taking on the other's characteristics.

Mary: "That's because they did, basically! That Zen Express scene was very Lowryesque, actually. Everything that's in his cartoons, politics aside, seems to be about shifts in culture. In fact, most of the scenes in the film were Lowry cartoons brought to life which is why we asked Ray to help us visualise the script, which he did very well. The Zen Express scene showed that everything we wanted to create was a recouard fantasy, and it's the media who've killed off those fantasies. It seems that everything that happened before 1977, people just want to close the door on it, but it's relevant."

In what way?

Mary: "I was talking to Steve Mack from That Petrol Emotion the other day and he said that we were all hippies. He's a hippy. He said to me, 'You know your problem, Mary, is that you should admit to being a hippy'. And I said, 'I dunno, should I?'. But he's right. Anybody who thinks about their surroundings and what's going on must have a sensibility and a good idea."

Is that your favourite scene then?

Mary: "Yeah, one of them anyway. It's a good song isn't it? It sounds like The Beatles — it actually sounds like The Beatles!"

And The Monkees...

Mary: "Yeah, well, you know we like The Monkees anyway. There's a lot of indie bands who say they're like The Monkees and so they wear red polo-necked sweaters, but you don't have to look like a band or sound like a band to have the same sort of energy as them, and I think we have the same sort of energy as The Monkees."

Just how much was Drill Your Own Hole inspired by The Monkees film? And what about Zappa and The Beatles?

Mary: "Oh yeah, it was influenced by all of them — very much so. They were all great and I do think they've stood the test of time."

Will people be watching DYOH in 20 years time?

Kev: "In 20 years time who are people gonna be watching? They're gonna be watching Boy George or Cure videos or are they gonna be watching GBOA films? I'll leave that up to the Integration (presumably a neologism! — AK) of the average church-goer. I'll say no more."

Mary: "There should be more things like this really, it's needed, although I am pleased with some of the new literature that's emerging at the moment — especially comic literature which is what this band's about really. I think that people will watch our films and say, 'Why did we ever lose those attitudes and those ideas.'"

Would you ever consider doing a Monkees style TV serial?

Mary: "Yes, we'd do it! You know, our film doesn't even really differ a lot from those other films. It's just as naive."

But sharper, surely?

Mary: "Well, it's naive and sharp in the same breath. The technique is just as naive, but the comment it's making is a lot sharper, yes. It's like golf really."

Really?

Mary: "If you address the ball properly and hit it properly it'll go where you intended, if you hit it incorrectly you may slice it or cut it. We're quite fond of golf — always have been..."

Was making the film a way of escaping the conventions of normal promo vids?

Kev: "I must say that that is a very astute comment at this stage — I have no idea what you mean by it but it sounded very nice anyway."

Ah, yes. Which reminds me, the band fail ultimately because they don't take the game seriously. Will that be the real fate of GBOA?

Mary: "Yep! That's probably the reason why we'll all fall in the end! The funny thing is that people will probably think we've taken ourselves seriously from now on but we actually haven't at all!"

And how near to achieving pay off are the real Bykers?

Mary: "We're pretty close to pay off. We've made some money. We told you that we were bread heads and this is the proof! We're not ashamed to say that we want to make money and we have and we'll make more!"

So why the daunting ending to the film then?

Mary: "We don't deserve to succeed do we? We didn't want to end on a high note because life's not always like that. We'll end up back where we started because you are what you begin with. Whatever happens to you you're left with the bare essentials"

Kev: "Did someone say bare? Ooer, that sounds a bit rude doesn't it! Let's get to the real point shall we? When was the last time you were roddered by a firm buttocked young drummer from a real rock band?"

Gasp! Call for censorship and critical loss of points! I think that's what they'd call a wrap!

Clash of the Icons! The new Stupids LP, Jesus Meets the Stupids, comes shrouded in a sleeve that's liable to whip up a little controversy. Madonna and child are pictured surrounded by angelic hosts and approached by the three (wise) Stupids humbly offering gifts. Their choice of gifts have been specifically selected to give the baby Jesus a taste for the good things this temporal world has to offer; Ed Shred brings a six-pack of root beer; Tommy Stupid, a box of Animal Crackers (only the generic brand though and he has to hide his shame with a big bubble of gum); Stevie Snacks has no qualms about The Stupids cap he places on the head of the sacred infant.

I talk to Tommy in Burger King, on the next table a couple of women pore over a gruesome book of skin diseases that turns out to be A Pictorial Dictionary of AIDS. Over a cheeseburger and coke, Tommy tells me, in all seriousness, that the record cover is meant as a mark of respect.

"I hope it's not taken as blasphemous or sacrilegious but I'm sure some people will take it that way. We're not a 'religious group' as such but we all have some degree of belief. I can't dismiss Christianity because there must be something behind life... it can't just be explained away by science. I don't have any faith in science at all."

Tommy does have faith in the 'American way' or at least their way of producing food. He and Eddy take a trip across the Atlantic whenever they can, visiting their friends in California and Washington. This allows them to sample an extraordinary variety of bubblegum. US fanzine, Flesh And Bones recently did a feature on new bubblegums, among their favourites were Rambo Black Flak, Hawaiian Punk Rocker and Hot Dog (a meat flavoured gum!).

What'll you have Tommy?

"I like the ones with soft centres, there's some with wheat inside and some with root beer! These are real nice."

"The good thing about food in America is it's all geared towards kids. Everything's packaged so brightly and they give great names to everything. A swiss roll is called a Blammer! Over here it's just 'Swiss Roll', 'McVities Swiss Roll' or something, but over there it's a 'Blammer! Great!'"

'Cereal's', America's favourite cereal, championed in the '80s by a cartoon Moose and rodent, Rocky and Bullwinkle, are now endorsed by The Stupids on Jesus Meets. It's the only love song on an LP that's typically downbeat, but musically inflamed. Tommy considers it a return to form after Retard Picnic and Van Stupid and their best recording since Peruvian Vacation. Particularly impressive is the instrumental that ends side one, Pig Man.

"That's based on this book... it's our first pretentious song! I can't remember the name of the story but it's about those dorks that live on Staten Island, they pick names out of the phone book and call them up for a joke. They get through to this old man and end up chatting to him for ages. They all end up meeting him and it turns out he's dying."

And he's the Pig Man?

"Yeah, his name's Piggleten, or something, the kids all call him Pig Man."

"We did the LP real fast," boasts Tommy, "it took three days to record and mix, I read that the last Metallica album took 'em six days to record. We don't like to spend such a long time in the studio." Vachel Booth.

THE LOW GODS

Ken Scott: "Do you really want to know how we got our name?"

Well, now that you mention it. Ken Scott: "Well, originally, we were going to call ourselves — this is really naff — Scott Temple And The Low Gods! It's our surnames all put together you see, but we thought it made us sound like a Chevalier Brothers-type band. We needed a name real quick though 'cause we had a gig, so we just settled on The Low Gods and it stuck."

And let it not be said that Underground fails to recognise a deity when it comes our way! Previously recipients of the highly desired Demo Of The Month award in Tip Sheet, The Low Gods are destined to be higher Gods of a sort in 1988. Somewhere, amid their threatening thunder and rich, melodic ballads, there's a depth of character and experience which makes this a band with some serious appeal!

It's an unusual and winning combination, rather like the personalities involved: The Gods themselves are Daniel Goddard (bass and businessman), Alan Temple (drums) and Aussie guitarist Kenneth Anderson Low. Each has served unfulfilling apprenticeships in various combos of one sort or another. It's a solid threesome, based on personal affinity rather than musical compatibility, and it provides a perfect stabilising force for the reformed wrecklessness of vocalist/guitarist and ex-Wasted Youth, Ken Scott, who eventually joined the group. A simple enough sort of history. Or is it?

Ken Scott's stage performance consists of one part serious objective to three parts audacity. Inspired by his own taste for sensationalism and an uncanny empathy, he spills forth his past!

"Well, I was a registered junkie for some years and I was in prison for two years for possession of drugs. But I haven't touched hard drugs for three years now. This lot keep me on the straight and narrow!"

Alan: "He just gets pissed a lot nowadays but we'd kill him if he went back to drugs!"

Very interesting, but what has this to do with the music? You may well ask. It's a good question; the past is relevant. It's this unlikely mix of characters that fires The Low Gods' excellent brand of rock/pop. (Take your pick, it's all there.) It's a diversity which works beautifully, creating real strength and a unique kind of power. It's a music that feels... big... IMPORTANT almost. At any rate, it's persuasive enough to prise open even the rustiest of A&R cheque books and should propel the band chartwards in '88! Is that how they see their future?

Alan: "Well, it would be good if that happened — of course that's what we want but we don't want to rush things. This is a strange combination of people and it works so well, that's a very rare thing to find."

Dan: "We don't want to ruin that. We'd prefer to wait and do it properly — find a record company that really wants to push us."

Let the bidding commence. Alex Kadis

JESUS COULDN'T DRUM

Are JESUS COULDN'T DRUM the future of modern music, or just eccentric pop experimentalists out of step with the '80s?

"I think they sum up the '80s," says Jonathan Staines. "I like to feel that Jesus Couldn't Drum were a band who weren't actually involved in any kind of movement, or any kind of era of music, but just sat on the outside making notes and commenting on how absurd it was and how it affects people."

JCD are the only band I know that are a couple of solo projects masquerading as a duo with four members. When it comes to it, Jonathan and his chum Peter Pengwyn, who form the creative core of the band, can never get together to record... so they do it separately. But instead of being an obstacle to the maintenance of a group sound, it proves to be a means to an end.

"We actually try and make the whole JCD sound as unidentifiable as possible," admits Jonathan.

The third JCD album, Ruttlng Orange Peel And Blind Lemon Pie, is due out soon, collecting together a selection of the band's best material to date, and giving a preview of their forthcoming album of '60s TV theme tunes.

"It's a round-up of what's happening, sort of the end of phase one. But it's also a taster of what's to come. We've actually got around to researching the TV theme thing properly and I'm sure it's not going to be a straight copying of theme tunes, it's going to have the feeling of the programme, perhaps we'll even write new passages."

JCD experiment with sounds as well as tunes and cartoons, they live in a world of their own. But luckily for Peter and Jonathan, there is a queue of punters waiting to visit! Chris Hunt

SPACE MAGGOTS

They say that boys just wanna have fun... "incredibly young, virile and handsome rock group from Ipswich in six-track goodie-bag fiesta!" they might also say, too.

Leave It!, on Vinyl Solution, is the first piece of product from the Maggots; sorted by ex-Stupids producer Andrew Fryer, it's a cheery, raucous combination of punky guitars and catchy chorus lines. Check the vibrant verses and Rocky Horror bits of Lost Love and the trash-thrash pop of Wasted Life. It's a fine debut from this five-piece bunch of poptots; that's John 'Wild Johnny Rosco' Ruscoe on lead guitar, Clive 'Stagedive Clive' Watling on rhythm, Andrew 'Runny Brun' Brunning on vocals, Toad 'Poo Poo Idol' on the drums and Mickey 'Handsome Studbutt' Trenter on bass. And they're all really good mates too — aaah!

Mickey and John gob off down the phone and into the tape machine whirring away in the Underground portaloo-style office.

And why are you called the Space Maggots? That's the first penetrating bullet fired at the Maggoty psyche... "Well, Scruff from Perfect Daze thought of that," says Mickey. "I don't know where he got it from... before we knew about it, he'd put posters up and told everybody that was what we were called; luckily people liked it and so it stuck."

So it doesn't actually mean anything?

"No." Okay... er, what about yourselves, tell me something really interesting. "Um, I," (Mickey confesses), "pick my nose all the time and belch, and Toad looks exactly like a toad, and Andrew can fart on cue; you ask him to fart and he will — he'll carry it on for a quarter of an hour if you ask him..."

Yeah! Space Maggots plan to visit Italy in '88 and will, no doubt also be performing in and around the U.K. too. You know what to do... Daz Igyeth

THE REVOLUTION GOES ON + ON

THE LUCY SHOW

No, it isn't the return of the scatty red-headed one! Originally a four piece based in South London, this LUCY SHOW are a band comprised of Canadian duo Rob Vandeven and Mark Bando-la. All the same it's a pretty wacky name for a group isn't it?

Mark: "We were drunk one night — it wasn't our fault!"

Rob: "I have to be honest now because I've told so many different stories! We were talking one night — I don't think we even had a group at that stage — and it struck us as extremely funny that The Lucy Show would make a good name for a band!"

Oh, I can just imagine them clutching their sides in raucous raptures, can't you readers?

Mark: "You had to be there to appreciate it, I guess!"

But is the title the only '60s influence?

Rob: "I think a lot of our influences, and the music we choose to listen to, does originate from the '60s but we're not striving to be a '60s band at all. NOT AT ALL!"

Originally signed to A&M, The Lucy Show released their debut album in '85. Just as they looked set for mass adulation and world domination... the rot set in, as it tends to in this volatile little trade. 'Due to company politics' (i.e. "A&M got rid of us." — Mark), the boys found themselves out on their ear, as it were.

The following deal with Big Time, their present label, meant big changes; Determined to rid their music of its squeaky-clean feel, their second album, Mania, was an attempt to return to a more rootsy, live feel.

John Leckie, called to their attention through his work with The Fall, was brought in to produce and The Lucy Show turned into a duo. Mark, master of the mixed metaphor, explains:

"Basically, it had become sour grapes. The steam had run out and no-one was putting any energy into it."

Rob: "The first album was created as a four piece but Mania was more Mark and I sitting in the director's chair with John, while the others seemed lost for ideas. It just seemed like the natural thing to do, to start working alone. It's an awkward situation for us but there's no regrets."

Mark: "I think this could be the best incarnation yet." Alex Kadis

TWELVE 88 CARTEL

I.G. is one third of Twelve 88 Cartel, two and a half years into their mission to explore strange new worlds, to boldly go where no band from Portsmouth has gone before. (Un-interesting fact number one. A new Star Trek TV series is currently being filmed in Hollywood, set 88 years after the original stories).

So far the Cartel's epic jour-

THE SINGING RINGING TREE

If you want a job doing well, do it yourself. Who said that? Norman Fowler? Possibly! Simon Broady must have thought about it very seriously. For it is he who is, more or less, THE SINGING RINGING TREE — he is singer, songwriter, guitarist, plugger, PR man and the brains behind Sample Records, the label on which the group have their debut single Good Day Good.

"The main pitfall of trying to get on in music is the fact that you have to rely so heavily on other people."

There speaks the voice of experience. Simon, and the three other members of the Stockport group, were part of the highly touted Live For The Weekend who came oh-so-close to signing with the little known back street label Virgin. But any bitter feelings have subsequently flowered into those of purpose and resolve.

"We're giving ourselves every chance."

This entails promoting the single — pestering the press and every known radio station — and putting the thought of the telephone bill right to the back of the mind.

"Ideally, I'd like to do everything right here in the house — recording, the lot."

And there speaks ambition.

Good Day Good is a country-based song, shuffling and catchy. Plans are already afoot for the follow-up, which may have a version of Last Train To Clarksville included in the package. From the very same era ney has taken them over the water to Gosport, and even as far as Bournemouth. ("Bournemouth is quite hip, actually.") But now, at last, they've descended upon Mega City One, the Big Cit, the Cap, well almost. For, while the Mean Fiddler is perhaps the best small venue in London, it is sadly situated in an almost obscure suburb in the back of beyond. No problem for a starship commander, but a slight handicap to a fairly unknown provincial band who've yet to gain much media recognition, and who are trying to pull a new audience. Still, media attention is what the venue is all about. Welcome.

Twelve 88 Cartel are a raucous, throbbing cacophony of sound. Aggressive, action-packed, noise and melodic, an impressively regimented rhythmic mix. Oh! and visual! Very, very visual. Their vast slide screen is a blur of mangled bodies, butchered babies and ripped-off heads. It's very sick, er, I mean, slick.

Twelve 88 Cartel would like to be about spontaneity. Unfortunately the confines of a repeatable live performance restrict them. They admit to having studied environmental design at art school in the not so distant past, and confess that experimental German theatre is an enduring influence. They quote Erwin Piscator, as saying "It doesn't matter what the professional quality of a performance is like, it's the spirit that matters."

This statement, the band claim to live by.

But whatever they claim to live by, the fact is that their spirit is willing and their flesh is strong. There is nothing woolly about a Twelve 88 performance.

"We use slides and videos to counteract the lack of hardware, they're much more interesting than looking at guitars and drum kits. They also sum up our ideas, relate to what we're about."

But aren't the images rather bloody and violent? Is it necessary?

"There's an underlying frustration in what we do, this is our outlet."

Is it frustration with the government? With the pop charts? With the lack of first division success? Or simply brewers droop? Do you crave popularity, fame, money...?

"We'd like to attain the success of New Order, but retain a cult following, which is a tall order. You seem to either make it quickly in this business, and from then on sell the product regardless of quality or ideals. Or you can struggle on for years, bubbling under, always improving, yet never making a breakthrough. People aren't allowed to like you unless they're in your tribe."

(Un-interesting fact number two: Twelve 88 Cartel aren't very well known yet. But with their debut vinyl about to appear alongside the tape only album on Bite Back, things should get far more interesting by the minute).

Transmission ends. Earthdate 12.88.87. Ronnie Randall

THE BIRDHOUSE

"The one thing that had to be in common with everyone in THE BIRDHOUSE was a real wildness. The feeling for rock and roll has got to be so wild — to the edge of insanity almost." So says Founder Bird man and real wild child Mark Nichol!

Absorb the opening quote and think on this: The Birdhouse are a multi-cultural, multi-faceted amalgam of Detroit punk, thrash metal, dirty, dirty Australasian rock and then some! Hard to the core and soft therein, it's a band of violently honest characters. They lend their personal ethics to the sound they achieve and it works. An obvious tribute to Antipodean rockers, Radio Birdman, this home-grown version has deeper connotations; In Mark's native New Zealand, a chap who finds himself not quite the full shilling is referred to as having gone 'to the birdhouse'. Sick of playing the game of social acceptance that we call normality, Mark went in search of like minds and formed his own Birdhouse. In the light of the evidence it's an appropriate name — it's appropriate too that he came together with Kathy, Billy and Max during the turbulence of the Brixton riots, because everything about this band is violent, urgent and vital.

There was still a missing link and they found him slumped, characteristically, over a whisky at the Cafe des Artistes. That was vocalist Johnny. The final piece in place, the band were gigging within three weeks and haven't stopped since.

Mark: "There was a real need to get out and do it live. It was like we were busting our guts to get out there and do it in front of someone." The stir caused by their recent Burning Up mini-LP on Vinyl Solution pleases the band but it's not as important as a live response. See them live and it all makes sense; while others in this genre are busy robbing graves, The Birdhouse catch you unaware and rob you of your senses and inhibitions! Alex Kadiš

THE NOSEFLUTES

Oh Gawd... look what the NOSEFLUTES have gone and done now! They've released a four-track 12 inch on Ron Johnson, they've called it Heartache Is Irresistible, and the title-track sounds just like The Bhundu Boys being a bit perverse. They've been plugging away for absolutely years doing things not unlike what Stump are doing now, and they regularly play to audiences of over four people. One of them looks like a Play School presenter, the other one looks like the sergeant in Juliet Bravo, and the rest? Dear oh dear oh dear...

So why is Heartache Irresistible then?

TheOneWhoLooksLikeNo-OneInParticular: "It was originally a doo-wop '60s number, but we changed it and the lyrics mean absolutely nothing."

The Sergeant: "Yes, it's not very irresistible, is it Martin? Can we make our own question up please? Do we think we're going to be the sex-symbols of next year?"

The rest of the band: "No."

The Sergeant: "What is a noseflute?"

MEAT BEAT MANIFESTO

After the success of M | A | R | R | S, we await a flood of dreadful cash-in cut-up records, but if you haven't heard them yet don't flippantly put Meat Beat Manifesto into this category. They are more than a little special, a little more... well, hard actually.

MBM are DJ Greg Retch (production & scratching, originally from an LA club called 'Rat'), Tequila Tocana (pumps iron, works with dancer Michael Clark, and is part of the live experience), Jack Dangers (west country vagrant turned rapper, a sort of yokel Beastie Boy) and Pirahna Jones (films, dancing & Ballet Rambert, also the proud owner of a snake called Marcus).

MBM are into 'creation through destruction' — they wanted to put a very quiet tune at the end of their record so people would innocently turn up the volume to see what it was, then, blam! A top volume scream would blow their speakers and their eardrums. Then, to add insult to injury, the needle would fly off a specially scratched groove wrecking the turntable. The idea was eventually shelved because nobody would cut it and it sounded a bit too close to destruction through destruction.

MBM do have a single out on Sweatbox Records called I Got The Fear — a glorious cut-up/hip hop/hybrid — six minutes of (controlled) mayhem. The b-side, according to Jack, contains the 'noisiest thing ever put on vinyl', or as Greg would have it 'the MBM noise is like an addiction, once you've heard it nothing else is hard enough'.

THE CATERAN

Trimmed to a four-piece by the departure of their original singer, Edinburgh's THE CATERAN have taken the opportunity to re-think their sound.

"We can have a lot more guitar now without having a bored vocalist lighting a cigarette and getting his book out while we run riot round the stage."

And with their love of American post-hardcore bands coming strongly to the fore, The Cateran are playing faster, brasher, denser and unashamedly more frenetic and aggressive guitar music. Great stuff. Only, not everyone understands. A few, one ear half-cocked at the fast guitar, reach, unthinking, for the thrash/skate-board/speed metal tag. That has guitarist/vocalist Cameron clawing the table and muttering despairingly into his pint.

"Nothing I listen to, nothing I like, nothing the music's rooted in is metal. It's not structured like that. The songs aren't about the size of my cock. Devil worship doesn't figure strongly. I haven't danced naked round many stones..."

"... Hardcore is still simplifying it too much, but at least it's more accurate. But nobody thinks that because there are no hardcore-bands in Britain. Every week I hear a good record that's come out of America, but Britain?"

The only all-new Cateran on vinyl, so far, is a track (the wrong track since Cameron lost the original master tape) on the Jello Biafra benefit album Censorship Sucks, but they should have a single out on Vinyl Solution by the new year. There'll be a lot of guitar, but no hm riffs. And no cocks or necromancy. Trevor Pake

TheOneWhoLooksLikeA-PlaySchoolPresenter (swiftly changing the subject): "We played a great gig in Coventry recently, five people came. At the end

The Noseflutes are not your average band. In fact, they're not your average anything. Peter Perturbed

THE GROOVE FARM

There are four 'beach bums' in THE GROOVE FARM — Michael (bass), Andrew (voice), Darren (drums) and Jon (guitar) — together they whip it up with their fast and 'groovy' surf-punk (or should that be "new wave"). But do they really surf?

Darren: "Yes, any excuse to wear rubber!"

Jon: "I'm a surfer at heart, that's what counts."

Andrew: "There's too many groups around these days pretending to be surf bands, we started it! Most of these posey groups wouldn't know a surf-board if one was rammed down their throats."

They have plenty of songs about the subject; Surfin' Impossible, Hawaii 5 Seconds and the current 45, Surfin' Into Your Heart — all lasting as long as the average surfer can remain standing. This said, however, it's hardly Jan And Dean. The Groove Farm give us a 'raving pop blast' reminiscent of The Dickies, Rockaway Beach by The Ramones and Rip Her To Shreds — period Blondie. The tide is high?

Darren: "Blondie was 1979, glossy lips, a frizzy head, someone who could sing and she's my mum."

Andrew: "Debbie Harry means nothing to me..."

What's your inspiration, then? Andrew: "The Barracudas, black rabbits, trains."

Are you going to be big?

Andrew: "I'm quite happy the size I am."

Darren: "I've stopped growing, but Jon just keeps getting bigger and bigger, he's a fat slob."

Andrew: "I had a rabbit, once, called Benjy. He was very big."

Was it good for you, Andrew? Andrew: "Pardon?"

Well it's all happening for The Groove Farm, they've been mobbed by teenage girls after every gig and they've got an indie hit on their hands. Ambitions...

Darren: "To impregnate Patsy Kensit."

Andrew: "Oh God! You can't print that."

Be serious, for God's sake.

Andrew: "I want to drive a train, have lots of money and be on the cover of Underground."

Live, The Groove Farm are exuberant, refreshing — "in a word brilliant, in two, very brilliant" — and groovy.

Incidentally, Bermuda shorts are out — this year they're wearing guitars. Johnny Dee

Lemon h e a d s

phase two

As we step into 1988 you can be certain of one thing at least, the men in black are returning with a new single and album. Once heralded as "the indie band most likely to," The Mighty Lemon Drops have yet to conquer the upper echelons of chartdom. But at least they're still alive and kicking, principles intact. The Mighty Lemon Drops sell out? Not while there's a breath in Tony Lineham's body.

The band's thoughtful bass player, and one half of the Newton/Lineham songwriting partnership, sees the band's progression as the steady build up the Lemon Drops needed to avoid the "five minute wonders" tag. The Lemon Drops intend to be around for the duration.

"Every single we've brought out has sold more than the previous one — so we're building onto solid foundations. We're not interested in being one of those bands that suddenly appear in the charts and are here today and gone tomorrow. A lot of audiences are very fickle but then there are bands that develop a crowd who grow with them and stay with them — the audience respect what they're doing and the band never does anything which the audience considers to be selling out. I know there's going to be pressure on us from the record company eventually, they want us to have hit singles, to get in the top 30, and obviously we'd like to do that, but we want to do it on our own terms."

After a year that has seen the band consolidate their growing following in Britain and win over legions of new followers in the United States, the Lemon Drops launch themselves into the New Year with a new single and album. Their last single, Out Of Hand, was both their best selling and best charting attempt to date — shifting in excess of 20,000 units and reaching number 66 in the charts.

The new seven inch will be Fall Down Like The Rain, which should come as no surprise to all devoted Lemon Droppers, as it's been a favourite for quite a while, and was the band's unanimous choice for a single.

Many people claimed that the Happy Head album didn't fully live up to expectations, that it was inconsistent, patchy even. The Lemon Drops accept the criticism, but have made amends with their latest recordings and are pleased with the contribution made by former Mission producer, Tim Palmer, who it would seem has added a great deal to the songs.

"We were happy enough with the songs on the first album," admits Tony, "but this time we wanted to be a bit more careful, we wanted to make sure that the songs came across better than they did last time. The way we had visualised the songs and the way they turned out was very different. This time we've got a lot closer to how we imagined the songs should sound, we're really pleased with it."

"On the first LP there was either a fast Lemon Drop song or a slow Lemon Drop song, there was nothing in between. But this LP has got more variety, there's a lot more depth to it and it's a lot easier to listen to."

The songs on the new album, so new in fact that they haven't got a title for it yet, are relatively recent compositions. All were written this year and only three or four will have been heard live before. So have there been any startling changes in the Lemon Drops' lyrical style?

The Mighty Lemon Drops release their second album in February, it's obviously their most important release to date. Chris Hunt asks Tony Lineham about the atmosphere in the Mighty camp. . .

Tony pauses for a moment and lends off the inquisition: "We always say we never like talking about our songs because if I say what a song is about, people are going to have an idea fixed in their mind when they listen to it. Our songs are deliberately written in a non-specific sort of way, so that everybody can get something out of them, and not everybody gets the same thing out of them. I don't really enjoy songs that spell things out in black and white, I like things that are more non-specific, things that just create a general impression, or a mood."

Since the demise of The Smiths, the Lemon Drops are left out as one of the champions of the 'indie' cause, an icon of all that's alternative to the mainstream, while having access to that mainstream. The Lemon Drops have neither asked for the mantle nor shrugged it off.

"We look on the indie thing as a mixed blessing. When we first started, there was a lot of attention focused on groups on independent labels, but I don't think any of the groups saw themselves as 'indie' groups. We were just a group who were starting out and wanted to make a record, and the only way we could do it was on an independent label. The good side of the indie scene was that a lot of new talented groups — groups who could write good songs — were getting attention. And because of the resources available to them, and because they were just starting, the records they made were pretty cheap and the playing wasn't of that good quality."

In these days of the big video sell, the Lemon Drops find little sympathy for the 'production line' video makers. You know the sort — people who base their career on the most possible variations of a single theme. Put an infinite number of monkeys in a room with an infinite number of video cameras and a limited number of ideas and they'll come up with all the videos in the top 30. After working with Derek Jarman's alternative production company on the Out Of Hand video, the Lemon Drops would like to give further indie film makers a chance.

And, as they step into the lower reaches of the charts, steadily heading upwards, the Lemon Drops' alternative approach, unique sound, and different look should see them right for developing their reputation and reaching yet more potential Lemon-heads.

83 UNDERGROUND

In this month's Tip Sheet, popular media celebrity and man-about-town, Julian Henry travels west to Rhythm King to the opinion of James Horrocks and Martin Heath (King Rhythm Kings) on the latest bag of demos to reach Ug Towers. The numbered system after each review refers to marks on a ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1.

Rhythm Kings James (left) and Martin: "Yes, we heard a tape once that we liked!"

THE ICEMEN (c/o 13 William Street, Blackburn, Lancs) produce a loud and raucous guitar based sound that had Martin and James likening them to Crazyhead. At this point various other Rhythm King personnel started drifting into the room to add their comments which ranged from "Sounds like The Larkers," "What a horrible noise," "This sounds very fast and very loud," said James. "If we were to turn it up, it would be louder still." We chose not to eject the cassette from the machine.

HERMAN (c/o 26 Cambridge Gardens, London W10) are another band who have recently impressed Rhythm King. Their single song features a very strong female vocal sitting on top of a slightly off-beat jazz background. "We couldn't really put this out because it's not immediately poppy or dancey enough for the label," said Adele (another R King mainstay). "That said, her voice is really good and it's recorded well so it gets the thumbs up."

9 8 6 8

MILK MONITORS (01 248 5485) sent us a cassette that had been recorded at the BBC's Maida Vale studio, and was produced by Dale Griffin. We concluded from this that they have recorded a John Peel session. "Rather average songs," said the Rhythm King critical panel, "however, the production is good; you can tell these BBC people know their stuff. Unfortunately, the singer — Mark Monitor — owns about the worst voice we've heard so far. I suspect that their original demo must have sounded better than this because it's hard to see John Peel being impressed by this."

5 4 6 6

OPERATION HOUSE BOY (12 Hilton Crescent, Sedgeley Park, Manchester M25 5NQ) were one of the cassettes supplied by Rhythm King, after the general comment that there was nothing 'black and dancey' in the Underground pile. How did this come to your attention? They called us up and said the song on our answer phone. "We liked what we heard, although this isn't as strong as we'd hoped." The tape revealed some good ideas — such as chopped-up and sampled vocals — over a house beat.

TRIBAL GATHERING (c/o 2 Kennedy Close, Farnham Common, Slough SL2 3NB) open their tape with a piece of classical music that we suspect is Vivaldi. From there on it is a non-stop punk rock assault. The three of us sat blankly staring into space while the ferocious din went on and on... "Stop it," Martin eventually pleaded. How does Rhythm King interpret this sort of thing?

VALERIE AND THE MALCHICKS (Well House, Bishop Monkton, North Yorks HG3 3QU) drew cheers from the assembled mob by painting their cassette various bright and gawdy colours. "They sound like early Buzzcocks with Howard Devoto," commented Carl from Renegade Soundwave. "We very much approve of the wailing guitar flavour, and looking at the pictures they appear quite young." So, may I suggest that Valerie And The Malchicks get on the phone to Rhythm King records (telephone number in the book under Mute) and demand a large recording contract asap.

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON NO 7: BLOWING YOUR MIND

No informative column for the popular musician, or "would-be's", would be worth its salt, without Harry Hedonist rearing his sunken-cheeked head. Yes, the pursuit of pleasure and playing a tune, have gone hand in hand, since Greensleaves praised the psychotic qualities of Henry VIIIth's herb garden. So what should you do if you want street credibility, but cough and splutter if someone so much as lights up a Rothmans in the next room.

FACT 1: Being pure and healthy is a big tick in the pop book of life at present; so eating huge vats of vegetables, drinking soil-flavoured yoghurt and jogging 27 miles every morning, could get you on the panel of Nancy Reagan's celebrity Blankety Blank.

Alcohol has always been an excuse for falling over in public, with spirits being essential for serious wild men, and beer sufficing for the proles.

FACT 2: A gin bottle half-filled with water, will fool most of the credulous pop press (it's also a good tip for 'bring a bottle' parties). While toothpaste rubbed in the eyes creates that, 'I am sozzled' look.

Heroin screws you up, but singing about it, can make you a bloody fortune as long as you call it something to do with sweets, as in the Willy Wonka Chocolate Factory-sponsored Some Candy Talking.

Cocaine is well beyond the price range of anyone honest, but a bludge of talcum powder on your upper lip will allow you to get away with being a blithering idiot in most clubs.

Vitamin tablets in an unmarked pill box can be passed off as crushed Peruvian ju-ju berries and cries of, "Wow! Look at the purple octopus eating that bus shelter," will draw admiring glances from fellow deepmadoses.

Pot is a bit old hat, but, a Rizla stuck around the filter of an international cigarette while hanging it from the corner of your mouth and playing the seven minute guitar solo will improve anyone's Keith Richard impersonation.

Proclaiming yourself to be "Tripping over Jesus", can do wonders for a flagging career, but it is a powerful narcotic and can lead to Songs Of Praise.

God, cigarettes and drink are the only stimuli encouraged by society. While the rest are encouraged by some cash-waving journalists from oily rags.

So, as the man who ends up fashionably wasted in those terrifying government TV ads, says: "Dip, don't Dazzle."

"Well, I suspect they are just blokes having a good laugh. They might be students which rather takes the edge off things. I wonder why they bother sending tapes out — this sort of music is just for them and their friends to listen to and have a laugh over."

2 7 5 2

THE F* CITY SHITTERS (0742 587169) amused Martin and James with their Boots cassette and revoltingly scrawled letter. This is the worst tape we've ever heard," they said. "Their presentation though is brilliant; I imagine this being made either by a 40 year old retard or a 16 year old student. God, the music is horrible." Meanwhile the group thrash away in the background in the fashion that their name suggests. Does a major hit single lie just around the corner for the F City Shitters? Perhaps not, but they have, without doubt, carved their own small but impressively vile niche in the History Of Popular Music.

JASON SMART (161 Elm Grove, Brighton, East Sussex) is a friendly-faced fellow who makes tapes himself, and from time to time sends them to Underground. "I feel sorry for him already," said Martin after a glance at his picture. "So very vulnerable, just like his music. He looks like he's dead, or that he wishes he was dead, run over in a car-crash, perhaps, so people could listen to his music and it would have a sudden new value."

Meanwhile, Jason's likeable strumming trickled from the loudspeakers. "There's a lot in this package, despite the fact that he's just sent a picture, a short note and the tape. He has succeeded in getting across to us."

4 6 7 4

BIG BIG RHYTHM (Flat 6, 33 Grove Park Road, London SE9) have a professional sound that had Martin and James pondering over a suitable description. "Let's call it tinkly-tinkly music," they eventually concluded. By the second song we were comparing them to Dire Straits and Middle-Aged-Rock. "This suffers from politeness and it sounds contrived. I suppose some of the major record companies might like it as they could marry the band to a suitable producer and do something they think is commercial. It's an odd name, as this group are particularly lacking in rhythm." A later perusal of the group's credentials revealed that they have a lead guitarist named Mark Thatcher. How curious.

THE CHARMS (01.622.3451) have a good name according to Martin and James. What's more they actually appeared to like the music. "Yes, this fellow can play his guitar alright, and the singing, despite being a little too Edwyn Collins, isn't bad." Does this mean you will be signing them up? "Errr, no, because we specialise in black music." But how do you know they're not black? No reply.

Martin concludes: "This is definitely above average; it's simple, unpretentious, well-produced and not over-ambitious. I wonder if they're playing live?" So perhaps we should be watching out for The Charms.

7 7 7 6

THE REFLECTION 7 (41 Hall Lane, Upminster, Essex) must get very bored with people comparing them to Dexys Midnight Runners. But what can we do? "Why he even sings in a Birmingham accent, despite coming from Upminster," said Martin and James. "They've played with Geno Washington, they've got a great brass sound, and by the looks of their biog, they appear very determined. It's good that they manage to come across as actually caring, and they are easily competent musically to do well in places like Spain and Norway." There was no picture of the group to examine, though their sound suggests that they may well sport woolly hats and donkey jackets.

THE POP GUNS (36 Preston Road, Brighton) have already brought gasps of critical acclaim from UG's "Pop Music Correspondent" Johnny Dee. Do they find favour at the House Of Rhythm King? "We've heard all this sort of thing before," Martin and James comment. "You can almost hear their anoraks rustling in the background, and it sounds very like The Marine Girls. Personally I don't find it very challenging, and would go so far as to say that this sort of music represents a cultural vacuum. Edwyn Collins did it OK, so did Haircut 100, but this does absolutely nothing!" How upset The Pop Guns will be at these words! Perhaps they can draw heart from the Underground critique which suggests that they ignore those hard comments and press onwards. With an international celebrity such as Johnny Dee on their side, fame and glory cannot, surely, be too far away.

3 4 2 4

HEARTLAND (c/o 100 Ash Lodge Drive, Ash, Hants) drew knowing smirks from Martin and James. "Oh how very Chicken-In-A-Basket, how very Hippodrome," they said, as the band's aggressive funk efforts filled the room. "I can guarantee that this bassist holds his bass right under his chin. He's a plucker you see. The music reminds you of 1981, of Funkapolitan, ABC and all that. It's very macho and strutting, all sweaty and leathery. That said, the bassist is competent, but oh dear, just look at this picture." Both Martin and James pull faces. "Well, I suppose Level 42 made it, so there must be hope for this lot."

3 4 3 4

DUMB POP HEARTBREAKS (c/o Underground) was the name I'd invented for a tape that I'd recorded personally, not two weeks earlier. Would the Rhythm King critical panel guess its identity? How would they respond to my own laborious and amateur talents: "There is absolutely no confidence in this person's singing," they immediately declared. "Why does he have to put on that ridiculous voice? You can also tell that he does not have the foggiest idea of how to write a song." How embarrassing to have one's own efforts so mercilessly savaged. "I suppose it's vaguely interesting as it sounds like a cross between Prince and Lloyd Cole, but it's little more than how you'd expect a 40 year old session musician to make a record." Deciding to keep the origin of the tape to myself, we moved quickly on.

THE CUDGELS (142 Coronation Road, Great Barr, Birmingham) sent us a small black and white photograph with their tape. The band are seen lounging around in a slightly embarrassed fashion, and the extremely polite tone of their letter suggests that they are normal God-fearing souls, as yet untainted by the hurly-burly world of rock 'n' roll. "Very English and very charming," said Martin and James, "and for that reason they appear a bit like aliens. They will, without doubt, appeal to the people at Rough Trade. In fact you can picture them dancing up and down in their knitted jumpers when they listen to this. Then they'd go outside and jump in their Citroen 2CV's and rush to Birmingham to sign them up."

Triffids' David McComb selects his faves for the jukebox in the sky...

40 UNDERGROUND

Should you be winging your way across the pines and the sand (born devotional of course) of Perth, Western Australia, you might be fortunate enough to catch a Triffids home-coming concert. The group are now resigned to living half a globe away from base camp in order to further their careers, especially now they've signed to Island Records. Their new album, Calenture pushes the imagination meter well into the red, even more so than all the previous Triffids recordings: dark, stormy and cry-in-your-beer tales of rootlessness, unmade love, alcoholic tramps who might shout f at the traffic, suburban isolation, Us against The World resolutions and massive tropical deliriums and delusions — the kind that make sea-voyagers mistake the sea for the green fields of home, and so jump overboard (called Calenture).

• But back at Perth on one of those homecoming trips, you might chance one of their rare covers sets. Without style or image, The Triffids are a real songwriter's band, with singer/songwriter David McComb's list of self-penned songs numbering over 300 and the group's list of attempted covers hovering around 150. Two have made it onto record; St James Infirmary (on Raining Pleasure) and I Am A Lonesome Hobo (from Treeless Plain).

- So welcome to David McComb's "Top 12 Covers As Played By The Triffids (in no particular order, arbitrarily chosen)."
Can't Help Falling In Love: "Just a beautiful heartbreaking song. I love Elvis. Doesn't everybody? We've always been fans of the fat Las Vegas Elvis — you see such a personal tragedy there, when Priscilla left him, and he did all those incredibly pain-wracked songs about little girls and "Daddy, please don't cry", all that stuff."
Blue Monday: "We did this once because we liked the song. We did it virtually like the Bonanza theme (proceeds to sing it) with a Duane Eddy guitar. It was hard to remember the words because they're just utter crap and they go on and on. It sounds good when New Order do it though."

Into The Groove: "It wasn't as good as Sonic Youth's version but we did it as soon as Madonna's version came out, 'cos we were so in love with the song. It's hard to remember the words to that too because they're so meaningless — I really admire people like Madonna for remembering them. Mine are easier because they tell a story. There are a lot of words here but they don't really say anything. I guess that's what normal pop music is like, isn't it?"

LA International Airport: "This was really hard to do because it had so many words! A beautiful heartbreaking song from the early '70s: "LA International Airport, where the big jet engines roar/LA International Airport, I won't see him anymore". It's actually the girl who's going and the guy staying, but she keeps bursting into tears in the plane, forcing down drinks, trying not to think about it."

It Hurts Me Too: "Another beautiful, miserable song. It's by Elmore James. Crying in your beer is a national hobby as far as I'm concerned. It should be made the national sport."

Theme From Dallas: "This was just to make sure that people are awake when we're doing a covers night. You become the local bar band when you get home — it's very difficult to convince the audience that you're an art band! We also did the theme from Gilligan's Island ('60s Yankee TV show). It was like World War Two — it seemed like a good idea at the time."

What Goes On: "Part of The Velvet Underground scrapbook. It hardly counts, you have to do it, it's like learning your job. You're not a real band until you do the Velvets. They don't really belong to the Velvets, do they? They're just like common inheritance property really. . . ." (Pale Blue Eyes, Sweet Jane and I'll Be Your Mirror are in there as well.)

Satisfied Mind: "A really old song, like a Rambling Jack Elliott song, but he didn't do it, so it's possibly a traditional blues song which is also a Christian song — "How many times have I heard someone say, if I had his money, I'd do things my way/how little they know, it's so hard to find one rich man in ten with a satisfied mind". A really good anti-materialist song."

Best Part Of Breaking Up: "I just love anything that Phil Spector went within 20 miles of — absolute genius. We would do a lot more girl group stuff because I think that if I had to choose one type of music as the highest form of art created yet by man beyond Shakespeare and Chaucer, I'd say the girl group sound. It's like an Everest of man's achievement."

• No Fun: "We did quite a good version of this. The song (by The Stooges) to me is an anthem of my generation. We also used to do I Wanna Be Your Dog and the first Ramones album, things like Beat On The Brat. We were a punk band back in '77! We only wimped-out and went country a few years down the track. We also did The Stranglers' London Ladies, one of the great sexist songs of all time, but we were only 14 at the time and we didn't realise. . . ."

• "When you're in your home town, and you've been playing there on and off for about eight years, it's very difficult to shock people who see you play. You really want to bring a smile to people who have seen you 30 times!" Martin Aston

Story of the snake!

Phillip Boa invades the Copperfield

Boa donates flower children joe

Phillip Boa is the first to admit that he's fanatical. Perhaps that's what prompts the seemingly fanatical response to the work of Phillip Boa and The Voodoo Club — West Germany's biggest indie sensation alongside Einstürzende Neubauten.

- Perhaps it's the fact that the Voodoo's produce a meticulously constructed sound — a sort of violent mesh of Boa's tragic and unhappy childhood. First there was the Philistrines LP, which conveyed Boa's essential philosophy, then the Aristocracie album, a turgid representation of a sense of life, politics and the afterlife viewed through the shattered Boa lens. And now, following the release of the Kill Your Ideals 45 on Red Flame, Spring sees the emergence of the long awaited Copperfields LP. Preceding the inevitable press explosion Boa puts it into perspective for Underground and predicts the light at the end of a depressive's tunnel. . .
- "Since I was ten I loved a little acid/my interest for chemistry was really strange/and when my mother came back/I poured it into her beautiful eyes to make her look a little strange." — When My Mother Comes Back.
- Boa: "I still feel hatred for my mother. She left us when we were very young. If she did come back, I wouldn't feel like that, but I'm like a child, I guess everyone is a little, but I'm too much like a child because I'm really ruined by all that shit, you know, my mother leaving and the trouble between my parents."
- Is that what characterises the emotive quality in your music?
- "My mind is my music anyway. I'm what you call a manic depressive and I'm a little confused and that's the music. When I'm depressed I'm writing depressed and I play the guitar in a depressed way. When I'm high the opposite is true. I get the guest musicians to play how I feel, so on the one hand our music is natural and on the other hand it isn't because it's constructed. It's schizophrenic."
- "I don't understand the future/as an element of heaven." — Don't Pull My Whole Life Away.
- Boa has often expressed a dim view of the future but how much has this been influenced by his past?
- "Maybe it is because I had an unhappy childhood and then I went into the army where I was unhappy. Maybe it's just written down in my mind, this angst, is that the word? "I'm really frightened about things that happened, but at the moment I'm really happy anyway. I want my songs to be more positive."
- Has this change of attitude been a result of your work with The Voodoo Club?
- "I think a psychologist would say that! But I often think about things and wonder if the whole state of things isn't set by fate, or God, or whatever, if it's on purpose, or meant to be. Exactly what I'm trying to do now is to show the happy side of unhappiness — I don't only want to write depressed lyrics now, I think that people should have a little fun listening to our music and that's what I hope to improve on for the fourth LP." "Many times it hurts you bad/you learned to hate your love/you was born to explain your existence. . . sometimes you understand it. . ." — My Sweet Devil In The Sky.

R Stevie: a wild and crazy lunster

- Isn't it painful, sometimes, to remember the past and bare your fears to the public?
- "Sometimes I feel pain, yeah, but I haven't really thought about where the pain comes from."
- Is it a way of rationalising your fear and coming to terms with the past?
- "Yeah, I think it is really. I've never thought about it too much because I'm doing my poetry and some of it is in my subconscious. What is hidden I try to make obvious, I try to express my feelings."
- "I can destroy your visibility/make some notable discoveries/I renegade my education/until I've plundered all your poetry." — I Dedicate My Soul To You.
- Will this new found happiness be reflected on Copperfields? Does this indicate a new direction for The Voodoo Club?
- "As a musician I feel more like a painter so I do want to change and develop as I sketch each new album. On the first LP we used classical music and on the second it was more jazz. This time it's guitar music, very much inspired by a lot of good new English guitar bands, we've also started using a lot of Eastern influences."
- And is the evolution of each song still as complex?
- "Yes, we still start by recording on cassette and eventually it's taken from there to a four-track, then to a 16-track and finally 24-track. It's a very long process but it's a way of avoiding clichés. We're a pop band, so we love to use some of the clichés but we do try to be different. But it's very hard to do something new these days. A lot of bands try but if you analyse it, it's very hard. For example, recently I bought a lot of Beatles and Rolling Stones albums because I wanted to analyse how it all started and my opinion now is that after The Beatles and the Stones, 1970, after that everything has been done."
- "I don't wanna kill myself/I don't wanna kill my fun/I just wanna clean my mind." — Kill Your Ideals.
- It's been an issue for some time, the Voodoos have held out against pressure to sign to a major company for fear of losing artistic control. They've recently hit upon the perfect compromise — economically speaking — by striking a unique bargain between Polydor Germany and their own independent Constrictor label for the release of the forthcoming album, but what of the British arrangement?
- "We are talking with companies at the moment and we have refused one. If they don't want to accept that we must have power then they can f off! I won't do it if they say we have to sound more like daytime radio material. Daytime radio is even worse in England than in Germany! It's crap! It's like Stock Aitkin And Waterman, who are just using one computer and then putting a vocal over it. People who don't realise that this is crap are stupid and they have to kill their ideals — they have no ideals and I think that is their problem. That's a little of what I wanted to express in Kill Your Ideals actually."
- So how do you intend to overcome the problem of getting mass exposure in the face of, admittedly, some pretty terrible adversity?
- "Our music is uncommercial for the normal listener, in Germany at first only one thousand people bought the records, now we sell about 20,000, if we carry on with our marketing — and we do have some big ideas — then one day we could sell 100,000, then maybe we will have changed something on the German music scene."
- And possibly break into the English scene?
- "Yes, I very much want to do that. I love England, I'm a real fan. We're going to come there in May possibly. But we don't want to do any gigs before then because if you play a different town every day, you start to lose your ideas and it becomes like a normal job, a factory. But we really want to do it in England this time. We've got more promotion and the funny thing is that we forced our German major company to pay for the promotion of the record which is being released on an independent label in England! For Germany that's very extraordinary!
- Plan B (for Boa) is working already. Now, who said there was no room for idealism in music? Alex Kadis

A BEGINNER'S GUIDE TO R STEVIE MOORE

- It's difficult to say where R Stevie Moore's showbiz career went off the rails. Somewhere along the line this guy who, as a child, duetted with Jim Reeves, played guitar for Perry Como and whose father sessioned for Elvis (Presley, that is, dummy!) rejected the whole damn thing, preferring the company of a couple of tape recorders in his bedroom.
 - Although Stevie's had a good half dozen LPs of excellent pure pop madness released, the man's main medium of output remains his own, eponymously-named cassette club, which over the past five years has issued some 200 cassette albums (that's NOT a mis-print!). So, Mr Moore, are you a rampant exhibitionist, or what?!
 - "In an aural sense I guess it's true, I am, but I just want to make a complete picture. Being a record collector and something of a historian hungry for any unreleased alternative sides or takes, I wanted to be completely honest and make EVERYTHING available — most of the tapes are filled up, as well as released, chronologically, so it's like opening up a diary."
 - Cassette club activities have, though, had to take a back seat recently due to the preparations for his new (vinyl) LP, Teenage Spectacular. New Rose, the label responsible, take a dimmer view of Stevie's home-recorded excesses, preferring to concentrate on his not inconsiderable ability to write a good tune: they've sent him a few bob to record it in a proper studio, and, wait for it. . . they're even putting it out on compact disc! Isn't this going to alienate die-hard RSM fans?
 - "Some people said I was trying to sell-out on Glad Music" (Stevie's other "proper studio" LP), "but as people won't have heard these songs on home tapes, they won't be able to bitch! . . . Well, they probably will, 'cause it's a hi-tech production" (he grimaces) . . . but it's still basically R Stevie Moore!"
 - And a quick listen to some of the new mixes reveals that it certainly IS! Don't waste a minute, invest in this man today!

10 THINGS THAT MAKE THE CHILLS ESPECIALLY WORTHWHILE

by Peter Perturbed

The Chills: not hot!

- 1 THEY'VE JUST RELEASED A "GRAND" ALBUM
Brave Words took 37 years to make, and sees The Chills moving to London in order to escape a country whose population consists mostly of ex-Chills members. In the process they've ended up with an album chock-full of rolling majestic tunes that reel off anxious chants with tremendous grandeur. . . "Yeah, I suppose 'grand' isn't a bad word really," ponders Martin Phillips. . .
- 2 MARTIN PHILLIPS (HEAD HONCHO)
Martin Phillips is sat in the barely lit dressing room of a sleazy Birmingham pub where 25 people are to see The Chills play their sweaty back-sides off. He looks depressed and sounds barely audible.
"Most people get surprised with me as a person, you know, being really quiet and then, how I change on stage, but I save up a lot of aggression for that."
Indeed, one hour later he's having a minor coronary and entering his eighth nervous breakdown somewhere in the middle of a guitar solo.
- 3 HE'S A BIT MODEST. . .
Do you feel like a genius when listening to Curiosity Killed The Cat?
"No, I never feel like a genius. I get pleased with myself sometimes. . ."
- 4 BUT NOT THAT MODEST
Do you ever feel extremely humble when listening to something a bit good?
"No, I don't feel extremely humble either!"
- 5 THE CHILLS ARE UNIQUE
"We had no conception of what overseas music would be like, and even in 1985 when we came over we thought there'd be 50 bands like The Chills — all as good as The Chills, or better, but there were none. I've heard probably every single Chills song named at some stage by someone as their favourite."
Do you think that's because all the songs are so diverse?
"Yeah, well that's always been a big point, making sure they're different; I can't understand why bands don't do that rather than sticking to a formula."
- 6 THEY'RE NOT VERY PSYCHEDELIC
Where on earth did you get this psychedelic tag?
"Well, there's Kaleidoscope World and Rolling Moon which both have quite colourful lyrics, but it's just people's desire to tag you, and it's a destructive tag because you might get seen as passé or revivalist, which we're not."
- 7 THEY'RE THE A-HA OF NEW ZEALAND!
Well, they regularly hit the New Zealand Top 10. New Zealand teenies are obviously game for the odd angst-ridden thrash or misty ballad, or jolly pop trick or. . . well, as we know, there isn't a typical Chills song. And so it follows that there isn't a typical Chills fan.
"When we play, it's a mixture of students, skinheads, the odd biker, heavies. . . it's really neat. We saw a disturbing amount of yuppies in our last audience but we're not sure how they got on to us in the first place, perhaps we'll change them. . . or they might change us. We just want to play to as many people as possible and I hope they all like us."
- 8 AW, COME ON! THEY DESERVE SOME LUCK!
It's not quite the same story here. . . "It's a pretty tough life being in a band at the stage we're at. You finish a gig and then you have to drive for four hours, loading out in the rain. . . it's not much fun."
- 9 WE COULD DO WITH SOME HONESTY
Cock an ear to Brave Words and you'll be struck by the overwhelming susceptibility running through Phillips' lyrics, from the hammy angst of Sixteen Heart-throbs to the sorely repentant Look For The Good In Others And They'll See The Good In You.
"That's really what I'm trying to do most. For one thing, I think it's my forte. I don't think I'm very good at holding together a false persona. And I see a real lack of honest music around. It's no longer commercially viable to be human and that's a real worry."
- 10 ERM. . . SORRY, I CAN'T THINK OF A TENTH REASON

letter from america

Tony Fletcher develops the US picture

There's a sense of achievement in the air among rock fans who savvy out here at the moment. It's because a long snore just there has finally been formed for all the right reasons, but it's hard to get used to the expectations of record company or radio, and went out on the road for seven years to build a following the hard way. REM currently have a top ten album in the States with Document, and more surprisingly, an enormous hit single with the One I Love. Everyone's favourite cult band of the last few years are close to being public property.

In a land where quality is judged on a pro-rata basis with success, Rolling Stone this month stuck REM on the cover under the acclamation, 'America's greatest rock 'n' roll band'. Honourable indeed, but why not make such a move four years ago when anyone who had ears already knew that? Sometimes we have to be grateful for the British music press and its championing of new acts.

But as the Georgia's favourites are riding off into the golden horizon, it's time to look under the hood of their tails and see what they've brought down the road with them. REM's influence on the underground American music scene took hold many moons ago, and now we can examine the contenders should, heaven forbid, Stipe and co. fall into the pitfalls that might now be too large for them to avoid.

Take Miracle Legion for instance. Miracle Legion will be pretty pissed off to see their name here, because this four-piece from Connecticut have been going almost as long as their spiritual cousins in Athens. But with an identical line-up and a debut EP, 'The Backyard' that, its excellence aside, owed just too much to REM for comfort, they were quickly branded as clones.

But after a lengthy absence, a new, more individual Miracle Legion emerged. The Rough Trade album 'Surprise Surprise Surprise' was a record of restrained bitterness, gentle and sad yet always threatening to break loose. Onstage however, they have taken on the full fury of the four-piece rock band, singer Mark Mulcahy, face hidden in an avalanche of hair, striding in circles round the stage like a bedevilled tin soldier, with guitarist Ray Neal, short hair spiked up in contrast, visibly smiling and lurching side to side. At a recent CBGBs show, anger boiled over for no apparent reason and drummer Jeff Winterschall took the Keith Moon test (and failed: nothing was broken). On a bigger stage at The Ritz supporting Aztec Camera, Mulcahy occasionally fooled himself by trying to act the star that he isn't yet close to being, but otherwise all the signs of a magnificent rock act were there. And nobody mentioned REM. In fact, nobody at The Ritz mentioned Miracle Legion much at all, but then that's their loss.

Then there's The Connells. Named after brothers Mike and Dave, but a pretty democratic bunch joined by singer Doug MacMillan, guitarist/keyboardist George Huntley and the jazz drums of Peele Wimberley. The Connells do not just have to answer for their Rickenbacker fetish, their Southern roots, and their penchant for subtle melodies amidst jangly rock 'n' roll. They also have to answer for Don Dixon co-producing their first album, and Mitch Easter taking control of their second, the excellent 'Boylan Heights'.

Huntley admits that it was 'stupid' not to expect the comparisons that using REM's production team would lead to, but otherwise remains unperturbed. The Connells don't deny their REM influences, but would sooner see it described as a form of kindred spirit. "We're not all that unique," he proffers. "We're just trying to make enjoyable music."

When they do 'Boylan Heights', initially samey, takes on an air of independence over excellent plays the cyclic melodies of 'Choose A Side' and 'I Suppose' lodging in the brain; the brass trumpet on 'Over There' hinting at a future pop potential that could be enormous. If they want it to be.

"The tendency is to not want to be massive," says Huntley when asked of the band's intentions. "We were just friends at college who played together, had some fun and decided it would be nice to take it a step further. We've all got University degrees so I don't think we'd be too devastated if we had to find a job." Unlike the majority of today's careerists, he evidently doesn't consider his vocation as anything less than pleasure.

This attitude could yet be their strongest point, taking the view that REM never planned their way to the top. And judging by a recent show in Boston, The Connells, a band three years young, are in for some good times.

But the road ahead is not going to be easy for Miracle Legion, The Connells or any of the other countless quality acts fighting for a slice of the apple pie. Which is why the road is still most likely find them. 'Home Today' from Boylan Heights is about going on long enough for your girlfriend to ditch you, explains George Huntley, but it hasn't happened yet. Likewise Miracle Legion. After their show at The Ritz, Ray Neal was ecstatic that the band was now almost constantly touring. "We just had a week and a half at home for the first time in months," he explained. "And I didn't know what to do with myself."

The Blend. Giving up the bass he played with the Violent Femmes for guitar, conch shell, banjo, jaw harp and elephant tusk, Brian Ritchie achieves "The Blend" on his solo album for SST. Combining influences as diverse as Sun Ra, Son House and Sonny Bono, he has concocted the perfect blend for the global village. From the untraditionally traditional version of John The Revelator to the hard funk of Alphabet, these eleven songs are THE blend for the eighties. SST 141 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Wasted Again. Imagine if your favorite Flag party tunes of all time were put together in a room. Then, the room was filled with hundreds of your best friends. Before the cops come, you better slap on Wasted Again, a collection of all the songs that make you want to party. Six Pack, T.V. Party, Wasted, Rise Above and twelve more festive Flag tunes. SST 166 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Huevos. Hot on the heels of their amazing Mirage album, the Meat Puppets have done it again with a brand spanning new album on SST. Closer in sound to their legendary live shows, this record has balls. Starting off with the luck in the head double blast of Paradise and Look At The Rain and ending with the brain-crushing I Can't Be Counted On, this record reaffirms the Meat Puppets' status as one of the coolest bands on the face of the planet. SST 150 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

DESCENDENTS

BL'AST!

DESCENDENTS: Liveage. The last blast in the saga of the "Dents" comes in the form of this incredibly bonus live record. Feel the bone-crushing power of the Descendents. If you want it "ALL", this is the first step you will need to make. SST 163 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Human Rights. The firebrand vocalist of the world renowned Bad Brains steps out with his own record. With a lush background and a unifying spiritual message, this record shows H.R. in the role of healer and teacher. From the world beat hip hop of Human Rights to the soft love vibe of Acting So Bad, this record cuts across all boundaries in its quest for one-love. SST 117 (LP/CA $7.50)

The Power Of Expression. The first burst of the sonic salvo that is Blast! came in the form of the album The Power Of Expression. Forcing their way into the maw of pure, hard power, Blast rages on Surf And Destroy, Fucking With My Head and nine others. SST 148 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

These new SST releases and the entire SST catalogue are available and on sale from the Rough Trade shop or mail order 130 Talbot Rd., London W11 1JA.

RHYTHM KING release the third single from Three Wise Men on February 8, to tie in with the hunky hip hop boys' spring offensive. A revamped version of their Cruisin' For A Bruisin' with a "filthy, dirty and utterly debauched" guitar solo from Matthew Asman (the ex Bow Wow Wow and Chiefs Of Relief guitaro), appears on the label to pre-empt their debut album GB Boyz – which looks set to enhance the outfit's reputation and further remove them from the pack of part-time MY copyists ● By way of flag-waving self-promotion, the Three Wise Men's Jemski Rah underlines the group's perspective on UK events with the off the cuff remark that "Peckham's just as pertinent as Parkside!" ● The album itself won't be any disappointment as the group's sound has developed immeasurably as they retread the former stomping ground of Urban Hell and Refresh Yourself, while opting new angles like the pseudo-sex pant-a-long Hardcorp Lover. One not to be missed . . . more news as it breaks. Dave Henderson

SKINNY PUPPY DOGGY BAG!

Canada's existentialist industrial funksters Skinny Puppy are about to have their excellent LP from last year, Cleanse Fold And Manipulate, domestically released on this side of the pond, and to promote this amazing feat their American and British record company, Capitol, have sent over some rather fab 'doggy' bags. The contents of these rather special bags not surprisingly connects with the title of the aforementioned and rather wonderful LP in that you get a face mask, a Skinny Puppy emblazoned, paper theatre smock and a lump of plasticine inside a plastic egg plus, of course, a tape of the album. Cleanse Origami and Manipulate — Geddit!!!

Hopefully this rather enterprising idea will not only draw attention to the wild and weird mutant rhythms of the ever menacing Skinny Puppy, who at this very moment have import copies of a fab Adrian Sherwood remix of Addiction, from the LP, entering the country to slake the thirst of slavering Puppy fans, but also create more interest for their Canadian label, Nettwerk, who also have The Grapes of Wrath, Pretty Green and Moev on their roster, all of which feature on an excellent Nettwerk Sound Sampler entitled Food For Thought along with Chris & Cozey, SPK and Severed Heads. Maybe Capitol will now have the good taste to release the rest of the Nettwerk catalogue over here so you can put in less of the search and more of the destroy!

Dick 'always gets his man' Mescal

WIN OUT! Yes, Capitol Records has donated five Skinny Puppy press bagettes, and you could win one if you can answer the following question . . . Q From which country do Nettwerk labelmates Severed Heads come from? Answers please on a postcard to Underground/Puppy, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Rd, London NW1, to arrive no later than February 10. Go some!

WIRE WE WAITING!

Just a brief word of panic-abating grovelling here from Ug Central. Thanks for the millions of letters and cash for the Wire Tapped*Underground compilation. We've just got back from the Bahamas and the records should be with us by the time you read this, and in the post soon after ● Seems the Christmas rush delayed the pressing and special embossing of the sleeve, but the discs should be arriving any second n...

PRE-fact

BOB'S Your Uncle

The Mail-Order-Flexi-Old-Boy-Network has just added another name to its glittering list of honour. The name is Bob, and it represents the latest in a long line of bands who've made it out of the flexi ghetto and into the land of the independent stiffie (ooh er).

No don't titter madam; Bob are a London-based four-piece, they released the obligatory flexi-disc to 'get on a bit' and then, in Sombrero, found the perfect outlet for their near-perfect tunes.

But won't people feel that Bob are just another graduate of the spotty-pop academy? Even the name suggests something decidedly anti-image.

Richard (guitar, keyboards, and vocals): "It's just because it's very easy to get labelled with the name you have. The more pretentious the name, the worst it is. But having 'Indie' wrapped around our necks is a real curse."

Jem (bass): "If bands thought of names to fit the music it'd be really difficult to find a name to fit our music."

Too right, mate. Take a listen to Bob's new five-track 12-inch EP. The three main songs shout variety as well as quality: There's What A Performance, with its African lilt, then Deary Me, which wouldn't sound out of place on Radio 2, and Piggery, with its cow-pop Texan-swing. Is there a 'Sound of Bob' as such? Or is it all pretty random?

Simon (guitar and vocals): "It is random to a certain extent because when we first started to demo our songs we had a real diversity of material and songs that we had to narrow down into snappy pop songs for Bob. We wouldn't dream of doing two songs that would sound the same."

Richard: "Yeah, there's a small hardcore in our set which we can present as a sound as such. For the single, we chose those songs by doing a quick poll of our friends."

There's that value-for-money democracy again. Of course it's commendable but wouldn't it make more commercial sense to release one song as a single; it being the focal point for a press campaign or a set of dates? Jem: "Initially, we wanted a double A side with one of Simon's songs and one of Richard's which would have been ideal. But our distributor had lost a lot of money doing seven-inch singles with unknown bands, so we decided to do a five track EP."

On stage, Bob are a lively prospect; swapping the role of front man, singing in joyous harmony and generally putting out some good karma. (What? ed) Are they fearful of becoming known as a "wacky" band?

Jem: "There's no problem there, our music is good enough to over-ride all that nonsense. When you go to see a band, you don't wanna see them standing around as though they're playing in their bedrooms, which a lot of indie bands do. I don't wanna see bands posing all over the shop but I like to see bands enjoying themselves. It's infectious."

Watch out for their next single; it may well be a Blockbuster. Gold to gold in 60 seconds, please Bob. Ian Dickson

WHAT'S IN A NAME LIKE, ER, SHADOWY MEN ON A SHADOWY PLANET?

Er, well, Shadowy Men On A Shadowy Planet are a three piece from Toronto (that's in Canada) and they have three fine slabs of seven inch vinyl just waiting to be snapped up and played to your friends to show how hip, groovy and cool you are.

Having come into this world in 1985, they're recorded four singles (the first of which has sold out) and toured with such "rock idols" as The Ramones, the Mary Chain and Husker Du. They've been aligned with REM and The Searchers, but they play instrumental music with a twang that's unbeatable. They could make The Rapiers ditch their suits for sweaters and give Duane a run for his tremolo arm, all this and more.

The Three EPs are Love Without

Words, Wow, Flutter, Hiss and their latest Schlagers!, and if you write to the group at 334 St Johns Rd, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M6S 2K4, you'll be able to hear why everyone likes them so much. Future plans include a fifth 45, a soundtrack to a documentary about comic books, a Euro jaunt, then a "big record with lots of songs". Better still they're the only group I've ever heard of who've made a 47 second video, "which has been shown much more often than it should have." So there! Dave Henderson

LOOPY

Hello everyone, I'm Steve Davis and I used to wear an Afghan coat!★ Yes, little did the snooker-loving world know — when they tuned into Steve's bottom — that he was a secret fan of Magma. For all you young and intrigued socialites, let me explain, Magma are a German combo who were big in 1066.★ Steve says: "I have all their records and tapes."★ What's more, Davis — the man — decided to bring the Mags to the UK so he could go and see them live again! Wah!★ Steve says: "They are very popular on the continent."★ The gigs were at the Bloomsbury Theatre in January, and news of Dennis Taylor's desire to stage a Dubliners night at Wembley have since been publicly denied.★ Steve says: "I have had tremendous pleasure listening to Magma."★ OK, right Steve, thanks. Brad Magma

4 TAKE THE FLOOR!

Channel 4 has a new head of Young People's Programmes in Stephen Garrett, and the man with the bit in his teeth has already begged the Underground masses to enthuse over various mega-chunky acts, with regard to them being in line/included in a new 4 prog that's set to replace/update/out manoeuvre/etc The Tube ● All budding alternative tantalisers and potential popist combos should contact Stephen care of Young People's Programmes, Channel 4 TV Ltd, 60 Charlotte Street, London W1P 2AX, with regard to being the next big muscle spasm, and a giant relief to the man's enforced incarnation in the world of Pepsi Hates Wet. Go it! Dave Henderson

There's a new concise and in-depth issue of Smiths Indeed, a typically groovy A5 thang — with plenty on the vid for I Started Something I Couldn't Finish. For fans and freaks alike, catch it from Mark Taylor, 132 Sylvia Avenue, Knowle, Bristol BS3 5BZ for 70p and a suitably sized envelope.

Another mag of vitriolic stuff comes from Gareth — a man from Belfast — and it's called Mere Pseud. Nasty, and outspoken, it's got a bag of oven-chips on its shoulder and you can get bolshy with it from 3 The Crescent, Carryduff, Belfast, BT8 8DW, Northern Ireland.

Another groovy "thing" is the three track EP flexi from St Christopher on Veston. It's fine stuff and the group — and their sound of the moment — can be tracked down at Rowes Cottage, Stockton Lane, York YO3 9UB.

More zines with paper and ink... well there's one, Pot Plant Party is a mean(ish) anorak frenzy and it comes from Daniel at Garden Cottage, Langham, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk. Features? They've got features, mate... including Biff Bang Pow!, McCarthy, Great Leap Forward, Laugh, The Bodines and lots more.

Someone wrote in and said "Why don't you have a letters page?" Well, it's because no-one writes letters other than to say that we're incredobrill.

Furthermore, people are more into sending flexi's of themselves. Farley 708 did such a thing with their two tracker, Andy Wilson's Trousers and Andy Wilson's Coat. The absolute insult... it was just too cute.

Believe it or not, Sub-Cultists as we are, we printed the wrong address for Premonition Tapes last month. They in fact reside at 69 Langdon St, Sheffield S11 8BH. Their next issue of Prem'speak (number four) features exclusive interviews and tracks from The Noseflutes and The Bland.

Raving and ranting, Andy McDonald from Go! Discs is enthusing on the phone about Doncaster's No Man's Band who he's signed, while Dr Death, from Baker, Louisiana phoned to say he's signed Kindergarten. Right, looking forward to that!

Turtle Breeder Four, from 5 Ingleby Rd, Dagenham, Essex, is a mere 30p plus a large self addressed envelope. It features the jolly old Shamen (whose new single is really gggggreat!), House Of Love, Bolshoi and lots of other stuff.

Another small sized zine is Slumber Party and that's five pae cheaper from Markki D, 75 Estive Crescent, Bishopbriggs, Glasgow G64 1EY. Featured haircuts and rollers include Anthrax, Cro-Mags and Sabbat. The word is LOUD!

Also from Scotland, but less noisy, is Summerhill's demo. Featuring ex-members of the excellent Snakes Of Shake, it boasts some fine pop outbursts. Prospective record company moguls should contact the group immediately on (01) 736 9864.

Underground scribe in death threat! Yes, Johnny Dee was "set about" by a woman with a handbag the other day following his remarks in his recent Chesterfields piece — that their van driver was an "ugly hippy". It seems the lady in question was the mother of the "u hippie".

Mr Dee maintains that the aforementioned "ugly hippy" is still a hippy. We are taking him some fruit in hospital.

The Guttersnipes, who appeared in the Tip Sheet recently, have just finished recording their debut LP. Now they only need someone to release it. Interested parties should contact Andy Kline at 30 Rydal Way, Enfield, Middx EN3 4PQ. For their sins they're about to tour with Max Splodge.

Arriving during late March will be the new Fall album, the Frenz Experiment. Featuring Mark E and team in full flow, with the latest single, Victoria, in there, plus other bedraggled Smithisms like Carry Bag Man, Get A Hotel and Oswald Defence Lawyer. Good to hear that none of the commercial success for the group has tempered their outspoken stance. But did you ever think it would?

The Fall snook into Peelie's Festive 50 at number two with Australians In Europe, just breathing down the neck of The Sugar Cubes' Birthday. Hot on their heels were four Wedding Present tracks in the top ten and 12 or so Smiths' tracks in the 50. The Sugar Cubes are set to release two more 12 inchers before they bung the whole lot onto an album for One Little Indian, while the Wedding Present's next 45 will be Nobody's Twisting Your Arm, another Gedge classic riddled with bitersweet memories.

Also on the horizon is a new LP from Attaco Decente who've signed to Red Rhino... so that should certainly be worth looking out for.

In the rumours department, the immediate demise of Talulah Gosh seems likely, with exams looming for at least one of the academics. The new year sees two albums planned on Blast First from the wonderful Big Stick, plus a Ciccone Youth LP, and inevitably, the Crazyhead LP has been delayed. Still that's rock'n'roll, however greasy it gets.

Robert K Cohen's
Big Comment

after the fact

Bono

Melody Maker spent most of 1987 telling us how much they despise U2, so it was no surprise to see who were the festive cover-stars of the Christmas issue: that's right, U2. I guess U2 sell papers; NME and Sounds also carried extensive interviews, making Bono's boys the band every journo hates to love. Personally, I love Bono like the son I never had, after his reply to a question in MM: asked what he'd do if approached in Tesco's by someone who claimed to be Jesus, he answered that "If Jesus was on Earth today, he'd be in a gay bar in San Francisco," working with AIDS victims — "the new lepers."

The obvious possibility of this must be a disturbing thought to the worshippers of everyone's favourite Christian, James Anderton.

James A

Anyway, Laibach — the lads with the swastikas on their records labels — recently sailed into quite a storm over the question of their apparent Nazidom: the general opinion expressed in various reports was that Laibach are merely a bunch of publicity-seekers, who extol the virtues of Communism but dress like Nazis. "We use both wings to fly — both left and right,"

Laibach and deny it

Ivan Novak told Sounds. Apparently the fact that one French gig attracted card-carrying Nazis was "a problem of western democracy," through the lead singer, Milan, said he actually "hates fascists and wants nothing to do with them."

Well, if you hate something, you shouldn't lie down with it, because you can get tarred with the same brush, not to mention spoiling the broth. And talking of broth, Scotland's most famous flasher, Jerry Sadowitz, has become the latest band-wagon for the music-press to jump on, clamouring to defend the man who is Bernard Manning, Tarby and Jim Davidson all rolled into one, with a sprinkling of naughty words no-one's allowed to print (including Underground). The official line is that he's an alternative Alternative Comedian, and only bleeding-heart liberals should take offence. Wrong. It's bleeding-heart liberals that allow

Sadowitz's reactionary obsessions to go unchallenged, such as the statement in Sounds, "I think women should be fed at every turn and then made to abort on the deadline."

Tony Mitchell imply suggests that "This man cannot be serious," and I fear that's the key to the situation: if Tony and all the Sadowitz fans at MM and NME should take offence, who's to say Jerry won't turn round and say, "But I was only joking?" That would mean the person concerned had failed to GET the joke, and would therefore appear STUPID (for a change).

But on to Stock, Aitken, And Waterman, another current pin-up at NME in the Christmas edition. Sean O'Hagan gets inside their souls, thus proving they've got them: it seems they 'agonised' over whether or not to produce a Divine single, for fear of "leading young boys astray." Luckily for their wallets, the producers of Sammy Fox overcame their qualms.

They do draw the line somewhere, though, in their strong disapproval of political music: "Style Council, UB40 — they should write pamphlets instead of songs," says Mr Stock. Thank God S.A.W. write songs with an "emotional strength":

*"Even Toy Boy.
Even in that,
there's a built-in pathos.
A sadness in the melody.
It isn't totally superficial."*

Stock Aitken And Waterman: Jes toy boize, rilly!

Sean's a bit of a fan, really: he concludes the interview by saying that Respectable, Roadblock, and Never Gonna Give You Up are dead fab, "And if you didn't cherish at least one of those records, you're dead from the neck up."

Er... Sean, could you come round to my place and finish this article for me? My head's got rigor mortis.

MASTERBLAST

It's Sunday at 7pm, and Britain's bland number one fades away, but all is not lost, it's replaced by a Sonic Youth jingle and a Chesterfields' track, another Turn It Up is underway.

• Turn It Up is a youth access programme. That means if you're between 15 and 25 you can get up, get involved, hit the studio, and broadcast to a whole county.

• The team is constantly changing, but each week two people present, and about 10 people are involved, in putting the show together — and they're drawn from a pool of over 30. How an organised programme appears out of the chaos I don't know. There are people rushing around — doing gig guides, press reviews, answering the phones, or frantically finishing taped interviews. Anything from Gaye Bykers smelly socks and electric cheese graters to the Cookie Crew's brushes with traffic wardens and the new abortion bill.

• The most important element is the music, team member Michelle explains: "Because we follow the top 40, we don't have to play anything mainstream, but we don't slavishly follow the indie charts either. We will play anything new and exciting, whatever it is, wherever it comes from."

• The programme also features a lot of local music, including demos.

• Debbie, another presenter: "It's the only way local groups can get their tapes on the radio and it's important to give them that chance, we've played early demos by The Housemartins, Frazier Chorus, 14 Iced Bears..."

• The list goes on and on.

• Turn It Up does stand out from the rest of the output of its mother station, BBC Radio Sussex, which is aimed at the over 60s (honest, no exaggeration). So, how do they get away with playing Napalm Death five minutes before Songs Of Praise?

• Mike: "We have total control over our programme, and judging by the number of competition callers and letters we get it proves that it's a success."

• Turn It Up features a gang of young enthusiasts playing things people want to hear.

• Nick: "Sometimes the show almost falls apart, but it works in the end because we all love the music."

• And new-boy John's comment on being a broadcaster: "It's not what I expected." That just about says it all.

GET OUTTA MY SPACE!

Bi-Joopiter tame The McTells!

Well, actually, Bi-Joopiter don't really tame The McTells, but they do have another neat package called Expecting Joe with 13 tracks from everyone's fave group called The McTells. Who else could sing about feeding the cat and stuff like that? Johnny Eager

TAV FRENZY

New Rose have a special limited edition Tav Falco release (available through Pinnacle) which comprises of four seven inch singles in colour bags, all neatly cocooned in bigger Tavbag. Eight tracks feature the talents of LX Chilton on guitar occasionally, or even in the producer's chair. Limited to a mere 5000, this is one not to be missed by collectors, music fans and Tavophiles everywhere. Dave Henderson

WEIRD HOTEL STUFF!

Three comics from Babylon

Neat Stuff, Heartbreak Hotel and Weirdo are three alternative comic magazines currently battling for attention in the specialist shops, among an unhealthy plethora of traditional superhero publications. It would be nice to recommend them all, if only for their lack of superhero content, but only Peter Bagge's Neat Stuff is wholly successful at presenting any really interesting alternative to the mainstream.

Now in its tenth issue, Neat Stuff is a collection of the ongoing sagas of various wacky characters including Girly-Girl and Chuckie-Boy, the Bradleys and my own favourite character, the thoroughly wonderful Studs Kirby — whose rude, cynical, arrogant and totally impatient nature should appeal to any sensible person. Bagge draws all his characters with a brilliantly exaggerated cartoon style which is better than anything seen since Harvey Kurtzman in Mad's heyday.

Heartbreak Hotel is English, it calls itself 'the lifestyle comic magazine', it tries to be trendy, with interviews, features and music-related strips all taking their titles/inspiration from '50s rock'n'roll ballads. It would seem to be put together by people who earnestly worship The Face and Love And Rockets — the most overrated 'adult' comic on the market.

The strips themselves range from the puerile to the unreadable, and there are two totally pointless interviews, with Jonathon Ross and Paul Gambaccini, which tell us nothing of interest save for the mindblowing fact that, wait for it, they both like comics! At £1.75 it's expensive bog paper, but at least it can only get better.

The unfortunate thing about Weirdo, from America, is it's frustrating mix of genius and banality. Maybe it's just that Robert Crumb, who started the magazine, sets impossibly high standards with his own strips which appear in every issue and are usually the highlight. But Weirdo does seem good at finding original new talent as well and most issues contain at least one interesting newcomer. In the latest issue, no 20, it is an artist by the name of Zingarelli, with a very '50s-inspired crime story which reads like a two-dimensional film noir, which alone is worth the price of the magazine.

16 UP!

Sheffield, the breeding ground for more than a few quality acts in recent times offer another 16 outfits to the world via BBC Radio Sheffield's Sheffield Calling: Hits From The Hard Stuff cassette. The styles and performances are inevitably varied, from tedious rock to aggressive electronic experiment courtesy of The Icons Of Noise, there's some keenly arranged pop from Nick Fish And The Seahorses, some thrash from Death Trash plus bona performances from The Midnight Choir, The Gallery and a brainbusting debut from The Bland on Here Comes Jesus.

The Hard Stuff is the local radio station's Sunday night show and for a mere two quid you can hear what they're going on about. For further info try Nick Reynolds at BBC Radio Sheffield, Ashdell Grove, 60 Westbourne Road, Sheffield S10 2QU. TC Wall

STOP MAKING

SENSE!

Underground writer in book shock!

Yes, Tony Fletcher has written a book on Echo And The Bunnymen. A mere 128 pages in colour and black and white, called Never Stop, it's published by Omnibus and should blow away some of the strange inadequate tales that have lapped up against the Echo boys. • A reputedly difficult outfit to interview (unless Mac is in the right mood), our Fletcher managed to fill a legendary 62 notepads and overwrite the book by 20,000 words. Still, some sensible editing has left all the good words in and any Bunnyfan seen without said publication should do themselves a favour immediately. Triv Tel

THE SOUND OF PEOPLE THINKING!

Tape Delay and the humble opinion!

Charles Neal has put together a collection of reasonably intimate writings featuring the best of the avant generation in the SAF Publication Tape Delay, but still the question remains, why didn't Charles challenge some of these mystical guru's a bit more. It's not easy to crack the whip and get the grit all the time, but in some of these cases it might have been interesting if some of the pointed prose hadn't been so awestruck. • Still, Tape Delay is a fine read and features chatter and suchlike with New Order, Nick Cave, Lydia Lunch, Cabaret Voltaire, Dave Tibet, Mark E Smith and a host of other ne'erdowells. Nick Brody.

Available from Shigaku or Vinyl Solution at 39 Hereford Rd, London W2. Dave Henderson

gush

... an enthusiastic tirade from Prince Muso

Ain't it bizarre how some people have such short memories? Well, yes! You'd think that someone would have drawn a line between the outspoken cut-up barrage of new hip-hop sounds and the kind of thing that 23 Skidoo, A Certain Ratio, Last Few Days and even Funkapolitan (they played with a drum machine first, y'know) were doing before they got lapped up by the public. You'd think that some of these scratching Johnnies had invented splintered vocal aberrations. What about William Burroughs, mate? What about his Nothing Here Now But The Recordings album on Industrial, and Cabaret Voltaire's early outbursts, those gorgeous disjointed singles that they released before they dropped the vocoder. And Throbbing Gristle? Clock DVA? New Order? Non? It's like the hip hop scratch and boogie generation gets closer by the release to those echoey backwaters...not to mention the reggae excesses of The Mad Professor? or even Mikey Dread (sampled for Eric B And Rakim).

Of course, to your man in the street, Sigue Sigue Sputnik started it all off...and he's right you know! And, the Mary Chain were the first people to use feedback, you know, man! Well, apart from the fact that they sound exactly like the B-side of PiL's first self-titled single. Oh, you know the track, er, The Cowboy Song, that's it. Well, they did sound like that...when they were good!

I think Hawkwind have got a lot to answer for on this one, you see. I mean, if it hadn't been for Silver Machine, there wouldn't have been anyone using vacuum cleaners in their act. I'm sure some art bore like Philip Glass would have sequenced and multi-layered the sound of the humble vacuum cleaner, but, let's face it...it's Hawkwind who hold the golden dustpan when it comes to vacuum cleaners.

Nurse With Wound, Current 93, Nocturnal Emissions, all these "so called experimentalists" probably tried to get their hairdryers in on the act, but it was Hawkwind who were there first!

And what have we got today? Eh? Well, I'll tell you, sampling. Yes, sampling. Jack Beanstalk and his dog Rodney can get a cheapo unit and turn pro at the flick of a switch. All manner of kitchen appliances, strange ethnic noises, and what have you, will be cropping up everywhere. Look at Miaow, they used a tugboat hooter, SPK did a whole album of insects, and it wouldn't surprise me if a few new fangled blenders cropped up in a Pepsi And Shirley hit soon. But never mind.

What we need to do, fellow Underground faithful, is to instigate a sound and performance all of our own, an alternative, a different angle, a new variation on the old Hawkwind theme. And do it live.

So, what I propose is that next Saturday, right, every Underground reader gets his favourite kitchen appliance, plus his radio (and whatever else they have at hand) and we all switch them on at 4.40 in the afternoon. You know, just when the final results are coming through. It'll be great, it'll be brill...like rocking the walls of Jericho. The whole country — well bits here and there — will become a mass of uncontrollable noise. And once it's all going, just get your guitar out and we'll all sing Blue Monday. Fantastic! Er, fantastic, fantastic!

HUMOUR MOST FOUL!

Issue 11 of Grim Humour gave me a headache!

Yes, the world's number one SPLATCORE mag is back and looking yet more complicated as it goes on. the Pen of Richo writes and is aided by Wolffie Retard and various other Pastoral scribes. Featuring Sonic Youth, Wire, The Stupids, Butthole Surfers and more, it has nearly 2 million pages and is a snip at 50p. Why there's even a chart of the top ten bestest horror flicks of all time. Don't miss, send 50p and an A4 sae to Richo at 7 Wentworth Gardens, Bullockstone, Herne Bay, Kent CT6 7TT... and make him rich!

ART FOR ART'S SAKE!

Be An Artist And Win Friends!

John Yates/Jellybean have a wodgeful of graphic collages available through Alternative Tentacles (71 Collier St, London N1). That's the people who did the newspaper for The Dead Kennedy's last LP, plus Jello's spoken word set, and now you can get THE PUNCHLINE — a witty assault on everything and everybody for just a quid and a large envelope. Touching, harsh and politically aware, it's the kind of outspoken graphics that says more than a thousand words. Buy or die! Dave Henderson

A SPANNER THROUGH MY BEATBOX

A Spanner Through My Beatbox

Earthly Delights EARTH 003 RR C ●●²/₃ A Spanner are the antithesis of techno advancement, a challenge to luddites and a noise worth savouring. Through this endless morass, A Spanner cut-up and indoctrinate 100 wayward drum-machines, producing a hap-hazard rhythmic collage which is just as danceable as it's haunting. Now if there really was an alternative to pop-faced structured pop dance, then this is it! Dave Henderson

THE AUBURN AIRES

Roomful of Monkeys

New Rose ROSE 136 P ●¹/₂ Debut LP from this six-piece Ohio outfit whose pedigree is evident from the opening bars of track one. A titillating 'n' roll verve - steeped in hereditary chunky post-Stooges guitar with more moderne vocal embellishments - explodes as the group's personalised saxophone-angle makes Roomful Of Monkeys sound at least different from the current mess of leatherette rock posing. You feel that The Auburn Aires have a lot more to offer, but so far Monkeys only flippantly suggests that there's more to look out for. TC Wall

BABY SNAKES

Impudent Reptiles

Unicorn Records PHZA-15 NM C ●³/₄ Baby Snakes are a game of two halves (Brian)! First and foremost, their instrumental ideas and delivery is excellent, but they have a knack of clouding a skillful presentation with some haphazard, sub-standard lyrical interludes. That they're Swedish could have something to do with it, but surely someone could have afforded a little quality control and stopped, what could have been a fine "mod" styled LP, sinking into a bottomless gorge. Nick Brody

BLACK FLAG

Wasted... Again

SST SST 166 P ●●● The Flag still flutters over SST HQ, with this bedraggled and distorted collection of 12 BF faves. Dragging its heels through such classic neo-punk explosions as Six Pack and TV Party, leading to the metallic overdrive of Loose Nut and Annihilate This Week, it only stops off to headbut Louie Louie and to scream Slip It In.

Black Flag's tally of releases since SST's inception in '78 has been wild, crazed and at times confusing. There are no boundaries with Black Flag and Wasted... Again tells enough of the story to suck in the most brain dead from blandland. Let's play it...again. Johnny Eager

BLACKHOUSE

Holy War

RRRRecords RRR 017 (151 Paige Street, Lowell, MA 01852, USA) ●●¹/₂ If you ever wondered what a Christian industrial band sounded like, then here's your chance to tune in and have your soul cleansed by the sound of scraped back lead piping. Holy War is an infected post TG/early Cabaret Voltaire-styled hum that shouts and screams for attention - praising the Lord as it slowly grinds itself into plastic shavings by the end of each side. A ringing noise of violent change, thrown against a challenge to accepted boundaries. Now this will make Rev. Cliff think again! Dave Henderson

THE BURNING SKIES OF ELYSIUM

The Last Revolving Door

Crisis EL3 P Pompous, overheated pap. Long-winded, near-sighted and unpronounceable. Johnny Eager

CANNED HEAT

Boogie Assault/Greatest Hits Live

Bedrock BEDLP 5 P ●● Canned Heat's leading lights, Wilson and Hite, had both died some time prior to this reconstituted line up taking to the road in Australia, but you can't deny the quality and natural 'boogie' power of these recordings. Sure, fans will be satisfied, youngsters may see it as a more bristley Status Quo, and purists might point to the lack of clarity in the versions of Going Up The Country and On The Road Again, but on face value this is something of an accomplished set. Dave Henderson

CHAMBRE JAUNE

Blessings Of A Hatchman

Jigsaw jigprod 3 (Jigsaw, Vedistraat 18, 7557 SE Hengelo, Holland)

●● Jagged and alarming beat music from Holland. Vocals are spat out with venom, guitars break free at every angle, the rhythm is claustrophobic and at times thunderous. Chambre Jaune are like a gothic nightmare brought to life with the stench of death still in their hair. I bet their teeth are black too. Dave Henderson

CHRISTIAN DEATH

The Scriptures

Normal FREUD 16 NM C ●³/₄ This is, inevitably, heavy going. An intense mixture of rock catastrophe in the funky-rock-sleaze-style, thrown against a barrage of effects and almost undetectable tape interjections. The beef is that the collected concoction gets yet more claustrophobic due to the ever-changing sound levels and tonal adjustments. Like a flu-induced hallu-

- MEGA A godhead uprising
- HOTSY Tasteful and tenacious
- TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish
- DRAB No bullets, means no hope

cination, you know, just like falling from a tall building with your hands tied behind your back. Dave Henderson

THE CLAIM

Boomy Tella

Esurient PAGE 3 RR C ●¹/₂ The Claim's third release sees them further enhance their songwriting skills, but they still sound so undernourished. What this pop combo need is a good meal, something with iron in it, then their odes to girls gone by would have a little more of the muscle that they're crying out for. Underplayed, but loveable all the same. Johnny Eager

CONCRETE SOX

Whoops, Sorry Vicar!

Manic Ears ACHE 11 RR C ●¹/₂ Anarcho veggie thrashers of the world unite! Yes, its another earful of speeding chords, raspy vocals and raging words about what a load of shit today's society is. The world's headed towards oblivion and the band is pissed off that people are content to be numbeheads when they could be making existence that little bit nicer - and me, I couldn't agree more, it's just that this noise attack is nothing new and the numbeheads aren't going to hear it? Oh well I suppose that a few bods might 'pervert' their ears along to the sound of Concrete Sox's latest and that's a tiny pace in the right direction - wish it were a more interesting listen though. Probably DRAB in the Grimethorpe Conservative club... Daz Igymeth

THE DENTISTS

Beer Bottle And Bannister Symphonies

Antler ANTLER 07 RR C ●●¹/₂ Ah, The Dentists! So young, so groovy, so, where have they been? This Belgian best-of-so-far certainly prickles the taste buds and claws at the braincells. Pure pop, pert plectrums and a jangling Gillingham groovathon that sparkles in the eye, all the way from the classic Strawberry's Are Growing in My Garden from '84 to last year's Writing On The Shagpile. Bone, chunky, whizzo gear! Dave Henderson

THE DESCENDENTS

Liveage!

SST SST163 P ●●● A frantic live collection from The Descendents, featuring the cream of their material, which builds into a climactic frenzy on their classic Clean Sheets from last year's gripping All album. Liveage features 18 short, sharp shocks to the system that leave your stomach feeling like it's had a live wire thrusting at it for 40 minutes or so. Played with breath-catching intensity, Liveage! is gripping stuff. Dave Henderson

DRAMARAMA

Box Office Bomb

New Rose ROSE 138 P ●⁵/₈ More American rock filtering through French megalomaniacs New Rose to satisfy the continental urge for flailing guitars, strutting bass players and lesser-tainted rock 'n' roll. Dramarama also have a keenly honed melodic edge slashing through their heads-a-reeling barrage. A quirky and quaint noise that should win Dramarama a few pro-Bomb explosions from erstwhile rockists. Nice one. Dave Henderson

DUB SEX

Push!

Ugly Man Records MAN LP 1 RR C ●●● Lotsa tongues are wagging about this lot, and not surprisingly so, since their debut LP on the consistent Ugly Man label is a powerful mulch of guitar over raw vocal, which always retains a discernable melody while insistently building a relentless, maniacal fervour.

Tracks are long, long, long, but cleverly segmented up, like the opening Push! which sounds like Leather Nun colliding head on with Joy Division. Elsewhere, Kristallnacht (wot?) continues the aggression, while the gruesomely named Kicking The Corpse Around truly twists the knife... and it's their best shot on here.

The sound of '88? Dunno, but it's a mean one to follow. Carole Linfield

DU VIN DU PAIN ET DU B

Earthpeople

Subway/Antler 003 RR C ● A pretty disappointing mini-LP constructed of drum-machine, a heavy metal guitar and someone intent on shouting throughout the proceedings. There are no songs and little in the way of cohesion on this album, although there are a few explicit doodles on the cover. Ripley

ELECTRIC PEGGY SUE AND THE REVOLUTIONS FROM MARS

You Tell Me That It's Evolution

Gaga Goodies (Box 361, 00121 Helsinki, Finland) ●● The operative word here is RAUCOUS! This Finnish combo, with the rather longer than life name, offer us a healthy dose of Inca-Birthday-guitar-fuzz with some common (or garden) squeaking and hollering in the background. Electric Peggy Sue could be bracketed in the sub-psyche cupboard, with tentacles flexing and tonsils twitching. An acquired taste. Nick Brody

ELVIS HITLER

Disgraceland

Wang Head WH004 Sh ●●● These guys have a few screws loose, right? They're mad, OK? No? They mean it? OK, I can get next to that one.

Elvis Hitler play loud, sometimes fast, vitriolic rock music, they always leave room for the vocals to reel through, their guitarist breaks out of his cell from time to time to deliver madcapiaff solos... they are different.

Elvis Hitler rip the pages from the Rolling Stone book of quotes. Dodge out on Hendrix, kick over the statues and turn the wah-wah up full. Disgraceland is guitar music with no regard for moral values. Love it to death! Dave Henderson

THE ESCALATORZ

From The Garage Straight To Your Heart

Smanx Records EFA 04241 (Crellestrasse 25, D-1000 Berlin 62, West Germany) ● The Escalatorz mean well as they attempt to slip into the rocky backwaters of uptempo new wave rock, but their influences are all too apparent as they struggle to speak "the good English". They're begging to be American and they end up scraping a few raw nerves at times. Nick Brody

THE FALL

Palace of Swords Reversed

Cog Sinister COG 1 RT C ●●● Mark E resurrects the Rough Trade Fall tapes (circa '80 to '83) to make up this exceptional compilation of The Fall at their most boisterous. No holds barred, heads-down ranting Smith played off against a rough and ready combo racing to reach awegasm. Palace Of Swords Reversed is just the first chapter in Cog Sinister's tempered travels through The Fall's old bank statements and, on this evidence the next episode can't come too soon. Dave Henderson

FIREHOSE

If'n

SST SST 115 P ●●● There's something dangerously worrying about just how good this record is. I mean, everyone said that Firehose's debut LP was brill, and this is better, so what happens next? Firehose seem more mellow here, no weakening of stance, just they're a lot more accessible, a lot easier to shake hands with. If'n pokes fun at REM, gets beaty and brooding with spoken lines broadening the knuckles for the full punch. Still hardly commercial in pop terms, but all consuming and embracing. Dave Henderson

FRENCH FRITH KAISER THOMPSON

Live, Love, Larf & Loaf

Demon FIEND 102 P When you get ex-Fairport Richard Thompson, original Beefheart drummer John French, ex-Henry Cow Fred Frith and new SST discovery Henry Kaiser (a seasoned guitarist) together, it's got to be intense! But does it have to be so mind-numbingly well played, well balanced and underwritten? It seems the four of them have no song ideas, just an ability to perform, and an urgency to complete. This album is incredibly self-indulgent and immensely disappointing. Dave Henderson

FRENZY

Sally's Pink Bedroom

ID NOSE 19 Re C ● 1/2 Frenzy come clean on the inner bag, revealing that this LP (half covers, half originals) displays their origins and explains how they got to sound like they do. It also signals a new phase for the group as they shroud their rocking past in a cloak of sampled-horn and squishy keyboard layers. They're desperate to be a pop band but their songs just aren't good enough. As for the covers, they're delivered with such a straight face that they inevitably pale against the originals. Frenzy may be a great live act, a bona bunch of lads, but they're not got the charisma to carry Sally's Pink Bedroom to the daytime radio they so obviously crave. Dave Henderson

BRENT HOSLER

The Secret That Lies

New Rose ROSE 131 P ●● I reckon it's going to be either really trendy or incredibly dumb to like this LP. The first solo effort from ex-Plan 9 person, Brent, is a wedge of American schlock-horror-film sideswipes, with Blood Feast II and She Devils On Wheels both getting a look in through the southern-fried harmonica-wailing haze. Brent is deep, and probably has a gaggle of hipster-wearing young ladies gyrating at his every whim. Yes, it sounds that dated. The Secret does have numerous redeeming factors, it is very listenable and inevitably psychedelic, but Brent is a man out of time caught with his trousers down. Johnny Eager

ONIE J HOLY

God, Guns & Guts

Au Go Go ANDA 51 Sh ●● 1/4 In Australia things don't necessarily take shape as you'd at first imagine. Onie J Holy sounds like a preacher on a drunken bender — and once he lays into such country-tinged mind-numbers as The Rubber Room, Wicked Path Of Sin and Repo Woman — you can tell that not all is as it should be. Conversely, this six tracker is actually quite listenable once your chin has scraped on the floor following the shock of the numerous stylistic changes. I Strum While I Share A Laugh And A Beer With God might have been a more suitable title. Dave Henderson

IMPULSE MANSLAUGHTER

He Who Laughs Last... Laughs Alone

Underdog LP02 Sh ●● This carries a sticker claiming that it's about to be banned. It careers into the room at breakneck speed and further perusal of the sleeve reveals that it's set out to prove that speed metal doesn't have to be mindless. Sure, you can hear that, but I'd defy anyone to work out what the hell Karl Patton is getting down to saying as Impulse Manslaughter hammerhead through their set. Fast and furious there's a spirit caught in time here, a feeling that something is 'right' as these noise kids keep their foot down on a steady 70 all the way home. Dave Henderson

Prospective Records PRLP527 Sh ●● New Hampshire's It Figures have broken their baby teeth on The Jam and the subsequent mod revival, and now appear to be transcending those slim barriers by writing some finely-crafted tunes of their own. Riding roughshod across the great America's in search of a bar to play at has firmed and formed their sound into a more refined, while still amiably commercial, noise that should be savoured. Dave Henderson

JAZZ BUTCHER

Fishcoteque

Creation RT C ●●● Named after a real life fish'n'chip shop, this, an LP which well-demonstrates the Jazz Butcher's keen observatory songwriting. Most of side one has the Butcher carving up Lloyd Cole, and clean pop and wry lyrics, yet occasionally headily veering towards new folkisms with the entertaining Live In A Village, bemoaning the fate of abiding in a remote country hamlet.

Side two sees the lightheartedness getting dangerously funny, with Chickentown taking the piss out of rap'n'sampling'n'stuff with a brilliantly ridiculous ode to the culinary delights of the chicken. But, just as you think perhaps this LP is going to get a little too mirth-riddled, there's a fresh injection of pop sensibility and craftsmanship, like the love-stricken tones of Susie, that saves the day.

In short, then, nicely balanced and well constructed; fun, firm, and finely tuned. If 1987 was a quiet year, I doubt '88 will follow in the same vein. Fishcoteque is a good place to be. Carole Linfield

THE JEAN PAUL SARTRE EXPERIENCE

The Jean Paul Sartre Experience

Flying Nun UK FN057 C ●● 1/2 Yes, the JPS Exp finally get this five-track mini-thing out, and the wait, it's been just about a year, has actually been well worth it. Straying between the post-punk pop sounds of a new-rock Wire and the near commercialism of fine ear-fodder of timeless description, this set should allow these down-under types a much wider audience (if they can get past the name). Dave Henderson

BRUCE JOYNER

Hot Georgia Nights

New Rose ROSE P ● 1/2 Quite an enjoyable package from New Rose, featuring Bruce Joyner in two guises. The album offers the guitar of REM's Peter Buck and shows off Joyner as a compleat rock luminary in the mould of Springsteen or Cougar. It's a strangely superficial gloss though, as the enclosed four track EP, featuring Joyner's '78-'79 recordings, delivers a shakey minimalist with a creative songwriting edge, and an odd line in arrangements. After that, the album sees little more than a polished wax copy — not as emotional and not as dynamic. Dave Henderson

MAGIC MUSHROOM BAND

Bomshamkar!

Aftermath AFT 3 P ●● 1/2 My goodness, what a rollickingly good album this is! The Magic Mushroom's might sound like a bunch of old hippies, they may even look like a bunch of old hippies, but they sure can groove-out in a truly stack-heeled-fluid-guitar sound — akin to many a mid-'70s Island signing. This marvellous excursion into post-Hawkwind posi-thought rips through the air and makes the Byker bravado sound devoid or drive (in futuristic neo-Silver Machine terms). Wow! Johnny Eager

MEKONS

New York

ROIR A154 RR C ●● 1/2 Excellent live tape from The Mekons taken from recordings made over America, and punctuated with some bizarre interludes — including Jon Langford's descriptions of the deteriorating state of his body, strange introductions and some great songs, too. The Mekons are essentially great fun, they can twang a good tune and even muster a cover of The Band's The Shape I'm In. A package not to be missed, that's guaranteed to raise a smile as your Walkman lashes your ears with every Mekondote known to man. Brill. Nick Brody

STEVE NIEVE

Playboy

Demon Records FIEND 109 P ●● 1/2 Steve Nieve dons formal evening wear and assumes the Ferry attitude — the very portrait of debonaire repose! Or rather, old hat visuals for New Age music? As the playboy persona, Mr Nieve pretty much wears his heart on his album sleeve: Bowie's Life On Mars and 10 CC's I'm Not In Love are dug up and dusted down once again, this time restored and renovated to classic grandeur, memorable, moving and quite magnificent. Not so the rendered melodrama of poor George Michael's Careless Whisper, which suffers a sadder fate in the strangle-hands of sophistry! For real passion, languish in the soporific Shadows Of Paris or the richness of El Rey De Sol — they communicate. An essential piece of equipment for any seducer and the perfect cock-tail back-drop for aspiring lounge lizards everywhere! Alex Kadis

NO MAN'S LAND

Savage Brides

Au Go Go ANDA 53 Sh ●● No Man's Land's debut mini-album is a strange hybrid of styles which wanders into a New York Dolls alley, pulls out into heavy rock traffic and then opts for a more refined US-guitar tirade. A five tracker, Savage Brides has more than enough of the integral pumping plasma dodging through its veins to make it count, with an option to totally lose your marbles in the excitement of it all, too. Dave Henderson

NUMB

Numb

Lively Art ARTY 3 P ●● 1/2 A New Rose subsidiary label, Lively Art has picked up on this electronic barrage from Canada: Numb's first cassette only release has been developed into a nearer-to-the-knuckle cacophony that grooves, then falters, as it relies on explicit tape backings of torture/murder or what have you, to get maximum effect. Quite enticing, but a little old hat for the TG/SPK generation. Still you've got to get your pent-up emotions out somehow, haven't you? Brad Manson

PHILIP PERKINS

Hall Of Flowers

Fun Music FUN 1005 (171 South Park, San Francisco, CA 94107, USA) ●● Philip Perkins' brand of layered, experimental music really defies description. On side one, Hall Of Flowers runs for over 20 minutes and features various affected/effected background sounds to everyday life built into a sidewalk symphony. The flipside reveals a more regular musical approach. It's intoxicating stuff, but where it's headed is difficult to say. Whatever, Philip can't be accused of being a copyist or a chancer in any dangerous cul-de-sacs. Dave Henderson

THE PLASTIC PEOPLE

Midnight Mouse

Freedonia 1436 Rec ● 1/3 Eastern bloc rock on a Dutch label. Jazzy and chugging, Midnight Mouse is earthy and hand-rolled, but ultimately it fails to give any real relief or insight. A nice record, but really that just isn't enough. Nick Brody

RAZORCUTS

Storyteller

Creation C ●●● For the past year the music press has prattled on about C86 whenever mentioning an independent band — as if it was some sort of monument of greatness to aspire towards. Such laziness cannot be wasted on The Razorcuts, whose Storyteller LP is a fine indication that not everything going under the moniker of 'indiepop' is worthless.

Here is an LP of ten giant sized baby things — high-sex, high-art, high-pop, hi-honey. From the pure, commercial hooks of Storyteller and A Contract With God, to the killer romantics of Brighter Now, The Razorcuts have made an LP to love and keep. Johnny Dee

RED LONDON

Pride And Passion

Gougnaf Movement GM015 P ● 3/8 A memory, uncalled, comes to mind. It's the memory of riffs gone by and I can't quite place them. OK, they're called Red London, that's Red London AND they openly admit to their influences; The Sex Pistols, Clash, Jam, Ruts, Angelic Upstarts, Chelsea and Stiff Little Fingers. Ultimately you know what to expect and it's all here in one form or another. This, and impassioned lyrics affected by the demise of Northern industries and Thatcher's Britain in general, makes Pride And Passion a pretty tough package. Red London call it honesty and real life. Whatever, it bites hard and that's a fact. Alex Kadis

THE RHYTHMAIRES

Losin' Out

Nervous NERD 030 P ●● The Rhythmaires could easily be misconstrued as a bunch of Mancunian plagiarists, were a lesser mortal to happen across this LP. Fact is, that couldn't be further from the truth as the sharp collar and tie on the cover so neatly suggests. Far from the general inadequacies of a "rockabilly copyist" combo, which they're likely to be lumped in with, The Rhythmaires have a much better constructed sound, and a well researched ambience that should see them through to attention from a much wider selection of pundits. Losin' Out heralds a near-commercial slant that's tripped with harmonica — swaggering with a swing-influenced veneer. The Rhythmaires easily transcend the repetitive backbeat option and instead present a clean-behind-the-ears noise that owes as much to early blues and R&B as it does to Jerry Lee and descendents. Recommended. Nick Brody

JONATHAN RICHMAN AND THE MODERN LOVERS

Modern Lovers '88

Demon FIEND 106 P ● 3/4 A mild'n'mellow blend of rock'n'roll, melodious pop and gentle pop tales. The Modern Lovers in '88 aren't too discernable from the ones of a decade ago, so there are no big disappointments in store for fans — nor, for that matter, any great surprises. These are play-safe tunes about root beer stores and Harpo Marx, blemish-free get quirky, happy-sad and still in love with love, if not also the modern world. The peace of The Theme From Moulin Rouge is the only indicator of the time passing.

Unadventurous may be too harsh a criticism, since surely a reputation for a type of song is no bad thing, but a few aces would have been nice. Carole Linfield

SEVERED HEADS

Bad Mood Guy

Netwerk NET 001 RR C ●● 1/3 Without doubt, this is Severed Heads' most commercially-viable release to date. Only available through the Canadian Netwerk label, the Aussie Heads have shaved their sound, inserted a more audible vocal line and varnished the showpiece to expose maximum accessibility. Severed Heads were already along the way to creating a massive worldwide cult following and this platter should certainly increase their popularity. Don't miss this one at any cost. Nick Brody continues over

SINGLE GUN THEORY

Exorcise This Wasteland

Netwerk Records NTL 30010 RR C ●● Disjointed but commendable set from this Australian trio, mixing high impact disco and a little new age rock 'n' roll with a few ambient touches, while constantly maintaining that heavy, heavy beat. It's all hypnotic stuff, recalling at turns both Art Of Noise and Modern English, while the dreamy little-girl-lost vocals take the band into a different territory altogether. A hi-NRG Delta 5 anyone? Alex Bastedo

SNEAKY FEELINGS

Sentimental Education

Flying Nun FNE 14 RT C ●½ The Sneakies hail from Dunedin, New Zealand, home of The Chills, amount others, yet they unfashionably (for the area) eschew the post punk values for a folksy, plain, wholemeal jangly pop. They're busy tearing out Kinks influences by the roots, and, had they had a discernable amount of tongue in their cheeks, would have succeeded in making a valid slice of indulgence.

As it is, though, only Trouble With Kay gets close to having enough sparkly to dust off the mustiness of their chosen direction. Nice bit of guitar in Backroom, too, but, as in all the best football matches, it's too little too late. Build on those pluses, though, and they may be worth seeing live when they come over later in the year. Carole Linfield

SOUL ASYLUM

While You Were Out

What Goes On ON 16 Sh ●●● The third album from this US combo whose pulsing guitar sound and moody, melodramatic melodies, recall Husker Du at their most popist. I'm sure they're totally miffed at constantly being bundled in with the Du, but they can rest assured that their stylish delivery is already well on the way to becoming something quite unique. Set for UK release through Shigaku, While You Were Out should attract new legions of enthusiasts as soon as the needle hits the opening of Freaks.

Painting a world of fluorescent melodrama, Soul Asylum seem intent on locking themselves away, with only the basic instrumentation to keep them company... and don't you just wish you were in there with them? Why, sure you do! Dave Henderson

Sponge

Born Under A Bad Sponge

Underdog NO 1 Sh ●●● Arg! As they say somewhere or other. These guys are real cool and they can rock out (and probably kick ass). What's more, they've got a sense of humour, they write brilliant songs, and they made my cat laugh. Sponge are three guys from another planet who sound like they should like down your street. They play with a style and sound like they've heard all your fave records through the wall. This album is the greatest record so far this year and it's only January the eighth. Whew! Dave Henderson

TOT TAYLOR

Menswear

London Popular Arts TOTAL 6 C ● Tot continues to attempt a post-Sinatra croon but fails due to lack of throat projection. I can't quite see who this album will appeal to, with its clinking-cup orchestration and arrangements smacking hard and painful against the less-than-embracing vocal embellishments. Somewhere between Nat King Astley and the dole queue. Dave Henderson

NICK TOCZEK

Intoczekated

Bluurg FISH 19 C ● Nick Toczek's historic poetry, culled from time and memory between '79 and the present day, is an acquired taste. Nick's heart and lyrics may point in the right direction but the delivery, through a series of musical styles, certainly lacks in both continuity and delivery. The words fall foul of muso-styled reggae work-outs, uptempo punkiness and honky funk bass-play. Somehow, for all Nick's energy and enthusiasm, his words don't carry against a backing that's basically cumbersome. Johnny Eager

Million Lights

Play It Again Sam BIAS 76 RR C ●½ At the beginning we walk The Hazy Ridge and the synthetic symphonies swirl - an atmosphere conducive to expansion of boundaries in mind and location - the walls recede as the song fades and Sunken Lives begins. Strange things phase in and out, and just as the music approaches a heady peak, a Mogadon vocal dirge appears in the dream, shattering the tranquillity and grating on nerves... Oh crap!

This could have been so good too; recall the best bits of Tangerine Dream, Jean Michel Jarre and Tomita, bring them up to date and you have Million Lights. As for the singing... ugh! Daz Igyemeth

TUXEDOMOON

Pinheads On The Move

Crambo CBOY5050 NM C ●●● A beautifully packaged double album extravaganza that retells many of the forgotten moments from this temporarily reunited group's chequered career.

This won't win a generation of new followers, but the now quaintly low-tech presentation of much of the material on display will delight collectors of their earlier material.

Dating largely between '78 and '82 this set contains enough gems of genuine rarity for even the most ardent fan to consider this a worthwhile purchase. Full marks too for not copping out and including material that is frankly much better but still otherwise easily available. Nice one. Alex Bastedo

UT

In Gut's House

Blast First BFFP 17 C ●●½ The memory is a funny thing and it's more than likely that Ut will suffer because of that. Their earlier releases ran slipshod through a time when clinical perfection, funk and the search for pop was running wild, and few people realised that what seemed like blatant self-indulgence was merely a learning process that wouldn't fulfill itself until some years later.

Through the time gap, In Gut's House is something of a culmination of those early wayward slants - more akin to Raincoats' hazy fiddle and Slits feminist stance than anything contemporary. Ut may still seem a little deep to some people, but those who hold their nose and refuse to dive into the deep waters don't deserve the essential strength and originality of In Gut's House. Be warned, strip to the waist and hold your breath. Dave Henderson

An Der Schonen Blauen Donau

Home Produkt GTO11 (P Stas, rue de Joie no 112, B-4000 Liege, Belgium) ●½ Hearing is believing, and the packaging on the multi-layered 30 track compilation will take some digesting too. It's art, but can you listen to it? Do you need the sound of water flowing, bedraggled anthems and the like? I think some of us do, and Bene Gesserit, Rainer Linz, FAR, Fuoko, Monty Cantsin, Lieutenant Caramel, Dead Goldfish Ensemble, Morgan Fisher, Bourbonese Qualk and more and more and their pals, certainly seem intent on giving us all and everything for the cause. This is an experience that you won't forget in a hurry. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

It Came From The Garage II

Wanghead WH005 Sh ●●● An 18 track verbal assault from the great America's that makes you want to emigrate right away. Do you know how boring this makes the UK garages, back sheds and bedrooms sound? Well, give it a listen and you'll get the drift. The tracks here are mad and dangerous, the group names are stupid, there's no attention paid to technical quality, it all just hangs together on spirit and dynamic performance. On the strength of contributions from Termites Of 1939, 52 Devil Babies Born With Tails, Elvis Hitler, Nine Pound Hammer and more, there's something brewing as an alternative to Reagan conservatism... and ain't it just about time! Dave Henderson

Medway Powerhouse Volume 2

Hangman HANG 8 UP RR C ●● A selection of 16 unreleased tracks from a variety of diehards, like The Milkshakes, The Prisoners, The Delmonas, plus a few more from the leafy suburbs of Kent. Eleven bands in total, all mighty incestuous at best, all pervading that thrash rock that occasionally hits sincerity and authenticity and sometimes takes the piss, though telling one from t'other gets increasingly difficult.

If you have the stomach for a whole LP of this, it'll be a gourmet's delight to you. Others may have to take it a bite at a time and chew well. Just as a quick dip in, The Prisoners hit it spot on with Joe 90; The Discords grate with 2nd To No One (Part 2); The Delmonas sparkle with I've Got Everything Indeed and Uncle Willy; The James Taylor Quartet are as cool as ever with The Cat; Timmy Tremelo trips out with Johnny Guitar, and The Mind Readers have been listening to early (Zappa influenced) Alice Cooper (circa Pretties For You) and produce the star track, Hurt Me.

Ups 'n' downs, but mostly ups. Helter skelter! Carole Linfield

VARIOUS

No Age

SST SST 102 P ●½ It's hardly enticing, the prospect of wading through SST's instrumental fodder, but, hey this ain't such a bad task after all. No Age is a double highlighting the best of SST's instrumental out-takes, and although at times it can get a little self-indulgent, for the main part the assembled noise-mongers work their toys in the best possible style. The range of music - from Black Flag to Elliott Sharp, Lawndale to Lee Ranaldo - seems to work well too, as it's that difference in character that makes it such a continuous and conducive selection. Luxury zone. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Part Of A Whole

Antler 071 RR/C ●●¾ A compilation featuring the current crop of hopeful dancefloor people who've graced the offices of Belgian label Antler. Of course, this varies in style and performance with Alien Sex Fiend's Get Into It standing out as a fine cut, with a glut of Eurobeat alternatives hot on its heels. You pay your money and spit out what you don't like here, and with A Split Second, Poesie Noire and Men 2nd on display, there should be something to please the most discerning of punter. If you like it pumping and persuasive then this set's for you. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Swamp Surfing In Memphis

Au Go Go/Frenzi FZ 6000 Sh ●● An Australian licensing, featuring a wide range of talented swamprats as diverse as you could imagine. The cajun blues of She Wolf, rubs shoulders with Tav Falco's Panther Burns, The Hellcats get lo-fi and screeching, while Odd Jobs sit at the back of the class and the excellent Paradoxical Babel offer the best two cuts of the set. A strangely hypnotic selection that suggests that there's life in that thar swamp. Dave Henderson

VOLCANO SUNS

Bumper Crop

Homestead HMS 087 C Sh ●●½ When Jeff and Jon left the Volcano Suns a year ago to form Big Dipper, Peter got himself a coupla new sidemen and this, the group's third album, is the first fruit of their labours. Prescott's singing and drum pounding trademark remain, in fact the sound's not too different from the previous records, it's just got weightier, even more overpowering. Imagine the aural equivalent of those huge big-as-a-house harvesters the wealthy mid-west corn farmers use, the blades churning and cutting away while a great grinding undercurrent continually pushes on. Back to nature was never like this, it's not a place you'd want to live but it's a fershlugginer place to visit. Vachel Booth

THE WINDBREAKERS

A Different Sort...

Zippo ZONG 022 P ●●½ The Windbreakers' unfortunate name may mean they'll never be accepted without a smirk in the northern reaches, which is a shame. The finely balanced harmonies and simplistic guitar lines should be embraced by as many as possible. After the seemingly inevitable demise of Rain Parade and Green On Red, it's the 'breakers who manage to succinctly avoid the narrowness of that original bracketing, arriving in a downbeat mood, swishing back their fringes and opening their soul. This is a fine album that deserves your attention. You'll be converted after one listen. Dave Henderson

WONDEUR BRASS

Simoneda Reine Des Esclaves

Recommended Records RR/C 29 RR ●● An all-girl four piece with touch paper lit! Joanne Heut leads the way with a selection of brass bravado, while keyboards, bass and drums cajole the listener - with some neat noise gimmicks, plus off-the-wall arrangements. The whole show goes with a swing and a thumping blurt! Songs of the new revolution from French-speaking Canadians. Dave Henderson

THE WOODENTOPS

Wooden Foot Cops On The Highway

Rough Trade ROUGH 127 RR/C ●●½ A name that's been threatening to be big for some time, so what's the hold up? Are their pegs too square for round holes or what? I think so, since this (pleasingly) is neither irritatingly jangly nor pop-orientated, and the acclaim that they built up with Giant looks set to be surpassed.

This is basically dancefloor stuff, with an edge that makes it also intensely listenable, from the gyration of Wheels Turning to the blissfully luxuriant Heaven and the exuberance of What You Give Out.

See, The Woodentops accredit their audience with a capability to dance and think at the same time, and their songs gain by the multi-dimensional tangents they exude. The 'Tops are ready to soar - here come the planes! Carole Linfield of a possible future hit . . .

sounds of intensity SPOOL'S GOLD!

More than a bracing batch of tape-only pranksters are heading your way, and TC Wall unleashes his razor-like tongue in search of something punchy for his Walkman.

• IF YOU'VE found it difficult to keep track of the world music scene and only clutched at releases from Real Sounds and The Bhundu Boys so far, a good introduction to the outside world comes with Bop Cassettes' 90 minute The Pocket WOMAD release. Featuring tracks from WOMAD's collection of record releases plus recordings taken live at WOMAD festivals, the tape boasts 20 finite illustrations which smudge-out some of hazier boundaries of contemporary and alternative musics. A recommended listen that's available through the Cartel featuring tracks from Kanda Bongo Man, Real Sounds, Bhundu Boys, Flaco Jimenez, Shivan Perwer, Asha Bhosle, Vermenton Plage and many more.

• Cloth Ears issue four (from Andrea, 62 Mill Lane, Woodhall Spa, Lincs LN10 6QZ) has features on a selection of tactile turncoats — including Salvation, All About Eve and First Among Equals — and the first 100 copies come with a four track tape featuring First Among Equals, Fiest of Friends, Splashpool and The Ghost Train. Hardly hi-fi quality but Splashpool show some promise through the haze.

• Jon Newman (Instant Classics Ltd c/o Split, 4540 Laurel Canyon Blvd, Suite 6, Studio City, CA 91607) offers the world an inspiring four track tape that's well recorded, raunchy and, surely, destined for Demon or thereabouts if he can only stop screaming. The man is a songwriter of some style (raunchy and Richman-esque are words which come to mind).

• Grisialav Plastic are Welsh and they have a four track set of tinny pop noise available from 10 Heob Stanli, Aberystwyth, Wales. They sing in Welsh and trounce their drum machines with empty kitchen roll holders. Wild!

• Ausgang-A-Go-Go have their demos from '83 to '86 plundered for (In Retrospect Out Of Our Minds), a C45 which you can probably get details on from 19 Alton Rd, Selly Oak, Birmingham B29 7DU. It's an interesting noise that sounds like it's dirty behind the ears and searching for a better sound. If you've got their records, you won't be disappointed.

• Mr Happy Men have a C60 on Wellman (7711 Lisa La, N Syracuse, NY 13212, USA) and it's called Dead Judy. Basically, it's bizarre. A cross between Beefheart, Pere Ubu, Zappa, The Residents and all points west. Humour and brain tumour.

• The Mushrooms appeared on a flexi in Underground some time back and they now have a limited edition cassette, Too Wrecked For The Revolution?, on Matrix Productions. It's available for £2.50 from Linden House, London Rd, St Ives, Hunts, Cambs PE17 4EU, and in its own swirling way it cracks a scant glance at psychedelia, throbbing rhythms and general mayhem. I like it! It has five tracks. Story ends...

45 REVOLUTIONS

analysed by

(in order of appearance), Dave Henderson, Alex Bastedo, Nick Brody, Johnny Eager, Johnny Dee, Ripley, Holly Wood and Daz Igmeth!

ASYLUM Leopards

Waterfront [S] This record drives into the inner sanctum of twangdom. A barrage of liberating guitar noise doesn't explain why this is called Leopards and the cover has fish on it. Well mixed up...and well worth searching out. A motorbaby! DH

THE BATFISH BOYS Purple

Dust GWR You get a brilliantly haunting full colour pic disc, if you get in quick enough, and it features an amalgamation of Hendrix's P Haze and Queen's Another One Bites The Dust. It's a headache, but not as much as the reasoning to why they actually bothered to do this in the first place. A piece of whimsey that Mike Smith might like too. NB

THE BIG MAYBE Some Things Never Change

Picture Book (Box 61, Barrington, IL 60011, USA) Jangle-frenzied pop with a commercial edge and a downbeat vocal slur. The Big Maybe could be big real soon. DH

THE BIKINI VALLEY SUNDAE Down And Out In Formby And Southport Pelham

Grenville [R] [C] This bunch are perverse. They don't write new songs, they just change the group's name and try again. As 16 Again, Down And Out was a flexi which borrowed heavily from the Spiral Scratch Buzzcocks and spat down the throats of Razorcuts. This time, The Bikini Valley Sundae have sampled the fall of civilisation and the end of the world. I don't know what they're up to, but they're not trying to win friends, that's for sure. Next year, jazz-funk. HW

(Box 61, Barrington, IL 60011, USA) There's a lot of the Beatles and Byrds in this strumming pop opus. Choo Choo Train seem to have exceedingly long hair and are swaggered in pop finery. Still, it's a pretty ridiculous name, don't you think? DH

CHRIS & COSEY Exotika (remix) Play It Again Sam

[R] [C] Further pleasantries from the Peters And Lee of indie electro-dom, remixed from the LP of the same name. You can tell this artefact has been lovingly created and packaged, but they still need kicking up the ass and convincing that they are capable of so much better. AB

COMRADE 9 These Boots Are Made For Walkin'

COM333 (Scott Bentley, 1800 7th st #8e, East Moline, IL 61244, USA) Yes, the old Lee Hazelwood chestnut, with a neat pace and a wispy female vocal line. More powdered and provocative (if you can believe that) than the original! Accept no substitute. R

DANGERTRIPPERS

Incantation South East (208 Devonport St, Iowa City, Iowa 52240, USA) Twangy Byrds-style foreplay with some lyrical style thrown in for good measure, leading us back to that tell-tale McGuinn strum. A timeless single that's worth your cash. NB

DEPECHE MODE Behind The

Wheel Mute [C] [S] A remix from the Music For Masses album that has the essential pop width of Depeche in focus, while on the flip-side, the transport theme is continued with a bizarre rock-out version of Route 66. Yes, that one. NB

ANNA DOMINO Lake Les

Disques Du Crepuscule [P] The best track from Anna from a disappointing new album, this sees our fave siren getting soft and seductive at her piano, like Mathilde Santing without the hype of David Sylvian in typically reflective moments. AB

EMILY The Iron EP Creation

[C] Hardly modern, but then we shouldn't hold this against people. Especially, as in the case of Emily, when they've made a very fine record. Comparisons are dull, so instead, let's welcome the all new surreal review... orange, leaves, Fine-Fare, toothbrush, handbag, chimneys, Buckinghamshire. Get the picture? JD

THE FALL Victoria Beggars

Banquet Mark E Smith opts to cover this Kinks chestnut and adds a little bit of Dickensian tragedy with his stylised vocal delivery. A character perchance, and a little bit of a taster for the late March release of their excellent new LP. DH

FFLAPS EP Anhren [R] [C]

Angry Welsh pop punk with a bustling drumbeat and taped voices in the backgrounds. Crackling and creative. DH

THE FLUFFIES Kidding Myself From Chorley

PC The Fluffies is a dreadful name, but their Kidding Myself is a fine ballad that should be cherished. Even worse, they share this record with another group, Dash Rip Rock — and they're as bland and short-sighted as The Fluffies' chosen name. NB

FRANTIC FLINTSTONES Bedrock Raucous

RC Authentically unkempt rockabilly straight from the hip. Frantic Flintstones sound like they've just stepped out of an all-night hoe-down after sweating up a storm...what's more they're intent on recreating the experience. From Loughborough with strange hairstyles! JE

THE GREAT LEAP FORWARD A Peck On The Cheek A La Politique Ron Johnson

NM Hmmm, the best thing that could have happened! Yes, something just as rewarding has started to emerge from one of the former tentacles of Big Flame. This three track 12 inch is a magnificent "near experimental/ almost accessible" slice of music that suggests greater leaps forward. Patented pop. DH

GRIMM DEATH & JOZ ONE Too Tuff To Rip Vinyl Solution

P The Vinyl Solution mould gets broken to take in UK hip hop that's emerging from bedrooms throughout the country, and the first release features some of the craziest cut-ups to be heard for some time. A bonafide weird one — and all with a dance beat. DH

THE GROOVEYARD Peter

Playroom Discs RC In 1988 The Grooveyard will become recognised as the weirdest bunch of musicians since the Bonzo Dog Doo Dah Band. This, their first step onto vinyl is not as wild, spectacular and ecstatic as their live shows — but groovy all the same. Four very strange, beautiful, freaky songs that could have been written by Wendy Craig on acid. JD

HAPPY HATE ME NOTS Salt, Sour And Brighton

Waterfront SN Best of the current bunch from Waterfront with a scorching rhythmic onslaught aided by some popist sidesteps and a great arrangement. The biggest sound to come out of Australia since Les Patterson's victory speech. DH

THE HEADSTONES Love

Songs Waterfront SN There's something very reminiscent of some great God-like rock riff in the sky here...but I can't quite place it. The Headstones need to gargle and fuzz-out some more, to get the picture in focus. DH

THE HILL BANDITS Hotrod Buckboard Boogie Ediesta

RC The Hill Bandits play the kind of late-night dancehall swing that could break in novelty pop terms. Focusing around the sweet lyrical refrains of Fiona McMillan, they'll more than likely end up in a country-swing tale of L'pool clubland written by Al Bleasdale. NB

HOUSE OF THE LARGE SIZES

EP South East (208 Devonport St, Iowa City, Iowa 52240, USA)

Four tracks from darkest Iowa, that cook with a scalding intensity and a histrionic guitar flutter. Approaching metallic rebounds, House Of Large Sizes have their moments on side two's cuts, but maybe that was just me getting used to their whining drawl. JE

THE HUMDINGERS A Little Love On The Side

Waterfront SN You can't help feeling that these boys aren't a singles band. The 'dingers just haven't got the material to cut it on a three minute segment, but hey, lots of people don't...Let's reserve judgement and wait for something more endearing. DH

INSTIGATORS Full Circle/ The Sleeper Double A

Records RC Miles better than their last live release, Full Circle rocks along quite nicely, thank you very much, but it's The Sleeper that takes the silver star and big tick; slightly reminiscent of something I can't quite put my finger on but, anyway, my toe tells me what's what; tap, tap and tap again. DI

I START COUNTING Lose Him

Edit Mute CS I Start Counting's brand of electronic pop hasn't really made the dent that they originally deserved. Very much in the school of effect and performance occupied by Art Of Noise, their symphonic style of chirpy commercialism emerged at the wrong time for them to be lauded as leaders. Lose Him won't gain them many new compadres, but it's a rewarding enough excursion. DH

JUSTIFIED ANCIENTS OF

MUMU Big Fat 45 KLF

Communications C Another

sampling OD, this time JAMMS manage to cover their tracks so well (well, just about) that they've created quite a unique slurry from the washed up world of musical history. A bracing release that will, no doubt, be banned in time. DH

LUXURIA Redneck Beggars

Banquet Howard Devoto makes a welcome return with a sparkling little number that recalls Magazine circa Correct Use Of Soap/Upside Down in terms of production, and serves as an appetiser for his new album. Backed with Bob Dylan's previously unreleased She's Your Lover Now, this is powerfully strident guitar pop that should please many old fans and deserves to win new converts. AB

MASS APPEAL The Bar Of

Life... Waterfront SN Two full-cock thrashes from down under. A plectrum-breaking performance as the Appeal crash downwards, revolving around the floor, knocking over unsuspecting members of the public like ten pins. Yes, if you like it fast and quick, then this is loud enough for you. NB

THE McCLUSKEY BROTHERS

She Said To The Driver

DDT FE Floating pimple-busting pop from the pens of ex-Bluebells. Treading water and clutching for radio play and a major deal, it wimps-out with the greatest of ease. Julian Henry will love it! JE

MEHEAD Brain Collages

Makerite NM Difficult jazzed-out art music which builds some strange structures. Dishevelled Stump-esque patterns and cubist manifestos, the end result is OK in small doses, totally undecipherable and strangely provocative. NB

THE MIGHTY LEMON DROPS

Inside Out Blue Guitar The Drops' most certain and direct outing to date rips a leaf from The Teardrop Explodes' handbook and sounds destined for airplay and chart attention. A melancholy vocal line and a fine arrangement makes it their finest yet! DH

MOEV Capital Heaven

Netwerk RC A groovy slice of electro-sequencer disco that's not quite hardcore — but by no means lightweight fluff either. Destined for alternative club play all over their native North America, this won't sell by the lorryload over here, but shouldn't do any harm to the Netwerk/Capitol Records alliance either. More power to the corporate giant for continuing to take chances on non-overtly commercial groups. AB

THE MOTHERS Drive Me

Wild Waterfront SN A superb onslaught of frantic guitars festooned with a female vocal spat out with spleen-curdlingness. What's more, Fiona turns out a temperamental geetar solo which strips paint midway through. Gripping! DH

MOTTEK Torture Starving

Missile Records C A reasonably smart promotional platter taken from Mottek's Riot album. The earthy fuzzed guitar and Margaret Mottek's slaveringly slavish vocal line make for dark and eerie post-post-punk-positivism, if you know what I mean... JE

NO MAN'S LAND I Need More

Au-Go-Go SN Culturally abrasive lead guitar lines distort and shake loose from this storming rock-out. No Man's Land are squirming and vitriolic as they break free from the rigours of everyday chunkiness and demand the impossible. NB

NYAH FEARTIES Good, Bad

And Alkies DDT FE The folk/punk bar room brawl continues and the Fearties' Scots twang gets yet further into the cerebral zone. Strumming until their watchstraps catch fire and banging cardboard tubes for effect, it all makes for a tremendous racket. DH

PARADE GROUND Strange World Play It Again Sam

RR C Suburban electro-pop without the depth of throat or width of imagination. Beaty but not brawny enough. NB

PENTHOUSE PAUPERS EP

Grown Up Wrong Sh A four track excursion into the rock-infested backwaters of your mind, with a token cover of Route 66 to give the pundits an idea as to the rock vision of this Aussie five piece. Forcing the issue, chuckling at their roots, the Paupers cut a fine silhouette as they disappear to the bar. DH

PIG BROS Just Call Me God

Cake NM C The Bros regress to a state of late '70s white funk-manship, where the sounds that rocked the house, so to speak, were Funkapolitan, Skidoo and A Certain Ratio. Brum's answer has sparkle and wit but lacks that off-the-wall nuttiness that pointed their ancestors into either nothingness or change. Commercially viable but what moves next? JE

THE PRIMITIVES Crash Lazy

Now distributed by RCA, The Prims have secured a more immediate, accessible and chunky sound, which flies through the air embraced with a throbbing guitar and an excellent arrangement, supporting a prim Primitive lead vocal line. Possible hit and a must to behold. DH

PSYCHE Uncivilized New

Rose P Firmly ensconced in the Depeche Mode school of pop electronica, Psyche have the potential for Euro success in pop quarters, but this new 12 inch is a bit sluggish at times through its sequenced plod. NB

RENEGADE SOUNDWAVE

Cocaine Sex Rhythm King

C The long awaited follow up to the superb Kray Twins sees the Renegades touching on a couple of other alternatively taboo subjects. The end result is another colossal rhythm creamed with some flakey humping noises and a drug-induced gyration that should be welcomed to every household. Stick this! R

ROYAL FAMILY & THE POOR

Restrained In A Moment

Gaia RR C Three tracks (synths, vocals, beats and bits) available only as a 12 inch, and well worth shelling out for. Restrained In A Moment (I Love You) floats ethereally in a higher realm where beauty isn't a dirty word. When The Shadow Falls marries a beatier groove to a passionate vocal and Behind The Veil moves through the air slowly at first and accelerates its particles to form a lovely sphere of atmospheric pop that will leave you humming for days afterwards. Worthy of praise indeed. DI

THE SKOLARS Time Of Our Lives/Love Of Loves

Waterfront Sh Not every beat out of Oztralia kicks over tower-blocks. The Skolars dig deep into the foundations with a fast side and a slow side of their haunting rock groove and over-she-goes anyway. Sensitive, considered and splendid. Are you sure they're from Oz? HW

THE SUNSET STRIP Going Home

Au-Go-Go Sh The sound of The Byrds when they grew beards (Byrdmaniax), discovered God (just before that) and got heavier (later on). The Sunset Strip have a more melancholy turn of phrase which makes Going Home into an embracing empty feeling that's depressingly good. DH

SWINGING LAURELS Push

And Shove Happy C This is a nicely packaged 45 that's primed for the pop market, presenting a tale of irksome self-abuse for love (Pumpin' iron to you, mate). Somehow there's not enough to hit paydirt, but the Laurels provoke a feeling that they might just be on to something. NB

TEST DEPT Victory/Cha Till Sinn Tuille Some Bizarre

C It seems Test Dept are so far out on a limb that they at once sound militant then immediately whimsical. Victory reminds all too much of Woody Allen's Love And War Russian spoof, while Cha Till's Scottish reel may be the first Hogmaney single, but it's an experience hardly worth repeating. A logical progression perhaps, but a systematic narrowing of support. R

TOT TAYLOR AND HIS ORCHESTRA The Wrong Idea/The Compromising Life

LPA RT C Oh, Tot! This is so difficult to write about, a schmaltzy double-A that sounds like a parody of Sinatra, while at the same time becoming slimly contemporary. On face value, The Wrong Idea is the better of the two with its big band noise, but Tot's vocals just aren't dynamic enough to carry it off. DH

TWANG Snapback Ron

Johnson NM C Bizarre funk offshoot from Twang which makes up in rhythm for what it lacks in depth. Snapback could have appeared eight years ago and been seen as too straight, but with no new funksters straddling the dancefloor these days, it sounds quite unique. NB

VAZZ Pearls CRV

FE C Vazz's progress through seven, 12, album and cassette, to this new 12-inch disc, has been a blossoming worth noting. Now, the Glasgow duo seem to have reached a perfectly pitched, and unmistakably original statement that deserves much wider attention. Floating with muscles ready to flex. DH

VIVA LA MUERTE It Ain't

Easy Kentucky Straight (Spykerlane 4, 6828EC Arnheim, The Netherlands) If there's one single you're going to put pen to paper for this month, then this must be it. A post-Wire/sub-Bomb Party wash that throbs and churns as it rushes in at medium pace. Exquisite, obnoxious and alarming. DH

WASCH! Cocaine What's So Funny About... (Glashuttenstr 113, 2000 Hamburg 6, West Germany) A rockist, sequenced cover of JJ Cale's Cocaine, which owes a touch to everyone from Duane Eddy to Chuck Berry and Sique Sputnik. The pace is just a little too slow to make it count, but the graphics and presentation are right. DH

WIDDERSHINS Now You

Know Waterfront Sh A wavering female vocal line floats in and out of this seemingly harmless tune. However, after a couple of plays the hooks are in and Widdershins have plucked another pundit from pop obscurity. Watch these W's, they've got the beat. DH

LAVERNE BAKER WITH JACKIE WILSON

I'm Gonna Get You

C5 Records C5-510 Many people think there would never have been the great soul singers of the '60s, like Aretha Franklin, without the groundwork laid down by Laverne Baker, and certainly the material here shows a more soulful quality than had been evident with the blues-cum-spiritual music which pre-emanated it. Two tracks out of 16 here feature Jackie Wilson (Please Don't Hurt Me and Think Twice from 1966) which indicates something of a selling ploy, yet the best are Laverne's kitsch numbers, like the excellent Batman To The Rescue which utilises that theme tune.

Justifiable retrospection, and more for the likes of Elkie Brooks to plunder, no doubt. Carole Linfield

ELKIE BROOKS

The Early Years 1964-1966

C5 Records C5 506 P How strange that Elkie should be such a soulful youth circa mid-'60s. What's more she had a fine hairdo then — not all wispy and bedraggled like today. This set features some quality blue-eyed soul that varies from Lulu soundalikes to Northern soul-esque, and eventually travels into early evening wear. She sounds desperate to be Cleo Laine at times, but manages some fine moments along the way on this 12 tracker. And to think she went from this to Dada, Vinegar Joe and a dangerously popular solo career. Hrrmph! Dave Henderson

THE CHILLS

Kaleidoscope World

Flying Nun FNE 13 RE C This Chills' tale of earlier days first appeared on Creation, but has now found its way back to Flying Nun, with the addition of a bonus seven inch too. With eight monster-sound symphonies on the album, this platter will not disappoint anyone who's embraced their most recent Brave Words LP, and will enhance their God-like status within the rock press of the world yet further. Dave Henderson

THE CONQUEROO

From The Vulcan Gas Co

Four Hours Back TOCK 008

RE C Some joker had led me to believe the Conqueroo were prime Texas punk psychedelia, the rediscovered lost cousins of the 13th Floor Elevators. Thick sliced baloney! Where the Elevators snag you up in their whirlwind power these bluesy meanderings just potter about describing little circles, the Conqueroo are more akin to the Doors at their dreariest. They left Texas for San Francisco and they could never go home again. Vachel Booth

THE ERECTORS/ THE NIPS

Bops, Babes, Booze and Bover

Big Beat WIKM 66 P Featuring Shane MacGowan and Shanne Bradley back when punk was lean, mean and meant something to somebody. First up on the Nipple Erectors side of the album is King Of The Bop; their first release and a cross-bred mix of punk and rockabilly, which was, at the time, an original sound. Later, as The Nips, comes Gabrielle; mellower and almost Lou Reedy in its texture. Both these and assorted punky oddments appear on this low-price release; an interesting, albeit not that exciting, look at what a Pogue and a former Men They Couldn't Hang'er got up to in their youth. One for fans and collectors and irrepressible spikeys. Daz Igymeth

THE SAINTS

Eternally Yours

Fan Club FC035 P Classic second album from The Saints circa '78. After the speedpunk thrash of their debut I'm Stranded, this album began to show the prowess of Ed Kuepper's writing ability, proving that there was a softer underbelly to the Australian buzz-saw. The opening cut, Know Your Product with it's Soul Man horns showed the way, but there's still enough of the aggressive chunkiness to satisfy even the spikiest of muso. Dave Henderson

Six Disques Bleu

Abstract AABT 500 P A limited edition six record box set, tastefully presented in blue and yellow (yes, even blue vinyl), which features some of the best material to have emerged from Abstract towers in recent times.

Included is New Model Army's seminal Vengeance LP, The Three Johns' classic Atom Drum Bop, compilations Punk and Disorderly (with tracks from The Adicts, Vice Squad, The Dead Kennedys etc) and They Shall Not Pass (the CNT lable comp featuring tracks from other Abstract releases.

The featured artists on the additional platters enhance the leather and stud veneer of Abstract, perfectly spiced with the correct amount of social awareness. On show, there's Big Zap, The Janitors, Moodists, Howard Hughes, Into A Circle, Bomb Party, 1,000 Mexicans, The Gymslips, Five Go Down To The Sea and Hagar The Womb. There's of course more, but those names alone should give you some idea of how Abstract have fitted into the scheme of things since 1983...and hopefully how they'll continue to do so in the future. Dave Henderson

WIN OUT!

And what's more, we've got two of these box sets to give away to Underground readers who can answer the following three questions.

- 1 Who was the bass player on New Model Army's Vengeance LP?
- 2 Which Beggars Banquet artiste did Howard Hughes write and produce for?
- 3 Which group was Barry Jepson's first endeavour before he ended up in Into A Circle?

Answers, please, on a postcard to Underground Abstract Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1, to arrive by February 10.

A cornucopia of Numan! Like him or loathe him, old Gal's certainly stood the test of time, battling through the changing tides of music with his own inimitable brand of electronic pop.

Thus, Beggars have produced a bumper value-for-money overview of the Numan career with these three CDs, each of which is "extended play", producing around an hour and a quarter's worth of music on each disc.

As a way of collecting the Numan meisterworks without having to resort to the bland 'Best Of...' routine, it's a winning combination, all of which just goes to prove you can be ignored by the Beeb and still make it. Carole Linfield

Bayou Rhythm And Blues Shuffle

Goldband GCL 111  Fifties southern-fried R&B with that ever-present slowed boogie rhythm leading a selection of Goldband artistes into the listening booth. This is no-frills soul music with a tale of heartache in every chorus and a vibrant instrumentation sounding like Van Morrison. All quality stuff, but for my money the two tracks from Shelton Dunaway And The Boogie Ramblers take the cornbread. Dave Henderson

Beserkley Chartbusters
Volume One

Beserkley BZ0044 PRT Beserkley's show of force circa '75 gets a timely airing — reminding one and all of just how good Jonathan Richman was. Roadrunner is featured alongside the bizarre tale of The New Teller in Richman's bank plus two more cuts. The supporting cast boasts some fine material from Greg Kihn and some average to less than desirable remarks from The Rubinoos and Earth Quake. Hardly a unified display, but at least a sturdy launching pad. Johnny Eager

Lookin' For Boys

Roxy XSLP 102  From the good folks who brought us Mayhem and Psychosis vol. 1 & 2 a superlative collection of some of the lesser known '60s girl groups. On a 16 track compilation you'd expect a few fillers but, strike me down if I tell a lie, there's only one track that doesn't deserve inclusion and some of these are real doozies. Earl Jeans rendition of Goffin and King's I'm Into Something Good (the original version of Herman's Hermits no.1 hit) is positively revelatory, almost too gorgeous to be real. Lagging just a little distance behind come Tracey Dey, The Cinderellas and The Whyte Boots singing about true luv, dating your sister's boyfriend and murdering your rival, there's even an answer record to the Beach Boys' Surf City, with a great spoken intro and backing vocals that chirp "yeah, yeah, yeppity yeah!". Vachel Booth

The Best of Pebbles Vol. Two

Ubik TAKE-2  A misleading title, this is, in effect, a brand new volume of the gonest album series of 'em all. Some of the selections have appeared on Psychedelic Unknowns and other hard to find compilations but, for the most part, can't be found on the original Pebbles series. There's no strict theme this time around. What you get is a choice grab-bag of mid-'60s US teen madness, from brooding psyche back through stomping garage pop spite, each cut a cinch to mess your mind. Loaded Down With The Blues

Charly Records CRB 1170

 Isn't it about time that the entire staff of Charly Records were knighted, or something? They go about their dally trade, releasing records like this — it's a bloody masterpiece, of course — with such modesty and obvious care, it makes you feel quite ashamed. Here you will find Eddie Lang turning out a raw and soulful version of I'm Gonna Make You Eat Those Words, Boogie Jake weighs in with the 1959 Baton Rouge recording of Early Morning Blues plus Polka Dot Slim, Nolan Pitts and Edgar Blanchard. A fine record. Julian Henry

What's Shakin'

Edsel ED 249  From the backyard of '66, this compilation traces some of the earlier Elektra recordings which heralded the arrival of the label in the UK. Released at the same time as Love's debut set it boasts recordings that were at the time unavailable elsewhere. Featured are The Lovin' Spoonful, Al Kooper, The Paul Butterfield Blues Band and Eric Clapton And The Powerhouse among others. Still quite unique in its bluesy R&B veneer, you can almost hear the psychedelic hues beginning to take shape. A valuable artefact and a must for purists. Nick Brody

YO, DUDES!

Home runs and headbutts with Yo La Tengo

Yo La Tengo's short promotional jaunt 'round Europe at the end of last year turned out to be a catalogue of disasters; diverted planes, missed gigs, cancelled gigs, late interviews (oops) and all the while they were missing seeing some "crucial" baseball games.

- ★ Baseball is central to the Yo La Tengo ethos. Ira and Georgia, the nucleus of the group, play in Sunday little league games at home in New Jersey. Ira's a self-confessed baseball brat.
- ★ "Baseball and basketball were the only things that made going to school bearable. I got hooked then and I've never been able to give up. Baseball, at least, with basketball it's harder to get a game together."

Yo La Tengo: baseball and beatnik

- ★ So you can relate to Jim Carroll's Basketball Diaries?
- ★ "Well that's a good book but there's far too much attitude for my liking, too much attitude and not enough basketball."
- ★ Jim Carroll, one time member of the Patti Smith Group, is said to be the guy who utters the infamous "go get me a double Pernod" on the Velvet Underground's Live At Max's, Kansas City LP.
- ★ "Probably the high point of his whole career," reckons Ira.
- ★ Ira loves the Velvets with a passion and doesn't get hung up that the soft fractured sounds of the Yo La Tengo LPs have repeatedly been compared to the Velvets' third album phase. Yo La include several VU songs in their large repertoire of covers (which also includes stuff by Love, The Feelies and, more improbably, Big Black and Sonic Youth). New Wave Hot Dogs, their new LP, features one of these Velvet anthems, It's Alright (The Way That You Live), a song originally recorded as a demo before the sessions for The Velvet Underground And Nico LP.
- ★ The song, because of its lo-fi nature is only available on a bootleg, so Yo La Tengo's version is something of a public service.
- ★ Chris Stamey, ex of the dB's and a sometime Yo La member, suggested using a different arrangement.
- ★ "If it was just us," says Ira "we'd have left it like it was, but Chris isn't overawed by that stuff like us, he wasn't afraid to mess around with it, put the middle eight further back in the song. I do think it sounds much better for what he did."
- ★ Ira used to be a rock hack for New York Rocker and Village Voice and still writes the odd piece now and again, he's littered New Wave Hot Dogs with rock history references and he's not frightened of being unfashionable.

- ★ The LP kicks off with Clunk featuring an intro swiped from Blue Oyster Cult, which isn't so bad, but three cuts later Ira's listing and playing tribute to "all the hit songs America ever wrote."
- ★ Now come on! At least the mid-'70s trad rock sounds that skulked around their first album have all but disappeared, this nerve is more taut and cleanly woven.
- ★ The Story Of Jazz namedrops some heavyweights like Cheetah Chrome, Doug Yule and Steve Albini, it's one of the few places on the record that Yo La actually rock out, not that they ever get real gone. Talk from America though is that their live shows are wall-to-wall wildness, you and I will have to wait until the early summer to find out for ourselves.
- ★ Yo La Tengo were to play Dingwalls the Sunday night they were over here, borrowing equipment and doing a 20-minute set slipped into 'amateur night'. This was one of their disasters. When the soundman finds out Georgia is left handed and needs a couple of drums changing round he decides it's too much bother. So, while he's at the bar Yo La plug in and start up a fine squalling racket over the Billy Idol record playing on the sound system. At the end of the song a lady climbs onto the stage and asks them to leave. Georgia, whose natural expression is a dimpled smile, creases up her face, gives the hi-hat a good kick and exits with the rest of the group. It's not how they're used to being treated, it's certainly nothing like Maxwells in Hoboken, NJ, Yo La Tengo's second home.
- ★ Maxwells is just three blocks from where Georgia lives with her cat, Egon. It's a medium sized venue that recently packed out for five nights of Jonathan Richman. Not only do they play there regularly but they go just to hang out and sometimes to work; Ira mixes groups' sound and Georgia DJ's.
- ★ Georgia's got more strings to her bow, she designs the group's record sleeves and also works as an animator. "Last thing I did was a Coco Pops advert with this cuckoo bird and a rock'n'roll group, that was fun. My whole family's into animation, it's like the family business. My sister and brother-in-law are doing an animated film at the moment. . . ."
- ★ Ira: "It's going to be brilliant, I've seen some of that. It's about William Blake, kind of explaining the ideas in his poems and paintings but it's all couched in baseball terms! It's called Blakeball!"

From Buzzcock

Soon after releasing his solo album Jerky Versions Of The Dream in July 1983, Howard Devoto seemed to disappear forever, his only other vocal performances catalogued thereafter being a couple of songs for Euro avant-gardist Bernard Szajner, and an adequate rendition of Alex Chilton's Holocaust for the first This Mortal Coil LP in 1984.

It seemed as if 'the insect' of countless classic Magazine recordings had been well and truly squashed.

But this month brings news of a welcome return to the music business, in cahoots with Liverpoolian guitarist Noko (pronounced Knocko). Together they form Luxuria, and have just released their debut single, Redneck, on Beggars Banquet, to be followed by an LP, Unanswerable Lust, at the end of February.

But more of this later. Let's kick off our thrice re-arranged interview by probing the lordly dome about his past, starting with his formation of The Buzzcocks with Pete Shelley.

"The stuff we did sounds too fast to me and a bit weedy now. I like it, but it doesn't really count for a great deal in my thoughts. Whenever I see interviews these days with people who claim to be influenced by The Buzzers, I never know whether they're talking about Spiral Scratch and the other stuff I did, or the later chart records. It's just how music affects people at a certain age. The Magazine records were worlds further..."

Agreed? Well, so did everybody else. NME were exclaiming 'Devoto — the most important man alive', as they do, and not many were disappointed when Magazine's debut album 'Real Life' appeared on Virgin.

"I still think that record has a great breadth to it, but I now hear a band settling, still trying to pull itself together with the necessary weight that it's trying to muster. If you listen to something like Parade on that LP, I much prefer the version on Play (their live album from late 1980), it seemed by then as if the song had worked itself out a lot more, and was less aloof than on Real Life."

Devoto's startling lyrical imagery and detached vocal technique was proving to be the perfect foil for John McGeoch, Barry Adamson and Dave Formula's dazzling instrumentation, creating an album that, despite modest sales, remains a classic of its time. This was 1978's answer to Low and The Idiot from the two years previous. However, critics change, as critics do, and by the following spring the knives were out for Secondhand Daylight.

"A lot of people panned that album, and I must admit it sounds a little excessive to me now, though I mean more that we had really decided what we were about and really plunged into it. I think some of it's overwrought, but then again it really plumbed the depths and scaled the heights on some tracks, more than anything else we did." I remember Garry Bushell's review in Sounds as being particularly vitriolic.

"Yes, that man works for The Sun now, doesn't he? Don't you think the years have done a little telling? Oi, Oi, cap'n... Did the excesses you mentioned have anything to do with bringing Factory Records producer Martin Hannett in to produce The Correct Use Of Soap? To redress the balance, perhaps?"

"Yes, I suppose you're right. It was recorded a lot quicker, and there was more emphasis on guitar. That's my favourite record, definitely the most consistent thing we did."

They passed through the dreaded third album syndrome with flying colours, gaining unanimous praise throughout the press. But as before they failed to take up residency in the charts, although their eighth, and penultimate single, Sweetheart Contract, came closest to denting the Top 40 since the awegasmic Shot By Both Sides debut.

When John McGeoch left to join Siouxsie And The Banshees, replacement Robin Simon (late of Ultravox) was quickly given the chance to show off his talents on the Play live album that winter. But he didn't last and when Devoto announced in May '81 that he was splitting the band, just weeks before the release of Magic, Murder And The Weather, that record came as a real anti-climax.

"There was a good half an album there, but some of the strain at the time showed itself. A lot of it was obviously down to losing John McGeoch, and some due to the mixing desk, which was economically designed so that very few hands could interfere with it!"

After the split, Devoto signed a solo deal with Virgin, but it was two years before Jerky Versions Of The Dream appeared.

"In retrospect, I wasn't very happy with much of that and decided that a solo career wasn't for me. So I stopped. Simple as that."

Which is where Noko comes in. Not quite as steeped in historical reference points as his partner, his band, The Umbrella, had split in 1986, since when he had been playing hysterical guitar into Devoto's ansaphone at every given opportunity in an attempt to coax him back into the biz.

Noko: "I'd always liked whatever Howard had done and considered him to be a major force in whatever he did. I knew what made him tick musically..."

Devoto: "Besides, we were both about to read Proust's A La Recherche De Temps Perdu..."

Which, of course, contains handy hints for formative duos and is believed to have been instrumental in the later success of The Krankies, Mike And Bernie Winters and Roger de Courcy And Nookie. Will Devoto and Noko be as successful as those awesome couples?

Devoto: "Phenomenally."

A fair percentage of Magazine fans are bound to buy your new records, if only out of curiosity. What about new fans?

Noko: "I see no reason why there shouldn't be new fans. I mean, I look down the charts and I don't really see a great deal there!"

Devoto: "We just do what we do."

Noko: "And we do it well."

Devoto: "It's been a long time to a lot of people. But there is a common thread between what we do now and the past. I still recognise myself in the sound."

While the Redneck single is an instant slice of neat guitar-pop, the promo four song taster from the upcoming album that currently monopolises my tape deck is slightly harder to assimilate, a track such as the brass-driven Pound taking a few listens before really sucking you in. The gentle but moving Lady 21 being more immediate, and showing that Devoto still has the gift when it comes to classic lyric writing:-

"Watch yourself now, the lino's greasy/It could surely kill/Ever since they fixed the light in here/This place has gone downhill."

And I didn't know he used my local! There will be inevitable comparisons to Magazine, but Luxuria are a lot different. Sure, the Gaye Bykers fan will probably realise that this is not a sight for his sore eyes, but the man with the Midas touch seems to have done it again. Nice one H. Alex Bastedo

LUXURIA Unanswerable Lust Beggars Banquet BEGA 90 Release date: February 22, 1988

Historians may draw some pretty disjointed lines and strange tangents between Howard Devoto's singing debut on vinyl to today's partnership with the enigmatic Noko as Luxuria. Being firstly associated with Pete Shelley and Buzzcocks, appearing on the seminal Spiral Scratch EP from the group, immediately established him as a cult figure. Having departed the group before Shelley and team inked a deal with United Artists, moving headlong into the punk maelstrom, he was allowed more room for manoeuvre in Magazine.

From their debut single, Shot By Both Sides on Virgin, the magnitude of the Magazine sound could quite easily be measured. Subsequently, Magazine developed through their album and single repertoire for Virgin, into the kind of outfit who you couldn't help but take note of. The various offshoot projects and wayward directions that the various members went on to, underlining the creative heart that ticked within the group. Even in their demise their popularity continued and Devoto's virtual disappearance fuelled the legend. So does Unanswerable Lust answer the prayers of a devoted Devoto generation? Well, in many ways it does. The vocal style is as ever distinctly Devoto — you either love or loathe it, and if you're part of the former then the instrumentation supplied by Noko — some sparkling guitar — and the production by the duo and Gavin McKillop won't disappoint. With more or less one word titles, Unanswerable Lust appears to be a collection of sketches, filled out with Devoto's succulent wordage, including his true forte for travelogue and atmospheric creation. Furthermore the arrangements and additional interjections of noise, effect and spoken parts makes the LP a much broader experience than Magazine — while creating a selection of possible lines for Luxuria to pursue.

One thing's for certain, Unanswerable Lust is a long way removed from Spiral Scratch and Mr Devoto leaves yet more topics open for debate. Dave Henderson boxer shorts fetish!

Woodentops' Rolo reveals

Rolo the yellow brick road

"I am the boy with a bag of jumping beans for you."

The boy is Rolo, The Woodentops dynamo, whirling dervish, singer and songwriter. He stands at the door in his 'Eat Me' boxer shorts clutching a fluorescent pink skateboard. We're off. With more words-per-minute than a top class temp, he drives me through The Woodentops story, on the road from rags to riches — the best idea he ever had, driving lessons, the demise of his car, and the recording of their new LP Wooden Foot Cops On The Highway.

"The best idea I ever had was asking this guy if I could borrow his flat for the afternoon. I sat down and started recording things using my Walkman, a little Casio keyboard and his stereo, that's when I wrote Do It Anyway, my first song, then Plenty, our first single. If I hadn't done that, maybe I'd never have started writing."

So, you discovered you could sing?

"Oh no, that only happened about four days ago."

The rest is history — a string of wonderful singles (Move Me, Well Well Well, It Will Come, and Good Thing), then a disappointing first LP (Giant). The last we heard from The Woodentops was Live Hynobeat Live in April last year. Since then they have been travelling the world, and creating a new record.

"That's why we haven't been around, we've been globe-trotting — Europe, America, Japan, we've played everywhere."

The Woodentops are still one of the most successful 'indie' bands, but have never had that illusive crossover hit. Still, Rolo, with his new found ability to sing, is now more confident than ever — "It's like it was four years ago when we started. Here we are fresh as a daisy, crazy as hell."

Since the demise of The Smiths that hit has become more important, at least for their record company, the ultimate 'indie' Rough Trade — "Last time we played in Manchester there was some wally at the front, and apart from screaming 'Dustin Hoffman' he kept shouting 'Rough Trade'. I knew he was saying it as a joke, Rough Trade have got the reputation for being a complete and utter joke. One reason is because they're skint because they're the only f---ers who have continued churning out no-hope records. But somebody has to put out records only a few people want, and if the Woodentops were mega famous we'd stay with them, because I believe Rough Trade's the only place where I know all the profits aren't going to go up in a pile of cocaine."

"No other record company would have let us develop in the same way, we didn't know anything when we started, they let us grow up."

Rolo isn't sorry to see the back of The Smiths either!

"I'm so pleased they've gone, they were making the same record over and over again, and they were just terribly boring. Johnny Marr told me "officially" that The Woodentops scared the shit out of The Smiths because every time we brought out a new single they couldn't believe it, because they were stuck in their little rut, and we were putting out much harder more vital records than they were."

And, with the exception of Everyday Living, the fast songs on Wooden Foot Cops... are the hardest they have released.

"It's dance music, that's what we're always trying to do, make people dance."

But watch out world because according to Rolo, "the album is like jack shit to what we'll be doing soon, we're real now."

The Woodentops are learning to control their headlong rush for the end of the song. This tightening up was helped by the replacement of keyboard player Alice — with Ann Stephenson — "I thought Alice would be hard to replace, but it was a doddle. Alice only did anything herself if I was there. But Ann is great, she's like a new driving force, and it's given Frank, Simon, Bennie and me new enthusiasm too."

And the other important thing about her?

"She's so tiny, she's an ant."

Which probably explains why...

"I've got no weight on my shoulder, I'm not worried about it being crap anymore."

But it's in the live show is where The Woodentops really get hard.

"The last time we played they were expecting a little indie band, looking a bit shabby, kind of nervous, and we just bowled them over completely."

This power and energy doesn't always come across on the records, sometimes the slowies sound a bit twee Rolo?

"Yes, maybe, but why not just enjoy the laidback relaxed attitude of the records — you see the studio's not always conducive to that heavy thing, you have to take a huge amount of the right kind of drugs to forget that you're in a studio, and we've done that too, but not all the time. I like the idea that those tracks jump out of the hedge at you when you're not expecting it."

But life in The Woodentops isn't all glamour, even Rolo sometimes has to break up his artistic muse.

"Most of the songs were written at a time when I was really depressed, after I split up with someone I'd been living with for seven years. I did two months locked in a room all day and all night, the only other thing I was doing was driving lessons."

Hence the line — "When I'm driving in my car I make believe you're the passenger", or even "She could have sat in the back seat while I was doing my lessons, it would have been lovely, but it couldn't happen, which is why I was so down."

At one point I thought I would never write another song but maybe I needed something like that to happen — I finished the writing, bought a car, and passed my driving test first time."

But the car, like love, bouts of depression, and recording sessions, was destined not to last.

"On the last day of recording I drove back from the studio with smoke pouring out of the engine, I just made it home and it stopped dead, it's never moved since."

"Then of course when I played people the LP they said — 'It's about your car' — but honestly it's not, though it is driving music — and there is a big parallel between travelling and living, they're both moving forward and things get left behind and things that you wish you didn't lose, and do."

Stop this car.

Rolo has grown up a bit, lost his childhood sweetheart, bought a nice flat in South London, and is not unused to jetting off to exotic locations like New York and Zurich for a bit of mixing. But if a great artist is supposed to be someone who can grow up and still keep the mind of a child, perhaps Rolo is still in the running. He remixed Stop This Car for an epic 12 inch at Yello's studio in the Swiss Alps but seemed most thrilled with a day spent sweeping the leaves in the grounds when the studio broke down, and, what's more, there is little danger of him turning into a yuppie.

"There's yuppies living next door and I don't look anything like them. I don't think you'd get many yups taking their clothes off at Labour benefits."

Everyone says, to be successful, you have to sell records to yuppies nowadays, and you would certainly have to be young, free and rich to buy a Woodentops CD. Though Rolo is not going to go along the Lloyd Cole Mainstream road, he doesn't care who buys his records.

"The only people I don't want buying my records are murderers, racists, and diamond smugglers... on second thoughts, I don't even care if diamond smugglers listen to them."

The Woodentops are like the aural equivalent of a bumper car ride.

"It has always been exciting and good fun but never quite convincing, now it's exciting, good fun AND convincing. I wondered if we'd left it a bit late but I don't think we have, I think people are just waiting for us to come through. Everything they're listening to is just about to be completely blown out of the window by this group that they'd almost completely forgotten about."

It's like he's just had some revelation, the group have found 'the groove', he has discovered he can sing, The Woodentops have made their best record yet, and what they do next will be even better. Rolo is so sure he's right you can't help believing him. Chris Mellor

Don't mess with the Mafia

Mark Stewart cuts up the depression

For the record, Mark Stewart was the formidable character who fronted The Pop Group way back in the halcyon, post-punk days of the late '70s and in his time has been labelled as a paranoid, an eccentric and not a little weird. Now he is teamed up with the dub master general, producer Adrain Sherwood, as well as the Tack-head team of drummer/programmer Keith LeBlanc — he of Malcolm X fame — bass player Doug Wimbish, of the inimitable Rappers Delight and other Sugarhill Gang faves, and former Ohio Players' keyboard and guitarist Skip McDonald. They are all illustrious names in their own right and together they make an impressive force.

- So, how did it all start?
- "Well, Adrian mixed the last Pop Group thing which was from the big rally in Trafalgar Square for the re-birth of the CND. Then I did some New Age Steppers stuff for him."
- Is that where the reggae influence came in?
- "No. I'd been in love with heavy dub music for years. My favourite thing ever was the Shaka Sound System. If you ever went to any of their concerts, there was just piles and piles of speakers surrounding the room. The bass would rip your stomach out. It was kinda like a mystical experience! Then one of the first rap clubs in London was the Language Lab, and a friend of mine was running it and I heard one of these tapes from America with all these drum machines going off like rockets! I loved it so much, I just had to track down Keith and the others."
- The new, eponymous, LP features myriad musical references that weave in and out, like the odd slice of Munich Machine Disco and the Satie that forms the basis for the track Stranger.
- Aren't there quite a few steals in there?
- "It's not really stealing, we credited Satie." (Actually they didn't!) "It's just like re-arranging things and cutting things up."
- Is this sampling as legitimate art then?
- "They're not samples, they were just things taken out of context. It's like watching television and suddenly you have something about Biafra followed by Rolf Harris. Cutting between things, cutting Satie with a beat, and Donna Summer cutting into something weird. The cutting between things that are heavy and happy."
- It's hard to imagine your songs being written in any conventional form, so what's the process?
- "I write the songs and then we get together and record them but after that there's a long process of disassembling them. We turn the song inside out and convert it into something else. What I like is taking quite a pleasant song and destroying it. On one song we had 78 pieces of tape on the wall and I thought I knew what they all were. So we stuck them back together and it was like pieces of feedback going backwards and it sounded brilliant.

Hey! Don't call me Stewpot

25 UNDERGROUND

- "So we threw out the song, it had taken months to record, and started re-composing it from pieces of tape like some sort of concrete sculpture. Out of a mistake you get a brilliant sound!"
- Previous albums have had strong themes, like the Big Brother and democracy theme running through the second LP, As The Veneer Of Democracy Starts To Fade. Is there a theme for the third LP?
- "They're all individual songs about despair."
- Oh, I thought this one wasn't quite as desperate as the others.
- "I think this one is more desperate in a personal sense."
- It's been mentioned before that you're rather paranoid?
- "When people say you're paranoid, it's just that they don't want to think about what you're talking about. With the last LP, people were saying I was paranoid, talking about things like surveillance, the miners strike and stuff, but they were things that were happening."
- Are the LPs going to get more and more depressing?
- "Yeah. Definitely."
- Well, let's hope he is paranoid and his predictions are not as good as his records. And so we leave him, still there on the couch, chuckling to himself in a most disconcerting way. A way that suggests he knows something I don't. Dick Mescal

My Bloody Valentine

weep for you

Last summer got off to an early start with the release of My Bloody Valentine's euphoric Sunny Sundaes Smile single in March. But no sooner was the record in the shops than David Conway, the group's singer/lyricist, decided to up and leave. He was disillusioned with the current state of pop and had been suffering for some time with a gastric illness. No longer able to keep up with the group's drinking habits, he decided to devote his time to writing stories and his first book, a science-fiction/horror exploitation novel, The Extermination Gap, is even now being mailed to publishers.

- The rest of the group, meanwhile, soldiered on; Kevin, who had previously co-written the songs assumed the role of vocalist and with Belinda, who met the group through her boyfriend, who was tried out as a backing vocalist and was given the job on condition that she learnt guitar, they were ready to fulfill their obligations to play... almost.
- I saw them a couple of months after the break, at the Astoria. Colm was the focus of the group, drumming centre stage, flinging his Brian Jones cut 'round in great sweeping arcs as he hammered away, and helping to detract attention from Kevin's nervousness and a growing uncertainty as to whether Belinda's guitar was plugged in.

- Kevin: "That was because she stepped on her lead and it came out, she hadn't been able to hear herself anyway so she didn't know. That was really bad, it was bad enough that she was only playing on a few songs then but when people see that they think it's an image thing..."
- Belinda's now fully integrated into the group, Kevin's become a more confident vocalist/front man and their voices mesh well on the new records, a simultaneously released 12-inch EP and mini-album on Lazy records. The first fruits of My Bloody Valentine's new incarnation show a fine depth and breadth of material, ranging from the layered folk-rock of the Strawberry Wine single to the Sonic Youth-influenced maelstrom of Clair. In the past they've been accused, quite wrongly, of being a third rate Jesus And Mary Chain, and one of the new songs, The Things I Miss, isn't going to stem those accusations.
- Colm: "God! That wasn't supposed to turn out like that at all..."
- Kevin: "Did you ever hear Einsturzende Neubauten do Sand? It's a Lee Hazelwood/Nancy Sinatra song."
- Colm: "Yeah, Kevin tried to do a Lee Hazelwood-type of voice but it ended up sounding exactly like Jim Reid: Never Say Goodbye on the b-side of the 12-inch is probably a better attempt at Nancy and Lee."
- How did Kevin feel about stepping into David's shoes?
- Kevin: "Well, I've always sung anyway in the rehearsal room, I've always made up the melodies, humming or going 'ba ba ba'. When David left it was, in a way, no big deal, for each song he'd write about 3 pages of lyrics and usually me and Colm would pick out the bits we liked and David would sing that. He wasn't that bothered really, he just did it because he was good at it."
- Was it a good idea to keep the name for what was virtually a new group?
- Colm: "Originally we were going to get rid of it and just become a new band, which would've been the thing to do. But what happened was we had these gigs and we were going to do them and announce the new name at the gigs but we never could think of a good enough name."
- Kevin: "Sometimes I wonder if it's always going to keep us down on an underground level, business people aren't going to be prepared to put money behind a group with a name like that, even though you hear words like 'bloody' on Eastenders all the time. It might work to our advantage all the same, you look at all the indie bands who've moved on to major labels, they haven't succeeded really. It's all been a bit of a disappointment." Vachel Booth

Junior tales and stuff!

Dinosaur kids get minimal, at least!

OK! Dinosaur, which one digs Frampo

- Frampton disinterred! Can you bear it? Dinosaur Jnr (née Dinosaur) have the bare faced cheek to exhume the old Peter Frampton conker Show Me The Way and turn it into something approaching a masterpiece. Lead into gold? Phaw, these boys are alchemists of the first order.
- J Mascis' playful couldn't-give-a-damn vocalising is a million miles from Frampton's aching sincerity and that stooped voice tube gizmo is shot to hell by Dinosaur Jnr's swirling gnarl of wah-wah. They can afford to be cocky, the recent SST EP on which Show Me The Way appears and its parent record, the LP You're Living All Over Me, have a clear confidence etched right the way through them.
- J and Lou Barlow formed Dinosaur a couple of years ago from the ashes of their hardcore group Deep Wound, roping in Murph to drum and complete the line up. Their debut album on Homestead was issued perhaps a little too soon — it's a damn good record, but the group are caught on the lam from their past and don't have a real strong idea of what they want to do, picking up ideas from their fellow post-hardcore travellers.
- Individual songs like Repulsion and The Leper stand out but the SST recordings are something different, marking out their own turf, somewhere between Everybody Knows This Is Nowhere period Neil Young and recent Sonic Youth. A damn fine place to be.
- Two things the record companies said about Dinosaur; the advert for You're Living All Over Me says they're "Known for some of the loudest performances known to man"; the sleeve notes on the Homestead compilation, Wailing Ultimate, says they're "famous for answers like 'yes' and 'no' in interviews."
- I can't testify to their loudness, their Clarendon show last November was loud but not that loud, in fact it was a tiny little noise compared with the unbearable overload I'd witnessed from Loop a week or two before. I met the group on the afternoon of the show in a freezing 'dressing room', empty except for a couple of chairs, one of them occupied by a big silent biker, his head tucked into a book of underworld murder atrocities. Of course the Homestead no comment legend was right, most of my questions were met with "I guess so," or "it just kinda happened."
- "We hope so," was popular, and those hoary old chestnuts "yes" and "no" got a look in. What was that J?
- "We've not done many interviews back home but we come to do this tour of Europe and suddenly there's journalists all over the place. After a while you can't think of anything to say so you just end up giving one word answers and you come across like a real cretin. If you do say something it usually ends up being twisted round or just plain misquoted, like when I was charged for possession of drugs in Germany, 'cause I had a bottle of *in' migraine tablets that contained something like a fraction of a percent of amphetamine. It was reported in the NME and I was quoted as saying 'Don't they have long hair in Europe?'. What's the sense of that? What I said was 'Don't people have headaches in Europe?'. This guy was obsessed with haircuts, I'd like to put the record straight here — I never have had a mohawk!"
- Whew! I'm glad that's off your chest. Lou?
- "Our biggest problem at the moment is getting our records to people. All these interviews we've done lately, you stop and think 'what's the point?' You can't even get our records over here. We played in Munich last week and the response was terrific, the place was packed. When we went to look around the record shops we couldn't find our record anywhere."
- J and Lou didn't want to talk about their music and were more interested in grilling me as to the best record labels to approach with a view to a European deal and which record shops they should be visiting in London.
- The next day out on the Notting Hill record trail my mate Bob, down from Hull for the weekend refuses to go home till he gets a copy of You're Living All Over Me. At Rough Trade he manages to secure the last copy in the shop and as we leave who should walk in but J clutching a bag of old punk rock records. Life's like that sometimes. Vachel Booth

Drumming for effect!

Automatic Dlamini hit the full beat!

"It's like a spherical object with bits. (!) Imagine an orange with pieces carved out of it and left like an imperfect circle."

- Animal, vegetable or mineral? Instrumental! A sound sculpture actually. One of the many belonging to Scott Tracey, founder member and one fourth of Automatic Dlamini. It's this weird collection of percussive instruments which gives their debut LP The D Is For Drum on Idea Records, it's distinctive clamour and tone.
- "It sounds really posh, 'Sound Sculpture', and some of them can be massive structures with water coming out of them but most of mine are just things that student friends have made. I like them to look good as well as sound good." Automatic Dlamini, much like their instruments, defy any comprehensive description! The clatter of Castrol cans and various kitchen utensils is suitably combined with Scott's conversational pragmatism, lyrical intonations, and offset by the smoother, more conventional vocal of co-founder Rob Ellis. What results is a unique and compelling brand of very finely crafted pop.
- "Yeah, that's a good description actually! That's what I think we do, pop in a slightly unusual way. We've had problems from people in the past who've said, 'Are you a pop band or an art band?'. We've never set out to be either. We do like our songs to be accessible. Both Rob and myself are interested in melody and so we wanted to play songs that people could sing but that didn't sound like everybody else's pop songs."
- Seems like a pretty good idea to me — and inoffensive enough. Apparently not to some.
- "So far we've come up against a surprising amount of hostility for trying to do that, like when we released our first EP, The Crazy Supper, there were a lot of people saying, 'It's very clever and very interesting but there aren't any songs on it', which I couldn't understand because the songs were very strong."
- That's an accusation which certainly can't be levelled at the Auto's fabbo new single Me And My Conscience. Whether it's art or pop, it's undeniably catchy and probably the wittiest subjective analysis this side of Woody Allen!
- "It's quite a serious song done in a tongue in cheek way so that people don't say, 'Oh God! PRETENTIOUS!'"
- "I'm an optimist so I'm constantly depressed by life's evils. I try to see the bright side of things and convey them in my songs. I do think that Me and My Conscience is more accessible — not the song itself but the sounds used on it are more identifiable with the sort of sounds that you're used to hearing on records. I think we could have made a more comprehensive LP but this is a collection of our recordings made from 1984 through to 1987 and I think it will introduce people to our sound. When you hear something that sounds different you tend to focus on that sound rather than the song behind it. I just think it will take people a few listens before they know what to think!"
- Buy The D Is For Drum and you'll find the message clarified. A warmly perceptive and gently mocking visualisation of the human condition — there's no escape — if the music alienates, the subject matter will identify! Of course, none of this answers the real question I know you're all dying to ask — well, I was.
- What, pray tell, is an Automatic Dlamini and would we recognise one if we saw it?!
- "Dlamini is a Swazi surname. It's very common, the equivalent to Smith. A friend who was working there as a soil scientist had lots of people working for him who were called such and such Dlamini. And this one guy was called Automatic! His parents had wanted to give him a western name because it's very prestigious, they must have read it on a fridge or something! By now he was in his mid-20s and as far as he was concerned he had a perfectly reasonable name!"
- Be grateful for small mercies, readers, the band could have adopted the name of either of Automatic's brothers, Somerset and Torque-wrench! Distributor Cap Kadis

Baby teeth chatter!

Junior Manson Slags suck and blow!

CONTROVERSY? Junior Manson Slags? One and the same thing, really. Banned from certain venues purely because of their name, ejected or carried from others because of a natural propensity for the demon drink and a fondness for removing clothing on stage, they have just released a single, Hounds Of Filth, that amply restores a nation's lost faith in the art of skullduggery. But, can they dispose of all grebo opposition with a vicious sweep up the indie charts? (Could anybody actually sweep up the indie charts?) Only time will tell.

- Of the three mainstays (Karl and Michelle — vocals and different organs, plus Finn — guitar) it is the former that shiver on a cold Kentish Town street, peering at the tape-recorder. Twenty yards away a grizzled creature staggers along the road, bellowing.
- Karl: "Finn's Dad, I think. Like father, like son..."
- "Why are we the most exciting band to watch?" Michelle ponders, leaving Karl the chance to flaunt his ego.
- "We're the best to watch, very good looking, we've got a bird with a big, er, well, there's always the added excitement as..."
- Michelle: "PIG!!!"
- Karl: "We are the most exciting things around because...em...come on Michelle!"
- Michelle: "We're 'sex on stage.'"
 - Karl: "I find it very hard to disagree with that."
- Others would not be so reticent. Junior Manson Slags are uncontrollable bursts of seething guitar, jumpily bitter choruses and hair everywhere. A welcome change from the miserabilists and weeny-dancers that coagulate on general stages.
- "What are the songs about?" Karl virtually wonders. "The things we find interesting, which is, er, women and drink..."
- Michelle: "We follow the example of other bands and turn it backside first. Like a silk purse out of a sow's ear, you could say."

- "Eh?" Karl splutters. "Better re-phrase that!"
- "No," Michelle insists. "It's a well-known saying. A Chinese proverb."
- "Oh, it is!" he gasps. "We get the non-nativity bands, we're not naming names, we get their ideas, pep them up a bit, turn them round, sort it out and give it a more powerful sound and do it ourselves. We don't nick it, we 'borrow', adulterate and make it a better thing altogether."
- "Got to get your ideas from somewhere," Michelle decides. "We've all got our own personalities on stage. Finn who wants to drown everyone out and be this big '60s R&B merchant, Gordon who's always tripping up and down over his legs..."
- Karl: "Then there's the two big poseurs at the front, going all out for the centre-fold. If we make anything out of this, maybe we'll go and buy a motorbike which we're supposed to have anyway, instead of getting a bus-pass all the bloody time."
- Do you see yourself getting much out of this?
- Karl: "Can't see it!"
- He's being modest. (There's a first time for everything). P Ninja Esq

Emotional blueprints!

Red Lorry, Yellow Lorry reveal their shyness!

Chris Reed, the lead singer of Red Lorry Yellow Lorry doesn't have to worry when he wakes up in the middle of the night with a song gnawing in his brain.

- It could have come from anywhere: The thousands of albums he's listened to, the songs he was writing at 14, heck, it might even be a remnant from The Beatles' concert he saw with his Mom way back when he was seven. Where it came from doesn't matter, what happens to it after the nagging brainstorm does.
- So, maybe he'll go down early the next morning to the four-track which lies in the basement of an old Leeds pie factory. There, he'll lay down a guitar track which blisters with the "intensity" of a characteristic Lorries tune. There aren't any shortcuts or compromises. When Dave Wolfenden (guitars), Leon Phillips (bass), and Chris Oldroyd (drums) walk in, the workday begins.
- It really began five years ago in 1982. Reed and Wolfenden started the band which has always been propelled by a dual guitar and drum onslaught. The latter almost came to a halt when their last drummer went to The Mission, but that was solved with Oldroyd, a veteran of several local bands, decided that he could compete with a drum machine.
- "The drum machine is an integral part of our sound. We want the power of two drummers."
- But once you start talking about drum machines, Wolfenden (nicknamed "Wolfen") thinks that "there's bands who have a lot of press heaped on them who have copied our sound."
- Oh yeah, like who? Then there's a curious silence which is almost like an unwritten motto of the band.
- Never point fingers or make assumptions, just do what you set out to do. Maybe it's the lack of finger-pointing or making of waves which has given the band a low profile in Great Britain.
- Reed: "We've never been clever at selling ourselves. We've always been quite shy and guarded."
- Wolfenden: "A lot of people have said to us, 'Oh, but the reason you haven't had the press that you deserve is because there is no angle that the band can be sold on, and I think we see that as a compliment because the only angle to us is the music.'"
- Perhaps that's why The Lorries remain so apart from their music.
- But the music! Well, emotion is the key word there.
- Reed: "Our music hits you in a strong sensory way. It's not dark, like people say it is, it's intense, kind of like the human existence right now."
- Which leads him to another thought.
- "It's scary to think that there are some people who refuse new ideas. It's mind-blowing. Some people just refuse to take in new information."
- Although the Lorries can't be accused of that statement themselves, having just signed to a new record label (Situation Two) and claiming that the band's greatest reward is travelling (with the intent of meeting new people), their idea of emotional music is hardly "new".
- Reed: "We like a lot of Tamla Motown because that emotion just shines like a beacon. The pure injection of music back then without the advanced recording and production techniques are the best records ever made."
- Wolfenden: "Motown said more for coloured people's rights — America at that time — than Martin Luther King ever did."
- Oldroyd (amid laughter): "You can't just dismiss Martin Luther King like that."
- You can't dismiss Red Lorry Yellow Lorry either. Their new 12-inch, Open Up is like setting your entire body in a clothes dryer and spinning around for a quick three minutes.
- Relentless, stream-lined, and filled with what sounds like a guitar orchestra. The Lorries let their music do all the talking.
- The pork pie factory sure hasn't been abandoned, it's just the sight of a new product altogether: shearing intensity. Scott Murphy

SST was originally formed in 1979 by Greg Ginn and Chuck Duwalski of Black Flag in order to record and release their group's output. With money borrowed from Ginn's previous company, SST Electronics (which developed, manufactured and sold Ginn's designs for radio equipment), SST started to grow. The fact that they linked up early on with Minutemen and Husker Du defined the primal hardcore scene in America, and gave the label an identity, and a trust, that has never left them. The suburban police forces and disturbed communities around SST's office, rehearsal and living spaces tried to put a stop to it all — destroying business records, locking premises, making the team distribute stock among friends and parents. Somehow they survived.

● With a label catalogue of nearly 170 releases, SST are now one of the most prominent of independent labels in America.

● Labels like Enigma and Twin/Tone are as well respected in America, but both use major distribution (Capitol and A&M respectively), SST represent the real underground, totally independent. They put an enormous amount of their efforts into advertising as part of what SST's Chuck Duwalski calls "aggressive marketing."

Also, when SST bands tour — a constant factor in the breaking of bands in America — they're always supported by other, less known SST acts, or offshoot friends-and-collectives, bands formed out of the headliners' personnel. This way everyone is kept constantly aware of the label.

● "When we wanted people to hear Black Flag," Duwalski remembers, "it meant getting the word out. We did the same with Minutemen and Meat Puppets, too. We wanted to take the music to people, because I think the business people have slightly different interests to the people who actually listen. Journalists are often social trend people — not that they're trendy, but they're concerned about the sociological implications of it all, the idea that they can build the next wave by controlling where it goes and who listens to it. That is limiting — we just want to let people know about the bands and we continue to market that philosophy aggressively."

● "People are more interested about our new stuff than in the past, which is good for SST. People are interested in groups like Das Damen and Dinosaur, who are truly new bands trying to come out and do something special. We sign groups who have great market potential but we have some who have a negligible one, so we have to create a new market for them. So often, people invent categories and if you aren't part of it, you're plumb out of luck. Like Minutemen and Black Flag, they initially didn't have a market and it took a while to find it, and then they became popular." ● SST have proved that you can consistently release uncompromising and innovative music and not call in the receiver. By simply releasing what they like outside disregarding trends that are commercially viable or fashionable, SST have disposed of categorising. ● What typifies the current SST 'sound', if there is one way of looking at it, is the fact that their bands have mixed the 'lost' languages that punk suppressed — psychedelia, acid-rock, hard rock, improvisation, jazz-rock, instrumental and experimental musics have all been brought back from exile — with the aesthetical experiences punk taught to music: the simplicity, the velocity, if not always the brevity. SST bands, like Homestead bands, are fusing past with present, jostling around all ideas. ● "We aren't putting these groups into corners. We just like people to take them for what they are. People should figure it out for themselves. Things have to be kept open and new things allowed to come in. When you have a strict rule as to what can and what can't be allowed, and what the end result should sound like, you create the same problem that people were reacting against — in the late '70s, when things became boring and predictable and people wanted to hear something exciting and different. This was how we felt at the time, and still do." ● Of course, when I ask Chuck to give me a few words on each of the SST bands, he declines: "I like all the groups but I don't want to review them. The thing about SST bands is that there are no, simply stated, boundaries of reference. It depends out of which window you look."

S

The SST directory of lesser spotted combos

ALWAYS AUGUST: "lyrical and evocative," says the press guide. Hmm, more like a snoozy Grateful Dead jamming with Gentle Giant. Progressive jazz meanderings with a few groovy chord changes and an occasionally neat desert-dry feel, but Freedom Flight and Spacin' Out from Black Pyramid (SST 078) are not a good place to roadtest SST, or my idea of a good time. Hear also Largeness With (W)Holes (SST 135).

Always August: hair today

BAD BRAINS: One of the original hardcore sonic firm of architects, welding the high pitch and hi-life of reggae fire to that of punk. I Against I (SST 065) is a savage, spiritually intense experience. When asked, SST didn't know what was up with BB now, but it looks like they've got their own label.

Bad Brains: eye, eye!

initial response hardcore hats

ANGST: Recently in the UK with Dinosaur, Angst were disappointing live and the records still sound only half way there. A three-piece, Angst play a warped and muffled folk 'n' countryish stumble-rock that is addictively downbeat, but too often out of focus, like a blurred photograph. Still, the harmonies, Wild-West tones and hypnotic trails get to you each time you'll return. Lite Life (SST 054): Mending Wall (SST 074): Mystery Spot (SST III).

BLAST: A hard, heavy, dense, brutal guitar blast. Intense, except on Sundays when they're probably evildoers. More steamrollers than songwriters, they make a tunnel of concrete sound either way. It's In My Blood (SST 106): The Power Of Expression (SST 148).

BLIND IDIOT GOD: Their influences are meant to range from King Tubby to Black Flag to Stravinsky. Woah! BIG are a heavy instrumental guitar-led three-piece with some quite ecstatic guitar chorals that makes you imagine a classical composer writing a rock symphony. No, not a concept album! Blistering music, BIG are the best of SST's instrumentalists. Blind Idiot God (SST 104).

DAS DAMEN: Tightly and tensely wired guitar gruel that rises and falls like the temperature, throwing worried harmonies against some amazing hard rifting that builds up like Husker Du cloudbursts of noise. If only progressive rock had gone this way instead of Budgie... Das Damen (SST 040): Jupiter Eye (SST 095).

DESCENDENTS: Famous for their one-second title track of 1986's All album (SST 112), and that's not all. Descendents used to be strictly hardcore-fast but All is more like fractious pop with worms in it's stomach and froth on it's lip though still with hardcore-attitude in it's brain. Caffeine-fuelled, as the label says. Naturally, the new live album Liveage! (SST 163) is more rough 'core, like early Replacements.

Descendents: all

DINOSAUR: Proof that rock can have a change of heart inside one and half seconds. Dinosaur come from sleepy Massachusetts, and often sound like they're about to drop off in a fever of inertia, and then lift off with a hurricane of molten, ragged guitar storm formations. A visceral thrill, like Neil Young strapped to a De Lorean. Dinosaur were last seen carrying seven wah-wah pedals through customs. The first album is on Homestead, but... You're Living All Over Me (SST 130): Little Fury Things 12 inch (SST 152) as Dinosaur Jr (name change due to some legalities...)

FIREHOSE: Two-thirds of Minutemen plus Ed from Ohio makes one of 1987's most spirited, keen guitar-based combos around. Beautiful, nimble pop-jazz, with gorgeous twists and turns and tender harmonies. You can say innovative and for once, mean it. Last year's Ragin', Full On (SST 079) is unique, and you should stop reading NOW and go and play it. Then buy the new Firehose album, If'n" (SST 115).

Firehose smirks

GONE: Greg Ginn's own baby; a minimalist hard rock powerhouse without the silly vocal interruptions. Guitar riffs and slapped bass lines battle it out in a neat 'n' jazz-orientated way, but over whole albums, I'm real gone, as in, gone out the house. "Gone did more for the advancement of alternative music in their short career than most bands do in a decade," says the SST press guide, but then it is Ginn's label... Let's Get Real Gone For a Change (SST 061) Gone II: But Never Too Gone (SST 086).

LAWNDALE: A real curio, this one; something like a cross between cool surf music and knee knockin' riff boogie-ing, each method invading the other's party. Instrumental from end to end too. Beyond Barbeque (SST 087): Sasquatch Rock (SST 125).

LEAVING TRAINS: More Husker Du-ish climes, but played a bit more like a bluesy mortal rock band than astral combine harvesters. Leaving Trains are a bit closer to Pere Ubu or Wire, or a punk band circa 1978-79, prone to experimenting with tempos, atmospheres and details. Groovy rock at the very least. Kill Tunes (SST 071): F (SST 114).

SAINT VITUS: Predating speed-metal, SST's press guide calls them, "the heaviest band in the world." True, this is heavy, Beelzebub, no getting over albums like Hallow's Victim (SST 052) and Born Too Late (SST 082). Saint Vitus confirms Ginn and Duwalski's love for oblivion-tasting metal and the sheer beauty of losing your hearing. Hear also the Thirsty And Miserable EP (SST 119).

St Vitus and palm trees

SACCHARINE TRUST: Ignore Joe Baiza's Universal Congress of... (really indulgent jazz-rock doodling without the ideas) and go back to Saccharine Trust, where his guitar, sharp (like Joy Division gone jazz??) and inventive, helps take the group somewhere worthwhile. Saccharine Trust sound like they've made it all up on the spot, but that they knew it all the time anyway, which means they were patchy but ppeaky and inspirational. Jazz, poetry, rock, blues, clashes that went places. Improvising doesn't ruin your health, but Saccharine Trust could sure lead you astray. Surviving You, Always (SST 024): Worldbroken (SST 046): We Became Snakes (SST 048).

Trust in us

SCREAMING TREES: The border crossing post where Meat Puppets and REM meet for a chat. S-Trees are probably the closest SST get to a trad guitar-group, but even then it's one that burns frets and chews the marrow out of their songs. S-Trees harness psychedelia and Merseybeat pop melodics which makes them a hell of a concept. Even If And Especially When (SST 132).

ELLIOT SHARP: Tesselation Row (SST 129) is candidate for the worst SST sleeve of all time (orange and turquoise zig-zagging...) and the music is a bit unsettling too. Apparently, if you have a serious ear for music, Sharp will thrill you. Well, thanks, SST guide. Sharp's avant-ish systems music for strings on T-Row is strangely unsatisfying, but In The Land Of The Yahoos (SST 128) is better.

SLOVENLY: Probably SST's most unrecognised giants. Imagine something close to a melancholic Ian Curtis singing for a drifting, thoughtful twin-guitar band like Television. Misty, reflective, often majestic, like the San Francisco bay area that Slovenly live around. Incidentally, they're also the most English sounding of SST groups. Thinking Of Empire (SST 067): Riposte (SST 089).

TAR BABIES: More weird boundary breaking and entering. Fried Milk (SST 101) can be psychedelic blues or a looser rock freak-out, with much jostling about around the idea of providing a tune or two. Many SST bands have this idea, but Tar Babies do it more excitingly than most.

ZOOGZ RIFT: Truly on his own little patch of turf, cuddly, hairy Zoogz has been favourably compared to Zappa. There's plenty of madcap, drug-raging experimental jazzy loon-tunes here, with mucho surrealist angst, if you get my drift. Distorted, rabid, satirical, and after two sides of one record, not to be encouraged. You only have yourselves to blame. Island Of Living Puke (SST 077): Water (SST 099): Ipecac (SST 120): Interim Resurgence (SST 121): Amputees In Limbo (SST 122): Idiots On The Miniature Golf Course (SST 123): Water II (SST 137).

On its way

Zoogz baby

HR: Human Rights (SST 117). Lead singer of Bad Brains solo outing. SCOTT COLBY: Slide of Hand (SST 151).

VARIOUS ARTISTS: No Age (SST 102). Double album of SST instrumentalists.

PAPER BAG: A Land Without Fences (SST 170).

FRED FRITH: The Technology of Tears (SST 160). Double set.

SEMANTICS: Bone Of Contention (SST 167).

PELL MELL: Bumper Crop (SST 158).

STEVE FISK: 448 Deathless Days (SST 159).

Don't Forget...

VARIOUS ARTISTS: The Blasting Concept Vol. I, II & III (SST 013, 043 & 165). Compilations of all your favourite SST gangsters. III is a double set.

I, Ludicrous re-discover British culture

Were it not for I, Ludicrous, William Hung and John S Proctor would be desperately trying to hang on to grim sanity without much success. The two, upwardly mobile, youngish men that sit before me talking about "TV celebrities" Derek Batey, Lionel Blair and naff footballers of the '70s have to be back at work tomorrow; in the city, in their offices, being sensible, wearing suits. Preposterous...

- The rest of the time they're performing songs concerning dinner with the Geldofs, the resurgence of the word 'ludicrous' and their friend Ken. Now then, you seem to possess quite a preoccupation with the tackier manifestations of British society...
- William: "Lionel Blair's a great man. I was a big Give Us A Clue fan, I used to love it when he got excited and jumped off his chair."
- John: "He's a man's man is Lionel."

"I'm In
 M A R K E T
 R E S E A R C H
 Actually"

It's quite obvious that I, Ludicrous aren't all that passionate about telling the world about their music. Their greatest moment, however, is A Pop Fan's Dream, a tune from their debut It's Just Like Everything Else LP, where the story tells of how they win a day as guests of Bob and Paula Geldof (she speaks of one thing only; rock stars in their underpants and Bob "talks about there being no snow in Africa").

William: "It was one of the happiest days of my life actually, you know, it was a bit embarrassing because I started laughing a lot."

John: "You've got to watch your manners as well, you know."

William: "I noticed Bob kept putting his knife in his mouth."

Didn't he have a guilty conscience about eating, what with the third world crisis?

William: "Naaaah...No conscience at all. Paula stuck it away as well."

John: "Well, she needs feeding up really...so does Bob."

William: "They were playing footsie under the table."

How was Geldof junior, Fifi Trixibelle?

William: "She didn't say a lot, actually."

John: "It's very embarrassing really, isn't it? It's so sweet the way she calls Bob 'daddy'."

Did any other guests pop by while you were there?

William: "Well, a few people phoned up, but I dunno really. I think it was Paula upstairs. He was saying, 'Yeah Mick, you know, I'll try and get down for the video Mick...'"

John: "By the way, we're doing a new charity song. It's called Feed The Rich and all proceeds go to... well, er, the rich."

William: "Food parcels round Henley, you know?"

John: "A lot of the proceeds will go to Bob."

So who do you work for then?

William: "I'm in market research, actually; it's a dull office job..."

Is I, Ludicrous instrumental to your sanity?

John: "Yes, I couldn't survive without I, Ludicrous and I don't think most of the population could either."

What do your colleagues at work think of I, Ludicrous?

William: "They say they like it."

John: "I work with two people; one of them is very enthusiastic and the other one says, 'John, it's time you grew up and forgot all this nonsense!'"

Perhaps he'll be immortalised in a song like the legendary Ken McKenzie whose Preposterous Tales comprise I, Ludicrous's popular beat anthems. He is the archetypal bullshitter that you meet in the pub who, "went out with a famous DJ's sister's friend," and "unearthed a bomb," while working on a building site.

William: "We used to work with Ken, that's where we met, and we used to get pissed with him quite regularly. He used to tell us these amazing stories. They were all true, no doubt about that, but it was just the way he told them."

John: "He was always in the right place at the wrong time. I remember when the last Brixton riots started, he was just coming up the top of the escalators...and recently he moved to Seven Oaks in the week of the hurricane and six of the seven oaks blew down."

Does Trevor Barker (another Ludicrous song character), really exist?

William: "Ooooh...well we'd rather not say actually...He does."

Has Steve Davis ever been to any of your gigs?

William: "Yeah, he was the one that was pogo-ing at the front."

Okay then, let's get serious. These I, Ludicrous people have an LP out called It's Like Everything Else and it's the most glorious study of the nation's popular concerns that's hit your local Branson Megastore.

As William Hung so eloquently put it: "There was a great Mr And Mrs where Derek Batey was asking about shoes, and the question was, 'If your husband was going to buy a pair of shoes would he buy a brown brogue, or would he buy a zip-up boot or would he buy a Hush-puppie', and the woman answered 'Well I'm sorry Derek, but my husband's got one leg shorter than the other; he's got a club foot and he has to have them specially-made' so Derek had to write that in and of course the bloke came back and chose the brogue."

• "...It's like everything else."

Some excellent candid shots of I, Ludicrous by Denis Healey

Vini Reilly and the simple guitar parts

Vini Reilly is the "before" in a chest-expander advert. His whole body looks as if it's been constructed entirely out of pipe cleaners. He has a strange beauty, he looks delicate, but kick sand in his face and you'll suffer the consequences. Give Vini a guitar and a stage and he becomes Durutti Column.

The music of Durutti Column is a dainty sneeze in a musical world full of convulsions, splutters and coughs. As Durutti Column, Vini Reilly and a few associates perform wispy, subtle, little tunes. Gregarious, clumsy, loveable arrangements that slumber on the borders between pop, classical and arty-farty mood music. This will probably sound ridiculous but Durutti Column are a punk band. Their graceful delirium annoys the shit out of the establishment — you can't pidgeonhole them, the contradictions are too many. Durutti Column go against the grain.

Vini and chair

The man from Granada, he say 'yes'

Vini, you've been a naughty boy for quite a long time now — nearly a decade. How did it all begin?

Vini: "I jumped on the punk bandwagon. My first record was with an imitation punk band called The Nosebleeds with a song called Ain't Been To No Music School. It was a total joke, a farce. Yet it got me on to a TV pop programme (So It Goes) hosted by Tony Wilson — who later went on to run Factory Records — which is how it all happened."

Tony Wilson, along with McLaren & Grundy, was as much a part of 1976 as the bands themselves.

Vini: "Tony was the first person in the media to realise punk wasn't a joke and he lost his job because of it. He was the first person to screen the Pistols, knowing while it was happening he was going to be sacked."

After Vini's debut TV appearance, Tony Wilson suggested Vini start a new band with himself as the manager and general guardian angel. This situation still continues to this day.

On Factory Records, Durutti Column released their first record.

Vini: "The first album — I didn't know it was going to be an album. At that point I was very ill — seriously ill. Tony Wilson said 'what are you doing?', but I was just concentrating on being ill, I used to sit in bed playing my guitar, making up little tunes. So, he said, well we'll record your little tunes. I went into the studio and played about 30 songs, went away and concentrated on being ill. The next thing I know I'm presented with an album, a piece of vinyl."

Next came LC, one of my favourite LPs ever. When it was released I naively believed it had taken months to record, that it was a labour of love, a lifetime of sketches. Not so.

Vini: "I was awake at two in the morning with a tape recorder, my mum was asleep next door. LC was recorded from two til five that morning."

Perhaps all records should be made that way. That personal, that special, that spontaneous.

"Trendy interval music for sub-titled film festivals"

Vini: "Promoting, advertising, hype — doesn't work for Durutti Column. A good review doesn't sell records, a bad review doesn't stop people buying the records. Durutti Column doesn't get affected by any of that."

Who buys the records then?

Vini: "I just make records — just throw them out — whoever buys them, buys them — I try not to think about it."

How would you describe the music of Durutti Column?

Vini: "I haven't the slightest idea. People call it 'ambient' sometimes — which it isn't. It's just me playing a few nice tunes — no big deal."

It must be offensive when people describe it that way, as "lift" music or something to push your shopping trolley around a supermarket to.

Vini: "I don't get offended, I just get a bit sad. If people are able to describe it that way I know I've failed. You can't possibly put a bit of Beethoven on in a lift. If a piece of music is good enough it can't be used as background. That kind of criticism indicates to me that my music isn't quite there yet — which is why I keep on trying."

You also get compared to new age people, like Phillip Glass.

Vini: "I hate and detest him. He's pretentious, vacuous. It's got no substance — it's real trash, a joke. Beethoven is good tunes. A good tune communicates more to people than anything else. You can be Phillip Glass and have your trendy little, enlightened cliquey audience — it doesn't communicate f all to anybody. A good tune communicates all sorts of things to all sorts of people."

What are Durutti Column all about?

Vini: "Me indulging myself, playing my little tunes."

Does it mean anything?

Vini: "No, who gives a f about statements."

Is it sexy?

Vini: "I don't think so. Is it?"

It's as horny as hell.

Morrissey's hairdresser

Vini: "The guy who cuts my hair, also cuts Morrissey's hair. I'd been trying to establish a dialogue with Morrissey through this hairdresser for 18 months — but he's a bit of a weird bloke so it didn't happen."

The original idea was to work together without releasing it, Vini would hate anyone to think he was using Morrissey's fame to get acclaim and attention for Durutti Column. He is happy, but he is also a big fan of Morrissey's, so when he was asked to work with him on his solo album — naturally he accepted. Stephen Street, who produced the latest Durutti Column LP and isn't a hairdresser, was the matchmaker.

Vini: "I wanted to work with him because he's a major talent, his words are fantastic and he's got a brilliant sense of melody. So I was always very interested and he's a Manchester boy."

Surely fans of The Smiths will become curious about Durutti Column.

Vini: "No way, no way on this earth. Because they're not my songs, it's Stephen Street And Morrissey. None of it is remotely like Durutti Column."

My mind begins to wander, I start to wonder why Morrissey's hair is so groovy and Vini Reilly's is so odd. I have a sudden desire to be trivial.

Do you play football?

Vini: "I used to play for the school team, but I got very fragile so I can't play anymore."

People are always calling you fragile, it's as if you're an insect.

Vini: "All this fragile/ill business — it's a load of crap. It was just an angle for journalists when Durutti Column first started. No-one knew what to say about us."

They still don't. But if weight was measured by genius Vini Reilly and The Durutti Column are fat. Fatter than fat. Johnny Dee

How I left the Moonies!

Tuxedomoon recall the early San Fran nights. Alex Bastedo chews on the punk noise that didn't dissolve . . .

Tuxedomoon try to remember just how many albums they've released

- Blaine L Reininger, Steven Brown and Peter Principle, not forgetting the ubiquitous Winston Tong, once meant as much to some of us as the names of Strummer, Jones, Weller and Costello did. And for the same reasons — they were exciting and they had conviction. They were different!
- "We definitely started with political motives," recalls Peter Principle. "When music started getting more interesting in the late '70s, I came into the business as a promoter, organising concerts for The Dead Kennedys, The Avengers and other San Francisco bands. Through that I became involved with Tuxedomoon. There seemed to be a political reasoning behind everybody's music in those days. Groups like Talking Heads had decided that making music was the easiest way to gain attention and promote your ideas."
- Formed originally out of the late '70s San Francisco punk explosion, Tuxedomoon, along with Ralph Records labelmates The Residents, Chrome and (via Europe) Yello, provided the perfect antidote to our own post-punk malaise, playing their own unique brand of powerful music, a music that saw the violin, keyboard and rhythm box become as important as the usual vocals, guitar and bass.
- Principle: "When we started the only other rhythm machine band were Suicide and we both suffered at the hands of live engineers who wanted to know where the hell the drum kit was!"
- "In the early days," continues Blaine Reininger, "we used what was available, and that's why the drum machine sounds so primitive now."
- But still charming in its simplicity!

- Reininger's drawl is so laid back he makes Helen Keller sound like Marc Almond — though he does possess a certain sleazy charm that fits in with the European underworld imagery of his solo records and contrasts neatly with Principle's more direct answers. I think he might be drunk. Or something.
- "We also had a lot of equipment made for us back then," he continues. "Our ideas, I think it's fair to say, were somewhat ahead of their time."
- Principle: "Because we also stuck to the acoustic elements — vocals, violins, saxophones — we've been able to straddle many genres that have now become completely isolated."
- Via singles such as No Tears and Scream With A View, as well as the debut Half Mute LP in 1980, they acquired an enthusiastic following. By 1981 they had released what many hold to be their best album, Desire, and had relocated to Brussels, via Rotterdam.
- Principle: "We wanted to leave San Francisco and couldn't all agree on anywhere within America to move to, so in typical Tuxedomoon fashion we did something unsuggested and moved to Europe!"
- Reininger: "Also, we'd done a ballet with Maurice Bejart (which was immortalised on the Divine LP) and a number of record companies were interested in us because our earlier records had sold quite well over here."
- Principle: "Just prior to that, we were also linked to Charisma Records in the UK, and they gave us quite a good profile. We did a British tour with This Heat, which was great."
- Reininger: "Yeah, we did okay around

- then. We were the shit-hot boys in old London town, sold out the Venue, got all our equipment stolen. Nice place."
- Principle: "But then that deal fell apart with the confusion over our video for Jinx (a song from Desire).
- The record company mistook it for satire on the then-sensitive IRA H-Block protests, interpreting Reininger's smeared-with-mud appearance for something a bit less pleasant. Jinx never appeared as a single as planned.
- Reininger: "It was only mud, but the mud was brown..."
- Principle: "And that was the wrong colour for mud in 1982!"
- Since their move to Europe, output has slowed gradually, but the group have still officially released six further albums through labels such as Operation Twilight/Crepuscule, and more recently, on their own Cramboy label through Crammed Discs. The expanse of styles displayed throughout this catalogue, as well as on several 12 inch releases, has been impressively vast, though perhaps the most successful, (certainly commercially) of their more recent output was the Holy Wars LP of 1985.
- Principle: "I think the slowing down of releases was directly related to our concept of professionalism. As we got involved with more labels and the licensing of records to different territories, it became less possible to remain so prolific."
- Reininger: "After I left the group in early '83 to concentrate on my solo work, there was a definite lull."

- Sceptics claim Tuxedomoon lost themselves in an oblique artistic cul-de-sac around this time and are still trying to find their way out.
- Principle: "I don't agree with that. After Blaine left, we just worked less together. Winston (Tong) stays in America a lot, I spend a lot of time in Holland, Steven (Brown) in Italy. We all have our own solo projects..."
- Reininger: "It's been more like a loose collective the last few years rather than a band."
- Principle: "We come together to accept offers we couldn't resist!"
- This month sees the release of a double LP archive set entitled Pinheads On The Move, containing a number of genuine rarities from the early years. The fact that this will be followed by a reunion tour featuring the old line-up (as well as original drummer Paul Zohl and newer old hands such as Bruce Geduldig) will please the old fans but add more weight to the sceptics theory.
- Principle: "The album and the tour don't really have a lot to do with each other except by convenience, whereby one is promoting the other. After being parted for quite a while the only thing left to do seemed to be to reunite."
- Reininger: "There were also sentimental reasons for doing this. It's the tenth anniversary of the group, and it gives us a chance to have some fun reproducing the older material with better equipment. Not in a funky, slick way, but in a different manner than before."
- Principle: "We also saw our reunion as being completely out of phase with the times of the music business now, and that's often an interesting position to take."
- Is Pinheads On The Move an album for old fans?
- Principle: "Definitely. There are many people who pay a lot of money for our rare early material, and this was a good way of saving them a fortune as well as tying up a few more loose ends from our early history."
- Their Cramboy label has also re-issued many of the other old classics in the last couple of years. But which do you think are your best records?
- Reininger: "For me the best was Desire and then Suite-En-Sous-Sol."
- Principle: "No, we're yet to make our best record."
- Reininger: "But will I make it with you?"
- Principle: "I doubt it. You were the asshole that dragged us down in the first place!"
- Touché

THE SUBTERRANEANS

It sure is tough being a brand new band with only a demo tape, and having the likes of Jerry Harrison, T Bone Burnett and Stephen Street coming to your door. If you're The Subterraneans, Ireland's latest export, it's just another day.

When Colm Coughlan, the drummer of this young band (all 21), tells the story of how he slipped the tape to Larry Mullen of U2, it's not hard to picture him discreetly standing against a post as Mullen goes to get a bag of chips in Artane, a neighbourhood of Dublin.

Colm: "Larry was from the same area we're from. He was home from the U2 tour, they were interested, they thought it would be great for us to be on their Mother Records label.

"I was introduced to him by a friend of mine who works in a supermarket. I said to Larry, since I thought Bono was the main man, 'If I give you a demo tape will you give it to Bono?'. He said 'No problem'."

Even though U2 have been passing their demo tape around while on tour, it certainly hasn't been easy for the band who were friends first and later reluctant musicians at the age of 16.

Colm: "There's no way a 16 year old teenager can sit down and explain to his mother and father that he wants to be a rock and roll man. Oh, you don't get any money. Then you start getting the write-ups, and the tapes played. Then they realise that you must have something."

What Derek Barter (lead vocalist/bass), Paddy Brady, Brian Murphy (keyboards), and Coughlan have is a sharp blend of Celtic roots with a Doors-type influence whirled quickly in a blender until it's poured out with a frenzy that their new 12-inch maxi-joy can't match on stage (just don't mention that Doors influence too loudly).

As Murphy says, "We're an acquired taste. We're like Guinness, ya know?" If it's brewed like it has been, folks'll be coming back for more. Scott Murphy

SAGITTAL SUTURE

It's a strange partnership! Paul Rodgers, a shaven-headed Aleister Crowley-lookalike, attends St Martin's College Of Art in London, applying his warped imagination to the study of film and video techniques. His collaborator, Steve Richards, on the other hand, lives and works over 150 miles away, piecing together weird audio-collage tapes from a basement flat in the heart of Doncaster (of all places!).

Together, Paul and Steve are known as Sagittal Suture - a name well-suited to their pseudo-mystical preoccupations (actually it's a medical term denoting an area of the skull). And, despite the distance involved, their collaboration has proved surprisingly fruitful.

Formed in 1983, Sagittal Suture now functions as a hardcore independent communications system specialising in film, video and musical treatments. Both Richards and Rodgers are dedicated researchers whose activities are always varied and imaginative. Exchanging ideas and tapes by mail, they treat each piece of music as an organic unit to be shaped and sculpted in sound.

"A lot of our stuff was written as film music," Steve explains. "That's why the vocals sometimes seem incidental. We wanted to get right away from the usual electronic, or synth-pop format and create something different.

"The next step is to get a record out. We already have enough material for a whole string of albums, so it's the next logical thing for us to do."

Having consolidated their initial territory with a series of limited-edition audio and video tapes, Sagittal Suture stand poised to assault new frontiers of creativity. "We're working to a fixed schedule," they say, "and if everything goes according to plan, you'll be hearing a lot more of us in 1988."

Yeah, it's a strange partnership. But it works. Ian Blake

14 ICED BEARS

It's a rainy, Sunday afternoon - no better time to do a mini-interview with the greatest double act since Cannon & Ball, Rob (vocals) and Steve (bass) from the seminal space rock combo, 14 ICED BEARS. The 14 Iced Bears have so far been likened to Primal Scream, T'Pau and a packet of biscuits. They have released two singles and recorded several sessions for John Peel.

You're very much a boys band aren't you?

Rob: "What are you talking about? It's ridiculous, we've tried to get a football team from the blokes that come to see us and we can't."

Steve: "We've got loads of hockey and netball teams."

So there's something about you that appeals to girls?

Rob: "Everything about us."

Something within the lyrics maybe?

Rob: "No, it's the bodies."

Something within the bodies?

Rob: "No, on the bodies?"

1987 was a bad year for The 14 Iced Bears. Apart from their successes on the hockey pitch and being mobbed by the entire population of Roedean girls school, they're tagged with images of shambling, anorak, scruffy, crap indie-pop. No-one took them seriously last year. 1988, though, is the year of the Bear. My faith in them was restored by an accapella version of their new single on Sarah records.

Steve: "The 14 Iced Bears are back, mate."

It's a comeback!

Steve: "Honestly, we've lost weight and everything."

What are you all about?

Rob: "We're the kids from the dump."

Kids from the dump?

Rob: "Yeah, having sex on a dump, getting dirt in all the crevices." At this point Sue, their manager, explodes in a fit of "Stop, Stop, you can't print that!" Oh yes we can..."

Rob: "Kissing dirt."

Steve: "It's true. Dirty sex. The 14 Iced Bears - dirty sex. With or without an anorak."

Rob: "Anoraks are symbolic, the hoods especially."

Steve: "You have to get wet sooner or later."

So why not get wet with the 14 Iced Bears?

Rob: "Exactly."

Steve: "Wearing anoraks is a perversion, like wearing rubber."

The eroticism of the canvas.

Rob: "The feel of the toggle."

How do you feel about sex?

Rob: "It's okay as long as you don't do it."

How do you feel about The 14 Iced Bears?

Steve: "I like them."

A lot of people think they're crap.

Rob: "Jealousy."

14 Iced Bears - they're a band, not a packet of biscuits.

MIRRORS OVER KIEV

Holy Cow, those Manchester guitar bands just keep on coming! But there can't be many with a worse name than Mirrors Over Kiev. Any contrivance suggested by the name is completely at odds with their music — straightforward pop songs tinted with country and the obligatory jingle-jangle. The group themselves are so down to earth, they are positively, er, underground.

Their debut single, Take Me Down on Imaginary Records, has been getting airplay and equally pleasing reviews, yet these guys don't seem too impressed. Which is strange, since they reveal that they are easily pleased — "we've been down in the gutter so long that anyone saying that they like our stuff is a bonus."

Down in the gutter? Are these guys for real? Nick Jackson, the singer, and Phil Abraham, the lead guitarist, give the impression of people in love with the idea of "Rock 'n' Roll". And in the appropriate fashion, their single came about somewhat by accident.

"The guy from the label was at our last Manchester gig, he came backstage and said he'd put us out," explains Nick. That's the stuff that legends are made of.

When they tell you that they're still searching for that ever-elusive originality, you don't need a lot of convincing — "we've been compared to every guitar band that's ever existed." Not such a bad thing I suggest, complementing Phil on some of his Johnny Marr-esque playing — what did I say?

"That's just your opinion, I don't think it sounds like him at all."

The objective listener is put in his place. If I'd said that he sounded like Robbie Robertson or Keith Richard, well, it'd have been large teas all round. See, these boys are more influenced by the likes of Dylan and the Stones than by Costello and The Smiths. And they're maddeningly reserved. There's no bitchin' to be found here — "there's no point in slagging-off people you don't know personally."

Funny, most other Manchester bands find time for it, but Mirrors Over Kiev aren't really a Manchester band. They don't fit that bill and that fact will probably do them more good, however much Nick likes the idea of being associated with the rainy city.

"There's no shame in coming from Manchester," he shrugs. Discuss. Craig Ferguson.

THE DORIS DAYS

Sex changes, pop hybrids, incest and necrophilia abound, perhaps The Doris Days have the perfect parents.

"We're a cross between Sibellius and The June Brides."

Although they haven't released a record yet and only played a handful of 'offbeat' gigs (parties, kitchens, boats), a lot of people are beginning to talk about The Doris Days. They have fans in Japan and Hawaii and have had a demo broadcast on Belgian radio.

The Doris Days sound fresh and natural, in a way journalists have presumed bands have sounded throughout the '80s. They mix traditional themes like arrangement with classical richness (cello replaces bass) and modern technology such as samplers — arriving at something very commercial and accessible. Where others using this technique have merely become "avant-garde", The Doris Days have maintained pop sensibility and melody.

"What a lot of people forget is that all those stuffy, old composers from centuries ago were innovators. They were using all the technology they could get their hands on. Montiverdi used quadrophonic sound. If Sibellius was around today he'd be using drum-machines."

Guitar and vocal are still at the fore and in many ways they are a traditional pop band — they write pop songs, they want to move people. They believe that most guitar bands are luddites, they despair at their backward looking mentality and the way they desire a second-rate production.

The Doris Days don't look back (except in anger). There is nothing past, pretentious or puppiesque about them. They are special, but I don't know why — they're just unique I guess. You can't pin them down and compare them with anything else (which in times like these is a relief). In short, their parents would be proud of them.

Doris — an odd sort of day.

DIG VIS DRILL

Dig Vis Drill make a habit of getting up people's noses. Their brash politics and born-again-atheism has brought them more than their fair share of notoriety. However, according to Ogy McGrath, playwright, singer, ex-boxer and rampant egotist, the bad press is undeserved.

"Actually, I'm probably the nicest person you'll ever know... anyone will tell you that."

Unfortunately not everyone shares this belief in his angelic qualities. The Bishop of Sheffield and the Salvation Army, among others, have cautioned their flocks against entering Dig Vis Drill's godless territory.

Says Ogy: "To tell you the truth, I'm bored with atheism now. In fact, I'll never say another word about it."

Unsurprisingly, Dig's new single, Spell Survival on FON, isn't about the joys of Scrabble. It is an intense and searing indictment of Britain today.

"I hate everything. I hate bands, TV, theatre...everything! I admire no-one in music except, perhaps, Irene Handel. I was writing plays for years and no-one took any notice until the band became notorious. I use the band to further my writing career... any jerk can be in a band."

A few years ago, ABC had a vision of a glittering, superfit, superficial, style-conscious north. For Dig Vis Drill it's all dark satanic mills and bible-thumping Methodists. Dig Vis Drill are a disease eating away at the heart of pop. Their crashing rhythms and crunching synths push the ears to breaking point. They seem set to make anger fashionable again... God forbid! Steve Morris

THE SANDKINGS

Enoch Powell, and a once great football team aside, pop bands have been the only thing that has succeeded in placing Wolverhampton on the map. After Slade, Makin' Time and The Mighty Lemon Drops, the next Wolvo outfit in line for a shot at the big time are The Sandkings, a refreshing pop band who are currently being pursued by more than one major label.

Their youthful guitar pop could easily become the sound of '88, if they're given half a chance and a bit of time. The Sandkings are ambitious — after recording the delicious Primrose Avenue for indie release, they scrapped the idea of 'signing our lives away for £400' and are currently in the process of selling their publishing to London for the kind of big money figure that will give them time to develop without pressure.

The Beat's Dave Wakelin numbers among the band's admirers — he even expressed an interest in managing them. After meeting him, The Sandkings eventually turned down his offer because he was too nice, settling instead for the former Dexy's management. But what of the music? Bodines meet Beach Boys? Housemartins without sugar?

"It's just pop music isn't it?" says guitarist Glen. "What else could you describe it as? It's just energetic pop music, I suppose."

The songs are pop, but what's the inspiration?

Glen: "The songs are mostly personal, about relationships. There's nothing about politics."

Dave: "As Roddy Frame says, 'the greatest thing in the world is love'."

And what of the future for The Sandkings.

"Well, it would be nice to be as big as the Beatles!" Chris Hunt

GROOVY LITTLE NUMBERS

From Holytown, Motherwell, Scotland, comes the flavour of this month — the acid-sweet smack of THE GROOVY LITTLE NUMBERS.

A duo, armed with comprehensive backing tapes of their own devising, The Groovy Little Numbers are a timely reminder that pop music is still the most exhilarating beat on the block. The Burton and Taylor of Scottish pop, Joe Numbers and Groovy Little Catherine have been toying with the idea of superstardom for a couple of years now.

"But every time we get ready to do something, something else always crops up to stop us," Joe explains, "For example, a couple of weeks after Catherine and I formed The Groovy Little Numbers I joined the BMX Bandits too."

"I've got another band on the go as well, The Boy Hairdressers. And I've got a job in the Civil Service while Catherine's busy studying in Motherwell. So we find it difficult to make time for everything."

So much so that until the fanzine Are You Scared To Get Happy? tried to persuade them to record a flexi for the celebrated Sha-La-La label, The Groovy Little Numbers had all but disappeared under their own differential calculus.

No fools, the chaps at 53rd & 3rd, Joe contributes every instrument under the sun and a voice of roguish pop charm, while Catherine (an exceptionally groovy little number) sings like a choir of teen angels. Pop music has seldom shone so bright as the light in Catherine's eyes. And the first fruits of this groovy little relationship can be found on their debut EP, You Make My Head Explode. Holly Wood

NASA

Appreciate, if you will, the incongruous scene: A confused, stifling Tottenham Court Road and in it's midst The Iraqi Cultural Centre, clean, peaceful and serene, almost obscene for its stark contrast in cultural reflectiveness. Now hold the image; It's the chosen setting by the dashing, flamboyant duo which constitutes Nasa, Fun After All's newest prodigy, and perpetrators of the prophetic Boy King And The Lizard Girl EP. Our Iraqi host is wringing his hands in anguish for he's just deciphered the obscure religious chant used on the EP's premier track, Serophia, and fears that one ill-timed radio play will send Muslims everywhere into spontaneous religious frenzy!

Visually, this oddest of couples would look more comfortable peddling costume jewellery in a bazaar than whizzing about London's capital in a black cab. Musically, Nasa is an 'illicit affair' between eastern and western cultural influences. While Mo's guitar plays host to an array of eastern sounds, Cash's lyrics are an amalgam of the classic western poetic form and the fantastical richness which characterises eastern philosophical tracts.

Mo: "England has a very narrow, TV broadcast image of what's going on in the east — the politics and fighting. But we stem from the majesty of the east, the decadence, the bustling streets of Cairo — it's an untapped culture."

And one that is portrayed vividly on the aforementioned EP. Intriguingly divided into a West side and an East side, the former appears as a brash, superficial scheme while the latter is seen as a sensual, fervent and spiritually elevated civilisation. Is that how Nasa differentiate between the two?

Mo: "No. But I think that we both have a subdued spiritual side to us which we deal with on the East side. The West side is our wild side where we deal with the prostitution of science and sex — but not sex in a macho, sexist kind of way but from a sort of...horny point of view...does that make sense?"

If Eastern promise was ever a persuasive instrument, I shouldn't think they'll need to hint too heavily! End of scenario, exuent interviewer in search of navel jewel and yashmak! Alex Kadis

THE BELOVED

Since 1986, South London three-piece The Beloved have released a number of excellent singles, all of which dented the higher echelons of the indie chart. It's not until now, that they've seen fit to unleash an LP. Where It Is, is a compilation of previous singles, assorted b-sides and remixes. Possibly this might seem a pretty strange and rather presumptuous thing to do.

"To be honest," muses Jon Marsh, vocalist, songwriter and Countdown fanatic, "it's purely aimed at the European market. We have had good response in France and Sweden in particular, and it's just a way of getting our profile a bit higher. If you're just discovering the band for the first time, instead of forking out for all the singles, buy the album. It makes sense to me."

Listening to both sides of the LP, you'll hear quite a marked progression in style and sound. The initial guitar sounds of A Hundred Words (their debut single) having been replaced by sequencers and drum machines. Their last offering, Forever Dancing showed a significant nod towards a dance-orientated feel. So, was that a conscious effort to change? To get away from that indie 'shambling' sound?

"We never actually get called 'shambling' much to my great relief, probably because our records were better produced, our guitar sound wasn't crap, it sounded strong. Changing our style really comes down to a change in what we listen to. I like dance music, Prince, Janet Jackson, and a lot of our newer material is danceable stuff. It's just a natural progression."

Presently, they're halfway through recording new songs, which Jon describes as "blatant commercial pop music," and it's likely future releases will be with a major recording company and not Flim Flam.

"I've nothing against independents, but you can only go so far. The possibilities and boundaries on a major are endless. I'd rather have the vast weight of some horrible corporate company behind the group, 'cos I want the band to be highly successful. Anyway, most of the majors have great back catalogues, and it would be fantastic to delve in and pick any record you want."

NEW TAPE DEMOS

● Annie Bristow is a popular music producer at the World Service, BBC. She produces three Sarah Ward Programmes a week which are broadcast on 463 metres medium wave, and reach 120 million listeners world wide, 40 million of whom are English speakers.

Most of the music Sarah Ward plays is 'new or left field' and often includes unsigned groups. She sometimes has these bands in to be interviewed in the studio. The numbered system after each review refers to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1.

POP, DICK & HARRY (27 Wolseley Gardens, Jesmond, Newcastle) describe themselves, boldly, as The Kings Of Western Swing, and their tape charges the listener like a herd of rogue buffaloes. Despite their Newcastle roots, PD&H play cowpunk, and they're busy larking about in their picture like they're lads who know how to have a laugh. What do you think Annie?

"Kind of rockabilly, aren't they? The trouble is they sound a bit tame. With this sort of music you really do need an edge to stand out, but this doesn't strike me as being much more than a feeble Stray Cats. I'll bet they're great fun live but I feel they've got to work much harder on record."

5 4 6 3

HOW MANY BEANS MAKE FIVE? (49 George Street, Brighton, Sussex) come recommended from the peppermint-sucking guru of the pop generation, Mr Johnny Dee. What Johnny gets up to in Brighton we can only guess at, but the Tip Sheet is now constantly being harrangued by his hordes of jangley warblers. How Many Beans Make Five? is apparently a beatnik/zen phrase from the '60s, but the group show little respect for such lofty origins, and come straight for the listeners' throat with a cheeky brand of sugar-coated Monkees-sounding songs.

"Actually, I think this sounds more like Herman's Hermits," says Annie. "The drummer sounds good, but the singer sounds as if his voice hasn't broken yet. A bit on the weedy side I think. Give them a bomb up their backsides."

ROSEGARDEN FUNERAL (1 Harleston Close, Longhill Estate, Hull, North Humberside) attracted Annie immediately with a rather unusual matt black envelope. Of course it had to be something slightly goth or psychedelic inside, and Annie spent some moments snickering at the group's photograph. "I like this quite a bit actually," she said. "They've got a slightly Germanic sound, it reminds me of Laibach, though I'm not so sure about the way he's singing about executions. It's odd the way some people like singing about executions. It's odd the way some people like singing about killing people. Anyway, the vocal delivery isn't quite there, I'd like to be able to hear more, I like the feel. Popular music shouldn't always be happy and up, and this is definitely good mood music."

6 6 7 5

THE PICTURES (Flat 6, 26 Wilbury Road, Hove BN3 3JP) succeeded in prompting Annie to sing the merits of Lloyd Cole. "When I started listening to this, I thought it sounded really raw," she said, "but after a bit the singer and the song becomes quite appealing — it's just how I'd expect early Lloyd Cole to sound."

A discussion then ensued on the new Lloyd Cole LP, which is, according to Annie, a sound investment. The Pictures of course, will not be interested in this. What do you say to them Annie?

"Err, send us another tape in 1990 boys, as I think you need to work at it a bit yet." So take courage, there is still hope!

5 4 7 7

HUDSON GIANTS (c/o 488-490 Old Kent Road, London SE1) open their cassette with a confident and striking female vocal. Who can it be? Alison Moyet? Nina Simone? Ken Dodd? No, it's Jenny Jones, a young lady with definite ability. The rest of the band know their stuff too, and play with skill and expertise. "This is professional sounding," says Annie. "The voice and the band are great, and I feel that the only thing that lets it down is the song which could be stronger."

Is this the sort of thing that you can imagine interesting a major record company?

"I'm not so sure, as the material lets it down a bit. Also the photograph and the 'look' doesn't really go with the music. Not bad at all though."

4 8 6 8

SPIELSET (44 Station Road, Bearsden, Glasgow G61 4AL) sent us their cassette in a book that they had hollowed out. We were quite taken with this, and Annie spent some time examining the book to see what it was, where it had come from and what relevance it had to the band. Suddenly her concentration was disturbed by a horrible crunching sound. The tape had become munched up by the cassette machine. Tut tut!

It must be the poor quality tapes these young and starving groups are sending out these days. The music though?

"I think they've listened to too many U2 albums," decreed Annie. "I like the singer but it sounds like two different recordings as the band sound like they're down the hall or something."

Then, in a moment of inspiration, Annie flicked open the book to see what divine message lay inside. She read: 'It is sometimes the strong women who stirs up the boy and makes a man of him'... "Well," she said, "If I can do that to Spielset, it will be for the best."

1 1 7 2

THE LEGENDARY KICK (Flat 9, 3 Hawes Road, Bromley, Kent) can be said to make an unholy rockin' din. Their singer sounds a bit like Billy Idol... "Yes, it's a bit on the macho side for me," said Annie. I drew a comparison with Zodiac Mindwarp, which resulted in vague nods of agreement. "The problem is that I find this sort of rock music a bit predictable, so it's hard for me to get particularly worked up about it," said Annie. "That said, I am quite certain that the group know how to pull in a good live crowd who enjoy a few pints and kicking a few asses."

3 5 5 4

PINEAPPLE (19B Bayswater Road, Plymouth, Devon) made some effort to sound different with their tape, but fell foul by coming across as a little too primitive. "A good vocal, but the background mob sound just droney to me," said Annie. "They refer in their hand-out to bands like The Fall and Wire, and you can hear those influences coming through when you listen to their music. Oh listen to that! It's a Frank Zappa song," she suddenly cried as Why Dontcha Do Me Right? began to fill the air. The Pineapple biog meanwhile was the source of some amusement: 'looks like a lot of pricks from the outside, but once you get through the tough skin you can't get enough'... Well really lads, how very, err, rough you seem.

THE LONE-SHARKS (67 Chichelle Road, Willesden, London NW2 3AN) enclosed a very pro looking snap with their tape. You know the sort of thing, a bit blurred so we can't see the spots and wrinkles. It reminded Annie of Duane Eddy and it reminded me of The Damned. "There's certainly a lot in there," she said. "It's fine if you're going to steal loads of ideas, but really you've got to do it with verve or great style if it's going to sound interesting. That said, it does sound quite commercial and I like the girl's vocal contribution a lot." So are great things just around the corner for the Lone-Sharks? Well, our view was unlikely, but you know this wild world of pap music... anything's possible! Anything!

OUTER LIMITS (18 Aisgill Drive, Chapel House Estate, Newcastle Upon Tyne NE5 1AR) tell us in their letter that they will not be sending us a bribe as they are a 'no bullshit' band. Well blimey! Play the game lads! Why on earth should we write lots of nice things about you if you can't be bothered to send us a packet of Polos as the bare minimum? Hmmmm. What do you think Annie?

"This is the sort of thing I would pass on to Nick Freeth who produces Tommy Vance's spot on the World Service. Nick used to be in a band so he knows all about this sort of thing." In case you hadn't guessed, Outer Limits play hard rock. Their lyrics go on about 'wild women and loud guitars, nothing else I crave', so we must presume that they are probably cavemen, albeit 'no bullshit' cavemen. Outer Limits! We rocked with you!

THE GLASS DISPLAY (33 Alyn Road, Buckley, Chwyd) seem to be poised on the brink of some great philosophical breakthrough: "Let me know the truth about myself" the singer pleads as their song, Walking Away, starts. Annie and I look uncomfortably at the floor. "It's a bit too ploddy for me," said Annie. "Also, the chorus isn't terribly memorable. Their producer appears to have worked with the Shamens, and it does sound a little bit like them. I would like to hear a little less angst, though. Being completely sexist, they are quite good-looking which can only be a good thing in these days of hype." So it seems that The Glass Display win Pin Up of the Month if nothing else.

THE WOOD CHILDREN (295 Archway Road, London N6) tell us to 'scratch the surface' if we wish to uncover some interesting facts about their tape. Well, we tried. First of all Annie had a good scratch and scrape. Then I chewed and nibbled the cassette but all to no avail. No! Scratching was useless!

We listened though and were greeted by a fabulous Smiths-soundalike that was quite stunning to behold. What a fine attempt at plagiarism.

"They are trying to be different in an odd way, and they almost succeed," said Annie. "They definitely deserve ten out of ten for bravado, but please go away and develop." We both liked their singer's yodelling efforts.

TIP out

These are tapes that have been spooled and de-chromed — or bagged and passed on — from Ug! HQ. Dave Henderson, the invisible editor, presides over this incisive report on the cassettes that live "in the cupboard"...

RED OVER WHITE from Huntingdon (0480 412036) are Pro-animals which is good, but their four track tape lacks production. A touch of Cure/Members, post '78 new wave make it OK, but it lacks in finish and arrangement.

POP GUNS from Brighton (0273 684060) have a charming female vocal lead that doesn't faiter but needs to belt it out a little more. (Turn the mic down and let her sing.) Songs and arrangements are on the right track, image and delivery on the way!

BOWEL BAND from Leeds (9 St Johns Close, Aberford, Leeds) recorded their tape on second-hand spiritual cardboard. It sucks/is superb. Songs last less than 30 seconds or over five minutes...they are destined for immortality.

MELAROONY DADDIES from Huddersfield (0484 541727) are essentially a live band. They could rock out with The Screaming Blue Messiahs and bring a tear to an Elvis P fan. Their demo was loud and forceful but lacked the dirty finish of a live bash.

BALLOON (01 647 6169) are based in London and strike the Uggers as good blokes. Their tape, although woolly, definitely ragged-out in the Monochrome Set/Split Enz/Deaf School art-esque department of suave rock. You never know, but Balloon might just pop out! (Ugh! Terrible pun, terrible name...but a weird demo...passed to el).

THE DESIRED EFFECT play twango-pop with a pop edge that should be snapped up by major labels. A mix manager would embrace the dual-guitar sound, and an image stylist would give the boys a shave, stop them smoking and get them to smile. Good songs with pop potential, big bucks possible and the address...171 Staveley Gardens, London W4 2TA.

YEAH YEAH, from Canvey Island (0268 697023) scrawl "rock 'n' roll" on their tape and wander into the grim world of "street" banter for four songs. A good live experience I'd bet, but above that you'd be clutching.

REBEL WITHOUT APPLAUSE (01 845 7138) is a terrible name! Having released an LP called Akimbo, these people should have realised that universal deliverance wasn't around the corner with such a moniker. However, this five tracker features the kind of bedraggled funk that's been spat out and slowed for a generation who're almost ready to dance again. A moving listen, but marketable? Who knows?

CATCH THE BOMB (0509 504635) have grown from their shaky Shepshed roots to become a positive (but raunchy) post-punk outfit. They write neat songs that are catchy and reasonably moving. This must be their tenth demo and it's getting better. What they need to do is decide on the tempo, ditch the novelty kitsch and develop their best songs.

FEAR OF DARKNESS seem to be from Bristol (0454 310615), and I must say, they come recommended. Already people have grooved to them, and their demo (recorded live onto a 16-track) has a consuming thingy that tickles the good bits. Destined for much bigger things and a certain major label, Fear of Darkness deserve your attention.

All That Jazz and the Merseybeat

Five years ago, All That Jazz spent an afternoon in Portobello Road. The Swedish band was convinced that their demo-cassette was pure brilliance. But the Virgin Records representatives shook their heads to every beat. Today, signed to the indie Wire Records, All That Jazz are back in the Virgin office. A licensing deal with Virgin America also means that their debut album is finally put out in Britain the way they initially planned it.

- "Somehow we knew it would happen all along," says singer Peter Leaf, "and the deal was perfect timing, because last fall we were on the verge of breaking up."
- All That Jazz hail from Karlstad. That's far west from Swedish capital Stockholm, and countryside activities always have a problem with exposure. But the main reason for All That Jazz meandering, is that they never really seemed to fit in with the general formula of Swedish pop. Oh yes, you've guessed it; their name was taken from an early Echo And The Bunnymen song. But since then, refining it into their own version of epic pop, you can hardly hear that initial influence on All That Jazz's self-named LP.
- The adoption of the Merseyside tradition was somewhat crowned when Clive

All That Jazz in Virgin experience

Langer and Alan Winstanley (Elvis Costello, Madness, Dexy's, Lloyd Cole) were brought in to produce the album. They focused on the band's melodic power and brought harmonic oxygen to the sound. All That Jazz could've made use of that exactly two years earlier, when Wire put out their debut EP: a pale version of The Beatles' Norwegian Wood — yet another Liverpoolian connection.

- "Yes, recording that song was a mistake," Peter Leaf now admits.
- Holy Sea on the album, exposes a different attitude towards the influences. The spinet, the cello and the rest of the strings are playful interpretations of The Beatles' psychedelic period. And the lofty ceiling of All That Jazz's music is close to that trademark of what the world identify as the secret of the Mersey River.
- "This is our own Please, Please Me," bassist Patrik Willard states, "but now it's just self-penned songs."
- Spending almost every day of the past two years in rehearsals, All That Jazz also contemplated what went wrong. And finally their enormous power, that was sneered at by Swedish musical dropouts, has been correctly directed.
- The fear that the songs might be too long and the melodies too ambitious, was something they had to live with, to put down the final note and face the feedback. A brilliant move was to include that angelic backing vocal of Mari Lindback, in the line-up alongside Per B Bjnelind, guitar, Pontus Värmhed, drums and Niklas Hellberg keyboards. Since the band's strength is to transmit moods and atmospheres, they quickly realised that her glittering voice was necessary to get the emotional points across on the album.
- "Our music is about ardour and longing, although the lyrics aren't that obvious," Peter confesses. "And Mari's voice really fits with that." Mats Lundgren

The ongoing success story of Boston's Treat Her Right reads like a catalogue of accidents, disasters and failures, all of which are helping propel one of the most unique proponents of the blues in many a year towards international fame.

- For a start, there was originally no intention of forming a band, the quartet of Mark Sanderson (vocals/guitar), Dave Champagne (vocals/guitar), Jim Fitting (harp/harp) and Billy Conway (drum/cymbal) finding themselves between gaps and choosing to jam on some blues for the fun of it. The idea took off.
- "We started doing this Muddy Waters song and it sounded pretty good," explains Mark. "So we decided to take that same style and do all our originals in the same way."
- The group took to the clubs, but at an acoustic venue their drumkit was banned; sneaking in just the one drum they liked the sound so much they simply adapted it with a couple of percussion extras and, with a fair imitation of a busker's one-man-band drumkit, halved their gear requirements overnight.
- The next step was to make a record, which would turn out to be a self-titled album full of some esoteric blues, the best of which was Jesus Everyday and the laconic lead track I Think She Likes Me. Wanting to handle the record themselves but without the hassle of starting another new label, Treat Her Right effectively kidnaped Soul Selects from Three Colors and did both bands a favour when the record topped the local chart for five weeks.
- Disaster then supposedly struck when their gear was burnt in a fire at a local club. The fire — officially not arson, although the whole block burned down three weeks later and a huge new building is now going up in its place — had its positive side in that 27 bands played a benefit for the three groups that lost out that night, and the resultant publicity was almost worth the calamity.
- Next stop, The Rumble, a Battle Of The Bands on a scale unseen in Britain, sponsored by the major Boston radio station and with the final held in the city's main concert theatre. Treat Her Right, tipped to win, instead lost in the semi-finals to The Rain, who, like eventual winners Childhood, were a group of suburban unknowns.

Treat Her Right: legendary action shot!

- The press and the public howled their complaints, and the A&R man who had witnessed the semi's got ready to pounce. After several months 'negotiations', Treat Her Right are now in the process of becoming RCA recording artists.
- Not that this throws them back in the studio. Their debut record, with additional new tracks, will be released by RCA and perhaps this will help spawn interest in the British edition, released a couple of months back by Demon but apparently not setting the world alight. "They don't keep us informed, so we've just sort of forgotten about it," explains Mark.
- They might have, but you shouldn't. It's time to get this deadly live show over the water, and fast. Tony Fletcher

The Reds Are Coming!

CCCP Are Here!

They are the most talked about Italian, or, Emilian band. They play pro-Soviet, melodic punk. They have a new LP out on Virgin but refuse to learn English, so we sent VITTORE BARONI to track them down.

- I recently saw CCCP play live, their show is something of a theatrical happening: while Giovanni Ferrett recites disconcerting texts to the accompaniment of two punkish guitars and a semi-human rhythm-section, Fatur ("artist of the Italian People") and Antonella Giudici stage a quick succession of sketches that include savage dancing with a board full of nails hung around the neck, strip (Antonella changes at least 20 dresses in a single performance), adopt grotesque costumes made out of old agricultural tools, offer impersonifications of nuns and nurses, wave large red flags and present a disquieting pagan totem.
- Five years ago, CCCP used to play their unique mixture of rough, basic punk and traditional melodies (Italian, eastern, middle-eastern) at summer festivals organised by the Italian Communist Party, for the ears of astonished militants who could not tell if they were being jeered at or not. Today, CCCP almost fill the stadiums, though their music has not basically changed, the elements, instead, have been refined and perfected.
- The complete name of the group is CCCP — Fedeli alla Linea (Faithful to the Line), their explicit pro-Soviet attitude attracted from the very beginning the curiosity of all the media, not only music papers but also news weeklies and trendy magazines, as always eager to catch the different and unusual. The band managed to avoid any rigid and mono-dimensional categorisation. They love to provoke and surprise their fans, like when they signed to the Italian branch of Virgin after four records with Attack Punk, one of the more active Italian alternative punk labels. The first move after signing the long-term contract was to release a single, Oh! Battagliero, that contained a song in traditional waltz style!
- The new album, Socialismo e Barbarie (Socialism and Barbarism), is a welcome addition to their first LP Affinities-Divergences Between Comrade Togliatti And Us, and the picture-disc Comrades Citizens Partisan Brothers, plus the EP, Orthodoxy.
- How would you introduce yourself, briefly, to readers who never heard about CCCP — Fedeli alla Linea and know very little about the Italian political climate?
- "CCCP make modern music. We are tied to our place of origin, that is not Italy, but Emilia Romagna (a region in central Italy, NdR). It is our region that limits our choices, the most pro-Soviet area in the Western World in living history, and the most pro-American as regards daily habits. Our imagery gets over the Berlin Wall, the Mediterranean Sea and the Ural mountains, to include the East and the Arabian countries, and ends up as neither transparent nor folkloric."
- Would CCCP have existed even without the punk movement?
- "No. It was punk that revealed, in the '70s/'80s, the possibility to play music concentrated on the human condition and not on technology or the market. The further developments are not interesting for us, whether they end up in the sewer or in the bank. From punk we take what we need, in order to live as well as play."
- Will you ever tour the UK or USA? And, if you did, would you still use the Italian language?
- "We would like to play in the UK or USA, but we're not over anxious about the possibility. USA and UK are not the centre of our world, neither cultural, nor political. The songs of CCCP are in Italian and our singer does not speak English."
- Which of your records have been or will be released in UK?
- "Three years ago Attack Punk Records released a mix, Ortodossia, now, we hope, to release the new LP, Socialismo e Barbarie, through Virgin Records."
- How much has changed, in terms of sale figures, with your LP on Virgin?
- "In terms of real sales, the situation hasn't changed. The first 15,000 copies were already assured by our old audience. Now we just have to make other potentially interested people aware of our existence. We are not addressing only the "young", on the contrary we are interested in the whole complexity of the human condition. CCCP is, also, music for mothers, factory workers, children, religious people, outcasts."
- Are there other groups that you respect, in Italy or elsewhere?
- "We are not music experts. We respect all those who make music and do not create too many problems to themselves, nor bother about music papers, critics, techniques, trends, marketing. And, moreover, do not care about ideologies, be them punk or yuppie."
- The difference between how indies and major labels operate seems more and more elusive: is it pure utopia the survival of completely independent and un-commercial musical experiences?
- "Commerce is a gift given to mankind, it develops knowledge, it broadens frontiers, it promotes interests. It is nothing to be afraid of. Truly independent and lowly commercial musical experiences can surely survive. But if they want to live, they have to become moderately commercial and then highly commercial."
- In London I saw a lot of T-shirts with the monogram CCCP, pro-Soviet clothes have become a fashion...
- "The Western World is characterised by cycles and counter-cycles. After America, Russia. From the T-shirts with F or University Of Yale to those with CCCP. This means nothing to us. We were pro-Soviet under Breznev, we still were under Andropov and Cernenko, we still are now under Gorbaciov. All the rest is contingent."
- What will be your next move?
- "To play outside of Italy, possibly in the East."
- It is still to be seen if CCCP's appeal will spread and take root outside the native borders, but I wish them good luck with their second Five Year Plan. If you want to find their old records, try directly Attack Punk (Via Lama 57/3, 40122 Bologna, Italy), or Toast Distribution (Via Duchessa Jolanda 13A, 10138 Torino, Italy).

Flower Children!

The Honolulu Mountain Daffodils have the last laugh!

The Honolulu Mountain Daffodils' world is a dangerous one. Their debut LP, Guitars Of The Oceanic Undergrowth, was a stunner. Dark, troubled and spiced with a touch of menace, it is guaranteed to blow the cobwebs from the most timid bank clerk's ears. I check the door in case I need to make a quick exit: I like my face just the way it is.

- Joachim Pimento is the band's mentor and driving force. His body is soaked in Jack Daniels and marinated in tequila.
- He lectures: "There are two types of people. Those who like Lou Reed and those who like Paul McCartney. We like Lou Reed."
- Like many of today's bands they are heavily into sampling.
- "We sample, we mutate. The greatest honour any band can have is to be sampled by the Honolulu. It started out as a tribute, but now we've found our sound from it."
- Lord Sulaco, the band's singer, has a voice trained at the Jack Hawkins' school of vocal excellence.
- He says: "Like Captain Scarlet, I am a citizen of the world. I have nothing but compassion for my fellow man, but I'll be damned if I'll give him any money."
- The Honolulu are the ultimate cult band. Their true identities are shrouded in mystery and their motives are hard to define.
- DJ Wright confides: "We want to be totally obscure so that in 20 years time someone will discover our records and say, 'Who were those guys?'. That was the idea of the first album cover. It deliberately looks all faded as if someone has left it in a shop window, ignored and unsold."
- Up till now gigs have proved something of a problem. Could it be the 'lulu's demands on their audience?
- Sulaco: "When I'm singing, I insist my audience kneel."
- The band snigger. Zoe Zettner sneers, "He has a terrible height complex."
- Sulaco snaps back, "I'm five foot eight... I don't consider that short."
- We compose ourselves, trying to ignore the rumour that Sulaco is taller laying down than standing up.
- The new LP, Tequila Dementia seems set to bring them the success they have struggled to avoid. Their joyous obscurity is starting to fray around the edges. One of the LP's highlights is Deathbed Bimbo, a shocker of a song about that great taboo subject AIDS.
- DJ Wright takes up the story: "It's about a guy with AIDS who finds a girl with AIDS, and they decide to keep the disease to themselves."
- The Honolulu make music for the end of the world.
- Says Joachim: "We are the final joke. The whole of the last 25 years is crammed into us. It's a tribute, with a sense of humour."
- Rock and roll is dead! Long live the Honolulu Mountain Daffodils! Steve Morris

Vittore Baroni with the new plastic passions from Italy's Independent Label

● At the beginning of November, I was at the 4th annual Meeting of Independent Music labels, in Florence, an international festival with loads of frenzied chatter, warm handshakes, cool drinks, many stalls of unusual records and various miscellaneous concerts (yours truly helped to set up a schizoid Halloween night featuring Cudù, The Legendary Pink Dots and the elusive Current 93). It goes without saying that I came back from the meeting with a trunk of promo discs and tapes, so here's a selection of new tasteful releases. I have to clear out my desk, you know... ● The Doubling Riders is that sort of networking-music project where a guy recording a trumpet solo in his living-room in Saskatchewan ends up on the left channel of a track mixed in Piacenza, Italy. Strangely enough, the result here is classy and very coherent, with no loose parts, an aristocratic collection of songs that stand half-way between Tuxedomoon and the Penguin Café Orchestra. Praise must be granted to lyricist and Master of Ceremonies, Francesco Paladino, who, together with keyboardist Pier Luigi Andreoni and sampling wizard Riccardo Sinigaglia, forms the stable core of the group, who were able to mix down the different contributions into an homogeneous style. The second production of the Doubling Riders is an attractive boxed set with 2 LPs and texts, Doublings and Silences Vol. II, on ADN (Piazza Segrino 6A, 20159 Milan, Italy). ● The most impressive stock of new releases came this year from the pro-'60s circles, that are really enjoying their 15 minutes of fame. The Electric Eye label leads the dance with the second volume of '80s Colours, including the best of the "second wave" of Italian psychos (Acid Flowers, Avengers, Keep Away From Children, Psychomotor Pluck, etc.), plus the new LP of garage thrillers from The Booohos and the first album of the lisergic Effervescent Elephants, called Something to Say (E. Eye, C.P. 144, 27100 Pavia). Allison Run, with their favourably received debut mini-LP All Those Cats In The Kitchen (Mantra Records, Via degli Etruschi 4/14, 00185 Rome), prove that the "neo-psychedelic" label makes less and less sense for bands that employ the '60s influences only to evolve modern and original pop songs. Another delightful mini-LP with poppy sweet'n'acid songs comes from Peter Seilers & The Hollywood Party, whose singer, Magic Y, also released a couple of interesting compilations on his own label Crazy Mannequin (Via Monte Nero 5, San Giuliano Mil. se, Milan). The first, Lucifer's Friends, is a "chaotic, funny and wonderful" collage of Italian subterranean bands with incredible and very long names (like Kim Squad and Dinah Shore Headbangers) plus special guests from abroad (Jazz Butcher, Membranes, Jacobites, etc). The second is called Andy Pop and will surely become a collector's item for Velvets' completists: the legendary first LP of the Velvet Underground, the one with Warhol's banana on the cover, has been re-made piece-by-piece by a wild array of new Italian groups, as a homage to Dada Warhol in the sky. The vinyl is appropriately banana-yellow and the first 200 copies include a fruity T-shirt. The cover versions, with Bowie's Andy Warhol as a bonus track, are all unpretentious and highly listenable. ● Relax now with some "serious" stuff. Giovanni Sturmman is a guitarist and songwriter, but he turned to piano for his third album Comics, an instrumental soundtrack of soft improvisations and melancholy moods, in the vein of certain progressive outfits in the Recommended Internationale. More ethereal sounds in Knot Music by Luigi Maramotti, another keyboards-based LP, albeit computerised in this case. Sub-titled "music for absent-minded listening", the album adds a lovely romantic edge to the Eno-esque ambientism you rightly expect after such a definition. Both records are distributed by Supporti Fonografici (Viale Coni Zugna 63, 20144 Milan). ● The Italian sounds that will surely encounter more difficulties outside the national borders are those that do not belong to any faithful little tribe, but fall into that vague galaxy that floats between mainstream FM rock, ready-for-video techno-pop, post-dark, post-post-punk, or anything you can safely play to your Mom and Dad, yet without going totally into the Middle of the Road. Very difficult to pick out titles from this crowded area, anyway start with The Favourite Toy by Art Boulevard (Toast distribution, Via Duchessa Jolanda 13A, 10138 Turin), a captivating and multi-flavoured mini-LP, then proceed with Future Memories' untitled 12 inch on Cave Canem (dist. Supporti Fonografici), just plain nice songs with rich melodies, and continue by looking for these other names: Redox, Novalia, Cargo, Overload, The Bateau Ivre, Hot Riviera, Plasticost... ● Ugh! Enough marketable pieces of plastic! Will it be next time that we visit the Unforgettable Noise Crypts of Pastaland?

FP And The Doubling Riders

Front 242, the Masterhit and the masterplan

If this is Tuesday it must be Belgium. Brussels in fact, and a rendezvous with crack European electro-terrorists Front 242. Hot on the heels of the Masterhit import 12 inch remix from their Official Version LP — one of the best of '87 — and a European trek in tow with Depeche Mode, they're here... alive... and stuff.

- The thing that immediately strikes me when talking to Richard (sawn off Mohican, previously also a Revolting Cock) is how committed he is to what his group are doing. He's excited and animated with every facet of the band's existence.
- "After nine years of working with electronics, I finally became a professional 'musician' last year, and I love it, even if only five per cent of the music industry is good and the rest bullshit. But you have to be constantly changing — there's no point in continuing otherwise."
- Hence the apparently absurd reasoning behind turning down the chance to continue the jaunt with Depeche Mode into the UK, where their profile is zilch compared to the rest of Europe and America.
- "Yes I know, but we just did 17 gigs in 25 days with Depeche, straight after our own European and Canadian tour. We're not averse to touring but not for months at a time. We were bored with our old show and decided the time would be better spent rebuilding our studio and working on new material. The next record MUST be better than Official Version."
- But Britain is still important?
- "It used to be a dream to be number one in England, but not anymore. Germany is much more important now I think. Basically, you must choose to concentrate on the areas you are already doing well in — we've toured Germany many times, North America three times, France, Sweden twice, but only one gig in England. We're really not that bothered — a group like Yello never play gigs yet still sell well all over Europe and America."
- Finally, were you happy with the Masterhit reworking?
- "No, not really. What happened was that we recorded a new 12 inch for release in the autumn but scrapped it. Then, for the first time in our careers we compromised and went back into the studio and remixed Masterhit. But none of us were 100 per cent happy with it. That's why it's only available on full release in North America, and import only for Europe."
- Check it out and make their distributors Red Rhino rich. Alex Bastedo

Tricolor touters!

Les Thugs look for trouble!

So, why hasn't France produced any good rock 'n' roll bands? "Ah, there are good bands in France, but you just don't know about them in England," reply Les Thugs, four men from Angers with something quite vital to impart — the least of which is that they're finally in England with a British release on Vinyl Salvation, a mini-album, Electric Troubles.

- "Most of the bands sing in French so the British record industry aren't interested," explains elected spokesman, Eric. Les Thugs sing in English, but you can't really hear the words in their accounts until the wall of electric guitars spiralling and looping around things make it difficult!
- Electric troubles, Les Thugs?
- Eric: "There are different meanings of the word 'trouble': It's not just the problems of a plug, or an amplifier, it can be lights in the street, or trouble you can feel."
- In the lyrics, we fail to see what we feel about the world around us, the problems in daily life, or between two people. We have a bleak vision of the way the world turns."
- Les Thugs' experiences back in France haven't cheered them up; despite fanzine and local radio interest around the country, the national music press are in Paris!
- "They don't talk a lot about rock 'n' roll bands like us. We don't like Paris — the scene, the people, the journalists, in Paris, they talk mostly about fashion."
- Les Thugs don't talk much about fashion; neither do they fit into one. "We're not a punk band, or a '60s band, or a rock 'n' roll band. We're something in the middle."

art

● Ah yes, art! And music! Some might murmur something like “arty-farty”, some could pluck a word like pretentious from their catalogues, some others would possibly even call it interesting...

● Achwgha Ney Wodei (pronounced Ash-ga-ney-vo-day if you're asking) might perhaps comment “au naturelle”. Being of a decidedly French nationality, the group share a lack of inhibition as regards mixing music with art — a freedom of self-expression which dates back to earlier French experiments with aristocracy and that art machine the guillotine...

● January of 1986 saw the first fruits formed in the shape of 40 minute cassettes, encased in handmade, hand-painted, plaster replicas of the Citroen DS cards — the only problem being that you had to smash or chisel your way in to get at the music. Gigs were played, and a contemporary ballet scored in the ensuing months (what else?).

● More recently another art package has been released in collaboration with London-based New International Recordings. Tryptique is in a limited edition of a 1,000 copies; the front of each box being a section of one of ten giant paintings by ten different artists. Inside are ten colour postcards of said work along with three 12 inch maxi 45's. I ask Didier (band member, vocals, words and instruments) and Riton (who describes himself as “the fifth wheel on the Achwgha car”) to tell us what the project, the band are about.

● “The music, the instruments, come first; with us it's spontaneous, then come the words — we sing in French and use onomatopoeia for effect and even nonsense words... for the new record we also sampled lots of sounds, we travelled to the mountains in France to a bell factory, used the natural reverb provided by a grotto; using percussion and throwing stones into the water, we sampled sounds of the Paris markets... we also used computers in the studio to compose — mathematics to build structures around which we could improvise.”

● Tryptique? “Three records, a triangle, three kinds of music; the first has lyrics and a jazzy/dance/traditional style similar to our earlier work, the second is instrumental; we used piano and percussion mostly. The third record is experimental music based on natural sounds. All four of the group (the other three being Eric, Francois and Woody) tried playing anything and everything possible.”

● Their enthusiasm is quite infectious, and their sincerity commendable.

● What form do the live shows take?

● Riton: “In the past they've dressed up as insects and Al Jolson; they want to make something more than just a concert; a show.” Didier continues: “We improvise our songs live, play different instruments, have fun — the audience laughs with us and because we are not rock stars we can, after the show, discuss with everybody present and make new contacts, get new ideas... our music is like a story, not a closed story, only chapters; the music goes on...”

● Not in the least bit guilty of being art bores in my opinion. What do you make of it? I wonder as Achwgha's “quirky noiseplay” (as reviewed in last months ish) swirls around my head...

● Didier: “Use your imagination.” Daz Igmeth

Truckers, yo! Dumtruck get journo-lag!

Dumtruck with Peter Sellers lookalike (extreme right)

During Dumtruck's short debut tour of the UK, I was politely informed that there had been 5,000 interviews before me. Minds are fried, it's the type of day where relatively new guitarist Kevin Salem has a serious question: “Who do you get to play Barney?”

- In case the thought whizzed by, the discussion was about the proposed Flintstones movie. Slumped in the corner, having talked himself into oblivion, lead vocalist Seth Tiven pipes up, “I'm having a serious insomnia problem.”
- Understandably. The night before was spent singing into deaf ears — the industry types who “had three burritos in one hand and a margarita in the other.”
- “They knew that as soon as we'd stop playing the alcohol would stop being free. I hate the business side of the record industry. Over here it's a lot better than in America. When we come over things are taken care of. In the US we get taken out for an Okie dog when we're in LA.”
- “It's a bad business with some good people,” adds Salem.
- But before they get tossed out on their ears, it's important to note that their Big Time label has been behind the Boston-based band every step of the way. The first step began in 1984, when Tiven started the band with friend Kirk Swan.
- Tiven: “I had a four-track and he came up a few weekends and we decided to get something together.” That something was D Is For Dumtruck, a raw, unpolished album that became a college favourite due to concert standards Swirls Around and Repetition. Two years later came Positively Dumtruck, an aggressive but moody album that quietly made the point that Dumtruck was off and running.
- Then the detour. Swan decided to leave. Salem, in between brutal 6AM-4AM work days of teaching in high school and installing cable systems, watched it all from a distance.
- “Lyrically, they,” (Tiven and Swan), “came from two different places.”
- Tiven quickly interjects, “He was of the opinion that he'd write a new song and that was it. And the lyrics... he'd write something like this: “I would eat but my stomach would probably reject food.”
- Um yeah... Swan's moved out to Los Angeles.
- So the history is taken care of. Now the present, and everybody gets excited.
- Seth: “We're a louder band now.”
- Salem: “It's much more a band of extremes now than before. I think that's good. Otherwise you'd sound like middle-of-the-road Bon Jovi.”
- Aside from Salem and Tiven, Tom Shad (bass), the youngster of the band, and Shawn Devlin on drums make up the musical 'truck. Shad, who gets praise for being the first “real” bass player of the band, as well as Salem, were auditioned first by telephone, a process which weeded out more than a few stadium dreamers. Dumtruck was ready to roll...
- From there, demos were passed around until Hugh Jones of Echo fame started calling. Then it was off to the studio in Wales, a far cry from Beantown.
- Seth: “Hugh said to us ‘Do you want a slick record or a real raw record?’ We didn't want a slick record.” The result is their third release, In the Country, filled with emotion and range. The same goes for Dumtruck in concert — one minute sounding like the inevitable comparison of “those fheads from Athens,” the next, like lost souls run amuck.
- Yeah, Dumtruck sure doesn't have any slimy cargo. Right now, they're doing 70 in their quest to be demons of the road. Scott Murphy

FIREHOSE BLACK FLAG III DESCENDENTS

FIREHOOSE: If'n. The second wailer. e.O. Mike and George enter the sophomore sweepstakes and ditch the beanies on the second FIREHOOSE album "If'n". Fourteen tunes recorded in eighty-five hours, that go way beyond anything three dudes should be able to do. Includes Sometimes, Honey Please, Anger and For The Singer Of REM. SST 115

Wasted Again. Imagine if your favorite Flag party tunes of all time were put together in a room. Then, the room was filled with hundreds of your best friends. Before the cops come, you better slap on Wasted Again, a collection of all the songs that make you want to party. Six Pack, T.V. Party, Wasted, Rise Above and twelve more festive Flag tunes. SST 166

DESCENDENTS: Liveage. The last blast in the saga of the "Dents" comes in the form of this incredibly bonus live record. Feel the bone-crushing power of the Descendents. If you want it "ALL", this is the first step you will need to make. SST 163

Pat RuthenSmear

RuthenSmear. As a founding father of punk, Pat Smear should need no introduction. From his patented guitar grungework with the Germs, right up to now, Pat RuthenSmear is the severed edge of modern guitar playing. Pat RuthenSmear however, is a whole new kettle of fish. Glam, slam, blammo, a whole new way of life. SST 154

Human Rights. The fireband vocalist of the world renowned Bad Brains steps out with his own record. With a lush background and a unifying spiritual message, this record shows H.R. in the role of healer and teacher. From the world beat hip hop of Human Rights to the soft love vibe of Acting So Bad, this record cuts across all boundaries in its quest for one-love. SST 117

PAPER BAG:

PAPER BAG: A Land Without Fences. A new phase in the sound of Paper Bag has come out with their second record for SST, A Land Without Fences. Recorded direct to digital, all live, no overdubs, this record truly captures the essence of Paper Bag. Completely improvised, the music on this record shows a grasp of melody and intuitive playing never equaled. SST 170

Do the Murphy

PETER MURPHY celebrates a decade of pop notoriety this year with his second solo album Love Hysteria, released through Beggars Banquet on March 28. No doubt ardent Murphyites will already have purchased, cherished and ingested the sampler of the LP which took shape this Feb as a rather gorgeous 45, titled All Night Long. Penned by the hollow-cheeked one, together with his keyboard player Paul Stratham, this bridges the two year gap since his last single, Tale Of The Tongue, and proves indisputably that there is growth after maturity! ● Only those, however, who were able/willing to fork out the extra for the 12-inch will have been privvy to the bold (and better!) cover of The Stooges' classic Funtime (In Cabaret – a Murphy embellishment). And watch out for Indigo Eyes – guaranteed to squeeze emotional repose from even the most stoic of pop voyeurs. ● Produced by Simon Rodgers, erstwhile Fall keyboards man, Love Hysteria will result in the first Beggars/RCA America link up on Murphy's behalf, following the success of the USA tour which occupied most of his time last year. ● Tempering necessary publicity with his usual style and exclusivity, Peter will be appearing once only in England, at Sadlers Wells Theatre March 27, with an impressive new line-up featuring Peter Bonas on guitar, Eddie Brach on bass, Terl Bryant on drums and, of course, the aforementioned Paul Stratham on keyboards. Electrifying inside story in next month's ish! Alex Kadis

Peter Murphy lends a helping hand

EMERGENT NOISE Hottest sounds to bury their talons into the Underground office this month!

Preceding two single releases and a nationwide tour, Microdisney's latest four track cassette taster comes spinning in pop finery from Virgin Towers. The new single will be Gale Force Wind which sounds like it'll quite easily top the antics of their previous Singer's Hampstead Home 45.

The much travelled and tormented Cradle look set to impress — after rumours of Ivor Perry joining The Smiths — their eleven track Portastudio demo sounds like the kind of thing that'll have everyone from Triffids to Bunnymen fans interested. Already, producer Gil Norton has offered his services and a couple of majors are interested.

With the demise of The Housemartins, Go! Discs have been on a signing bender, the first fruits of which will be a single from The Blue Ox Babes. With a fiddle sound keenly bowed and Dexy-orientated, the Babes boast a flexing vocal style and a neat songwriting style. UK post-folk soulsters, anyone?

Planet Wilson are a union forged through the demise of The Red Guitars and they are toting a four track demo which Virgin look set to release in one form or another. Well structured, haunting pop in a truly minimal mood with an elongated sound that drifts from Bowie-esque to ethnic simplicity and back again.

Also from Virgin is a four track selection from Irish band Something Happens which rocks out in a rather undistinct way, unlike the rather raved-over Church who've inked a new deal with Arista. Their first single will be a rather moving acoustic strum titled Under The Milky Way and it's one of those rock sounds that's paced just perfectly enough to transcend the usual nonsensical blandness of the medium.

The next single from Coco, Steel And Lovebomb looks likely to break them into the spotlight-bedraggled centre stage. Titled The Sound Of Europe it's a sample heavy, brass driven talk-in, with the whole symphonic climax blowing speakers off walls and redressing the balance of cross-cultural US/UK dance music.

Giant Sand's next album, Storm, sounds like it's a winner. Set for release through the portals of Demon Mansions, it has that predominant guitar buzz thrown against the simple strum and Howe's Americana vocal drawl.

The Corn Dollies have four tracks demo-ed up in preparation for a new album that they're set to "lay down" for Medium Cool and they suggest that they'll be proud fathers of a bouncing guitar strum, punched out with vocal glee. Med Cool also plan a cheapo compilation featuring all of their fabby acts real soon . . . so look out!

Finally we were warned about the strange popiness of Wire's new 45 for Mute, but Kidney Bingos is even closer to the charts than we'd imagined. Collin Newman's vocal runs rife on a pop-psyche style ballad that's supported with usual Wire aplomb in the guitar department. A classic case of verse/chorus m'lud!

DON'T SPLIT IT!

A new year and the seasonal crisis hits the music biz. It's split city and rumours are rife...

After The Smiths' demise last year, and the ensuing rumours – with scenes played between The Cradle's Ivor Perry, Morrissey, Vini Reilly, Johnny Marr, The Pretenders, Paul McCartney, Steven Street and Aztec Camera's Roddy Frame – The Housemartins were the first name to peg out in '88, but still rumours are running wild about other departures, possible new unions and the state of everything groovy.

New Order's press count increased at the tail end of last year when split rumours were fuelled by the release of a best of set, but the official statement read 'Up yer bum' and a new LP is set for quite soon. Meanwhile, about the same time, The Folk Devils split and they didn't even bother to tell their record label. . . opting to announce it to the press themselves. . . so who would be next?

From America, news of the demise of Green On Red has drifted in, while last week split rumours about Gaye Bykers On Acid, The Wedding Present and Miaow were all found to be slightly left of the truth, while The Creepers announced their final chapter after a "stabbing incident in the band" at new year. Well, that's better than musical differences. As for the Bykers, well, the truth of the matter is that they split with their management, while The Wedding Present story had a whisker of truth, but could have been much better put down to a re-arranging of personnel rather than an end to a beautiful friendship. But Miaow? Well, there again, personnel changes have secured a new career for singer Cath Carroll ("possibly with a new band name, too") following her sad, but inevitable, parting from the other members of the combo.

Worst of all is the news that Cabaret Voltaire – a primal influence from their earliest days for our editor – have called it an edit. Mal has opted to "do it" with Dave Soft Cell/English Boy On The Love Ranch Ball while Richard Kirk looks set to stay in Sheffield where he's recently released an LP with ex-Box vocalist Peter Hope.

And, as Alan McGee's Elevation label – featuring The Weather Prophets, Edwyn Collins and Primal Scream – has severed links with WEA, the question must be, will this rapid activity bring up any new conglomerations and combos and just who will be the next crew to call it a day? Even, can the world live in the house of rock after the divorce?

If only a few more people could restrain themselves and quit while they've got their dignity, rather than drag it all through the papers. . . it makes it all look so cheap. I mean, Big Black were refined and restrained about it all, weren't they? Hmmmm, Songs About Fing, indeed!

The Smiths: they split

Miaow: they fractured

The Cabs: they divorced

Big Black: they did it with style

The Wedding Present: they shuffled

fiction

SO WHAT'S Cathead all about then? Well, Matthew Eaton of Friends Of The Family – a man who admits a burning lust for Culturcide – is doing a fanzine called Cathead, as well as making the fabby FOTF debut single, plus a free badge, available for a mere £1.20 from Flat 1, 31 Wake Green Rd, Moseley, Birmingham B13 9HF.

Bourbonese Qualk, that bizarre combo from South London, are using a selection of dead insects sealed inside the two sides of their next LP. They reckon they need 40,000 dead insects and would appreciate your help in getting them (oh, by the way, you can't actually kill them yourselves, natural causes only). Send the corpses to Box 244, London SE1 5A2.

Felt have just emerged from a breathless time in the studio with Slaughter Joe Foster . . . the end result being a new album that sees them flaunt a tag called 'anti-technology'.

Rumours are rife that the latest JAMS single – Big Fat 45 – was in fact not even anything to do with JAMS. Yes, those kings of sampling say they know nothing of the record, which boasts Zep licks and Eric Morecombe dialogue, among other things. The fickle finger of accusation points to the Fierce Records conglomerate in Wales (as featured a couple of months back in Ug). The Fierce ones are not answering their telephone at the moment.

Mike Cobley has been doing collages with his back issues of Underground, the end result – with more than a tasty line of fabword for effect – is a xerox sheet of great heat-inducing quality and suchlike, so, if you want to comment about his comments, write him at 18 Athole Gdns, Hillhead, Glasgow G12 9BA and enclosed a sae for better results.

Mick Todd, the ex-bass player of Basczax – who turned up on Fast Product's Earcorn 2 with Joy Division, is forming a new independent label called Animation Records. With members of Basczax departed for shores anew as part of Jank Mamba and The Flaming Mussolinis, the first release on Animation will be a timely look back at some of Basczax's unreleased material.

More action up north surrounds Premonition of Sheffield (Freepost, Sheffield S11 8TE) who release a four track cassette EP from Pick Meter – who feature Mike Keane from The Royal Family And The Poor. Already, it's being acclaimed as a mix of New Order, hip-hop and house and it can be yours for £1.75. The label are also looking out for bands who are in the mood to get down with Public Enemy, Severed Heads, Psychoterrorists, Suicide, Foetus and the like.

fiction

More from the world of small-scale fanzine (A5 that is) ... and Charming's debut issue comes for a mere 50p plus a stamp. It comes with love (sorry uuuurve) and has a free tea bag, bubblegum and features on Baby Lemonade, The Primitives and The Smiths. Fit to pop, no less! Hic! Get it from Stephen Charming, 57 Dove Crescent, Dovercourt, Essex CO12 4RD.

Across the great sea, you know the one on the left, the start of '88 looks likely to be ultra busy for SST. They pledge more diversification and the onslaught will be headed by the strange guitar of Everett Shock, the funk of Minneapolis' Run Westy Run, the Pan-cultural depths of the Lower East Side's Mofungo and reggae boff Ras Micaheal. Watch the ports!

The February edition of Sonic Life, that groovy xerox-edition with scribbles from Savage Pencil, candid photos and general porn from Albini and all the Sonic types. All this and more can be yours for a mere 80p (cheques made payable to Sonic Life) from Pat at Blast/First, 429 Harrow Rd, London W10 9RE.

Believe it or not, Factory sup-remo and occasional mini-marathon commentator, Tony Wilson is currently traipsing the streets of Hollywood in an attempt to raise two and a half million quid from US sponsors for a film called Mad Fers. According to New Order's Peter Hook, it's "a really Factory thing to do but, the script is great. Very like The Sweeney, very English." We live in fear!

There's a pretty hot skinzine called Backs To The Wall that's currently surveying the ska/post-mod/northern soul scene, and it caters for the fashion hungry, fact hungry (with A to Zs of skinhead reggae and other such things). Strictly anti-national front and pro-skin, it's a good read that's well worth checking out from Dudley, 86 Ninian Rd, Roath, Cardiff CF2 5EP.

Legendary punkers, The Apostles have put together a limited edition of 666 art packages entitled Cartography. Featuring 10 double-sided posters and a C90 cassette in a special wallet, it's only available by mail from BBP Records at 90 Grange Drive, Swindon, Wilts, SN3 4JD.

The M&M's in top ten

after the fact

Robert K Cohen's Big Comment

SURPRISE SURPRISE!

EVERY BAND IN THE WORLD WAS INFLUENCED BY ENNIO MORRICONE (not Velvet Underground as you may have thought) said every music paper in the world exclusively. "High-tech helped Holly Johnson hit the high notes" (Daily Wail). . . Morris Minor And The Majors reach Top Ten amid disproportionately huge press coverage. "This year's Star Trekkin", suggests rm.

A more pleasant surprise: The Pogues take If I Should Fall From Grace With God to number three in the album charts.

Most surprising, though (to anyone stupid) has been the re-release of Eddie Cochran's C'mon Everybody, due to its featuring in that jeans advert. Thank God for the advertising companies, say I!

If it wasn't for them, we'd never discover these quaint little nonentities like Sam Cooke and Marvin Gaye. Three cheers for the ad persons, and at least one for Smash Hits, who recently informed us that "The Housemartins are 'dead'", a mere two weeks after most Marshians had got the message. OK, Smash Hits is published fortnightly, but that doesn't justify the treatment of a piece of ancient history as a hold-the-front-page exclusive. Still, these are the people who surround every other word in inverted commas, and provide "helpful" explanations "of" difficult "topics" in brackets. For instance, did you know that "anorexic" means "suffering from the slimmers' disease anorexia"?

Like many passings, The Housemartins' demise produced less than unanimous mourning. Paul

McGee, writing to NME, said he would miss "their derivative, pedestrian records" and "their stupid videos... Yes, I shall miss The Housemartins; but only fractionally less than I'll miss Thatcher."

I hope he'll get the chance to prove it very soon.

The February issue of Q contained an interview with Derek Jameson. He boasted of having been the man who put tits in the Daily Mirror, saying he didn't think that female readers objected: "I'm not talking about feminists on the Socialist Worker, I'm talking about women out there in the land." Personally I reckon there's a lot of women outside of the SWP who miss the luxury and privilege of being able to walk around after dark without getting raped and told they were asking for it.

Anyway, stand by for the '70s Flare-Up - that's what the NME orders. When the music press have nothing to do of a week, they fill their pages with 'exclusive' and lengthy info on some new - or very old - trend. Apparently, it's now time to dust off your flares and platform soles - though I personally have never had any (due not least to a case of extreme youth in the early '70s). Nevertheless, it's only a matter of time before Anarchy In The UK is re-released as the soundtrack to an advert for bell-bottom Levi's.

Actually, of all the celebrities grilled on the subject, "Where were you in '72?", only Paul Weller refused to play ball. He steadfastly maintained that he was in school at the time.

"Where were you hanging out?" they persisted. "In my trousers, which were in the science class."

Not to be outdone, Melody Maker the same week featured an interview with Robert Plant, informing us that Led Zeppelin, "the supergroup of the '70s", have become "the inspiration of the '80s". It's not clear whether that means the under-80s or the over-80s. Meanwhile, back at NME, the one redeeming aspect of all the embarrassing nostalgia was a chart of the 'Top 20 Naff '70s Catchphrases'. Straight in at Number 20 was "I am a silly old Hector", from Hector's House - a classic TV animation surely ripe for revival.

There was one fatal omission, however:

"That's all we've got time for, Basil."

Eddie Cochran: ain't no cure for the Levi jeans blues...

Housemartins: Thank God it's over!

MASTERBLAST

ROCK ON SCOTLAND: EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT 11.30-12.30 ON BBC SCOTLAND AROUND 94.5 FM OR 370m/810Khz MEDIUM WAVE.

During the week, Stuart Cruikshank and Sandy Semenoff work in the record library of BBC Radio Scotland, a National Region station, with output something like a cross between Radio 2 and Radio 4. But for an hour every Friday night (11.30-12.30), they really come into their own. They produce a show called Rock On Scotland, presented by Peter Easton, who sounds typically BBC but does manage to steer clear of inane DJ-speak.

Stuart: "We only have an hour to cram in masses of stuff. We average 51 minutes of music with a bit of informed comment, plus music details like record label and distributor. We don't often do interviews because there's so much good music to play."

But what sort of music are we talking about?

"We steer clear of the white-sock brigade, so no Hipsway or Wet Wet Wet, and we don't play heavy metal, but we'll play anything else from anywhere."

About a third of the show is Scottish music, including on average two demos a week.

"We've played early demos by Soup Dragons, Bachelor Pad, We Free Kings, but I don't want to give the impression that we're here just to please the anorak brigade, we do try to play stuff not covered by Peel, like more Scottish groups and the STT/Homestead sort of material."

Sandy: "It's pretty much solidly guitar-based, from folk to thrash, we all go for good guitar sounds."

And, the good news is that you don't have to live in Scotland to hear the show.

Stuart: "You can pick it up on medium wave almost anywhere in the UK — in London, even as far south as Southampton, and you can hear it in Eire."

So send records and demos and, if it's north of Newcastle/Carlisle, news for the weekly gig guide.

Stuart: "People think the BBC has men in suits telling you what to do, but we don't. The problem is getting airtime, once you've got it you can have a lot of freedom, and I'd rather have an hour of freedom than two hours of someone sitting on top of me."

Sandy: "Some people don't like everything we play, but they like the feel of the programme, they can tell that we care."

TONGUE-PLAY!

Biting Tongues wash in the Wall Of Surf

Manchester's fragmented sons Biting Tongues have their back pages smudged and revisited on a new Ikon video release entitled Wall Of Surf. Featuring eight filmic episodes, it varies wildly from subliminal live jazz-outs to systematic sound-system destruction. Along the way the three Tongues, with associated cheeks, launch into ethnic play-offs, look beatnik and enter the open air for some stilted and spaced time-editing. Cuit collectors and obscurists will be impressed, new friends will be rewarded. Dave Henderson

READING BETWEEN THE LINES

The level of fanzine production, their chosen subject matter and the end result — and its place in the world — inevitably vary for all manner of reasons. At the end of the day, as sports types might like to phrase it, you can only really go on what's thrust in front of your eyes. If you don't like it, if you've been duped into spending 30p on the "word from the illiterati", then you'll just have to put it down to experience. Being a tad selective, though, let's eat Xerox . . .

SHARP CUTS (Rich Clarke, 24 Thorpefield Close, Thorpe Hesley, Rotherham South Yorks S61 2UT.) purports to be modernist, and its feature ideas — A Clockwork Orange, rediscovering The Negatives, Long Tall Shorty's family tree and The Thanes — are good, but the quality of writing and the wide-of-the-mark assessment of A Clockwork Orange falls rather flat on its face. Included are reviews, news and suchlike.

PEACE AND FREEDOM issue five is 20p, A5 sized, and comes with a tape and badge. The tape is lo-fi, but with some very intriguing lyrical ideas thrown in. A mess of poetry, underground comment and general free spirits, P&F is a brisk read but not something that's that convincing as a life force. From Paul Rance, 17 Farrow Road, Whaplode Drive, Spalding, S Lincs PE12 0TS.

DREAMS FROM WITHIN (Darren, 74 Monteth Crescent, Boston, Lincs PE21 9AY) is another A5 taster that's crammed with stuff and delivered in a tatty hand-written, typed — but endearingly enthusiastic — manner. At 30p, it's ideal if you're smitten with a love for Into a Circle, Tragic Venus, Hagar The Womb and the like.

JUMP AWAY . . . (386 Forest Road, London E17 5JF) reaches issue number four with a 45p A4 which comes resplendent with a free unravelled contraceptive. Cue cries of 'I never knew there was so much in it!' Meanwhile, the mag runs with all the humour that a couple of excitable enthusiasts can muster. Featured are Hurrah!, The Bodines, gossip, fabrication and some out of date reviews. The idea here is right and it's well put together, especially for the piss-take on Spock, Aitken And Waterman.

BABY BITES BACK issue four (30p from Eleanor at 125 Twickenham Road, Isleworth, Middlessex TW7 6AW) is bursting at the staples with things on Close Lobsters, The Dentists, Brilliant Corners, The Rover Girls and The Price. Written with cheeky style, this is well worth cherishing.

YOU CAN'T HIDE YOUR LOVE FOREVER breaks into its first issue and gets serious right away. From the US (16910 New Hampshire, Southfield, Michigan 48075, USA), You Can't . . . dips into Throwing Muses, Sonic Youth, the Bunnymen, Smiths and some neat reviews etc. It can all be yours for two pound notes sent to the above address . . . and it's well worth it too.

UN SOUND reaches its final issue this month, and what a package it presents. A four piece publication, it has a cassette with some excellent out-takes plus an A3 mag (plus additional A5 pieces). Featured is a selection of writing on the sounds and performances of a variety of acts including The Hafler Trio, Karen Finley, Neil Stewart, Blackhouse, Asmus Tietzens and plenty more. The tape itself has tracks from Die Todliche Doris, The Meters, Hunting Lodge, Smersh, Glorious Din, Negativland and many more. This is a listening experience you don't want to miss . . . write for details to Unsound at Box 883202, San Francisco, CA 94188-3202.

Dave Henderson

Harrier is an independent British publisher that has been releasing comics for over three years and this year sees the launch of their Harrier New Wave initiative, an attempt to get more widespread interest in their comics.

Their present catalogue contains an impressive range of talent although much of their output relies heavily on the now quite familiar work of Eddie Campbell and Phil Elliot. These two have cropped up in numerous publications ranging from their own Fast Fiction comics to music papers such as Sounds and NME.

Elliot's SOME TALES FROM GIMBLEY are bizarre semi-surreal recollections of a lost youth in an indefinable time and place, as related by the now middle-aged, balding hero of the title. If you can imagine TinTin with a Little Richard hairdo in some Young Ones-style black comedy then you get the picture of Gimbley.

What makes it so readable, apart from the nicely understated artwork, is that Elliot uses the kind of convention of the innocent hero of children's books such as Winnie The Pooh or Rupert Bear, wandering naively into bizarre events that are beyond their control. Definitely a modern classic.

Eddie Campbell's strips rely more on realism and irony than the absurdism of Elliot's work. They are mostly nicely observed little episodes, with a quintessentially English dry humour about them which I think could make them less interesting to most comic fans expecting a kick in the teeth on every page. It is similar to American Splendor in this respect with less emphasis on artificial excitement and more on real human behaviour which can be a lot more interesting than superheroes if given the chance.

Other Harrier comics worth mentioning are GAG, a best of British compilation including work by Glenn Dakin who does the wonderful Temptation for Escape, and a new one SINISTER ROMANCE, which is a kind of tribute/pastiche of the '50s romance-style comics. They are all worth investigating, and are all available from Mega-City, Camden Town. Frank Pigg

DUBIOUSER AND DUBIOUSER

There are three new video packages set to fall from the skies on the new Dubious label, via ikon (120 Manchester Road, Altringham, Cheshire WA14 1PY or distribution through Pinnacle). Of varying style and interest to Joe Punter, the high quality, hi-fi live footage features The Chevalier Brothers (swingy), Danielle Dax (psyche-pop) and The Moodists (ah, yes, The Moodists, now they were rather underrated weren't they?). Best of the bunch is that Moodists set which rolls in with 15 tracks topped with typical Moodists aplomb, including cutesy play and fine versions of their excellent Frankie's Negative and Machine Machine. Dave Henderson

UG WARNING

As if you didn't already know, next month's issue of Underground, which is on sale in a newsagent's near you from March 18, has a free cover-mounted chrome, Dolby, glorious stereo cassette entitled Strum & Drum, with tracks from The Housemartins, The Go-Betweens, The Wedding Present, Stupids, Miaow!, The Vandals, The Raw Herbs and Alex Chilton. So don't you miss it, y'hear!

gush

... an enthusiastic tirade from Prince Muso

My God! It's not good is it? What with the BPI awards rolling downhill into a bottomless pit of talentless nonsense! I mean, who in their right mind could vote Rick Astley, Wet Wet Wet and Terry Trent D'Arby into top notch positions with any kind of straight face? And Stock, Aitken And Waterman? Well, their productions are about as feeling and thoughtful for the original artists as someone throwing a blanket over the mixing desk - at least that way they always press the "hit" button. But talk of remixing, I wouldn't trust them to change channels on the TV!

But, after the bland mix, remix and international mix, the endless, continual repetitive radio play, the multi-formated release schedule (seven inch, 12 inch, double single pack, CD single and what have you) what do we get? What do we get? We get the pouting primadonnas trying to move their cardboard limbs on the video of the single. Yes, the video, the curse of modern man, the death of performance.

The fact that most of these three-minute slices seem to be extensions of things first envisaged in adverts, as a means of selling washing-up liquid, condoms or jeans, really takes the biscuit. After all, these so-called cinematic technicians have the whole world - and most times a sizeable chunk of cash - in their hands. But what does it all mean, all these over the shoulder glances, dippy attempts at miming, strange under garment shots and the heaving breasts of Bananarama? Surely they were the gals who complained about Page Three when their career was flagging a few years back, but the only reason they've made it into the financial drinking bracket that they now perspire in, is because they got scanty and learnt how to funk it. Don't get me wrong, I'm not pro-Page Three, but there's surely not that much difference in the Brama flaunt - and that's in steamy 3D too. But what the hell, it made the records sell. As did the Plasticine man epic for Jackie Wilson's Reet Petite, now a suitable array of follow-ups have charted other records, but none as trashy and psychedelic as the gem that supported the bracingly indie Star Trekkin of last year. Now that was a classic in both musical and animation terms.

But what are the alternatives? Well, there's a live video, abstract video (currently being offered as art by Elio for around 40 quid a throw) and the tacky, under-budgeted Super 8 realism of your independent partners, from Hula to The Soup Dragons. Whether your favourites manage to expand their career or not depends heavily on this new visual format - even more so than a feature in your dodgy weekly rag - but let's be tasteful about this! How about some more pastiche pieces along the line of Morrissey's post-Smiths flick 'I Started Something I Couldn't Finish', where a cast of thousands donned Morrissex and cycled around the back streets in search of celluloid fame? That worked, and I dare say it cost a fraction of the price that its high-slapping contemporaries came in at.

What's more, let's re-introduce humour! Gaye Bykers Drill Your Own Hole and art (quite a few of the ikon vids) next to live action (New Order) instead of being dragged down the road for another blast of blanket sexuality that's about as thrustingly provocative as a stale custard tart.

Feeling Butch

Butchie breathes in

What's in a name? The Jazz Butcher (aka Mat Fish) doesn't play jazz, he doesn't eat meat... So stop ignoring him! Like all, as with other great British guitar bands of this decade — such as The Monochrome Set and The Smiths — he does have some nice tunes and a great sense of humour.

- After eons of LP's and singles for Glass Records there seemed to be a lull last year before The Jazz Butcher finally switched to Creation, who have just issued the new Fishcoteque longplayer. A logical career move or just an easy cop-out?
- "I've always liked Creation and it turned out they had been interested in me for quite a while, but it wasn't until last summer that we were contractually able to sign anything. We then recorded the album and spent a bit of time getting a new band together. The old band seemed to fall apart all by itself after two years of almost constant touring and I wanted to get it right this time around. However, don't think of the others as just a backing band. If they weren't contributing their own ideas they would just be wasting their time as much as mine."
- In a way, perhaps moving to Creation from Glass might be perceived as a sideways move — as both labels are dogged by the indie tag.
- "I hate the word 'indie'. It's like 'nappy', or something. Why instead of 'indie' can't it be 'not very famous'? I'm 'not very famous' in several countries but still manage to scrape a chip allowance from writing songs."
- The Jazz Butcher: a not very famous none meat eating, Fishcotequention with double chips. Tasty! Alex Bastedo Mutant moments The Mute Drivers rev up!

"We're the Drivers, The Mute Drivers."

- Ah, yes, the group who broke Max Ernst's heart. No Dada connotations here, though, merely the fact that Dave and Steve drive for the Mute label to make a living. But they do a lot more than that.
- "We'd been in bands before... I'd been with Fad Gadget," admits Dave, "but we'd never really been happy with what we were doing. You know how you just go on and on? One day we just thought, let's do a record ourselves and see what happens."
- They did. The result was an album recorded in two days entitled Lighten Up Volume One. Recorded in the wee small hours, replete with a hand painted/etched sleeve and a catalogue of disasters. The bass broke, the van keys were dropped down the toilet, the headphones fell apart, the drum machine wouldn't work. You know, the usual things. But they did it. And it sold out, 1,500 copies.
- Lighten Up, is currently being repressed, but Steve and Dave, tired of the fallacy of the music business, aren't really pleased with what they've achieved.
- "We're glad it's sold," reckons Steve, "but it doesn't make anything any better. It doesn't right any wrongs in the world, in the country. It just means that 1,500 people will have a copy of the record."
- But that's good, maybe it'll change their lives.
- "I don't know, they'll probably hate it," exclaims Dave.
- But any reaction's a good reaction, claims the interviewer.
- The Mute Drivers aren't tomorrow's flavoured toffee, they're more likely to be the peanut butter stuck in Margaret Thatcher's teeth. They may not change the world either, but they'll make a bloody row about it along the way. Dave Henderson Close shavings!

"First of all we've got to buy her into the charts, right, then we've got to sweeten the disc jocks and manufacture the image, then we've got to sell that image, now for all that 10 grand isn't really enough bread, but given a bit of luck & knowhow, could happen."

- That's a bit from Smashing Time, a '60s movie about swinging London. It also appears on the Screaming Trees' debut LP — A Fracture In Time — a mish mash of dance rhythms, strange almost-pop songs, ambient soundtracks, like Big Black in a new Shaft movie or James Brown playing with Cabaret Voltaire. It's all there, filtered through the minds of Mark and Sean who make up Screaming Trees.
- "We're influenced by everything. When we're recording we go out to clubs a lot and watch loads of television, then if we hear a good bassline in a dance record or a good line in a film, we use that as inspiration."
- Like the Smashing City clip?
- "Yes, everybody seems to like that, it just fits in really well with what's happening."

- Nothing that Screaming Trees do is planned or structured.
- "We love all those tacky '60s things; The Avengers, Lost In Space, bad science fiction, things with a lot of imagination. They're from a time when anything was possible, before there had even been a man on the moon. Now everything's too calculated — in entertainment and in life, but we don't work like that."
- And they're not worried about stealing bits from TV, or other peoples records?
- "I'd be really pleased if someone took a bit of our record, it's like an accolade. All those '70s funk people like Bobby Byrd and James Brown have been repromoted by hip-hop artists using their material, and now they're moaning that it's theft. It's actually done them a lot of good."

- The 'A' side of the new single, Asylum is one of the most exciting bits of rhythm and noise so far this year, a good song plus bits of The Jacksons, LL Cool J, and loads of others, but the 'B' side totally rips off the bassline from Grandmaster Flash's White Lines, isn't this going a bit too far?
- "Some people take things and try to cover them up, we just took the whole bassline, threw down the gauntlet, just to say — what are you going to do about it? It's still a different song."
- But there's more to Screaming Trees than samples and stolen basslines.
- "People have to use samples with more imagination, more like another instrument than a gimmick. The current cut-up style will probably peter-out over the next few months, Gary Glitter will become trendy again or something, but creative sampling with continue because the possibilities are limitless."

Screaming Trees In knowing looks scare!

- And how do they make that noise? Well, if you're thinking of doing a bit of cutting-up yourself, here are Screaming Trees recommendations.
- "Use When I Think Of You by Janet Jackson, because it's got a good beat, and lots of sampled heavy metal guitar, distorted so it sounds really horrible."
- Screaming Trees can't fail. Chris Mellor

FUN, LOVE AND POLITICS Attacco Decente on the danger trail

Attacco Decente are a three-piece acoustic pop/folk group from Brighton. About a year ago they released an EP called 'UKA', short for United Kingdom Of America. After acclaim from the music press and Billy Bragg, the usual major label scramble to sign a hot new property began, and so the problems began. "The majors were all worried about the lyrics. It was all, 'we'd love to have you, but can't you tone it down a bit?'"

- What makes Attacco dangerous and different is both their political commitment and their instruments. They are all acoustic, some like 12 string guitar, ordinary, some rather unusual — hammer dulcimer, giant bass drum, tongue drum and their own creation, the Attacco harp.
- Geoff: "Mark spent nine months designing that, it's like a cross between a zither, a guitar and a harp, and it's got 34 strings. He's got the only one and even he hasn't learnt how to play it yet. When he's dead he'll be stuffed and put in a museum playing it."
- Now Attacco have a new LP ready, out on their own All Or Nothing label, in association with Red Rhino, and it's called, strangely enough, The Baby Within Us Marches On. Just to show their dedication they tell me that they finished mixing it on Christmas Day. But to me the title sounds a bit silly.
- Graham: "If you just heard the title you might think so, but if you listen to the record you'll understand. It's saying whatever happens, the spirit within everyone will carry on. It's positive in a personal and political way."
- And, I suppose the title does sum up the LP — well-meaning, heartfelt and positive, but all a bit too serious and wordy, to the point, in places, of sounding funny.
- But live Attacco really shine, and it's here that they do their most important work.
- Geoff: "As well as the usual venues we play a lot of community centres on estates. The sort of places where they usually have a Tie A Yellow Ribbon '70s disco, so we really cut through."
- But I thought people on estates were supposed to be into Mel And Kim and Fun, Love And Money.
- Graham: "We can offer more than Mel And Kim, and we come from places like that, so we get on with the people. The media decide that FLM's all they are interested in, but it's not true, the lie is you can't be commercial and communicate. We mix commercial appeal with a positive political message, we want to communicate but also give people a good time."
- Attacco are musically and lyrically uncompromising, and they're not going to be easily beaten!
- Geoff: "Our music is about taking control, unity, and breaking down barriers."
- Mark: "We can threaten self-indulgence; we can rub people up the wrong way by not being pessimistic."
- Graham: "But that is demanding, we're not going to pretend it isn't." Christopher Mellor

FULL SCAM

CRAWLING FROM THE WRECKAGE!

- Debris issue 16 falls on the floor and looks as clear, opinionated and decisive as ever. Dave Haslam's prose style is endearing and the choice of articles is, as ever, exceptional. Well put together pieces abound on The Stone Roses, The Heart-Throbs, The Fall, Morrissey, Twang and various less music-orientated personalities. Yes, there's life after plastic discs, and Debris is as good a place as any to get started.
- With a free flexi featuring the excellent King Of The Slums and the cut-up dub-outs of the soon-to-be-hip Moist, it's value for cash at 60p plus a large sae from 48 Princes Street, Manchester M1 6HR. Dave Henderson

SISTERS IN RHYME

The Rhythm Sisters started writing songs when they were 13, they came from Leeds, their debut LP, Road To Roundhay Pier, is groovy!

- "We didn't really write seriously until we were 17 or 18," admits a rather faint Debi Laek. She's on the telephone, sister Mandi is watching TV nearby, brother Billy — the instrumentalist of the combo — is whereabouts unknown.
- And how old are you now?
- "Er, 19."
- The Press and TV coverage — everything from Number One to Channel 4 have been good to the Sisters, allowing them some mean exposure during recent months. Was this some great masterplan.
- "No, we were just lucky really. All of the things that happened were by coincidence. We'd recorded the LP ages ago, then the TV thing, and they just came out at the same time. It looked like we'd achieved some kind of breakthrough all at once, but it just happened like that. It was all out of our control."
- Ah, yes. Well, I think that's what Debi said. You know, Brit Telecom being what it is, it's difficult to decipher sometimes. Suffice to say that's somewhere around the truth and that burning question . . . Just where is Roundhay Pier?
- "It doesn't exist actually. It's from when Mandi and me used to play at the back of our house, across the ditch there was something that looked like a Pier, we just called it Roundhay Pier."
- A likely story. Dave Henderson

ALIEN SEX FIEND

All Our Yesterdays

Anagram GRAM 34 P ●●● Droning zombie-beats and maximum scythe-power fuzz with ghostly/wasted/wonderful caterwauls and groans — a headless chicken struts round the dance floor in dizzy circles... wow!

Covering all the smoke-enshrouded swampground between Ignors The Machine (1983) and Hurricane Fighter Plane (1987), All Our Yesterdays throws together the first nine singles from ASF creating a writhing, heaving mass of sweaty stuff; brain ripple ice cream flavour mush, and me, I've got ray spoon poised.

Alien Sex Fiend are either sickly and lovable or sickly and irritating depending on where your brain is at, as it were. Mine is in the cupboard, underneath the kitchen sink grooving along with Nik Fiend, Mrs Fiend and Yaxi Highrizer getting down, getting down... on the ground. Tiptoe through the tombstones... Daz Igmeth

ATTACCO DECENTE

The Baby Within Us Marches On

All Or Nothing RR ●●● If your idea of a simple pop tune is guitar, bass and drums then think again, madam. Attacco Decente give us dulcimers, tongue drums, zitherharps, basically, any piece of wood you can blow, suck, pluck or plink. The effect of this menagerie is devastating.

Using their voices as percussion, they create wholly danceable rhythms to finally bring South American music to a wider audience. Side one, especially Will Of One and Natural Anger, lofts, lifts and lilts in a strangely commercial style. Somewhat uncommercial, however, are the subject matters. Oppression by the minority, homosexuality, civil disobedience and the Secret Service murder of Hilda Morrel are hardly Top Of The Pops material, but then what is these days?

The Hilda Morrel song, Rose Grower, is mooted as their next single, all credit to Red Rhino for having the guts to release it. It may be contentious but it is also brilliant, as is the great majority of this album. Buy it, steal it, even become a music journalist and get an advance copy of it. Richard Osman

THE BAND OF HOLY JOY

When Stars Came Out To Play

Bye Bye Baby BYE BYE 1 RR ●● The Band Of Holy Joy's '87 European tour is captured in glorious confusion with everyone, including their whisky bottle, really expressing themselves through a barrage of disgruntled instruments beneath a frustrated rant from Jonny Joy. Whereas the likes of The Pogues have made drinking and irreverent foikisms almost trendy, The Band Of Holy Joy revel in cursing in nursery rhymes, having stains on their T shirts and belching in amazement. When Stars Came Out To Play must have been a live spectacle that assured our EEC compatriots that the English aren't ready to be rational, even though every word that Jonny screams is poignant and pointed, barbed to the prick of realism. Live and dangerous if it ever was! Nick Brody

CAROLINE BERGVALL

Songs Lovers Pray

Monolith MOTH 1 (9 Eccleston Street, Belgravia, London SW1)

● 2/3 This isn't an easy record to get on with. A torrent of words, with minimal backing, from Caroline Bergvall, launches poetess Anne Clark's label and the austere cover lets you know immediately that this won't be fun time. After several plays the temples weaken and Caroline's charming wordplay bites a little better, posing questions, suggesting, molesting the language...but at the end, it still didn't make me want to play it again. No discipline, you see...and little pleasure as a result. But life is supposed to be difficult...and this record is life. TC Wall

THE BOLLOCK BROTHERS

The Prophecies Of Nostradamus

Blue Turtle SPV 08-3525 P 1/6 Ultimately pedestrian exercise from Jock and his new Bollocks. A rap version of Zep's Heartbreaker sums up the nauseous one dimensional splatter of this album, raising the question of why Connie Plank ever entertained it at his studio. There's also a tetchy cover of Steppenwolf's Magic Carpet Ride, but the real rub here is the bland-out yawns that this awful sub-standard drive! produces as the collected musos try to be seductive and end up as attractive as an encounter with a wet cabbage. Dave Henderson

THE BRIGADES

Yours Negatively

Negative Records NLP 003 P ●● Phew! Side one left me winded, breathless and begging for some respite! It arrived with Living In Dunpool — a fair way into the album but there just in time. It's the pleasure/pain syndrome and these men know it. Orwell's Room 101 has nothing on this series of visitations from elements of the known world where Big Mac is watching you! It's a land where mafias boost democracy, wet Liberals enlist minds ready to fade, there's panic on the escalators and fear of an Arabian sandstorm which could ruin the Stock Exchange. Sound at all familiar? It's contemporary Euroman militancy with sensationalist tendencies — just like real life in fact! Alex Kadis

THE BROADCASTERS

13 Ghosts

Enigma 3315-1 P ● Trippy, dippy rock 'n' roll that lacks continuity as the B's wander through a selection of rockin' variations. As a collection of rock 'n' roll ephemera, 13 Ghosts is a hazy, unfocused set that does little to embrace

●●● MEGA A godhead uprising

●● HOTSY Tasteful and tenacious

● TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish

DRAB No bullets, means no hope

the herd and shout from the hilltops. These songs are just too indistinguishable to make you want to listen. Dave Henderson

EUGENE CHADBOURNE & CAMPER VAN BEETHOVEN

Camper Van Chadbourne

Fundamental SAVE 46 RR ●●● It's an undoubted fact that Eugene Chadbourne is one of life's little eccentrics, a little erratic at times, but always amiable. In this case, he's teamed up with Camper Van Beethoven who haven't been short of a few acidic moments in their career... the result is a marriage made in heaven. With more than an armful of cover versions — including Zappa, Thelonus Monk, Jopoe South, Pink Floyd and Time Hardin — the team play loose, but with humour, rolling their eyes and letting their fingers do the talking on one of the daftest, but most loveable albums to escape the studio for some time here. If there were a term for a performance opposite to wooden, it would be Camper Van Chipboard. Dave Henderson

CHIN-CHIN

Stop Your Crying

53rd & 3rd RR ●●● They say there's three Chin-Chins, but only two of them make the cover. Maybe the other one didn't look sufficiently Shop Assistant?

Like all the best pop bands this decade, Chin-Chin are by Phil Spector's pervy girly sound out of The Ramones, by way of a stolen fuzz box. They're also the first decent band to come out of Switzerland since Liliput nee Kleenex.

Stop Your Crying is an eight track rush of bleached punk pop exhilaration coursing with amphetamine frenzy. The beat is big and brash and splendid, and Chin-Chin sweep pale blue skies before them with bold strong strokes of classic guitar pop structuralism and gorgeous helium harmonies. The sick pervy paedophiles of 53rd & 3rd have done it again. Holly Wood

THE COLORBLIND JAMES EXPERIENCE

Earring Records Ear 4 (Box 40313, Rochester, New York 14604)

●●● The Colorblind James Experience briefly showed their tentacles on John Peel last year, and if you were thinking about rushing out to buy their album then thought, hey, maybe I should get Dire Straits instead — well, hold it! I mean, do it! This is probably the finest example of commercially viable surrealist music you could wish to hear, embracing everything from jug band music to skat to polka to the theme tune from Play School. This is jazz music that's been spelt wrong, lyrically humorous ("She's a witch... you were gonna marry that girl"), tuneful, wacky, groovy and beatnik. If you thought Half Man and The Residents were even mildly interesting then The Colorblind James Experience will turn your head inside out. Caramba! Dave Henderson

CONTROLLED BLEEDING

Music From The Scourging Ground

Sub Rosa Sub 33008-11 RR ●● The progress and proliferation of Controlled Bleeding product has led the group into some tight, post industrial corners, but all of that self-questioning movement and doubt has seemingly been left behind as this latest chapter of the American group's development is revealed. More symphonic and orchestral in structure, the lead vocal lines of Joe Papa seem to be leaning more towards opera as Paul Lemos' keyboards scour the earth for musical inspiration. Dave Henderson

DAZIBAO

Les Musiques De La Honte

Visa Records UF003 FF C ●● With a great sleeve and an even better press kit, this import release from one of France's better new wave bands isn't a million miles away from either Bauhaus or the UK Decay/Furyo axis, but manages to retain a more powerful, rawer edge to the production than those bands. Having said that, a lot of the songs aren't as good, and the fact that only a few are in English is bound to put many would be fans off. However, if your life used to revolve around the perpetual Lyceum/Palais support bands around '82-'84 (Red Lorry Yellow Lorry, Skeletal Family, blah, blah, blah), this is certainly worth checking out. Alex Bastedo

MARTIN DUPONT

Hot Paradox

Facteurs Ambiance AA 32 004 (Bat A1 — La Cerisaie, 13014 Marseilles, France) ●1/2 Lurking beneath the new age nuance, Martin Dupont (who seem, in fact, to be a three piece) offer a flowing symphonic sound, tinged with harmonic vocal lines. This is grand, moody music that doesn't get down or up enough to really stand on its own two feet, opting to totter into the middle distance without providing any alternative. Dave Henderson

RANDY ERWIN

Cowboy Rhythm

Heartland HLD 006 Re C 1/4 Oh my God! Full length release from the king of the yodel, it says here, more like master irritator, black belt. Jesus, this country twang stuff is alright I guess, but how much yodelling can any sane human take? Mr Erwin must be real messed up I suppose. Daz Igy meth

EXHIBIT B

Playing Dead

Pentagon EX B LP 1 Pr C ●1/4 Exhibit B are better. A duo who've felt the rough edge of the biz because they want to play pop music with a little bit of integrity. Previous releases have been of high quality — balladeering their way out of the bedroom — but this debut LP is something altogether different. On the lines of concept hangs a strange tale...and Playing Dead's almost Beach Boys meet Bee Gees sound could have worked if the production on this record — and for that matter the width of sound and effects — had been given a little more room. Here we have 14 good songs which need to be excellent, which beg to be moulded into a nouveau teenage rock opera. Any takers? Dave Henderson

THE FALL

The Frenz Experiment

Beggars Banquet BEGA91 ●●● Sorry, guys, just maximum stars for this scorchingly good set of subversive tales from the tongue of Mark E, and the collective minimalist Fall. Of the ten tracks, there's not even a doddler as Victoria heralds The Fall's emergence into a new phase of Victoriana — courtesy of Mad Mag — while Oswald's defence lawyer studies the Kennedy assassination and the ensuing debate. In between there's tales of every day life told through TV turn offs, scribbled postcards and life's little necessities (for example Get A Hotel and Carry Bag Man).

The Fall's Frenz Experiment in '88 has them as white coat wearers eeking out the syringe for the final armful of England's disharmony. If they say records don't change the world, then at least let this one be a rallying call and something to kick over the coffee table about. Clunk! Dave Henderson

FLITOX

Cet Homme Est Mort

Jungle Hop JHI 107 SRD ● Brash French punk oiks who race to exploit the rockier end of their guitars. Frantic, frenetic and slightly undesirable, it's difficult to hear what they're on about and to envisage an audience who'll go for something that's been executed in superior forms elsewhere. Nick Brody

FREIWILLIGE SELBSTKONTROLLE

In Dixieland

Ediesta CALC 042 RR C ● Sorry Edie, I can't see it myself. FSK's sixth album — a couple of them have nice sleeves — still fails to convince me that they're anything to write home about. A West German band singing country-esque ballads which, even musically, are nowhere near as convincing as The Mekons? No, it does nothing for me. Perhaps if they were singing in English we could dig the undoubted tonguing humour, but in Dixieland grimly explores where others avoid completely. Barry Glibb

FRONT LINE ASSEMBLY

Corrosion

Third Mind TMLP21 RR C ●● Canadian outfit, Front Line Assembly revolve around ex-Skinny Puppy cohort Bill Leeb and, on their debut album for Third Mind, they display a keen regard for electronic history — from Kraftwerk through to today's more sequenced, vocal-heavy styles. Corrosion features a steamrolling procession of pulsing dancebeats, topped with a restrained vocal delivery. They make a mighty big sound, layer upon layer of noise for just two of them and, although this kind of music might initially take some time to get acquainted with, Corrosion takes more than a few steps in the right direction. TC Wall

GOLD, FRANKINCENSE & DISK-DRIVE

Where Do We Draw The Line?

Peaceville VILE POP 1 RR C ●●1/2 Drawing a red line along Hadrian's Wall and comparing it to the Berlin central reservation may seem odd, but Gold, Frankincense & Disk-Drive have their reasons (as well as an exceedingly long name). Steeped in jazz-rock, breathing new wave punk, and coming up with an end product that Todd Rundgren, circa Todd, would be proud of, this outspoken trio have created a conceptual piece which only occasionally strays into cliché. Several steps on from being an "art school" tragedy, this play on words has enough in its creation to make it really count. Musically it's a strident Theatre Of Hate-style assault, lyrically it'll scrape the paint from Ken Livingstone's outside lav. Nick Brody

GOOD AND GONE

Methil Box

Demon Radge RADGE 2 FF C ●1/2 Hmmm. Playing spot-the-similarity isn't that much fun, and I always hate it when critics break their backs to say that a group sound like, er, someone or other and dismiss them for it. But, Good And Gone — apart from having a name taken from a Screaming Blue Messiahs record — sound incredibly like the, er, Screaming Blue Messiahs. Oh sure, there's a little bit of Turkey Bones And The Wild Dogs, a smidge of Cap'n Beefheart, but what you have here is down to earth beaty rock 'n' roll, with a growl in every chorus. For fans of that ilk, without doubt. Johnny Eager

THE GORNACK BROTHERS

Refund

Strikeback SBR15LP RT C ● Lacklustre strumming with a harmonica wait that you might expect from a Dylan rehearsal tape bootleg. I tried desperately to see something positive in The Gornack's bittersweet ballads, but they kept coming out like washed-out hippies. It's sure to be lacking on my part. Dave Henderson

PAUL HAIG

European Sun

Les Disques Du Crepuscule TWI829 h ●3/4 Haig seems a little lost within his firmament. Even though this is subtitled 'Archive Collection 1982-1987', thus spanning five years with all points between, this ex-Josef K's back catalogue's ensuing eclecticism is more jarring than rewarding.

The Executioner is a collaboration with Voltaire's Mal and Richard, producing a bouncy cut-up of words over an insistent back beat, while earlier on Haig treats us to a seriously kitsch rock and roll version of Suicide's Ghost Rider.

NOBODY'S TWISTING YOUR ARM

Put that alongside the touchingly toe tapping Running Away (Sly Stone) and the pure Human League-isms of Chance, and you'll see the dilemma.

The result is never dull, and displays diverse influences, even though when placed alongside each other like this, it looks more like undecidedness rather than variety. Carole Linfield

THE HARD-ONS

Worst Of The Hard-Ons

Vinyl Solution SOL 8 P ● 1/2 Strange that this Australian band should emerge at this time, having spent a good few years growing into a mentionable name. This Worst Of... traces that progression, from '84 to '88, showing their Ramones-blow-out style, the thrash developments, the occasional refinements and, at the end of side one, the funny side. That track is an Arabic cover of Then He Kissed Her which could have been recorded by anyone from The UK Subs to The Adicts. A joke's a joke's a joke, but the only real snort here is on a couple of tracks, liberally splashed about in no particular order which say that The Hard-Ons are more than a bunch of loud yobs destined to break a few strings, down a few beers and get laid. Perhaps that's all they want, but they'll have to write a few more good songs before I believe that they can really get it up. Dave Henderson

THE HELLMENN

Herbal Lunacy

Waterfront DAMP 65 ● 3/4 Loud and drug-induced? Well, The Hellmenn's cover scrawl and song titles tell it all. Herbal Lunacy is a "raunchy, raucous rant" that's fresh from down under and brimming with vitality. Not thrashing enough to be faddy, but more restrained and refined — if a such thing, with such music, were possible. Anyhow, The Hellmenn's end of term report reads: noisy in class, showing potential, spitting blood but healthy. Yep, I can live with that. Dave Henderson

THE HEPBURNS

The Magic Of The Hepburns

Cherry Red BRED 83 P ● The Hepburns make unassuming pop which lacks personality and flair. They are capable of producing a fine tune, like the pretty You're a Queer One, Les Mun, which isn't as quirky as the title suggests, but overall, they're trying too damn hard. Judging from the approach, I'd say The Hepburns are big fans of It's Immaterial, which is no bad thing at all in itself, but they lack Itsy's power, finding themselves too self-conscious as a result. Shame, since they're obviously musically proficient. Lighten up, eh? Carole Linfield

THE HOUSE OF LOVE

The House Of Love

Creation Records RTD/CRE 9-63 RT C ● ● Well, I knew this was supposed to be good, but it's blissful! Starting off with Shine On, at first I was reminded of laid-back Stones, or '70s Bowie — check that echo-ey backing vocal which is straight out of Aladdin Sane — but The House Of Love quickly settle down into a totally esoteric sound all of their own. Oh, OK, a splattering of Doors and a merest pinch of Monkees even (very low beneath the surface) but this is pure, sensual music. Their selling point is that they can harness melancholia and nostalgia without ever sounding mawkish or dated; Plastic is, for instance, all morning sun melting on your stomach.

Since virtually all of the eight tracks here would also make fine singles, majors everywhere will be crawling, pen in hand, to the door of these four guys and a gal... if A&R mens' knees aren't promptly skinned, the world's gone deaf. Carole Linfield

JAMS

Who Killed The Jams?

KLF Communications JAMSLP 2 RT C ● ● More editing and looping prowess from the laughably succinct JAMS. The tones of Bill Drummond fill the air like a drunken Scotsman intent on waving a clenched Celtic fist for the right to party. Sly Stone, Hendrix, Betty Wright and a brace of others suffer the scalpel treatment, but the songs have lost their poignant bite for the most part, reeling themselves in as a final, rather disappointing chapter to an encouragingly anarchistic story. JAMS deserved to go out with a better blaze than this, but I suppose it'll suffice, all the same. In the final analysis they may just have opened the floodgates. Nick Brody

THE JASMINE MINKS

Another Age

Creation CRELP 025 RT C ● Previous albums have been a bit of a mish-mash; at least this one has some continuity to it. From Veronica to Nothing Can Stop Me, The Jasmine Minks offer us some fine songs. Alas, appetite for this kind of music is all but extinct and one is lead to make obvious comparisons with the '60s — merely because that's when songs like this ruled the roost. However, like most people these days, I prefer the Pet Shop Boys, so Another Age will only find a temporary place on my turntable. Calvino Wheel

RICHARD H KIRK & PETER HOPE

Hoodoo Talk

Native NTVLP 28 ● ● 2/3 You'll love this, if only... if only you can cope with Peter Hope. Hope's past, through The Box and his link-up with David Harrow, have seen him breathing fire, exploding, self-combusting and letting it all out — in a purely verbal sense. He's crazed and enraged, a beatnik with headbutts. Next to Richard Kirk (out of Cabs clothing) he works well. Kirk's spacious, more esoteric leanings are given vent as the duo sculpt and destroy on this six track set. Unlike any of the duo's outside tasks, it's an enlivening burst of energy, and can't you just feel them smiling? You bet! Ripley

LIBIDO BLUME

Liquid Situation

Di Di Di Di 115 (4A N Kazantzaki Str, 15234 Haladri, Athens, Greece)

●● There's something quite fresh and strangely different about the construction of this record. The second Libido Blume release that I've come across it offers a more refined style, more developed and ultimately more satisfying. The simple foundations have been added to quite successfully, and now influences as diverse as the acidic '60s fall against a more contemporary new wave sound. Libido Blume's command of the English language has further enhanced this release, making it the first record from Greece to transcend the inevitable western limitations and influences. Dave Henderson

LOCH NESS MONSTER

Mosaic 44

Hamster HAM 21 C ●●³/₄ And you thought life in the murky prehistoric waters was just limited to swimming around occasionally... how wrong can you be! This eight track album sounds like a strange Frank Sidebottom-in-jazz-rock type of scam, with the enclosed contributions delving into the quirky world of effects and how they affect the inner psyche — well, it's something like that anyway. As a fashion note, the singer has a peg on his nose. Dave Henderson

LOLITAS

Series Americaines

What's So Funny About... WSFA SF 58 RR C ●● Berlin band singing pouting French above strong rock 'n' roll cum punk rhythms. The charm is that the female vocal sounds strong yet sensual, while the backing jumbles up the mixture into a just-had-sex sort of atmosphere. I imagine this lot (male and female) have anorexic figures, grubby faces and tousled bleached hair... certainly, it's raw, but it's on clean sheets.

The wild westernisms of the closing track, the mysteriously named Jolly Jumper, brings proceedings to an acceptable close, though it doesn't take much to see that this band must be happier on stage than on record. Carole Linfield

LUXURIA

Unanswerable Lust

Beggars Banquet BEGA 90 ●●● This is brilliant! Like a heavier brother of Magazine's classic Correct Use Of Soap, it's packed with several chunky guitar numbers that are given enough time to develop and make their presence felt, counterbalanced with more reflective, beautiful keyboard and string-laden pieces and the occasional refreshing use of a brass section. Fresh and exciting where some found Magazine overbearingly pompous, it certainly puts all the young guitar pretenders to shame, and I'm glad. It's about time Devoto had his cake and got to eat it. Now make sure he does. Alex Bastedo

MAKIN' TIME

Unchain My Heart

Fab Records FAB-ML11 B C ●●³/₄ A retrospective album of unreleased tracks from a British mod band, out on a German label... crossing boundaries, or what? This, then, comprises eight tracks from the archives, some of which are demo tapes, some "real" recordings, and some live happening experiences, man, from places like the 7th Hamburg Allnighter and Cooky's Club, Frankfurt. I think you can tell where these guys were popular. To be fair, they do announce all this on the sleeve, so no money back for the poor quality — this is, as they say, for Makin' Time fans around the world (ahem).

Musically, then, this is something of a hidden gem, with the three lads and a gal displaying a nice line in tunes, organ sound and vocals, but fighting a losing battle against the production (or total lack of it). They put up a clean pair of fists, though, and no doubt those who shed a tear at their undoubtedly poppy '60s sensitivity buckling under '80s cynicism will lap it up greedily. Carole Linfield

THE METEORS

Only The Meteors Are Pure Psychobilly

Anagram GRAM 33 P ●●³/₄ Doing the Graveyard Stomp on all those pretenders to the psychobilly crown, this LP's made out of snot and bottle tops and puke, more importantly it sits snugly on the Meteors' collective cracked cranium. Only The Meteors have the voodoo rhythm.

Fourteen boneshakers to pop ligaments and get yer Klub feet swinging; as compilations go this is reliably reeling in a drunken kind of rockin' way and vital to those without the back catalogue at shrivelled fingertip length. You know that any band who would Eat The Baby have gotta be pure psychobilly, don'tcha? Fing yeah! Daz Igmeth

THE MICE

Scooter

What Goes On GOES ON 15 SH ● The pop art sleeve of this album is really nice, but the music inside needed to have just as much attention. The Mice are a mode of transportation with two gears. On slow they sound like well-produced Merseybeat Beatles, with the vocal style of The Hollies, while overdrive reveals an urge for early Jam. Sure, it's executed perfectly, but it's so derivative that this Scooter inevitably goes nowhere. Dave Henderson

NAKED PREY

40 Miles From Nowhere

Zippo ZANE 006 ●●³/₄ Naked Prey play a rootsy guitar grind that's sluiced through the speakers with a tinkling bar room piano on occasion. Hailed as hard, primal western rock, this six track mini-set follows some two years after their self-titled debut and sees them get chunkier by the chord. With covers of the Stones' Silver Train and Wichita Lineman on display, 40 Miles From Nowhere hardly challenges any new boundaries, but more than a few sand-festooned honchos will down a Slammer on the strength of this. Johnny Eager

NOMEANSNO

Sex Mad

Alternative Tentacles VIRUS 56 C ●●● Superb debut European release from this Canadian outfit in a specially unabridged version. More than that, initial quantities on spud-out yellow vinyl have an extra track. Like a musical play off between Minutemen circa Double Nickles In The Dime and Wire on Pink Flag, Nomeansno survive the possible pretensions by being lyrically adept and musically knuckle-heavy. The sounds vary from simplistic rhythmic assaults to melody try-outs and all the tracks utilise a fine sense of instrument-for-best-sound-effect, with a thumping bass and pumping drum-roll holding the proceedings together. Vinyl to kill for. Dave Henderson

O POSITIVE

Cloud Factory

Link Records 014 (277 Church St, NY NY 10013, USA) ●●¹/₄ The second vinyl release from this Boston band could have come from a lot closer to home, the subtle melodies, simple repetitive motifs and off-centred structures reminiscent of much of Britain's better indie pop of the last decade. Ignoring the EP's rather disappointing lead track, Talk About Love, one finds a healthy nod to The Cure in the guitar work of Tied or, in the curiously titled Watch Out, That Sled's Made For A Maniac (complete with self-played wind and string instruments), sounding not unfamiliar to grandiose Pink Floyd!. Plus, a hark back to the Bunnymen of Over The Wall on In The Light. Frustrating us with their subservience to these influences, but tantalising us with hints of what could be achieved once they surface from under them, O+ are on the up in the States. Their next record should be the right time to launch themselves upon a British audience. Tony Fletcher

PINK PEG SLAX

12 Songs Never Recorded By Frank Sinatra

Ediesta CALCLP 027 RR C ● The most exciting thing about this album is the neat packaging, featuring a Sinatra pastiche with old blue eyes centre stage, surrounded by the Slax. The musical accompaniment is accomplished skat, raggedy rockabilly with enough authenticity to lift it above the sweat and stubble phase. You see, PP Slax take themselves seriously and deliver an auspicious set of anthems in the process. The only problem here is that you have to get over the sheer novelty of the whole thing before you can work out if it's really the kind of thing you want to live with. I found the tunes annoying, but I can see that many will love their clean cut image and well-executed delivery. You take your chances. Dave Henderson

PSYCHIC TV

Temporary Temple

Temple TOPY 030 RT C ●● Well, this is one of those rare situations when I can say, 'I was there'. A collapsing old synagogue off the Holloway Road, daggers of stained glass hurtling to the floor, a generator that looked fit to bust, a crowd more intrigued by the chic pre-warehouse party-ness of it all and PTV supplying what seemed like an endless mantra of hesitation. It was surprisingly hypnotic, as members of the group came, went and returned. In retrospect, this historical platter doesn't quite have the same ambience, but Psychic TV's spirit is willing and the end result certainly justifies the means. Dave Henderson

RECOIL

Hydrology

Mute STUMM 51 C ●●¹/₂ Recoil's secretive persona and luscious instrumental style make for something that's at once grandiose and classically appealing, while retaining a certain individual eclecticism. That this mystery personality has reaped found sounds, such as native villages, introduced a keyboard verve and supplemented the proceedings with great mounds of rhythm when necessary, suggests that they're accomplished craftsmen and world-wise tunesmiths. Hydrology is a seamless shroud for modern music, a mock symphony for a mixed up generation and an essentially moving collection of sketches. Dave Henderson

RED LORRY YELLOW LORRY

Smashed Hits

Red Rhino REDLP86 RR ●●● Masterful retro-noise-beat amalgamation from a truly powerful bunch of guitar welders, with hot solder dripping on an eardrum beating fit to bust, setting temples a-throb as the voice limbos deep under your skin. Rash-inducing and so danceable too.

From early days to recent times, this chronicles all the anti-Nurofen stuff. Beating My Head beats your head, Hollow Eyes attacks your torso and pummels it into submission, Spinning Round gets hold of your feet and drills you into the floor. These, and seven more, grab you by the skin of your face and whirl you around the room, and if that sounds painful, well, this makes masochism a must if you want this album...and you should get an earful if you've not tried the Lorries as yet. Aurally a brick in the ear of fetid pop. Daz Ilymeth

RITUAL TENSION

I Live Here

Fundamental SAVE 49 RR C ●¼ Ritual Tension's opening salvo was a crucifixion of The Eagles' Hotel California, which was funny but an easy target. Next, their debut LP presents this Lower East Side outfit as a screeching rock outfit who've the pace of the Buttholes, but little of their wit and inventiveness. Shouts and screams are handled by Ivan Nahem who thinks nothing of stopping the proceedings to talk his way through some personal crisis or other. Commendable in parts but it all gets a little samey after a while. Dave Henderson

SCRUFFY THE CAT

Boom Boom Boom Bingo

Relativity 88561-8211-1 R ●● (import) A stop-gap release to appease their fans after the success of the Tiny Days album, Boom Boom Boom Bingo is continuing proof that Scruffy are well on the way to joining the elite club frequented by the Del Fuegos or the Georgia Satellites: that of hard-rocking, hard-drinking young men always in search of the next bar, the next gig, the next girl and the next hook-line. Only on the last of these do Scruffy seem to be lacking; at the moment they have more style (of a sort) than content, though Black Russian is the nearest they've come yet to a well-crafted pop song. The three live songs that complete this five-track EP reinforce the view that when proffered live, such bands are noisy, sloppy and aggravating. And doncha just love it! Tony Fletcher

SHAKE THE FAITH

Shake The Faith

One Way Productions OWP 004 (PO Box 298, Union Square, Somerville, MA 02143, USA) ●¾ Shake The Faith are angry. And no wonder: they've been knocking about in bands for too long and the big time still eludes them. Yet the smiles that emanate from above their be-denimed bodies on the sleeve suggest that maybe they just don't care. Shake The Faith rock hard — so hard in fact that they can't decide whether they're punks or budding stadium-rockers. Aware of this dichotomy, they throw an occasional drum-machine into the fray and claim this confused middle-ground as their own. Certainly, Shake The Faith are one of the loudest, rawest and tightest three-pieces to emerge in a long time, but they lose out because they fail to turn these qualities into songs. The exception is Skip On A Record, their least aggressive, yet grandest, moment, a song that could have saved Thrashing Doves from vinyl anonymity. One feels there's plenty more where that came from, should they choose to deliver. Tony Fletcher

SH DRAUMUR

God

Lakeland LKND 002 C ● One, two, three chord latter-day new wave with a slight wave at Kirk Brandon and the occasional 999 vocal outburst. SH Draumur are from Iceland but hold none of fellow country persons The Sugar Cubes' subtlety or charm. Rock music, with no apparent direction, that huffs and puffs and wears itself out. TC Wall

SPK

Digitalis Ambigua, Gold And Poison

Netwerk Records NTL 30017 RR C ● Designed to present both the dance and ambient sides of SPK, I'm afraid this album proves they never were very good at the former, while countless other bands manage to achieve far more effective results with the latter. Which is a shame, as their last album hinted at something of a return to form.

This, however, is tenth rate Madonna mixed with various taped ethnic musics and samples that anyone with a decent tape recorder and keyboard could do. Gold? Do me a favour. This is SPKrap. Alex Bastedo

WIN A DOLLIE FOR A DAY!

Yes, the trendiest, bendiest band to come out of the nether regions or wherever, The Corn Dollies, are currently readying themselves to do the bizzo with a new LP, their debut LP in fact. But if you ain't caught their excellent first two 45s yet, here's the chance to secure a rare debut seven inch version of the soon-to-be-repackaged-and-12 inchified Forever Steven and a Corn Dollies T shirt. Then everyone and his dog will think you've been into their wonderfully strumbling tones for ever and even longer.

To win one of five T shirt and single packages, just answer the following question and send your answer on a postcard to Underground/Corn Dollies, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ to arrive no later than very soon.

Q: How many Corn Dollies are there?

Hmmm, Holden Caoldfield would have loved that one.

SPUNKBUBBLES

Speak Lebanese Or Die

Waterfront DAMP 59 Sh ●● An eight song stab at punkier pop with a thrashing left hand and some fun city interludes. Spunkbubbles' t-shirts on the sleeve reverse reveals a Damned and a Motorhead fetish, but this Australian outfit seem to have already parted company with that gut-wrenching upfront attitude. Instead they keep it reasonably obscure, opting to throw down some speed variations of their own. Maximum revolutions and a few broken fingernails all the way, guitars that go fizz and a singer who's angry at someone. Dave Henderson

STRAIGHT AHEAD

Straight Ahead

Risk Records 001.2 Sh ●● This is an angry, fast-hand burst of six songs, lasting just over a minute each. A mighty short album but one that, perhaps, places some of the pent-up aggression of metallic thrash into perspective. It seems that Straight Ahead find it easy to relieve the cerebral pressure in these mightily abrasive outbursts, even if the guitarist only briefly gets the chance to break free and solo-out. You get the feeling that Straight Ahead are at breaking point, balancing on a shaky edge throughout...now that's a good feeling. Dave Henderson

TACTICS

Holden Interview

Red Flame RFM55 RM C ●½ The sound of bicentennial Australia may be resonating halfway across the world, but this proves it still has some shackles to break free from. Whereas The Triffids present a lush landscape, this four piece, from Canberra via Sydney, hones down the imagery in favour of a more '60s influenced, bareback sound. The exception is the excellent Coat Tails, which boasts a resonant beat and a hearty tune; elsewhere, it's all more jarring than jaunty. An average six track mini-LP that would have made a first class single. Carole Linfield

TALL DWARFS

Hello Cruel World

Flying Nun FNE 15 C ●● A best of affair from New Zealand's "guru's" of alternative minimalism. Pissed off with the rigours of major label inadequacy as Toy Love, the Dwarfs reverted to their Portastudio to produce blatantly groovy strummed anthems, with the minimum of fuss but the maximum of soulful character. An experience that shows up the techno-darlings for the soul-less bhajees they really are (or something like that). Dave Henderson

THE TEAR GARDEN

Tired Eyes Slowly Burning

Netwerk Records NTL 30019 RR C ●● A first album from the ongoing Tear Garden collaboration between Cevin Key of Skinny Puppy and Edward Ka-Spel of Legendary Pink Dots that, although maybe not as good as their eponymous debut 12 inch, and certainly not as cohesive as either's main concern, still contains enough bite for followers of both groups. Key's electronic patterns and textures, more minimal and therefore less intense than his usual Puppy fare, give Ka-Spel's forever personal lyrical preoccupations space to breathe and create their usual eerie effect. Could this be the new psychedelia? Alex Bastedo

39 CLOCKS

13 More Protest Songs

What's So Funny About... SF93 RR C ●½ The Clocks try desperately hard to be Velvet Underground and, with both of them singing, they manage to cover several diverse VU incarnations. The German strained vocal lines singing Barry McGuire's Eve Of Destruction are quite quaint, and Mr Diamond is a dead ringer for John Cale at his most phlegmy, but does the world need this kind of hero worship? Behind these shades lurk the answers...I'll stick with Live At Max's. Dave Henderson

THREE WIZE MEN

GB Boyz

Rhythm King LEFT LP1 RT C ●●½ The supertuff rappers from Peckham are back with a whole LP of their unique electro-rock def beats. Including new versions of the two previous singles, Urban Hell (minus swearing) and the brilliant Refresh, as well as the new single Cruisin' For a Bruisin' and five other tracks — cutting Gary Glitter on Hardcore Lover — they sound as much like Euro-electro masters DAF as anything def on Hard Bop, and more like Mantronix on What It Is. These Three Wize Men have obviously been listening to, and sampling, more than just US hip hop and have produced a surprisingly listenable mutant-pop-hard-hip-hop album. Check it out. Christopher Mellor

TRADDODIAD OFNUS.

TRADDODIAD OFNUS

Welsh Tourist Bored

Constrictor NM C ●● Strictly your average Welsh language punkers with a Portuguese drummer and an ex-EastEnders on guitar (remember Harry The Hat?). Commendably spunky at times, with the title track and Hwyl standing out from the crowd. The translation of the name however is not very funny (and forgettable I'm afraid).

They will of course draw comparison with the Anhrefn brigade and will come off second best, but give them their own identify and the Trads assume a wonderful tackiness. They also do relatively few sheep jokes. Richard Osman

UK SUBS

Japan Today

Fall Out FALL LP045 C ●½ Hey! Santa... If I'd wanted a pair of fxxxing socks I woulda fxxxing asked! And so the career of the Subs rocks on with elpee number ten. Japan Today's highlight comes in the shape of the aforementioned festive single, Hey! Santa, a torrent of abuse aimed at the prat in the big red coat.

Otherwise, it's a rockin' rollin' punk crossover that boogles and grinds guitar chords into a tasteless paste while uncle Charlie (Harper) grates the vocals on top with all the finesse of a drunken, dirty old punker — which, of course, he is. Okay, fair enough, it's got to be better than any high profile chartbustin' crap from Johnny Hates Jazz, but this lacks the pounding muscles needed to haul itself out of the mediocre mire. Daz Igyemeth

A Vile Peace

Peaceville VILE 1 RR C ● Although the sentiments and abrasive stance of this album is correct — anti-war etc — the great problem on A Vile Peace is that assembled breakneck outfits will be merely preaching to the converted through their one level guitar rages. From Axegrinder to Rest In Pain, Dark Crusade to Hellbastard, there's little in the way of variety — even Chumbawamba stumble into the trap. Paradoxically, the totally spiked Bedlam — whose track is sheer bedlam — stand out for their total disregard to any boundaries and routines. On the positive side the list of conflicts since the end of World War Two makes frightening reading, but those involved must ask, who'll get the chance to read it? Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Indie Top 20 Volume III

Beechwood Music TT03 Re C ●●● Probably the best selection to emerge with the title "Top 20", this third volume features a cohesive, yet diverse, selection of sounds that's split up neatly over four sides (or two if you get the tape). With contributions from The Wedding Present, Depeche Mode, New Order, The Shamen, Fields Of The Nephilim, Cookie Crew, Erasure, Pop Will Eat Itself, Throwing Muses, The Sugarcubes and more, the musical side obviously varies, but the feeling of a great wealth of music beginning to emerge is certainly in evidence. A vital record set...not to be missed! Dave Henderson

It's A Crammed Crammed World! 2

Crammed Discs CRAM 053 NM C ●● Label compilations are always difficult because of the inevitable differences of the participants, and it's rare that each side runs nicely as a cohesive package. Crammed's World is no different as they traverse the globe with tracks from John Lurie, Colin Newman, Sonoko from Japan, Israel's Minimal Compact, Tuxedomoon, several African acts and more. But for less than the price of a 12 inch, this 12 tracker is an excellent way to sample some international troubadours who are, for the most part, well worth spending time on. TC Wall

VARIOUS

Le Mystere Des Voix Bulgares Volume II

4AD CA 801 C ●●● Faultless virtuosity is something that's probably more akin to classical delivery and performance. Surprisingly it seems to be creeping, more and more, into the record business. Not that the glitzy world of major label hard sell holds many points in this court, but the independent market can certainly hold up its head in the knowledge that it not only releases music that can't be found anywhere else, but in some cases it's also presented and performed with exceptional conceptual care.

The saga of the first volume of this LP, involving a mystery tape and the tracking down of the perpetrators, led me to believe that a second volume would be rather improbable, but here it is and as a foil for its predecessor, it puts up a commendable fight. This is music that defies any real description other than it has an audible beauty that you'll find impossible to resist. Exceptional. Dave Henderson

London Pavilion Volume Two

él Records ACME 10 P ●●● A compilation from Mike Alway's thoroughbred stable, which produces a cornucopia of the unexpected and the unexplained. Who are all these people? And why are they not all megastars?

Of course, they already are... taking us on a Walt Disney World waitz through the spectrum of pop. And what a ride! There's '60s inspired Masque from Marden Hill; the early '70s lush of Trial Of Dr Fancy from the King Of Luxembourg; the hipswinging delights of Garden Of Eden from the perverse Anthony Adverse, and the pure pop eccentricity of the Would-Be-Good's Hanging Gardens Of Reigate. There's humour aplenty (how about the biryani barmy Bad Dream Fancy Dress girls who tell us of their curry cravings?), not to mention, I suspect, a fair bit of incest going on between the groups.

Not a dull track in sight. And I defy anyone to resist the Raj Quartet's offering. I mean, any track called Whoops! What A Palaver can't be bad...

Modesty Kills

Audio Visual AVA 001 P C ● This album was compiled and created by Ken Kelly — who was started off on a government enterprise allowance of 40 notes a week to launch a label. A great idea, but the end result here, although well meaning, is rather less than inspiring. Packaging and polish are lacking on Modesty Kills, the ten featured bands suffering from inadequate studioing, the end result being, inevitably, a less than palatable mish-mash.

Of course, there are good ideas here, brainwaves that tick but never explode, but it's all a little flat and lacking in dynamics. Let's hope that this is a faltering first step and subsequent releases sparkle more radiantly. Dave Henderson

Move — The Rhythm Kingdom LP

Rhythm King LEFT LP 5 ●●¾ Like the man says, this is the definitive compilation of dancefloor dementia from the King corner, and each one sure comes out fighting. Choice cuts throughout, veering from the Beatmasters featuring The Cookie Crew's hit Rok Da House to Schooly D's emphatic Gucci Time to the weird and wonderful Renegade Soundwave's Renegade Theme. Every aspect of their catalogue is well represented, too, from urban to rap to the mellow (Chuck Brown & The Soul Searcher's (It's A) Family Affair), so if you want a quick melting pot of all the happening sounds around, look no further. Hardcore devotees, however, will no doubt want the 12 inchers, and there's nothing new or rare or whatever to entice them in. Fair game for the rest of us though. Carole Linfield

Salvation!

les Disques Du Crepuscule TW1 774 P ●● Film soundtrack LPs are a tricky affair, usually being either too esoteric to survive without the accompanying visuals, or simply a patchwork quilt of seemingly directionless tracks. This collection, though, is more hinged than that. It's the soundtrack to Beth B's acclaimed flick, Salvation!, which features X's Exene Cervenka in a portrayal of TV religion mania, using assorted tracks from New Order, Cabaret Voltaire, Arthur Baker, The Hood, Jumpin' Jesus (alias Arthur Baker plus Stu Kimball and Stephen McHattie) and Dominique (Davalos, also in the film). All of this helps display the film's sex, power and money slant on religion, with quality tracks like New Order's Touched By The Hand Of God and the Cabs' Jesus Saves, helping the LP to easily compete on its own terms. Carole Linfield

THE VIBRATORS

Recharged

Revolver Records REV LP 101 ●¾ I guess if Jonathan Richman can regurgitate more laid back coastal sounds and get patted on the back for it, then so can The Vibrators. Given, too, that if you close your eyes to the cover pic and pretend they're a new American guitar band, you may well find this LP an acceptable listen, then it seems niggly to find fault.

But, whether it's prejudice or not, I can't help feeling that there's a certain tiredness in those rockin' bones. This is, however, actually used to good effect on the slower numbers, like the lovely Every Day I Die A Little, and the more lilting numbers, like Picture Of You. But when it comes to guitar posing stuff like Too Dumb, it just doesn't cut the mustard.

Sinuuous in parts, too creaky in others. Carole Linfield

THE WHIRLEYGIGS

Gravity Rides Again

Amok LP514 (68 Broadview Ave #507, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M4M 2E6) ●●¼ This is a great package with a bizarre '50s cowpoke colour shot and music that'll shake the sand loose from your pony-tail. Sure, the easy vocal similarity to Michael Stipe is going to be pointed at, but that's no bad place to start at. The Whirleygigs have something more earthy on board though, more mid-paced and slightly irreverent at points. The key factor is that they know just when to rope in the audience and lay down that vital hook in the chorus line. A fine album, indeed. Dave Henderson

WHITE ZOMBIE

Soul Crusher

Silent Exposure Sn ●¼ A strange but colourful overprinted sleeve featuring four greaseballs presents White Zombie as a noxious metallic slurry that's likely to put music back several years. Growling as they pluck the hairs from their chest, the Zombs resort to Zodiac Bomb Party-style bodily abuse and offer us Scumkill and Diamond Ass — metallic splats of the lowest order. But, whereas their UK contemporaries might be suffering an excess of facial hair as a marketing ploy, the danger is that White Zombie really mean it maan, and these formless dirges are for real. In a way, it sucks, but maybe that's just what it's supposed to do. Johnny Eager

THE WILD STARES

Skorch Turth

What's So Funny About... SF69 Sn C ●● This LP hails from Germany but seems to feature a Boston band whose eerie overtures further confuse the issue. In line with a lot of US acts at the moment, The Wild Stares are nothing but different...in their make up is a new sound bursting to break loose, an explosive collection of influences that's been mixed into a less than capable cauldron. The result will be some kind of spontaneous combustion, some self-mutilating disharmony, but as they wend their way to oblivion they're sure to turn out some more than palatable records. Dave Henderson

BRIAN WOODBURY

All White People Look Alike

Some Philharmonic SOME PHIL 2 (Box 58, New York, NY 10009)

●½ One of life's real eccentrics, Woodbury opens with Julie Andrews' Favourite Things, then dismantles found sound, goes rapping, breaks into a duststorm interference and generally has fun being art. This kind of listening is so hit and miss that at times he manages to carry it off, but never attains the kind of continuity that, say, Negativland manage on their most recent LP. Dave Henderson

YEAH JAZZ

Yeah Jazz

Cherry Red BRED 82 ●¾ Starts off dubiously folksy, but then breaks into a true jangle mode with an ode to Sharon...this is true lunkhead pop! Unfortunately, I find the vocal a tad impenetrable — pleasant, but lacking personality — so the tale-telling tracks are those that I find work the best, like Heaven, which also finds itself a nice sax break.

Yeah Jazz obviously like things to be kept clean, as is reflected in both the subject matter (love, unrequited and otherwise) and the straight lines of their music. This LP, then, travels as the crow flies, taking you logically from the start of the affair to the bittersweet end.

Smooth and sweet, if not overly adventurous. Carole Linfield

RE-REWIND

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackages boasts some real gems. . .

THE ASSOCIATION

Golden Heebie Jeebies

Edsel ED 239 P This is the kind of music that beams from the radio as you up the air-conditioning on your rented Buick. In the States, there's more to '60s harmony than The Beach Boys and Mamas And Papas. there's The Association. Their history runs concurrently with The Byrds and The Turtles, preceding Crosby, Stills And Nash, but realistically they never achieved the heights of their contemporaries, their most successful cut being Windy — which is included here. Golden Heebie Jeebies still has all the freshness of Florida in the morning, or San Fran in the afternoon, and as such this album is a fine scene setter. Dave Henderson

PRT PYL 6001 PRT A six track mini LP that digs up the Bowie past, including two tracks (And I Say To Myself and Can't Help Thinking About Me) misspent with the Lower Third. Lots of pointers to his later directions despite the obvious influences of the time, though the zither that's generously interspersed throughout sets my teeth on edge.

Most famous of the tracks is the aforementioned Can't Help Thinking About Me, deservedly so since it's still a worthwhile pop tune, but there's nothing here that's previously unreleased, so dedicated collectors won't need it. But for interest and as a valuable addition for the rest of us, it's well worth having. Carole Linfield

BRINSLEY SCHWARZ

Please Don't Ever Change

Edsel ED 237 P Brinsley Schwarz, circa '73, were a band who wanted to be anyone but Brinsley Schwarz. With pub rock building into a profitable career, this five piece covered all bets, covering all styles, in every spittoon-sinking sensations, from Marley to Grateful Dead. Please Don't Ever Change summed up a band who everyone in the music biz respected as musician-friendly, but undoubtedly no-one could trade on as a pop success. They did chart with Shining Brightly, and just about all of their other LPs, except this, has (What's So Funny About) Peace, Love And Understanding on it, suffice to say that this wayward collection — some live, some studio — does little more than to showcase the potential which lurked but was never fully realised. Johnny Eager

JJ BURNEL

Euromen Cometh

Mau Mau Records MAU601

P Gosh, this must be a little embarrassing for JJ. The Stranglers' bassist's solo effort circa '79 sounds altogether uninteresting — and somewhat glazed — in retrospect. I'm sure this electronic doodling at the time seemed like a good idea, but now it sounds positively unhinged. Only a maniac would want to re-issue it. Tinny drum-machines, disjointed song structures and a lack of ingenuity assures that Mute and grandchildren continue their legendary status. Dave Henderson

CABARET VOLTAIRE

Eight Crepuscule Tracks

Crepuscule TW1 749 P A compilation from this Belgian label, featuring the recordings Cabaret Voltaire have done for their specific releases during recent times. Old enthusiasts will recognise the pedigree of Sluggin' Fer Jesus and Yashar, plus the exceptional Your Agent Man, while Gut Level and Invocation, coupled with a cover of Isaac Hayes' Theme From Shaft, make this a comprehensive study of the development of the group.

The legacy of early CV releases can't easily be ignored, and if you haven't had the chance to discover their strange blend of electronics, the avant garde and left-field pop, then this is an ideal place to gain first hand knowledge. Not to be missed. Dave Henderson

DAVE DAVIES

The Album That Never Was

PRT PYL 6012 PRT A ten track set that almost was, way back then. Well, if you know what I mean. Following Dave Davies' solo hit, The Death Of A Clown, he looked set to wander into a solo career alongside brother Ray in The Kinks, but subsequent releases didn't do as well and a much-touted album never materialised.

That's something of a shame really, as this collection is a fine display of what might have been, with Dave's single and flipside tracks run together. Through the years some other tracks have been lost or misplaced which seems a great shame as The Album That Never Was is one of the strongest sounds that's spun into the Underground office for some days. Dave Henderson

DEFUNKT

Avoid The Funk . . .

Hannibal HNBL 1320 (Box 742, London W11 3LX) Defunkt's sweaty funk style graced many a dancefloor and NME front cover in the early '80s. Back then, the competition came from new trendies in expensive suits, lounge lizards who were desperate to be media meguls, who in theory got their rocks off at late night sleaze clubs with Defunkt thumbing their brassy groove in the background. In retrospect it sounds like a whinging noise that's rushed, unstructured in parts and as listenable as a Jimmy Tarbuck joke. Madman toots might be fine for clubland but this seems old fashioned now, and has little value as an armchair classic. Ripley

Ray Davies in concept LP garb

Now that Ray Davies has not only had his back catalogue raided by all and sundry for cover material, but has also brushed off the cobwebs from The Kinks and is releasing new stuff once more, what better excuse for PRT to re-release the five most influential albums from their past.

The first two of the albums here, Kink Kontroversy and Face To Face, were their fifth and sixth LPs, originally out on the Reprise label, and were previously deleted. They were, however, the first two albums to display Ray Davies' blossoming talent as an observant songwriter, while it's generally believed that Face To Face was the first ever concept album. It features a distinctly English view of the world, an angle that was still found endearing in Europe and the States, where strangely The Kinks found a faithful audience. It also spawned their Sunny Afternoon hit.

Something Else solidified the trend, throwing up the classic Waterloo Sunset and David Watts, and was followed up by another concept LP, . . . Village Green Preservation Society. This one looked at a life in the day of a sleepy English town, but despite being universally acclaimed, marked something of a low point in their career, with seemingly the rest of the world more interested in experimenting with LSD and psychedelia. At this point, Ray Davies was asked to write a film score for a TV special about the decline of the British Empire, and the soundtrack, Arthur And The Decline And Fall Of The British Empire (recently re-released on PRT PYL 6009) had some fine moments on it, Victoria among them. Interest was thus revived, culminating in their most infamous hit, Lola. Inspired, they released Lola Versus Powerman And The Money-Go-Round, which features similarly comic tracks like Apeman and Top Of The Pops, before moving on to the next stage of their career at RCA.

If you ever needed proof that The Kinks were a major force in pop music today, or that their subtle blend of distinctly English rock has a unique ability to transcend time and trends, this is it. Carole Linfield

THE DILLARDS

I'll Fly Away

Edsel ED 246 P This is an old period Dillards release. Country/bluegrass stalwarts, the Dillard Brothers had turned up in various incarnations, and with their associations with The Byrds, the Burritos and a number of offshoot projects, looked set to break in more commercial terms, bringing a tad of down-house America into a few more contemporary '60s lives. The equation was always going to be a tricky one and, although this is a fine selection of country-tinged harmony songs, bluegrass variations and the like, The Dillards would never really capitalise on their authenticity and style, due to the twee banality of some of their roots. Included is a cover of The Beatles' I've Just Seen A Face, plus She Sang Hymns Out Of Tune — a song that Nilsson turned around during his 'psychedelic Lennon period' but there's always those nagging songs our daddy taught us, like Ebo Walker and Single Saddle. If you've a penchant for bluegrass and can lend an ear to the Burritos after the first three LPs, then this is for you, though. Dave Henderson

EPISODE SIX

Put Yourself In My Place

PRT PYL 6026 PRT Episode Six went through many changes from the mid-'60s onwards, the most notable thing about their blue-eyed soul being that they eventually reared Ian Gillan and Roger Glover, who departed the group in search of longer hair and Deep Purple. The featured material here covers their period at Pye, but there's little more than US-influenced bubblegum on display. The most intriguing piece of info included is that a later single, on Chapter One, was titled Mozart Versus The Rest, now that does sound interesting. Add that to the fact that a later incarnation of the group was involved in music for the French film Les Bicyclettes De Belsize, and there you have your coffee table Episode Six without having to suffer the damn record. Dave Henderson

THE GANTS

I Wonder

Bam-Caruso KIRI 067 Re C Mississippi's answer to the Mersey beat boom, The Gants sound as if they stepped right out of John Lennon's wardrobe — and are holding his plectrum to ransom. Compiled from their three mid-'60s Liberty albums, they've got all the hallmarks of classic Cavern dwellers and some even claim a resemblance to seminal Flamin' Groovies. On paper that sounds quite an interesting sideline, and they do sound quite convincing for most of I Wonder, it's just now and then that they seem to be yodelling through clenched teeth. Dave Henderson

WOODY GUTHRIE

Columbia River Collection

Topic 12T448 A timely release, following the recent BBC documentary on Woody Guthrie, these recordings stem from a BPA commission back in 1941 that saw Woody writing songs for the Columbia River project. Although many of the tapes were lost, or found their way to some strange places, the assembled 17 cuts here are more than worth hearing — even if the quality isn't always hi-fi. This is still a fine collection that captures one of music's earliest legends in full fight with his acoustic guitar, authentic American downhome drawl and harmonica in tow. Dave Henderson

HAPHASH AND THE COLOURED COAT

Haphash And The Coloured Coat

Drop Out DO 2001 P Ah, woah, a woah, a woah, a woah. Yes, Haphash, for whom the Demon/Edsel/Zippo/Drop Out axis have been trying to create a vibe about, certainly wigs it on this bizarre '67 chantalong. This is the kind of stuff that '70s play directors thought they played at parties in the '60s. Headbands and rattling percussion instruments, people really "expressing themselves", that's where Haphash's head's at — what's left of it that is. Next up Drop Out will be telling us all to wear white and that The Mahavishnu Orchestra weren't all that bad. Er, just remember though... this is how Dick Branson started. Beware false idols. Dave Henderson

LED ZEPPELIN

1972 Interview

Discussion Ramble One B C A limited edition LP that should be available in your local store, if you feel inclined to hear a rather in depth interview with John Bonham and Robert Plant. What's more, the discette comes on a groovy pic disc, enclosed in a prissy white sleeve. A cert to be collectable and desirable in future time warps, but the wit and wisdom of this Cannon And Ball of rock doesn't quite live up to a cranked-up throwdown of Communication Breakdown. Nick Brody

PERE UBU

The Modern Dance

Fontana/Phonogram SFLP3 Well timed re-release of this classic debut album by the reformed Pere Ubu as a prelude to the brand new Tenement Year LP out on Fontana through Phonogram in March.

For now, this shows newcomers exactly where David Thomas et al were coming from way back then — like a chunkier, punkier yet even more experimental hybrid of Beefheart and Can, and you can trace a line on through Wire and The Fall, right up to Throwing Muses, The Pixies and That Petrol Emotion, too.

Like the sound of that? Fing buy it then — who knows, those quick off the mark might even be lucky enough to snap up one of the extremely limited edition numbered collectors copies. Alex Bastedo

THE SEARCHERS

Rarities, Oddities And Flip-sides

PRT PYL 6019 P C Legend has it that Liverpool circa 1963 boasted 350 working 'beat' groups and, yes, The Searchers were just one of them. Of course they were lucky, in as much as they hit the charts on several occasions, but this album has no time for things like that. Instead, here are 18 tracks from The Searchers' more obscure singles and EPs, featuring tunes that didn't subsequently make it onto album.

The sound is inevitably tinny, and in hindsight these recordings will surely only be of interest to beat-majors who can cope with the teeny tackiness of their better known tracks like Needles And Pins and Sweets For My Sweet. But you never know, maybe we're set for a whole new generation of Italian cut suits, thin ties and pointed toe shoes. Well, it almost happened with The Jam, didn't it? Dave Henderson

SE ROGIE

Palm Wine Guitar Music

Cooking Vinyl COOK 010 N M C

A collection of the Sierra Leone guitar master's '60s recordings that have the relaxing ambience of a bluesy wail, played against Rogie's distinctive, slightly lazy guitar style. Like Prince Buster's primitive FAB sides, Rogie's recordings seem to conjure up the unique atmosphere of the man's environment and musical influences with the slightest of ease. A highly listenable LP set. Dave Henderson

Party At Hanging Rock

Re-Elect The President NIXON 5

B C A re-release of the Stiff compilation of '86, this features the pick of Australian pop, with names like Ups And Downs, The Saints, Painters And Dockers and Huxton Creepers all presenting their own blend of down under danceability. This is very easy going stuff, containing pure, bouncy pop with no unpleasant surprises swimming under its waters, but the occasional shark bite wouldn't have gone amiss, since after two sides the offerings sound bland rather than blissful. Still, nice stuff lurks therein. Carole Linfield

The Riverside Jazz Sampler

Riverside RIVM 001 P First in a series of releases from the Riverside catalogue that's been picked up by Ace. A compilation showing some of the artists working on the Riverside roster, from its inception in the mid-'50s, this is a weighty collection which strikes enough memory bells to create commercial interest. With tracks from The Montgomery Trio, Sonny Rollins and Cannonball Adderley, it focuses on the modern jazz sounds of the '50s and is an excellent introduction to a label that's been difficult to track down for some time. Dave Henderson

The Young Marble Giants — they coulda been Colossal...

UNDERGROUND

WE LOVE THE YOUNG MARBLE GIANTS

One of the true lost albums of all times, except you can still actually get it, is The Young Marble Giants' Colossal Youth. Released in 1980 on the fledgling Rough Trade label (cat no RT008), it features Philip and Stuart Moxham and Alison Statton on some embracingly minimal music which brought out the best in Alison's restrained, warm vocals (she later blew it with the overpowering Weekend) and Philip Moxham's chatty guitar style (he later went on to become The Gist and release the fine Love At First Sight 45 for Rough Trade), complemented by simplistic drum machine, keyboards and Stuart Moxham's bass.

● Allegedly they were weened, in Wales, on a diet of Eno, and the resultant ambience plus the all-encompassing aura of Colossal Youth, present a vital, uniquely full sentence which the Giants first attempted to formulate on their debut recordings for the Cardiff compilation Is The War Over? With Rough Trade's deletion of early Raincoats albums, plus the unavailability of many of the label's singles back catalogue, now seems like a good time to grasp a copy of Colossal Youth, even if it's only to see what Eno would have been like if he'd have been born ten years later (and had friends). Dave Henderson

It's really weird. 1988 could well be the year of Joy Division. Out of the closet they will march. Preserved, on the shelf for eight years. Pickled hipness, waiting to be consumed for a second time. This time around, thanks to that vast army of uninitiated U2 fans (U2 being the most overrated entertainers since The Beatles), their audience could be truly massive.

The Joy Division revival starts here!

Mick Middles finds the spirit and recalls the mood with Peter Hook

So what has stirred this ghostly cult? Well, the revival began last year as Factory Records stumbled across a winning formula. Tentatively, they repackaged the New Order singles catalogue in the form of Substance and, to everyone's utter amazement, produced the band's largest selling album to date. And so, on the near horizon (March, if all goes well), Factory Records will release the Joy Division double album, also entitled Substance. What's more, they will link this with the release of a highly promoted single, Atmosphere/She's Lost Control (complete with animated video). Now then, if you take into account the unparalleled hypnotic brilliance of Atmosphere and add the fact that the average U2 fan has yet to discover this long lost gem, then you will begin to appreciate the explosive potential of this little time bomb called Joy Division.

But I'm not so happy. Because of geographic reasons I have been through all this once before and, frankly, I'm not sure that I'm looking forward to discovering Joy Division for a second time. It's OK for you, dear spotty Talullah Gosh devotee, for you can clutch the JD revival with a sense of refreshment. But we old sods can't do that. We have to step back into an era when just one band dominated our lives (we were THAT naive in those days). Joy Division seemed like the ultimate, the final furlong. I have a strange feeling that the events of 1988 will prove this to be a somewhat less than ridiculous notion. As I type, however, I haven't listened to a Joy Division song for six years (apart from the odd Simon Bates replay of Love Will Tear Us Apart) and I have good reason for this. They were undoubtedly the most exciting rock band I have ever witnessed, both live and on record but, strangely, they could also be so utterly depressing. So, six years ago, I banished them from my record deck. The music seemed to be too serious and, frankly, I wanted to have a good time. As I said, it's really weird.

On February 2, 1988, I saunter warily into Suite Sixteen Studios, Rochdale, intent on talking to the studio's joint owner Peter Hook about his time spent in the unit called Joy Division. On the wall of the clear white recreation room stands a dramatic photograph of the late Ian Curtis. It's clear that Hook harbours fond and respectful memories of those times. But, I ask him tentatively, does he think it's a good idea to drag the band out into the open after all this time?

"Personally I'm very glad to see it. Rob (Gretton — Joy Division/New Order manager with an odd reputation for owning a thoroughly sarcastic promotion technique) and Tony (Wilson — Factory boss and Didsbury media god) didn't want to do it. They only wanted to do the New Order one because they felt the Joy Division one was selling out. But nothing could be construed more as selling out than Substance, New Order. The Joy Division stuff just isn't available any more so we'll be fulfilling a service more than anything else. Rob always reckoned that, if The Doors could become massive after their demise, then Joy Division could do it. It would be nicer if it broke big in America."

This is a story that is going to be told and retold over the coming years, so you might as well get used to it. It's a good story too. Classic rock 'n' roll in fact from day one. Pete Hook, the only man alive who can play tasteful heavy metal bass lines, explains.

"Me and Barney began playing straight after we saw The Sex Pistols at The Lesser Free Trade Hall (Manchester) in 1976. I went out and bought a bass for £35. Then we learnt in our bedrooms, from the Parma Hughes book of rock and roll. It was really good because it was the only book that had stickers to put on your guitar neck, so it was dead easy."

Initially they were called Stiff Kittens and, later, Warsaw. With the, in those days, somewhat less than enigmatic Ian Curtis on vocals and Steve Morris on drums, they proceeded to tread water as a rather pompous and lumbering mish mash of Doors and Stooges influences. As Joy Division they released the Ideal For Living EP, initially on seven inch only, which was enough to turn a few heads, if only because of the naive 'heaviness' of the production. But it wasn't until they met Gretton, managerial fifth member, that things began to fall into place.

JD Backstage sweat out

“Rob was DJing at Rafter’s when we played the Stiff Test/Chiswick Challenge talent night. My girlfriend had given him the record the week before and he saw our best set that night and he asked Barney if he could manage us. But Barney never told us, he forgot. So we were all sat there in rehearsal one day and this grey haired man in glasses came in and sat down. We were playing away and I thought, ‘Who’s this dick?’. We played through our set and he stayed there, nodding his head and when we stopped it was a really awkward moment. Just silence, then Barney said, ‘Oh aye lads, I forgot to tell you...’. Barney’s not changed, still as daft as ever.”

But Gretton had stumbled across a band in trouble. They had naïvely wandered into what is known technically as a ‘dodgy contract’ and Gretton, a fully fledged inhabitant of Manchester City’s notorious Kippax Stand, found himself thrown into a new kind of battle.

Hook: “I don’t think we actually signed a contract but we recorded a full album for them before we were to sign a contract. That was, like, half of Unknown Pleasures and we had to buy our way out of it. Which was a classic mistake. We were lucky because, in the end, we paid a thousand quid and the guy gave us all the tapes. He’s still a big DJ in the clubs, Richard Searling. He used to be a northern soul DJ and he got involved with us because he wanted us to record a version of Keep On Keepin’ On. We tried, but we couldn’t play it. We just couldn’t play it, but we ripped it off and wrote Interzone. Anyway, we dropped more than half of the songs from that album before it became Unknown Pleasures.”

I was lucky enough to interview this pre-Factory Joy Division for Sounds. (Actually, I was pushed and badgered into doing it by Gretton. A fact that might seem astonishing given the laidback personality adopted by him these days.)

I think it was their first interview, and it showed. They gathered shyly around a tap room table in a pub, ironically just yards away from where The Hacienda proudly stands today. Hook was deathly silent, Sumner (Barney) and Morris were more interested in their meat pies than the interview, and Curtis’s chatter was polite, lightweight and, in a good sense, noticeably ordinary. Despite an objection to the Nazi tag that was surrounding the band at the time, he seemed to prefer to talk about Manchester United than engage in a discussion about his lyrics. The number of times I met Curtis (sorry about these damn namedrops but, well, needs must . . .) in the two years that followed this meeting merely served to continue this unpretentious image of him. Which is why I personally find it a little odd when I read, for the two hundredth time, an account of Curtis being a moody artist imprisoned in the pain of genius. New Order, as it happens, have long since given up worrying about the inaccuracies surrounding the Curtis legend.

Hook: “It is a bit odd sometimes, especially in Europe. We played Italy about five years ago, and for some reason we were getting really large audiences, but we’d walk out on stage and all we would see were rows and rows of placards reading: IAN CURTIS — REST IN PEACE. People were just stood there holding these things up. It was a bit disconcerting, I can tell you.”

But Curtis was special. On a good night — and you had to be lucky to catch Joy Division on a good night, their genius was infuriatingly erratic — he would seem to drain the energy from the audience. It was an odd feeling, standing there in a seedy, sweaty club, finding yourself becoming increasingly intoxicated by the bizarre intensity created by the band on stage. Watching the ungainly dance of Curtis, who, arms flailing wildly, could lift the atmosphere into occasional peaks. Nobody ever performed like Ian Curtis. You’d leave the gig in disbelief and, the next day, you would grab a sceptical friend and drag him halfway across the country to where Joy Division would be playing the next night. Once installed in some dreadful ex-bingo hall in Coventry, or somewhere, Joy Division would produce a set so dull, so unappealing that the chosen colleague would immediately threaten murder. To this day I have friends who saw Joy Division on at least six occasions and still wonder what all the fuss was about.

A hint, just a hint of JD’s live power can be gleaned from the Ikon video, Here Are The Young Men. Unfortunately, although the band were on form on that particular video, the video maker wasn’t. Such is life. This time around the music is going to have to be enough. We could, as previously stated, find that the lesser talented U2 have opened up a whole new market for Joy Division. Could the disturbed beauty of their music finally, ironically, find a mainstream outlet?

Hook: “Yeah, maybe, who knows? It’s been hard to get Joy Division across to the New Order audience... A lot of the mail we receive is from people who have never heard of Joy Division and certainly don’t know what the connection is. Many ask us ‘Who are Joy Division?’ and, of course, Joy Division have never been unleashed on these markets.”

If Wilson and Gretton are tentative and the rest of New Order are, I believe, merely interested, then Peter Hook is ecstatic about the revival of Joy Division. After our chat he takes me on a swift tour of Suite Sixteen Studios. This studio used to be called Cargo, the very place where Joy Division made the bulk of their recordings. Pete Hook stands by the mixing desk and proudly surveys his empire.

“I find it difficult to believe, sometimes, that this is the place we came to record all those years ago. It’s really weird.”

For a moment, I swear, the infamous machismo of Pete Hook melts and is momentarily replaced by a touch of tearful sentimentality. Then, as CJ, his exceptionally talented studio engineer calls, Pete Hook swiftly reverts back to his role as young (ish) entrepreneur.

Make no mistake about one thing. Joy Division are being revived primarily for financial reasons. Factory ARE selling out but, when you come to think about it, what the hell does it matter? Wouldn’t it be amazing to see the beautiful Atmosphere competing for a chart position with some precocious American bratette? Or would this seem like some form of terrible sacrilege? I don’t know. As I said, it’s really weird. Really, really weird.

Shaletown Reflex Records 12

[RE] Powerfully evocative and emotional, without resorting to the histrionics or manic depression so clichéd within the genre. While having a certain immediacy, it takes a while before the nuances take hold, so give it time — the nice melody will lap away at the overly arty lyric. Happily for a 12 inch it's well contained, too, so doesn't outstay its welcome. CL

AVO-8 Is This The End Avo

[RE] [C] Acclaimed as a more rock, 'n' rollier version of The Shop Assistants/Primitives, Avo-8 are in fact very much that. A wispy female vocal eventually fleshes out and sounds quite embracing, while the guitar substantially fills out the sound. Time will sharpen them up, but this comes recommended anyway. JE

BAD DREAM FANCY DRESS

Curry Crazy [E] [P] Sprayed on a wall, near to where I live, in big silver letters is the word 'curry', nothing else, just 'curry'. It's one of my favourite pieces of graffiti — second only to the one that reads 'fudge' which can be found in an underpass in Newquay. It's my guess that the people responsible for these appalling acts of vandalism are the very same girls behind this appalling record. Curry Crazy (a sensation which quickly follows lager frenzy) is a power pop ode to Indian spices — it could have been vindaloo but alas it's crap. JD

BIFF BANG POW! She

Haunts Creation [RE] [C] The Biffo boys have developed quite nicely over the years, even to the point where they can easily evade the tag of "label boss doing his thing". For Biff Bang Pow! produce cherishable, well-strummed, well proportioned songs that roll in with a waft of down home cooking and a relaxing ambience. Accessible but never over easy, nor over confident, She Haunts is a package of immense charm. NB

BIG DEAL Very Mysterious

EP Self-Destruct [SH] A seven tracker from Kentucky that wails and whines through a strain of frantic guitars. Somewhere in the middle distance a singer tries to intone the essential light and dark subject matter of Concrete among other things. Then they all race to finish before the next song starts. Fast. NB

THE BIRDHOUSE Rev It Up

Vinyl Solution [P] Rev It Up, like its predecessor, Burn It Up, bares all the hallmarks of the classic

Birdhouse sound system; scuzzy guitar, deranged bass and drums and the sort of rebel without a pause lyrics that only Sir Johnny Rev himself could possibly carry! This latter release has two advantages over its prototype, however. Where Burn It Up failed to convey the excitement and energy of live Birdhouse, Rev It Up succeeds gloriously, and secondly, it's much better. AK

BOONIERATS Messing Fillet

[RE] [C] A strange paradoxical cornucopia — well, a Vietnam Vet living in Scotland and making records. Messing features four songs, two excellent, one OK and one pedestrian. Side one has the meat with the poignant Leech Reef and the moving Flag Day. At once crushingly emotive, then briskly hurtful, this is the kind of thing that may only be cherished by those who discover it themselves in years to come. R

CHATSHOW Noisy Bad High

Thing Idea [P] Alarmingly uncharming pop slop from a label who usually know better. Chatshow don't write songs like they should do. NB

THE CHAIRS The Likes Of

You Pink Halo [C] Charmingly succinct, The Chairs play well-crafted pop with a nudge towards mod roots, a sideways stare at the charts and a brief flurry of excitement. Almost. TC W

THE CLOUDS Tranquil

Subway [RE] [C] Mellow pop with a heavily breathing, inward looking vocal line. The Clouds sound as if they're occupying your turned up collar, wearing polka-dot silk shirts, pointed shoes and large smites. Cute pop that wants to be awkward. TC W

COLDCUT Doctorin' The

House Ahead of Our Time Timely tape montage with a dance-beat featuring all your fave spoken bits of records gone by. Coldcut should follow M/A/R/R/S straight to your heart if there's any justice in the world. TC W

COR TRANCE Bastard

Kestrel no label [P] A three track EP from Cor Trance who also feature in Tip Sheet this week. It's heads-down thrash that takes a few moments to lurch into the left field with some self-questioning moments. Quite alarming, with a very listenable edge that improves with time. DH

DAVIDSONS Like An

Astronaut Cake [NM] Ah yes! The Davidsons finally get glorious and drag us delightfully all the way up to the top of their potential. Like An Astronaut has an inane ethereality about it that, when played at extreme volume, is highly danceable, albeit in a spazzy kind of way. PP

EXTREMES Car Crash

Music Destiny [RE] [C] This

five tracker has so much in common with Television at their best that it's a little frightening. The Extremes certainly have the wherewithal to carry it off though as the singer strains his neck to get more Verlaine-like. Somehow this still manages to sound fresh and, Car Crash Music is just the kind of tonic the flagging voice of reaction needs. DH

THE FAT LADY SINGS Be Still

Harbour Sound [P] A big 30-3, and an explosive drum noise, for the second single from this four-piece. Spiced up with some well-strummed chords and a clarity that's been missing in recent times, this will do quite nicely thanks. DH

THE FLATMATES Shimmer

Subway [RE] [C] The Flatmates come of age with this Chris Allison-produced (he did the Weds LP) groover that brings out the width in their vocal style. Also highlighted is some sparky guitar-ing and a neat line in verse/chorus interplay. Here comes the big news. DH

THE FREE ZONE Large As

Life Cheep [P] [C] Pop with a rattling snare sound. Liverpool's The Free Zone have some nice tunes which demand production and arrangement to bring out the best in the multi-talented Tim Thwaites. Next time around it'll be better. TC W

THE GROOVY LITTLE NUMBERS You Make My Head Explode 53rd &

3rd [RE] [C] The Numbers play chirpy pop that's very close to several of their labelmates and something of a disappointment after reading their recent interviews where they claimed more of an off-the-wall reason for life. Still, they are groovy and enjoyable, even if they're not the future of perverse offbeat rock. DH

THE HUCKSTERS Way Of

Feeling Rocket 5 [RE] [C] Fine pop balladeering — with wash-and-wear harmony lines — plus a guitar sound that rolls down the neck like a shower in San Fran. The Hucksters, from Hull, write a dangly tune and can sing too. Way Of Feeling may be a little flawed in terms of pop prowess and chart action, but any A&R dept worth their salt should be able to polish this team into a fighting, and totally cred outfit. DH

JESUS CHRYSLER Turn Or Burn Second Coming

Sh This comes in one of the worst sleeves ever, but boy, is it one of the best sounds around. Jesus Chrysler are from Knoxville, Tennessee and they play a kind of pop paced thrash that works best because of the astute lyrics and the offbeat delivery. Psychos with teeth and with an album on the way. DH

Jesus Chrysler

Turn Or Burn

KING OF SLUMS England's Finest Hope Play Hard

RR We were a tad previous in our acclaim for this King Of The Slums debut EP, but now that it's actually going to be in the shops, let's just reiterate that this four tracker generally peels the paint off your tongue and sounds angst-ridden and essential. Lead track, The Pennine Spitter, should convince that this new label, run by Debris magazine's Dave Haslam, should be watched. DH

LEN LIGGINS A Headful Of

Ants AAZ A wobbling rant on northern times, semi-political stirrings, acoustic strums and other odds and ends make Len's four track EP a haunting, disjointed social statement that you'll love or hate. The simplicity of Life In Leeds City makes it work on a purley second-coming-of-new-wave type way. Pure of heart. NB

LILAC TIME Return To Yesterday Swordfish

This trio sound amazingly composed as they whisk through some mid-tempo tunes — with more than a hint of Simon And Garfunkel harmony on their sleeve. A four track 12 inch, Return To Yesterday, has the romantic feel of an outfit who're destined to be festooned on many a bedsit wall. Fine stuff. R

LOWLIFE Swirl It Swings

Nightshift Yet more from north of the border and the ever-improving Lowlife. Another rolling backdrop, with Lowlife breaking into a swirl as they increase the optical intricacies of their sound, leaving a churning pool of sound that begs you to dip in your hand. Crushingly brittle. R

MDMA Eyes Wide Open

Ediesta MDMA sound and look as if they're busting a gut to be cock-rock's electronic cousins. Featuring ex members of Cassandra Complex, the onus is on smoking cigarettes and not saying goth while being almost, er, goth. The noise is sequenced, the lyrics chanted, a guitar whines and they're in desperate need of a producer. Cult stuff all the same. R

MEAT BEAT MANIFESTO I Got

The Fear Sweatbox The second slab of aggro-dance from MBM. Pickpocket lines from Kool And The Gang and the usual angsty-rap, but it all gets a little toothless without a proper song direction in the air. Still, forceful stuff though. R

MEGA CITY 4 Running In Darkness Primitive Mega City 4 come from the Medway/Milkshake zone but have managed to escape the silmving boundaries of post-beat. Instead they opt for a more upbeat, upfront rhythmic barrage that's at once The Jam, then something more rock-based. What they need to do is dive head first into a good chorus. They almost do, but fall over their powerful forearms while supplying another middle-eight. DH

MINT ADDICTS Get Out Of The Ghetto! Constrictor

A melodramatic slice of popism from German surrealists (and all with a dance beat). Mint Addicts roll with the punches and prove that Phillip Boa's not the only new flavour to come out of West Germany. The Addicts have a mad guitarist, a brass-sound keyboard that moves like a movie classic from Utopia. Superb! DH

THE ORCHIDS I've Got A

Habit Sarah The label that brought us the wonderful Sex Urchins breaks more rules with this understated three track EP, which strums itself right into your heart. And with a track called Give Me Some Peppermint Freedom, can you deny then the mass acclaim they so obviously deserve? Nice. JE

PERSON TO PERSON Red

Boyajy (469A Hudson Street F34, New York, NY 10014, USA) This is quite a remarkable record. Person To Person seem to have a rare talent of running various styles together (in this case it's rooty folk next to some kind of Talking Heads pop/rock angle), making the end product insist you've been dying to have it run its fingers down your spine since time began. Person To Person have a potentially huge sound that's accomplished and perfectly rounded without ever sounding trad or boring. Excellent. DH

PINK NOISE Thin End Of The Wedge Reasonable

A tuneful trudge from Hull-based Pink Noise, which has a poignant message wrapped in its steamy melodies. The two class system is examined amid a flurry of popist chords and affectionate guitarings — all of which trips from the tongue with harmonic glee. DH

SLOPPY SECONDS The First Seven Inches Alternative

Testicles The seconds play risqué wrist music with a pink powerchord and some yabby-dabby vocals. Fast and tongue in cheek, Sloppy Seconds jitter their way through four anthems with sleazy overtones, leaving the scene stained and slightly shaky. DH

SMITH AND MIGHTY Anyone Red Stripe Bubbling cover of Cilla Black's Anyone Who Had A Heart, with rhythm and cut-up interludes from Bristol's Smith And Mighty. This is the kind of record that should be on every club turntable as well as casting its spell over the national charts. Wig it! DH

SONIC YOUTH Master=Dik

Blast First The youth of today are a little less straightforward than on Sister. Master=Dik is an abrasive idea which flows rather aggressively to its climax, whereas the flipside of this plate presents Sonic Youth going through some kind of Hallucinogenic burn-out that only they could dream up. It contains, reportedly, in excess of 36 minutes of aural interplay and defies description (... it is God! no less ...) and it lasts forever. DH

THE STENCH EP Raunch

Excellent seven track selection from the multi-faceted and meanly precise Stench from Utah. Changing pace, keeping the songs short and swapping direction when the mood takes them. The Stench are another lot of American youths who're holding up their nation's flag and asking what the f is going on? They could quite easily be dismissed, on paper as punk parody, but one listen to this plastic pretender and you'll be thinking otherwise. DH

THE SUGARCUBES Cold

Sweat One Little Indian Already a charter as I write this, the 'cubes keep up the momentum, with a less immediate, but just as lovably off-beat variation on dark-eyed soul. Their next step is the most important... already God after two releases, it seems the only way they can go is down (which they certainly don't deserve). Too much too soon? NB

SWA Arroyo SST

Following the excellent Dinosaur Jnr 45, SWA confound the meek and mild Ug ed by releasing a phenomenal 12 inch that's such a departure from their previous, inward looking albums. Arroyo is a glorious cacophony that boasts an enormous rock sound, while never sounding old hat nor woolly. Instead this is an awesome, beautifully packaged release that suggests a change of face for SWA. Brilliant. DH

SWIZ Down Hellfire

This lot, in a way, seem unable to decide on just what they want to do — as well as where they're going. The end result is a bonus just because of that. Jumping from thrashing breaks to chugging Gen X-style verses and acidic phrases, Swiz seem to be only loosely tacked, but ultimately cohesive in what they're doing. Worth having and holding. DH

THREE WISE MEN Cruisin' For A Bruisin' Rhythm King

The Men coming of age and rapping over all the sucker UK copycats. Proving that there's life beyond the solid apeing of US hip-hop, and that house and rap have so many possible fusions and variations. Throbber. DH

TURN TO FLOWERS People Change Like The Weather Imaginary

Heartbreak vocals, and a string quartet for backing, make this perfect pop single desperate for attention — and it deserves it too. A slice of Fine Young Cannibals, The Hollies and all good things contemporary make it swing with a smile. R

UTI EP Rasputin From California, UTI claim their record contains words and ideas that might offend "uptight, right wing assholes", and as they hammer down on the Fleas track you can believe that. But UTI have a little more in their armoury — as well as wearing shorts and baseball caps — in that they can also make it pay when they slow the pace. DH

THE VASELINES Dying For It

53rd & 3rd The Vase-lines are a law unto themselves. Their last bedraggled, under-produced stab at super recognition sank into oblivion, a wee boy-girl blip that didn't convert, and now? Well, the kick-off track here is an excellent song, performed with cranked-up venom, but by the second, they're tinkering with bicycle horns and sounding ever so suspect. Still, it's pop, nonetheless! JE

VARIOUS Dusseldorf City Lights Fab (Eislebener Steig 6-8 D-2000 Hamburg 50, West Germany) Four West German mod combos cut a smartly-ironed line in underproduced adrenalin rushes. Stephen's Ruin play it fast, as do Stunde X and Beathoovers, while Bo Hatzfeld And The Headhunters opt to murder John Lee Hooker's Mad Man Blues. No one shows an excess of character here. JE

VARIOUS The Munster Dance Hall Favorites Teenager From Outer Space

SH An EP from Spain with four psyche-pop overtures, kicking off with The Surfin' Lungs' version of the Munsters theme, which is closely followed by contributions from Spacemen 3, Sex Museum and Enemigos. Polka dot rock with an overpowering guitar slurry embedded in the vinyl. NB

VARIOUS Savage Amusement EP Barracuda

Blue BIC The lead track of this homage to Bolan is a dreadful cover of Ride A White Swan by Captain Sensible. The going doesn't really improve and, although Marc is often cited as a rock god, this kind of bastardry doesn't do anyone any favours. DH

THE VAYNES Rock 'N' Roll Crime Vanity Records RR

C Leather-clad cockrock with shades and a bistering guitar that will do well with Ig-o-philes and Dolls enthusiasts, but will bring grown men to say, 'I've heard it all before'. I've heard it all before. AGM

VEE VEE VEE Pass The

Buck Constrictor RR C As a little preview for their mini-LP, Vee Vee Vee have this rather tasty neo-funk outburst on the very collectable Constrictor label. Years ago, Factory would have embraced this sound, kids would have carved Vee Vee Vee on their computers and the world would have been a better place. Ah, if only. This is a little like how records should be. Brill! DH

THE VENUS FLY TRAP

Morphine Tuesday C A three track 12 inch from this bunch of ex-gothique structuralists. Guitars burn off in a looser-than-venomous mood, supplying the maximum revs to this tale of sexual bravado. Black leather-wearers only need apply. R

THE WEDDING PRESENT

Nobody's Twisting Your Arm Reception Records RR

C To think that not so long ago I'd've dismissed the Wedding Present to that gulch of worthless guitar janglers that includes The Bodines, The Mighty Lemon Drops, etc. Whatta sap! The George Best LP put me straight, and Who's Twisting Your Arm demonstrates again that Dave Gedge's love songs are the most brutally realistic and emotive in many a moon. Of course that wouldn't mean spit without the Pressie's ravaging guitar attack, which is akin to mercury washing over your body. VB

THE WHEEL The World's A Cruel Mistress EPL

RR This lot sound like Ronnie Barker impersonating Magazine, if you can imagine such a thing. Sure, it's a nice enough pop song, but The Wheel's vocal department is so downbeat and cliché-ridden that it's difficult to really appreciate. NB

ZODIAC MOTEL Crystal Injection Swordfish RM

C The second 12 inch from Zomo picks up where the first, Sunshine Miner, left off. Crystal Injection's hooked guitars and Indian Summer's bits intertwine with the punkhippy drawl of singer Vince and make for a presence impossible to ignore. These trippy pop explosion mongers from Birmingham need your attention. DI

through and OUT

"That's right you've guessed it EZQ is back, With another funky beat for your 12-inch stack, My possee and I had to do it again Make sure y'all know who's number one in England"

Derek B from Good Groove

★ All over Britain, dance music is coming into its own, hip-hop, garage, alternative, house, and everything in between, the categories are being blurred and redefined. It's pounding out of the cities, and everybody's doing it! From the most unlikely Pop Will Eat Itself (who have cut a version of their There Is No Love . . . using loads of Eric B's I Know You Got Soul), to Sonic Youth (whose MasterDik is the hardest rock/rap noise so far).

★ At the moment, London seems to be obsessed with James Brown and '70s music and style.

★ "Kids of my generation, 18 to 22, are kids of the '70s generation," reckons Derek. "Like in the '70s they looked back to the '60s, so we look back to the '70s. That's why flares is a happening thing."

★ So will Derek be wearing flares in a couple of weeks?

★ "No, if they come back in I'll just have to be untrendy."

★ With Derek's debut LP Bullet From A Gun, out real soon, it's imperative that he breaks into a much wider audience. But, do you think Radio 1 is likely to play your records?

★ "Their whole profile is that they're the voice of the whole country, but they're not. There are records breaking into the Top 40 now without being played on Radio 1, which suggests that the BBC has just got to come over to the sounds that the kids want to hear."

★ There are a lot of great records being played in the clubs that aren't getting any airplay. For instance, check the original and, even better, remix of Beat Dis by Bomb The Bass through Rhythm King. I know it sounds just like Pump Up The Volume, but it's still a great record, and S Express by S Express, is pure London Disco, flares 'n' all.

★ The Cookie Crew's new rap Black Is The Word has got them a slot at the prestigious US Grammy Award ceremony. Why? Well the words go "We're on Rhythm King and we're gonna get a Grammy", that's all it took. And finally from Rhythm King, watch out for the new ultra-hard Three Wise Men LP GB Boyz.

★ Two of the best tracks around using "ideas" from other records are Do This My Way by Kid 'N' Play (basically a re-done version of Sweetee's I Got Da Feeling with bits of Maceo And The Macks and 'Anyone . . .' by Smith And Mighty, a fantastic tuff-reggae version of the old Dionne Warwick classic Anyone Who Had A Heart.

★ On the noisier side there's Asylum by Screaming Trees and a monster seven Tour De France/Yo! by Llybwr Liaethog, as well as an LP of hard electro dance from Son of Sam called Rich and Famous — Eight Songs of Greed (with Liberation perfume and a skull emblazoned 'Yuppie' on the cover).

★ The best track is the hard and fast Cuts And Bruises, but there's a good variety of sounds, all with lyrics worth listening to, as well as those beats.

★ Don't miss the Coldcuts and Plasticman with Doctorin' The House — all your favourite bits and pieces cut over a house beat.

★ Since the Paid In Full coldcut remix everyone seems to be in on the act of cutting up Eric B And Rakim tracks. Even Norman House-martin has had a go — mixing the Jackson 5 with I know You Got Soul.

★ But let's get back to Derek B who's no stranger to remixes either.

★ "I did a Paid In Full mix, and I will be doing some more, but I don't want to give away too many of my ideas. I heard Eric B liked it, but I'd hate someone to do that to one of my tracks."

★ The speed things are going at the moment, give it two weeks and he'll be cut up, remixed, laundered, repackaged and ready to go again. Don't Stop. Christopher Mellor.

Stump

Pancake and the world of ferocity! power!

Profundity or profanity? It was a familiar question a year or so back when Stump unleashed Quirk Out on the unsuspecting public! To all intents and purposes it seemed that Stump had emerged as a lawless prodigy; for some, it was conclusive proof that there was a God after all and in the true traditions of fanaticism, Mick Lynch, Chris Salmon, Kev Hopper and Rob McKahey were elevated to musical messiahdom! Then there were the misologists, the non-believers who could never quite come to terms with the idea of an umpteenth coming! Then there were the cynics . . . and criticism flowed plentiful. And then what? Nothing! Not so much as a single!

It was all a bit confusing, really, but after a year away ("We've not been scratching our arses in Majorca you know, we've been working bloody hard!"), Stump are back with a single, Chaos, and a rather splendid surprising new LP, A Fierce Pancake, on Ensign. Stump kindly put the whole string of events into perspective for Underground.

A Stump anecdote:

Rob: "There's this Irish fellow I know and I was telling him about the band and he said, 'What are you called?', and I told him Stump but he can't hear very well and he said, 'Oh, Stomach! Excellent! That's a really good name for a band!'"

Chris: "Yeah, I wish we'd thought of it!"

Chris: "Looking back now, the name was a bit of a mistake really, there's a lot of better things we could have called ourselves. I think The Jesus And Mary Chain is a brilliant name for a band."

Rob: "Well, we were desperate at the time and Stump was a joke . . . so our name was a desperate joke!"

Rob: "You could count those who understood it on the fingers of one hand. At the time people seemed to think that we were a grubby little band who were into ugliness. I'm not into ugliness, I'm into beauty and poetry!"

Were there many misconceptions about the band?

Rob: "God! Yes. I remember when we were on tour with Husker Du and these people said to us, 'whose the toughest, you or Husker Du?'. They seemed to think that HD were maniacs and that we were complete maniacs! Whereas HD are really very quiet, affable lads and so are we."

Chris: "People did tend to think that we'd be very intimidating people but we're not. I think we're nice. We are nice boys, aren't we? Actually, I can understand the misconception, I mean if I'd just heard our LP for the first time and then turned it over and saw our photograph on the back I'd think, 'What the f have we got here?!'"

What about that wave of early praise? Had you anticipated that?

Rob: "The boss at Beggars Banquet once said to our manager, 'I know that Stump are the most important band in Britain but I'm not going to sign them because they'll never sell!'. The bit about us being the most important band is incredible shite, but it just goes to show that when it comes to the bottom line it's the old pound note that counts! A lot of people said that we were the most important band around, though, that's a stupid thing to say, I hate extreme criticism."

"What it was, is that Stump were playing the original music that hadn't been played before and, therefore, a lot of people loved it — it put a lot of people off too. I remember one critic virtually said 'Whatever did we do before Stump?'. God! how awful, I was embarrassed to be in the band!"

But that was then.

Last night Rob had a dream:

"I dreamt that we were playing a last minute gig back home in Ireland with The Chieftains as support! God it was a nightmare!"

Last night Chris had a dream too:

"I keep having this recurring dream that I've got lock-jaw. Last night was terrible though, you know when you're not asleep and not awake? Well, it happened then and I had to pull myself awake and out of the dream. I was really worried when I woke up and so relieved when I tasted my mouth and found that it moved!"

I don't think it would take RD Laing to diagnose a classic case of anxiety there, do you?

Chris: "We are looking forward to this tour with some trepidation."

Rob: "It's not a case of looking forward to it, it's a case of mental necessity! I mean it, I'm going to crack up if I don't go on the road soon."

Chris: "He's half way there already, he's getting quite bad — it's like we're treading water right now, it's a funny feeling, you've got this adrenalin but it's like you're wired, and there's nothing to do."

Rob: "What do you do? You go home, you go boil your vegetables, you make your meal, you go home, you go home . . . what do you do? When you're working and you've got time off you can use it, but when you've got all the time . . . Oh! God! I'll be glad to get away!"

Mick: "Well, personally, I am a little nervous, yes. On a purely live level, I'm not apprehensive because I think that we can carry it, but the ultimate thing is that people have got to like the album and the single . . . and yes, it's scary because it's been so long. But I'm sure everyone must go through that mustn't they? I'm quite confident, just from playing the album to my friends who are our best critics because they're honest . . . in fact, yes, I'm shifting a brick!"

Chris: "I'm a bit worried now that we're using samplers because I've incorporated that into the live set. I hope it'll go alright, you know how it is with electrical things, they never come in at the right time! There's always some pissed roadie pressing the wrong button!"

Mick: "I'm really pleased with the way Stump has developed now that we're using the samplers. There's no way that we could say that we've mastered them, but our philosophy is 'have a go!'. You can do anything if you want to. And the way we're using this technology, to me that is very exciting. God only knows what the next album will sound like!"

Rob: "I think the band's grown up really. We're getting much better at playing our instruments and correspondingly we're getting much worse at everything else in our lives!"

So, what of A Fierce Pancake, then? It's Stump's first release on the Chrysalis-distributed Ensign label and, although Stump have remained loyal to their original convictions, the LP will be aimed at more than just the indie market. So, will we see girls dancing round their handbags to the merry sound of Charlton Heston, or the frenetic Bone?

Rob: "I find it impossible to tell. We keep being told that the album will do really well but we can't quite see it. You've got to face facts, people are conditioned to buy Curiosity Killed The Cat and not Stump!"

Chris: "I think people would respond to Charlton Heston and I think they'll like the video to Chaos which is being done by the same bloke who did Buffalo . . . what's he called?"

Rob: "Chris Gabin. Personally, I can't look at the album with any objectivity. The experience of making it was dreadful."

Chris: "Yeah, we took far too long to make it and we made a lot of mistakes — but hopefully we've made all the mistakes we're likely to make now so the next one will be a smoother affair."

Chris: "I think Charlton Heston will be the next single."

Mick: "Charlton Heston would definitely make a good single."

But what about Chaos — the one you've actually chosen for the first single?!

Rob: "Did you get what it's about? Apparently it's about Margaret Thatcher! Did you now that Chris? C'mon, be honest now, did you know that before he told you?"

Chris: "Well, it's too long ago to really remember, but I think I did!"

Mick: "It's basically the story of this ship — England — which goes around with this captain — Mrs T. It's like a slave ship, or something, where you have all these hands downstairs and if they make any objection — even if they have a real grievance — the captain shouts 'Oh! Mutiny!'." (said in very passable Maggle tones). "It is a bit of a concealed diatribe in a way, but I hope that people will get it and if people aren't as thinking as I assume, then hopefully they'll just get off in the chorus and the tune."

"We won't be upset if this one doesn't do anything. We've just put this out for Stump fans, just to get us back in the swing again. It's a very Stumpy sort of song. If we had put out something like Alcohol, for example, people wouldn't have thought it was the same band."

Alcohol is probably the most conventionally accessible track on A Fierce Pancake. While it manages to retain the Stump characteristics, it's a melancholic lament on the delusions of alcohol grandeur, something on which Mick is more than qualified to write.

Rob: "Oh yeah, Mick is a pissehead but the song only says many of the things that I've felt before now."

Chris: "And it isn't necessarily alcohol — it's often something else for other people."

Mick: "I have experienced all the emotions in that song. On the most basic level it relates the stages that you go through when you're drinking. I'd like people to look upon it as a bit of a warning, not on the ruptured liver scale, but more on the you'd better-watch-out-it's-going-to-get-you sort of way. It's not an anti-drinking song, it's just saying what happens to you when you start drinking in that way, the awful self pity, it's quite personal, yes, but I'm not the person in the song . . . it's a very honest album, there's no hype on it at all. I can give you my word on that." Alex Kadis

ALTERNATIVE TV

Sound and visionary's Jettisoundz recall the flickering days of their youth.

"It all started when we borrowed a VHS camera and made a video of GBH, standing on a chair at the back of the hall." That's John Bentham of Jettisoundz, the biggest independent video company in the country. After he made that GBH video, he decided to start selling copies.

"I was contacted by some bloke who had sent 40 quid to a guy from Blackpool for a Sex Pistols video, which never turned up. I figured if he would do that for a Pistols video he'd give me £20 for a GBH video which would actually materialise." John was right.

Now Jettisoundz, who are based in the media capital of the north, Lytham St Annes (that's near Blackpool, geography students), have released nearly 200 titles, regularly doing live shoots with their three cameras. They've made numerous promo clips, mostly directed by Karen Bentham, and have an active catalogue (that's the ones that are still selling) of over 50 titles. Their best sellers are the two Hawkwind tapes (Chronicle Of The Black Sword and Night Of The Hawks), closely followed by The Exploited.

But who exactly buys these tapes? John has a simple answer.

"It's a question I often ask myself, I'm buggered if I know."

New releases for February include The Meteors, Frenzy, a film called Overdose with a special ambient soundtrack by Alien Sex Fiend, and an arty compilation called Art For God's Sake.

Jettisoundz are also working on a new project called Turnpike TV. The show is a mix of promos, live footage and features and, as you would imagine, it'll feature lots of John's fave group The Turnpike Cruisers, plus 'special' features like "a frank discussion with leading sexologist Dr Writhe" and an interview with "John Bon Groovy". It has already been shown on local UK cable stations, like Clyde and Croydon, as well as in the USA.

John: "The programme is an alternative to mainstream TV. It represents the mass of new directors working underground, who are more creative, and aren't hampered by restrictions. I suppose we're pointing out that there shouldn't be any restrictions."

Parts two to 13 of Turnpike TV are likely to be all the best bits of the Jettisoundz catalogue linked, once again, by The Turnpike Cruisers. And John is justifiably excited about taking the Jettisoundz style to a cable TV audience.

"For the first time, people can make TV themselves, and getting into it without any formal training is great."

Though the future for independent video companies doesn't look all that rosy, John is in fighting mood.

"The widening gap between indies and majors is due to the indies' lack of success in broadcasting to channels to promote their product. The sooner we collectively do something about that the better."

Jettisoundz have made a start.

"Most rappers of the last few years have had nothing important to say. It's all about how big their dicks are, how beautiful their woman is, how much gold they're wearing, and which trainers they choose to tread the shit in. The Americans have brainwashed the kids into believing they need expensive rings, watches, and clothes that they can't afford. It's breeding a dangerous discontent that'll cause frustration and loads of problems."

The 3 Wize Men back Britain, Ronnie Randall spits teeth

Boyz just wanna make noise!

So says AJ, larger than life itself, the mammoth mouth and presence of Britain's premier home grown rappers, The 3 Wize Men. The crew have very definite opinions about the way the whole hip-hop scene mindlessly apes the Americans. ■ "US Spies I call 'em. I'm British so why would I rap American? All this Yankee stuff is great, but it's doing nothing to advance British black music. Respect Americans, but don't kiss their arse." ■ Rap used to be the music of message, but since the Grandmaster faded away the elaborate language has had nothing to say. It's a reflection of the times, rock and pop long ago ceased to be a serious outlet for comment on social concerns. The toothless tiger is content to play a pantomime circus act, a doped, tamed performer caked in glitz and glamour, no need even for a cage. Today's heroes embrace the cosy status quo. Not so the Wize Men. ■

"We're home grown and hard. It's a British outlook — ragamuffin reggae, hip-hop, punk, metal — we're a blend of what's happening here and now, what we're saying is relevant. People say they're bored with songs about the ghetto, but is this macho lust for wealth and greed more appealing?" ■ I tracked AJ down at the headquarters of Rhythm King, currently Britain's hippest independent record label. But getting the whole trio together in one place was proving more difficult than the original Wize Men's search for the baby Jesus. I'd first heard the debut album, GB Boyz, a few days earlier, via headphones on the top deck of an almost empty London bus. It contains re-recorded versions of last year's single, Urban Hell, about life on the Gloucester Grove housing estate in Peckham — through which I'm passing on my way to Wize Man Jemski Rah's Deptford non-des-res on the edge of South London Docklands. Refresh Yourself is the other re-vamped track, and I decide to take its advice by opening a window to allow the crisp January air to sweep into my lungs. The tape switches to the new single Cruisin' For A Bruisin' just as the lone passenger at the back of the bus storms up the aisle, cigarette hanging from lip. He glares crazily at me and slams the tiny window shut. I smile to myself, this is exactly the right vibe in which to take the metal-mashed-hip-stop. ■ Jemski welcomes me into his chilly flat — the gas is cut off — and readily admits that the band had forgotten I was coming. Strangely enough Jem goes on to tell me that, with the album completed and the subsequent departure of Danny D to work on his own project, the new slimline crew were going to be more together and tighter as a unit. This was the first of three arrangements I was to make with the Wize Men in a vain attempt to get them together. Jemski is the lyricist, so, the album? ■ "Yeah! GB Boyz. It's a reflection of our lives in Peckham and Deptford, which in many ways is more oppressive than the Bronx or Hollis Queens. We re-recorded the singles to get them the way they should have been first time around. Rhythm King have finally accepted that we only want to do things our way. Consequently we're 100 per cent happy with the result. '87 was a dry run, in '88 we are three wiser men and it's gonna happen for us. GB Boyz are heavy. We have the concept, the equipment, the music, we're on a buzz and we'll rock the world." ■

A year ago there were five Wize Men. Danny D was the third vocalist, while scratcher Cybertron, an original British rapper with Funkapolitan at the beginning of the '90s, moved on to make house music. ■

"We were sad to see both leave, but it's cool, they had their own ideas, and the Wize Men need commitment. The positive side to all the changes is that we've considered a whole new live concept. Rhythm King have finally invested a sliver of their well preserved cash fund to buy us the drum and computer equipment for live performances. For the first time Fil Chill will appear and perform on stage, mixing, scratching, triggering samples, drumming and playing bass. It'll be 100 per cent live and in the mix. It's a gamble, until now all crews have relied on pre-recorded tapes and a record scratcher. What we're doing is a new departure, fresh for '88." ■

I caught up with mix master Fil Chill in the tiny, crumbling Addis Ababa basement recording studio on the Harrow Road. It's a sauna cabin-sized place, crammed to the four walls with mixing desks, videos and recording equipment. Fil is producing his protégé Gilly G. There's little room for instruments, just an empty space about the size of your average bathroom. Guitars and drumkits have probably never graced the studio. ■ On television that morning a live discussion programme posed the question, was music better in the '60s and '70s? The contributing audience consisted of many faded pop luminaries like Paul Jones, Slade, Suzi Quatro, Roy Wood, Showaddywaddy, Sandie Shaw and so on. The talk was all of 'real' musicians and bemoaned the use of scratching and sampling, condemning it as stealing. The general consensus was that no-one has talent any more. ■

So what is the musician these days Fil? The artist or the producer? ■ "We look on ourselves as a team. People like Mantronix, Jellybean and Steinski are today's great musicians. I take sounds from wherever I want, it's all accessed from disk. I use the voice like an instrument, a sound to be re-arranged and adapted. I'm a sample musician, which is as relevant as playing any other instrument." ■

A year ago you told me that the future lay in home computers. That the complete music process from song to album cover artwork could be done in the living room on an Atari ST, with 24 track digital quality. Has your opinion changed since you discovered real studios? ■

"Not at all, it's just that our ST broke down. In fact the whole album was done with a £250 Roland 909 drum machine, which is even more street cred, though we would have preferred the Atari. Machines get better and cheaper all the time. £10,000 now gives you a complete mastering studio in the home." ■

At long last, third time lucky, and three hours late, the 3 Wize Men gather on the roof of their record company for some photographs. They mention the She Rockers, "wild women who'll happen in a big way". But, them apart, there's little respect for the home-grown scene. The Wize Men feel that it's mostly imitation rather than innovation. Even their illustrious label mates the Cookie Crew rap American, they say. There is a liking for the bizarre Amsterdam scene, a strain all of its own, but mostly they think about themselves and world domination as they prepare to set off on an extensive European, Japanese and American tour with their heavy, heavy monster sound. ■

As I step off the bus at my own South London housing estate following the final interview, I'm smashed in the gob before three huge men proceed to stamp all over my head. At least, they looked like giants from pavement height. My 'discontented and frustrated' assailants failed to get anything off me, and in fact left me with the present of a fat lip and some body bruises. At home I pulled out my notes and spat blood at them. The lyrics of Urban Hell winked back at me . . . "Stole her wedding ring and kicked her in the head, ran off laughing as she bled . . ." ■ GB Boyz, in effect, bussing out. More power to their message.

3 Wize Men, minus the gold, frankincense and myrrh.

Primspeak

Hello! My name's Peter, and the other day I interviewed The Primitives . . .

Prim Tracey Tracey sez: A&R men wear arranjumpers!

Tracey: "They smile a lot."

Steve: "They nod their heads."

Paul: "I've noticed they've got wide hips. Child-bearing hips."

Tracey: "They wear arranjumpers."

Steve: "They say 'looking at the reality of the situation . . .'"

Tracey: "The reason we signed to RCA is that they're just sort of letting us get on with it. They're not really pointing any fingers, saying we've got to do certain things."

Paul: "The people there are like kids really, the same age as us."

Steve: "Quite a few other labels were interested, but they all came out with these eight page manifestos of what The Primitives 'are going to be'."

Paul: "If we mentioned things like The Velvet Underground, they'd frown."

Steve: "They'd go, 'This is how your year is going to go'."

I must admit, I was hoping to cash in on my suspicions that The Primitives had become another Plasticine record company band, fuelled by the persistent rumours I'd heard about ex-drummer Pete Tweedy being booted out by RCA, rather than the famous "cat's testicles" story. All I was greeted with was a string of sincere monologues about the album, "sounding exactly the way we want it to".

"Everything has to take a backseat to that. Always. The day you start thinking, 'Oh, we need a hit single' is the day that you might as well go and stick your head in an oven."

At the moment they see themselves as fans, outsiders rather than seasoned pros like The Bunnymen. So when they get to support them it's, erm . . . well, what's it like?

Steve: "Orange."

Paul: "It was alright."

Tracey: "It wasn't too bad."

Steve: "Could've been worse."

Cripes! If they get any more articulate their heads will surely drop off! Taking that chance, Paul adds, "It was a humbling experience."

Plop.

Steve: "We were the scum, you know?" Talking of which, what was it like doing Thru The Flowers on Wogan?

"It was good fun," says Steve.

"Definitely," confirms Tracey. "It was a very strange day. The way we got the appearance . . . the producer was driving home and he heard us on Janice Long, liked us and phoned up our agency. The actual woman who does the music part on Wogan had diarrhoea that day so she couldn't do it. And apparently, that producer has now got the sack because the week that she was away they had all these really good bands on. Well we heard a rumour . . ."

The new Primitives single, Crash, is an indictment of the reluctance of western societies to absolve themselves from crude monetaristic values in favour of a more provenly beneficial policy along Keynesian lines, the like of which was implemented successfully in the American depression of the '30s. Actually, I'm lying. It's no radical departure to The Ramones-cum-Blondie trip that they've been previously trying to per-

It must not be forgotten, however, that they are creating some fine pop music, but then again, so do all the other ugly bastards whose records clog up the local Record And Tape Exchange. Clearly we're dealing with a band apart, a band who're going places.

They are Tracey, Steve (he plays the top string of his bass and is extremely affable), and the cute Paul - the guitarist and songwriter who stares at the floor doing his best to talk in that God-I'm-Pissed-Off-But-I'll-Just-Say-This manner. Among the places they'll probably be going to is teenyland! (A scary thought.)

"It could be quite fun really," ponders Steve. "No-one's ever asked us what colour our socks are."

"Or what flavour milkshake we like," says Tracey.

What flavour milkshake do you like? "Turnip," she replies, and Paul, the surrealist, goes for "bicycle flavour".

Crash is The Primitives' new single, a precursor to next month's album. Their deal with RCA is the culmination of many gruesome encounters with (cue screechy violins) A & R Men!

fect. Paul reckons they're a cross between Charles Manson and Petula Clark, and the rest of the band agree, so Paul puts the revolver back into his pocket. It accidentally fires, shooting his right kneecap clean off, but much to his credit he retains that pseudo-sexy sulky look throughout. Perhaps he's so miserable because he thinks all the music journos are fantasising about Tracey instead of him. However, this is untrue! I'd go for Steve.

I expect the new Primitives LP to be absolutely superb. They recorded it twice. They say that the way the group is progressing they can do anything they want within the parameters of The Primitives. Reggae? Blues? Soul? Heavy Metal? Rockabilly? Hip-Hop? House?

Steve says: "We are quite diverse." Still, his spectacles are cute.

Okay, Primitives! What would you do if you suddenly found that your gigs were being frequented by Kevins, Sharons, Darrens and Karens?

"We get that, don't we?" says Paul. "All The Bunnymen's audience had moustaches."

Tracey, the philanthropist, retorts, "It doesn't really matter. We're not prejudiced."

"We don't have any preconceived notions of what a Primitives fan should be," says the lovely Steve.

Suddenly, in the middle of the interview, I heard hordes of Ug! readers saying, Yes, that's all very well but why did the drummer really leave the band?

Steve: "The tape isn't long enough. The cat story is true."

Paul: "Whether or not he actually got kicked out of the band because of that is another matter."

Steve: "The letter from the RSPCA is genuine."

Tracey: "And they are actually my cats."

Steve: "I actually, sort of like, saw him do it."

But was that the reason why he left? "It all got blown out of proportion," says Paul.

"It just grew," squeals Tracey, and Steve aids her inability to finish off sentences by saying, ". . . and just got 20 times worse. There were lots of reason though."

Paul: "The usual reasons."

Tracey: "We're still friends."

Steve: "We went out the other night together and got drunk."

At this point your correspondent, in vague desperation at not being able to prize more than about six continuous words from The Primitives, asks them about interviews. A-ha!

Steve: "The very first interview we ever did was probably the worst because we had no idea as to what was going on, and this person called The Legend, in an anorak, showed up and sat cross-legged in a chair, and stared at his feet for half an hour, eating these fing liquorice allsorts, and didn't even hand 'em round either. And then after half an hour he looked up and said, 'So you're in a band then?' And that was all he said to us apart from 'Hello' and 'Goodbye'."

Tracey: "He just sat on this chair, twitching away."

Paul: "He's got problems."

Steve: "We weren't wearing anoraks or anything, so he couldn't relate, man!"

So what question would you most like to be asked?

Paul: "That one."

Do you feel that now you have been asked that question, an ambition has been realised?

Steve: "We may as well pack up and go home. What else is there left, now that we have been asked that question?"

Indeed, it will all, very probably, be downhill from this point onwards. Arguably the acid test for any band who make the transition from hobby to vocation is the ability of the songwriter to ignore the pressure of having to write songs in order to earn a living. Well, as you've probably guessed, The Primitives aren't exactly obsessed with self-analysis.

"Never took any notice of pressure," says Paul. "You just write the song when it comes into your head. That's the only way to do it. I'm not a songwriter right now, cos I'm not writing a song."

Good luck to them; the world is their amplifier.

Wayne manages the Primitives. I met him once and all I recall is him telling me over and over again to write only (and loads of) nice things about them. He is also the man that had the idea for those devastatingly side-splittingly hilarious 'Hitler European Tour' T-shirts. He tells me, with some pride, of how The Primitives will adorn the cover of this week's Melody Maker. Actually it's their singer Tracey Tracey who's on the cover, and if she looked like Henry Cooper, The Primitives would be as big as Stevie Wonder's book collection.

Dining out!

Lunch with The Stitched Back Foot Airman

From the outside, number 30 looks much the same as any other house in the street. Mid-terraced and situated, coincidentally, directly opposite a school — my old school! The passer-by would have no reason to suspect that the house in question harbours some of pop's most genuinely eccentric characters who've released an intoxicating new 12 incher on In Tape, called Shake Up!

- Inside, The Stitched Back Foot Airman household positively swells with the sweet sound of African music and the pungent aroma of something tasty cooking. It's Sunday lunchtime and I've been invited to dine, a rare moment of civility in this barbaric occupation of ours. And how revealing to observe the species in its natural habitat!
- "I hope you like cauliflower," sounds like an appropriate title to follow last year's Seven Egg-Timing Greats, doesn't it? Fortunately it isn't. Mike Farmer is, however, peering into a ferocious oven which appears to be full of the stuff. "We'd better eat now," he explains, "Our oven is stuck on one heat setting — high — and if we don't eat now it'll burn!" So, settled with a plate of delicious tuck and a half pint mug of plonk ("We don't own any wine glasses, sorry") Mike and co-Airman men Robin and Simon tell me about what makes the Stitch tick.
- Somewhere last year they've collectively taken up astrology, completed a final year at university, painted countless pictures, started to write a children's book and had a baby! (The last item credited solely to older brother Simon and partner!) And still found time to produce another quality release. Although the title track itself typifies the Stitched Back formula (the song is almost an anthem to their live audience), Shake Up diversifies beautifully, most noticeably with the inclusion of Tears In The Gutter, a chilling lament with an awful pathos.
- Simon: "The lyrics do have pathos but the music isn't sad. We mean to diversify like that, we deliberately combine odd things. Sometimes, we may do something musically which sounds like a nursery rhyme, but the lyric will be really straight."
- Robin: "It's because things aren't that simple and we'd rather not write about something and make it trivial. It means things have to be worked out. The whole creative thing is about making up your mind. We avoid making statements or formulating a manifesto. We prefer to suggest that people should be thinking about certain things and not listening to what we have to say about them."
- Simon: "What we like to create as a band, is that we all form part of a total texture of music that compels people. And if you can present words or ideas within that and become creative then that's got to be a good thing — without ever pretending you could change the world overnight or something."
- The real key to Stitch's complex clutter of noise and those now familiar wide-angled lyrics stays firmly locked within their characters — but I have seen the blue-print! The Stitched Back Foot Airman homestead epitomises the Stitched Back Foot Airman sound — organised chaos! Every room holds piles of neatly stacked mementos, records and tapes. Every wall is covered in hanging plants, posters and numerous pictures painted by the band and other housemates. It's a kleptomaniac's paradise, a haven for the sentimentally unhinged!
- Robin gives me a guided tour, chatting enthusiastically, admirably baring up to this invasion on his privacy.
- "Meet our cat, Quasimodo," he says affectionately upon entering Mike's room. He indicates a hideous mass of black fur which appears to be playing dead on the bed!
- "He's been on hormones for years," he offers by way of explanation. "There's every chance he could be a girl by now — lovely though isn't he?"
- It really couldn't have been any other cat, Quasi was made for the place — unusual characteristics and all! Know what I mean? Alex Kadis

STITCHED-BACK FOOT AIRMAN RECIPE

Stage One

One large heap of cauliflower, fry until slightly brown. Add ½ chopped red pepper, ½ chopped onion, several chopped tomatoes. Fry for a further two minutes.

Stage Two

Place mixture into ovenproof dish, slightly season and add oregano, tarragon and garlic to taste.

Stage Three

Smother in cheese sauce (secret ingredient: a dash of mustard!) and bake for 20-30 mins depending upon ferocity of gas cooker.

Volcano Suns die Wham

If you thought all Boston, USA was good for was as a venue for a tea party and as the setting for Cheers! read on... as Tony Fletcher discovered, it's one of the most fertile breeding grounds for new bands ever...

Think of the world-famous stars of the music world to have emerged from Boston in the last 15 years and you will have little cause to celebrate: the pomp rockers named after the city, heavy metal kids Aerosmith, and polite new-wavers The Cars. Nothing to write home about.

But then look at what Boston has sent to British shores in the last 12 months alone: Throwing Muses, Barrance Whitfield, Dumtruck, Three Colors, Del Fuegos, Gang Green, The Lyres. Add those who could be packing UK clubs if they wanted to — The Pixies, Scruffy The Cat, Big Dipper, Volcano Suns and Salem 66 — and you become aware of the gold mine waiting to be dug.

It is hard for any newcomer to Boston to believe that the local scene is supposedly at a low ebb: clubs abound, with an audience to fill them, record stores are proud to display local product, college radio is everywhere and even the big commercial stations avidly support local music, while the local press ranges from free fanzines to Rupert Murdoch's Boston Herald all writing effusively about the scene.

It's not easy to define which came first, the scene or the environment to support it; there are few people who've been round long enough to remember. But Boston has always had the right qualities for a cultural haven, qualities that show as soon as one enters the city. Here the depressing violent tension of most American cities is replaced by parks, rivers, and, if you can credit it, attractive skyscrapers. It is an educational forest — some 60 colleges and institutes boosting the city's population at peak times by a third with the instalment of some 250,000 students. And, perched on the north of the eastern seaboard, it is the most Anglophobic city in the States. This is where the pilgrims on the Mayflower set down (and also where the Boston Tea Party heralded the War Of Independence, though we can ignore that!), and it is not only the architecture that appears English. The youth of Boston seem to spend as much time looking east across the Atlantic for cultural tips as they do 200 miles south to New York, and certainly more than they do to the vast distance across to the west coast.

Thus it was no surprise that when punk took off, Boston jumped in headfirst, soaking up not just New York's offerings, but their British counterparts as well. Almost everyone over 20 tells you they bought the first Clash album on import, The Jam counted it as their spiritual home and by the time the ska boom took off, Boston was no more than weeks behind European trends.

Though the city was already known for producing Aerosmith and Boston as well as less mainstream acts like Willie Alexander and Jonathan Richman, it was in early 1978 that the scene really got going, bands springing up faster than clubs, radio or labels could follow, sending out an SOS for aused 'scenesters'. For 29-year-old Rick Harte, it was the call to put his love of music to use and start Ace Of Hearts Records as his production outlet.

"It was extraordinary, it really was," he says of the cultural outburst, "and I was pulled into being involved because there was a reason, not because I was bored. There was a series of talented people who were involved in a variety of different organisations. There was interest way outside the area, so it must have had some credibility. And then of course The Cars broke it open."

Though to British ears safe, sugar-sweet and a pox on punk, The Cars were a vindication of the potential of Boston's music. The industry flocked to the town, and yet the irony is that nobody else from that original crop saw similar success. The Lyres, The Neighborhoods, The Neats and The Stompers are all currently 'celebrating' a decade together, some with more to look forward to than others. But these are only the bands that stayed together. Many more came and went, splintering into still ongoing and intriguing projects, leaving behind vinyl that hints at how they must have been on their day. Like James Sexual Response. Like The Reducers. Like DMZ, The Files, The Turbines, The Sex Execs, New Model, Fingerprint, The Outlets, Dogmatics, The Oysters. And like Mission Of Burma...

Rick Harte describes Mission Of Burma as "the greatest innovative musical force that's come from this region", but then he did produce and release all their records. But Carter Alan, the highly influential Music Director on the city's main rock station WBCN, backs this up. "They were absolutely legendary. So many groups from around the country were influenced by them." By all accounts they were an attack on the senses.

"A Burma gig was the hippest thing in the world to say you'd been to," says Harte, "But it was loud and obnoxious and rooms used to get emptied all the time. It was anarchic, but there was a beauty to it."

Mission Of Burma got to make some successful records, but when driving force Roger Miller contracted a bad case of the hearing disease tinnitus the loud music had to stop. Miller remains active, both under his own name and with Birdsongs Of The Mesazoi, while Harte has just released the first 80-minute CD tracing Burma's history.

Ace Of Hearts was far from the only label — Throbbing Lobster, Rounder, Taang!, Soul Selects, Monolith and One Way have all put out vinyl in the last five years by more than one local group. And as the scene developed, so did other by-products. The Boston press includes two daily papers, a high-quality weekly in The Phoenix and several free fanzines, the most notable being a re-vamped Boston Rock, a generally well-written monthly covering local and national acts with enough depth to ensure credibility.

Then there is The Rumble, initially conceived as a "celebration of the local scene", according to Carter Alan. The Rumble is a live event which has grown into WBCN's dangerously powerful Battle Of The Bands. A frowned-upon concept though such may be in Britain, The Rumble is a vital stepping stone for many Boston acts, offering exposure not just on WBCN and in the local press, but to the music industry as a whole.

For example, Treat Her Right landed a major deal after being seen by record companies in the 1987 semi-finals. Big Dipper, themselves defeated by the aforementioned at the first hurdle, considered it "too big an opportunity to turn down". At the same time, guitarist Gary Walek reflects upon The Rumble Curse: "There's only ever one band that's won The Rumble that's really done anything, and that's 'Til Tuesday." Indeed, the last two winners — hardcore merchants Gang Green and pretty boy popsters Child hood — have advanced little since their victories.

Alan, who supervised The Rumble for seven years, admits that it has got too competitive. "Some people just put on a show to get a contract. Unfortunately, it's gotten so important that some bands break up if they don't win. This year we're going to make it smaller."

But if The Rumble has proved anything, it's that there is business in the Boston scene. 1987 saw the first annual Boston Music Awards, and there is even a Boston Rock 'N' Roll Hall Of Fame in the wings. Welcome to America.

The single most important factor in Boston's thriving scene is the colleges. With a whole city of youth constantly turning over, new blood is perpetually pumped into the industry and the business. Younger groups can rustle up some support, and older ones look for new faces to keep them going.

The colleges also provide future talent. Barrance Whitfield came to study in Boston from New Jersey. When he finished his course, "I went home for six months and found out how much I missed Boston". He came back to town, took a job in a record store and the rest may one day be history. Big Dipper's Bill Goffrier waved goodbye to five years of being in a mid-western band and came to town to study painting. "I came to Boston to get away from music and spent two whole years avoiding the music scene!" Fortunately, in that task he failed.

Human Sexual Response dig mud

The colleges' other vital contribution is college radio. "It's unbelievable, it's the best in the country," says O Positive's Dave Herlihy, who himself worked on a college station for three years. Bill Abbatte, Local Music Director for WFNX, a unique alternative commercial radio station that British music lovers would die for, also started at college radio. "Most college radio stations don't have any personality. But here there are stations like ZBC, MBR, ERS, HRB . . . and people listen to these stations all the time."

And they have an impact. Dumtruck and Big Dipper are just two bands who decided to take things further after strong reaction to their 'radio tapes' — demos that the local stations play. Eight different tapes got onto regular rotation on WFNX last year, and even WBCN — unlike almost every major rock station across the country — regularly airs demos.

"There's a certain way you approach things as a band in Boston and if the music's any good, you know it can work," says Herlihy. "Firstly you make a demo and get that to the college stations; that will help your gigging situation. At the gigs you get a mailing list going, you start putting up posters, and if you're doing all this correctly, BCN will put you in The Rumble. You should then make sure you've got a record ready to follow up your Rumble." O Positive followed all these steps and it evidently worked: their second release has gone Top Ten with college stations nationwide.

Boston's reputation is now so strong that it acts as a magnet. Three Colors quit college in Connecticut to hit a music capital. The Pixies' Black Angel did much the same. "I decided to drop out of University and form a band. I moved to Boston because it was smaller than Los Angeles and I was too scared to go to New York. It's a smaller pond and it's easier to become a bigger fish in that pond."

Likewise Seth Tiven of Dumtruck. "I wanted to move, and I narrowed it down to New York or Boston. And it just seemed way more livable in Boston. It's got green places . . . New York's too depressing."

And Throwing Muses. "We all left school to make it in the band," says Kristin Hersh. "We decided on Boston because we preferred it to New York — it was an easier scene to cope with."

Says Bill Abbatte of all the musical immigrants, "They come to Boston because they know there's a place to play and that there's an audience that will listen to them . . . Whether or not they actually make it depends on how good a musician they are, but at least they get the opportunity."

In a city with some 1,500 working bands — as many as 500 playing original pop/rock — that opportunity has to be seized. "The level of healthy competition forces people to take their ideas a lot more seriously," says Bill Goffrier. "They've got to really hone down their art and their craft and their business because everybody plays the same clubs."

And come the weekends, these clubs are packed. The likes of The Paradise, The Rat, The Channel, The Bear's and Axis might, on one weekend night alone, feature a dozen local acts with a couple of visiting national club bands between them. And still the camaraderie among groups remains: when local venue Jack's burnt down, taking two acts' equipment with it, over 20 bands performed a benefit gig to replace the gear.

The city splits into many musical camps. The largest is also the loudest, and includes as its backbone those aforementioned who have seen a decade's service. Though the Del Fuegos never broke nationally, as was once expected, they are still giants in town — helped by calling their last LP Boston, Ma no doubt — but could soon be chased out by Scruffy The Cat, while The Bags, with a debut LP just out on Restless, have already made their mark. The Classic Ruins have seen long-term duty, and The Zulus — who have an aggressive minimalist sound and include ex-Human Sexual Response members — are many people's next tip for the top. The Titanics, Lemonades, Dharma Bums and Shake The Faith have all hit well with their debut vinyl.

On a more rootsy level, Barrence Whitfield is "a legend waiting to happen", according to Carter Alan. Certainly his local standing has been much helped by his European success. Treat Her Right's mournful blues should see them make their mark in '88, while The Matweeds are everyone's favourite shambles.

Throwing Muses and The Pixies are grouped together through shared management and being on 4AD, and likewise Big Dipper, Volcano Suns and Salem 66 are forced together through all being on Homestead. O Positive and Heretrix both owe a lot to English sound in general and The Bunnymen in particular, but each have made a strong enough vinyl impact to suggest long features.

Dumtruck are one of the city's better travelled acts, with three excellent albums behind them and, like Three Colors — who my own involvement with prevents me discussing further! — can pack Boston venues but prefer to spend time working new horizons.

Don't confuse The Raindogs with The Cavedogs, though both consist mainly of imported musicians (the former including former SLF sticksman Jim O'Reilly), and have just released excellent vinyl debuts that walk the perfect thin line between aggression and commerciality. Dogzilla, Tribe and One Life are all newer names that defy easy categorisation and should be watched closely.

Then there are the straight pop acts, wanting a slice of what The Cars and 'Til Tuesday have tasted: New Man, Skin, Down Avenue, The Great Divide and Runaway Dan in descending order of potential.

Almost all the above stand a chance of making at least a Stateside impact and yet we have not even touched on the heavy metal, folk, blues, jazz, reggae or rap scenes. The latter two are particularly strong — check out The I-Tones or the Boston Goes Dief compilation — but to its shame, Boston has a history of racial problems and the scenes do not interact closely enough.

Nevertheless, even if people want to say the great days have gone, the talent is still there. And to uncynical eyes and ears, it shows little sign of disappearing.

COCO, STEEL AND LOVEBOMB

COCO, STEEL AND LOVEBOMB are somewhat reticent about revealing their identities, perhaps because there are seven members in the band, and not enough names to go round. Certainly, the three Lovebombers I talked to were quite undecided who exactly they were, so we'll just call them Chris, Lene, and Marc.

Actually, they're undecided about a lot of things, such as the musical hole they should be pigeoned in, and my wary suggestion of hip hop is neither confirmed nor denied; however, their current tastes speak volumes on the subject of diversity, from the already-hijacked Donny Osmond - for their Love Puppy 45 - Humphrey Bogart and the Carpenters. And then there's those currently under consideration - Carmen Miranda, The Shangri-Las, the Saturday Night Fever soundtrack, and Noel Coward.

"We're into Noel Coward, especially that record, At The Desert Inn, Las Vegas." Does this mean they plan to include the Master (as theatrical types know him) in the mix? They're not sure. "The record a bit scratched." I suggest that sampling the scratches might make things even more interesting - an idea for which I expect handsome payment, should it make vinyl. Talking of that sort of thing, any law-suits pending? Not so far. Love Puppy presented no problems on account of Mr Osmond liking the record.

Chris: "I think people'll only be bothered about it if you start selling a lot of records. As they say, 'Where there's a hit, there's a writ'."

They've got a lot up their communal sleeve, these folk - it's the same sleeve that brought you Honey, whose single, More Wild Than Honey, was described in Underground's first issue as "dead good", or words to that effect. Honey are currently "on ice", but soon to thaw out with a new single.

In the meantime, C, S And L continue with their own recordings, are planning a video to go with the latest 12-inch, The Sound Of Europe, and are also toying with the possibility of live work. Robert Cohen

JIM JIMINEE

They were very nearly Jim, Jim and Bingy! They could have become Jim, Bing And Jimmy Dean. But thankfully a moment's sense prevailed and JIM JIMINEE saw the light of day.

You may well have already come across Jim Jiminee and their pearly pop style. Janice Long has worn out her copy of their dole-boy anthem, Do It On Thursday, and their "wacky" Herald-driving, scooter-riding video caught many by surprise when it was aired on The Chart Show. Now you've got a chance to sample just a little more of the band when their first album, Welcome To Hawaii, is released by Cat And Mouse Records.

"It's really diverse," reckons Lindsay, the band's talkative, accident-prone drummer. "It's got loads of different styles but they're all tied together."

"There IS a definite Jim Jiminee sound," explains Nick, the beatnik-bearded bass player. "You can listen to a track and think, 'oh, this sounds like Jim Jiminee', but a lot of the tracks are in a very different style."

Lindsay: "There's a track called Two Brothers and it could be a reggae track but it's played by anti-reggae people. Our engineer described it as white toss-boys play reggae. And that's quite a good thing to say actually because it was right, it was deliberately played in a really square way, in a really white way!"

For all its diverse styles, Welcome To Hawaii still retains a kind of eccentric pop continuity previously only captured by the likes of XTC. There's a kind of vague Englishness about the whole proceedings too, a quality which is unintentionally enforced by what the band describes as their album cover "concept".

Lindsay: "It's a weak joke. We were just thinking about how crap some holiday resorts in Britain really are - you go on your holiday and think what a great time you had! So we had this idea of looking like we'd been told we were going to some kind of paradise and then actually arriving looking well pissed-off because it isn't actually paradise, it's Bognor! That's why we're looking so pissed-off on the album cover. Normally we're very happy people!"

I'm sure you are! Chris Hunt

ALL FOR MOTHER

Claiming to be a bunch of "comfortable shirt wearers", ALL FOR MOTHER graced the Tip Sheet back in August and immediately had the chief chiefs at Polygram drooling into their G&T's. A subsequent second demo and video underlines their pop potential - with a stab at rhythmic dancey stuff - and they now claim a burning desire to be whisked to Compass Point to record their debut LP. Listed influences include Talking Heads, John Martyn, The Waterboys and someone called The Beatles, which should give you the idea of just how damn confused they are. Still, they play with some oily slickness and have a penchant for penning nice pop. . . so more power to their plectrum.

THE CHAIRS

THE CHAIRS are the classic English band. Introspective, cynical and wistful in equal doses, they are due some major pop success. Their songs have more hooks than a trawlerman's line plus the lyrical intensity of a Costello or Dylan.

"For most people," says singer Paul, "being in a band is a career move. For us it's a vocation. We didn't form the band by putting ads in the press and waiting for people in inflatable boots to turn up."

"I was drawing this cartoon the other day about the stock exchange. It featured a human turd speaking on the telephone. A friend came up and said, 'you should be a cartoonist'. He didn't understand that if I wanted to, I'd have to put in as much time and hard work as I have in music."

There is a feeling that The Chairs are only a short haul away from recognition. Although some may not agree.

"A friend of mine who did sociology at university said I was typical of a certain type. . . the post-war under-achiever." Well let's hope he fails his degree. Steve Morris

THE GROOVEYARD

THE McTELLS

THE McTELLS are an underground beat group. You won't have read much about them in the music papers, but that doesn't mean they're not busy or, in their own terms, successful. With a pretty traditional three man line-up - bass, guitar/vocals and drums, just what makes them so special?

Mark, drummer, and the man behind the Frank label which brought us 14 Iced Bears as well as The McTells, explains.

"Those other so-called 'indie' groups aren't really independent. We see ourselves as the ultimate underground band, we don't want a record deal, agents, all the business side. We want total control, to do exactly what we like. We record in a church hall with a 4-track because it sounds better than any studio."

So underground is an attitude, and this is reflected in the products - a 4 track seven inch EP on Frank called Jessie Man Ray; a flexidisc with two tracks by The McTells and one apiece by Rig Veeda and The Twins which has sold over 2,000 copies through various fanzines and their mail order service; a track on the Gimme Shelter LP and video; and two C30 cassettes. The first of these C30s sold about 200, the second, called Expecting Joe, is just out. It contains 14 new, short songs which are guaranteed to really annoy your soulboy brother, but bring tears of joy to anyone who likes a healthy dose of noise combined with some brilliant tunes, all in bursts lasting under two minutes. That's not bad going for a group who have only been in existence for a year.

The McTells are fond of playing live, but not always so keen on the situations they have to play in.

Paul (singer): "We did Aston University - there was a lazer show, then the 1812 Overture, then we came on to play to all these people with beards sitting around in wicker chairs. We soon cleared the room. That was probably the best McTells gig ever."

THE ATOM SPIES

"No. I'll tell you who we're pop's answer to. If you notice in films like the good Twilight Zones and I Was A Communist For The FBI, all the communists/aliens were in suits and they've all got this funny look about them, stiff suits and stiff looks, and you just know that they're aliens."

Chandra Blunt, singer and guitarist with THE ATOM SPIES, is expostulating on the image of the four sinister-looking earthlings (so I'm assured) that comprise their line-up. These enigmatic social commentators of the space-age are arousing unusual measures of attention from alien audiences.

Chandra continues: "I'm really into Philip K Dick. Our first single, Now The Adverts, is very similar to the sort of things he writes about - logical extensions of the present. The logical exten-

AND ALSO THE TREES

THE GROOVEYARD's music is best described as... freaky, psychedelic, free-jazz, groovy, spontaneous, '60s, drug-induced, melodic, whirley bird, loopy, frothy-tongued, harmonious, space-hopper, punk. It's the kind of music you hear in tacky party scenes on TV programmes like I Dream Of Jeannie, or in films like I Love You Alice B Toklas. Where the women, or chicks if you insist, wear op art dresses and the men wear stripy tank tops and tight trousers.

The Grooveyard are wild live. They make spontaneous combustion into an art form. They are aerobic, the lead singer lying on the floor peddling an imaginary upturned bicycle.

The songs, like Jesus Plays Football Every Sunday, and the new single, Peter, (on Playroom Discs) are swathed in harmony, Satanic flute, manic guitar. In brief, The Grooveyard are bloody weird.

Are you aware you look like total dickheads when you play live?

"Hell yes," says Simon, he of a million and one crazy dances and manic vocals. "That's the whole point. There's nothing worse than people trying to look cool. I don't know how people can play music and not move to it. It should take you over."

The Grooveyard - all of them - are possessed on stage. It has a good effect on the audience too; the coldest of people soon let go. The British, I suppose, love to see people make prats of themselves.

"If you hide it you're a bigger prat than if you let go." Johnny Dee sion of a TV advert is three-dimensional hologramatic humans appearing through the TV screen. It's a spoofy critique of adverts that raises a wry smile."

The Atom Spies' obsession with our degeneration into the next century is expanded on in The Status Of Jeffrey Archer.

"I got the idea that after the 30th successive Conservative government they'll start building statues of themselves, and Jeffrey Archer will be the symbol of what culture should be."

The Atom Spies' new single is called You Breathe, You Steal, and it's an EP of glorious freneticism. In due course they will slyly seep into the hearts of the discerning punter. Rest assured. Peter Perturbed

Somehow, AND ALSO THE TREES, the Worcestershire band responsible for one of the greatest indie albums of the '80s, Virus Meadow, are still better regarded in Europe than on native soil. Formed in 1979, they toured with The Cure, it was an intense, searing live experience before such passion was fashionable. They signed to Reflex after a self-help cassette and the critically praised Shantell debut single. In those days All About Eve used to ring up asking for support gigs!

Today, four singles and three albums later, they're readying the tentatively-titled The Mill Pond Years for April release, and they are still Simon Huw Jones, vocals, Justin Jones, guitar, Steven Burrows, bass and Nick Havas, drums. Still they make a darkly, almost filmic atmospheric. Music that soars with an exhilarating intensity.

While others sing of the cities, dancing in the streets with mock happiness, Simon embraces the elation of a despairing melancholy and cites Thomas Hardy and French existentialists as influences. Inevitably, he writes deeply literary, strongly visual songs, rich with images of dusk and dawn - rural hymns to the power of an almost pagan nature.

"I believe in the pagan gods more than the Christian God. We live in Moreton On The Hill and there used to be a village on the site but it was wiped out by the Black Plague. It's a mysterious place and I can feel a power in the ground, something strong that gives me more belief in the powers of the earth. I think people forget about the world and the country and the power of nature."

"The new single, Shaletown, is about the move from an agrarian to an industrial society with the wind from the sea going across the land and picking up the chaff - which is symbolic of people during the agricultural revolution, who left the land to go and live and work in towns. A lot of them must have found it frightening to be out of their environment. There's no right or wrong about it, it's just evolution but I wish I could do more to make people aware of the beauty of the countryside and what they are losing."

And, Shaletown is a superbly convincing opening for those previously unconvinced by the call of the wild. Mike Davie

The Janitors in Tax Exile Sham!

Underground, in yet another all-expenses-spared exposé, has gathered together irrefutable evidence that proves, conclusively, that those original purveyors of the lank-haired greaseball groove, The Janitors, have defected to the Eastern Bloc. Indeed, we believe that they are aiding wholeheartedly the plot to overthrow our political system.

They continue to work in the West under the barely believable guise of 'legendary' capitalist rock stars, thus enabling themselves to freely ply their evil trade of systematic indoctrination across the free world.

SECRETS Look at the facts. The forthcoming Janitors album has been given two titles in order to throw the unsuspecting public at large into a state of confusion and panic. It will be known as both Kiss Me Cod Eyes and The Return Of The Demi-Gods. Yet we have discovered from an insider that the quartet have been secretly referring to the album as AMERIKA throughout the extensive four month recording sessions. These sessions are known to have cost in excess of £200,000 and are believed to have been totally underwritten by the Kremlin on instructions approved of at the very highest level.

Tellingly, Greenhouse studios, where the komrades have been in almost constant residence since last October (October is an important month on the Soviet calendar) is situated close to London's East end, rather than the more fashionable West London studios favoured by other rock heroes.

EXILE Ug were first alerted to this insidious plot to overthrow Western society when Dentover, head of the Janitors politburo, announced that he was going into tax exile last month. An eagle eyed cub journalist in the office noted that a cheap day return to Calais did not actually qualify anyone for tax exemption under non-residency rules. On further investigation a spokesman for the Inland Revenue stated that someone with accredited PER returns of £200pa for the last tax year did not actually need to go into tax exile. It was decided to send our ace undercover reporter on the trip to Calais. His damning evidence is clear for all to see in the photo's published right/left.

The Janitors are thought to have been recruited by the KGB during last winter's tour of Eastern Europe. It is well documented that the foursome were arrested for smoking on a Warsaw railway station, and it is possible that a period of indoctrination and coercion took place at this point.

Denton's bizarre childhood sexual perversions have always left him vulnerable to a blackmail plot.

SUCK The most worrying aspect of this whole sordid business is how The Janitors have secretly adapted their bloated beer belly blubbering into the sort of rutting boar rock favoured by our cousins across the Atlantic. They have consciously aimed Cod Eyes at the soft underbelly of the American society. While former fans on this side of the pond will cry "Sell out", the Yanks are embracing this dangerous music with open arms, oblivious to the true message hidden beneath tracks like Happy (In My Ignorance) which openly mocks New York AIDS victims and macho rockers. There's another 'genuine' country song titled When The Sun Comes Up Again which Den describes as a "Nashville jobby" complete with squeezebox and geetar pickin', with which they intend to sucker the ultra right wing Jesus belt into submission.

ARSE The album possibly contains a secret groove, developed in the Moscow labs by top Soviet scientists, which plays a subliminal propaganda message alongside the music. The listener is brainwashed without realising it. The excitement of motor mayhem tracks like Spin, which features the Indianapolis 5000 and Denton playing a pinball machine during a live jam by the rest of the komrades, carries the listener on in a frantic wave of excitement, little realising that they are being indoctrinated.

There's a single, Moonshine, aimed at The Waltons and Smokey And The Bandit types, while the Janitors have hit sampling hard on Half Way To A Happenin' featuring Jimi Hendrix, Grace Slick, Dave Brubeck and Louis Armstrong. It's all a long way from home, and the groups passing farewell is a track called Get A Job, described by Denton as "a plea to all my lazy Northern friends to get off their arses".

HAEMORRHOIDS Overheard in a Calais brasserie Den, real name Andrewski Jonavich Charlova Dentonov, boasted "It's not cheap shit. It's over-produced and slick middle of the road gold top product. Why wait until you make it to sell out? Do it now. I need big bucks, I've got a habit to keep up, we've been in the studio so long I need the money to have my haemorrhoids grafted back to my nose."

MAGGIE This comment can be dismissed as yet another smokescreen. Ug thinks the government should act now. Close 'em down Maggie. Ronnie Randall

The Shamen's guide to Soho

8.30 pm: In the basement bar of one of London's horrifically trendy boozers, Colin Angus waxes lyrical on The Shamen's most sensual new single, Knature Of A Girl — yes, that's knature with a K!

"It's a kind of metaphor for the psycho-sexual person. The song itself is about the irresistibility of temptation, the glamour and exploitation of sex, our need to be submissive. It's about the self-destructive side of sexuality but in the context of looking for honest, true, real sexuality, which is an ongoing thing."

Chief Sha-man, Colin, guitarist and vocalist with the Scottish songsters of contemporary psychedelia, is, he tells us, something of a sex connoisseur. In fact, during the band's recent European tour the band personally undertook to visit every single red light district that their curriculum afforded! Apparently, they were pretty impressed with what they saw, so the Ug squad decided to throw caution to the wind and take young Colin on an all expenses spared whirlwind extravaganza through the streets of our Sin City to see how it compares with our European partners in slime!

8.50pm: It's brass monkey-land in Soho (perhaps this wasn't such a fine idea after all . . .) and business is slack at Madame Jojo's.

"You just cannae get decent pornography here — it's just so poor," complains Colin as he surveys the scene before him with some consternation. "The Shamen have an appreciation of pornography because of its honesty and its extremity. I can't really explain why it's a fascination — there's certain things that fascinate me but that don't turn me on — and some of them are pretty bizarre!"

9.00pm: Next stop, The Bargain Book store, which appears to sell well-known copies of every novel ever written by Sven Hassler, Arthur Ackley and a host of other non-entities who missed the Booker prize by a long chalk! But Colin's porno-sensors are activated Pornadelia in Big Smoke!

Would you buy a used Dansette from this man? (Colin Angus pic by Ronnie Randall) and he's onto something. "Behind those books are the real hard-core stuff. This is the ridiculous side of censorship. The shops have to stock a certain percentage of straight literature in order to be allowed to sell pornography, so they buy up all these awful second-hand books which remain on the shelves for years. I'm aware of the arguments against pornography but, for example, in Sweden in every newsagents you go into, they display completely uncensored porn. It's real close-up, in detail stuff! But at the same time they don't show you Starsky And Hutch on the television 'cause that's got guns and violence in it. And that, to me, is a far healthier attitude towards censorship because there's nothing wrong with seeing a picture of two people involved in the sexual act 'cause it's the most common thing in the world."

Have you actually been into any of these book shops before now? "Oh, yeah. In fact last year we were in London and we bought lots of porno magazines to make porno/political montages, with pictures of The Royal Family, The Pope and various other public figures. We're into the idea of using porno against people in that way. If you see a member of the Royal Family presented like that it puts them into perspective and really knocks them off their pedestal. It also appeals to the schoolboy in me!

9.25pm: Maybe we picked the perverts' night off, but Pussy Galore's lobby is desolate, save for the lethargic doorman eating his sarnies in front of the small monochrome set to which he is glued. I got to wondering whether that predicted wave of neo-Victorian morality had crept up on us without my noticing. I also couldn't help wondering whether The Shamen's porno habit wasn't just a psychedelic gesture in the face of the terror which reigns in the '80s.

Isn't it all a part of the 'liberated body equals liberated mind' ethic of the '60s then Col?

"No! And I don't see psychedelia as a cultural phenomenon that was born and died in the '60s either. The Shamen really need a different word to describe what we do because psychedelia has all those old connotations, we call our music psychotronic but it isn't sufficient. You won't find anything in Shamen songs that exhorts people to take their clothes off! What we are interested in is the original motivation behind the '60s which was the desire to transform consciousness, to seek a more complete and honest existence. We live in pretty serious times and there's still room for a psychedelic movement, though if people think that by getting involved in it they won't have to deal with reality, they're wrong. That's where we differ from the '60s."

Our immediate reality, meanwhile, was the reality of the '80s, a sorry sight at that. So, this was Thatcher's Soho. Stripped of its former glory and a license to thrill, it flashes the best of its limp promises, Girls, Girls, Girls!, performing spent theatrics in a tacky booth for the princely sum of 50p. Pausing en route for mug-shots, Colin despairs at the neon ad, a rather diluted attempt to tantalise with 'Male/female duos in kinky sex double act'. To be honest, Colin looks like he'd rather sit at home and watch his fridge de-frost.

"Would you look at that!" he declares in mid-pose. "Real porno is one step down the line from real sex and you're not even getting that here."

9.50 pm: Oh well. Not so much as a raised eyebrow from Colin. Can't say we blame him really, Dame Soho's become rather tame in her old age. Tell us the worst, Colin, how does London's porn compare with what you've seen on your travels abroad?

"It's not nearly as honest or as explicit. It seems to be something peculiar to the British culture, this avoidance of sexuality. In lots of Eastern cultures their religious art depicts the sexual act, and it's quite explicit too. As far as the pornography here goes, nothing is what it says it is. Everything's sealed up in plastic bags."

And?

"Well, I'd have to say that for sheer honesty Sweden wins, although Italy was quite good for the specialist stuff!"

"As I said, what I appreciate is the honesty and the extremity of porn, but what you get here . . . it's just cheating people."

"I reckon the video for Knature Of A Girl is more exciting than anything you'll find here. It's got some live-action models in it. They're actually friends and girlfriends but they do some pretty risqué things. It's very erotic, but I don't know how much of it will end up on the cutting room floor."

Sorry folks, those video out-takes have already been bagged by a certain Mr Randall — purely in the interest of art, of course... Alex Kadis

TIP SHEET

NEW TAPE DEMOS

● In the hot seat this month is Adam Sweeting, music critic for The Guardian (a national newspaper) who's currently branching into radio. Adam is a polite, mild-mannered young man on the surface, but has been known to become a savage literary animal, tearing the limbs from numerous pop stars with his vitriolic prose style. He did active service for five years on Melody Maker as training for this, leaving the paper after a two year stint as Features Editor.

While Adam screamed and yelled his comments, Tip Sheet supremo Julian Henry nodded his head and scribbled notes.

The numbered system after each review refer to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ.

BIG SUR (44 Durham Road, London W5) had Adam pondering on their name. "Big Sur. . ." he mused, "Isn't that a town in California?"

He was not dancing with joy over their music: "Sounds just like Joy Division, doesn't it? Around ten years ago this might have been considered revolutionary, but now it sounds about as dangerous as something like Smoke On The Water."

He continued: "Did you know that there's a guitar shop in Folkestone where they fine you if you play Smoke On The Water or Stairway To Heaven on one of their guitars?"

How interesting. However, it would appear that Big Sur would not be terribly welcome in said establishment if the cassette we listened to was anything to go by.

SHRUG (0642 612385) pleased Adam with their pile of lyrics and explanations behind their existence. For some moments he ferretted around among the pile of papers, emerging from time to time to exclaim: "My God, they've got three drummers!" or, "There's a song here called Sir Walter Raleigh's Fast Food Takeover."

What about the music?

"Well, I wouldn't buy it, the vocal sounds a bit too rough for my liking, but they've tried hard with the packaging so that counts for something. I like the cartoons they've drawn, it's a pity that the music isn't as good."

"One thing I notice about the music, it seems to have an incredibly small view of things, it's like the group is very wrapped up in their own little world. I hear lots of tapes that suffer from that problem, there is nothing here that relates to the rest of the world."

4 5 8 7

T-10 (01-520 6568) make music that can loosely be termed 'commercial'. That is to say, they appear to have a vague grasp of what is going on. They combine a hip-hop beat with funky guitar breaks and odd flashes of heavy metal. "Yes, this is more entertaining," agreed Adam. "This lot have definitely got the idea, and if they tarted this up a bit they could probably flog it to a major label. It reminds me a bit of Age Of Chance, and I reckon that if they had access to a semi-decent studio they could probably do something quite good."

The band describe themselves as hot, cool and heavee, which means that they're either pretty groovy people or have been watching too many of those naff Miller Lite adverts on the TV.

7 6 6 7

THE DICE CLUB (125 Fordwych Road, London NW2) include in their ranks a one-time Sounds journalist, Phil Bell, whom Adam remembers well: "Ah yes, I remember going to Poland with Phil to cover a Budgie concert," he confessed. "I'm not so sure about his band though, this sounds like a cross between The Jam and Foreigner. I also think that they should change their name as The Dice Club suggests that they take risks, but I don't hear many risks being taken here."

The group, however, appear confident in their press release: "We have been building a formidable reputation on the London circuit," they grandly state. Well, if that is the case they will not be overly concerned by our lack of enthusiasm at their music.

3 4 5 2

THE SECRET GARDENERS (23 Wellington Street, Northwich, Cheshire) like to fiddle around with synthesisers. "Yes, well, they're not going to give Vince Clarke sleepless nights, are they?" said Adam cruelly. "It's at times like this that you actually appreciate someone like Erasure. This group need to do more work, buy or steal more gadgets and generally try harder."

"This is too twee by half. I remember Eyeless In Gaza used to do this sort of thing five or six years ago." The band meanwhile sent us a packet of garden seeds with their cassette, an odd gesture and one that can only be interpreted as some sort of surreal marketing gimmick.

ORANGE CAR TEST (c/o Front Unit, 87 Great Eastern Street, London EC2) sent a friendly letter that suggested that we check them out live. Hmmm. We'll come back to you on that one. "This is what I call traditional," said Adam of their music. "These guys don't rip off anyone new or interesting, and they sound more like Free than anyone else I can think of."

However, after a couple of songs, things got better. A good guitar player we both agreed, possibly in the Wilko Johnson/Bill Carter (a Screaming Blue Messiah) mould. "You know what they've done wrong here?" said Adam. "They've put the tracks in the wrong order. The second and third songs are far more appealing, despite the limited format of the music."

6 7 6 6

DHSS (56 Deltic, Glascote Heath, Tamworth, Staffs) have gone to some trouble with their packaging, and it is with some regret that we must describe it as a pitiful failure. I mean, come on. Who on earth wants to listen to a band called the Department Of Happiness And Self Satisfaction?

We will try to be more sympathetic on the music. "Well, they've actually used an engineer and a studio," said Adam hopefully. "There are lots of ideas here which is a good thing, and they know how to use their voices well. It's just a pity they don't look more exciting."

THE REAL McCOY (32 Watling House, Woolwich Common, London SE18) came close to stealing the Tape Of The Month Award. Their first song starts just like Pleasant Valley Sunday by The Monkees, but instead of dribbling off into some dreadful power pop work-out, they hold it right there, remaining on that one vital riff for several minutes. And the result is quite pleasing.

"These people have a good sense of how to use their instruments. I suppose they must have done it before," commented Mr Sweeting. "It has a definite up feel, and there's something quite urgent about the music that makes you want to hear more. It's quite mainstream, quite like Madness used to sound, and it's surprising that they look so young as they sound quite polished. Definite commercial potential."

So The Real McCoy get the thumbs up from this month's Critical Pen Pushers.

7 6 6 8

THE SIRENS (27 Heavitree Road, Exeter) have sent in their efforts before. I cannot be certain what we said about them then, but this new offering is a live tape, and it fell rather foul of Our Man From The Guardian's keen critical sense.

"Garbage. No-one would have touched this in 1977 let alone 1988. For God's sake, take it off, I can't stand anymore."

So Adam is not the band's biggest fan. Surely there must be some positive words of advice he can pass on? Where should they go from here? What should they change?

"Well, just about everything as far as I'm concerned, but they might as well start with a new line up and new songs," said Adam.

The Underground view is that the band should ignore these heartless words. Turn to the Lord boys, and ye shall be saved.

THE WAIT (20 Newton Gardens, Bondgate, Ripon, N Yorks) say that they read every copy of Underground from cover to cover. Blimey lads, don't you have anything better to do with your time? But OK, your crawling has paid off, we'll be decent about the tape. What about it Adam?

"It's nice to hear some space for a change, and the music is pretty good except for the vocal which to me sounds a bit dodgy. It's not that he can't sing, it's more like he's trying to be a bit cool and it doesn't really work."

Adam did not like the second song, though, so we shall not record his comments any further. Instead we will concentrate on a well-meaning suggestion in the band's letter that says we should give away a free cassette of unknown bands with each copy of Underground. A charitable idea yes, and something that the bands included would undoubtedly find beneficial.

Unfortunately us scruffy shufflers down at Ug barely have the resources to club together for a measly packet of Woodbines once a week, let alone to start flinging money around on free cassettes.

3 4 5 4

TIP

These are tapes that have been spooled and de-chromed — or bagged and passed on — from Ug! HQ. Dave Henderson, the invisible editor, presides over this incisive report on the cassettes that live "in the cupboard"...

Magdelene Fields are a four-piece from Seahouses in County Durham (720669), and their seven-track expose is introduced with two fine tracks before the techno disasters set in. Led by M A Fields, the group produce lusty pop ballads with a tinkling guitar thinly disguising some bittersweet memories. Pop music that needs a big prod and large bucks for support.

The Lungs (Bangor 352324) have a great name, nicely obscure packaging and a sound reminiscent of removal men beating up a rockabilly storm on teacheests. Subtly being out of their vocabulary, it's impossible to hear the singer, but his moaning diatribe gives the throbbing noise an authentic hue. Sadly I fear they're in search of a cleaner sound which may easily place them in the GM Vauxhall Opel league of also-rans.

SW Cochrane is the victim of a lost address, and an accompanying picture makes him look as if he's just awoken from a dreadful nightmare. But his music — now that's a lyrical delicacy that certainly deserves more attention. Any man intent on drawing fish on his tape warrants a better life and SW's songs are in the right place. Neat pop with a few effects thrown in for max effect. Where are you now, SW?

Purge Of The Dance (0271 71397) are an unassuming three-piece from Devon whose 4AD-like noise suggests greater horizons. From the brief four-track outburst you might surmise that they're bursting to be colossal, emotive and evocative, and who are we to deny them that pleasure? Yeah, it's an awful name, but they write good songs and have a level of musicianship that bodes well for the future.

Passion's Play's demo came in a nice pink sleeve with little in the way of news or communication. The two tracks were "jaunty" and "sprightly", but they left me wondering if they were enough to colour life's indistinct tapestry.

The Guilt Parade scribbled "Hot Doggy's" over something they sent to us — leaving me in no doubt that they were wild and crazy northerners, like myself. In fact, they're from Harrogate (0423 65556), and they float disharmonically over a minimalistic backing, creamed lightly by a female vocal line. As a cake of fresh cream stature, they're a touch stale musically but they squirt in the right direction.

The Pyromaniacs are a damp squib in pop's eye. Fine songs for sure, with minimal to bad production without doubt, since their demo four-track wobbles and dies through under-production. But these chaps have their heart on the floor and their feelings open to the world. . . the kind of sound that many a manic depressive might turn on to.

Ted Baxter had their tape unceremoniously stuck down the back of the cupboard. . . but our designer cat found it and, although they've probably moved from their Cornwall base (020 856 3623) that dreadful name should be remembered. The sound of swinging guitars and moody melodies twang along with the greatest of ease, precious pop being the order of the day.

The Incarnate have Looking Out The Oral Window — a four-track demo — available for two squids and a sae (from 17 Pine Way, East Grinstead, West Sussex RH19 4JR). It's hardly major fodder (but that's admirable), more a spooky backlash to pulsing rhythms and overdubbed vocal trickery. This kind of stuff always wears well with your Ed (who has a box set of Throbbing Gristle LPs, 'nuff said).

The Hurting Kind have been part and parcel of The Grizzelders, Pineapple Trashcan and The Hush, and their uncontrollable rock chunkiness brought to mind the Medway explosion from Pop Rivets to Thee Mighty Caesars.

SIN are from Northern Ireland (026585 395) and have the potential to turn out squidgy poptones that look destined to be lapped up by the Then Jerico school of post-punk accessibility.

Pig Out! from Bedford (Bedford 216831) have a six-track cassette selection which suggests that they're coming from a zone which successfully mixes diverse structures like King Crimson, Stump and other general subversive elements. Yes, highly listenable.

The Dorothy Perkins Experience (clo Kevin at 0743 58405) have the name of the century; unfortunately their lo-fi sound and total disregard for their instruments (bread tins, an old tent and a guitar, no doubt) can only be described as marvellous. They claim to be taking three years off to "learn to play", but why bother lads?

The Loved Ones, from Leeds (0532 737309), have an eight-track cassette entitled Foul Play and pretty good it sounds too — steeped in '60s ephemera, with a touch of Edwyn Collins, the Bunnymen and Teardrop Explodes all making for something quite unique. The Loved Ones have a fresh and full, almost-Roger McGuinn-sounding vocal slur that make them one of the most interesting bands currently on display.

The tape is available for £2 plus a sae from 17 Gateland Lane, Shadwell, Leeds LS17 8HR.

The Insane Picnic (0734 51743) play the kind of jerky pop/new wave that cluttered the initial independent boom, never getting the time to develop due to the sheer volume of releases. This is the sound of Reading searching for a thoughtful ear, but sadly it seems unlikely to impress too many new punters.

The Sure Shots' archetypal bedroom music comes straight to your heart from Sussex University. When Wendy croons it nearly grooves, but the quality is low-key and Stan (0273 634060) and Zico's guitars suggest that a new Peter, Paul And Mary are still waiting in the wings.

Johnny Guitar (clo Vince, 25 Quarry House, Cock Hill Lane, Rubery, Rednal, Birmingham B45 9SG) rock out in real Billy Idol style and enclose a letter with their demo suggesting that we decimate it. Well, coconuts to that, mate. In fact, Johnny Guitar play some hairy axes and we've since redirected their package to Kerronk! to see if they can get next to it.

Simon's Ghost (041 884 2922) are from Renfrew and have a neat line in understated electronics. The eerie vocal embellishment grates a little, but this is infinitely more acceptable than, say, Art Of Noise.

DJ Aspidistra And The Molluscs (clo S Spencer, 35 Zetland Road, Chorlton, Manchester 21) are brilliant. Yep, a crap name, but these lads like a laff. Their Aspidistra In The Gulf cassette was recorded using a domestic hi-fi, a cassette recorder, a TV and an electric guitar, but it would make Arthur Baker sit up and eat a Mars bar. This is gut-wrenching stuff that hip-hops with the best of them. Mighty!

The Directors are from sunny Ruislip (0895 639748) and they play the kind of jangle-frenzied pop that could quite easily develop into a Medium Cool kind of vibe. Fine pop fodder with a charming lilt and potential sales-a-go-go.

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON NO 8: PLEASE RELEASE MOI!

Last month the face of the earth was devoid of my column. Why? 'Hibernetics', that's why! Yes, with a massive injection of hedgehog enzyme, I was able to sleep from the time we celebrate the birth of little baby Jesus by shovelling Christmas pud into our gobs and witnessing bearded men in dresses, past the time we stab each other in fountains and watch the year's most depressing news clippings again, right up till now. (If an Easter bunny so much as sticks his ears above my window ledge, his next of kin may as well start counting their inheritance.)

Anyway, a new year means it's time to get one's combo's record out. So let's talk DIY.

STAGE 1: Cutting a record. A big sewing machine with a sharp point gouges your ditty into a lump of hard black shiny stuff which acts as a master. Some expensive cutting rooms may, like upmarket bordellos, have carpets on the ceiling and fish tanks in the walls, but if Stodge, the cutter, has just done the entire Dire Straits' catalogue in 15 minutes flat, your baby will be cut like a while-u-wait heel bar key (ie — totally useless for the job for which it was intended). So hunt around and take advice.

STAGE 2: Metalwork. Not the guerilla weaponry you manufactured under the supervision of Sir at school, but a shiny metal disc from which the actual records are pressed. Nothing more is known about this mysterious term.

STAGE 3: Pressing. This is usually done in a far off land, and your 1,000 seven inch singles will probably languish in the back of a container lorry at Dover docks for eight weeks while customs officials wrestle with the driver's suspicious intestinal blockage.

Always get test pressings, to check the vibes don't plummet off the side of the record, that there is no mysterious squeaky noise all the way through the harp solo, and that the bit of Topic that got squashed onto the metalwork has not impaired the sound quality.

STAGE 4: Sleeves. These should be sent to the printer first, as they take bloody ages. Wedding invitations for Ben and Valerie or handouts for blockbusting carpet sales always seem to take preference at ProntaBlur. So find a proper sleeve printer.

Sleeves incorporating every hue of a Dulux colour chart will cost you a bomb, but black and white sleeves with one colour can be just as effective and much cheaper. Imagine your black and white pic with the bassist's artificial limb picked out in green. Wild!

You can always shove your platter in a plain bag with the explanation: 'The music will sell the record, not some flashy sleeve'. This of course is piffle, but at least exposing your meanness will have been avoided.

The designing of the sleeve can be jolly good fun, ripping out snaps from your mates' old magazine collections being a popular creative source.

Letrasetting is fine for the 'T' and 'H' of 'THE', but halfway through the grovelling acknowledgements, it leaves you without patience, enough E's and the sad printer's disease called 'Alphabet hand'. Get someone else to do it, wherever possible.

You then stick all the flappy bits together and lob it at your printer with pages and pages of detailed instructions. The printer then does it completely wrong. Always.

That's it. Set a release date for your disc. Miss it. Set a revised release date. Miss that. Then use the standard record biz retort, 'It'll be out in four weeks, when the sales strike force is fully mobilised'.

Stuff and nonsense. . .

Apathy in the UK!

Minimal Compact and the British disease

Since locating to Brussels in 1980, ex-pat Israelis Minimal Compact seem to have waved the flag of their country virtually single-handed throughout Western Europe in terms of rock bands, releasing a fistful of albums, touring extensively, and garnering a loyal following in the process.

- They in turn have remained loyal to their record label, Crammed, who were recently rewarded with perhaps the group's best LP, The Figure One Cuts, which as usual further enhanced their reputation on the continent but sold less than sod-all on our fair isle.
- Why? Well, although the bass pound, keyboard shimmer and lyrical concerns of the new album wouldn't sound so out of place on, let's say, 4AD or Factory, the thick 'European' pronunciation of the lyrics (at least they're in English!) are by tradition tailor-made to put off yer average Brit. Equate this with what many continentals regard as the blind conservatism of a lot of indie bands and pundits, and the sheer fact that people just haven't got the money to buy records by groups they know little or nothing about, and it makes you wonder why Minimal Compact bothered in the first place. Elsewhere, though, they do sell records. Perhaps even ten times more records than many of our big indie names.
- So they do really care? Obviously, we would like more acknowledgement in the UK, but it's a strange position to be in. We haven't had the chance to play live in Britain yet, which doesn't help, although we are planning to come over in the early spring and play a few dates.
- But why else do you and other European bands do so badly in the UK? Is it largely down to traditional British conservatism?
- "A lot of it is. For example, we see it with a group such as Cabaret Voltaire, who were at the vanguard of new and exciting British bands at the turn of the decade, though since working with major labels they did try to be more commercial. In turn, we see it with the groups that were influenced by Cabaret Voltaire. Because of the fierce competition, they feel they have to write more commercial music in order to succeed. The record companies are a lot more in control again, and the results of their policies are of course passed on to record buyers. This holds true on both independent and major levels."
- In marked contrast their label, Crammed, seems to have a totally refreshing attitude, issuing quality records by non-commercial bands — and getting results.
- "But then again, on the continent things are different. For example, our best market is France, and they tend to have a different perspective to the British. They raise bands like The Cure to the level of demi-gods, whereas in Britain they are merely . . . famous. Likewise, in the late '60s, when groups such as Pink Floyd and Soft Machine were still regarded as avant garde in the UK, they were selling as well as anybody else in France."
- Jesus, we'll be getting onto Steve Davis and "Cro-Magma, man" in a minute. What about the latest Minimal Compact album? Did producer John Fryer make a great difference?
- "Overall, we're happy with the LP, although there are always faults you can pick in a record six months after recording it. As for John Fryer, his past work (Cocteau Twins, Depeche Mode, This Mortal Coil) attracted us to him, but I think he was also interested in working with us and heard things in our sound that he could bring out more. We do have a policy of trying to use different producers for each album, and we would really like to work with Eno for our next album. But we'll see . . ."
- This, of course, doesn't resolve the apathetic UK problem. Still, try and catch them when they visit our shores and make up your own mind . . . that's the best way, the Crammed way. Alex Bastedo

Big greenie!

Gang Green put balls to wall

- "The crowd response has been incredible," grins Gang Green singer Chris Docherty. "Birmingham, Nottingham, London, all of them. We didn't know what to expect before we arrived, but it's been nothing but fun since we got here a week ago."
- Gang Green have now gone back home to Boston, America, but their popularity — the same applies to co-headliners Circle Jerks — proves that there is a strong underground hardcore audience in Britain, for whom the likes of The Stupids and Napalm Death are just the figureheads. Gang Green also brought with them their latest LP, You Got It, an album that's more rock 'n' roll boogie than hardcore (if we have to use titles . . .).
- "Yeah, I'd agree the album is less hardcore, as you say, but out past two LPs, that you call hardcore, there was nothing behind them, we didn't really do anything, it was just a lazy man's recording, done in a day." Which only goes to show that speedy, lazy, unformed rock is the best, right?
- "We just did the stuff and then compiled it together, and worse than that, it was just a bunch of bullshit. This album is a lot stronger all the way round — we had more time to do it and more energy and effort inside the recording and rehearsing. It's our first real release." Proving that unreal, unrehearsed bullshit smells a lot better to me. This kind of rockin' out is too uniform, too conventional.
- "Yeah, this album does rock out, but I don't think you can say we've sold out! The eight balls of the band are still there." Martin Aston

Burned out!

Monty Cantsin and the performing world

Monty Cantsin is a problematic entity for society at large — a cosmic mind trapped in the body of a beetle-browed Hungarian performance artist. After fleeing his native Budapest to escape the Communists, he lived first in Oregon, USA, then in Montreal. Now based in New York's Lower East Side, he is renowned both as a recording artist and as the high priest of Neoism, "the mass movement of individuality".

- Cantsin finances the Neoist Cultural Conspiracy by selling test tubes of his own blood (drawn off during bizarre onstage 'Blood Campaign' rituals) as objects of value. Both as a performance artist and as a musician he appears to be on the brink of doing something new and usefully catalytic. His latest 12 inch record, Born Again In Flames, is avant-garde in content if not actual technique. Released via the newly-formed label Maldoror, it combines manic, Hungarian-accented vocals with good, clean, danceable (sort of!) synth-music. Each track has a new twist, a style, a vivid lyric or melody to sustain it.
- To date, Cantsin's British appearances have been limited to a couple of sparsely attended shows at the London Musicians' Collective. Just the same, it can only be a matter of time before he establishes a toe-hold on this side of the Big Pond. An accomplished media whizzmaster, he is able to take liberties by virtue of his sheer audacity. Ian Blake

LAND OF THE GOOD GROOVE!

NEGATIVLAND ESCAPE FROM NOISE: MARK HOSLER SPEAKS

Negativland are one of the most unusual combos producing 'music' today. They are from Oakland, California. They have made four LPs, a cassette, a video, and have produced various live events and radio shows since they began in 1980. Their latest LP, Escape From Noise, released on SST in America and Recommended in Europe, has brought the Negativsound to a much wider audience. They used to be 'almost totally unknown', but can now be described as merely 'obscure', according to experts.

- But what makes Negativland so special? Put simply, they care and it shows. Escape From Noise took four years to construct out of hundreds of samples, real sound, and fragments of tunes. If it still all sounds a bit obscure, remember the great thing about Negativland is that they make accessible noise and it's catching.
- "We're used to being pretty well ignored and all of a sudden all these people are interested in what we're doing. We've had good reviews in Village Voice and Spin, it's good, but at the same time really scary. When you work on a record for four years all the stuff about what might happen when the record comes out becomes very distant and abstract."
- And the noise is on radio too!
- "College radio in America has really latched onto it, and it's even getting some commercial FM radio play, and they're playing the cut that it tells radio producers to play the record."
- That's the track called Announcement, which has the super smooth corporate American voice saying that "the first cut on this record has been cross format focussed for airplay success", and that it's going to "break on radio" and they should be the first to play it. Wow, they must believe it!
- "Either they believe it, or they have a sense of humour."
- Negativland are no strangers to radio. They used to do an all night live two way radio mix show called Over The Edge. Anyone could phone up and add to the basic sound produced by the group, and were given the instructions: "Phone participants should wear headphones when calling, and use the telephone like a microphone". Sounds wild. "Yeah, and now we're setting up a tele-tour where we play different college radio stations in the US over the phone. We have built a box which allows us to plug our recording studio directly into the telephone, and we pre-equalise the sound so that what comes out the other end sounds good. But we're actually going to publicise it like we're really on tour."
- What about a real live show? There have been very few of those. But past highlights have included some odd moments.
- "Two little girls dressed like pieces of bread screaming food names read off giant cue cards, that was good."
- They later, naturally, got toasted. And they have just worked out how to do Carbomb, another Escape From Noise track, live.
- "Don, the person who sings that one, he's 43 and he's got grey hair so he looks a lot older, most of the show he just sits very quietly playing, then towards the end he comes out from behind his stuff and suddenly starts screaming his head off until he's red in the face, so the effect is real surprising."
- With each successive release, Negativland have refined the art of noise-making, from humble beginnings as college students in 1980 when their self-titled LP was produced and released on their own Seeland label. It met an enthusiastic reaction, but only from the local college press. Next came Points, again a local success but still a bit inaccessible for wider appeal. 1983 was the great year when the classic A Big 10-8 Place was released, complete with free car sticker. This record is the tape machine equivalent of a classic symphony with various themes and tunes running through the complex mass of edits. Fragments of a song keep reoccurring, until at the end of the record we are treated to the whole thing. By comparison, Escape From Noise is really commercial, with much shorter tracks, each with a theme of its own. The horrible noise comes on again and ruins your enjoyment of the Playboy channel, the Soviet Union is really dangerous because it's got 11 time zones, and is probably the only track ever featuring a girl with hiccups. It's all in there.
- "We don't have a heck of a lot of noise around here," says the perfect American housewife. "No we don't have much either," adds her neighbour helpfully.
- Negativland are the noise of suburban America gone mad. What's it's all about isn't entirely clear, but maybe that's the point.
- "We really put all the information we want people to get in the records, we don't want to say anymore than that sometimes."
- So... get those records. Christopher Mellor

Eight strange but true facts from the new(ish) world

1) Mambo-X. Purists might have thought it mission impossible, but this five-piece from upstate New York succeed in sounding exactly like 10,000 Maniacs. Not only do they come from the same neck of the woods, but the unobtrusive backing quartet perfectly capture that mock calypso reel while the diminutive Erin O'Reilly sings both in the same manner and of the same subjects, and has all the moves – the spins, the hippy dance, the childlike air of innocence – off to pat. Final proof that she is indeed Natalie Marchant's Day Off is that everyone instantly falls in love with her. Mambo-X are so 10,000 Maniacs that virgin ears to both groups are apt to declare the upstarts as the greater. (They do have a good debut record entitled Machines Of Eden available.) Imagine the potential if 10,000 Maniacs struck it really big and Mambo-X did the right thing and took the name as well. One could then tour America while the other could double the concept's money by performing to an unsuspecting Far East. Well, it's worth a thought.

2) The Exploited didn't split up. Tuned in to my hip local college radio station the other day to find them playing a solid hour's worth of The Exploited, to celebrate an up-coming show. This is the sort of reason one leaves the country, not moves to a new one for.

But hardcore is big business with 'da kids' across the States, and the original British exponents tour here constantly, packing them in with their thousands from coast to coast. Punk's not dead, but it sure smells funny.

3) Entertainment on the Subway Part 1. The flow of pedestrian traffic through Times Square, New York's biggest subway station, was briefly halted recently by a barrage of drums echoing from the main concourse. Further investigation revealed one guy pounding out the beat on a full drum kit while six homeboys, aged between ten and 25, put on a meticulous exhibition of synchronised breakdancing in an attempt to relieve commuters of spare change. A flash of inspiration struck me regarding a new Olympic sport for the summer, until someone told me that baseball was going to Seoul this year. True to the current zeitgeist, Japan are the favourites to win this most American of sports.

3) Gene Loves Jezabel and Flesh For Lulu on a sell-out tour across the States. Enough said.

5) Tracey Ullman is a folk hero. 'Our Trace' turned up on these shores with her TV producer husband, landed a 20-minute programme on the Fox channel, and before you can say 'Okay yeah!' she's topping the ratings and picking up all the awards Hollywood has to offer. Seeing her upstage the over-rated David Letterman on his Late Night show the other day helped explain why: whereas most Britishers on the box out here immediately assume the dreaded mid-Atlantic accent, Tracey accentuated her Cockney tendencies. And the Yanks just love a Cockney. (Mate.)

6) Entertainment on the subway Part 2. With but one plastic knife as a prop, a young entrepreneur presented a condensed Midsummer Night's Dream on the three-minute shuttle from Times Square to Grand Central. More amusing than his own lack of embarrassment (or talent) was the quick-fire banter of the hassled passengers. They may call this the City of Fear, but subway passengers are far more open and good-natured than back in London: however, I did long to be Bernard Goetz when the troubadour passed the hat around.

7) Ian McCulloch is a teen idol. Every time he turned his back on the audience and waggled his bum, the assembled hordes of young girls screamed uncontrollably. Don't they know it just encourages him?

8) A Subtle Plague. It's 1.30 am and a packed CBGB's has already been subjected to three groups, when A Subtle Plague take the stage. Three drummers begin pounding, a saxophone blares unmercifully and a complex musical hardcore song emerges. It's a deafening though intriguing noise and I head off into the night. If they ever make a record, you can be sure John Peel will play it. Tony Fletcher

COMPETITION WINNERS!

Last month's competition for an Abstract box set attracted some confusing replies, and the first one drawn out of the trendy Uj bin had no name or address on it. It came from Hemel Hempstead, but that's all we know. So, the two winners, who knew that Stuart Morrow played bass on the first New Model Army LP, that Howard Hughes produced Pete Murphy and that Into A Circle's Barry Jepson was first in Southern Death Cult, are VJ Hewson from Goole and Malc Miller from Lincoln.

The competition for Skinny Puppy promo kits reaped masses of responses, and they all knew that fellow Netzwerk labelmates, Severed Heads are from Australia. The winners are Keith Hebbertson from Glasgow, Andrew Jeffries from Wallsall, James Wilding from London, Alan Tutt from Peterborough and Tim Sykes from London.

FIREHOSE ANGST HR

If'n. The second wailer. eD, Mike and George enter the sophomore sweepstakes and ditch the beanies on the second FIREHOSE album "If'n". Fourteen tunes recorded in eighty-five hours, that go way beyond anything three dudes should be able to do. Includes Sometimes, Honey Please, Anger and For The Singer Of REM. SST 115 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Mystery Spot. Like never before, the songs of Angst are suffused with a shimmering glow. On Mystery Spot, the remarkable interplay between brothers Joe and Jon is fully realized with their best-sounding record ever. With a bow to country and folk, Angst take off on a hell bent for leather electric train ride on Outside My Window, Colors Of The Day, Mind Average and nine more songs. SST 111 (LP/CA $7.50)

Human Rights. The firebrand vocalist of the world-renowned Bad Brains steps out with his own record. With a lush background and a unifying spiritual message, this record shows H.R. in the role of healer and teacher. From the world beat hip hop of the title track to the soft love vibe of Acting So Bad, this record cuts across all boundaries in its quest for one-love. SST 117 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Pat RuthenSmear DESCENDENTS BLACK FLAG

PAT RUTHENSMEAR: RuthenSmear. As a founding father of punk, Pat Smear should need no introduction. From his patented guitar grungework with the Germs, right up to now, Pat Smear is the severed edge of modern guitar playing. Pat RuthenSmear however, is a whole new kettle of fish. Glam, slam, blammo, a whole new way of life. SST 154 (LP/CA $7.50)

DESCENDENTS: Liveage. The last blast in the saga of the "Dents" comes in the form of this incredibly bonus live record. Feel the bone crushing power of the Descendents. If you want it "ALL", this is the first step you will need to make. SST 163 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

BLACK FLAG: Wasted Again. Imagine if your favorite Flag party tunes of all time were put together in a room. Then, the room was filled with hundreds of your best friends. Before the cops come, you better slap on Wasted Again, a collection of all the songs that make you want to party. Six Pack, T.V. Party, Wasted, Rise Above and twelve more festive Flag tunes. Cherubs from Hell

THE KRAY CHERUBS are six terminal "noise bastards" who, after two years of artistic endeavour and beating shit out of their instruments, are creating the most gloriously untamed din ever to grace western culture. ● This particular bunch of discordant deviants include in their line-up one Edwin Pouncey, aka Savage Pencil, and it's him that's unfairly getting all the credit/blame for the Cherubs monster. ● "I don't want people to think of The Kray Cherubs as Savage Pencil's band. All the members contribute equally," says Edwin. ● It's his reluctance to take all the Cherubs-related infamy for himself that's the reason behind their debut single, No, on Fierce Records, not having a Savage Pencil illustration as a cover. ● Instead, it's Pat Cherub's handiwork that's on display. She, along with Savage Cherub (as Mr Pouncey styles himself), Liz, Alison, Debbie and Eddie, also helped to write their repertoire of some 300 songs. ● On hearing their beautifully shapeless cacophonous masterpieces some have wondered if it's all just a joke. Edwin gets a bit miffed at this. ● "We're not just pissing about. We all do things outside The Kray Cherubs but that doesn't mean we don't take it all very seriously." ● But the single is on Fierce Records, a label notorious for telling fibs. They don't usually bother asking people for their permission to release material, so is No an official release? ● "It's semi-official. They were watching us rehearse and unknown to us they bootlegged it. Then they approached us later about putting out part of the tape as a single and we agreed." ● The band plan to stick with Fierce for their next single. Apparently they're going to the Swansea label's commune to record a version of their pop classic Rot In Hell (Mom). Also, Fierce executives are quite keen for them to 'lay down' their cover of The Runaways' Cherry Bomb which has been acclaimed as "perfect". ● But all this 'musical' activity might leave the Cherubs with very little time to indulge the darker side of the group. According to sources close to them, the band are part of a witches' coven in Barking which meets every Tuesday that there's a full moon, where each member ceremoniously makes love to a life-size image of Jimi Hendrix. None of the members are willing to comment on this but, by all accounts, this is why they sound so demoniac. ● So, with black magic and songs like Rot In Hell (Mom) on their side, the Kray Cherubs will surely be the "real bona fide no shit EVENT" that Fierce promise. After all, the Devil looks after his own. Anthony Farthing

I WAS NEARLY A SUEDEHEAD! Ivor Perry and Cradle tales

The Cradle (with Ivor extreme right)

"I don't speak to our kid, you know?" Ivor Perry, mainman of the revitalised Cradle, draws on his fag and recalls the split up of Easterhouse. After a punch up with brother Andy there was no talk of musical differences, just starting something new.

- "He's doing all dance stuff now. He's spent a year doing three tracks. Weird ain't it?"
- Yeah. Suppose.
- Ivor, however, has been busy. After Easterhouse there was The Cradle and It's Too High on Rough Trade. A bulky 45 that promised much but did little. Better things, bigger things were wanted, then The Smiths split.
- "I'd known Morrissey for ages and he asked me to do some stuff with him and Andy Rourke and Mike Joyce, but it was never going to work out. It was like they wanted another Johnny Marr. . . or if they didn't it would have just been those kind of comparisons from people hearing it. It was a strange time and it ended up with Morrissey running out of the studio, he couldn't handle it. The tracks were never finished."
- One of those tracks, Bengali in Platforms, was set to be the flipside of the withdrawn Stop Me If You've Heard This One Before, but, well, that's history now. Instead Ivor opted to resurrect The Cradle with a new line-up. Demos were done, new vocalist Craig Davies came and went, going solo on Rough Trade — which resulted in The Cradle's departure from the label. But the demo's are strong, and different too.
- "We got a new vocalist and have plenty of strong material that's drifting into a much more commercial area. Still rock, mind, but more attuned to accessibility. It's stuff that needs money spent on it, which could really do well."
- Sure enough, that's true, and the group have already impressed producer Gil Norton with their potential. . .
- "He wants to produce us, so all we need now is some label support to get us out to the public."
- Current interest suggests that this won't be long in coming, but for now he'll have to make do with half a Guinness and another smoke (I left my cheque book in my pin-stripe pocket). Dave Henderson

Neil Scott's spent the last few years hawking himself around as 'rent-a-guitarist', he's played with Everything But The Girl, Felt, The Wishing Stones and others too numerous (or embarrassing) to mention. Last year he linked up with Snakes Of Shake just as they were shedding their final skin. Seori, lead snake and writer, was disappointed with what the group had become but found in Neil a kindred spirit. Neil, constantly frustrated by the limitations all these groups had placed on his creative input, was happy when Seori decided to break up the group and start again with himself and Neil as the nucleus. It was time to settle in, so, naming themselves after AS Neills' extraordinary 'open' school, Summerhill were born.

- Now Rocket 5, a new Scottish indie label, have released Summerhill's first single, I Want You, backed with three other tunes. I Want You (not the Bob Dylan song) is based on a twisted off-kilter Byrds-y riff that could have been culled from their Mr Tambourine Man period. It's not typical of Summerhill's output, and if asked to name their favourite Byrds records Seori and Neil both plump for the later countrified stuff. This is where their heart lies.
- Neil: "We're really crafting the songs now. Of the last couple of songs we've written, one's an out and out country ballad, and the audience assumes it's a cover and I take that as a compliment. It's like with The Byrds' Sweetheart Of The Rodeo LP, it's hard to tell the standards from the Gram Parsons songs."
- Seori: "Sweetheart Of The Rodeo's fundamentally different from what we do though. That set out as a specific country album but we're not setting out to do country music. It'd be preposterous anyway, you could never be 100 per cent country being from this country. If you look at stuff like Brinsley Schwartz, when you play that alongside the Burritos it's just rubbish, country pub rock."
- Do Summerhill shy away from the country themes then?
- Seori: "No. Country's talked about as though the themes of country music are abstracted from our experience whereas they're not. What's the difference between going to a honkytonk and getting cheated by your woman, or going down the disco, getting drunk and losing your bird? It's the same thing. Heartache isn't an American theme. Losing isn't either. Losing, loneliness, heartache, those are the main country themes (occasionally animals, small children), those kinda things happen everywhere."
- As yet Summerhill's recordings are a little too tastefully executed, too respectful, evoking the country giants, seamlessly incorporating the odd Creedence reference, but it's on stage that they've found their identity. Live they produce a bone-crunching country sound that's as far from redneck boogie as from soporific pub rock. When Seori's guitar drops down around his knees, school's out.
- And what do you know? Even before the great mass of public enthusiasm has taken to Summerhill's brand of whatever, Virgin seem to have picked the group up by the scruff of their checked shirts. Instant hits? Tasteful pop in the charts again? It could very well be. . . Vachel Booth

SO, WE have it on good authority that The Soup Dragons have signed to WEA, but wonder why Melissa from Voice Of The Beehive was sitting in such a hippy-esque pose on Going Live last week. The BBC cameramen didn't know where to put their bi-focals and Gordon The Gopher almost blushed.

Former Tip Sheet and T Namedrop types The Miracle Mile have signed a publishing deal and are currently negotiating a contract with a US label who'll handle their Miracle single Bless This Ship. Nice pop in the Orange Juice pattern.

More comic factions explode onto the scene as Caged In issue six scrawls into the office. For a miserly 50 pence, you can almost check what they're going on about. get it from 14 Woodlands Drive, Hawarden, Deeside, Clwyd. And, in the north east the artoonists do Ginchy Gazette, an A4 set of 'oons that are well scribbled but maybe need a few storylines. Get it at Baggy Studios, 61 Musgrave Gardens, Gliesgate, Durham.

New release from ROIR, the NY tape label, is The End Of Music As We Know It, a concept compilation with sleeve notes by Steve Albini. The tracks were recorded in two hours (each) and are Bobby Weird! Groups giving their strangeness in vats include Honey-moon Killers, Prong, Of Cabbages And Kings (featuring members of SWANS), Thurston Moore, Bank Of Sodom (Jello Biafra and a Shockabilly or two), Royal Trux (including a Pussy Galore) and Needle Nose (featuring various Live Skulls bods). Coming soon through Red Rhino.

Channel 4's new music prog will be Wired, a duo-capital (London and New York) blast featuring new bands and old faithfuls in a news and performance scenario (man!). It'll start in May.

Heavy vibes and psyche lay-outs appear in Freakbeat (£1.50 from Ivor Trueman, 23 Parkside Road, Hounslow, Middlesex) and there's a flexi featuring The Steppes and The Bevis Froid Museum too. Selected mind-blowing features include The Smoke, Plasticland, Jefferson Airplane and more.

Rumour has it that John Carpenter — producer of Escape From New York, Dark Star etc — has four new pictures released real soon. the first of these is Prince Of Darkness starring Donald Pleasance which will open on Friday May 13 (der.da.du.da).

Homestead's plans for the spring include a limited edition 12 inch of All Going Out Together by Big Dipper, taken from their Heavens LP, which will be followed by seven inches from new signings Honor Role, Happy Flowers, GG Allin and Nice Strong Arm. This rabid activity will be followed by new LPs from GG and Happy Flowers and an album from new signings My Dad Is Dead.

Another former tip for the top (as Cathy McGowan might have said before she started on Daytime Live). Jass have a 12 inch ready to roll on both sides of the Atlantic on the groovy Wax Trax label.

The Central Slate label is touting The Lungs — recommended for art and grand calendars — who are currently on tour with Fflaps. They also tell us that they'll soon be releasing a tape compilation with tracks from great Welsh people of our time including Fflaps, Datblygu, Cut Tunes, Crisialav Plastig, The Lungs and Another Perfect Vegetable. No mention of Neil Kinnock here!

Exciting and totally no information on new things coming fast from SST. Bulletins bleat about albums from Steve Fisk, Sister Double Happiness, Pell Mell, Semantics, Carbon, Run Westy Run and more.

T Minus 10 called to tell us that following our brilliant review of their demo in Tip Sheet some old lady in Cleethorpes has been festooned with calls because we printed the wrong contact number. What we should have printed was 01-530 6568. So, budding A&R people, catch them there... and sign them!

Abstract have picked up one of the Tip Sheeters too. The Jeremiahs — who we raved over — have signed to the label and a single is imminent.

BUILD ME UP BUTTER-CUP!

Did you know that there's a mag called Underground that deals with buildings and tunnels? You probably meant to pick that one up instead. Well, in our mail bag this week we received a missive telling us that Noel Wrighton (above) has been appointed chairman of Pipe Jacking Association. With the growth of house music, we just thought you might like to have that pointed out.

Dave Gedge: Present and correct

after the fact

Robert K Cohen's
Big Comment

I don't suppose that Stock, Aitken and Waterman's main career aim has been to get into both the official and the independent charts. However, that's what they did, courtesy of Kylie Minogue's I Should Be So Lucky. Further puncturing the artificial barriers between 'independent' and 'mainstream' music were Top Ten invaders Coldcut and Bomb The Bass. The Sugarcubes made the Top 30 despite shunning the attentions of many drooling majors, while The Primitives made the Top 20 by not shunning them. Crash is now available as a limited edition gatefold ten inch.

The Wedding Present haven't been doing too badly either, despite hauling around the predictable cross of being hailed as successors to The Smiths. • Such comparisons must be a royal pain in the band's collective bum, but the inheritance of some of Morrissey's pen-pals is an ambiguous problem for David Gedge.

"I get people writing to me with their problems," he told NME, "the letters say things like 'Then she left me and I was stranded at the station and I only had 10p so I couldn't get home so I had to sleep on a park bench and I didn't even have a match'. I just rip off their ideas for our next song."

Whether Morrissey ever did this is not known (as yet, but who can tell what fresh law-suits might bring?). What is known is his obsession with James Dean. The man who don't dig vids went to Indiana for his Suedehead promo, in which he visits JD's grave. This was probably some kind of research project, Morrissey being the author of the best-seller, James Dean Is Not Dead. We await the tome's appearance in a new edition as James Dean IS Dead, At Least According To This Remarkably Authentic-Looking Headstone.

As Moz worships Jimmy Dean, so Melody Maker worships The Alarm — at least, that's the impression you might get from the widespread coverage they afford them. A few weeks back, the "Live!" pages contained yet another Alarm review, penned by Push, one of the many MM-ers who lack the confidence to take responsibility for their own rantings. ★ The review, naturally, takes the form of a fanatically negative mini-essay on The Alarm, which could have been written without attending the gig (not that I'm suggesting it was attended. God forbid). ★ Push describes their songs as "vapid vacuums, invertebrate, invalid appeals to human optimism". ★ We know it all by heart, and we hope Push enjoyed itself. Meanwhile, dozens — perhaps hundreds — of more deserving acts were playing across the country, ignored by MM — eternal champions of the innovative and the new.

Morrissey: "Look, no vest!"

Talking of which, Madness are back. Sorry — THE Madness (to give them their new super-group title) are back. Carl Smith and Suggs told NME that they'd "never really split up as such". Mark and Woody probably thought all that farewelling-gigging had something to do with splitting up, but it seems it had more to do with dumping them from the band. Well, that's how history is now written, and NME takes it pretty much at face-value: no way have they reformed for the money. But Madness never could do any wrong in their eyes.

Suggs: split ends

According to David Quantick, conductor of the interview, "We need them". That remains to be seen. Right now, I need them about as much as I need The Who: at least they managed to keep Rick Astley off the TV for five minutes. Now all we need is for The Rolling Stones to get back together — oh, they haven't split yet (or have they?).

arrogant Feedback

UN-KNATURAL GIRLS?

"I was repulsed by your feature on The Shamen in Underground (ish 12) where the group condoned pornography unchallenged. I also had the misfortune to see the group and was disgusted by their film shows which abused females, featuring oral sex excerpts. I don't think Underground should be party to this kind of exposure." — Andrew

The feature itself didn't actually condone the use of pornography, or glorify it, it was more concerned with Colin Angus's desire to use that material and juxtapose it with other circumstances, making a mockery of it. Unfortunately, with anything that is crossing barriers of acceptance like that, the end result is prone to be confused and can either put people off pornography, or the perpetrators of the juxtaposition — in this case The Shamen. The choice is of course yours, so if you don't want to buy their records or see them live then they have failed to attract. And if they are using such a volatile weapon as pornography that's being construed as dangerous, then maybe it's time for them to think again in their presentation.

JOY AND DEATH!

"I read Mick Middles' article on the resurrection of Joy Division with some interest, but I must say that, having made the band a part of my life, I don't want them to be abused by commercialism. Joy Division are best left in the dark solemn caves from which they emerged." — Barry

Surely, it's up to each individual to enjoy Joy Division how they like. Mick's piece was exploding a few myths about what the group were really like, rather than the image that they created. Rank commercialism is a bad thing, but Joy Division are far superior to a lot of today's music and deserve to be placed in their rightful position. If you want to leave them in solemn caves, that's fine, but let others keep their memories differently.

BANG, YOU'RE DEAD!

"While your magazine covers music press darlings, unknowns and whipping boys alike, it's missed out on The Crazy Pink Revolvers, who seem to have been neglected by everyone. A full blown feature in Underground must be just around the corner." — Shaun

Well, don't hold your breath, Shaun. You might have been bitten by the Pink bug, but, apart from a brace of press releases telling Ug what the Pink Revolvers are going to do, we've heard little else to suggest that they're as good as you say. We're waiting with our ears open, though.

OI! YER MAD!

"Where can I find out more about Infa Riot, Betrayed, 4 Skins, Attila The Stockbroker and groups like them? And where can I get their records?" — Michaela

Are you sure about this, Michaela? Well, if you must, try the Link label through PRT who do the majority of Oi stuff. Link are at PO Box 164, London SE13 5QN.

STILL MUTIE!

Skate Muties In The 5th Dimension just keeps on keeping on with a new spanking communique (number six) out now from all nice places like the Rough Trade Shop. It takes three years to read!

BRADFORD CALLING!

Village Records have gone into promoting the debut single by ex-Tip Sheeters Bradford in a big way. They now offer a three track CD of Skin Storm and are muscling into the press with some intimate letters of introduction. More power to their boots.

STRANGER STILL!

The Bam Caruso co-op have put together their own mag, Strange Things focusing on left-field subversives and psyche supremos. They plan to unleash ten issues per year through Revolver and the Cartel and the first lavishly packaged read boasts features on Syd Barrett, The Kinks, Psychic TV, Robyn Hitchcock, beach movies, The Dukes Of Stratosphear and more.

gush

... an enthusiastic tirade from Prince Muso

So the poxy Roxy has finally bitten the dust, eh? And we're supposed to be surprised? Funny how a programme, set up solely to ape the nauseating Top Of The Pops, should wonder why it, too, doesn't get 11 million viewers, when the whole point is that 11 million viewers can only stomach the programme once a week, let alone twice. (Besides which, most viewers these days are permanently hovering between BBC1 and Channel 4, since the most exciting thing on ITV's horizon is a repeat showing of Auf Wiedersehen, Pet, and even that's now looking doubtful. I mean, can they really only find it in themselves to churn out poor copies of other programmes? I mean, Sporting Triangles, I ask you...

What else? Well, we know the charts have been blinking awful for centuries past, but have they ever been so, well, forgettable? Can you remember how that new Voice Of The Beehive single goes? Go on then, whistle it. See? Y'can't. And their last one, too. Instant disposable pop taken to its logical extreme. . . you can't even remember it, let alone loathe it.

OK, so it's a bit tuff trying to recall the hookline of the latest Culturcide outpouring, but after all, that's not been force-fed to you by intra-aural drip feed for weeks on end at great expense to the pluggers ("... what colour would you like your Porsche Mr DJ sir pink yes pink that's possible first thing tomorrow oh yes of course matching leopardskin covered cellular phone and in-car CD. . .").

What's more, can you remember what some of these lumps look like? No, I know that's often a blessing, but despite the teenie mags plastering the acne-ridden mugs of Wet Wet Wet and Hue And Cry all over their not very glossy pages (now printed on sort of semi-matt toilet paper because revenues are slim since no-one wants to advertise in any other pop rag but S Hits any more) you would still have trouble recognising their whitehead-speckled faces if you found them leering over the reduced calorie baked bean counter in your local Tesco's.

And why the sudden eruption of not very nubile, sexually totally unexciting female singers, eh? Tiffany is hardly the most smouldering looker since Madonna, and her songs are about as appetising as Stavros' donner kebabs, yet the sight of her clutching an inflatable artichoke in some suburban shopping precinct seems to be the best thing the youth of today can muster to inflame their loins. Of course, she doesn't, which is the whole point. Her and Kylie ("Naaaybers, ev'rybody needs good naaaybers, wiv a little understanding. . ." etc) Minogue and that other one whose name I can't even remember (you know, she's about 12 and all sanctimonious and writes her own songs and goes to bed at eight after doing her homework and probably some extra just to please teach) are so squeaky clean that they don't stand a snowflake in hell's chance of sending male adolescent pulses racing or hormone levels peaking.

Sadly, that's the whole point, since it all boils down to the reality of the scared and helpless post-AIDS society. I mean, sex (only with a condom and preferably with someone you've found out a bit about and who hasn't had any strange bisexual or other dodgy relationships or used any manky needles or been to Africa lately) and drugs (only with clean works or otherwise not intravenously administered) and rock 'n' roll (just so long as it doesn't get you aurally intoxicated enough to throw caution to the wind or lyrically exploit or encourage the foregoing of the points mentioned above) doesn't quite have the same ring to it, does it?

What's happening on local radio?

MASTERBLAST

THE TEAM: EVERY SUNDAY EVENING 7-8PM. BBC RADIO NORTHAMPTON: 103.6/104.5 FM OR 1107m MEDIUM WAVE

It's the same old story — another local radio station with too much boring talking, too many bland records. Until... a year and a half ago, in downtown Northampton, a new show called The Team started playing indies, hip-hop, reggae, and all of the things that never normally get any airtime.

As you might imagine it's put together by a team of interested young people from the local area, who had a desire to be involved in radio, but not necessarily any experience. The show is organised by Denise Brown who co-presents with one of the team each week. Going out on a Sunday night, from 7 to 8, after the Top 40, it features, as well as the usual gig guide and band interviews, a 'soapbox' slot where a local band is given a chance to talk about themselves, without being pulled apart by critical presenters, and a new feature where local groups are recorded as live in the "very basic" studio.

Denise: "There's no fancy mixers so it has to be a real live band, but it's still another chance for new groups to get some airtime."

And the best groups around? "The Plastic Infidel, like New Order meets hip-hop. They're very good, well, to be honest I'm their manager so I would say that. The gothy Venus Fly Trap are very popular, and there's another good new indie-style group called The Adelaides."

It goes without saying that the music is the most important part of the show, with a typical current playlist running like this. . .

- 1 Northside Demon Boyz Music Of Life 12 inch
- 2 Frenz Experiment The Fall Beggars Banquet LP
- 3 Bus I Skull Junior Delgado Fashion 12 inch
- 4 You Sexy Thing CUD Peel Sessions EP
- 5 Nobody's Twisting Your Arm The Wedding Present Reception 7 inch

So, if you're in the Northamptonshire area, anywhere between Leicester and Milton Keynes, Sunday's a day to give your ears the varied diet they deserve. Christopher Mellor

My tape's gone!

LAST TIME The Darling Buds came to London, King's Cross Station burnt down. This time they got up long before their breakfasts to van it to Camden to cut their great new single, Shame On You.

music from tape to disc for the first time. So obviously you've got to start with your tapes. . .

- "Guess what, this fool's forgotten to bring the tapes!"
- When The Darling Buds signed to Doncaster's Native Records, they thought

COUNTDOWN TO BLAST OFF

Calculating the odds of success with I Start Counting

Daniel Miller and Mute Records have certainly cornered the market when it comes to promoting British electronic pop. Depeche Mode and Erasure are the two most quintessential and successful exponents of the genre. Of course, success to some is to the detriment of others and stablemates I Start Counting could be a point in case.

- Simon Leonard and David Baker, have, in four years, produced countless excellent singles and a mini-LP, but they're still relatively unknown. Why?
- Simon: "Well, we're not pretty, we haven't got a massive image, and the gear we use makes it hard for us to play live. Also, people have said we came a bit too late, which to a certain extent is true. It took us ages to get a deal, though we were making music of this form for a long time earlier."
- David: "Our records seemed to come out at the wrong time and we missed the rewards."
- The current single, Lose Him, seems to have fared better in terms of chart action, which sets them up nicely for the release of their forthcoming LP, Fused.
- The Fused LP should prove to be something special, considering the chaps have spent a lot of time and energy on it (usually in the studio till three in the morning) thus, they haven't had time to catch up on their favourite pastime, watching Prisoner Cell Block H on TV.
- David: "It's such a good programme, I try and catch it as much as I can."
- Simon: "Like all the Australian programmes, it's very unpretentious, unlike their British counterparts. The soaps here seem to raise issue after issue, just out of necessity. Whereas the Aussies don't try to be anything they're not."
- David: "They're like I Start Counting in a way." Peter Mash they were signing to a together organisation.

- "But who'd come all the way down to London to cut a single and forget to bring the bloody tapes? Never mind, we'll just have to go down the pub instead."
- While the record label mogul's wife is busy putting the tapes on the first train to London, the record label mogul (Kevin) finds himself buying round after round of drinks to atone. The cut was booked for 11 am, he thinks he may be able to get back into the studio at 3 pm (actually they were eventually under-way at 7.30 pm!) but God knows what state the band'll be in by then!
- Out of Caerleon near Newport near Cardiff near England, The Darling Buds have been acclaimed as probably the best band to emerge from the fuzzy pop mayhem of the past couple of years. Certainly John Peel's said as much and fanzines like Sowing Seeds and So Naive have had no doubts.
- These DBs will be compared with The Shop Assistants and The Primitives. It's inevitable. Because they play a simple silver pop. Because they've got a personable blonde singer. And because lots of heartless jealous bastards love to desecrate this church of innocent pop.
- But there's an invigorating freshness about The Darling Buds that raises their short, sharp shocks of sound high above the usual carping criticisms. A one-string bass, a two-up, two-down drum kit, a barrage of sharpened teenage kicks guitar and a voice of genuine melodic beauty. These are the things that dreams are made of.
- So meet the band of your dreams. . .
- On drums, Bloss, frustrated Elvis impersonator.
- On bass, Chris, successful Dave Gedge impersonator, and the quietest man I've ever met.
- Bloss: "Chris is studying to be an enigma."
- On guitar, Harley. The musical genius and Jonah of the band.
- "I'm the one with the bad luck. Nothing's ever gone right for me. This business with the tapes is just typical. I'm only 22 right, but a while ago I had problems with ulcers. Ulcers! Most people have to have a barium meal so the hospital can get a good look at your insides. I had to have a barium enema."
- Tough luck indeed.
- And on helium-honey vocals, Andrea.
- "I'm not exactly lucky either. I lived in London once for about two months, sharing a bedsit above a restaurant with a girlfriend. One night we woke up to find the whole building on fire, and the only way was up on to the roof. So we got up there, two little girls in our nighties in the freezing cold, just screaming for help.
- "Eventually the fire brigade came, and they put up a chute for us to slide down. Now we only had our nighties on, no knickers or anything, and they wanted us to slide down this chute with hundreds of people down below watching us! I thought oh sod it, and went down the shoot, but my friend insisted she wasn't going down dressed like that. So a fireman had to take her up this huge pair of fire resistant trousers before she'd come down.
- "We were all over the papers next day, but luckily they didn't, or couldn't, publish any photos of my great escape. My, but it was windy though!"
- Harley: "She always sleeps in her knickers now."
- They might not be the luckiest band in the world. But The Darling Buds are the most infectious pop thrill around. Holly Wood

Minks discover guitar!

MAKE MINE MINK!

Jasmine Minks are kings of heavy metal

The Jasmine Minks don't stuff toilet rolls down their trousers, they don't have laser light shows or dry ice at their sell out concerts. The Jasmine Minks play guitars. The Jasmine Minks wear vee-neck jumpers and Harrington jackets. The Jasmine Minks have been described as wishy-washy, appalling and derivative — they have also been described as pure, exciting and fresh. They have not, as far as I know, been compared to Status Quo or Van Halen.

■ Jim is the lead singer of the Jasmine Minks, and he's sitting beside me in a cafe just outside Victoria Station, blowing on his cappacino, telling me about his band. The band, that are... the Dire Straits of indie-pop.

BAT OUT OF HELL
Jim bears no resemblance to Meat Loaf whatsoever. But there was a time when he thought that The Jasmine Minks would be bigger.

■ "When we released Where The Traffic Goes, we knew it was a great record, we thought we were going to be the new Beatles. One massive leap from the Living Room to Shea Stadium."

■ It didn't happen — but rock 'n' roll guru, Peter Powell, did play one of their first singles.

■ "He called it a jingle."

■ It was. Under two minutes of sheer joy — entitled What's Happening? — one of the finest pop records ever, and I mean that with the sincerity usually only found on a Marillion record.

■ "We'd work out what was expected of us in the press and then we'd do the opposite. When everyone was softening up we went total punk rock."

■ This obsession with running in the opposite direction to everyone else has lead them to loathe "technology", "synthesisers" and "computers". Their new LP, Another Age, although brilliant in every aspect, sounds totally out of date.

■ "We're a modern band."

■ And my name's Jon Bon Jovi.

■ "These studio effects that people use, they're just gimmicks. We want to create a sound that's ours, we don't want to create a sound from £20,000 and a box."

SCREAM UNTIL YOU LIKE IT!

"There's only one sound you can get out of a synthesiser, but there's so many sounds you can get out of a guitar — each person gets a different sound."

■ Is your attitude nostalgic?

■ "We're an electric band. I've got no sentiments for the past. I want to get on with doing something for now. Most chart bands are just using sentimental nostalgia. They are trying to create an atmosphere you can just relax into. Music which basically isn't music —

WE ARE

Ut scrape back the

Ut emerged out of the New York no wave movement in 1978. This was a small community of artists and musicians stretching the limits of noise, people like DNA, Teenage Jesus And The Jerks, and Mars. Sonic Youth appeared out of the same guitar-induced mayhem about two years later.

■ And now Ut have joined Sonic Youth on Blast First and their latest release is an uncompromising double 12 inch package called In Guts House, made up of strange songs and guitar noises ranging from the indecipherable Hotel to the acid beauty of Evangelist.

■ "We did two 12 inchers because it goes in deeper that way, it made sense in terms of the songs and the order."

■ True it would be hard to take the whole thing in as two sides of an LP. It's not exactly easy listening.

■ "There's more to it than sound, we're playing feeling. The things that can be done with a guitar, emotionally, are endless. Basically, we are attracted to things that are deeper than surface comprehension. We don't write formula subject songs, there are many layers, just cushions coming out of the speakers. Which is the opposite, I hope, of what the Jasmine Minks are all about."

THOSE CRAZY, CRAZY, CRAZY NIGHTS?

1987 saw no vinyl releases from the Minks, but the rock 'n' roll lifestyle didn't completely die. The band played more gigs than ever before, discovering new faith and reason at every turn. Live they definitely come into their own and there is absolutely no way you could call them wishy washy.

■ "We played a gig in France last year. We had to stretch a 35 minute set into an hour and a half. We ended up making things up as we went along. We did that one, er, Rubber balls keep on bouncing back to me."

■ Of all the songs you could have done...

■ "Yeah, but it had a lot more sexual connotations than the original."

BOHEMIAN RHAPSODY

Jim has never met Freddie Mercury, but I have and I thought he was a fabulous showbiz personality. Anyway, this is beside the point. The Jasmine Minks are a band with balls. If I was going to be thick I'd call them a mod band, if I was going to be clever I'd call them a soul band.

■ "Soul is a word that should be used sparingly. Soul has become a type of music, not the feeling put into it. Most so called 'soul' bands are 'soul-less'. But I'd like to think we were a soul band. Yes."

■ Describe your LP in one word.

■ "Feeling. That's what went into it. Not money — that's for sure!" Johnny Dee sound of no wave!

Ut: in the dark?

an element of mystery. That way the music grows on you more and lasts much longer. Bob Dylan and Jim Morrison were just as obscure; we're attacking the language, we love double meanings."

- You make it sound really arty, more poetry than pop.
- "No, basically we're a rock band, three people working together as a unit. And don't mention feminism! Just because we're girls everybody brings it up. We just want to be considered as a band."
- In a way Ut are the perfect rock group. Not afraid to swap roles, each playing different instruments on different songs to get the sound they want. But they can't afford to be full time musicians. So have they ever thought of doing some more commercial tracks to try and make some money?
- "We did think of doing something under a different name but then we heard a Bangles single and changed our minds. The group is not just a hobby, but we can't tailor our music just to make money. We hate groups like Bananarama. They're so dumb, it's not much better than being a Playboy bunny."
- Part of the problem for groups like Ut is the support system in Britain.
- "The UK is in the middle ages in terms of funding the arts. Europe is much better. People are more open, they treat you well, and pay better. We don't sell more records in Europe but the live scene is certainly much healthier, especially in Eastern Europe. We've played in Poland and Hungary and they don't have a hang-up about mixing rock and art, they're not jaded. The Poles are very passionate people and they appreciate anything passionate."
- Whether you like the noise that Ut make or not, you have to admit that they are dedicated to their form of extreme art-rock.
- "We're always experimenting, we're intuitive rather than conceptual."
- What?
- "We just do things, we don't work it out first."
- Oh, I see.
- "Being in a band is like marriage. There is a very strong bond between us, and there is a very compelling number. There's no room for anybody to hide, we all have to work, there's no fat."
- Do you get on outside the group?
- "We're together all the time. I suppose it's more like sisters than being married."
- Ut are important because they believe in themselves and their music. They stretch the boundaries of sense and sound. They are a modern group making a modern noise, together. The perfect family. Christopher Mellor

SLUM CHUMS!

King Of The Slums on the fiddle

A song explodes. After which, we find an intriguing kind of chaos. A wayward violin flies all over the place, the vicious, jagged edges of its tone remain aggressive and, frankly, callous. The rhythm section attempts, and fails, to batten down the hatches while the vocalist pours out an endless stream of neurotic lyrical imagery, which is either downbeat surrealism or sneering cynicism, depending on your point of view.

■ As you may have gathered, King Of The Slums sound like nothing else on earth. They are not even a noise band, for within their overall cacophony lies a bewildering maze of melodic twists. What's more, and this can be most irritating, these twists tend to lodge in your mind and draw you back to the sound of King Of The Slums, again, again and again. You will find this sound sprawled ungainly across a recent EP on Debris magazine's Dave Haslam's Play Hard label, entitled, somewhat conceitedly, England's Finest Hopes. The song titles, as I never tire of stating, say it all. The Pennine Spitter, Venerate Me Utterly, Bedevilment's Favourite Son... Regular Radio 2 listeners need not be alarmed. King Of The Slums will not be hogging your airtime.

Slumming it in Lancs

- I meet the nucleus of this strange unit, Charley Keigher and Sarah Curtis (Charley is responsible for the street poetry, the songwriting and the odd passing guitar, Sarah for that bloody violin) within the hyper-trendy surroundings of Manchester's Cornerhouse arts centre. The pair are profoundly uncomfortable in this environment and, I can tell, are yearning for some austere tap room in Gorton. King Of The Slums are not yuppies. Sarah studied violin (to Grade Eight) at the prestigious Royal Northern College Of Music before dropping out (now, there's a phrase I'd like to see brought back into vogue) at the final furlong. The only question I want to ask upon hearing this is, why?
- Sarah: "Why? Oh, it was because Charley hit someone from the College and they said that, after that, I wouldn't stand a chance of getting my diploma. I didn't mind. I really want it to be known that I hated that place and everything it stands for."
- This is an unexpected outburst, as it happens, despite the violence of her violin. Sarah Curtis is of a reserved, if intense nature. Charley, on the other hand, is a slightly louder, but curious character. He's a Mancunian, through and through. He dislikes practically all modern music and professes to "hate students". He doesn't really mean it, though.
- "I'm obsessed with lamposts," he states, quite seriously. "They seem to indicate the past. I really love those old gas ones, they are so evocative."
- I enquire, rather tentatively, just how this lampost-loving Charley manages to write such strange songs...with such strange lyrics?
- "I write all the time, really. I have written over 400 songs and, yes, it is really frustrating to be writing songs so far in advance of what is being released. I started years ago, I was so naive in those days. I remember going down to CBS with my guitar and nothing else, no lyrics. I just played them these really dodgy songs and expected a contract."
- So, he is human after all, this Charley. Perhaps he doesn't know that everyone who has been involved with a band has, at some time in the past, similarly made a fool of themselves in that CBS office.
- I first heard King Of The Slums some two years ago, when they were called Slum Cathedral User. A Fallish name if ever I heard one, although Charley will hate me for saying that. I stumbled across their demo tape among a pile of over 200, for I was a judge in some dreadful local band competition. (Believe me, listening intently to 200 demo tapes, 199 of which all sounded like The Smiths, was a truly harrowing experience.) Slum Cathedral User leapt aggressively from the pack. They won the competition. In a sense, King Of The Slums are still leaping from the pack today, albeit on a larger scale. But it hasn't been easy.
- Charley: "We've played some weird gigs, all on a shoestring. One of them was at this club in Manchester. We had no idea what kind of club it was but we just walked in and asked for a gig. To our amazement we were given six weekly spots. We thought, that was it, the big breakthrough. But people just stared in disbelief. We were fired after a couple of gigs."
- And people, I suppose, are still staring in disbelief. Sarah, though, wants to have another moan. This time it's not at the expense of the Royal Northern College of Music, it's at people like me, who flinch at that vicious violin.
- "It really annoys me when people say the violin in noise, because it isn't. We think it sounds really good, really melodic."
- Err...
- Charley: "That's right. I think we are really accessible, very tuneful."
- There's no answer to that. Just this once, I will admit defeat. I'm flummoxed. Mick Middles

ADITO

AO Records (rue Albert de Latour, 30, 1030 Bruxelles, Belgium)

● 1/2 Understated new rock that's given an airy closet space by the male/female vocal exchanges. ADITO obviously stands for something, but the foreign tongue gives little away — other than that this four-piece have an aural view much wider than pompous pop. There isn't a lot of hope for acceptance on the cynical western front, but this is a nice, balanced album, a textured wheel rather than an industrious cog. Ripley

THE ANIMAL CRACKERS

So Paint A Map On My Face

Wild Orange WO 002 (Herzogstrasse 88, 8000 Munchen 40, West Germany) ●● A six track mini-LP from this German four-piece who briefly tickled the fancies of Underground with their Small Loud Song 45. That, in all its pop finery, is featured here, and as the guitars chime and the momentum picks up, the Crackers' distinctive new rock style cushions the proceedings like a comfy jumper that's just the right side of beatnik. Not colossal yet, but on the right autobahn. Johnny Eager

BIFF BANG POW!

Love Is Forever

Creation CRE 029

●● 1/4 Undoubtedly Biff Bang Pow!'s most outstanding platter to date, Love Is Forever is one of those contemporary pop sets that's underwritten with just enough body motions from the past to give it that all important staying power. There's a guitar line that could have come straight from the soundtrack to The Graduate, a string quartet-ambience that's oh-so Neil Young, a time change that's pure Love — but, best of all, Love Is Forever boasts a good ten tunes that're strong enough to become heartbreak tearjerkers for a new generation of swooning lonely hearts. Biff Bang Pow! may not be the most enigmatic of leather trouser wearers but they're pure Alan Bleasdale in a sea of Catchphrase game shows. Dave Henderson

BIOTA

Tinct

Recommended Records RRC31

●● American experiments in sound conducted by Americans with a reputation for their art. Biota is one of those names that lurks in the racks at your local megastore and looks a little too difficult to try — like a pizza topped with fruit as well as savouries. There's no particular noticeboard to pin them down on either, neither the musicians collective or the school of absurdists seem quite right, instead Biota have a place all their own, challenging, offering alternatives, breaking new ground. Tinct is a fine work, five tracks of seemingly seamless construction, an epic soundtrack — no less! Dave Henderson

THE BLUE HIPPOS

Forty Forty

Twin-Tone TTR 87124

●● 1/2 There's an edgy selection and change-of-direction running through this Blue Hippos LP. These US tinklers have had some good press as they've risen to the level of auspicious left fielders, but where does one go from there? Well, these mud-wallowers have opted to get intense as they fuse strains of jazz, beat, rock, new wave, country (you name it!). Best of all, the resultant gumbo is something more than cheese on toast. A fine musical album that boasts a melody or three of style and a collection of tunes of unquenchable quality. Dave Henderson

BREAKING CIRCUS

Smokers Paradise

Homestead HMS 092

●● 2/3 A hard guitar band with swatches of six string noise in abundance. The Hüsks, JAMC and Big Black tip a nod at Breaking Circus and utter a word of encouragement into their ravaged earholes. A six track pack, it kicks off with style and an instrumental theme of 'epic rock' proportions, ending with a muscular pulsater that shakes a fist under your nose and berates some "son of a bitch" who would be well advised to avoid that razor-edged geetar. You, on the other hand, should check out the 'angle' they're coming in from. Daz Iggmeth

THE BRILLIANT CORNERS

Somebody Up There likes Me

McQueen

● 1/2 The same seems to have been floating around the subconscious forever; so, too, does the music. Which is to say that this LP is consistent in its summery, undemanding pop, but never really grasps the awareness enough to fully impress.

Two problems spring to mind, the lack of variation and depth in the vocal, and the uninspired nature of the lyrics. Good points are that they can actually write a good tune, sort of Haircut 100 meets The Smiths, albeit in a very undramatic vein, making them sound just a little too subdued and laid back. With a kick up the bum and some good production, there's certainly something there to be milked, with nice touches like the sax sound and overall cleanness of it. Just put a bit of fire in yer loins, lads! This is supposed to be fun! Carole Linfield

CARMAIG DE FOREST

Six Live Cuts

New Rose ROSE 143

● 2/3 There's a little bit of embarrassing driveling high between tracks as Carmaig seems intent on reproducing the ambience of the Velvets at Max's Kansas City. The six tracks were recorded in late October and reveal the good bar-room rockin' sound that America excels at — whereas the UK's attempts invariably sink into pub rock self-abuse. Six Live Cuts was probably better on the night, would be great as a bootleg cassette but lacks a little finish on vinyl. Johnny Eager

CCCP

Socialismo E Barbarie

Virgin Italy CCCP 005

●● 1/2 Rumours are rife that Virgin UK are set to release this Italian megablast in the UK, so a little hounding might prove to be to the world's advantage with regards to securing that possibility. CCCP have grown from radical punk roots into something of an extreme theatre soap, but it's the music here that makes their outspoken prose — albeit in Italian — really bite. This is an album that blends the bloodrush of punk noise with the tempered folk roots of CCCP's environment, and the end result is a reactionary chemistry that has an incredibly unique sound. What they're on about isn't easy to understand, but you just know they're a little pissed off about something. Dave Henderson

THE CHAINSAW ZOMBIES

Obsession

Accelerating Blue Fish ACCLP 05

●● First glance and listen might say Bauhaus, but subsequent plays reveal that The Chainsaw Zombies are into... Bauhaus. To their credit they've developed the slim Murph moan to a new, more gritty level, but that bare chested consumptive torso could be just behind the speaker. A cult record that'll go down well in Euro leather circles — from where they hail — but will do little in Blighty. Enjoyable but still a little undefined. Nick Brody

BILLY CHILDISH AND SEXTON MING

Plump Prizes And Little Gems

Hangman HANG 10 UP

●● Either the emperor's new clothes or Gillingham pulling off a dramatic clinching goal in the sixth round of the FA Cup away to Liverpool. . . either way, this new fusion of the talents and tribulations of Billy and Sexy is oddball. An album that revolves around a Bonzo Dog/Zappa freakiness that's played on tuba and tambourine (well, almost) is a real alternative! This is wildly different, challenging and never boring. More power to their elbow, more variation and more style in the charts, please! We can but hope. Dave Henderson

Mind Matter THOUGHT 9

● Monosyllabic punky thrash from California. Christ On Parade exude angst but only a few chords, they also have little imagination in terms of song structure and delivery. A live band worth gobbing at, but a household listen that's less inspiring than a new can opener. TC Wall

Some nice noises in there, though, and a few lilting melodies, but I found the violent attacks too self-conscious and ultimately unnecessary. Carole Linfield

COMEBUCKLEY

To Tim Buckley

Because Of You Boy 001 Rec

C ●●● A six track homage to Tim that allows this septet to dissect and re-assemble some of Buckley's songs so that a new generation, and perhaps a new set of musicologists, can sample the writing and performance style of a unique talent. That Buckley has reached legendary status and spawned many a deep-rooted depresso to create something quite moving and emotional themselves is a good thing in itself, and that Comebuckley can perform and present it so well is even better. Beyond art-rock lies a new form of beauty. Well, this old hippy thinks that might be true. . . Dave Henderson

COPERNICUS

Deeper

Nevermore 2087 (Box 170150, NY 11217, USA) ●●½ If Nick Cave had been brought up on jazz and beer then he would sound like this. Copernicus is a far out beat poet backed by a whole host of musicians and noise makers. There are little symbols printed on the sleeve to tell you if the music and lyrics were improvised, and most of it was. My favourite tracks are Oh God, 52 glorious seconds of the man screaming just that, and Disco Days Are Over, totally spontaneous with three vocalists and 17 musicians. Very strange. Christopher Mellor

PETER COYLE

A Slap In The Face Of Public Taste

Edietsa CALCLP037 RR C

●● But, Alice, this adventure is just too bizarre. OK, picture the scene. . . Peter Coyle used to be in The Lotus Eaters. Imagine he takes loads of drugs and develops some intense scribble. He's really into Aubrey Beardsley, he knows his onions when it comes to pre-War outcasts and their versions of popular literature. He then makes an album. . . no, a double album, a semi-commercial soiree, a mixed up, tense and terse onslaught. Mr Coyle doesn't make it easy. . . he makes it hard, but that's good. This double set is intoxicating, an experience worth inhaling that smells much sweeter than Sinex and lasts a whole lot longer. Challenging but good. Dave Henderson

CUDU

Delivery

Materiali Sonori maso 33039

RR C ●●½ Through the disharmonic ambience of Cudu, one might expect a cover of Velvet Underground's Sweet Jane to stick out like a sore thumb, but, to their credit, that piece, plus the seven self-penned tracks, have a unique quality which straddles an obscurist bent in instrumental terms, while relying on accessible — almost filmic — phrases to reel in the listener. Delivery is a complete package which defies description, while climbing new musical heights. Dave Henderson

TOUMANI DIABATE

Kaira

Hannibal HNBL 1338

●¾ Hailed as one of Mali's top exponents of the Kora, Toumani is one of the younger virtuosos of this plinky stringed thing. The five pieces included display his rolling style while throbbing and humming of while almost looped, near-ambient mood floats on underneath. Hardly the beginning of an ultra-vibing new movement, but a cog in today's development for sure. Nick Brody

DIE SACHE

The Girl Who Stole The Eiffel Tower

Fab Records FAB-ML10 B C

●½ A great title for an album, but this German group's light pop songs, with squeaky-clean verse/chorus construction, does little or nothing as it treads a few too many well-worn themes. A modernist view of life, it struggles with the English language, making the end product a little less than polished. The story

● TACKY PLUS Lacking in finish

gets even more fuzzy with the inclusion of a Stock Aitken Waterman-penned song, leading to the conclusion that Die Sache need to be a little more selective in who they choose as bed partners. Johnny Eager

THE DONNER PARTY

The Donner Party

Cryptovision CRL 1400 Sh

●●¾ This has been out a while, maybe three months, but it sure deserves your time, money, love and affection. The Donner Party aren't in fact some strange Turkish dish that's hailed in north London, they're from the States and will, undoubtedly, be dropped in a REM-style pool for comparison. That's a shame really as, even though they write strong commercial songs in that vein, they have a lyrical and instrumental style all of their own. This debut is rich with visions of countrylands, tinged with the heat of the sun and the desert swirl, a parching hum in the ears that's well worth consulting a doctor about. Dave Henderson

ALBUM OF THE MONTH

THROWING MUSES

House Tornado

4AD cad802 RR C ●●● This is one we'll all have to live with for years to come. Throwing Muses have reached another stage in their development, making all comers redundant in the process. House Tornado is an important LP that's tense, emotional and evocative. Immersed in the Muses' minds is a sensitive but accessible vision that revolves around Kristen's intense vocals and the intertwined strands of each individual's instrumental contributions.

Throwing Muses have transcended their highly acclaimed back catalogue, moving majestically into a more vibrant, more readily available, more hooked sound — which manages to retain their haunting melodic structures. The frightening thing is this album is so good. Constant plays don't show up any flaws and the projections for future tangents are so exciting that you can't help but feel that this is going to be another mighty successful year for the band and their label. Dave Henderson

Live At The 100 Club

Nervous Records NERD 033

● Which comes with a free colour poster of possibly the worst collage I've ever seen, featuring the band, assorted boarding passes, various 'lads' and enough tattooed skin to make several pairs of fashionable boots with. Oh, and the customary toilet shot. So now you know.

The punkabilly rivvums of this lot are actually reasonably accomplished, even if I am put off by the overriding laddishness of it all, and they certainly give value for money, cramming eleven tracks into the set, including a version of Roxy Music's Love Is The Drug which features a ludicrous drum beat. Musically, they sound something like a punkabilly version of The Ruts, but at least seem to give the audience a good time. Whether you will enjoy it or not is doubtful; this really is one for the hardcore fans only.

Frenzy are, alas, no more, and I suspect 'musical differences' were brought to bear on the band. It was fun, though, wasn't it, lads? Something to tell the grandchildren about, anyway. Carole Linfield

FRED FRITH

The Technology Of Tears

Rec Rec Music Rec20 Rec C

●● A double set, featuring the work of Frith for dance and theatre, that may surprise a few passing spectators. Fred's weirder, more unorthodox material seems to have been laid to rest on sides one and two where turntables are played along with structured pieces, while on side three the fare could almost be classical. The best is side four, though, a flurry of sound sketches under the banner heading of propaganda, with 14 snippets of music in loop, percussive, ambient mode that somehow flow together — remembering that they're all intensely diverse. Why, there's even a slice of supermarket music in there. Just like everyday life, isn't it? Dave Henderson

GUANA BATZ

Rough Edges

ID NOSE20 Rec C ● 1/2 There's no denying that Guana Batz are perfect at what they do. They're superb exponents of rockabilly, but were born just a little too late. Later releases have suggested that they might be moving into more challenging, less obvious areas, but in Rough Edges they've opted to return wholeheartedly to what they're best at — grade A rockabilly. Now, if that's your bag, this full colour monster can be yours on both album, cassette and CD. How it matches up to the old masters of the genre is something each punter alone will have to wrestle with, but if you want your 'billy without the clicks, then this is for you. Johnny Eager

HANGMAN'S BEAUTIFUL

DAUGHTERS

Trash Mantra

Dreamworld RT C ● 3/4 A mini-LP from the realms of Dan Treacy, with warbling girlie vocal and lots going on behind to the point of being messy. Things get straightened out in time for the more lilting Cats Got Nine, in which the vocal gets echoed and overdubbed to a pleasing degree, but the male-sung Something About Today sounds distorted, particularly the backing vocal, despite the fact that it has the bones of a good tune. Pared down, this could be interesting, but as it is, there's too many ideas being thrown in, and the result doesn't yet gel. Carole Linfield

HAREM SCAREM

Pilgrim's Progress

Au-go-go ANDA 55 Sh ● More from the Australian onslaught, this time ensconced in rock and heady guitars. Harem Scarem, it seems, have their feet planted in the '60s, with their heads well and truly in the '80s, producing a heavy, adult music that's a little too male and muscular for my liking.

What they do, though, they do well, with a gruff vocal by Christopher Marshall that gives the proceedings a certain heavyweight authority, while the guitars, by (presumably his brother) Charles Marshall and Barry Palmer, jangle on in the background. Nicest touch is the occasionally echoing harmonica, which gives a Dylan-esque feel to the proceedings.

Harem Scarem are at their best when they're being dramatic and heartseeking (like on Lowdown) and at their lowest when being pure rockers (like on Cold Change). If they listen a little less to Bad Company, they could progress. Carole Linfield

HONOLULU MOUNTAIN DAFFODILS

Tequila Dementia

Zinger Records ZINLP4 P

●● 3/4 As their name suggests, the HMD's gather together a selection of seemingly irrelevant ideas and mulch them into one entertaining whole. There's no info with the package, and I can only grope in the dark as to their identity thanks to their no publicity stance, but although the address is London, the sound is, to my ears, more American than British. What do we have? Well, if I said Alice Cooper meets the Walker Brothers, would you have me locked up? Yeah, it's all here, from gravel vocals to pleasant instrumentals to some excellent esoteric stuff, two most notables being (I Feel Like A) Francis Bacon Painting and Collector Of Souls.

Nice touch is the sub-HM Mule Brain (Brain Of Mule), which displays a deft sense of humour. Only Disturbo Charger sounds too raw, presenting an overly grating attack.

Lots to commend it, then... so who are you? Carole Linfield

NM ● A six track mini LP from more trashers from Leicester way — is it something they put in the water? Suffice it to say that people who have seen this band live think them the bee's elbows, particularly since they're four mean, leather clad honchos. Six tracks here include a truly uninspired cover of Bachman Turner Overdrive's 'Ain't Seen Nothin' Yet' which is weaker than gnat's piss, though the remainder at least begins to kick the dust a bit with steady, early '70s type rockin'. They're probably more serious about it than they even give themselves credit for, but I must admit I don't find enough freshness in here for my liking. Any genre, no matter how purposely clichéd, needs something new added, and this lot have been out of the fridge just too long to come out smelling sweet. But then, that's the point, I guess. Carole Linfield

LIVE SKULL

Dusted

Homestead HMS090-1 CG

●● Live Skull's monstrous grating sounds from their early days were a savage, enmeshed mass. A wall of noise that spiralled in, casting jagged talons and ripping at the thin mesh covering the speaker. That was the guitar battles that were... and now, this latest album sees them just as intense, but throwing in a few more standardised chord songs to enable their music to veer closer to a point of greater access. For reference, Dusted could be seen as Patti Smith Group/Television-type new wave played in overdrive, with a welded guitar head battering at the door. Live Skull add a modern, Soniclife arching motion, which gives it that vital thrusting propulsion that's necessary to blast through the lacklustre opposition, burning holes as they go. Wow! Brad Manson

THE LONESOME STRANGERS

Lonesome Pine

Special Delivery SPD 1012

NM CG ●● Americans with a message! The Lonesome Strangers sound like deadringers for the contemporary descendants of The Dillards. Fleetingly twangy and ever-embracing, they electrify the standard bluegrass style and bring it up to a more moderne tempo. If such a thing disgusts you, just take a listen to their cover of Here Comes The Night and you'll soon realise that it was actually Jason And The Scorchers and their wave who were the bastardisation of the genre. The Lonesome Strangers are a formidable outfit with a song worth hearing. Dave Henderson

LUL

Inside Little Orphan Annie

Eksakt 036 (5038 BC, Tilburg, Holland)

●● Lui have the knack of the noise. They steam into gear with their heads reeling through a sea of SST records, banging their feet on their guitars like Minutemen used to, breaking their strings as they shift time pattern, stop and start, change their minds. Inside Little Orphan Annie is uncomfortable enough to be interesting, annoying enough to be listenable, and creative enough to let Lul into a few more hearts. Not heavy metal, but heavy handed (and handsome). Ripley

THE MAGIC BASTARDS

The Magic Bastards

Crook Cassettes BAST 2 CG

●¾ A strange pot pourri of noises and atmospheres, with mostly unstructured yet coherent songs battling their way to your ears. The backbone is very post punk, with the vocal alternately grating and tuneful, but the feel is very '80s, as if the influences of the past decade have been absorbed carefully and then brought to bear here. There's an evident sense of humour here, too, with lines like "my inside is trying to get out... ", all sung in a bouncy rhythm.

Not instant, by any means, but insistent, and interesting. Carole Linfield

MASTER/SLAVE RELATIONSHIP

This Lubricious Love

RRRecords RRR-MSR (151 Paige Street, Lowell, Ma 01852, USA)

●¾ Master/Slave Relationship aren't an everyday team. The leather and whips guys would make this LP the anthem of Skin Two if they could get their clammy hands on it, but let's talk discipline... and remember, I'm a lady! MSR are from America and side one of this industri-romp is a post-TG noise, gas taps turning, thrusting synths and sexual titles, but they're just teasing. Side two takes the bullwhip by the teeth and gets to grips with full-scale sexual encounter, from gruesome twosome talk through to wheezing and grunting... the backing is minimal, the magic is the mood, and Debbie Jaffe

— the cog of this rampant revolution — makes the plastic melt. This Lubricious Love is a sex game more erotic than Twister. Ripley

THE MEKONS

So Good It Hurts

Cooking Vinyl SIN 008 RR CG

●●● Since the dawn of time (and before), The Mekons have been soundly, and resolutely, giving vent to their emotions on political and personal terms. Did you know they were once on Virgin? Well, apart from that they've learnt to play their guitars over the years and, more recently, have become a byword for the better parts of the country/folk revival. On this new LP they've mounted a new peak that's immediately accessible, then outrageously engaging. The musical styles vary, the production never falters — allowing all manner of moods to float on by — and the realisation that this is a group who're set to become rather huge cannot be ignored. An exceptional record. Nick Brody

THE MEMBRANES

Kiss Ass Godhead

Glass GLALP 028 NM CG

●●¼ Irreverent Gooniechaps, The Membranes seem to have been there or thereabouts since the year dot — creating neanderthal rock 'n' roll, overheating their toast, fusing their amplifiers and being generally ludicrous in their approach. What's more they're also very English, very humorous in a Coronation Street style, laughing at catchphrases, pulling faces behind the surrealists' backs. On Kiss Ass Godhead, they start with an inbullt self-destruct, a Steve Albini production credit and a wall of sound that's pretty damn difficult to penetrate. The Membranes will never make easy listening music and it's difficult to gauge whether they'll attract new fans with this album, but it is one of the most phenomenal rackets you're likely to get your head pummelled by. Dave Henderson

MAN KLAN

Flesh Machine

Wire Records WRLP007 ●● Lots of ideas and an underlying feeling of menace gives Man Klan their appeal, with a fine female vocal providing the focal point. The direction is one of understated psychopathy and barely hinted at sexuality, with a montage of guitars adding a frayed lunacy and driving beat. Each track could stand admirably on its own, all of which does, conversely, mean that as an album this is all rather overwhelming. There is variety, sure, but perhaps Carita Palmroos should occasionally step back and give her artistry a little more room. Like on Love Child, which is good, but would have been excellent but for a few more dramatic pauses. Still, all the signals are that this combo has a good ear for a tune and a nice line in delivery. With a little more self control, this lot could wield a nicely jagged edge. Carole Linfield

MIGHTY MIGHTY

Sharks

Chapter 22 CHAPLP 24 NM C

● 1/2 A game of two halves, Brend, in which Mighty Mighty cast several personality crises to the wind and ask... can we be pop stars? Well, on this display, there's a definite chance. Sharks sucks in places. It gets twee, self-emulsifying, grottyly over-romantic and yeuchy, but then there are four or so neat tunes that whittle away at the whistling buds and just about make it all worthwhile.

If The Housemartins can make embarrassing jumpers and soccer trendy again, then there's hope for the pop of Mighty Mighty — providing that they can admit to themselves that they're good songwriters who'll never wear leather trousers with pride. Mighty Mighty play boy-next-door tunes for boys next door. Yum. Brenda Collins

MINIMAL MAN

Hunger Is All She Has Ever Known

Play It Again Sam BIAS 71

1/2 Mainly atmospheric and rather dreary, self-centred stuff which doesn't live up to the promise of the esotericism of the title. This is neither intensive listening or background music, with the likes of A Little Surrender really just being the jottings of a song not yet fully realised, and I Heard being more like a confusion of unhinged sounds. With work, more depth and structure, they could harvest more, like on the opener, Interviews, which is much livelier and more amenable all round. The rest just ain't my bag. Carole Linfield

MOVE

Move

A&D A&D1 EE C ● 1/4 Move's Euro posturing sees them struggle through a series of tongues and styles to create an emanately listenable/intriguing LP. In their native land, Italy I think, they're probably seen as being reasonably inventive and forward looking, but in the context of world affairs they're in non-league status. Move seem to have been caught while still in the first throes of puberty; they need time, and a release schedule that allows them to develop. Nick Brody

PETER MURPHY

Love Hysteria

Beggars Banquet BEGA 92

● 3/4 Well, this isn't the unstructured, ambling ambience you might have expected from the ex-Bauhaus cheekbones. Instead, this is a coherent, tuneful package with tracks which are, on the whole, pretty listenable. The increase in self-discipline means there's a lot less of that po-faced droning, although the easternised tones of Socrates The Python comes close (and isn't, as I'd hoped, a song about a snake glove puppet made out of a sock). Instead, there's some nice, deft touches, like the prime track, the romantic Indigo Eyes, which includes a sharp hook and wouldn't sound out of place covered by The Bangles. Sure, a lot of the tracks here also need living with before becoming permanent fixtures, but ultimately it's worth the investment, especially if it also gets the feet moving, like the Bowie-esque tones lurking out of Blind Sublime. And speaking of the thin white one, there's also a jolly fine version of the Bowie/Pop Fun Time, which lends a suitably climactic ending to the proceedings. Carole Linfield

PANIC IN SLUMBERLAND

Solitaire Forever

Ja! Music Ja! 0018 (Ja! Music, Dombergstr. 4, D-5800 Hagen 1)

● 1/4 "We live at night/We die at dawn/Making fools out of ourselves/Cold — bored/Nocturnal brigades" (Nocturnal Brigades).

Presumably a lyric inspired after having spent an evening observing the pose, drink, puke routine constantly in progress at the Limelight's VIP bar! Panic In Slumberland deal in atmospherics, which work most effectively on this track and Dream-dancing (In Front Of The Gates Of Hell). There's an insistent quality here which induces that emotional paradox we experience in our most vivid nightmares — compulsive fear. Other redeeming features are its ability to communicate on vinyl, its potent live energy and those charmingly pronounced words spoken in English with just a tinge of Teutonic! Alex Kadis

The Tenement Year

Mercury/Phonogram ●●● The revived, revitalised and revisited Pere Ubu sound even more like a haunting soundtrack to David Lynch's quirky Eraserhead flick on this 11 track set, which sees them forget about their mature years, instead returning wholeheartedly to their more formative near-childlike period. Bozo's might blurt, 'Oh yeah, I went off them after Modern Dance', and to a certain

But, what are these bands up to now and what do they look like? Well, I'll let you into a secret...

THE RAW HERBS She's A Nurse

A brill track from this four-piece. It was their first 45 for Medium Cool, next up they have two tracks on a MC LP comp and their latest single, Don't Bury Me Yet, is brill.

THE WEDDING PRESENT Give My Love To Kevin

A reworked version of this track from their excellent George Best LP, produced by Chris Allison and suggesting that they've got a lot more character up their sleeve. This lot are gonna be BIG! Their new single, Nobody's Twisting Your Arm, is super-doooper.

MIAOW! Belle Vue

A very old cut from before they joined Factory and did two marvy singles for them. Belle Vue was on their own label, Venus. They've since reshaped their line up and leading smile, Cath Carroll, looks set to be the new Sandie Shaw. Hooray!

THE VANDALS Ladykiller

These lot are an obscure Aussie crew who turned up on Hybrid three or so years ago. This track was on their first LP, When In Rome Do As The Vandals, and on a Hybrid comp which also featured Guadalcanal Diary and Spikes among others. It is their finest three mins and 42 secs.

THE HOUSEMARTINS You Better Be Doubtful

A strumbling smirk from their The People Who Grinned Themselves To Death LP — a parting shot from a band who knew when to call it a day. PD Fenton intends to do something and, er, well I suppose the others do too.

THE GO-BETWEENS Karen

A classic Reed-esque cut from their seminal Able label down-under period. Check the nearby pic for their pre-flares flare-wearing exploits and marvel at their other fine LPs and 45s on Beggars Banquet.

STUPIDS Leave Your Mark

An alternate mix from the Van Stupid LP — with a different geeeetaar break and different words — sees these skating East Anglian honchos break fingernails. They'll be doing 70 LPs this year and touring with The Hard-Ons.

ALEX CHILTON No Sex

An AIDS-aware message from the man who sang The Letter and wrote September Gurls. No Sex creaped out last year on New Rose; Alex currently has a single out called Dalai Lama.

PIXIES

Surfer Rosa

4AD CAD803 C ●● $\frac{3}{5}$ It must have been a daunting prospect, following the tremendous Come On Pilgrim mini-album, but Pixies, a group still in their tender years, more than justify the early acclaim with Surfer Rosa, while skilfully opening a hall full of diverse doors to shuffle into. The mood is embracing, welcoming, but the playing remains loose and twisting, able to create heady atmospherics. The songs are well crafted, well delivered sketches which embrace commercial ideals as well as bizarre left-field out of control moments. Pixies play with massed venom, and with the volume on full, Surfer Rosa snags at your heels, grasping for attention. The penultimate track on side one sums it all up, it is a Godhead experience, it blurts "Gigantic". These Americans soon will be. Love it to death! Dave Henderson

PLAYHOUSE

Gazebo Princes

Twin Tone TTR 87131 RTS
 ● $\frac{2}{3}$ Guitars eventually switch to overload as Playhouse rev it on out the window on Wake Up. As proceedings have developed the story runs the gamut of popular rock 'n' roll — throwing a hat in the air for everything from country swing to thrash — the end result sounding neither near nor far from either. Playhouse have a tatty notebook of sideswipes that looks good on paper, sounds great over a beer, but never attains religious brutality on vinyl. They're knocking at the door, but at the moment there's no-one home. TC Wall

POORS OF REIGN

Plenty

Lo Type LO5 PT C ● Poors Of Reign are in the suburbs of a new renaissance in pop songwriting. They also fancy themselves as spokespeople for their bank balance/social standing and, eventually no doubt, as potential new wave/rock icons. Perhaps in isolation these things might not seem bad at all, but Poors Of Reign certainly prove that such diverse motivations don't gel, and trying to create colossal new rock music on a limited budget, while still besotted with their contemporaries' success, is a near impossible goal. For that, Poors Of Reign languish in no-man's land, with ideas and a certain amount of presence and political clout, but unfortunately, it seems the bus to town has been temporarily delayed. Dave Henderson

RIFLE SPORT

White

Ruthless Records RS016 SH
 ● $\frac{1}{4}$ Oh, this is just an awkward album. Rifle Sport have a knack of wobbling off the shelf, smashing their grinding rhythms and moody melodies into a million pieces every time you think that you might just be getting hooked. White's the kind of post Joy Division LP that might catch cross-references, but in truth it bears nothing of that ilk, just a spoiling potential which isn't always desirable. White is like putting salt into a mouth ulcer, a tequila and lime too far. . . Dave Henderson

SHOCK THERAPY

My Unshakeable Belief

Fundamental SAVE 45 RR C
 ● $\frac{1}{3}$ Shock Therapy's debut album follows last year's mini-set in further developing the dark visionary shroud of vocalist Gregory John McCormick. A strange mix of chunky guitars and chubby electronic plinky bits, the album never really reaches a climactic noise level, which inevitably sees the collected Shockists juggling to keep control. On this showing, Shock Therapy are one of those new wave US combos who seem destined to disappear rapidly after a brief flurry of Stateside popularity. Dave Henderson

SIGLO XX

Fear And Desire

Play It Again Sam BIAS 87 RR C ● More Europeans infatuated with the legacy of Joy Division. Siglo XX begin quite well but soon shuffle down the slippery pole of doom and gloom. These guys live for downers and make music to turn down the most uplifted brow. But, whereas someone like The Wolfgang Press can create a tense, hesitant, vibed-up sound that wallows in its own desperation, Siglo XX seem to only be capable of puncturing their vacuous void. There's nothing more than an inward-looking repetition here, which might be fine for some people, but it's not enough for me. Nick Brody

SMEGMA

Nattering Naybobs Of Negativity

Dead Man's Curve DMC 012 RR C ● $\frac{23}{25}$ Yes, erm, aah, very odd. Distorted horns, looped bubbling, babies through an acid kaleidoscope, snatches of this and pinches of that plus only Smegma know what. Easy listening? Listen, forget it. Listen again and it's still bloody strange.

This band have discovered that an electric blender and some recordings make an hallucinogenic milkshake that's full of lumps and bits that stick in the throat. Full of peaks and troughs like some dreamy layer cake-type experience. Phew!

Close your eyes, relax your muscles and try not to imagine things alternately interesting then horrible. Let the Dire Straits generation eat Smegma! Yeeuch. Daz Igy meth

SONOKO

La Debutante

Crammed CRAM 056 NM G

●● Sonoko is sultry and Japanese, presenting her salty tales of love and life stretched, in nursery rhyme-style, over simplistic sounds — a music box, a tiny beat — and a sympathetically lush production. La Debutante boasts tender moments, mini-operettas and covers of diverse anthems, like In Heaven from David Lynch's Eraserhead and the rock 'n' roll standard I Love How You Love Me... the end result is an arresting sideways look at affairs of the heart, a bracingly personal release. Delicate and disturbingly grasping. TC Wall

SPAZZTIC BLURR

Before And After

Earache MOSH 5 Re G

●● 1/3 A big, brash album from this Oregon crew who have a strange sense of humour that liberally shows its face through the holocaustic guitar barrage. A laugh, a smile, a touch of toilet humour and some frantically explosive rhythms make the songs on this record really stand out. Compared to Stupids/Hard-Ons et al, Spazztic Blurr are a little further removed, like a cross between The Goons and Black Flag at 78. Either way, this is a side-splitter of high quality, not to be missed. Johnny Eager

STEAMING COILS

Never Creak

Rotary Totem RTRLP06 (36131/2

West 4th Street, Los Angeles, CA 90020, USA) ●●● Everything from the sleeve to the run out groove of this album smells of self-indulgent art taking self-pity on itself by making self-centred records. It's not Residents-friendly, it's not ambient and different, it's just a total mismatch of ideas, musical cultures and styles. After 11 or 12 plays I still can't think of anything to say other than this is something that everyone should experience if only to toss it across the room and frame the sleeve. Dave Henderson

STIFF LITTLE FINGERS

Live And Loud

Link Records LINKLP026 PRT

● 1/2 The revived and revitalised Stiffies who toured at the tail end of last year, caught live on a good night. Now slicker and more succinct than their former days, they can still cut a rug when it comes to candid political observations, and in Jake Burns they always had a forceable frontman. The edgy hesitancy is long gone, which is a shame in a way, and some of the tracks are, dare I say, a little comfortable at times. Plucky all the same. Brenda Collins

27 DEVILS JOKING

Actual Toons

Fundamental SAVE 048 RR G

● The Devils feature Chip Holz, a current Roky Erickson band drummer, and do a tastefully respectful version of the man's Two Headed Dog, but you can't help but feel that the rest of this geezer acid-test is less well conceived. Brian Curley's heads-down guitar make this trio a jagged dog-eared throb that's hurried and exposed — with just too many rock-out phrases for comfort. TC Wall

Second Belgian 6T's Boom!

Waterloo Sunset/007 Records P

●● What a strange and un-uniformed album this is! Dealing with the Belgian bands of Flemish rather than French extraction, when it's good it damn near knocks the socks clean off your feet but, oh my, when it's bad... Opening track by The Sandmen should fall into the latter category with its horribly predictable handclaps and limp three chord thrash but it saves itself from a fate only less marginally worse than death through sheer enthusiasm and relentless opus!

Some Kinda Weird borrow those handclaps and appear to do little else to recommend themselves. But they're not the only borrowers; the three chord thrash rears its limiting little head on The Voner's Lawrence too. Moments of exceptional glory come frequently, however, and most noticeably with The Martian's brand of joyous R&B, complete with rasping harmonica. The truly brilliant Your Loving by The Office demands multi-play, as do both offerings from The Rockforts who seem to have an endless reserve of energy and musical wisdom. We have The Spanks to thank ultimately for their variation on the theme with the hard-hitting Low-Down, which is straight from reverb city and as potent as hell! Alex Kadis

Song And Legend

Abstract AABT 700 P

●● 2/3 There's a story of independent endeavour on show with this double LP set. About a year ago the German label Gap started to compile a comprehensive set of tracks by bands from all over the world — a kind of tome of the times, with music of all angst-ridden kinds featured. This end result features 29 acts, spans four extremely creative sides and now gets a domestic UK release through Abstract.

The quality is high throughout and inevitably some of the lesser-spotted combos provide the most spectacular cuts. From the 29, obvious highlights come from New Model Army, The Leather Nun, Sort Sol, The Vylies, Band Of Holy Joy, Abwärts, Helios Creed and a whole bundle more... so take some time to envelop yourself in Song And Legend, it'll be an educational experience, to say the least. Dave Henderson

Used And Recommended By

White Label L-38822 RTS ● A strange hybrid from festival-frenzied Australia, featuring a riot of strumming bronzed chaps and Nick Cave — whose sore thumb is not being sucked. A celebration of The Hollow Men (no, not the Brits or the Americans), Harem Scarem, Not Drowning, But Waving, Hunters And Collectors, Chris Bailey and more, which has no cohesion and only shines with the name Shower Scene From Psycho — unfortunately their contribution is a pale cover of Jefferson Airplane's White Rabbit. Huh, nothing much to celebrate here. Nick Brody

THE WILD SWANS

The Wild Swans

WEA ● 3/4 More sweet tasting pop tones, melted together successfully into a palatable whole, if not a unique one. The Wild Swans like hook lines and use them with great effectiveness, making all the songs easy bedfellows. They like empathetic subject matter, like undying love (the very good Archangel) and the plight of the running down of the top half of the country (the rather more bland Northern England). But the name that springs to mind is OMD, although in that band's less bland moments, which means there are times where that does make them sound, well, a bit dated. They're definitely, though, a singles band; certainly stuff like Mythical Beast could crawl into the charts. A useful sampler of their goods, then. Carole Linfield

X RAY POP

Psychedelik Dolls

RRRecords RRR018 (151 Paige

Street, Lowell, Ma 01852, USA) ●● This quartet of French eccentrics play quirky pop with electronic buttons and bows. Ten songs create a sleazy attic sound that's spiced by some clever arrangements and effects, and created by the vocals of Zouka and Pam Pam. Not a Pepsi And Shirley, hardly a Strawberry Switchblade, but haunting nonetheless. Dave Henderson

JOHN ZORN

Spillane

Nonesuch/Elektra 979 172-1

●● A much talked about dude is John Zorn... and rightly so. Here he takes chances and throws down a few musical styles in the eclectic search for sound montage, and ends up with three distinctive pieces. Spillane is hard on the heels of soundtrack music — take Angel Heart for instance — with all styles thrown in; Two-Lane Highway adopts the same ideas but uses Albert Collins' guitar to lead it through, while Forbidden Fruit trades the Kronos Quartet string sound with scratching. On paper it sounds great, but it doesn't all come off. There's been a lot of people fondling the same ideas for a good dozen years and this is nothing new, merely a different variation. Enjoyable nonetheless. Dave Henderson

RE-REWIND

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackages boasts some real gems. . .

TERRY ALLEN
Lubbock (On Everything)

Special Delivery SPT1007/8 RM
 Licensed from Fate Records in the States, this double first saw the light of day in 1978. Trailing through America, talking about bars, football stars and local town DJs, Allen's country drawl and lazy guitar-picking style relaxes the parts of the rubbery forehead that might otherwise have gone solid. This is a taste of driving America, a flatland farmer gets a namecheck, Allen stops in at the PTA, and life become everyday, but never mundane. This is a closely knit, inward-looking, self-exposing collection of tunes which bares Terry Allen's soul and offers a view of another world that most Europeans have only ever seen on the movie screen. Johnny Eager and the title track. The rest is a motley collection of psychedelia-influenced, late '60s nostalgia from the Children, whose life history reads a little like a Comic Strip pastiche. Bolan's contributions, though small overall, are distinctly noticeable, while the confused direction of the sex 'n' drugs vs love and peace mentality of the band convolutes itself around the remainder of the relatively undated tracks.

Their manager, Simon Napier Bell, later to discover Wham!, of course, may not have made John's Children megastars, but their legacy still makes for interesting listening, particularly since some of the band's members went on to appear in Sparks and others in Radio Stars (Make A Man From A Rabbit, anyone?). Carole Linfield

JOHN LEE HOOKER
The Cream

Charly R&B CDX22 CH Deep rootsy John Lee, taken from a live show in California back in '77. Swaggering, heavily-salted blues and moody R&B are let loose over a heavyweight backing band, leaving John Lee to croon, swoon, pluck and please. The evening is slowly built into a fat-bellied, whisky-soaked chortle, with some tempered performances and some extrovert touches — the best example of which is the play off of minimal backing against vocals, and noisy guitar intro, on TB Sheets. A fine collection from the hands of a legendary figure. Dave Henderson

EDDIE BO
Check Mr Popeye

Edsel ED 259 P Piano balladeering with a upbeat punch, Eddie Bo launches a string of projects resulting from Edsel research into the old American Ric label with this album of exceptionally tasteful New Orleans rhythm and blues. A man with a rather prolific track record, Bo's enclosed contributions cover '50 to '62 and illustrate his narrative style of delivery — like on the title track where tales of Popeye and Olive Oyl fill the grooves. Eddie Bo's legacy is more in the bar-room bravado and sad tales zones, but it's compulsive listening nonetheless. Dave Henderson

TOMMY JARREL
Rainbow Sign

Fundamental SAVE 38 RR A recording from '84, taken from the Rebel catalogue and featuring the silver-haired Tommy Jarrel. An untrained fiddle-player, he finds his way around the resin and fretboard with ease and hollers up a storm in the kind of style us palid Europeans haven't heard since listening to out-takes from Southern Comfort. Cajun, bluegrass, call it what you will. . . Tommy Jarrel's music, accompanied by mandolin, guitar and banjo, is something from a region most of us are unlikely to frequent. A salty dog who'd give Jack Bennie a run for his ceeeeegar! Dave Henderson

JOHN'S CHILDREN
A Midnight's Scene

Bam Caruso KIRI 095 Re
 John's Children has achieved a certain notoriety as being one of the spawning grounds for the talent of one Marc Bolan; however in reality the star-spangled pixle only appeared on four tracks in the group's whole career, namely (the important and rather good) Desdemona, Sarah Crazy Child, Go-Go Girl

KANDA BONGO MAN
Amor Fou

Hannibal HNBL 1337 After his recent UK jaunt, plus the featured track on Virgin's Earthworks compilation Heartbeat Soukous, Hannibal have put together a six track set of some of Kanda Bongo Man's finest music. Those still stuck in the tentative Post-Paul Simon-Bhundu Boys-are-alright-but-which-other-African- so unds-can-I-dig-mode can rest assured that Amor Fou, with its constantly rolling rhythms, tickling vocals and exquisite guitar, is the next station on the line. Dave Henderson

MAGMA

Udu Wudu

Decal LIK 18  Hmrrrrrrrr. Classic (?) rock operettas that omm along in eastern style, with plenty of pre-Hawkwind moans for good measure, doing little to explain why snooker supremo Steve Davis digs them so much. This space monster hails from '77, a time when the rest of the world was cocooned in Pistols tomfoolery... given the choice one can only hope that a Pistols revival follows again this time, too. Nick Brody

STEVE REICH

Early Works

Nonesuch/Elektra 979 169-1 Four pieces of classic Reich, ranging from the offbeat tape loop manipulation of It's Gonna Rain and Come Out, to the clattering interplay of two men clapping on Clapping Music and the looped beginnings of Piano Phase. The recordings stem from '65 to '72 and show the kind of experimental genius — in classic style and delivery — that would much later sound innovative and original when used by everyone from Hawkwind to Cabaret Voltaire and Chaka Khan, and in technique and end result, the more recent scratchers. Intriguing stuff that still stands up well — even though it now has many more contemporary bedfellows. Dave Henderson

TOMMY RIDGLEY

New Orleans King Of The Stroll

Edsel ED260  Taken from the Ric label, this 15 track set features early '60s material by Tommy Ridgley, who'd joined the label after serving time on Atlantic in the '50s. Seen as possibly his most fruitful time, the string of singles recounted here sees him live up to the monster title of king of stroll, laying down classic cut after classic up till late '62. The final two tracks are the A and B sides of a '64 John release which was, till now, incredibly difficult to get, so this is a valuable package for enthusiasts and music lovers alike. Dave Henderson

THE THIRTEENTH FLOOR ELEVATORS

The Psychedelic Sounds Of...

Decal LIK 19  Phase one of the Elevators' acidic nightmare gets a timely re-release again — it made it out through Radar in the late '70s but disappeared after that label went bust — and it sounds quite contemporary, taking into account current psychedelic sidesteps, some 22 years after it first saw the light of day. While Bobby Moore was drooling over the World Cup, The Thirteenth Floor Elevators were drugged out and mellow, producing short sharp bursts of tongue-tingling pop combusting like exploding gum against the roof of rock 'n' roll's grazed mouth. (Yeah, whatever you say... Ed.) Brad Mason

THIS HEAT

This Heat

These Records HEAT 1

THIS HEAT

Deceit

These Records HEAT 2

 Classics without a doubt. Formative sounds from the sub-industrial 'new music' days in which This Heat re-designed drum kits and developed a unique English-sounding industrial folk music — that had as much to do with TG and Can as it did with the cloth-capped gurning vocalists of the old school of traditional folk. The debut album features their live set of the time, which they perfected through numerous shows. This must be the finest version of it, with the studio cleanliness giving the proceedings more edge, while Deceit followed a more awkward, more blurred direction. It turned up, originally on Rough Trade, when This Heat looked to be a flavour to savour as we turned into the '80s. Sadly, funk in its many forms overtook the listening tendencies and the band seemed to disappear. As I say, these are timely reminders, and classics indeed. Dave Henderson

IKE AND TINA TURNER

Fingerpoppin'

Edsel ED243  A rollicking compilation of tracks from Ike and Tina's years at Warner Brothers, which cover several interesting areas, catching the duo — with teamsters — in live, basic studio and orchestrated situations. A fine soulful set of sounds, it particularly displays the raunchier excesses of the group in a live context — especially bringing out Tina's throaty vocals and Ike's strolling guitar style — where the whooping of the crowd enhances an already pulsing performance style. Finest cut, Tell Her I'm Not Home, also features a ragged talkover intro with a mock rhythm breakdown. Fine stuff indeed. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

If It Ain't A Hit, I'll Eat My...

Zu-Zazz Z2009  A strange, sexually frustrated plastic passion, featuring 11 tales of explicit drug and sex references from the blues, R&B, cajun and soul backwaters. How odd it is to hear The Clovers' doo-wop vocals on The Rotten Csuckers Ball, and to catch Jackie Wilson and Lavern Baker getting down on Think Twice with its references to kissin' ass, cocaine, reefers and the occasional buzz word. The going gets more left-field with Boozoo Chavis, Snatch And The Poontangs (probably the best track here), The Blenders' Don't F Around With Love and Bullmose Jackson's Big Ten Inch. Not for feminists in places, but mostly tongue-in-cheek (or thereabouts). Johnny Eager

YELLO

Solid Pleasure

Claro Que Si!

You Gotta Say Yes To Another

Excess

Stella

Phonogram re-issues Since the turn of the decade and the advent of the electronic boom, Swiss playboys Yello have consistently proved to be one of the most entertaining of the synthesiser groups.

While often the purveyors of the perfect beat, they have never particularly been about 'songs' as such, hence one major reason for their lack of UK Top 40 success, but they have always been about creating the perfect mood. Rarely does a Yello track last more than four minutes, thereby avoiding the trap of self-indulgence, and every so far LP has contained enough variation to satisfy most.

Their tasteful mixture of vocalist/self-publicist Dieter Meier's madcap humour, coupled with Boris Blank's technical expertise and vast array of gorgeous sounds in the studio, is envied by many of the electronic generation, and I doubt if another synth band has been sampled more often in recent years.

Phonogram have now, in their infinite wisdom, decided to bombard us with these low price re-issues of the first four full length Yello albums, and although a lot of the material here has been remixed and re-issued to dazzling effect on the double LP 1980-85 The New Mix In One Go, all of these records are well worth buying in their own right.

Only the first two are really currently difficult to obtain, reintroducing the early Yello at their most charming and low budget on such classics tracks as Night Flanger, from Solid Pleasure, and Daily Disco, from Claro Que Si!. But there is little point in singling out key tracks, as each record has a great feel to it and works well as a complete entity.

For the third and fourth albums they had the benefit of new toys and big record company backing, and it shows. Stiff Records originally gave You Gotta Say Yes To Another Excess a big push in 1983 and I Love You and Lost Again were almost hits. Stella followed the marvellous Vicious Games 12 inch (the LP version is sadly tame in comparison) and includes the luscious Desire and Stalaktidrama among its many treasures.

If you've heard a lot about Yello but don't really know where to start, or if last year's supreme The Rhythm Divine (with Shirley Bassey) whetted your appetite for more, then your best bet is to plump for Stella and work your way backwards. It's well worth the effort. If you're at all interested in '80s electronic music, then it's totally essential. Alex Bastedo

RE-PLAY

Antiques, curios and gems unearthed...

BOYS AND GIRLS SAY...

The French label, L'Invitation Au Suicide, has been responsible for picking up on some suitably bizarre and left-field outfits in its time, none more strange than Party Boys, a Los Angeles five piece consisting of two girls and three guys. Their album for the label, No Aggro, appeared through New Rose and was met by universal ignorance, but if you can find a copy around then this is something worth checking.

With a sleeve by Savage Republic's Bruce Licher and a sound a few steps more wired than the Sav's droney percussive daze, Party Boys play Talking Heads music through muffled speakers. If you can't find this masterwork then look out for a soon to arrive double of the group's finest moments which should sneak out on Nate Starkman in the States and on Fundamental (through Red Rhino) over here.

HELP ME, I'M FALLING...

With The Fall destined to be the spit on everyone's lip this year, there's a tasteful package currently available through Factory's video arm, Ikon, which catches them in semi-seminal mode, at around the time that Brix joined the group. Caught live and in some hilarious staged antics, they look like the sort of groovy group that you'd beg to have living next door to you. Featured tracks, through the E Smith mirth and Brix barage, include the happily-superb Totally Wired. Grab this gem through Pinnacle.

Sex Sex Sex and pop

The Flatmates get stimulated.

24 UNDERGROUND

Trees, fields, church spires, football grounds and terraced houses blur past the window. I'm on my way to visit The Flatmates, Bristol's premier pop band (according to some sources). I'm worried, what should I ask them? Should I ask Martin (guitar) why he wears glasses that Deidre Barlow wouldn't be seen dead in? Shall I ask their new drummer, Joel, if he's modelled himself on 'Snap' from the Rice Crispies cereal packet? Maybe I could ask Sarah (bass) where she gets her hair highlighted. Luckily, Debbie (vocals) won't be there, so I don't have to ask her how many journalists she's beaten up.

The Flatmates are not my favourite band, so it was with nervous trepidation that I stood on the doormat that proclaimed 'Subway House' and rang the doorbell. I needn't have worried, the bell chimed the opening bars of The Undertones' Teenage Kicks and Martin whisked open the door with a briefcase in his hand — straight to business! No messing!

Martin: "I don't think people hate The Flatmates, they hate the genre of music that we're in."

Sarah: "When people see us live, they have to admit they like us."
Why?

Martin: "We actually do a show live, we don't just look at our feet and act coy. We put a bit of rock 'n' roll spirit into it, a bit of energy — a bit of vitamin C."

"Now The Smiths have split up I think there's a desperate need for bands who sing about death."

These Flatmates have just released their fourth and finest single, Shimmer. A four track 12-inch EP with a real killer pop song entitled If Not For You hidden away on the B side — this song could have been written for Debbie Harry — it's a Festive 50 candidate for sure. The EP is a definite attempt to jettison the shambling associations of the last two years — a real production jobby.

Sarah: "Shimmer is epic, loud and exciting."

Martin: "It's about the destructive side of love. It progresses from being a love song in the first verse to a hate song in the second, to a suicide song in the last verse."

Sounds very morose.

Martin: "Now The Smiths have split up I think there's a desperate need for bands who sing about death."

So is this a huge leap forward for The Flatmates?

Martin: "A small step maybe, we have progressed. We've always wanted to be a pop band — a band to enjoy and dance to. One day, I hope we'll be making classic pop records. I think we have already, we just haven't sold that many."

So will Shimmer change all that, will it be up there with Mel And Kim? Will it be a hit?

Martin: "It'll be a hit with the kids."

Joel: "That's what counts, after all."

Sarah: "It'll be a hit with the mums."

A hit with grandmothers?

Sarah: "My Gran's got all our records. She hasn't got a record player so she just puts them on the sideboard and looks at the covers now and then."

Will it be a hit with dead people?

Martin: "It will be massive with dead people. I think it's important that people can relate to your lyrics. Dead people can really identify with our records."

Joel: "Necrophilia, now there's a dead interesting pastime."

The Flatmates — an Indie Bucks Fizz. . .?

"We'd rather be out in the middle of nowhere, pouring drugs and alcohol down our throats."

Since the C-86 disaster of bands being enthused over, signed to major labels and then flopping terribly, indie bands have had to carry a lot of heavy baggage with them. How do you feel about being labelled "twee", "wimps", "trainspotters", "amateurs", "limp"?

Martin: "We're quite an aggressive band."

Sarah: "No-one's ever called us wimps."

Martin: "There's a lot of things people say about indie bands that are true. Like they're badly produced and no-one in them can play. Most indie labels haven't got any money for 'good' production and most indie bands are new bands, so they're still learning to play their instruments."

Sarah: "Hopefully with Shimmer we'll lose that indie tag."

Martin: "People forget that there's loads of crappy jangly bands on majors too"

— Aztec Camera, Deacon Blue.”

Sarah: “Deacon Blue are good.”
And Aztec Camera.

Martin: “Oh, erm, alright.”

What do you hate most about the music biz?

Sarah: “I hate it when a band that’s doing nothing new gets chased by loads of record companies and signed up just because there’s a market already there for them. I also really hate hip-hop.”

Joel: “I hate the way people think that the indie chart is full of one kind of music. There’s dance music in the indie charts, avant garde, hip-hop, garage, Radio 2 disc jockeys singing about jogging. So why do you get called an ‘indie band’? That could mean anything, Cookie Crew are an ‘indie band’!”

The name Flatmates conjures up images of a friendly group of mates, mucking in with household chores, doing the washing-up on a rota basis, going to cafés and watching TV together. Not so. Martin owns his own house, Sarah is his tenant. Joel and Debbie live elsewhere. As for being friendly...?

Martin: “We’re quite an anti-social band. We don’t really like hanging out in ice cream parlours, sucking milkshakes with the kids. We’d rather be out in the middle of nowhere pouring drugs and alcohol down our throats. I’d like to live in a big farmhouse in the country. The sort of place where you can walk around the garden with no clothes on and writhe about on the lawn with a partner of your choice.”

The Flatmates see their progress so far as a kind of apprenticeship. They have yet to blossom forth with their full force. That will come with their debut album — no plans at the moment, but Martin has already decided its title.

Martin: “It’s going to be called G-Spot, sub-titled ‘... A Multiple Orgasm’. It’s going to be that good.”

That good?

Martin: “We’re not the sort of band who’ve been locked away in a studio for two years and will then come out in a blaze of publicity. We’re a band that started in the bedroom, got some songs together and eventually played them to our friends. That’s a basic rock ‘n’ roll tradition that’s lasted for 30 years. We’re basically a standard pop band. We’ve got no career strategy or anything.”

What’s The Flatmates’ greatest strength?

Martin: “We don’t write fillers. All of the songs on the Shimmer EP could be an A side, it’s the same with everything we’ve done.”

What’s the worst thing about being in The Flatmates?

Joel: “The other members of The Flatmates.”

Martin: “Not being able to find a decent toilet when we’re on tour.”

Sarah: “Martin sulking after he’s written a song, when Debbie laughs at it.”

“We’re beautiful people, we’re intelligent people, we’re sexy people. What more do you want?”

The Flatmates appear to have a very high regard for themselves — no bad thing in pop, since you have to sell yourselves. But some people get a bit carried away.

What’s the best thing about The Flatmates?

Martin: “It’s hard to pick one thing out of so many.”

Give us a list then.

Martin: “Such excellent tune-smiths, such ferocious guitar forté, consistently wonderful records, great live band, great studio band. . .”

So modest.

Sarah: “Great dress sense.”

I think that might be slightly sarcastic. Martin wasn’t exactly dashing in leather trousers.

Martin: “We’re beautiful people, we’re intelligent people, we’re sexy people. What more do you want?”

Sexy!?

Martin: “We’re the sexiest band in rock ‘n’ roll.”

You’ve got the biggest bottoms in rock ‘n’ roll.

Sarah: “Charming!”

Martin: “You don’t think we’re sexy then?”

No.

Martin: “I can think of thousands of bands who are less sexy than us.”

What’s your sex appeal then?

Martin: “Two gorgeous chicks and two hunky guys. We’re like Bucks Fizz — the sexy one, the thoughtful one, the raunchy one and the demure one.”

Martin obviously sees himself as the thoughtful one.

Martin: “We know about willies.”

Willies! Is this what you want to hear about in an Underground in-depth interview, readers?

Martin: “And we know what to do with them.”

Congratulations!

Martin: “We’re not a bunch of asexual anorak kids. There’s so many of these indie bands who are totally sexless. Rock ‘n’ roll is the musical side of teenage raunchiness — we satisfy that need. No-one can thrust and throb like us.”

Ho, hum.

“Morrissey would like to be spanked by George Formby with a ukulele.”

Honestly, I tried to get them on to other subjects like gardening, football, quadrophonics and tropical fish. But. . .

Martin: “If you dream of fish it means an imminent sexual encounter.”

I give up. Who do you fancy in pop music?

Joel: “I’m stumped, mate.”

Sarah: “John Cougar Mellancamp is quite nice, a bit chubby, though. Martin will say Belinda Carlisle.”

Martin: “No, it’s Tiffany this week. I think she’s great, everything pop music should be.”

What? Crap?

If you went on a date with Tiffany, where would you take her?

Martin: “Well she’s quite worldly, isn’t she? I think I’d take her on a jet somewhere, Paris or something — to a shopping mall, then a five star hotel.”

What’s your latest sexual fantasy?

Martin: “I’d like to shag to Shimmer.”

Joel: “I used to have loads of sexual fantasies.”

Martin: “But as he’s grown older the lust has worn out. Nowadays he’s happy with a pint of Tetley’s and a packet of crisps.”

What do you think is Morrissey’s fantasy?

Martin: “Oh, he’d probably like to be spanked by George Formby with a ukulele.”

It can’t all be sex. Is there any romance in The Flatmates’ lives?

Sarah: “We’re all very romantic. Martin’s just got engaged, isn’t that sweet?”

Martin: “Sssh, I’m a sex machine.”

That’s The Flatmates. Before I left, Martin took me to Bristol Museum for a cup of tea in their restaurant. For a moment he stared at a cabinet of toy steam trains and muttered something like “choo-choo” — draw your own conclusions. Johnny Dee

AGE OF CHANCE Take It! (Unlimited Credit Mix) Virgin Although it's got credentials, namely being a fusion of live DJ (Delirium's DJ Powercut), live group, backing group (Kings Of Pressure) and the mixed in cuts of My Uzi Weighs A Ton (no, I don't either), it still sounds drab and tired. And though it may be the first non-US act to be remixed by Hank Socklee and Chuck D, it still lacks vibrancy. CL

BLIND MICE It's Not Heaven Rodent (£1.75 from 6 Brookhampton Street, Ickleton, Saffron Walden, Essex CB10

1SP There's a glorious hook in this understated single... and there's a fine guitar line too. Best of all though is the majestically bananas drumming which constantly breaks through. Like The Chesterfields with Animal on skins. Fine stuff. DH

BLUBBERHOUSE Perfumed Paperback HT Records

Records B C A rave from the electronic grave on mandarin vinyl! This limited edition 12 inch features a shaky early version of this latterday classic, as a kind of precursor to an early retro LP. Oh how those keyboards grate. R

BRADFORD Skin Storm

Village Records RR C For some reason I had Bradford down as being more akin to The Redskins, but this bitter tale of emotion, with all the room it's given, doesn't agree with that at all. The flipside's more uptempo drive suggests that Bradford might, in fact, have fallen foul of studio techniques a little. Either way, this is a promising start. R

THE BRILLIANT CORNERS

Teenage McQueen

RA C Twee pop with a George Chisholm brass break and some of the most kitsch arranging techniques since Simon Turner was a Jonathan King child prodigy. DH

BUZZCOCKS The Peel

Sessions Strange Fruit P A three track session from September 1977 when the Buzzcocks' sound was at its most influential and buzzsaw-like. Fast Cars and What Do I Get? retain the inevitable Pete Shelley seal of perfect guitar pop, while Pulse Beat displays their early will to experiment. Ten years old and still as fresh as they come. DH

THE CORN DOLLIES Forever Steven Medium Cool

RR C A re-issue of their first single, now on 12 inch with three added flipside faves. As a prelude to their sure-to-be-brill debut album, this is a timely reminder of just how good The Corn Dollies can be. Ah, so young, so creative, so strummy and scrummy. DH

CUD The Peel Sessions

Strange Fruit P Without being derogatory, this really sounds like a Peel session. Frenetic guitar battles, rushed vocal tracks, a cover for laughs (of The Equals' You Sexy Thing) and two of the band's best cuts which turned up on their 12 inch for Reception. Raucous and ragged, spirited and spitting, but just what you'd expect from a talented group given one day in the studio. NB

THE DARLING BUDS Shame

On You Native RR C Perfectly thrown pot pourri of sweet and sweaty melodies. The Primitives will be cited as an influence, the buzzsaw guitar will detract from radio play, but these Buds have more to offer than piffing pop. Watch them go. R

DANIELLE DAX Janice Long

Session Night Tracks P Danielle seems to rise and fall more than the sun. High points have seen her in The Lemon Kittens, being sought after by the majors, acting in Company Of Wolves and playing a blinder at the ICA. At times she can get a little pompous, but this sub-psychedelic four track session is well on her good side. From '86 with upbeat power, then downbeat ambience. NB

THE DESERT WOLVES

THE DESERT WOLVES Speak To Me Rochelle Ugly Man

RR C Just their second 45 and already the Wolves seem destined to make it through the middle distance into some kind of pop acceptance. To their advantage they are exceedingly good songwriters and have the sleek veneer of a band who can arrange their notes in just about the right order. With a little bit of radio help, this could be the shape of sounds to come. DH

EASTER AND THE TOTEM Co-Conspirator Ideological

P Probing new wave with a poppy sheen, spiced by politically-aware lyricism. There's something cumbersome about this group's name, sound and delivery, but they have some cred ideas along the way. DH

EDEN Form Follows

Function Den C Desperados from Norfolk in begging plea to be on 4AD. This slushy string-soaked cry is almost the right side of twee nothingness to come in with creds intact, but just at the last minute a heavy-handed guitar flurry shatters the tasteful whine and cheesiness of it all. Tempting all the same. DH

VALUE ADDED THRASH!

• The new singles from Into A Circle and The Janitors launch Abstract Records' spring bargain scoop with initial quantities (the first 2,000 copies) of each 12 inch selling for the price of a seven inch. Hooray! The Janitors' Moonshine and Into A Circle's Evergreen (neither of the groups are very good at stringing sentences together) launch the idea and they'll be followed by 45s from The Jeremiahs and The Incredible Zombie Rockers. (All this through Pinnacle.)

EIRIN PERYGLUS Methyr OFN
RR C Finely-grafted pop power with a tricky electronic pulse triggering all the best moments. Sung in Welsh in an essential breathtaking rapture. Excellent. NB

ROKY ERICKSON AND EVILHOOK WILDLIFE You Don't Love Me Yet

Fundamental RR C A re-issue (it originally came out on New Rose) with Roky providing a perfecto, weepy rockbeat vocal that's more in the Bobby Vee/Gene Pitney line of business. A rock onslaught with the inevitable guitar rub holding close court, this is one of those classics that'll keep on turning up. DH

THE ESSENCE A Mirage

Midnight Music RT C The string break half way through, and a keen flamenco section, manages to lift the proceedings to mega-whooping proportions, but that doesn't quite give The Essence the right to crib early Cure so carefully. The Essence have the finishing which suggests they might one day adorn the same billboards as their idols, but a semester without Robert is a must at this point. TC W

The Wall Pastell RTS A tastefully glancing guitar-pop tune from this German outfit who did a fine LP last year. The flipside sees them smother The Beatles' Ticket To Ride with due affection, suggesting that yet more fine fodder is set to wander from Germany's unpredictable music scene. DH

THE FLOWERPOT MEN Janice Long Session Night Tracks

F Sleazy backwater music from Adam Peters and Ben Watkins, culled from their session at the end of '86. Peters' electric cello and Ben Watkins' guitar and vocals make creepy voodoo sounds, aided by some reeling backing vocal lines from Margo Buchanan and Sam Brown. DH

GOD My Pal Au Go Go

SN Australian rock 'n' roll with the riffs turned up and the pointy shoes protruding. God have a lead thang called Joel Rock 'n' Rollo and he sings like he's face down in a car park. He also unleashes the meanest-most-minimal guitar solo halfway through My Pal. It makes God go deaf. It is good, God! DH

THE GREEN HORNETS Come

And Love Me Nobber And Tubbit (£2 from Green Hornets, Seaforth, Barton Field, Lyminge, Folkestone, Kent) A four track showdown from this tacky four piece who're slap bang in the Milkshakes mode, vibing up the Cavern-esque rock 'n' roll groove, with no hope of mass adoration. Authentic and austere, with an affectionate look back in angst into the bargain. BC

JOHN HEGLEY AND THE POPTICIANS I Saw My Dinner On TV Glass Fish

RT C Madcap pop that's capable of straying into quirky Wire ground, then reels under a Tarby belly laugh. Hegley isn't precise enough to be Monochrome Set-worship and worldly, nor is he tuneful enough to be novel. His point is blunt... but his jokes are funny. BM

HOUSE GRINDER Rapdown

Prods In The Dark RT C Last poets in the whitey house, with a slice of The Bodhi Beat Poets, House Grinder have a mighty three tracker here, and loop it close enough to chart acceptance that you can believe Bruno Brooks might even dig this. Fine stuff! R

HOUSE OF LOVE Christine

Creation RT C This third single from Creation's finest begins life crawling but ends up soaring. A despairing core is continually shrouded by some sinister guitar noise, giving the song a powerful emotive edge. There are moments when Christine's undercurrent of frustration threatens to explode into an unholy mess, but somehow it manages to stay beautifully restrained. AF

INTO A CIRCLE Evergreen

Abstract F Into A Circle seem to have been hovering for ages but, if you asked, I couldn't have begun to describe how they sounded until this shiny poptone came bustling past me on the escalator. A fine tune that's got its hooks in the right places — and its melodies not far behind. DH

THE INVISIBLE RAY Ronnie Rocket Saturn (Angelo Plate Gaefestr 3, D-1000 Berlin 61, West Germany) An anti-Reaganite song and dance that's more like Billy Joel with a metal guitarist along for the ride. The flip reveals an Iggy Pop mentality and a guitarist set loose and seeking to destroy. DH

THE JANITORS Moonshine

Abstract F A new single from The Janitors is always an event. Moonshine, of course, is no exception. Beneath the freeway, that chunky guitar is slipped from its sheath, and Denton's husky debonaire throat-wobbling does the rest. Yes, you can almost smell the leather. DH

THE JUSTICE LEAGUE OF AMERICA Blackout Plastic

Head RT C Wow! Loud, arrogant and angry stuff from the League — who first struck out in Underground some moons back in Tip Sheet. Now the sound is more abrasive, more upfront and, justifiably, more attention grabbing. Blackout is the kind of sound that grabs you by the ear and hurls you onto a bed of hot coals. DH

THE MAN FROM DELMONTE

Will Nobody Save

Louise? Ugly Man RR C A question worth pondering, plus a thumping ba, ba, ba, ba, ba brass break from this Mancunian tribe who have their hearts set on Smash Hits acceptance. A notch above the jangle and Mike Smith's approval, no doubt. DH

MCDONALD FLAK AND THE

ACK-ACK PACK Jack Me Some Crack Soho Girl

SP Hybrid house music with an English curl and a Kraftwerk wave. Tetchy and home-made but ultimately moving in the foot department. Swinging. DH

THE METEORS Somebody

Put Something In My

Drink Anagram F The Meteors' rendition of da Ramone bruddas toon and the weakest moment from the recent Pure Psychobilly epee. Much better are Fire Fire and Bad Moon Rising on the flip; worth having if you don't possess already. Tha's all. DI

MILLION MILES The Heart

Exile F Dedicated to a db, The Heart has all the resonant pop touches that such a "veteran" tunesmith would demand of his compadres. Million Miles are German, they struggle with the phrasing a little but have a fine line in pert pop. DH

THE MOSS POLES

Underground Idea F Not a homage to your fave mag, but a churning buzzsaw grind that's damp-squibbly and unsatisfying. The Moss Poles sound like Buzzcocks playing Tremeloes without the charisma of either. NB

PETER MURPHY All Night

Long Beggars Banquet A lolling popper from Peter. Now, having metamorphosed through the Roxy/Bowle/Japan machine, he seems intent on developing his own persona, which is craggy, culty and commercially viable too. Recommended ear food. TC W

THE MYSTERY GIRLS Swing

And Slide MGS RT C Flamboyant rock from former glam bods. A clicking beat that you know someone like Dave Lee Travis will like. A decent enough song and some reeling brass and female chorus lines. Nothing new here, officer! BC

THE OUTLINES Crimson

Baby Zap Zap (BP 36, 78160

Marley-le-roi, France) Leatherette homage to Bolan with a sprig of lg thrown over the shoulder to keep the evil rockers at bay. NB

Christopher Mellor sees the smoke signals...

There's a revolution going on in the indie world. As sales of the traditional shambling indie single continue to decrease, the dance 12-inch is taking over. If you've got the groove you can get the sales. Not just crossover hits like Bomb The Bass and Coldcut, but other stuff by the JAMs, Groove, T-Coy and a growing number of other new groups.

So, now we know that there's more to dance music than just wimpy disco and songs about sex and gold and cars, let's dig out the def-est, hard-edged dance beats and start the tables turning.

Begin with Gimme More (Much More) from Pankow (Contempo, through Red Rhino). These people are Italy's answer to DAF, with plenty of macho sighs and sexy electronic beats. The B side, Touch (I'm Your Bastard), is slower and more danceable, and both tracks are mixed by Adrian Sherwood.

The McKenzies have an industrial-electro-garage-pop 12 inch called Mealy Mouth out on Ron Johnson, with a B side scratched up, using all the familiar grooves, by Graeme Park. Graeme is the man behind Submission Records who recently released the fantastic Submit (To The Beat) by Groove.

The JAMs have been busy too. Their Burn The Beat revamp dub version of Dance To The Music by Sly And The Family Stone uses bits of Michael Jackson and Acid Tracks by Phuture.

And if you want to investigate acid house, because it really is some of the hardest, most uncompromising experimental electronic music around, get spaced out to these five:

- 1 GIVE IT TO ME BAM BAM UK SERIOUS
- 2 SO LET IT BE HOuze! MIKE DUNN US WESTBROOK
- 3 THE POKE ADONIS UK WESTSIDE
- 4 ACID TRACKS PHUTURE US TRAX
- 5 NUDE PHOTO 88 DEREK MAY UK KOOLCAT

Or try some new acid compilations — US stuff on Acid Tracks (Westside), and UK material on Acid Beats 1 (Warrior Records), which includes an acid washing machine remix of Jackin' James by Jack Factory. Also featuring UK house music is the compilation Housemasters Vol 2 on Koolcat.

financed and distributed single, that sparkles and shakes with a poppy originality that's been sadly lacking in the world recently. With guitars and a manic fiddle holding court, Mr Prod whoops up a storm and triggers the 'play it again' mechanism. DH

PAUL ROLAND Alice's

House Bam Caruso RR C More irreverent classicism from Paul, as Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee get a namecheck and thoughts of performance art psychedelia and Syd Barrett's bastard sons come to mind. Nothing new but some entertainingly glib lyrics here. JE

ROYAL FAMILY AND THE POOR

Restrained In A Moment

Gaia RR C A warmingly emotive single from Mike Keane's Royal Family. Flowing into a sea of drum patterns, a wilting vocal makes this atmospheric ballad into an accessible and desirable item. Bracing. DH

RUBY BLUE Because... Red

Flame NM C Ruby Blue make T'Pau look like the arthritic mountebanks that they are. This girl can sing, this band can write good, intelligent tunes, and they don't lean heavily on existing formulas to do it. The bad side of which is that it may take a while for their blend of folkie pop melody to carve a track for itself, but surely, it's only a matter of time. CL

SAREAN QUARTER Precious

Contempo RR C Faceless, floating rock music with a touch of psyche-lyricism and inspirational, but less-than-inspired, posturing from this four piece. Sarean Quartet play '70s mood that's not shining too brightly in early '88. NB

SCHWEFEL Metropolis

Amigo (Weiner Strasse 21, D-1000 Berlin 36, West Germany)

The second single from Schwefel sees the group heading down a chunky, churning passage with a hand raised in horror. Numan with electric guitars and a modernist and distant vocal delivery, Schwefel are something different again to emerge from Berlin. DH

THE SEERS Lightning

Strikes Rough Trade

RR C Glorification or condemnation of gun-toting hysterics, Lightning Strikes is powered by a histrionic rock facade which makes this plump guitar noise ideally clad for radical(?) radio and a touch of scandal. A good song in the latterday Clash, pre-big band U2 mould that's effortlessly commercial. BC

THE SHAMEN Knature Of A

Girl Moksha NM C Phased sounds from the ever-inspiring Shamen. Members of the church of sub-genius are floating through the ether with a translucent vision that isn't easy at all, but The Sha-

men do it all with so much style that you can't help but dig them to the ground. R

SON OF SAM Hallelujah!

Geronimo! Explay Rouska

RR C After their phenom-album, Son Of Sam show us their teeth on this hardcore dance slab that slaps the face of public taste and bites chunks from its cheek. Son Of Sam's 21st Century Bible, topside cut, tempts the devil and peppers the middle east with clattering percussion. A warning on every packet! TC W

SOUND GARDEN Screamin'

Life EP Sub Up RTS More near metallic mayhem from long-haired America. Ten years ago this would have been cited as a backward looking Sabs rip-off, now it stands head and shoulders above a glut of metal clones. Punk in second gear, a nice noise, but it's all a little too controlled. NB

THE STICKLEBACKS All You

Get Dub House (01-597 1468)

What should have been a glorious country-influenced tunelet dissolves twice when someone unleashes a dire rubber band solo. Otherwise this is well crafted and well intentioned pop... but snap that band, please! DH

THE THINGS Calling To The

Shadows Orange Bowl (0684

299065) Spirited pop with a lyrical stamp and some guitars that chime like a man cleaning a piano. The Things seem to have been hailed as everything but something that's new... which is a shame, since their finite doodle suggests that they have something rather special lurking. DH

3 MUSTAPHAS 3 Linda

Linda Globestyle P The Mustaphas continue to enthuse over the rhythms of the far east, moving ever sideways into a plucky romanticism that's more at home in Hope And Crosby Road. . . films than on your neighbourhood Walkman. An entertaining blast, but where next? DH

THE VERY THINGS The Peel

Sessions Strange Fruit

P Four from the floor, circa '83/'84, and a pre-pubescent, undeveloped quartet it is, too. The Very

Things sound fine enough, but they've come such a way since then, culminating in last year's gorgeous Let's Go Out, that this all sounds a bit badly thought out. A couple of the songs survive, but wait for their LP this spring if you want to hear the Things at their best. DH

THE WILD FLOWERS Broken

Chains Chapter 22

NM C The second coming of Peter Perrett is pre-empted by the press legend that this is 'The song that Peter Perrett of The Only Ones didn't write'. Well, it sure as hell sounds like he sang it! The Wild Flowers could well be the druggy edge for a new degeneration and we can mark how times have changed by the potential radio play that this deserves. DH

WORLD DOMINATION

ENTERPRISES I Can't Live

Without My Radio Product Inc RT C What the hell is going on? WDE cover LL Cool J and get Robert Krush Groove Gordon to produce, the end result being second rate rap. The flip is the tackier original which has more character and originality, but no commercial potential, no doubt. Hey, pump up the feedback! TC W

YARGO Help Bodybeat

RR C Succinctly mixed dance gem which seems to transcend the inadequacies of dance-rock, hip-hop and house with the greatest of ease. The throbbing bass line is pimple-pricked by spiky horn sounds and topped with Yargo's distinctive vocal sounds. Sleazier and sneakier than most... and sexy too. R

The Mekons' life & times... and a new LP

Hit me where it hurts

What is a Mekon?

"We're a sort of rest home for tired musicians!" There goes 'Bonny' Jon Langford, long time Mekon, some time John (one of Three), producer, human fly and general wit and raconteur. "Is there a pre-requisite for being a Mekon? No, people usually fulfil a need. Various people wander through every now and then but I think the old story about there being a vast number of people in the band is a bit of a myth."

"Yeah," Tom agrees. Like his friend, Jon, Tom is a veteran Mekon of the finger-in-every-pie variety, and the three of us are being very fashionable sitting in the Virgin Café sipping wine when we should be drinking black coffee, bemoaning the after effects of a rough night — just like real rock 'n' roll.

"I think," continues Tom, "we've been fairly consistent for the last four LPs. It's always been Jon, Kevin and I, so we maintain a nucleus."

Maintaining themselves as a loose dozen for some while now, The Mekons are notorious for their almost eleven years of wild pop antics, featuring a raucous genesis and a gradual move to the C&W/folk style which characterises their music today. They've now released their fourth proper album, So Good It Hurts, on their own SIN label in conjunction with Cooking Vinyl.

Jon and Tom are a likeable pair of so and so's, courteous and friendly, chatting easily about their latest vinyl venture, but, they insist, it wasn't always this way...

Jon: "We couldn't put a record out for two years! No-one would give us any money, our reputation was that we were these wreckers who were very hard to deal with so record companies wouldn't touch us!"

How did that reputation come about?

Jon: "Emm, 'cause we were wreckers who were very difficult to deal with!"

And, it is reported, The Mekons fared little better with the press.

Tom: "There was a time when we were a dirty word. I've walked into the NME and people wouldn't speak to me — people we knew!"

Jon: "Yes, people in Parka's used to hitch rides home in our van from gigs and then decide that we were the lowest form of human life. We won't mention any names... Adrian Thrills!"

Tom: "He still won't talk to us now."

But, with their chequered past safely behind them — well almost — it seems that the winds of change are blowing down in Mekon City. Quite suddenly it has become hip to like The Mekons — ideologically sound even. Although both Tom and Jon are genuinely surprised by this revelation, they think it might not be totally disconnected with their relative success in the land of Uncle Sam.

Tom: "Funnily enough, while we were touring America last year a few American journalists picked up on The Mekon's Story (old Mekons LP which received critical acclaim in the papers but was regarded as a demon thing by the prominent and the powerful in the record industry, including Peel). Greil Marcus, in particular, gave us a lot of press."

Jon: "Yes, and a few others who were like the deans of rock writers!"

Tom: "Maybe that's why some British journalists changed their attitude towards us, because these Americans are like heavyweight, serious writers. For some reason anyway they picked up on us and started to write about us when no one else would. The tide is turning!"

Jon: "Yes. Only to rush back again with greater ferocity! Actually, we did start to behave in a way that people could understand. I think the time of the miners' strike made us want to play live again. We always say that we're not politicians, we're musicians, so it's very difficult to do things to make anything better. But we saw that playing benefit gigs for the miners was a very clear way, politically, of doing something."

The Mekons sing of love, sexuality, equality, social issues and, of course, politics, but have refrained, thankfully, from becoming the Holy Joe armchair politicians their social consciences might afford.

Jon: "Well, we've always avoided party politics. I remember way back when we were sharing a rehearsal room with The Gang Of Four. We were covering aspects of Marxism and other issues but we were always aware of the personal response."

Tom: "You can't draw a line between your politics and the rest of what you do."

Jon: "That's why we insist that we're not politicians in that sense. We couldn't write a sort of Redskins lyric — write a song that saves the world from all its ills, make it into a record and that's it! Everything's alright!"

Tom: "Anyway, it's always been a collective thing for us and you can't be too precious, you can't afford to take yourself too seriously."

Jon: "I've never felt myself getting pompous but I don't think any of us have got it in us. Basically 'cause we hate everything political, ha, ha, ha! In fact none of us have ever belonged to a party any longer than it took us to leave it!"

But, alas, the world is changing. A word to those in their mid-20s/early 30s: Do you ever get the feeling that we are the tail end of a dying hippy generation? Nowadays it seems that if you aren't up to aspiring then you're a loser. There's a super breed emerging, the townhouse teenager born and bred a member of the Tory populous. What will they think of The Mekons and their alternatives? What will they think of the new LP?

As anyone who is familiar with The Mekons will know, they are quite capable of getting very heavy and depressed, but that mood is significantly absent on So Good It Hurts. It has a surprisingly lighter tone than its sometimes doom-ridden predecessors. Rather than waste its energy on gloom it aims at the enemy and scores a direct hit.

Jon: "It's more angry I think. It's no good writing optimistic lyrics if you're not, because then you end up writing escapist rubbish. But we've tried not to wallow in self pity."

Tom: "With this new album, we've deliberately tried to write in a different way. We've been very critical of ourselves and cut out the elements of despair or repetition. We really tried to force a new way of writing."

And jolly nice it is too, readers. The Mekons celebrate their achievement with a tour this month, and there's some real surprises on the bill — so catch them if you can.

Jon: "I'm really looking forward to touring again and getting drunk and being silly! Alcoholic? I most certainly am not.... But I do like a pint! Yes, I think it would have been a very horrible boring life if I hadn't had a few drinks occasionally!"

Tom: "It's funny, I was having this conversation the other day. They go on about why people turn to alcohol and become drug addicts, but they should be asking how people managed not to drink and take drugs and still deal with life!"

Jon: "I sometimes get really puritanical and say I'm not going to drink, but although it's very easy to do I'm really much happier going out and having a drink with me mates. I don't get much time for it these days though, that's why I'm looking forward to this tour. It's like having a social life — especially with The Mekons — there's a lot of us and we have a really good time. Being in The Mekons is like being in a funny little gang which you can't really do at 30! It's like being in a model railway club!" Alex Kadis

IT'S DIFFERENT FOR DOMEHEADS

Alan McGee recalls the most memorable Creation creations

Can you believe this? Alan McGee, who once had a reputation for being the biggest bastard in the music business, the person who made bands wear leather trousers, the red-headed monster, no less, is sipping Tizer and telling me he started Creation Records to make friends! What's more, he is currently living in a flat with '70s decor — ghastly pink wallpaper, MFI tat. This man is humble!

Pass the fizzy stuff, Mr McGee, and tell us how it all began.

"About mid '84 I got a bank loan of £1,000 and put out The Legend! single, at the same time I started a club called The Living Room (in London's Tottenham Court Road). I didn't do the club to make money. I just didn't know anyone in London at the time and I thought I'd meet people if I started a club putting on bands I liked, like The TV Personalities, The Membranes, Jasmine Minks, The 3 Johns and stuff. For some reason The Living Room became really popular and it was packed out every week.

"I began to meet people like Peter Astor and laughing Larry (Lawrence Felt) and we became pals, you know what I mean?"

"Then Rough Trade started to take notice of Creation and started letting us make records. We were making about £100 to £150 a gig at the club — so after a couple of good weeks we were making enough money to put out records and that's how it started."

THE LEGEND! 73 In 83

"I used to be in this band called The Laughing Apple and there used to be this guy who'd stand at the front at all the gigs and dance disjointedly — there would only ever be three people who came to see The Laughing Apple and he was one of them. So we became friends, then I started a club called Communication Blur and we needed a compère.

"At that time, this guy, Jerry Thackary, was the most un-enigmatic, boring, kindest, shyest person you could ever meet — and it just appealed to my sense of humour to make him a compère. We used to put on the posters: 'the legendary Jerry Thackery', which eventually became shortened to The Legend. We took it one stage further and put out the 72 In 83 record — then he started to actually believe he was The Legend! and started acting like a star.

"He used to be this bloke that no-one talked to — then I made him this Legend character and people started taking him seriously, and he became a cult star."

This wasn't the last 'joke' record. Press reaction to Upside Down by The Jesus And Mary Chain meant everyone was eagerly awaiting the next label release. However, the next release was a string thing by Le Zarjazz — a total load of crap.

"It throws people off the scent."

The joke last year was, of course...

BABY AMPHETAMINE Chernobyl Baby

People actually took them seriously?

"It was a fing joke. It got to number four in the indie charts. I just thought I'd get these three girls from the Virgin Megastore, write a song and get a hip-hop producer. I knew the NME would like it just cos it was a hip-hop record. The girls took it seriously too though, cos they were on front pages and on TV — they thought they were fantastic, they believed it. That was probably the most successful joke."

THE WEATHER PROPHETS Almost Prayed

The Weather Prophets

Another joke record (ho ho)...

"Almost Prayed was written at a Janice Long session, the band had only just formed and they wrote it in 20 minutes. Why do I like it? It's just got a brilliant feel to it. It's a brilliant rock 'n' roll record."

The Weather Prophets have got this image of being boring and sending people to sleep.

"I think a lot of that comes from the fanzines who are hung up, cos they think The Loft were a better band than The Weather Prophets. I can understand what they mean — half of it is boring, but half of it's brilliant. Some of it's utter genius."

Last year, Creation suffered a crisis — the dreaded backlash happened.

"From '84 through to '86 Creation was quite a trendy label, but in 1987 it wasn't — everything got slagged. In a way it was good because it cleared the air and now the band's music matters and not the label. I think it's good that we lost the hip tag because now people don't buy the records just 'cos it's on Creation but because they like them.

"We still have a collectors market — we can sell 2,000 of anything on 12 inch. The bands now have got different followings — people who like Biff Bang Pow! don't necessarily like Momus.

"We've got a much wider spectrum now, from Heidi Berry to Blow Up — the only thing they've got in common is that I like them."

CLIVE LANGER Even Though

"He was producing Imperial for Primal Scream, I went into the studio at about ten o'clock one night and he was sitting on the floor, on his own, crying. I went up to him and asked him what was wrong. He looked up at me and said 'The Beatles, Alan, The Beatles... I fing love them'. So I just thought what a brilliant guy. This single should have been a hit, but it only sold 429 copies."

PRIMAL SCREAM All Fall Down

"The vocals for this were done in one take. Now, Bobby takes too long over them, he's totally paranoid and redoes everything about a thousand times — a total perfectionist. Their LP didn't work because they just spent too long on it, Warners gave them £127,000 and they spent it all."

Elevation, the label McGee set up at WEA after the majors began to take notice of Primal Scream and the Weather Prophets, recently fell apart. It was, he admits, his biggest mistake. WEA didn't seem willing to put time into the label. They believed the wave of optimism generated by C86, and wanted hits immediately.

"The major music industry is based too much on the short term thing — major record companies want hits NOW. But Primal Scream will be around for the next ten years. If bands keep on getting better they will, if they keep on repeating themselves they won't."

So what's happened to Primal Scream?

"They're back on Creation with a single due out soon."

BILL DRUMMOND The Man

"Bill's my pal, but I thought his record would be crap. He gave a cassette to me and I didn't play it for ages. Then I put it on when I was in the bath one night — I nearly drowned. I laughed for about half an hour. It's the work of a complete nutter — I remember once he came into the Creation office and he played the Baby Amphetamine record and he was just dancing on the table going 'eh, it's fin' great man! Hip hop, fin' fantastic'."

So you're responsible for inspiring the JAMS too.

"Well, there's more political motivation behind it than just the hip hop thing."

THE JESUS AND MARY CHAIN Upside Down

I can remember the day I bought this record — it changed my life. No, don't titter. It really is THE record.

"It cost £172 to do."

How did it come about?

"For years they'd been sending demos to everyone, I put them on and I just knew they'd be brilliant. If it wasn't for me they'd still be watching TV and videoing the adverts, back home in East Kilbride. The riots thing wasn't intentional, it just sort of snowballed and got out of hand — it was just a joke, another joke that people believed in."

Whether you consider Creation Records just to be a series of jokes, wind-ups, bullshit or whatever, there's no denying the effect it's had on independent labels. In 1984, when everything seemed to have gone stale, Creation started to release pop records. Although they didn't change the world, they certainly cheered it up a little. From a thousand quid overdraft to a worldwide company turning over somewhere in the region of three quarters of a million pounds, Creation is now here to stay.

As for McGee, well, I used to think he was a bit of a div, but now I think he's quite a nice bloke, really.

5 THE MAN BILL DRUMMOND

Peter Murphy is a ganglingiggler!

A slight hitch in the proceedings... Peter Murphy is momentarily incapacitated by a fit of the giggles. In fact, he's curled up in the executive swivel job opposite me making no attempt to regain his composure whatsoever. It must have been something I said...

Granted, Peter has every reason to be in high spirits; he's gained considerable status both here and across the pond as a solo performer, he's just released a pretty special LP on Beggars Banquet and become a first time father to an eight pound 12 ounce daughter. Things, as they say, are shaping up nicely in the Murphy camp these days. Well, this is a turn up for the books! It's a far cry from the tortured young artist of yesteryear, that well-documented time when interviewers would meet their subject expecting something... unusual.

So just how did that evasive young man with a reputation for austerity come to be the accommodating charmer sniggering on the other side of the table?

"Yes, I know what you're saying. People do arrive with an expectation, don't they? They think, 'Who the hell does this guy think he is?' or, 'Peter Murphy! He thinks he's amazing!'. They usually start by commenting on how I am or how I speak or by saying that I'm totally opposite to what they expected."

Well, for the record then, he's very well thank you, he does speak with a very occasional stammer and, had I actually believed any of the press cuttings, I should have met with an irritable schizophrenic with a tendency to burst into spontaneous Sufi recitations.

"That's partly my fault. Back in my youth I made a lot of mistakes. I'd become very exhausted and frustrated with certain situations. The expectancy from the record company, the press and the audience was for me to be a voice box for this band and I'd just lash out. I should never have been made into that. It was wrong. It was generally a tired state and when I'd turn up for interviews I'd be so annoyed anyway thinking, 'Here we go again, this is so boring', and you'd get one cute remark and it would set me off! Like, I'd want to kick hell out of the guy but I'd hack him up verbally instead and what he could then write was a response."

"It was the same when we played live. I'd be so angry with the audience for being so exhausted that I'd think something wasn't going right and just lash out at them."

So when did the new perspective develop? Peter has a theory...

"I have this theory. Back when it was Bauhaus, I would be almost dead after a show, physically and emotionally. Now I do just as much but I'm there, I've got energy. When I realised this I thought, 'Well, what's all this about then? Why?'. And I think it's just about being in control, being aware that you don't have to be a voice box for other people's ideas and, therefore, not being comfortable with it. The battle went — it disappeared with the band. Love And Rockets, you know, the rest of Bauhaus, they have those problems, I know they do, it's obvious. It's bound to come up. It sounds a bit selfish, the way I'm putting it, but the tension went because I wasn't worried about what I was doing, so I was prepared to be told that I was wrong without getting too neurotic about it. I could understand it. Criticism has got to come, you can't expect everyone to love you, we all need...em..."

Yardsticks?

"Yeah, man! My wife murders me sometimes, she kills me! She just sees exactly what I'm doing wrong."

Professionally or personally?

"Both. Everything! She knows exactly what's going through my brain, she knows when I'm bullshitting and why. It's really good to have that. What I don't like is people who aren't very perceptive, they have their own motives and the criticism isn't healthy. It's like an act of violence towards you, it's just them being downright bloody horrible to you and that's upsetting."

Whatever your opinion of Mr Murphy, it can't be denied that he has a certain charismatic pull, a flamboyancy that will provoke extreme reaction of one sort or another. I knew at least a handful of people who modelled their youth on a concept that they considered to be the sacrosanct Peter Murphy idealogue. I wondered if that knowledge ever worried him.

"Well sure! I know it's there and it's a potentially dangerous thing. It constantly moves you to self-analysis and you could end up being totally egocentric, mis-using your power to manipulate people at a really dangerous level. 'Cause if you're angry you can zap people very easily, I suppose. Yes, I do feel a great sense of responsibility. You can see by the way that I'm talking that it troubles me a lot, it's my biggest problem."

Reflectors down...

Our reflections are interrupted by the arrival of coffee and lunch, an Eastern concoction of rice with lots of fiddly bits in it. "Try some," urges Peter. I decline and instead, propose that we discuss the subject of enigmas. Enigmas tend to develop, they manifest themselves gradually, but to the outside world it seemed that Peter Murphy had arrived as a pre-packaged, all inclusive deal — complete with idiosyncracies.

Take note: avoid provoking another outburst of laughter when your companion has his mouth full of rice!

"Excuse me!"

He apologises before lapsing into a bit of a cheeky grin...

"I know I did, and I knew that I would, arrive as an enigma."

And since Peter Murphy knows when his frankness may be misconstrued as a flirtation with audacity, he's quick to clarify.

"Mainly because I've always been like an enigma to my friends, which doesn't mean they held me in high esteem, but they saw me as something intangible. I've always been attracted to the enigmatic. Not necessarily the strange but the...mysterious. My speech patterns and my ideas, goes

even my English essay portfolio at school, was very abstract — my teacher liked that a lot — and I've always...er, I guess, I just think that way, I am that way now. I suppose my lyrics are quite enigmatic too. They can be taken on different levels and I must reflect that. I hold their secret."

Fortunately, he isn't covetous with his secret, and insists that his words are written to be heard. "I call my lyrics stories, fairy stories. I love it when children listen to them because they react so openly. They ask, 'What are the dragons doing?' or 'Why did the Gin Men smash the ark? Who are the Gin Men?'. They're stories to wonder about and to listen to, so, yeah, I just like writing stories!"

Why, then, has it taken Peter Murphy so long to own up and write his stories alone? There have been a succession of conspirators; the infamous and much maligned Bauhaus, the Dali's Car project and his collusion with Howard Hughes. In 1986 there was the first Murphy venture into solo land with the restrained Should The World Fail To Fall Apart EP.

"I know what you're saying. I can actually do anything alone, performing has never been a problem. From the first moment I walked onto a stage I was in control, but when it actually came down to recording, I had always recorded with other people and it was a very hard habit to break. I think I was working with other people for safety's sake really. Looking back I realise that I wasted a lot of time and potential. Although it was all a part of the experience and all that I suppose."

Which brings us up to the Peter Murphy of the present. Now, with a hard-edged confidence and an optimism previously unseen, he unleashes his second solo album, Love Hysteria, this month.

"Previously I had very small ideas, they were very fragile. This time I knew exactly what I wanted. I had all the songs demoed and knew exactly the type of producer I wanted to work with."

Ex-Fall member Simon Rodgers was selected for the job and the rest is vinyl history. Love Hysteria is consummate Peter Murphy.

"It is, isn't it? It's solid, less ethereal and experimental."

And less fettered. But this is where it's at, where it should be, as Peter will tell you himself. Bauhaus, Dali's Car, Peter or just plain old Pete — whatever he chooses to call himself — it really doesn't matter these days. The proof, as always, must come with the eating, so I suggest you claim your portion and relish it. Alex Kadis

and the secret lives of tours

Clout, that's the main difference between life on a major minor label like Rough Trade and a minor major such as Virgin. It's a simple fact that numbers matter, be they in terms of manpower or finance. Oh! There are disadvantages of course, compromises, manipulations and exploitations. But in the end, money helps to smooth the rocky road to, er... success! This is true, particularly in the tour situation where the basics are provided with a little more style than usual, posh hotels, good equipment, slick organisation and teamwork. The band have only one job... to play, and to be seen to play. The boring bits, like lugging equipment on and off stages at unearthly hours, and going up and down the country at the crack of dawn, are the less glamorous preserve of the roadie, a thankless and overrated occupation for sure.

We all have an idea of what is supposed to go on behind the scenes of these tour extravaganzas — through the romanticised and highly coloured observations of starstruck journalists attempting to bask in the reflected glory of a phoney instant friendship with pop stars. The television out of the hotel window scenario only ever occurs when a man from the tabloid press is close at hand these days. The bad publicity generated will always guarantee the funds necessary to stage such an event.

And so here I am, in just such a potentially explosive situation. Observing a bunch of strangers for a Rock On The Road type exposé. I play the gatecrasher, the party pooper, the sore thumb stuck up the agitated bottom of a band on the runs. Stop the fun, I want to get on.

The Mountbatten Empire Room Bar at Newcastle's Royal Station Hotel is grand by any standards. Twelve males surround me and their names are bounced back and forth in polite introductions. By the end I am sure of two things, that five of them must be Microdisney, and that my name is Ronnie.

Settling back I wait for some typically manic, outrageous, rabid rocker type anti-social behaviour. But instead I find long, witty bouts of subtle, quickfire conversation. The most risqué event taking place at the hotel is a lingerie convention in the Windsor room. It seems that music to Microdisney is a career, the idea isn't to PARTY, PAARTY, PAAARTY.

The whole point is to play, pleasure is an added bonus. Newcastle's Riverside is the opening night of the '88 campaign to boost sales of a new single, Gale Force Wind, and preview the forthcoming album, 39 Minutes. The Micro's faithfully reproduce the new material and inject enough power and passion to stir the audience into demanding a few encores. There are no pyrotechnics, no disco lights, no nonsense.

A tenuous Prefab Sproutish feel seeps out of the new Microdisney, and it seems no coincidence that a Kane Ganger and Mr Kitchenware himself turn up for a night with their old mates. What say you Cathal Coughlan, singer and lyricist?

"The idea of projecting your personality strongly through songs, as Paddy McAloon does, is appealing. He really goes for it. I don't object to that connection."

A potential groupie girl backstage suggests that Cathal, in performance, looks like a psychopath, a thought that obviously excites her. Passion and integrity might be a more apt description of the way Cathal's sweaty, physical display causes such a deep furrow in his brow that you half expect his skull to crack open. Does he have to fake such actions, being such a calm, thoughtful figure off stage?

Cathal: career orientated

Life on the road: one neverending party, eh lads?

"Not at all, I'm naturally that way. On stage I feel really loopy, it's a gigantic release of pressure after the boring normality of a day on the road which is like nothing, nothing, nothing, nothing... Besides, I'm out to entertain and be looked at. Obviously, at times you feel a bit of a phoney, but you can harness that feeling and convert it into positive reaction. I don't believe that it has to always be a satisfying experience for me personally, as long as the audience enjoy it!" Back in the hotel bar, Drak, the sound engineer, talks about Lords Of The New Church, Culture, Sly And Robbie and other mega tours. He recalls how boring Scandinavia is and how alive and vital he finds Madrid in winter. He's been doing the job forever, and he's no spring chicken. Drak describes himself as a nouveau gypsy. Hey! Drak, was touring ever as wayward and rebellious as they say?

"You bet. It's dead now, these days all the bands are ex-Poly students, so what chance mayhem? Five years ago it was wild, ten years ago it was crazy, and 15 years ago it was so good I can't even remember what happened. Let's face it, there's only room for rebellion under a socialist government."

On the van trip to Glasgow we try to tune in to Radio Obscure, as the band like to refer to the dreaded local radio stations. They have a fixation about this subject. Cathal tells me that their album cover will be a piss-take of tenth rate local DJs. Another bugbear is the two-faced cub music journalist who smiles to your face then stabs you in the back in print. This has caused the birth of the Microdisney Are Shit T-shirts that are now on sale at performances.

Then again, isn't it the kettle calling the pot black? After all, Cathal has never refrained from bitchy personal attacks on personalities in the past. The last single, Singer's Hampstead Home, was surely a wafer-thin dig at label-mate Boy George?

"It wasn't really about him, more a caricature of a sort of moron. It's not a direct reference."

Microdisney also take a strong stance where politics and ethics are concerned. The most notable occasion was their refusal to appear on Sky Channel to promote the last album because Rupert Murdoch owns the station. And then there was the rather self-explanatory titled mini-album, We Hate You South African Bastards. The new single, Gale Force Wind, incidentally, was even recorded on the night of the hurricane. Seems they react quickly to current events, so are they an impulsive band?

"Sometimes. You have to stand by your principles, though I'm sure that if we'd been on Virgin at the time of South African Bastards they'd have buried it under a rock. They'd probably be happier if we did Sky Channel too."

Microdisney's principles didn't include sticking with an independent label though. What's the advantage? After all, freedom suffers to some extent on a major, right?

"Basically, if they ask you to do something, they'll give you the facilities to do it, there are no airy, fairy promises. I've never subscribed to the theory that a starving artiste creates important and challenging work. When you're broke most of your energy goes into thinking about money, it's an obsession. When you're more comfortable you have the time, opportunity and mental energy to be really constructive and innovative."

"I'm not really that sure that the independent record scene has been such a good system. Too many bands are releasing material before they're ready and making their mistakes in public, they get crucified and blow their chances."

On a major, success isn't something you hope for, it's something that has to be delivered sooner or late, preferably sooner. The money poured in is an investment, accountants wait in the wings. Is this pressure a burden?

"We're aware that at some point we need to make a breakthrough. It's bizarre though, our music didn't change much but when we joined Virgin many of our indie fans seemed to desert us, it's been like starting afresh."

Microdisney hate the English is a popular misconception. Four of them are English. Ireland seems to receive more of Cathal's venom these days...

"Ireland never formulated an effective political system after the British left. All politicians quake before the Catholic church, so any decisions have to be ratified by God first, there's no class opposition. Religion was forced down my throat as a kid but the only thing it's shaped is my sense of humour. The act of confession is the biggest joke of all, admit to a sin and it's forgiven, can you believe it? The concept of any God is bullshit to me. I regard the French and Spanish Catholics as responsible for more of Ireland's problems than the British ever were, though not as many as the Irish ourselves."

In Glasgow, the evening passes with long waits at the city's seemingly eternally red traffic lights. The performance takes place at a disco club called Fury Murry's in the wee small hours. It's cramped and the sound is poor. I meet someone who'd travelled 100 miles from Oban to see "my favourite band" and was considering following them on to Edinburgh to hear them in a better situation. Afterwards, in a toilet-sized dressing room, the band are too downhearted to even drink the complimentary Red Stripe. Exhaustion has spread like a disease. There's no chance of getting any positive reactions out of the boys in this mood, tour fatigue and doubts abound. Fortunately spirits are lifted at the idea of hitting Edinburgh, their favourite destination, and most continental of British cities. By morning all is well again, there's rumour of Gale Force Wind creeping up the charts. Suddenly all seems well with the world.

This tour lark must be worth it, huh? Ronnie Randall

Apocalypse: Sarf London combo featuring former Jamming ed Tony Fletcher (now Ug's US correspondent). Signed to EMI, once shared a dressing room with Madonna.

Apocalypse Now: Powerful Vietnam film with Martin Sheen going up river to terminate Marlon Brando. Sparked 23 Skidoo's Coup 12 inch and Last Few Days' very existence.

Janet Armstrong: South London singer, part of The Normil Hawaiians, one single as a solo artist on Stiff, sister of Kevin Armstrong, ended up singing on Bowie's Absolute Beginners.

William Asher: Director of the legendary beach films, which teamed up Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon. Most recently involved in making a slasher flick.

Assembly: Mid period Vince Clark persona with the dreaded Feargal Sharkey and Eric Radcliffe.

Astroturf: The curse of Luton Town. . . Fact: Stevie of Some Bizzare once attempted to carpet his office in this plastic greenery.

Athletico Spizz 80: Splzz guise (one of many).

Attila the Stockbroker: Ranting Brighton supporter with Albanian connection. Overtalkative.

Attrition: Electronic oddities from Coventry with a glut of LPs and a sporadic history.

Au Pairs: Led by pro-feminist Lesley Woods who once shaved her head. Tipped for greater things, they sadly disappeared.

Avant Garde: Weirdness of all kinds. . . from John Cage and Stockhausen to Throbbing Gristle and Nurse With Wound.

The Avengers: Cult TV with kung fu femmes and English gent solving spy problems. Avoid New Avengers version.

Aztec Camera: Scottish Postcard band who moved to Rough Trade, then WEA. Lyrical offbeat style of Roddy Frame turned a few people off, but you can't ignore the beauty of the seminal Pillar To Post.

THE RHYTHMAIRES
Way back in '84, there was a band in Manchester called THE RHYTHMAIRES; they played a mixture of rock 'n' roll, swing and jazz — they were verging on novelty status.
"We were so 'cabaret', we could have played the Titanic."
I've got their Breakfast In Bed EP to prove it. In 1988, The Rhythmaires still exist, but now they are a different proposition altogether. Their music is harder, still '50s-based, but very R&B. I've got their new LP, Losin' Out, to prove it.
Vocalist Stuart Warburton and drummer Dave Machin, the surviving founder members, are wondering how they can get themselves a little more exposure. "The obvious thing to do is to get a better deal that'll grab more attention," says Stu. It seems strange that there is an LP (on Nervous Records), yet there isn't a single. "Well, our biggest market is the European market and they tend to buy LPs rather than singles."
What about this country?
"We still have problems getting gigs. It seems that people are scared of anything that can be loosely termed rock 'n' roll revivalist — I suppose that we're scared too," says Dave, before turning to the music itself. "It's our own sound; it's got more balls than the stuff we used to do."
I'm not convinced that they can call it their 'own' sound as such; according to Stuart, people have compared it to early Rolling Stones — I'm not so sure than I'd tell that to too many people. However, the LP is good, my only criticism being that it sounds exclusively, and inevitably, American. "But that's no more phoney than a Bradford hip-hop band." True.

The Rhythmaires are in a strange position. They have a (good) product, they are playing gigs abroad, but they don't seem to be getting very far in this country.

"Places like Manchester cater for both 'name' bands and new 'bedroom' bands, but in the middle there's a no-man's land and that's where we are."

The Rhythmaires are something of an oddity in the present musical environment — call them rock 'n' roll, call them revivalist, but whatever you do, don't call them rockabilly. Craig Ferguson

FFLAPS

"You can't really be in a Welsh band and not be political," explains Fflaps' vocalist and arch-conversationalist, Anne. And she should know.

For the majority of Underground voyeurs, the fact that Fflaps' current EP boasts tracks such as Efgob Mawr and Cariad And Rhantant is enough to throw us into confusion simply because we haven't a clue what it means! Anne Fflaps, Johnny Paraletic and Alan Lungs (as they are known to their friends) are a part of the new breed of Welsh bands who are writing and recording in their native tongue. According to Anne, communication has never been a problem.

"We've never had any trouble at all. The lyrics are quite important, but it's the music that people will get into at first. If someone really likes it and wants to find out about the lyrics, I'll be only too pleased to translate. They only have to write."

Those confused or up in arms may yet be pacified; having just been offered a Peel session, Fflaps promise to do the whole thing in Welsh. After all, says the diplomatic Anne, "Singing in English may make us more accessible in England but in Wales it may be the death of us." Who said that music was the great unifier? Answers on a postcard please. . . Alex Kadis

CRED NEW ACTS

THE ROTTEN SWINES

Birmingham, a town famous for Jasper Carrott, ELO and Duran Duran, is also responsible for the unfamous Applejacks, Richard Broadbent and THE ROTTEN SWINES, the latter of which were previously The Capitols, purveyors of one luscious record some ten months ago, which was followed by a critically acclaimed Peel session. These days The Rotten Swines regularly attract capacity audiences when they play around

THE LAST PARTY

I started my minimal conversation with Middlesex popsters THE LAST PARTY by apologising for a dreadfully strained live review I wrote about them last year.

"Yeah, it was crap," said the manically talkative Simon, boosting my confidence. Swiftly changing the subject I asked Neil (drums) for the complete and utter life history of Last Party. This should get the conversation going.

"We formed three years ago, had an album out in June '86, and there's been two singles since then."

Simon: "No-one."

Bloody hell. What makes you so different then?

"Nothing really."

I give up, I really do. Never mind though, everyone comes up with a witty answer to this last question. What are your plans for the future?

Neil: "Who knows?"

Crap talkers, brilliant band. At last, the perfect antidote to Pop Will Eat Itself. Richard Osman these parts. Since that session they've undergone line-up changes, choosing to delight their audiences with an irresistible hybrid of rock, folk, punk (sort of), pop and country. I dare you to listen to their Pig In A Poke track without clicking the odd finger, or slapping the odd thigh.

Don't get the wrong impression though!

"It's not specifically folk," guitarist Tank assures me. "I want loads of styles to entwine into one massive thing."

Unlike Tank and singer Maria Smith's previous band, The Nightingales, the duo maintain on intentional commercialism of the songs, claiming that: "The Nightingales had loads of different influences but they were never that commercial."

Maria: "We're getting too old to be doing this as a hobby. I mean, Roddy Frame had his own studio by the time he was 19, and that was how I set my sights!"

But are you really rotten swines?

Maria: "We'd like to do something rotten. This is the year of No More Mr Nice Guy."

A good contender for the first single from The Rotten Swines is Grimness, one of those classic cases of miserable lyrics, juxtaposed against an uplifting tune, that's easy to fall madly in love with.

Tank elaborates. "I wrote that when I was driving Fuzzbox back from a gig in Norwich, and I'd just killed this owl; I didn't mean to do it, but it just sat there in the middle of the road, being dopey; perhaps it was writing a song. I love owls. I got all miserable and wrote Grimness."

The Rotten Swines are fully aware of their potential without being arrogant about it, but in the knowledge that quality isn't always enough, they all assure me that if Prince asked them to join his backing band, they would, at the drop of a hat. So until then, enjoy them while you can... Peter Perturbed

THRILLED SKINNY

It's only taken ten months since formation for THRILLED SKINNY to set up their own Hunchback Records and put out their excellent Piece Of Plastic 12 inch. Released last October, it wrapped up their own thrashy brand of sawmill pop perfectly.

"It was recorded in two days at a London studio and it turned out that the engineer/producer was The Stupid's ex-guitarist, Marty Tuff. He knew the guitar sound we were looking for. Loud!"

Will Hunchback develop further?

"The label's been set up to release our records when and how we want them. Our money's been put into it and we handle everything ourselves, but it can be hard work when there's so much against you."

With both the record and a steady run of gigs already behind them, it's not surprising that their hard-working enthusiasm is already being channelled into an album.

"That will be out in the spring and it'll be a must for every fan of the two minute pop song!"

Coupled with such praiseworthy energy, Thrilled Skinny share an admirable contempt for the feather-dusted dross that clogs the indie network. They know that they're better but realise that determination is the first move towards proving it.

While you wait for the "thrust of raw energy" that is to be the album, try to catch them live and shell out for Piece Of Plastic before it's too late. Available through the Cartel, or for £2.50 from Hunchback Records, 22 Claydown Way, Slip End, Luton, Bedfordshire LU1 4DU. Cheques to S Bishop, please!

HOUSE OF LOVE

Quite why HOUSE OF LOVE aren't well on their way to being the most phenomenally successful band in the history of independent music is unfathomable. They've produced two remarkable singles on Creation — Shine On and Real Animal — got themselves critical acclaim from almost all quarters, and proved that they possess astonishing prowess in live performances. In a true and just world this would turn them into near legends. But it hasn't.

The London based four-piece — formerly a five-piece until guitarist Andrea returned to her native Germany — is lead by singer/songwriter Guy Chadwick and he is justifiably disappointed that the band has yet to make the impact he'd hoped for.

But this could all change. Their new single, Christine, which is undoubtedly their finest work to date, is surely destined for great things. Backed up by the band's first venture into the world of video, it's time for a 'big sell' which will hopefully make way for their debut album in May.

"We're in the position where we're looking for a larger audience so we need exposure. When people have written about us it's been really positive. We get really good reviews but we just can't seem to get anyone to take a big interest in the band."

Not being able to explain them away as '60s revivalists makes them hard work for the average hack. And House Of Love are unique in that they appear to be suffering for it.

"What we do isn't really in line with the rest of the bands on Creation. We've found we don't have much in common with their musical attitudes. They're much more purist. I think we're as close to a rock band as Creation would allow."

Rock? Maybe. But there's definitely no clumsy bluster. House Of Love are forceful, but they still manage to keep an evocative elegance. The future is theirs, and it's nothing more than they deserve. Anthony Farthing

PLAYGROUND

Lock up your daughters! Here come PLAYGROUND. East Kent's infamous quartet! They make Head Of David sound and look like Spandau Ballet.

Through writing about their favourite bands — many of whom are of the Blast First variety — in their excellent Grim Humour fanzine, it seemed an obvious step to pursue their own musical project in earnest.

Now, a year or so later, comes their debut seven inch offering, a three-track EP headed by the Seeking The Truth track. On their own Fourth Dimension label, it's about as subtle as a Uruguayan sliding tackle but, if you like your guitars brash and your rhythms heavy, then it's sure to appeal.

And the band themselves see it as only the tip of the iceberg.

"Considering financial limitations, we're quite happy. The production is more competent and the songs less derivative than past demos... a bit more money next time and we'll be much better again." Alex Bastedo

THE LILAC TIME

Last month, every time I spoke to an A&R man, the thing they most wanted was a contact number for THE LILAC TIME who were getting loads of TV, radio and good reviews for their single Return To Yesterday. This is something that Stephen Duffy (yes, Stephen 'Tin Tin' Duffy!) finds bemusedly ironic, since he'd played it to several companies before and nobody found it particularly interesting.

"Now it seems to be the 12 inch EP of the century! But what I don't want to happen is what happened to me before. For someone to sign us up, hype two singles and forget us."

With the banjo instrumental Trumpets Of Montparnasse, Duffy also sees the band as something akin to the English country version of the Penguin Café Orchestra. He also says that through songs like Rockland it's the most political of his albums, ever.

"The first album was very suburban and the second was more metropolitan in a way. But for this I wanted to write about wider things than relationships. It's something that has to be said. If you have a voice and if you can sing and if you can be on the radio then you've got to say these things. If you don't then you're supporting what's happening." Mike Davies

Making Up With Alien Sex Fiend

A luxurious gatefold sleeve, in black and white, adorns the latest Alien Sex Fiend vinyl monstrosity. All Our Yesterdays is a collection of the first nine mega singles and they're all skull-throbbingly wonderful. This presents the perfect opportunity for a look into the wriggling things that inhabit the head of Nik Fiend, the band's vocalist and front/mad man.

It was, back in 1982, a 90 minute tape of Alien Sex Fiend produced by Killing Joke's bassman Youth that scored interest from the music press. A gig at ghoulish spot the Batcave and, eventually, a single on Anagram Records through Cherry Red continued the legend. Ignore The Machine blew circuits and shattered gristle on the dancefloor where a (de)generation was doing its gothic thing. The rest, as they say, is history, right Nik?

"It all seemed to happen by accident," he muses, "I moved upstairs to Yaxi (guitars, cleavers and beatbox annihilator) when the band had just started. I kept hearing all this weird music blaring out so I gave him a call and asked what he was playing... he said 'that's me — wanna come in?'. So I went in, added a few bits and pieces, and that it. This was about six years ago.

"It's a story that keeps on continuing; we didn't figure on making a record, we were gonna make the cassette, and that was obviously the first of a whole batch of nightmares we were due to have. I find if the stuff gets stopped up in my head too long, it drives me round the twist, anyway."

And Nik's ambition?

"To be the first band to play Mars... or Uranus, hee hee! Bubbling under in Uranus!"

Nik was expelled from school when aged 14½.

"School finished abruptly and I just got more and more into music; I met Mrs Fiend (squelchy keyboards, head-bending synths and bubbly bits) and Yaxi when I was looking for something different."

Mr and Mrs Fiend have been together for nine years and are actually in wedlock, but...

"It's not a regular sort of marriage — when I do make it down to Tesco's it's a bit like Herman (Munster) going round the bank, you know, mass hysteria!"

You wear your make-up when you go out, then?

"No, I actually go for the natural look during the day — that's my face, unfortunately!"

Why an alien image, though?

"We turned on to all these films that most people regarded as shit."

Wild Women Of Wongo and Eraserhead had serious brain swivelling effects!

"I thought that I wanted to be that kind of band, not to be mainstream. There was room for an idiot or two, which ain't putting myself down. All I'm saying is, we do what we want, no thought for commercialism — if a record charts or we end up going to Japan or something, it's obviously the icing on the cake. I mean, I don't fancy the idea of going round shaking hands all day and smiling — lurvely!"

So you opted for the sex and drugs of rock 'n' roll!

"Mmmmm... I was put on Librium at 21 'cos I was depressed in them days, like most people. Then I had a look round at things... y'know mushrooms and things. Not really now though 'cos I find that I'm detached now. I get more of a kick out of a steak and kidney pie when I get back off tour.

"Drugs are naughty! I got prescribed some horrendous sort of elephant tranquilisers after I got hijacked."

Derr! Let me explain, Nik, while in charge of a van full of televisions and videos, was held up, hijacked for six hours, tied up and gagged. Then he was interrogated by the police and ended up being medicated. A rock 'n' roll casualty?

"I was so detached when we started the band, it's probably why there's that funny drawing element everywhere. You know, the little spaceships, floating bones, skulls and that. I was getting a bit Salvador Dali, thanks to the doctor.

"I'm addicted to tea now. I get withdrawal symptoms when we go to Spain and have to drink coffee. The tea out there is all milky coloured and putrid. Tastes like... camel cum."

So, what about the gothic tendencies? Is it trendy? Faddy? Fashion?

"Not really, I've done it for years. Even when Mr Rotten, Vicious and company were chortling away at their swindle, I was into Highgate Cemetery and that — I don't know why. My sister got killed, unfortunately, and Razzie (ex-Hanoi Rocks and one time partner with Nik in the Demons/Demon Preacher) died just a year after that, so I don't really laugh at death.

"All I'm saying is, it's not very long that we're here, is it? That's all. Anyway, I was always into Alice Cooper which I've made no bones about."

Groan.

"I'm a regular chap, just like Herman. I like to escape."

Is it a schizophrenic split?

"It's gotta be, innit? I can sit here talking rationally to you and then go on stage and be mouth almighty. Feel that I've got the strength to pick up the stage and eat it."

But how does your appearance affect people?

"I meet loads of people and get on fine with most, then there's the odd c. I find, it's like being at school. Life, that is."

The Fiends have always operated outside of accepted music traditions. They don't have any management, only an agent that books gigs. They're pretty self-sufficient.

"We have to do everything else — the music, the press, the promotion — as much as we can do. We don't f ourselves up over business but we do have to do a lot to keep the whole thing running."

As an added bonus there's also another part of the Alien Sex Fiend service to fans and supporters, namely the Fiendzine — a fanzine made by the band (mostly Nik) full of news, pictures, clippings, drawings, pen pals and the legendary Dr Fface's problem page. All lovingly stapled together and hot from the twilight zone.

On German soil, the band recently outsold Echo And The Bunnymen. In fact, they're big all over the place; Spain, Belgium, Japan. It seems it's just in their native land, the UK, that they've been grossly overlooked.

"Just 'cos a band's on Top Of The Pops, it doesn't mean f all when you go abroad," reckons Nik. And he's right!

If you like your music mad, bad and danceable, if you like the guitars to cut a swathe, chainsaw-like, across your forehead, the keyboards to come from some science fiction mind-zone where aliens gibber while the beats get battered by the mouth of an animated corpse swinging around the vocal lines, like something really quite strange, then this could be the band you've been looking for. Sense of humour intact and shooting from the crutch — Alien Sex Fiend, take a bow. Daz Iygmeth

Kershaw's progress

- "I'm the luckiest person I know! I was on the dole in Leeds wondering what on earth I was ever going to do with myself and 18 months later I was presenting The Whistle Test — after having gone all round Europe with Billy Bragg." Andy Kershaw reminisces with real affection, frequently darting off to rummage through his archives for a photograph, book, record or poster by way of demonstration. He's the curator of his own rapidly expanding enthusiast's museum — there's something to commemorate everything!
- As he navigates the vast piles of records and magazines neatly stacked across the floor he admits he might just need a bigger place to house the Kershaw way of life. "The thing is, I really don't want to move. I couldn't believe it when I found this flat, but I'm really happy here. I'll just have to build more shelves! I'm no architect but I've worked out that any space above eye-level is space wasted so I'll start building around the ceiling next."
- He muses, shifting a couple of guitars to one side. "Do I play? Naaah... well... I dabble! I'd never have the guts to get up on stage and do it. Those who can, do, and those who can't become DJs!" And it's as simple as that, eh? Well, it almost was.
- When opportunity came knocking on Andy K's door he was well and truly at home. Finding himself at a loose end after a particularly acrimonious affair with a local radio station in Leeds, it came as no small surprise when his mate Billy phoned one day and invited the boy Kershaw to become road manager and driver for the band. It was during one such errand to The Whistle Test that Andy was 'discovered'. After that, providence undertook to manage events, and safely delivered the cheeky chappie who invades your national Radio 1 airwaves to this very day!
- While mapping previously uncharted territory, Andy has also become reknowned for giving exposure to lost or forgotten gems, including a wide selection of roots/folk music. When Underground discovered that the choicest cuts were about to be released on Topic Records as Andy Kershaw's Great Moments Of Vinyl History Volume 1, we whizzed round to the Kershaw abode, courtesy of the local lose-your-lunch taxi service, to get the full scam on the man and his album.
- Andy will be the first to admit that he was an unwitting participant in the rags to riches type racket. Have you managed to reconcile that weird series of events yet?
- "What's weird is suddenly getting recognised. I noticed it particularly after Live Aid. It's a bit odd. [I know you're supposed to say, 'Oh no, it doesn't affect me at all' but it's great when you go into a shop or the bank and someone says, 'Hey I really liked your show the other night' or 'I liked that record you played by so and so'." Recognition is par for the course these days, what with Live Aid, the memorable Whistle Test and those infamous zit ads. Andy Kershaw is as much a face as he is a voice.
- But what could possibly have persuaded a modest and sensible lad like Andy to appear in a TV ad for acne treatment? (You know the one: "Go on then, show 'em your spots.")
- "I'll tell you..." He leans forward conspiratorially. "Money! Huge wads of money! Enormous amounts of cash! On the money from Clearasil I went all the way across America last year, I had a new bathroom, I've just been to Zimbabwe for two weeks, I've bought over 2,000 pounds worth of records and I've still got enough to go to Mali in West Africa later on in the year! You'd have done them too." He's right there, maties. How do you feel about being seen as the natural successor to the Peel Throne? "I don't see myself that way at all. We overlap in some areas but we're complimentary rather than in competition. I think at first there was that kind of idea, 'We'll get that cheeky young gun slinger in from The Whistle Test and we can put old fatty out to grass!', but I think it became obvious within a few months that we've different styles of programme altogether."
- What the gun slinger does have in common with dear old fatty, however, is a reputation as an independent music expert/exponent. Paradoxically, his opinion of the indie medium isn't quite so cut and dried.
- "There seems to be this lingering post-punk attitude that says if a band is indie then it must be good. It's complete bollocks! There's as much bad indie music as there is bad music on major labels."
- Point taken. But is there anything you consider to be positive/good that's independent right now?
- "I don't know. What is independent music? This LP is independent, most folk music is independent. I don't actually like the word

Radio 1, DJ and music enthusiast, Andy Kershaw travels the world in search of soul!

Eat yer heart out David Attenborough — Andy Kershaw (right) and Phil Korbet (BBC freelancer, centre) go mush mush in the bush, driven by Elvis Chimine (Lenny Henry impersonator, left).

independent being used to categorise a certain style of music because the term independent means it's released on a label that isn't allied to a major. It doesn't tell me anything about it musically, it tells me something about it economically. It's a redundant phrase. There shouldn't be those kinds of barriers, it's confusing, it just ghettoises music. Music should be more open. There should be more glasnost in music — you know, Gorbachov's word!"

- So what's the beef with Andy Kershaw's Great Moments Of Vinyl History (which, by this time is blaring out of the AK sound system)?
- "It's been a nightmare for the people at Topic, it's taken a year to get permission to release some of the tracks. We still don't have permission for one featuring Jim Ford. We couldn't trace him — he's probably a pig farmer somewhere in the south these days. So, Jim, if you're out there get in touch, you could be in for a few quid mate!
- "Some of the tracks were existing recordings but quite a few of them are my own recordings that I've taken on my travels abroad. Field recordings, I call 'em, which is basically just me and me Walkman and a really good microphone."
- Yes, it's out with the photo album again, while Andy tells stories of his various stints as the Englishman abroad! (All of which, incidentally, are recounted in brief on the album sleeve). Perhaps the story he tells with most relish today is his journey across America which resulted in him tracking down his long time hero, Palm Wine guitarist S E Rogie. "We went there to follow the trail of The Promised Land by Chuck Berry, from north of Virginia to California. Me, my sister and Chris Heath (S Hits) arrived at this little house in a suburb of San Francisco, knocked on the door and there was my hero!"
- Needless to say, S E Rogie makes an appearance on Kershaw's LP along with Dwight Yoakham singing Mystery Train, Billy Bragg and Ted Hawkins recorded live at Leeds University, Pa Jiobarte, a ten year old Gambian kora player, singing Messaneh Cessay, pre-war style blues guitarist Steve Phillips recorded in Andy's sister's kitchen singing Broke Down And Hungry and a host of other mentionables from across the globe.
- "I'm fortunate that I can afford to buy this stuff and to go to parts of the world to find it. Now, I'm just making it more widely available."
- Its pan-cultural scope and disregard for fashionable technique and presentation means that Andy Kershaw's Great Moments Of Vinyl History Volume 1 is probably one of the most charming and endearing albums you're likely to hear — and possibly the most exciting to boot!
- So what then, Andy, would you say brought them all together? What was the qualifying quality?
- "Soul. That's the word. But it comes down to those categories I was talking about earlier. Soul, these days, seems to mean any dance record made by a black person. But it isn't. It's Tammy Wynette singing I Don't Want To Play House, it's Otis Redding singing Respect, it's Billy Bragg and Ted Hawkins at Leeds University. It's the emotion, it's got nothing to do with geography or colour, and I suppose that's what it comes down to in the end for me. Soul." Alex Kadis

TIP SHEET

NEW TAPE DEMOS

● This month's Tip Sheet is compered by gold lamé suit-wearing Julian Henry, and he's talking to Andy Wake, from the pretty cool Medium Cool label. Andy signed The Raw Herbs (who're on our free tape), The Rain, The Corn Dollies, The Waltones and various other sporadic geetar pluckers. . . now, he's besieged by tapes from Ug cupboard one.

The numbered system after each review refer to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ.

TAKE THAT (75-04 25th Street, Glen Oaks, NY 11004) kindly sent us a very plush and well-designed package all the way from America. Andy peered at their picture. "Well, I like the way that they don't look too good, but I think the music is a bit disappointing. They list their influences as being The Who, King Crimson and ELP, but they just sound like a second-rate mod band to me. Still, on the positive side they can play alright and their music isn't offensive."

4 4 4 2

BEAUTIFUL (32a Warple Road Mews, Wimbledon, London SW19 4DB) seemed to make a favourable impression with Andy. "Good, a bit of psychedelia," he commented as the band's heavy chiming guitars churned into gear. "Sounds like they listen to the Stooges and Love," he added. "Although I like it, this is not something that I would seriously consider signing to Medium Cool because I believe that there's such a limited market for it. They'll never make the charts, but they re-create the sound quite well."

GEEKIAS (10 Stafford Avenue, Shifnal, Shropshire TF11 9AL) made us smile with their vocal efforts. "It's funny how a band can sound American coming from Shropshire," commented Andy. "This isn't really my cup of tea, it's wide-boy funk and is more like one of the 20 bands who Virgin sign up and then drop the next year. Dance music has changed so much over the last couple of years I feel like they've missed the boat. Anyway, I don't think any DJ would dare touch a band with a name like this out of embarrassment."

4 4 1 3

THE GOVERNMENT (42a Breakspears Road, Brockley, London SE4) prompted the following suggestions from Andy: "If these people were wearing flares and Afros, I think the NME would be right into it. I suppose people must dance to this sort of thing in clubs, but the sympathy I have for the group is because I actually used to live in the same road as them. I remember it's miles from the tube station, but there's a really nice park nearby called Hilley Field. In fact, I think I remember The Government sunbathing in their shorts and Hawaiian shirts. Seriously though, awful name. Mediocre music."

5 4 2 6

ROCK ROCK FIRE (86 Torrianio Avenue, London NW5) look like people with an artistic bent. "Nice Jason Pollock design on the tape box here," said Andy. "In fact the best so far, this reminds me of Patti Smith, Television and the Velvets, though it is quite a standard variation on the old theme. The two guitars on this are very nice, and the presentation is good. You can see that they've put some work in. Definitely sound interesting."

6 6 7 4

CONSPIRACY (95 Elizabeth Drive, Lefield, Tamworth, Staffs) enclosed lots of rave press write-ups with their tape, all mysteriously written by the same bloke who works for the local paper. "I don't like the violent imagery on their press releases," said Andy pointing to the band's logo, which is made up of a large dagger. "Not my sort of music either, as they sound like they want to be a rock band. The girl is screeching away like the singer in Fuzzbox and I can't really see them getting much further than being big in Tamworth."

1 1 3 1

THE MURMUR TROOP (77 Churchill Road, Norwich, Norfolk NR3 4DX) "Good clean rock 'n' roll," said Andy. "In other words a pile of shit. I think they should go away and listen to The Farmers Boys. The voice sounds like he's trying to join The Psychedelic Furs. Give me an anorak band any day of the week!"

3 2 2 1

THE DEFINITE ARTICLE (88 Wellfield Road, London SW16 2BP) were familiar to our man from Medium Cool. "I know this lot. They've sent me a tape before. I didn't like it much then and I don't like it much now. I must admit, though, I've still got their old tape, I never throw tapes out or tape over them." So why don't you like The Definite Article? "The trouble is that there are no hooks and no choruses, it's all just set at one even pace and I can't get excited about it. I suppose it does veer towards being my sort of thing, but it's just too nondescript."

4 2 4 3

LEE SCOTT DAVIES (18 Swaledale, Bracknell, Berks) forgot to send us his address, so Andy, being the forward-thinking young gentleman he is, telephoned him up. Of course Lee was out, down the pub or somewhere I expect, so we got the facts off a friend of his. "Good songs," commented Andy. "Although it's very simply done with basically just a guitar and voice, it has a lot of punch. Sadly I've a feeling that it won't get much further than his bedroom though, purely due to the fact that the independent scene is so geared towards groups. Good though."

7 6 4 4

JAMES VARDA (Telephone 01-543 1537) also forgot to send us his address. Tut tut. "I like this cassette, just as I liked Lee Scott Davies. It's very folksy, very early Joni Mitchell — the depressing ones — and very Bob Dylan. His voice is quite unusual and affected, which I like."

7 6 2 4

IN THE ETHER (79 Green Glade, Theydon Bois, Essex CM16 7JZ) prompted Andy to fall deep into philosophical thought. "I really like Eno and Bowie's stuff, as they seem to be able to add interesting textures to other people's songs, but when you hear music like this on its own I don't really see the point. It's just a dull noise in the background and the last thing you'd expect someone to go out and sign up."

These are tapes that have been spooled and de-chromed — or bagged and passed on — from Ug! HQ. Dave Henderson, the invisible editor, presides over this incisive report on the cassettes that live “in the cupboard”...

SOME OTHER DAY (call Suzy after six on 0279-419736) have titled their four track selection Inside Leg Measurement which is odd enough. But they're not quirky electronic Euros, instead they sound like Feargal Sharkey spotty pop, wrapped in squirly keyboards and classic verse/chorus construction. Teething.

ROVER GIRLS (01-998 8553) seem to have a line-up of 22. They play flamboyant brass-driven rock-a-soul with an abundance of screaming and the occasional wink at schlock TV themes. Lo-fi gruesomeness.

JUST TYPICAL (0702 353150) pose the question, where do you draw the line in dippy hippy balladeering in terms of post-Donovan? Ring them to find out!

GUY SOMERVILLE (0462 816906) is a wild man of pop. A synthesised pre-natal Cabs voice, a fuzz guitar and throbalong lyrics make for a laugh or two... let's hope he's not serious. Best number is the blues one.

ROLLING HEAD (Plymouth 263571) prove that there's life after Cornwall, with a four-track selection of doomy Black Celebration-period Depeche. These perps don't see much of the sun, but that's good because this tape suggests that they've something to offer the bedsided owner brigade.

THE WASP FACTORY's tape (01-346 8911) comes with a hand-written note from author Iain Banks who wrote the book of that name. He claims the tape has “energy and attack”. He's not wrong. This is angry post-punk with flagelating guitar feedback close to Rema Rema. Mad hat-rack rock from the dark side!

THE GIANT POLAR BEARS (Huntingdon 890431) claim they're from Iceland! Together since March last year they sound rough-hewn and have members capable of rockin' out. The songs are OK but nothing new, they need to frug out and grow into long pants. Home-spun fun with a melodic nerve.

EMERALD RAIN (0405 5735) ply sweetly neat pop with a floating tinny guitar that doesn't get over being totally romantic with itself. Blurry tunesmiths in search of practice and a big production.

THE HAPPY EVER AFTER (0304 831188) claim to be metal funk, but really they're tinny electronica-pop. There is a good idea here but it's drowning in some tainted tunes and uninspiring delivery. Not happy.

HASH 'N THRASH (0229 31503) have a rotten name but some good ideas. Removed from the world, in Barrow, they're also removed from their metal roots and have created a strange sound that's at once classic rock, then also quite new and offbeat. Namechange nightmares.

MASONS (18 Willowbank Street, 2FR, Glasgow G3 6LZ) sent us the worst recorded demo in history. However, through the hiss, some decent songs and a brash performance — in a purely guitar-driven pop style — can easily be detected. Next time don't wear gloves!

THIS OR THAT THING (Steve, 214 Neath Road, Briton Ferry, Neath SA11 2AJ) have a crap name too. Let's face it, let's get it out in the open. Their tape is weird and wonderful, the kind of thing that would sound brilliant with two grand's worth of production, and even better after a couple of ciders. Cult status beckons.

THE SEVENTY GWEN PARTY continue this month's bizarre name pattern and then reveal that they're but one person, Simon (01-577 3668). He's unsure, has tried pop and now opts for a stranger angle. Well, I liked it, yes, it's damn different, instrumentally challenging... but it sounds like it could develop. Not so much a demo, more a stepping stone.

SOMEONE RAN (0623 843060) play confident uppy-pop in the 'I want to be as big as a Blue Mercedes, but keep my integrity like The Police' kind of stable. They write quite nice songs and, dare we dread, if they look quite nice, might be on Top Of The Pops next week. They opt for some interesting instrumentation too. Yes, there's potential-amundo here!

CELESTIAL ORGY (Dennings, Wallingford Road, Kingsbridge, Devon TQ7 1NF) giggled wildly when Pat Nevin reviewed their last demo, so much so that they've recorded a new one. “Pretty damn strange and badly recorded but lots of reverb,” sez Denis Law.

THE PRAYERS (5 Bank Street, Kelvinbridge, Glasgow) make it plain that bad recording must be part and parcel of being Scottish. Like the Masons' tape, this three tracker suffers from the lo-fi disease. Beneath, it's tetchy, keyboard-driven and has its feet in the '60s, with charm and Subway written through its heart. Nice.

VIOLET CIRCUIT (01-691 8174) certainly deserve our time. With a reputation for percussing up a storm, they're a tight four-piece line-up ready to roll. This compact debut tape is filled with jerky pop, spruced up with a sliver of silver-tongued presence that's reminiscent of all the good things from Manicured Noise to Wire, and all the nice sun-drenched industrial parks in between. Flowers couldn't smell sweeter.

SHEND ON THE RUN

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON: NO.9: BIG BLOODY DEAL!

Last month's column, with its usual flowing mastery, covered the gooey pitfalls of releasing a record yourself. Whereas in this issue we will be studying pitfalls so deep and treacherous, you may never see your pit again.

Yes, releasing your happy tunes through a record company can be more hazardous than opening a packet of dry-roasted peanuts in a crowded room. So let's start at the beginning.

FACT 1: Major record labels only sell records as a cover for their true trade of buying and selling small third world countries.

FACT 2: Independent record labels only sell records so they can get up late, buy a CD player as a tax-deductible necessity and don't, after all, have to take that community programme job of counting the leaves outside pensioners' houses.

Indie labels are more likely to listen to the tape you have sent them, but if they don't like it, they are more likely to not reply, or send you a witty retort like: 'Become a lathe operator, you worthless cretin. Your tape is under the back wheel of my Renault 4'.

This is not constructive criticism, and anyway your tape, quickly recycled as the latest Timberdicks LP, will actually never leave their tax-deductible tape deck. Disillusionment sets in, the HP payments on your Amstrad 'FlashKey' synth begin to lapse. Then it happens. Dingle Discs send a missive requesting a chat about your commercially viable demo tape. Hoorah! you shout. Tell the dog. Tell the postman and order the Amstrad 'FlashKey' synth clip-on disco lights.

Suddenly the world is yours and no-one will ever push you around again. But wait. Control those feelings of euphoria.

FACT 3: If you jump the gun, you may lose your genitals. Whereas most folk who work for major labels can be attributed with few brain cells and Meat Loaf tour jackets, indie people often have a smidgen of music knowledge as well as more interesting offices. A major's office will be full of garish red carpets and garish Acker Bilk gold discs and a desk that cost more than your parents house. The chair you sit in will also be a good four inches lower than the chair of the blow-dried clod into whose presence your combo has been summoned. Everything has been designed to perpetuate the myth of wealth and to make you feel damn inferior.

So, always try to leave muddy scuff marks on the carpet when you go, and remember to fill your pockets with as many small knick-knacks as you can. Because this will most likely be all you ever get from Mr Huge (and Acker Bilk gold discs make superb paper weights).

The office of Ian Independent, on the other hand, will probably be a spare room next to the toilet in a relative's home. You can occupy yourself by admiring the interesting souvenirs from holidays in Torremolinos while waiting for the person you came to see to finish mending the puncture on his bicycle and search his K-Tel cassette dispenser for the tape you sent in.

You will, no doubt, have a pretty good idea of what you want from the people you go and see. But don't forget that most indies have very few resources, if any, so the timeshare flat in Portugal, the Harley-Davidson and the unlimited, account at the Amstrad 'FlashKey' shop may not appear on the final contract.

FACT 4: Contracts consist of big words joined together in order to make as little sense as possible.

With Mr Huge, a contract will be designed by them to screw you until you're nothing but a withered artistic husk. This, at first glance, may not seem to be a good thing, but a vast quantity of cash can put a rosy glow around any dodgy prospect, ask Gareth Hunt from those bloody atrocious coffee ads (and check Andy Kershaw's response about those pimplin' this ish).

The rule of life is that record deals are like meals at a restaurant. Everybody else's seems more appetising than yours.

Vibrations in Ubu-land

Pere Ubu: past, present and future

Pere Ubu are currently receiving tons of acclaim for their excellent January ICA shows, and for the timely reissue of the classic 1978 debut album The Modern Dance, so it seems we're going to be hearing a lot more from big David Thomas and his revitalised group over the coming months.

With a brand new LP, The Tenement Year, available imminently on Fontana/Phonogram and a two month European tour to promote it, it's certainly not just one for the nostalgia buffs either. Having said that, Rough Trade are just putting the finishing touches to their plan for CD and record re-issues of the rest of the group's bulky, and largely hard to find, Ubu back catalogue, including other acclaimed (but rarely listened to?) blasts from the past such as Dub Housing and New Picnic Time.

But what does David Thomas feel like with his band of not-quite-spring-chickens becoming instantly fashionable with a ten year old album?

"We've always been in and out of fashion, so we don't really pay any attention to it. When we started out in 1975 everybody hated us, nobody ever thought we could be successful, so our attitude was virtually set then. No amount of favourable press or general audience reaction since has particularly affected us. We just got on with making the music."

For a bunch of no-hopers from Cleveland, Ohio who did to The Beach Boys what Beefheart did to the blues, they haven't done too badly. Formed originally out of a love of the strange sounds emanating from the UK and Europe — Soft Machine, early Roxy Music, Eno, Can — coupled with previous outings in MC5 and Stooges type bands, their art was certainly in the right place. And 13 years later, bless me if The Tenement Year doesn't sound as fresh and exciting as ever. Two drummers too, but there the comparison to Adam And The Ants ends...

"We would describe the new LP as more from the Ubu 'pop music' phase, which was some time around '77, but before The Modern Dance, allied with more of a 'rock' approach. It's a path we didn't really walk the first time around."

Your old albums always tempered a slightly unconventional rock approach with a couple of bizarre experimental workouts.

"The new LP is all structured. We did record two experimental tracks but we decided to hold on to them for B sides and not scare everybody!"

How did the group get back together in the first place?

"The truth is we never really split up. After 1982's Song Of The Bailing Man album, which had been hard work, nobody had the will or the ideas to get the band back on the tracks. What happened was that nobody in the band talked to each other for a couple of weeks after those sessions, and a couple of weeks has a habit of becoming a couple of months and a couple of years! By this time I was heavily involved in my solo career," (as David Thomas And The Pedestrians and later The Wooden Birds) "but as I began incorporating more Ubu members into what I was doing it just became inevitable that we would eventually become Pere Ubu again."

Backtracking, your Datapanik In The Year Zero 12 inch EP from 1978, which actually contained songs from much earlier such as 30 Seconds Over Tokyo and Heart Of Darkness, is pretty much acknowledged to be a classic of the genre, as are other old chestnuts such as Final Solution. But what do you think now of your old albums, starting with The Modern Dance?

"From that album, Humor Me is brilliant and I always thought that should have been a single. There are weaknesses on it, largely in that we didn't get the humorous side of the band over to people properly, such as on Sentimental Journey. That record is embarrassing at points, but then again, what isn't?"

Sure. Having released The Modern Dance on Blank Records through Phonogram/Mercury, the group flitted over to Chrysalis, where Dub Housing was released in the same year.

Heavens was one of 1987's finest debuts, but it is still slightly unfocused; indeed, Goffrier admits that there was a strong backlash from the group's original fans, who preferred the harsher, more primeval noise of Boo Boo. (The 17 song CD, incidentally, contains both records.) Live, however, Big Dipper have it honed down almost to perfection, riding over all and sundry with a steamroller of caustic guitars, topped off with the near-obsessed dual vocals of Goffrier and Waleik. The result is a potent, off-centred pop, and in the interests of understanding what lies at the centre of great pop music, Big Dipper are prepared to challenge expectations with a cover of Wings' Jet or Fleetwood Mac's Little Lies.

"Finding the balance is the real trick," admits Goffrier of the thin area Big Dipper are attempting to occupy, the one that lies between pure power and pure pop. There are few easy reference points to this group, though even on its own, Bill's voice is unusual enough to attract comparisons with truly unique singers like David Byrne or Robert Smith. And like those vocalist's groups, Big Dipper have a subtle charm that may take years to be commercially recognised. That it won't be is very unlikely.

Goffrier himself is aware that dissecting a group for examination can, instead of telling us what makes it click, simply ruin the magic. "I often wonder whether people like the things that we deliberately put there or the ones that are there by default," he muses.

The opening song on Heavens is, we assume, written about a flowering young woman unaware of her potential beauty. It could very easily have been written about Big Dipper themselves.

"*She's fetching, she may not know it now,
Look out if she finds out...*" Tony Fletcher

Going down the Dip

Big Dipper breaking with embarrassment

If Bill Goffrier had it his way, he wouldn't be in Big Dipper. As a spirited youth and leader of the influential (though little heard in Britain) mid-western punk band The Embarrassment, Goffrier instead harboured dreams of playing rhythm guitar with The Fall. One day Mark E. Smith and co came to town and The Embarrassment got to open for them. "Every time they came to town after that I'd talk to Craig Scanlon and I thought 'That's the guy. He's my role model'."

But a phone call from Manchester never came his way and in 1983, physically exhausted from years of touring and feeling that The Embarrassment had served their purpose, the slightly built songster packed his bags and headed to Beantown. "Boston had always been one of The Embarrassment's favourite places," he explains. "Just because of the look of the city and the vitality of the music scene, and the fact that it was on an ocean, and we were landlocked."

Not that Goffrier moved to Boston to form a new group. Instead he went to study painting and "spend two years avoiding the music scene". This being rather akin to moving to the West Bank to get some peace and quiet, it is not surprising that sooner, rather than later, Goffrier's path crossed with those of Gary Waleik, Steve Michener and Jeff Oliphant.

No musical virgins themselves, Michener and Waleik had formed the Volcano Suns alongside ex-Mission Of Burma drummer Peter Prescott, and the former had also served a longer-than-average innings as bass player with Dumptruck. Drummer Oliphant had only a past with hardcore mechants XS to his credit, but like the others, he had no desire to go through all of that again.

"When we got together as exiles from other bands," relates Gary, "we had some negative experiences and mixed feelings about being in a band again. We didn't have big ambitions and all we were looking to do, at one point, was record a few songs and have a radio tape and some airplay so that we could see if our friends liked what we were doing."

So the newly incarcerated Big Dipper recorded a six-song demo and, with the help of Waleik's numerous contacts, the tape in general, and the song Faith Healer in particular, found its way onto the playlist of almost all the local college radio stations. Their associations with Homestead Records from Volcano Suns days still strong, the prime American indie seized on the group's flying start and released a six-song EP — including the original demo of Faith Healer — under the title Boo Boo.

Big Dipper suddenly found themselves on a rollercoaster that saw them shoot past many longer-serving local bands, at a speed they harboured some guilt over. "A lot of doors opened up for us that we didn't feel we'd worked very hard to get," explains Gary. "Other bands kept asking us 'What does it take? We keep playing on Tuesday nights and you're playing the weekend — and we've been doing this for a couple of years'. We didn't know what to say except that we'd been in other bands and we'd had to pay a lot of dues then. And we didn't want to do all that again. So the only way were willing to consider making this a real band would be to take a couple of jumps ahead."

Such isolation from the scene and its rulebooks partially explains Big Dipper's individuality, hinted at on Faith Healer but much more greatly displayed on their debut album proper, Heavens. With a front sleeve of one of Goffrier's paintings (a UFO obscured in the woods) and a back sleeve picturing the four Dippers running blurred across a field, it is not surprising that the music should have a similarly undefined, just-out-of-reach texture. The group's original four-square, almost hardcore approach has been usurped by a more pop approach, and when the two collide — as on She's Fetching and All Going Out Together — the result is almost frightening in its potential. Elsewhere there are hints of Beatles psychedelia on Lunar Module, touches of old-fashioned punk anger on Easter Eve, and even a song by another Boston band, Christmas 'When Men Were Trains (including the glorious line "I remember when men were men, and women were dreams")'. Big Dipper are far from proud.

"I would consider that to be a near masterpiece. It's a far more mature work than The Modern Dance, and for that period, around late '78, we were at our peak. It was also a very satisfactory album to record, because although we had the ideas worked out, most of it was written in the studio, the first time we realised that things could be done that way!"

Then there was New Picnic Time, followed by The Art Of Walking LP in 1980. Ubu had found a new and sympathetic home at Rough Trade. But all was not well within the group. Ubu had just one more LP in them for that period, 1982's Songs Of The Bailing Man...

"That was an opposite record to its predecessor in that it was very direct and structured. It's a good record, but a lot of band members don't like to listen to it because of all the problems within the group at that point."

The Pedestrians then became Thomas' full time concern. They had already released Sound Of The Sand in 1981, and Variations On A Theme and More Places Forever appeared in successive years following the demise of Ubu, the latter hinting at the first steps towards a reunion.

Rough Trade's release in 1985 of The Terminal Tower, an early Ubu singles compilation, added to the myth of the band, and by 1986 with The Wooden Birds a full reformation was just around the corner.

"The Wooden Birds jammed through a bunch of old Ubu songs during an encore in Cleveland with our original drummer Scott Krauss and it sounded really good, using two drummers. Everything fitted together again, and the more we talked in subsequent months, the more a complete reunion became the only logical conclusion."

Accept no substitutes — Pere Ubu are back and as good as ever. Believe me when I tell you! Alex Bastedo

NOISE-CRYPTS OF PIZZALAND

explored by Vittore Baroni

■ When, in the late '70s/early '80s, noise became the big underground thing — thanks to the pioneering work of Throbbing Gristle — in Italy the so-called industrial school of hardcore electronics immediately found a strong nucleus of followers and practitioners. The movement here never produced a first class star or a record hit, remaining till today much of a home-made-cassette-in-50-copies affair, with the occasional self-produced disc. Nevertheless, some of the works surfaced and submerged in the past ten years (time flies, yes!) remain among the more intriguing and excessive produced in this field, a real challenge to the auditory apparatus of truly radical fans. Do not forget that the first to theorise l'arte dei rumori (the art of noise) was the Italian futurist Luigi Russolo, though somebody else capitalised on that idea...

■ Maurizio Bianchi (MB) is the grandfather of the whole scene, but he disappeared into reclusive silence in 1984, repudiating his entire opus. That amounts to a dozen albums, self-produced in very limited editions, plus LPs on various labels (Sterile, Come Organisation, Broken Flag, DYS) and literally hundreds of cassettes and compilation appearances.

Maurizio's symphony of pure noise patterns reach the dead-end of the genre, after which you cannot add any more to the sound but have to subtract. Many of the cassette-makers still active (Lyke Wake, Nun, Bruno Cossano, Laxative Souls, Negative Person, Mauthausen Orchestra, etc) sound shy and amateurish compared to the intense and extreme early works of MB. Some original personalities emerge however from the endless cacophony of loops, radio cut-ups and cheap electronics.

■ In the past few years, the general trend in noise circles has switched from cruel images and synthetic assaults to more relaxed and moody ritual-esoteric atmospheres, interspersed by sampled monk prayers, human bone percussions and the usual dose of loops 'n' cut-ups (PTV were obviously a major influence on this sharp turn). The best groups working in this direction are Lashtal (c/o Andrea Da Costa Freire, Via G D'Andrea 20, Firenze), who have a cassette on the Austrian label Nekrophile; Sigillum S (c/o Paolo Bandera, Vio Pontirolo 25, 24047 Treviglio, BG); and Ain Soph (c/o Toni Pettini, Via Enrico Fermi 15, 00146 Roma), all with a debut album due out soon and many cassettes already in circulation. To be remembered here also are Rosemary's Baby, a really promising band in the PTV vein, that after an enjoyable LP of satanic rock 'n' noise and a disclaimer album with a 20 minute cover of Morrisson's The End, disbanded to follow more "positive" mystical inclinations.

■ Instead of confusing you with a long list of obscure names that you'll probably never hear again, let's select just three of the more interesting projects in the avant garde/noise territory. The first name to be pointed out is ADN (Piazza Segrino 6/A, 20159 Milano), the only Italian label covering different aspects of contemporary experimental music with professionalism and continuity. I've already written in UG about FAR and Tasaday, but two other bands to pick out from the ADN catalogue are LA 1919 (the LP Ar sArA features as special guests the mad improvisers Henry Kaiser and John Oswald) and Kino Glaz (sort of classic orchestral ensemble playing abstract rock songs, debut album is due out any day now).

■ Officine Schwartz utilises the images of rusty factories and tough workers, so dear to bands like Laibach and EN, but the music comes out surprisingly as a mixture of old Italian folk songs, romantic French melodies and the noises of the blast-furnace. Remanium Dentaurum, their first album (distribution Supporti Fonografici, Viale Coni Zugna 63, 20144 Milan), is the soundtrack of their current live show, more a multi-media happening than a real concert, with four hours of projections, videos, dance numbers and audience participation. Oswaldo Schwartz, leader and composer of all the music, is a real hardened factory worker, so he doesn't sound silly at all when he intones solemnly the Hymn Of Workers And Workshops.

■ Finally, Tomografia Assiale Computerizzata (TAC) are a very unstable group, with continuous changes of members and musical direction, yet they have completed three rich and mature albums on their own Azteco Records (Via Verdi 6, 43100 Parma). The last one is called Il Teatro Della Crudeltà and succeeds in marrying acoustic instruments (violin, viola, flute, clarinet) and technological devices, in a varied collage of cut-up nightmares, church-like dirges, percussive marathons and electronic anthems. TAC are the most original of the Italian bands utilising generous amounts of noise, but they recently split in two different factions, so the future will surely bring more changes in style. Azteco also produced the debut single, and soon the LP, of Kind Of Cthulhu, a mysterious combo mixing horror themes with soft psycho-rock, plus three different compilations of experimental bands from around the world.

Infinity Within a Sugarcube

Bjork 'cube: the most photographed iclander since Magnus Magnusson

Triggered by the creation of that single, Birthday, Iceland's The Sugarcubes' forthcoming LP, Life's Too Good, has advance sales of 130,000. A recent British tour and TV appearance confirmed cold wave's popularity, and the current single, Cold Sweat (that's well worth carressing for the B side, with the contrasting harshness of Einar Cube's Icelandic thrust complementing tiny Bjork's candidness) made it obvious that many little Sugarcubed notes will surely melt upon the tongue this year.

Figtryggur Baldurson (the group's drummer) is definitely not, as I first feared, a robot. He warmly assures me that in the 'phone directory he is listed as "Siggi" since, in a country with less inhabitants than the borough of Hackney (about 250,000) most people go by their first name — even the Prime Minister (unlike Russia, where it is the last name that counts... and Popv is the equivalent of Brown — or should I say red?).

Iceland is a very (c)old country, also it's an island, yet it seems to have had more time and thought spent on its development than the UK. Inhabited since the Teutonic groups battled on the Viking seas, sojourning with the Danes while others strayed into Goth and Franck-dom, the Icelanders' mythology bears testimony to their deep frozen wit; the same dry irony that gleams within the 'Cubes' lyrics, written by old Icelandic poet Johannar Por who also plays guitar and grins.

"I wonder if people would ban us if they really understood the lyrics?"

He then assures me there is no dark, sleazy underground in Iceland (ie: heroin, crack, overdosing musicians).

These Icelanders are obviously a lot less perverted than we are led to believe.

Por: "There is, of course, some pills and drinking going on — but really the only people into drugs, in Iceland, are old women and children, and maybe a few high school students..."

And females in general? How are they seen?

Por: "I think we treat women with much more respect. When we play in this country, it's weird — they watch Bjork (the female singer) as though they are waiting for her skirt to fall off, or for her to lift up like an angel... why don't they dance?"

Bjork: "It's so strange here, seeing eleven and 12 year olds coming out of school dressed in stockings and high heels, crippling and back-breaking heels. I have the theory that women are only abused if they want to be abused, by and large; I think many people find this hard to understand."

Bjork and Einar (who also sings and plays the trumpet) were previously in a band with Siggi called Kuki — anyone who was lucky enough to see Einsturzende Neubauten (a band the 'Cubes have great respect for) play London back in '85 may remember them as the excellent support group. Going back even further, to '82, Bragi, the bassist, reminds me that he was in the nifty jazz influenced punk band Purrkur Pillnikk with whom he learnt his English on the Fall tour. (And who could beat Mark E for a fish in the ear?!) He then tells me he likes the height of the English ceilings and the old architecture (not yet collapsed but strategically being knocked down) and at the same time cannot believe how dirty this city is.

Siggi: "Well, I don't think it's the Queen that makes this country tick, that's for sure! In some ways they still feel, over here, like they're an empire; even the interviewers from the papers!"

Por: "There are so many different types!"

Bragi: "...and send my love to Mare Navarro Suarez... please!" From seven to five... the Sugarcubes. Pin their gemstones through your noses and wear them with pride! Beata A Burnska

letter from america

You can only live in America for so long and hope to avoid TV. I tried, but then someone installed a 24 inch, 25-channel set, and recently entire mornings, evenings, or worst of all nights when I could have been doing something constructive with my life, have been lost as slave to the most sacred American culture of them all.

First off, let's establish the facts: American TV is dreadful. The pits. In spite of — no, because of — the immense viewing choice, every single programme, on every single channel (with the most minor exceptions), is aimed at the lowest common denominator. Nowhere is this more evident than on TV commercials, which assume...

- That everyone watching is a complete moron who will only understand one-syllable words;
- That said moron is also deaf and will only understand one-syllable words if they are shouted;
- That said deaf moron will only buy the product if either a typically moronic American family is seen enjoying it, or, in the cases where the product can not be physically 'enjoyed', such as medical insurance, or the Presidency of the United States, it is being sold by a man with a shifty smile and a three-piece suit.

In fact, that America still has a President proves conclusively that TV advertising works.

Television commercials seem to take up more time than the programmes themselves, and usually involve far more finance. A minute slot on the recent Super Bowl cost a mere $1m; it is thus no surprise that match plays are stalled while the network fits in another advert or two. When the play can't be halted, such as in the Winter Olympics ice hockey, they take a break anyway, even if this means missing the States' only goals of the game.

At least the commercials are rarely as violent as the programmes they interrupt — especially ice hockey and American football. It is all too common for even basketball matches to erupt into the sort of all-out aggro normally associated with Graeme Souness, and players get away with light fines and suspensions because everyone knows it increases interest in the games. The much-touted notion that British football players seen brawling only encourages the hooligan element is palpably wrong; it should in fact be argued that on-pitch fighting discourages off-pitch violence, as American sports are among the most peaceful to be a spectator at in the world.

Violence also crops up on almost every programme that isn't sports-orientated, which must be either a thriller, a TV detective or the news. Blood and fury are so common on peak viewing TV that it all becomes one hazy orgy of death and destruction; it is slightly unnerving to be informed that Miami Vice finished 20 minutes ago and we are currently running through the lists of today's casualties in the drug wars of New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

The current doyen of the chat show idiom is the appallingly over-rated David Letterman, whose Late Night show only scores so well because it is possibly the only major show on TV that is prepared to laugh at itself and come close to admitting that this is in fact a waste of time, that even listening to Samantha Fox records would be more fulfilling.

Which I suppose brings us onto music, but seeing as how most videos are little more than commercials anyway these days, we can pretty much write that subject off. On networked television there is in fact very little music, bar the wonderful new US-UK Top Of The Pops. Fortunately, our house has not yet got round to installing cable TV, and so I do not suffer from the dreaded MTV disease, which basically consists of everyone watching saying, "Maybe the next video will be worth watching", while remaining glued to the TV for at least an hour before admitting defeat.

Cable TV is also the domain of the sex channels and the religious stations. Although both sets of people are after stripping you of every penny, they used to be easy to tell apart: the religious merchants wore clothes. These days, as TV preachers are exposed almost weekly for adultery, quasi-rape or being closet pornography freaks all these years, the distinction is far finer.

The recent public disgrace of Jimmy Swaggart, the same TV preacher who brought down Jim Bakker only a year ago, has brought the whole business of TV religion to the borders of black comedy. That is until one suddenly remembers with a cold sweat that a former TV evangelist, Pat Robertson, is running for President. The candidate is attempting to distance himself from his past in search of wider appeal, but the TV news and current affairs programmes, making the most of American TV's greatest asset — irreverency — have a pleasant habit of digging up clips of him "healing" the blind and the crippled. Robertson's greatest link with God was when he succeeded in 'praying off-course' a hurricane from ravaging the Atlantic coast; questioned about this recently, he explained that "I could hardly be expected to move a nation if I couldn't move a hurricane". And you must admit he has a point.

In fact, The Race For President is the one TV series that crosses all boundaries, featuring as it does high finance (a serious candidate needs $5 million to compete with the others), drama (the candidates hurling serious insults at the competitors in their own party while ignoring the opposition), sexual intrigue (Gary Hart), violence (well some of the rhetoric is pretty painful), comedy (well, just look at them), sport (remember, it's a race) and, of course, the enormous jackpot for whoever wins. There's precious little politics talked of course, but then, this is only TV, not the real world. TONY FLETCHER

FIREHOSE ANGST

H'n. The second wailer. eD, Mike and George enter the sophomore sweepstakes and ditch the beanies on the second FIREHOSE album "H'n". Fourteen tunes recorded in eighty-five hours, that go way beyond anything three dudes should be able to do. Includes Sometimes, Honey Please, Anger and For The Singer Of REM. SST 115 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Mystery Spot. Like never before, the songs of Angst are suffused with a shimmering glow. On Mystery Spot, the remarkable interplay between brothers Joe and Jon is fully realized with their best-sounding record ever. With a bow to country and folk, Angst take off on a hell bent for leather electric train ride on Outside My Window, Colors Of The Day, Mind Average and nine more songs. SST 111 (LP/CA $7.50)

Human Rights. The firebrand vocalist of the world-renowned Bad Brains steps out with his own record. With a lush background and a unifying spiritual message, this record shows H.R. in the role of healer and teacher. From the world beat hip hop of the title track to the soft love vibe of Acting So Bad, this record cuts across all boundaries in its quest for one-love. SST 117 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

Pat RuthenSmear DESCENDENTS BLACK FLAG

PAT RUTHENSMEAR: RuthenSmear. As a founding father of punk, Pat Smear should need no introduction. From his patented guitar grungework with the Germs, right up to now, Pat Smear is the severed edge of modern guitar playing. Pat RuthenSmear however, is a whole new kettle of fish. Glam, slam, blammo, a whole new way of life. SST 154 (LP/CA $7.50)

DESCENDENTS: Liveage. The last blast in the saga of the "Dents" comes in the form of this incredibly bonus live record. Feel the bone-crushing power of the Descendents. If you want it "ALL", this is the first step you will need to make. SST 163 (LP/CA $7.50 CD $15.00)

BLACK FLAG: Wasted Again. Imagine if your favorite Flag party tunes of all time were put together in a room. Then, the room was filled with hundreds of your best friends. Before the cops come, you better slap on Wasted Again, a collection of all the songs that make you want to party. Six Pack, T.V. Party, Wasted, Rise Above and twelve more festive Flag tunes. we're all crazeee now!

Yes, this month's Johnny Marr rumour seems to have a touch of reality to it as several sources have confirmed a tie up between the ex-Smiths guitarist and Colin Lloyd Tucker! Colin Lloyd-who? I hear you ask. Well, Colin is an ex-member of The Gadgets, The The, Jeremy's Secret and a bundle of other groups (seasonally alongside King Of Luxembourg mentor Simon Turner). Having worked briefly with Kate Bush, it seems he's put down his guitar and is heading to LA to team up with Johnny — although Colin has also been seen, beneath a mop of red hair, leaving a Jethro Tull concert just last week. Strange (and slightly psyche-pomp!).

Johnny, don't do it! (Lloyd Tucker on insert and quiff control)

NATURE

fACT & fICTION

ON THE VERGE OF A NEW SOMETHING, issue 14 of Underground — everyone's favourite angstymag — comes with the news that the last issue reaped rounds of applause in Denmark! Fine! Fine, fine! Ain't it strange though?

It takes a nation of people who spend a month translating the damn thing to really appreciate it. Here in the UK we have it far too easy.

Now, I don't expect anyone to adopt the ash and sackcloth garb but the influx of cash and status has certainly not helped some people. The Shop Assistants' sudden split after signing to Chrysalis/Blue Guitar was ominous, The Soup Dragons' pandering to the chequebook being just plain frightening. Will The Sugarcubes sign? Have they signed? Who've they signed to?

The Wedding Present seemed close to nationwide success after their last single, Nobody's Twisting Your Arm, but they couldn't break the radio barrier (do they need a major?), while The Cardiacs — a showpiece of idiosyncrasy — opt for a wacky image, stick with Alphabet, an independent label, and, because of their playsafe Genesis/Yes sound, manage to crop up on Gary Davies' Radio 1 show (do they need some new ideas?). Well, that's progress!

The Sugarcubes, arguably the independents' greatest recent success, didn't sign, instead remaining on One Little Indian, but, let's be honest, they're in the minority when it comes to "rock". Instead, the great sales force in the sky is currently dancefloor-bound for '88 and everyone from Gene And Jim, DTI and even World Domination Enterprises are breaking their ankles in their panic to tread flares (and make cash). Not healthy?

This month's issue looks at the roots of independent/alternative dance music, while throwing a few cultural spanners in the works. Steve Albini's Chicago exploits are examined, Pixies reveal what he's like behind closed doors and New Order get the final mixdown of Blue Monday poked and provoked. Further out, on a monotone limb, Mike Alway reveals the truth (or as close as we'll get to it) about el Records, and The Meteors get a touch retrospective about things.

Talking of that trait, Jungle have just announced the re-release of The Stooges' last ever show. Unexpurgated wild man rock, you'd be forgiven for dismissing it. But the Ig's final death throes, as a post-fatigue cash-in, has more to it than that. This double sees the glass-rolling blond in true legend-making stance. After that, rock 'n' roll would never be the same again. Unfortunately that can't be said for the Rat Cage re-issue of The Beastie Boys' first ever recordings, The Polywog Stew EP. Primal, but not primed, it's a punk noise that'll disappoint trendies and give little indication of their post-pubescent outcry.

But bands come and go like that, don't they? And latest scandal suggests that next to go is Melissa from Voice Of The Beehive (a mere year after they got on the cover of Underground, a mere month after the rest of the press clicked). Shame, perhaps, but that's r'n'r, as they say.

Similarly, the much-touted but never very productive Opal announced some changes with Kendra Smith departing, leaving David Roback with combo, plus new member Hope! Undoubtedly that'll be the key word, to see if they can muster a chord or two to follow their rather low key Happy Nightmare Baby album of last year, thus justifying Roback's pedigree (he's an ex-Dream Syndicate, Rain Parade, Clay Allinson).

Whether they'll do it is another story, as is whether The Sugarcubes will sign a major deal, whether Voice Of The Beehive will split and whether anyone will find a Pooh Sticks record to buy. Whatever, don't clean out the ashtray till the morning. Dave Henderson

LET'S TALK Wild! Yep, The Wild Flowers have signed a mega-million bucks deal in the States with Slash (who gave us Los Lobos, Faith No More and The BoDeans)... and, The Wild Swans' WEA LP that we reviewed last month has been put back a bit and will now be called Bringing Home The Ashes. The goofy Idea label — Jack Rubies, Moss Poles, Automatic Diamini — look set to fold now that publishing parent Chappells has been taken over by WEA. And, there's more departures as The Raw Herbs Medium Cool to form their own label through Revolver.

Meanwhile, Alien Sex Fiend follow their retro LP by splitting up. What's worse, the parting came amid a frenzy of equipment smashing. The Bodines (formerly on Creation and Magnet) look set to release an album through Red Rhino, and ex-Nightingale Rob Lloyd is currently hawking some new tapes in search of a deal. Using session musicians and Lloyd originals, we're talking big money, here.

Clair Obscur have two new albums scheduled for the next ten minutes, one on French label VISA and one on Scottish label Cathexis. Er, yes, Red Rhino is setting up a dance-orientated label that'll be run by the Skysaw guys of L'pool... and did you know that the people behind a lot of UK Acid House are in fact former Illuminated duo 400 Blows?

Alternative Tentacles release some new material from No Means No and bring the band over to the UK to tour; Food Records have inked a deal with EMI for Crazyhead and Diesel Park West and Workers Playtime have Dan in the studio completing Mother With Child And Bunny — an album that comes replete with a comic.

Nick Cave has his writings bookified with King Ink. Featuring lyrics from The Birthday Party and The Bad Seeds, it also resounds with plays, prose and incidental scribbles on Einsturzende Neubauten, a play written in conjunction with Lydia Lunch and lyrics for German band Die Haut. This book will be followed by Cave's first novel And The Ass Saw The Angel (details through Black Spring Press Ltd, 46 Rodwell Road, East Dulwich, London SE22 9LE).

Much ado about The Colorblind James Experience recently... and following our raving review of their self-titled debut LP, you'll be glad to find out that Fundamental are set to release it through Red Rhino at the drop of a fig leaf.

Bollock Brothers' Jock McDonald dropped in to tell us the sad news of the death of legendary German producer Connie Plank through cancer. The last album he worked on was Jock's own The Prophecies Of Nostradamus.

Through Underground during the summer, there'll be a fabby C90 featuring unreleased primal Jonathan Richman, The Waltonones, Automatic Diamini, The Chesterfields, The Flatmates and loads more. Cover versions are in vogue and The Bomb Party look set to unleash Sugar Sugar, while The Psychones offer Panic In Detroit. Also scheduled for release soon is Drag's version of 10cc's I'm Not In Love, while Imaginary Records follow their Syd Barrett compilation (with tracks by various bands) with a tribute to Captain Beefheart called Fast'n'Bulbous, with tracks from The King Of Luxembourg, XTC, The Scientists, The Membranes, That Petrol Emotion, Sonic Youth, The Primevals and pals. Next up is a Ray Davies tribute.

The Passmore Sisters have expired from this mortal coil... following the general public's inability to notice their wistful pop melodies... and Hula have left Red Rhino. The group's next release, a potent 12 inch called VC1, is so far scheduled for US release only through Wax Trax. Frankie Howerd has refused a royal decree to appear on the upcoming King Of Luxembourg LP, claiming that he has "hurt his foot". Hmmmm, a likely story. No reply has yet been received from Kenneth Williams.

Opal with Hope!

about his new label and new group

Steve Albini talks

Ruthless to the point of peversion

As with his former band Big Black, Steve Albini seems to have become increasingly more popular since they split up last summer. With various recent production jobs on both sides of the Atlantic keeping him busy, including new LP's by Pixies, The Membranes and Head Of David, he also has a brand new band on the go, as well as several more localised Chicago based production jobs in the pipeline. Oh, and his own Ruthless Records is also about to come out of hibernation.

So come on Albini, tell me more. . .

"Just recently I've been getting paid ridiculously well for various production jobs, the bulk of which have been for people I know who I just haven't had the chance to do anything with before. Or, they're or people who think that I can superimpose whatever I did with Big Black onto what they're working with. That end of it doesn't tend to work out too well."

What did you think of Pixies?

"I really enjoyed working with them, although I got the impression that Ivo from 4AD was almost insulted when he first heard the finished tapes. He was expecting me to take this guitar band into the modern age, presumably because he knew that Big Black used a drum machine, whereas all I did was give the guitarists Marshall amps and said pretend you're in a heavy metal band. From then on it worked out fine. I like it, the band like it, and I think Ivo has come to like it."

Is it true that Depeche Mode wanted you to produce them?

"Yes — it seemed like a joke to me, but they were serious. I was supposed to go and see them backstage after a show at Wembley but after about 10 minutes of the live performance I walked out and gave my pass to some teenage boy who was mouthing the words and was obviously a big fan."

So now he's producing the new Depeche Mode LP. . .

"Well no, the Mute road crew tackled him to the ground and wrestled the backstage pass away from him! I suppose if I was being totally professional about this I should be willing to work with people whose music I don't really like, but Depeche Mode was beyond that, and I didn't see the point of subjecting them to someone like me who would just sit in the control room and ridicule them."

So what's happening with your own music?

"Last October Rey Washan," (the drummer from Scratch Acid)" and I started playing together with a view to starting a band, but it took us a while to find a bass player. In the end we did something that we had originally resisted for obvious reasons and took on Dave Sims, the old Scratch Acid bass player. Barry Adamson (ex-Magazine, Bad Seeds) was another possibility, but when I finally met him I was disappointed in him as a person, although he's one hell of a bass player. Maybe it was the fact that he once hung out with Mick Cave and Blixa Bargeld for a couple of years — a prospect far too horrible for me to contemplate!"

Have you got a name yet?

"Yes, but partly for reasons of avoiding hype at this early stage I'm not going to tell you what it is!"

(When I got back to England someone told me that John Peel had already announced to the nation that they are called Rape Man. So much for secrets!)

"All of us are disgusted at the amount of hype that goes on, even in the American independent scene. In an effort to dilute the kind of anticipation that surrounded the whole Minutemen/Firehose fiasco we'll probably just slip a record quietly out into the marketplace just to diffuse any expectations that aren't particularly appropriate."

You're presumably wary of people's expectations post-Big Black.

"Oh yes, I'm well aware of it but I really don't give a shit what people expect or want. The new music is radically different from anything any of us have done before, but it is still rock music and it is still aggressive guitar music."

So any hints as to when we can expect any vinyl?

"I'm not sure yet, but avoiding any sort of hype is particularly important to us. It's like with Big Black — we didn't want to be around when substance stopped mattering and the image took over. The fact that we got still more popular after we split up was exactly what we were trying to avoid. The whole reason for me to be in a band is that I've always loved playing live, but with Big Black for about a year the audience had been getting dumber and dumber. While we didn't think that was particularly our fault it wasn't very satisfying to be playing in front of admittedly larger audiences, but larger audiences of boobs."

A MESSAGE FROM OUR SPONSORS

POP FAX WITH THE GIRL FROM WAHOO COUNTY, USA. (The one with the very rich mommy who owns Underground)

Hi guys, Cyndi here, with all the gossip about your cute record charts. I've wanted to write for a real magazine for aeons, but I guess The Underground will have to do, as it was the only title Mommy's publishing house owned which wanted a far-out-with-it-girl-of-tomorrow.

I read half a book on a coal-mining before I was told The Underground was a magazine about rock music, so I had a copy flown in by Markus on his way back from Scotland, where he has a castle. Anyway, I couldn't find any mention of The Eagles or even The Allman Brothers which personally I think is pretty gross. So I rang the editor and he was really gross as well, with his dinky accent and funny language. Hell, he talked to me like I was an ordinary person which is a bad idea unless he wants to find himself editor of The Camping Gazette.

Still, you guys want to know what I think, right? And I've spun a few of your vinyl things and talked to your Bruno Brookes (what a hunk) so I know all about it.

Firstly that Jim Morrissey of Smiths and his songs about a typical English day. . . now, he needs a few big meals and some workouts in his gym by the look of him. Surely you Brit girls don't go for such wimps? If he wants to sell records, he ought to look at Bon Jovi and realise that kids want guys that could punch them out. I bet Mr Smith couldn't even load a Biller AK 90, let alone mow down any anti-establishment agents. So get wise.

The Fall have a cute name, although they ought to change it to The Summer if they want Billboard success as no-one wants dreary music in this new age of optimism. (Billboard is the real chart in the States, but only Elton John is allowed in from Britain.)

And, what the hell is this house stuff you all talk about? I've got four houses and the one in France has got a parapet, so flake off!

The Wedding Present sang about George Best, a football player I'm told, buy why didn't they sing about Mousey 'Big Grill' Chesterton the Pittsburg Porcupines' gorgeous winger? He can be my record anytime. (And probably will, at the Girls For Morals Nancy Love Ball next Thursday.)

Anyhow, your Cyndi has to go and buy her plane tickets for Cannes now, as I can't find a single thing to wear in little old London. So keep up the good work Duran Duran and come to the States if you want to become a star. (Even your John Lennon had to come here to get shot.)

More hot news next month unless I can get a better offer. Lots of love and sloppy kisses, CYNDI TEX x x x

Magazines of the moment. . . Delight In The New Wonderland (Alistair, 64 Lugar Place, Troon, Strathclyde) features tatty scribbles, self-questioning garb and stuff on Tiffany, Groove Farm, Baby Lemonade, Sea Urchins etc. (A5) Get Out And Give Em Hell (14 Diana Road, Ashton In Molerfield, nr Wigan, Lancs) features harsh layouts and stuff on A Certain Ratio, John Avery Of Hula, demo tapes, skateboards and Paul Haig. (A4/50p)

Happy Pow (Stephen Brennan, 88 Killyglen Road, Lame, Co Antrim, N Ireland) is fun and frolicsom with a strange hybrid wobbling between Big Stick, the Mary Chain and gibberish. (A5/20p) Intense (10 Spencer Street, Littleborough, Rochdale, Greater Manchester) is action-packed fun and arrogant mind assaults. Features Monkey Run, Chameleons and wild stuff. (A5/30p)

Law Of Accident (Mike Shankland, 12 Broadway West, Fulford, York) is loose when it should be intense about the bands it covers. There are some good areas probed though. Includes Coil, PTV, Annie Anxiety, Conflict. (A4/40p)

Perturbed (14 Overlea Gardens, Acocks Green, Birmingham) is all over the place. Wild, libellous and chock full with features. A hoot. (A5/40p)

Pooh on you!

"Actually, we're just Pooh groupies"

Who are The Pooh Sticks?

The Pooh Sticks are a paradox. Hooray! They embody that most hated of forms, anorak pop, but they still manage to be rather cool and groovy. Cynics would say it's simply because their debut single, On Tape, is out on the ridiculously hip renegade label Fierce Records. . . but the band do have an element of parody which gives them a value of their own.

- The Swansea-based combo feature two grown-ups. Hue and Paul, who both play guitar and sing. They're backed by three precocious teenage nymphets, Trudi, Alison and Stephanie, who attempt tambourine, bass and drums respectively, as well as helping with the vocals.
- The band are completely submerged in indie pop traditions but they're not luddites. According to Hue, there's already a Pooh Sticks promo video for the single. "We haven't got it played anywhere because it's highly controversial. It features me and Stephanie re-enacting the big scene in From Here To Eternity. Stephanie is only about 14 and I'm a strapping lad of 21 so it looks a bit rude." (Is that the fight scene? — Ed.)

■ There is a follow-up planned, I Know Someone Who Knows Alan McGee Quite Well, which should be released as soon as the band receive the financial rewards from On Tape.

■ "We haven't got much cash at the moment," moans Hue. "The girls only get 50p a week pocket money."

■ This could soon change as a Rough Trade distribution deal is on the horizon, as well as a publicity scam so monumental that Fierce supremo, Steve Gregory, reckons it'll catapult the band into the indie big league. Anorak superstars? Yeah!

■ For details of the Pooh Sticks single, send an SAE to Fierce Records, PO Box 29, Swansea SA1 1BG. Anthony Farthing

We say Yeah (Jazz). . . or even yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah!

Chats: "What did you expect us to be like?" Chats (appropriate name folks!) is Yeah Jazz's permanently smiling guitarist and he has a reason for asking!

Kevin: "People expect us to be professional northerners! You know, Coronation Street dwellers and pigeon fanciers!" Kevin is Yeah Jazz's singer, the responsible party for those plaintive colloquialisms and bittersweet, soaring lyrics. Admittedly, they don't look much like pop stars, but then, they're not really trying hard enough!

Chats: "That's the problem, you see, we don't really have a clothes image."

Kevin: "It doesn't bother us at all now but when we first started out we'd keep thinking, 'shall we get some leather trousers or leopard skin spandex?' . . . We ended up with Oxfam gear!"

Chats: "Anyway, we'd never live up to it, I mean, I could never go on stage wearing leopard skin trousers. I wouldn't be able to live up to what people expected me to be. Let's face it, I'm just not it, am I?"

Yeah Jazz aren't the least bit image-conscious, nor is their conversation, thankfully, cutely-tailored rock speak. Where they've been, what they've done, what they had for tea and how useless they are at giving up smoking are all topics of the moment. Yeah Jazz, you see, live in the real world. Six Lane Ends, their simply amazing new LP on Cherry Red, is full of pathos and humour, real songs about the real reflections of real people. Rather than communicate through the fictitious extremes that so much pop fodder would have us believe is the human experience, Kevin and Chats come from a place where emotional weaknesses, human failings, memories and reminiscences are respected. In other words, it's OK to be normal.

If ever there was a potential hit single on an album it's All The Stars from Six Lane Ends, possibly the most poignant YJ story of all.

Kevin: "Yeah, that is a good story. What happened was I was staying at my granddad's, and he's a great conversationalist — he's dead now but he was a great talker — and he just started telling me all about me grandma who I never knew. She died way before I was born. I knew I was meant to meet Chats at nine so I looked at the clock and it was 11 o'clock! I'd missed the whole evening. That became All The Stars."

"When there's things like that, there's no need to write the 'baby baby baby' stuff. People have always got tales to tell. I don't think I could ever write a song specifically so that it had a chance of getting played on Gary Davies' Radio 1 prog. There's no point, because I just couldn't believe in that."

Chats: "Once you start doing that you'd never respect yourself in the morning!" Alex Kadis

Life and how to abuse it!

Finance sets his own fires to make job more exciting

THIS IS THIS..

THIS IS IT!

Recommended eye-food comes from This Is This, a tastefully conceived manuscript that looks like a 'zine but tastes around twice as good. The perps involved weave prose and pose into a textured stream of consciousness, and your education into this fine art of latter-day Dylan Thomas can be grasped for a frittering 50p plus A4 cheap wrapping, from Andrew Collins, This Is This, 33e Telford Avenue, London SW2. . . well, it's just like Underground never happened. (And few mentions of musak.)

RUMBLEFISH

If you believe Jeremy Paige's blithely self-deprecating tales of his band, you'd reckon nobody had ever heard of Rumblefish.

Just before their first label, Pink Records, sank without trace, the Birmingham outfit issued their debut 12 inch single, Tugboat Line. It followed the label into oblivion.

Now, a year later, expanded to a five piece (the band started out as a stand-up drummer, guitar and trumpet), they've got a two single deal with Summerhouse. Medicine is the first release, and despite Jeremy's claims that the band are "pretty bad" when it comes to recording ("but there again what do you expect when you only go in a studio twice a year?"), I rather like its bouncy, Woodentopsy attack. Jeremy reckons it's unrepresentative and should have been out six months ago. Instead, he says they're doing "much more flighty things". So now you know.

Pixies: haven't they got a gnome to go to?

SURF'S UP!

Pixies' new album has shot into the national charts. It uncovers a raw nerve of rock power. Alex Bastedo takes the pulse

Come On Pilgrim, the debut mini-album by Pixies, was one of the best 'new young guitar band' LPs heard in recent years, and is yet another example of Americans doing it better. Two songs in particular, Caribou and Levitate Me, just begged to be played again and again, while the overall feel of the eight songs was of some exotic hybrid between Sonic Youth, Violent Femmes and The Gun Club.

Now we have their first full length LP, Surfer Rosa, produced by the ubiquitous Steve Albini, which is even better, even if it did take a bit longer to get to grips with. Lead singer/songwriter Black Francis has heard that remark before. . .

"Actually, a few other people have said that this record is not as commercial or immediate. However, I think it is much better. Parts of the mini-LP were too quiet for me, and Steve Albini certainly cured that on Rosa. It is sparser but definitely louder sounding and guitar heavy, which is something we wanted."

How much of that was down to Albini?

"We virtually let him have a free rein in the studio. We're basically a live band and don't know too much about recording. Steve Albini was the record company's choice for producer so we trusted their judgment. I have to admit that I wasn't too familiar with Big Black either."

Would you agree that Gigantic is the most immediate song on the record?

"Definitely. That song is built around a riff I've been playing for years, one of those Sweet Jane sort of things. In fact, we were going to call the album Gigantic at one point, but it's probably a good job we didn't in the end, judging by the finished sleeve artwork."

Bare breasts on 4AD in the cause of art! And why a reworking of Vamos, from Pilgrim, on Surfer Rosa?

"That was Ivo at 4AD's choice. He wanted us to re-record that song and I'm glad we managed to come up with a better version — we opened out the song a lot more and gave it much more mean, fiery guitar."

SING SOMETHING SARAH!

The ever-effervescent Sarah, who brought us Pristine Christine by The Sea Urchins and I've Got A Habit by The Orchids, have a paper and flexi concoction with scribbles on 1000 Violins, 14 Iced Bears and Talulah Gosh crafted into grammar by ex-editors of Kvatch and Are You Scared To Get Happy? 'zines, plus a mini-disc featuring Another Sunny Day's pomp-rock classic Anorak City. A bargain at 50p (plus a bigger than A5 sae) from Clare and Matt at the Garden Flat, 46 Upper Belgrave Road, Clifton, Bristol BS8 2XN.

Dave Henderson

PLEASE! DON'T SANDBLAST MY BRAIN!

Last year Head Of David received rave reviews for their first five track release Dogbreath, and conjured up equally enthusiastic acclaim for a live performance, christened Godbreath, which was broadcast as a John Peel session. Slipping both Dog and God into record label Blast First's melting pot produced a full length elpee called, simply enough, LP, which had fans and critics alike frothing about Dudley's Deadly Foursome. "Big and ugly", "Ferocious", "Hardest of the hard core", "Menacing", "Intense, macabre and maddeningly repetitive" and "Fearless, fierce and devastatingly LOUD", were the flag-wavers comments.

- That was last year when the singer was called Reubin and HOD were lumped in with the noise filth independents. The singer remains the same but now he's called Steve.
- Last year HOD played the ICA. (The rock week held for the 'Great Unsigned' by predatory EMI.) The £500 deal was for a short set and permission to use the recording on a compilation. Head Of David took the money, played a compilation cut-up of big EMI acts in the background and churned out a continuous, cankerous noise for 20 minutes before the fire brigade invaded the smoking venue and broke things up. . .

- Steve: "People thought it was some attack from within British pop culture or something. I didn't understand the reviews. If we were revolutionaries we'd probably be The Pet Shop Boys — it's the best way to do it."
- You got some kind of reaction, though?
- "Well. . . yes, it was great, 'cos we didn't have a clue what we were doing, as usual really, and everybody was throwing things at us and some were spitting, and, what with all that smoke, you couldn't see anything. . ."
- The new LP, Dustbowl, is something to be valued, if what we're being told, that HOD will wind themselves down in June ("once we got a deal, all the fun went out of it"), is true. The record that Head Of David are retiring with is full of primed noisy stuff, standing tall and very metal, but not in the cliched, deadly dull way of its contemporaries. It's 15 tracks of white-hot substance, with an added ingredient X. HOD wash blacker than black and sting like sizzling sulphuric acid playing over the cracks and crevices of your cranium. Pretty dramatic, huh?! Daz Igy meth

It's Trad, dad

Anarchy sets Wales alight!

Meet a group who sing in Welsh, live in England, and have a German record company — TRADDODIAD OFNUS. They have a new LP out on Phil Boa's Constrictor label, distributed in the UK by Red Rhino, and called, naturally enough, Welsh Tourist Bored.

"That village with the long name — Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwlllantysiliogogoch — is an invention for tourists. Nobody who lives there calls it that, and anyhow, it's a really boring place, so our LP cover has a picture of a Welsh tourist, bored," claims a Tradd.

Why the German label?

"There are only two Welsh labels of note — Anhrefn, who are interested but haven't got any money, and Sain (meaning sound), who have money (mainly because they have released so many Aled Jones records) but aren't interested."

Traddodiad Ofnus means a tradition that is afraid of the future, frightened of moving on. A good description of the Wales the group have moved away from, but they still sing almost exclusively in Welsh.

I imagined Traddodiad Ofnus would be well militant, slipping into Welsh and advocating the destruction of English holiday homes. But as they say, "There is no reason why we should have to justify singing in Welsh, the language sounds really poetic." Even if most people can't understand what the songs are about. So what are they about?

"A bit about Wales and Britain today, a bit of love, a bit of sex, the normal content of songs really."

But of course there are clever bits you miss if you can't speak the language, like on the single, Hwyl.

"Hwyl means fun, but down in south Wales it also means goodbye. So it's like goodbye, have fun, it was good while it lasted."

It may be goodbye, it might have been fun, but Traddodiad Ofnus are still in love with Wales and the Welsh language. They play there as often as possible — and they are not worried if singing in Welsh is considered uncommercial.

"If you could speak Welsh, I know you'd understand." Quite. Christopher Mellor

B.F.G.

Rash statements have likened, perhaps lazily, the B.F.G. sound to a Missionary, Sistersy kind of thing but, of course, it's not really that simple. Steve the singer does have a deep voice and Mike's drumming does possess a certain beatbox-like tightness over which Paul's guitar strums, picks and chops with as much authority as Marx or Hussey could muster, but they're no rip off merchants; strong tunes, which are both commercial and intense, make for much more than a grey carbon copy.

They've signed a publishing deal with RCA and, despite some offers, prefer to stay on Attica Records for the moment. Output-wise, there have been two 12 inch EPs, namely Western Sky and Higher, both of which are accessible and atmospheric, and well worth investigating. Daz Igy meth

END OF THE TRAX

Trax started as a mail-art/art/art-art/music-related art fiasco, and developed into a globe full of strange people — with cohorts including Genesis P Orridge, The Haters, DDAA, William Burroughs, Brion Gysin and more. But now, in true style, it's all over. The numerous literary, illustrative and recorded highlights are shown and deciphered in their last, succinctly designed package Last Trax — which comes complete with a seven inch record by members of the Trax core. Stimulating and innovative stuff and we have three copies to give away!

Just answer this question on a postcard and send it to Underground/Trax Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ to arrive pretty quickly.

CARTOONING ABOUT

A scrawling, begging postcard from Steven Appleby arrived chez Ug with a fabby new publication called Rockets — A Way Of Life — which he claimed to have written and drawn. This finely surreal, illustrative trip to the outer echelons of the planetary system reveals that there is still humour in cartoons and futuristic things — and the star of this piece, Captain J Star, is rife with it. It's an Assorted Images Publication that should be read beneath the bed covers immediately.

FLOOR PRODUCTS

Enter Floor Products! No, not the latest line in brushes, missus, but rather the latest line in dancefloor sounds. Floor is an 'organisation' in the true business sense of the word, they make music, they produce other people's music, they release music.

At the moment they're heavily involved in a film project being produced by north west independent film maker Neil Adams, concerned with the growth of house/hip hop in the north of England. It's hoped that the finished product will eventually be taken up by Channel 4.

Meanwhile, Floor has to establish itself as a cassette label; their sample tape Bacteria From A Baboon's Stomach (I kid you not) has been available from various local record shops for a while. The next item on the agenda is a compilation of Manchester artists of a similar dance-beat persuasion. Craig Ferguson

McCarthy take basketball to the art elite

McCarthy on the road to the big bible belt!

"Make it funny," said the editor of beat bible, Underground. Make it funny? Make an interview with McCarthy funny? That's a joke! Apart from entirely fabricating an endless stream of quips, double entendres and side-splitting anecdotes, how are you supposed to make an interview with McCarthy funny?

"It'll be a challenge," he said. Who does he bloody think I am — Anneka Rice?

BASKETBALL !!!!!?

Feeling pretty light-hearted and full of the joys of spring, despite the mountainous task of having to bring back humorous copy, I sped my merry way to Cambridge Circus and a pub inhabited by neanderthal rock 'n' roll roadies and three members of McCarthy. I remembered Malcolm, the lead singer, from a recent gig. He'd pointed at me and said, "I like your anorak".

Funny, I wasn't wearing an anorak. The bloke behind me was though — he was a mad, six foot six, basketball-playing student and he was having a whale of a time. I still have the bruises to prove it — he pushed andajoled me throughout, as many psychologically disturbed students are wont to do.

So (and let's get on with it) what do McCarthy mean to me? Six rib-tickling singles? Vaguely camp and lost vocals? The C-86 champions of indie pop? No! McCarthy mean a whirlpool of sound that pulls you in. Something you're prepared to like despite its popular misconceptions. Lyrics (so disassociated from the happy tunes) that slice like a cheesewire through ordinary pop words. Drumbeats that are impossible to repeat. Odd, odd, and odder than odd. Four, not spectacular, people on stage that shamble and stumble and fumble and sometimes make you laugh with comments like, "I like your Harrington".

TOOTHPASTE !!!!!?

Trivia — that's the answer, be flippant, it never fails, smiles all the way.

What toothpaste do you use?

Malcolm: "Smokers' toothpaste, I don't know what it's called."

Brand names, Malcolm, I want brand names.

Malcolm: "Eucryl, something like that."

Have you any amazing anecdotes to recount, to share with the readers?

Tim: "No."

This is not strictly true. Billy Bragg played live in Tim's street on the day of the Queen's jubilee.

What's your favourite drink?

Malcolm: "Port. Look, I don't know if... Is this...? Shall we pursue this line...? Why are you asking us these questions?"

I had none of this trouble with Debbie Gibson. This is a pop interview, you're a pop band, these are the kind of things pop fans want to know.

Malcolm: "I think that's wrong. People should want to know about politics, think about things, become critical about things. We're just the same as everybody else."

VEGETARIANS !!!!!?

Let's get intellectual.

McCarthy are the same as everybody else. But it's their lyrics ("she was egged on by loathe-some goblins"), their vocabulary and, as Tim puts it, "revolutionary fervour", that makes them different. McCarthy are blunt in a round about kind of way. When they speak, phrases like "working class liberation", "orthodox methods of protest" and "economic structure" roll off their tongues as easily as, "what's your favourite TV programme?" rolls off mine.

Malcolm eats books for breakfast. I can imagine his room piled high with biographies, text-books, dictionaries and Penguins of every kind.

Malcolm: "It's not just books. It's ideas, things I see on the news that are happening in the world. I find it quite difficult to write songs. Other people seem to do it as easily as breathing. I have to think about what I'm doing. I spend hours searching for the correct word. I don't find it natural in the least — I don't think it should be."

Even so, people still get them wrong. Me and the basketball player included. McCarthy lyrics are not as plain as the nose on your face. They're there to puzzle, disturb, initiate ideas or to disagree with.

Tim: "The lyrics are often taken in the directly opposite way to which they were intended. Malcolm doesn't write in a sloganeering way, it's not obvious. It's done in a way where you have to think about it. On Anti-American Cretin everybody thought, 'oh good, they hate Americans', but it's the exact opposite. Kill, Kill, Kill too sounds like a very pro-vegetarian song, but it isn't."

MARXIST !!!!!?

But how can you disagree with something as harmless as I Should Be So Lucky?

Malcolm: "You can disagree that the most important thing is people's lives is unrequited love. It's not the central issue in the world today." Despite their outrage at traditional pop themes, fun, love and money, McCarthy have written a love song, called This Nelson Rockefeller. It's like I Think We're Alone Now with a twist, the Pet Shop Boys' Rent turned on its head. It's about a Marxist love triangle. Its follow up, Should The Bible Be Religious, according to some religious McCarthy fans, a "hot potato" too — so, keep your trousers on vicar.

Malcolm: "Some people obviously just like the jolly music and guitars. But I think there's a fair percentage who appreciate that we are trying to say something different in pop music."

In other words — McCarthy are NOT the same as everybody else.

S is for SOUL!

THE POWER OF THE FLARE DISCOVERED BY CHRIS MELLOR

S-Express have made one of those annoying crossover dance records that nearly everybody will dance to. It's being played by hardcore clubbers, jangly poppers and gurlies who dance round their handbags. It's in the charts, it's on the radio, it's impossible to ignore, and hard to resist. The S-Express has arrived, but this isn't what Mark Moore, DJ extraordinaire and the mastermind behind the project, intended.

"I just wanted to make something I could play in my clubs that would pack the floor. I didn't think it would be accepted because it doesn't follow the rules. I wanted to sell a couple of thousand and end up in five years time with a rare groove, but it hasn't worked."

The other thing Mark underestimated was the power of those flared trousers in the publicity shots.

"We reflect club styles, and that's one style around at the moment. But I never realised how much impact they would have; people seem to be outraged."

But is it important to be a DJ if you want to make a dance record? There are a lot of them doing it at the moment.

"You don't have to be one, but it does help. You just have to go to clubs so you know what's happening, anybody can do it really."

Theme From S-Express, is the title of this most hummable tune, and it's one of those tracks that is perfect for a particular moment. It encapsulates every sound from the club scene. It's the sound of now, which means that in six months' time it will sound crap.

"Records tend to sound awful because they're so good everyone copies the sound and in six months it becomes a cliché."

So what do you do after you've made the perfect disco record?

"The follow up, Superfly Guy, is even better. It's a proper record, it took a whole two and a half days to record, whereas Theme... only took two."

Superfly Guy is another slab of sonic disco, bringing the flare groove right up to date, and S-Express assure us, there's plenty more where that came from.

Whiter than the rest!

"I don't think you could just sit there and let it wash over you. . . you either really get into it, I guess, or you chuck it in the bin."

Andy White passes judgement on his second album, Kiss The Big Stone, which, by his own admission, is in a different galaxy from his first, Rave On.

"I think the second album just opens up what the first one started. . . Your first album's always some kind of summation of everything which went before it, and the second one includes that, but it really starts off where the other one left off."

Experiences and travels since the first album have inevitably influenced. . . Big Stone — in particular a trip to Los Angeles, which inspired the track Tower Of Babel Time. The recording process (in Randalstown, near Belfast) was eased by not having to complete everything in a fortnight (as with Rave On) and by the participation of many able and amenable musicians, including Arty McGlynn — Van Morrison's guitarist — as well as a couple of Costello's Attractions.

The relaxed nature of the sessions is reflected in the music and its sneaky tricks of disorientation — the sound of Andy White singing in German (Go Tell Suzanne) being one of the more unusual adventures.

Andy White is rarely less than interesting: all ten songs on Kiss The Big Stone are connected, and the last cut, West Wind Blues, climaxes with a medley of references to its predecessors. That may sound strangely like a concept album, but. . .

"There must be a better way of describing it. . . it's more of a story than a concept album. It's a bit obscure, anyway. You should let your imagination work on it anyhow, that's the best thing that everybody has." Robert Cohen

What's happening on local radio?

THE BOTTOM LINE: MONDAY TO FRIDAY 9.45-11PM. BBC NORTHERN IRELAND.

Michael Bradley used to be an Undertone; now he presents The Bottom Line every Friday night. The other nights are presented by Mike Edgar or Davy Sims, but Michael's show is probably the most interesting.

"You have to remember that just a few inches along the dial is Radio 1, and I don't want to duplicate that. So I won't play the Mary Chain or Morrissey. Really I just play stuff that appeals to me. I don't care about names, just things with good tunes.

"It's mostly guitar music, but there's also some African stuff, other international things and '60s garage music. People often says 'why don't you play more of The Cult?' but the more mainstream indie/rock stuff is covered from Monday to Thursday on the other shows.

"It's important to remember that rock 'n' roll is just a burst of teenager poetry and you can still find records that remind you why you got into it in the first place."

You can hear The Bottom Line throughout Northern Ireland and in most of the Republic, plus Northern England and the west coast of Scotland. So check it out for an essential dose of that 'teenager poetry'. Christopher Mellor

Welcome to the Green party

The Smithereens exploded, quite accidentally, last year. With ten minutes to spare they follow up their success with a new album, Green Thoughts. Tony Fletcher gets Freudian about the new album and the group's history.

Smithereens: furthering the cause of beard propulsion

So how do you follow up an album that you waited six years to make, then recorded and mixed in ten days and watched with wry satisfaction as it sold something silly like 500,000 copies? Well, if you've got any sense you'll repeat the formula, which is why cynics might suggest that Green Thoughts, the new Smithereens album, is in fact nothing more than Especially For You part two, a rehash of their 1986 fairytale success.

Certainly Green Thoughts is a strong, solid album, with a healthy balance of powerhouse guitars and tenderness. To their credit as songwriters, there have been few albums that I have been able to hum every single tune on within three hearings, but to their detriment there is nothing on Green Thoughts as desperate as their Strangers When We Meet, nothing as truly romantic as Cigarette, and — most notably — no lyric as sharp as perhaps anything on Especially For You.

Upon returning from 15 months of solid touring last autumn, The Smithereens found themselves in the traditional 'second album syndrome'. The songs for Especially For You had been allowed to develop over several years, but now similar quality was expected in weeks. Doesn't a songwriter like Pat De Nizio — the man with the impressive goatee beard — feel pressure in these circumstances? His answer is quiet but self-assured.

"The only pressure that exists is self-imposed pressure: creating an artificial deadline and putting pressure upon myself to write within a certain timeframe, so that I could meet the recording deadline, which I also scheduled."

These timeframes would not suit the likes of George Michael: a month to write an entire album, and 16 days to record and mix it. Ouch! Did he find it easy to come up with the songs?

"I actually found it tremendously difficult, because I had never encountered a situation like that before. The material for the other albums was written over a period of time, almost at leisure and at given moments of inspiration. Whereas I had to be slightly more craftsmanlike about this — I couldn't just wait around for a bolt out of the blue. So I was pleased because I proved to myself that I could write on demand and I'd never known if I was capable of that or not."

And as for the short time in the studio, "It's just a natural reflection of how we've always worked. In the early days we worked quickly on very modest budgets, and then as the years progressed and opportunities opened themselves up to us, we found those work were the methods that still worked best."

Given such speed, you might think it a miracle that Green Thoughts is not an unmitigated disaster, but De Nizio is merely proving that the methods responsible for so much classic '60s material are not dead. And as Especially For You had proved a significant breakthrough for uncomplicated guitar bands on commercial radio, why sacrifice oneself to state-of-the-art-deliberations just because the finance might be there?

But enough of the present; let's delve into the past. The Smithereens formed in New York in 1980, with guitarist Jim Babjak, bassist Mike Mesaros and drummer Dennis Diken, all of whom sing backing vocals, making up the quartet along with Pat De Nizio. They released an EP, Girls About Town, as a 'calling card' and began gigging. Taking up an offer to play part-time as backing band to Otis Blackwell (writer of such legendary tunes as All Shook Up, Don't Be Cruel and Please Mr Postman) meant they could become professional musicians, and they also got to record two now-unavailable albums with him.

In 1983, The Smithereens also recorded a five-song EP of their own, Beauty And Sadness (which, like their first effort, is to be rereleased in the next year), which not only sold well on the east coast but was picked up by the then fledgling Stockholm label Wire Records, enabling the group to make their first ever tour — of Scandinavia, no less — in 1984. But a year later, all pushing 30, they had to recognise that the future held little in store.

"It was a strange world that we had created for ourselves," reflects Pat. "Most of our original audience had got married, had kids and moved on, and most of the original clubs we'd started at had closed, reopened and closed again. But we never entertained the notion of giving up, and at that point, after putting half a decade into this one band, there was scant else that we could do with our lives."

But then every cloud has a silver lining. "Ironically it was after years of... well I wouldn't call it failure because I guess you only fail when you quit; but after hundreds of rejection letters and changes of regime at record companies, and still nothing happening, quite simply enough I sent a cassette of some demos to a name I had been given of someone at Enigma, with just my name, my phone number, the name of the band and the songs on it. About a week later I got a phone call asking if we were interested in doing a deal."

Interested? The Smithereens would probably have walked on hot coals to sign the deal with the west coast indie; as it was their ten-day recording session with Don Dixon not only turned the group from no-hopers to the success story of 1986, but established Enigma as a vital label, leading to a deal with Capitol in the States and the creation of their own (indie) office in Britain.

If success has changed De Nizio, it is only for the better. "I'm more cynical now than ever," he says of the industry that shunned his band for years. "There are just so many people who want to know you for the wrong reasons, who wouldn't give you the time of day before they thought you'd made it. You're a nobody who means nothing and then suddenly there's interest and you're 'cool', or at least you're made to feel like people think you're 'cool'. So I live with a healthy degree of scepticism as regards all of that, in the knowledge that this album might not make it, and then we're back where we started. I count my blessings every day that I'm doing this professionally, and doing fairly well at it — at least for the time being."

Humility in the American music business? Well there's a thing. Take some more care over those lyrics next time, Pat, and you'll be counting your blessings for the rest of your life.

AND ALSO THE TREES The Millpond Years

Reflex RT C 3/4 An apt title, since the problem with this LP is its stagnation. While there are lots of nice ideas, a fine moody (without being doomy) vocal and clearcut instrumentation, this really has a bark worse than its bite. It does sustain interest, and even in places conjures up images of Gabriel era Genesis (meant as a compliment!) especially lyrically. But it's too one paced; a dynamic diversion would have added an extra contour, and the contrast would have made for a more appealing landscape. Still, nicely atmospheric and coolly worked, and, I suspect, a grower. Carole Linfield

ANTHONY ADVERSE

The Red Shoes EL ACME 11 P
••• If you're a devotee of Ealing films, Simon Dee, Lulu, Hanna Barbara, Pressburger and Lyttleton, then this album is made for you. If you're not, you should still find something of immense interest. The Red Shoes combines the sublime and the ridiculous, the funny and the sad, all wrapped up in a velvety, wispy coating, courtesy of the enigmatic and mysterious Anthony Adverse. All ten tracks are written by Louis Philippe, with a wholesome quality which one finds hard to knock or dislike. I challenge anyone to listen to the comic strip-styled Garden Of Eden without smiling, or Goodbye Again without shedding a tear. And if anyone doubts that London, My Town is the '80s Downtown, then I'm not Pet Clark. Pet Clark

Mad Mad World
Interior Music IM012 RR C
3/4 An imaginary cover for latter day è saint Louis Philippe, The Arcadians mustered one single for Crepuscule some time back. In retrospect this previously shelved collection of song sketches has been revived and minimally packaged. It's a dangerously quaint, understated set, demo-esque, beatnik and considered, with Louls keeping it close to his chest, jazzy and plainly unaffected. The Arcadians may not change the mad world, but they can make it a little more wholesome for half an hour. Dave Henderson

BEAT HAPPENING

Jamboree
53rd & 3rd AGAS 2 FF C
••• America's ability to produce alternative viewpoints of society, while living on a consumer-pleasing conveyor, is strange in itself. That these alternatives are as varied as, say, Black Flag, Public Enemy and Beat Happening is just plain weird. This trio from Washington seem to ignore their roots — while lying in wait in a pocket of resistance as wide as Richman, Wire and the Young Marble Giants — opting to concoct a minimal, cherubic noise that's immediate, intoxicating and intelligent. Pop music with feelings, a real sound for bedroom romantics. Dave Henderson

BEAUTIFUL PEA GREEN BOAT

Get Religion
Mr Slaughterback's Records/Third Mind Records MSR 3/TMLP 26 RR C 3/4 A strange, ethereal sort of record that wanders through electronic pastures and into sleepy, jazz influenced melancholia. Babs' vocal is classically esoteric and clear, if a little one-dimensional, and the instrumentation well contained, while remaining atmospheric and, in places, even filmic (like on Nostalgia). Get Religion works because of its willpower; it owes its success as much to what they left out as to what's gone in. Tight, then, and convincing with it. Carole Linfield

BLUMEN OHNE DUFT

The Bedrock Massacre
Scratch And Sniff LP 02703
(Glashuttenstrasse 113, 2000 Hamburg 6, West Germany)
•• Blumen Ohne Duft play a strange brand of guitar rock. Falling into pits and chasms of Sham, getting heavy-handed, thrashing, then going into a Cramps-styled overdose, they've enough in their armoury to impress the most discerning of volume fetishists. They also like to throw in a few "artistic" diversions too, and on Blood Of The Lamb they opt for an Orson Welles-style War Of The Worlds interruption, some background chit-chat and a driving Stupids-style beat. . . the finest cut on a recommended album. Nick Brody

THE CARDIACS

A Little Man And A House And The Whole World Window
Alphabet ALPH LP007 P
••• They may possess the ugliest bunch of faces you'll ever come across, and the music they perform cannot be described as beautiful or Sunday teatime listening, but The Cardiacs do have a favourable set of components. They have a style and brilliance which enables them to create an obscure, almost infantile sound, which in their own inimitable way remains utterly accessible and satisfying (not irritating as some have said) to listen to.
Their jolting, Humpty-Dumpty rhythms and pretty detached lyrics are beyond comparison, and their love for prog-rockers, Genesis and Yes, isn't off-putting; there's no room for indulgence and pomposity between the grooves, or if there is, it's certainly well controlled. Admittedly, visually they're a more exciting proposition, but don't be distracted. This LP does repay a lot of listening. It's certainly worth the concerted effort. Peter Mash

CIRCLE CONFUSION

Meat Dept Lively Arts ARTY4 P
7/8 The triteness of the name, the austere graphics and the trudgingly industrial background of Detroit's Circle Confusion suggests that Meat Dept might just be the dancing alternative that Test Dept never made, or the writing minimalism that Meat Beat Manifesto over-indulged. In fact, this album is far more intelligent and energetic. Circle Confusion have a pedigree worth noting. Meat Dept may not be the greatest album, but it certainly is different. Dave Henderson

CRUMBSUCKERS

Beast On My Back Rough Justice
JUST 9 P 3/4 US grunge guitar with a blistering vocal action and some seering guitar forays. Crumbsuckers are close to heavy metal legend, looking like B Jovi but coming on like early Black Flag, but the taste of scorched guitar pyrotechnics might be a touch predictable for some. Nick Brody

CURRENT 93

Swastikas For Noddy LAYLAH LAY20 C
•• This is a surprising LP. Current 93 seem to have forsaken the expected excesses of noise and "hard" dance and headed for a hybrid of nursery rhyme/trad English folk instead. The end result summons up more than a few disturbing images of black cat witchcraft and Hammer-styled other worldliness. Like Ken Russell's vision of unpopular music, Swastikas For Noddy breaks the rules by playing within the rules and sounds quite remarkable in doing so. The cast for this incarnation of 93 includes a Strawberry Switchblade, Boyd Rice of Non, a Nurse With Wound, a Coil and a Death In June among others. Different just Isn't the word. Dave Henderson

DOG FACED HERMANS

Humans Fly

3/4 Musical styles come and go — and most of them show up on this album. The Dog Faced Herman have a musicians' collective pedigree and, as they muscle through the more uniform anarchic hues of the aural world, they throw in the odd Spanish/Mexican meander, get punky, funky, hunky and more than a little unpredictable. This album has holes in its elbows but it smites in the right places and will keep you enthralled for 41 minutes and 22 seconds. Johnny Eager

THE DUSTDEVILs

Gutter Light is blaring from the stereo, it sounds great — like the Butthole Surfers stripped down, like mad people making farm implements from their guitars. But, the car won't turn around and take them from their trusted goth roots of old into this new, challenging thoroughfare. AMBIENT TIMES

Nick Brody gets a listening block — and all in the cause of musical education and development

Belgian duo Sigmund Und Sein Freund release their debut album on Antler (though the Cartel) with the rather memorable title See Emily Play. The title track, however, isn't the Pink Floyd familiar, but a floating piece of ethereal ephemera. These Belgians have moved on from their jagged 12 inch releases of last year, and are heading down a more structured, tree-lined avenue.

Virgin's Venture label has three new album cassette packages out — all of note, all completely different. David Sylvian teams up with Holger Czukay for two long pieces, Plight and Premonition, on which the minimal note flotation becomes so precious it's almost inaudible. By contrast, Seigon Ono's The Green Chinese Table is a lushly orchestrated set of ideas with east-meets-west stamped right through.

Bill Laswell has been funking out for some time, getting jazzed, being time-structured, but his Venture venture, Hear No Evil, is more like a cross between Ry Cooder and Ravi Shankar. Very listenable — and the most accessible of these three new releases.

The Oronies are pretty moody and floating too, at least on the basis of their track Aradia from their latest 12 inch. The topside is more straightforward Crass-meets-Hawkwind stuff, with the PTV-esque title The Woods Are Alive With The Smell Of His Coming. Interesting stuff, though, from the Hiraeth label.

Geisterfahrer's Stein And Bein LP on What's So Funny About (Glashüttenstrasse 113, 2000 Hamburg 6, West Germany) came as a surprise, as word had it that they'd given up the ghost some time back. They seem to have mutated into a more orthodox, rockish (?) flavour which is hardly as inspiring. In fact there's a lot of this "rock" stuff emerging in Europe — take the Walpurgis Volta LP on La Rage through Red Rhino. . . a thrashing splash that lacks some of the conviction and diction of their contemporaries. Meanwhile, in Greece. . .

Chapter 24's Tin Invaders LP, on Di Di (4A N Kazantzaki Str, 15234 Haladri, Athens, Greece), is a stramping blast of beat muzak — with its hands squeezing unsuspecting organs through thrashing machines. The onus is on melodic tunes, spiced with a "grown up" set of sounds. The end result is stimulating, and possibly the most unique thing to come out of Greece for some years.

The Sub Rosa label is a constant source of expressive music from all territories and their La Nouvelle Serenitie is a handsomely-packaged gatefold affair with pieces from Jon Hassell, Harold Budd, Gavin Bryars and Les Archives Sonores Sub Rosa. It's, as you'd expect, a floating collection of ambient music varying from chorale hymns to tinkling keyboards, and it's available through the Cartel via Red Rhino.

E.I.E.I.O. That Love Thang

Frontier Records FLP 1025 (now licensed to Demon) P ●● Not a bad record this, taking things like brass, strong melody and rockin' guitars and layering them over a solid pop base. Though the influences occasionally veer into their compatriot Bryan Adams' rock horizons (most noticeably on Where You Go, but apparent often throughout), elsewhere the harder edge is tilted at a more contemporary angle. Some interesting moves, too, but then, what do you expect from a band with a track called Andy Warhol's Dead But I'm Not? Promising, then, if they can keep those AOR leanings in check, and instead steer further into the more rarified rock melody that's displayed on the likes of their best track, the lovely Words Falling Down. Carole Linfield

FEARLESS IRANIANS FROM HELLDie For Allah

Big Takeover TAKE 1 R C

● 1/4 A teaser that's already a talking point, this LP features Quinn, an ex-Butthole Surfer, and it's very much an adrenalin-pumping thrust in the early style of the Surfers. A chugging, chunky noise that's not clever enough to persuade enough people to open the sleeve, while being more than hardcore in the downright, no-holds-barred mind assault stakes. Angry but a little directionless. TC Wall

JOHN FELICENothing Pretty

New Rose ROSE 141 ● 1/2 John Felice takes five from The Real Kids to work up a sweat on behalf of good old rock 'n' roll, the end result being a collection of competent bar-room songs that glisten with a squeaky-clean polish. Nothing Pretty might be construed as a stab at dirty rockerland, but Felice keeps it above board to produce a contemporary American rock record that's enjoyable, but as challenging as a bottle of dandelion and burdock. Johnny Eager

FREDDIE STEADY'S WILD COUNTRYLucky 7

Heartland HLD 005 P ●● A floating, relaxing album from an all-American boy singing all-American songs about deep rooted heartache. There's a tear-jerk in every voice inflection, a whimpering sigh as the pedal steel guitar floats in. Lucky 7 recalls just enough of the Burritos' bar room magic, while staying the more accessible side of bluegrass etc to succeed. Soulful country music that's too tasteful to be ignored. Dave Henderson quintet with a penchant for Spiritwalker period Cult, debut with a spacious, emotive album which has some gargantuan high points, before slumming it in something that can only be described as 'going-through-the-motions-metal'. That this form of music has reaped such statutory support over the years bodes well for Hang The Dance's future, and there's enough in Ghost Bloody Country to suggest that they'll mature after they shake this dated Cultist colour. For now, take in small doses and savour your poison. Nick Brody

Well, that sort of happens on the middle section of the Shadows side of Dustbowl, while the Rays side adopts a more straightforward sludge approach. These tracks are memorable, magnificent, irreverent, effective and evocative. . . most of the rest is routine. Dave Henderson

P ●● All the right credentials for these four rockin' girls from Tennessee, their first gig having been with the Panther Burns, and with tracks already out on the immaculately named Swamp Surfing In Memphis compilation. The six songs here are in a sleazy, screwed up country vein, with only Wall Of Death being a rockabilly growler that stomps on The Cramps' bones. The rest are more like burned out barroom wallow that sounds as if it's looking through the bottom of an empty Wild Turkey bottle. The vocals, mostly by Lorette, are a little shaky, which adds to the atmosphere but occasionally needs beefing up if she's not going to sound too much like a 40 year old dipso. Or perhaps that's the point. . . these girls, tacky ballroom dresses, chequered tights 'n' all, sure are set to claw into town. Carole Linfield

Five unhealthy looking dudes swinging guitars like butchers' knives, they carve their side-of-meat riffs out of the flank of the still breathing, still kicking HM bull and them power slam a skatepunk meat hook through still warm flesh and hang it up to dry in the Sydney sun. When The Hellmenn bring the noise, you can see the blood seeping out of the cracks. The Hellmenn are out of control. Holly Wood

Demon Records FIEND 116 RC

●● 1/2 An interesting variation of influences merge into a pleasing whole on this innovative LP from two guys from Richmond, Virginia. Apparently, they're keen on dogs, which makes them OK in my book. And they write darn fine songs, too, which are carefully woven into a rock country tapestry that's both colourful and detailed. The best stuff is the more esoteric side, like 40 Years and Lonesome Graveyard which, with an eerie drumbeat, gets all minimalist and works well for it. Out come the Freaks, alright. . . Carole Linfield

Sh ●● Countrified pop rock from the Antipodean Hollow Men, which presents a clean, uncluttered package that invites further listening. Occasionally they veer towards the pop end of the spectrum, like on Ten Foot Wide, which has a nice guitar line, then follow it with a minimal ballad like Margaret, which sweeps along with some very poetic imagery. Overall, there's no real feeling of time or place, which gives the LP width and accessibility; on the minus side, it's a floating, rather nebulous state to be in. With an absolute goal in mind, the effect could be dynamic. Carole Linfield

INTO A CIRCLE into A

Circle Abstract P ● 1/4 Into A Circle are definitely square pegs, insofar as their music sits uncomfortably between pop and a more alternative approach. The former is what they do best — their minor hit Evergreen, the Beneath Mikhail and Tender Skin displaying an acceptably catchy style and jaunty rhythm. For the rest, the vocal is too irritating and the songs too self-conscious for the results to be captivating. Stick to the pop, guys, and you'll be more likely to spin the wheels of fortune. Carole Linfield

On this new set, Jeanette's still a little flaky, pale in foundation and, at times, a touch undirected with that powerful voice. Prefab In The Sun is sketchy, but there is enough going down to make it worth investigation. Brenda Collins

THE JESUS & MARY CHAIN

Barbed Wire Kisses

bianco y negro ●● The Mary Chain sound so (er) pedestrian at times you can forget just how good some of their records are. The new single, Sidewalking, is the best kind of reminder, a Twilight Zone meeting of Marc Bolan and Hazel Motes that draws the same gut reaction as their debut did four years ago. These two songs, it has to be said, are the highpoints of Barbed Wire Kisses, a clearing house for stuff that didn't make it onto the first two LPs, namely b-sides, out-takes and limited edition bonuses. It's not a completists set, though, since several of their less successful tracks have been left out. Several haven't. Closing the otherwise excellent second side is the most puzzling inclusion, a demo of On The Wall that sounds for all the world like U2's I Will Follow. Hyuck! Hyuck! Some joke. Vachel Booth

But this thrash is a bash too loud and they end up thumping their chests in a padded cell. All this to avoid putting the whole lot out on a double album, presumably because no-one could stick them for four LP sides at one stretch! Just kidding. . . this is in fact a surprisingly varied and sensitively worked LP, particularly on the tracks that avoid overly heavy rock histrionics, like the lovely Little Girl Lost and the funky dancebeat of The Kiss Off (a Prince takeoff?).

Basically, this is a kind of exhibition piece, with the listener being taken in hand and led around to see what's on offer. On the negative side, this does occasionally make you wonder where you are, not knowing what's meant to be taken at face value and what isn't. After all, there's some pretty tacky metal and dramaticisms scattered throughout which demand you put a tongue in your cheek if you're going to accept it all. PP1/1987 (Schellhammergasse 3/24, A-1170 Wien) 1/2 A live LP from an unknown Austrian band has got to be of a limited appeal, particularly when that band is of a heavy, Germanic, rather ugly nature. Fortunately, the record is only live by name, since the sound and atmospherics are that of an average quality studio album. Some of the

There aren't the distinctive songs here to make Johnson as coffee table as Lewis, just the gyrations from rock's hall of fame that many have already successfully blanched into a more tasty American pie. On the plus side it's a raunchier brand of rock radio, but in total, these brothers are the poor relation of Frontier's frontline. Nick Brody

Produkt Korps PKLP 053 RR C

●● Subversive and minimalist rhythms that end up nagging at the back of your skull like a second hand migraine. Produkt Korps have the post-industrial pedigree, the pre-electronic beat and a simplistic approach to sound exploitation, and it's that approach to their work that allows them to be more refined and less frantic than a lot of their contemporaries. Unfortunately that neck brace numbing notation never really lets this albums-worth of beats really rip through. TC Wall

PSYCHE

Mystery Hotel

New Rose ROSE 145 P ●● 1/2 A Canadian duo, Psyche's brand of electronic extravagance hasn't really found a footing in this country. Always touted in the Depeche Mode school of thought, previous releases have always been short of zest and commitment. Thankfully, this can't be said of Mystery Hotel. The ten tracks on offer here are pure, quintessential electronic pop with a heart and soul, and, more importantly, a beginning, middle and end. This hybrid of catchy, almost lightweight and fluffy tunes, along with harsher and beaty numbers, shows that the band can work from one extreme to another within the same medium, and still maintain a constant flow. Check it immediately. Peter Mash

RATCAT Ratcat Waterfront

DAMP 66 Sn ●●● Ratcat are the curiosity that kills. The sound is Anglepoised scum rock but the beat is slow, the tempo full and the feel is deliberate glam punk rock. While the songs veer from the straight-forward to the downright perverse! Daughter Darling speaks for itself, She's Gone is the sound of a man whose cat will never come home again. And as for Car Crash, well...

"Sorry for the car crash, we hope you don't mind, we've killed all your loved ones and left their pieces behind!"

But best of all, Ratcat take their sense of fuzzy punk melody to the classic pop of I Think We're Alone Now and kick Tiffany's tail all the way from Sydney Harbour to the Golden Gate. Ratcat are go! Holly Wood

RED LORRY YELLOW LORRY Nothing Wrong

Situation Two SITU 20 RT C

●● 1/4 Strangely, and thankfully, the Lories manage to make their heavy-handed rock, a sometimes dour and doomy genre, sound appealing and interesting. The vocal helps; its intonations are clear and full bodied, not droning and harsh. Best of all, though, the Lories have put together here a fine collection of well thought out tracks which have a growing insistence and charming fatality about them. The beat is rock, intensely atmospheric but never deathly, and that's a tough balance to find. Carole Linfield

SCREAM

Banging The Drum

Dischord 20 SRD ● 1/2 Last year's cult attention focused briefly on Screem, and their return to vinyl prominence suggests that they're hell bent on firming up their following. In an effort to appeal to a much wider audience the sound of Screem has veered away from the punkier aspects of their play, moving closer to a pop metal sound. There's still some raunch in there, but there are a lot of sub-standard metal clichés on show, the kind of thing that would be thrown off a Gillan And Glover LP even. A touch twee with some climactic highpoints toppling over some shaky precipices. Johnny Eager

SCREECHING WEASEL

Screeching Weasel

What Goes On Sn

● 1/2 Chicago's Screeching Weasel cling fast to punk rock attitudes. California Sucks, so does 7-11, Society, Sonic Youth. Cows rule, so does Ben's car and crap punk rebel anthems. They've got the inky fingers of Maximum Rock 'n' Roll enthusiasts but they're just too cuddly to be as challenging as hardcore demands. Their best splurge comes when they drop their attitude and get trashy. Their parody of Hüsker Dü, Experience The Ozzfish, is good and Murder In The Brady House is damn good. Oh, and that's Brady as in Greg Brady and the Brady Bunch, not Ian Brady. Vachel Booth

SHACK zilch Ghetto

Recording Company/Epic GHETT

1 ●●● On first hearing this. LP, formed by the ex main men from the capricious Pale Fountains, appears to be lacking that affectionate punch. By the time it's spun round your turntable for the third or fourth occasion, however, it will be indispensable — you will wonder how you could ever have doubted its force.

While the brass and orchestration of the Fountains is less evident, the lyrics are far superior. At times humorous, like on the opening

THE SMITHEREENS

Green Thoughts Enigma 8375-1 P ●●● Gentle American guitar based pop with carefully arranged influences poking out. This quartet have a nice line in jaunty melancholia carefully wrapped in pop melody, which comes ready to savour. Despite hailing from New York, this is, as the title suggests, a pastoral affair, with the air on this LP being clean and the emotions fresh. Harder aspects, like the rockier The World We Know, works well too, showing off the band's clean lines, while Especially For You gets sincerely balladish and Deep Black is more like a transatlantic Haircut 100. Some may find it a little sickly, or even bland, but if you like your pop lush and sentimental, these are your men. Carole Linfield

THE SPLATCATS

Feelin' Bitchy

Moving Target/Celluloid MT016

RTS ● 1/4 The Splatcats play good-guy rockin' music that's a little short on punch power, a little too straight to be downhome and a little too poppy to be rock. It's a unique sound that begs for really strong songs but there just aren't the tracks here. The group have some wild names — like, er, Shaggy Faust and Skeeter — but they're not lovable enough rogues to win through just yet. Nick Brody

THE SURESHOTS Four To The Bar

ID NOSE 16 RA C

● 1/2 Accomplished, fairly gentle rockabilly from four Geordie boys, who have an appearance on Saturday Live behind them and surely plenty of acclaim in front. This is straight down the line stuff, there's no nonsense or any intervention with the tried and trusted formula, which of course also means there's nothing innovative. That's OK in itself, but personally I find this offering a trifle muted, lacking in atmosphere and drive, and occasionally (with I'm Uneasy) veering over onto the wrong side of MOR. Oh, it's foot tappin' stuff, best being the strummin' Chinatown, but with no real high kickers either. Carole Linfield

TACTICS

Holden Interview

Red Flame RFM 55 C

● 3/4 Tactics aren't the easiest of Antipodeans. They have an accessible side, but within each song there's a kind of haunting folklore feel that makes the sleeve of this mini-album — sporting a bare chested desert nomad with a steer skull held up — a little yet more eerie. Close scrutiny of Tactics themselves reveals that they could all double as extras in a Stephen King film. Tactics' music has a rolling openness, a soothing easiness that's like a mousetrap ready to slap closed on your ears. A thrill in every verse and a tasteful aftertaste too. Dave Henderson

THIN WHITE ROPE

Captain Long Brown Finger In The Spanish Cave

Demon Records FIEND 114 P ● 3/4 A lot of pretentious stuff has already been written about this Californian quartet, led by the enigmatic Guy Kyser. Their prolific output, released here under license from Frontier Records, has meant they've been acclaimed as first rate desert noisemakers, bringers of guitar induced frenzy and hard hitting rock 'n' roll. . . . Spanish Cave (is the title some smutty slang, or wot?) is a hit and miss affair, though, although when it does hit, like on the wee Ahr-Skider, or the gruff, countrified Elsie Crashed The Party, it certainly gets the nerve and pinches it tight. The rest is too overblown, being merely refried rock presented as a new dish. Perhaps a tad more quality control is in order; after all, less is more. Carole Linfield

THE 3RD MAN Vienna

Underground '87 Wiener Meki 8708 (Ton Um Ton, Lindengasse 32, A-1070, Vienna, Austria)

● 3/4 A mixed bag from Austria, producing a range of ideas all found lurking round the post punk, sub Bauhaus school playground and all sung in English. Some tracks succeed, like the quirky Morning Sun by Freak Weber & Die Sackratten; others, like Ronnie Urini's Catherine, wallow in a rather dodgy area that's gratuitous rather than sexy. Generally, there's a certain naivety and unsophistication, but occasionally (Astaron's Little Girl Crying, especially) that very simplicity makes it charming. The record comes with a booklet explaining all about the 13 bands featured here, too, if your German's up to scratch. Carole Linfield

THE TRILOBITES Turn It Around

Live LP Waterfront

DAMP 69 SN ●●● Some people, anthropologists mainly, contest that trilobites were primitive arthropods characterised by a three lobed body. If they were pushing their luck, those same people might even express the opinion that trilobites have been extinct for several million years. In Hurstville, New South Wales, lippy anthropologists are an endangered species on the very verge of extinction themselves.

Taking on the best aspects of the '60s (Riot On Sunset Strip) and the '70s (White Riot), The Trilobites have come up with a big beat bash which wraps Iggy's tongue round the Small Faces' tonsils, steals both The Clash's riffs, kicks The Rolling Stones' corporate arse all over the stage and generally does loads of good rock 'n' roll things. They're a riot. Holly Wood

Jumble Soul

LPA TOTAL4 RA C ● 2/3 You can't deny that Tot Taylor is exceedingly good at writing quirky pop music, and he's a pretty prolific songwriter too. Compared to the

STARS OF HEAVEN

Stars Of Heaven

Rough Trade RA C ●●● OK, perhaps this is a little premature, but this debut album (they did a mini-thing last year) from Ireland's Stars Of Heaven is really something else. Following their first country-tinged steps into the contemporary music world with that Clothes Of Pride single, they've trodden a neatly defined Gram Parsons period Byrds groove, while adding a contemporary verve to their sound. The best part of all is their arrival at this chemical formula called pop. On this ten track set, the Stars opt for a sweet but succinct vocal style backed with some luscious melodies. Stars Of Heaven, even though they've created this mature sound, still radiate a youthful grandeur that bodes well for future exploits. For that, it's still an excellent LP, commercial, compelling and suggestive of yet more to come. Dave Henderson singer/songwriter scrum consisting of Gilbert O'Sullivan, Billy Joel and Barry Manilow, Tot comes out as having a vibrant wit, if not the wherewithal to actually muscle his way through into daytime radio. Jumble Soul has a brace of worthy tracks that would brighten up the darkest DLT show; maybe this time around there'll be a gem in the jumble that'll shine through. Nick Brody

VARIOUS The Flestones

Present Time Bomb, The Big Bang Theory

New Rose ROSE 137 P ●●● The Flestones in a series of incarnations, offshoots and disguises — under a string of names as diverse as Action Dogs, The Mad Violets, Methedrine Ghosts, The Wild Hyenas etc — presenting their own alternative listening guide. The end result is mighty stimulating and immensely diverse from track to track. Inevitably it's all tarred with that psychedelic hue, but there's more than enough sidesteps to make cuts like The Mad Violets' Come Out And Play sound as spine-tingling good as it does. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS ARTISTS F

Or F Off

Waterfront DAMP 67 SN ● 1/2 The fourth sampler/compilation from possibly the best label bar none, FOFO is the hardest rock hump since the last one. But, just to confound your expectations, it opens up with a slowly swelling strummed piece, Elizabeth's Father by Glass. But from then on in, it's time to damn the torpedoes and hold on to your hairpiece.

Primal Scream, Decline Of The Reptiles, Ratcat, Pummellsloth, Asylum, The Hellmenn and the mighty, mighty Hard Ons all have different ideas about the optimum nature and speed of sound, but one thing's for sure, they all know how many beans make five. Waterfront, who regularly send us life-saving Red Cross parcels full of this monster, monster sound, are hot. Holly Wood

VARIOUS

Garage Kings And Junkyard Angels

Waterfront WF 039 ● 1/2 "The only common denominator is the real spirit of rock and roll."

Not quite: the real spirit is present on five tracks here, but distinctly lacking on the remaining five. Half good; the Cannibals get groovy, Russian Roulette Jack adds scuz to a Stones' cover, Wilko Johnson R&Bs a Dylan number, The Cobras go twang with Duane Eddy's Shazam and The Beatitudes start mournful and end up rocking out to nice effect. The rest are too watery, lacking the necessary edge. They end up sounding tame. Rhythm 'n' blues/rock 'n' roll can be great and it can also be a real strain to listen to. This is the evidence, and on vinyl no less. Daz Igy meth

WIN

Murp

Yes, you've read the interview, you've heard the rumours, now win the LP! Your super, soaraway Ug has ten personally graffitied Peter Murphy Love Hysteria albums to give away to the first ten readers who can answer this question correctly:

Which of the following did Peter Murphy break in 1982? Was it a) His knee caps b) The world record for turning or c) The sound barrier?

Answers on a postcard to Underground/Murph Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ, to arrive by May 10 — and there's a bonus picture CD for the first correct entry to arrive!

Those nice boys from The Shamen have given Underground five autographed mega mix 12-inch versions of their latest single Knature Of A Girl to give away. And those are just for the runners up, the overall winner gets a specially packaged Shamen Johnny Bag containing a host of Shamen goodies and paraphernalia (poster, badge, records, T shirt etc AND a copy of the exceptionally saucy Knature Of A Girl porno montage vid!) all put together exclusively for Ug! All ya gotta do is answer this vital question set by the band themselves: French author George Bataille wrote one of the most famous porno/sensual novels of the century. What nationality was he? Crazy guys huh?!! Answers to reach us no later than May 10 at Underground/Shamen Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London, NW1 7QZ.

The Shamen

some of the assembled teamsters. Big Black put in an appearance but it's live and premature, while others offer more intense, if less rounded, material. In total, Hog Butcher has a few names that are worth following up and is a good way to sample Chicago without spending out for the airfare. Nick Brody

VARIOUS Hommage A

Duras Interior Music IMO11 RR C ●●¼ Always in danger of becoming amazingly pretentious, this Richard Jobson-motivated compilation centres around the writings of Marguerite Duras, but there isn't enough information present to tempt the semi-interested into the provocative soundscapes that are woven by Jobson, The Durutti Column, Winston Tong and Dislocation Dance. This is a very nice album, relaxing, viciously grand and expansive, but as to the whats and wherefores of Duras... well, your guess is as good as mine. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

The Idea Compilation
Idea LP3 P ●●● That WEA should close this potentially lucrative label exercise now that it's grasped label motivators Chappell Publishing to its overpowering bosom is nothing short of criminal. The big label short sightedness once again strangles creativity at birth, and what was a great idea hasn't been allowed the chance to mature. This catch-all compilation features all the acts on the label, focusing on songwriting (and some pretty dynamic methods of delivery). Automatic Diamini, Jack Rubies, Wolfhounds, Wallflowers et al can quite justifiably expect some measure of success, but it's doubtful whether WEA will get many thank yous! Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Scream, The Compilation
Geffen 924 177-1 ● A batch of bands that've been ranted about, to varying degrees of God-like status. These ten of LA's finest, however, prove to be amazingly one dimensional, lacklustre and lacking in original ideas. That the sleeve says thanks to The Cult in no uncertain terms shows which alley this is down, and few of these scrambling combos have the brains to miss the end of the tunnel — with all that pompous guitar. Of note is Francis X And The Bushmen, but on the negative side there's too little of a good thing and a few questions that need answering. Prime pig in the poke is Jane's Addiction and their Pigs In Zen... it's old fashioned and drab, yet JA have been heralded as something new in LA. Well, hey, compared to The Beach Boys I suppose they are! Dave Henderson

VARIOUS

Stomping At The Klub Foot Volume 5
ABCLP15 P ●● There's something in the irreverent geared-up thunder of the bands, who make up volume five of this credible series, that really brings the whole spirit of modern day rockabilly and this kind of show into context. This is hi-power beat music, cover versions liberally thrown in for good measure, with the onus being on fun and tireless frivolity. This is a motivating, riotous platter with hot-footing wails from Skitzo, Long Tall Texans, Fractured, The Highliners, Sergeant Bilko's Crazy Combo, Shark Bait and Get Smart. Johnny Eager

VARIOUS

Themes From The '60s
Waterloo Sunset WSR 002 P
●½ I wanted to be bowled over by this album — a mis-match of '60s TV themes by a selection of Sunsets — but there's just not enough here. The great bonus about '60s culture was the variety of musical styles and the creation of dynamic material; unfortunately this album is flat and totally one-dimensional. It all sounds like it was recorded by one group of sessioneers in a couple of days. There are a couple of highpoints, most notably Eleanor Rigby's You Only Live Twice, but there's a lot here that's instant miss material. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS Edge Of The Road Medium Cool MC010S RR C

●●● A cheap-at-the-price collection from the boys at Medium Cool that'll give every discerning cowpoke the chance to hear how we do it in the UK. For their sins, The Corndollies, Raw Herbs, Waitones and The Rain show what's best about guitar pop, while still managing to keep the melodies sweet and the rhythms instinctive. Medium Cool's part of the plan shows that they may still be in their infancy but they're more than capable of producing the sounds of the big boys. A vital collection that'll only marginally set you back, but set you up forever. Dave Henderson

ANDY WHITE

Kiss The Big Stone
London ●●¾ The new album from the sole non-classical, non-dead occupant of the Decca label is by turns sad and funny, like his first one. But it lacks the downhill-train momentum of the Rave On songs, despite the presence of guest musicians such as The Attractions' Pete and Bruce Thomas. Widened influential horizons and intriguing aural tricks can't quite make up for this deficiency.

However, I've been listening to it for a couple of weeks now, and despite its flaws it's still brilliant. To quote those old Stiff labels, BUY IT. Robert Cohen

WORLD DOMINATION ENTERPRISES Let's Play Domination Product Inc RR C

●●¼ A real return to form for the masters of noise after their disappointing LL Cool cover. This LP is jam-packed full of real heavy riffs on the verge of, but never quite collapsing into, chaos. It travels from a new version of the first single, Asbestos Lead Asbestos, up to Can't Live Without My Radio and on into new uncharted territory. Highlights are their cover of Funky Town, in its own way as classic as the original; Ghetto Queen, which is so mangled it makes you think the machine has gone wrong (and so short you want to go back and start it again) and Bullitt Man, which is interstellar R & B for a new generation of noise fanatics. Let's Play Domination — as much guitar as one record can stand. Everybody join in. Christopher Mellor

The Sugarcubes on just why Life's Too Good! (the second time around)

Alex Kadis, for news at Ug, Iceland

The Sugarcubes are sitting cross-legged round a small tray of alcohol, matches and cigarettes, in the very centre of a large and characterless white room. They're bracing themselves for yet another interview, reconciling themselves to the impending questions of yet another "enquiring" journalist, with yet another bunch of nicely rounded preconceptions. They have, they insist, been prime victims of creative writing; no sooner had The Sugarcubes emerged than the press were hot on the story of a handful of Icelandic eccentrics/perverts. Well, we shall see. . .

Now with their debut LP Life's Too Good hatching on One Little Indian, the 'Cubes are front cover fodder once again. The first surge came as the band acquired that most supreme of accolades; recognition and a strong position in both the alternative and mainstream charts. Granted, it's a frequent occurrence in our present clime, but nevertheless, it's still a fantasy for the many left dreaming. An accident, maybe, but a fortunate one at that and not to be sniffed at, so how did it happen along The Sugarcubes' path?

Einar (trumpet and vocals): "You answered the question for us in the beginning. A lot of bands have dreamed of doing this. We have never dreamed of doing this. We don't have any expectations of doing this so everything that comes along our way is just fine."

Björk (singer): "You wouldn't be able to take this unless you realised that this is nothing to make a fuss over. Basically, it's like we are living two lives."

Which, then, is the reality?

Björk: "The lives we live here in England as The Sugarcubes is not real. It's totally different to the lives we live in Iceland. The Atlantic Ocean has helped us to keep a line between those two lives. I'd like it in print that we are very grateful to the Atlantic Ocean, we have a lot to thank it for!"

As is the case with almost every potential prodigy, the public at large sought the oddball element in the band and the A&R men consulted the curve of demand and supply, and here, at long last, was the perfect pop machine, uninformed, naive and without the essential contacts! Except that The Sugarcubes weren't as easily duped as one would have hoped and they weren't about to play ball. The band reckon it's all to do with levels of acceptance and expectation.

Sigtryggur (drummer): "We're not naive. We aren't at all business minded but we know what's going on."

Björk: "It wouldn't be a realistic view of the world if you thought that you didn't have to know about the business side of things. It's just like admitting to yourself that you need a certain amount of food every day."

Einar: "I can't understand where people get this idea about The Sugarcubes. They're expecting ten or 20 songs like Birthday when we play and they don't get that. They're expecting us to be a band who are striving to make very good pop songs but that's not our intention. I'll show you what it says my profession is on my passport and then perhaps you'll understand more." He opens his passport on the relevant page. It reads: OCCUPATION — MASS COMMUNICATOR.

"That," he says proudly, "is my profession."

I put it to the band that it may have been the essential childlike quality of their songs and their personalities which initially fuelled the misconceptions which they now disdain.

Björk: "Yes, but it's our choice. It's the way we want to keep it. To keep this feeling you have as a kid of playing games. If you lose you lose. I don't exactly know how to describe it but we are playing."

And the game goes on, strongly reflected in their deceptively simple music. Its guttural utterances and nursery rhyme antics only have an adult intention if the listener is more in tune with a state of experience rather than innocence, and the choice is left to the individual.

Sigtryggur: "That's probably the nicest comment we've had in a long time! Yes, our music can be for grown ups or for little children depending upon how much of the child you have left within you."

Einar: "No. There is no child within us, Björk is the only one who can have a child within her because she is female. We can have half a child!"

Thor: "No, more than that! We can have a whole kindergarten full of children within us."

I figure that this is either an example of Icelandic humour or a taste of the warped sense of logic which has given The Sugarcubes their reputation for odd profundity! Either way, it is from such statements that press weirdos are created.

Björk: "Oh, yes, everyone was looking for these mad Icelandic weirdos. We can do lots of crazy things if you like. Do you want us to behave like weirdos? We're not really up to it at the moment but we could try!"

I decline and instead settle for further conversation.

Björk: "Yes, that's something else that people expect of The Sugarcubes, they think that I am the front person."

Well, it's a common enough mistake, there are a few male bands with female vocalists who soon become focalists. Although The Sugarcubes realise that they fell victim to the same fate at first they're determined to put a stop to it now.

Björk: "You wouldn't believe how stupid and narrow minded people have been with regards to that. I am not the one who makes all the decisions in the group and I don't write all the songs."

Thor: "We're not her backing group. We don't use the girl's looks to make easy money."

This takes us conveniently on to The Sugarcubes' favourite topic of the day, sex. Einar clearly perks up, his waning attention revitalised!

Einar: "Sex, yes, let's talk about sex. No, let's practise sex!"

It's agreed that The Sugarcubes refuse to play up the more obvious elements of their sexuality. Björk's position in the scheme of things has already been settled and the boys deny themselves the lip-glossed-pouting which their natural good looks would so easily afford.

Sigtryggur: "It's just too obvious, isn't it?"

Einar: "It's not sexual with The Sugarcubes. It's sensual, it always will be sensual. Sexuality is a governing force but not sensuality. It's not something dirty. I could never understand why people liked having their toes licked when they are having sex. It must be something to do with their sexuality."

Björk: "But it's like so many people ask me about the eroticism of Birthday (their splendidly sexy first hit). I find it very difficult to be honest, to draw the line between what's erotic and what's sexual and what isn't. Einar was just stroking the carpet and it made shivers up my spine, it was very erotic. But it could have been done in a very clumsy, ugly way. Anything can be erotic, even farting. I once read a book on farting and it was the most erotic book I've ever read!" How very strange. . .

Einar: "No, not at all. It's like once, Bragi (absent member of the band) and I were in Spain and — and now you get another profound quote! — I said to him, 'I think that between a man and a woman, farting is better than fing.' Because if you like that person's fart then you love that person. Rape is done by the act of intercourse. Fing doesn't mean it's love. How can you rape a person by farting? You can't! You must, therefore, love a person if you can accept their fart, therefore, when you are liking that person's fart it is better than fing."

"And to add to that, there was this English guy who was listening to us and he started to talk about the time he had a serious case of diarrhoea in India! I was talking about this concept and he thought I was talking about shitting."

And therein lies the crux.

Cubism gone mad!

Blue Monday

Mix Master

THE NEW ORDER INTERVIEW REMIX (A 'dub' feature)

"We had one letter recently from a fan that asked, 'Who is the geezer called Dub that you keep mentioning? Who is Mr Dub?'. We all had a good laugh about that one, I can tell you." (Peter Hook, March 1988)

They have gone and done it now. How can a band continue to be regarded as an 'alternative' when they employ Quincy Jones to remix their finest moment? If you have any doubt that New Order are presently surging into the international big league, then consider this. At the time when U2's War was invading the bedrooms of America, their manager, Paul McGuinness, bumped into New Order's Svengali, Rob Gretton, in a Stateside hotel.

"He was ecstatic," says Gretton now, "... because U2 had just sold over half a million albums over there. Now I look at Substance and that has sold even more."

Indeed. Anything can happen this year. As Joy Division are unleashed on a mainstream audience for the first time, New Order are reluctantly competing with the likes of Heart and Fleetwood Mac. The idea to 'Americanise' Blue Monday by allowing the precision genius of Quincy Jones to squeeze the song into a seven inch format is a concerted attack on the all important American singles chart. But the remix is to be released over here as well. Complete with a sparkling new video, Blue Monday is expected to fly into the top five. Factory boss Tony Wilson, incidentally, is hoping for a number one.

The flip side of the Blue Monday Remix is the Remix, Remix. Which may be taking things a little too far but at least it has provided the inspiration for this little feature. After all, this band, New Order, take great pride in their skill to remake, rehash, remodel and rejuvenate their sounds. So why not us? If Quincy Jones is allowed to twiddle about with a piece of supreme British underground history, than I'm damn sure that we can have a mess about as well. Nothing in the world of the remix is sacred. However, I hasten to add, everything featured here is taken from first hand experience.

New Order are, arguably, the greatest white dance band of all time. Mind you, they had one hell of a head start. This unique advantage went by the name of Joy Division. This feature remix begins, bravely, with an incident that adequately sums up the unique intensity of Joy Division, the band who were to provide the solid base for the New Order phoenix.

Backstage in New York in '83

Monday er

by Dubmaster Mick Middles

MAY 1979

The Factory Club nestles dangerously beneath the daunting shadows of valium city. (Actually, the Hulme estate, Manchester. A less than charming complex that at the time boasted the highest suicide rate in Europe. A fitting place indeed for Tony Wilson and cohorts to lay the groundwork for the image-conscious empire of Factory Records.) Attending a gig at The Factory involves a certain amount of personal danger. This danger becomes very real for one young lad, though he isn't attacked, mugged or sold a bag of dried privet leaves (like me). He is hit by an escaping taxi. In this collision, his arm is broken. However, despite being in severe pain he refuses to go to hospital until he has been in the venue to witness the performance by his favourite band, Joy Division. When told of this incident later in the evening, Joy Division singer Ian Curtis merely shrugs in disbelief and walks blankly backstage. The incident is swiftly forgotten.

JULY 1983

We sit on the roof of The Paradise Garage, New York. Inside the club, in five hours time, New Order will pump dance rhythms into the audience, who are surely the most sussed dance audience in the world. Barney will sneer at the crowd and hurl words like 'Boring' 'Apathetic' and 'Lackadaisical' in their direction. He will introduce the band's sparkling new pulsebeat single, Confusion, with the words, "This is one for all you Funhouse bastards". (The Funhouse being the city's premier hip hop nightclub.) The relationship between band and country in general will seem strained, to say the least.

There's a similar attitude problem taking part in the blistering heat on this roof at the moment. Gillian Gilbert and Steve Morris have surrendered to the sun and lie in one corner, oblivious to the rooftop commotion. At the centre of this activity, as always, sits the supremely disinterested Rob Gretton. A Rolling Stone photographer, complete with umbrella and three stooges, is attempting to get Gretton to round the band up for a photo shot.

"Aw... piss off and let me sunbathe," moans Gretton, apparently unconcerned about missing out on a colour photo spread for the massively influential organ.

"Well, the singer said he'd pose for us at least," squeals the photographer. But Barney, typically, has sauntered off in search of an orange juice. The photographer is clearly desperate and he points towards me.

"You. Will you pretend to be in New Order? Nobody knows what they look like anyway."

"Rob, Rob, there's a man from Geffen on the phone. He says it's very urgent," screams the tour manager Ruth Polsky.

"Oh, tell him to sod off as well. I'm on holiday, you know." Gretton relaxes and all around him lies chaos, total chaos.

DECEMBER 1985

We lounge in Yellow Two Studios, Stockport. The throbbing from the studio downstairs (actually their single, Shellshock) is barely interrupted by the noises emanating from the television set. Steve, Gillian, Rob, and Hookey are slurping away at the champagne while watching a run through of the band's newest Ikon video, Pumped Full Of Drugs. The band are talking about technology. . . . Actually, that's not strictly true. The band are laughing about technology or, at least, their attitude towards it. Techno wizard Steve Morris explains.

"We shot this video at a live gig in Japan. It was hilarious because the Japanese have this incredibly complex attitude towards the use of technology. They think that if it's been invented then they must use it. Now that is really the opposite of the New Order attitude. Of course we embrace technology but, quite often, in a very simple, childlike way. We use it to suit ourselves. In Japan we wanted to film this video on a single camera with no effects or anything. We kept trying to make the Japanese shoot it through an ordinary surveillance camera, that's all it would have needed, but, oh no, they turned up with all this mass of complex equipment, all of which was a complete waste of time."

Downstairs, in the studio, American producer John Robie wrestles with the highly complex mixing desk and attempts to pin down the song called Shellshock.

Later, in the studio foyer, a weary Barney attempts to speak about the high technology factor within New Order's music.

"We never, ever use tapes live."

You do, I tell him.

"We don't," he states adamantly, "We use sequencers, not tapes."

Sequencers then. I've seen them carry on after you have left the stage.

"You can't ignore technology and, more importantly, you've still got to play these things. It really doesn't matter if you play a Fairlight or a saw. It's the tune that matters. A strong melody was always the most important thing, and always will be. However easy it is to play, you have still got to produce that melody. That's the art."

Flashback to 1983 where, by the side of a Washington swimming pool, Steve Morris touches upon the same subject.

"Of course we love experimenting with machines. We used to leave the sequencers running after we'd left the stage just to wind the American audiences up. It always gets them, that one. They thought we were cheating, but in a sense we were being more honest. All bands use tapes of some sort on stage. We just don't see why we should cover it up."

Blue Monday initially entered the British singles chart in March 1983. The impact of the record was deadened somewhat by the band's insistence on playing it live on Top Of The Pops. It sounded dreadful.

Peter Hook: "I don't know about that. We would have felt silly miming and we always felt more comfortable playing live. Nowadays, we just laugh at all the bands on Top Of The Pops and The Roxy. When we played True Faith live, everyone was in awe of us. It did give us a tremendous feeling of supremacy, really."

DECEMBER 1987

By accident I find Rob Gretton lurking in the background at an Alison Moyet gig. He is strangely jovial but what, I swiftly ask, on earth is he doing here?

"Er. . . I can't tell you. . . er, can I? No. I can't possibly tell you what I'm doing here."

Whatever the reason it takes Alison four songs to send myself and Gretton into the pub at the back of the venue. I ask him if he enjoys the trappings of band management as much now that New Order are entering the big league.

"I suppose not. I think I am looking for a way out really. The trouble is that you always need more money. I'd like to move into architecture. To build beautiful buildings in Manchester. Like The Hacienda but from the outside. Tony (Wilson) has the same dream as well. To build something solid and worthwhile. But in order to do that then we are going to have to make an awful lot more money. It's a never ending cycle. We can't do this forever, can we? I do enjoy some of the aspects of, say, touring though. I own an Audi Quattro but I don't like driving so Hookey takes over. On European tours he just takes control. He's good, he would have been a racing driver had he not fallen into this. The rest of the band are too scared to come with us, they take the tour bus. But we break records through France. We constantly outrun patrol cars. Hookey reckons it's the best road car in the world."

MARCH 1988

New Order are fronted by the most disinterested, apathetic, cynical anti-performer in the history of rock 'n' roll. Barney Sumner. A highly creative and intelligent songwriter, certainly, but the most reluctant pop star ever to yawn in front of an audience. Outside of his craft, Barney has little to say. Why should he say anything? For promotion? This is where we meet New Order's Catch 22. Barney is interested in houses and cars. In order to pursue this dual interest to the full he has to continue his job. He has got to, reluctantly, agree to the remix of Blue Monday. But so far, Barney, Hookey and the whole damn crew have merely dipped their toes in the whirlpool of American superstardom. Should that record succeed in hurling this band into the full, violent hyperbole of true international mainstream success, then reality could begin to fade. At this point we could lose New Order forever. It's frightening really. Bring on the llamas.

New Order's classic rockist pose strength lies in the verse/chorus play off that would unashamedly trounce any Eurovision competitor (Sandie Shaw included). DH

APPLE BOUTIQUE Love Resistance Creation

RT C An ex-Servant/Biff, Bang Pow!/Felt person formed AB, and it would be nice to report that the shifting, whispering pop of Love Resistance was reminiscent of the potential of that triad. But no, there's a commercial edge that's frolicking but weeping. The Ballad Of Jet Harris on the flip has charisma though. BC

AWARE! EP Double Trouble

SH A six track EP from this American outfit. They start slow and moody but thrash into the inevitable metallic show of aggression. Somehow you can't help but feel they'll be doing better than this in a couple of months or so. DH

A WITNESS One Foot In The Groove Ron Johnson

NM C Allegedly moving closer to a hard dancefloor sound, A Witness still bear enough of the raggedy, dog-eared trademarks to impress the tattered jacket brigade. This kind of music has always been cumbersome, if reasonably endearing, but where next for A? JE

EDWARD BARTON Belly Box Brother Gob Wooden

RR C Four more versions of terminal tragedy from this singing lampost (in turmoil). Barton's an eccentric and he takes joy in colouring English life into a piece of patchwork paranoia that's understandably left-field. BM

BLOOD ORANGES Beautiful Thing The Great Purge (150

Queen Alexandra Mansions, Judd Street, London WC1) Pert jangly stuff with a classic construction and some mighty melodies for effect. Blood Oranges have some good ideas and some precocious hooks, but it's still a bit empty and needs to be better directed. NB

BLUE AEROPLANES Janice Long Session Night Tracks

P More artistic dancealongs, with the Aeroplanes daubing canvas after drum skin with their endearing performance-meets-post-structuralist method of song construction. Sculptured sound with a pop leaning. NB

BMX BANDITS Figure 4 53rd

& 3rd FF C Four tracks with an eccentric pop edge. The Bandits sound like a working men's club version of Richman at his squidgiest. Wholesome fun that just about avoids being lumped in with the twee section at Ibrox Stadium. BM

THE CHAMELEON'S DAY It Won't Be Long SPLIFF

SH The Chameleon's Day appear to be French in origin but they're firmly rooted in the '77 New York punk scene — Television and The Heartbreakers at CBGB's etc. Both sides of this debut single are forceful, with guitar shards spinning off the wired vocal line. A classic. DH

CHWYLDRO Tu Oil'r Sgrin

Pop Positif (£1.20 from 52 John Morris Jones, Ffordd Y Coleg, Bangor, Gwynedd) I may be a little sketchy on Welsh, but I can tell you that this rock-pop debut is rampant and enjoyable. Pop music, for sure, but rippling with affection and charm. DH

CLOSE LOBSTERS Janice Long Session Night Tracks

P From 1986, this four track collection from Fire faves the Lobsters proves that they're more than worth their weight in surreal comic books. Andy Burnett's lyrical aplomb wanders casually through the group's awesome tunefulness, illustrating their warmth, depth and unique personality. Catch them quick. DH

COCO, STEEL & LOVEBOMB The Sound Of Europe

Instant RR C One of those dang cut-up affairs that's just fit to pop as it blends all the best dance bits, then broadens its scope with some more intelligent tempered lifts from further afield. Wah! NB

CRIME AND THE CITY SOLUTION On Every Train

Mute RT C Expressive strumming from these ne'er do wells who're on the edge of rock's excess-o-meter. A keen rhythmic bowing pulls it all together, and that wandering vocal style makes it really bite hard into the memory banks. DH

CRAIG DAVIES Jennifer Holliday Rough Trade

RT C A strange lull in the conversation of pop from Salford's answer to Tom Waits. It sounds like an old 78 rotating at 33, but don't let this put you off. If you're into boozing from Newsnight through to Good Morning Britain this record could certainly find a place in your heart. That wild man of rock 'n' roll — Ben Watt — guests on guitar, but fails to lift the energy above a snooze. A charming record, with a Penguin Modern Classic in its breast pocket. JD

CUMBERSOME Billy Sexy

Flexi (56 Clyde Road, Brighton BN1 4NP) Snappy and light of foot, potential top 40 pop song from the oddest couple in town. The closing refrain — "She was all alone at the disco" — will have you

Reviewers this month are Nick Brody, Dave Henderson, Brenda Collins, Johnny Eager, Johnny Dee, Ripley, Carole Linfield, TC Wall and Holly Wood breaking down in tears, the tinny drum machine will make you soft shoe shuffle as you do the Shake 'n' Vac. This is what flexis should be about — disposable, lovable, fun and cheap — 50p plus sae if you wanna know. JD

DANIELLE DAX Cat House

Awesome C Dani plays the Gary Glitter game and comes out sounding like the bastard offspring of Toyah and Marc Bolan. What a concept! Market it! NB

DEFAULT Inspiration First

FINI TRIBE Make It Eternal

Wax Trax SRP Intense dancefloor rhythms, bell-ringing samples and growling vocal lines make Fini Tribe's latest a clang-muzak re-assertion of their potential. A well-orchestrated step up from their I Want More Can cover. TCW

THE FIZZBOMBS Surfaround

Calculus FF C Riotous Beach Boys with fuzzed-dinosauric Mary Chain guitar barrage. Happy melodies with a sting in the tail. BC

F GEEZ EP Jungle Hop

International SRP Japanese punk with a '76 beat, some buzzsaw raunch and a lot of swearing. Maybe ten years out of date but chortle-worthy and high on novelty value. DH

THE FUZZTONES Nine Months Later Music Maniac

RT C The Fuzztones maintain the psychedelic overcoat and slip in a few nifty keyboard melodies for good effect. The gruesome cover hardly tells the upbeat 'Tones tale, but fans won't be disappointed. DH

THE GATHERING Rant Final Records C C

A solid, driving tune that summons up memories of The Monochrome Set's finest musical constructions, aided by a whining guitar and a grief-stricken vocal. The Gathering have been hiding in the wings for some time. This sounds like the perfect method for their cultural development. DH

GREATER THAN ONE Now Is

The Time K=K RT C A Martin Luther King cut-up over a throbbing dancebeat from these former industrialist screamers. Slightly more angst-ridden than your run of the mill dancefloor material, and well worthy with it. R five track 12 inch which throws The Grooveyard into a tub of wayward guitar play that'll be sure to impress Byrds, Buffalo Springfield and Love fans. Off the wall psychedelia that isn't too tripped-out to care, The Grooveyard's finest blast is a crushingly capable debut. DH

THE GUN CLUB Breaking Hands Red Rhino

RR C Jeffrey Lee with reverb, ambience and depth — courtesy of a rather fine production job from Cocteau Twin Robln Guthrie. Somehow, you just never thought that GC had it in them, but it certainly floods out in an emotional tide here. NB

ANNIE HOGAN Each Day

Dinamo RR C Annie's solo flight — after time spent rolling fingers for Marc Almond, Yello et al — sees her opt for a rather subdued, laidback tune which does her voice few favours. Annie Hogan is bigger and better than this. NB

HORNY GENIUS Man And Beast Pooter Records (Box

2731, Iowa City, Iowa 52240, USA) These guys sound like Pere Ubu with their head in the microwave. Probably the most offensive record this month due to its continuous riff and swirling noise patterns. This is the kind of thing that'll make the world great again. Remarkable! DH

HORSELAND Love Dies Again Red Rhino

RR C Ex-Red Guitars and Nyam Nyam members team up in a "return to independence". And pretty eclectic it is too. Horseland wander in on a waft of guitar and simplistic rhythms. Half way between wistful charm and the heavens above. TCW

LAUGH Time To Lose It

Remorse RR C After some notable interest, Laugh plug in and screech it up for their most radiant 45 to date. A fervent, effervescent burn out, Time To Lose It shakes the dancefloor without ever slipping into the predictable throb. DH

LONG TALL TEXANS Should I Stay Or Should I Go? Razor

P Carbon-coated cover of The Clash's bolshy anthem that might just click in these troubled times of revivalist punkism. Decent but monosyllabic. BM

LOVE AND ROCKETS No New Tale Beggars

Banquet Minimal T Rextisms from the trio in the L&R contingent. Breaking into safes as diverse as The The, Jethro Tull and Slade, Love And Rockets make a new sound from old that's comfortable and reasonably balanced, if a little sluggish in delivery. NB

LYDIA LUNCH The Crumb

Widowspeak RR C Intense as ever, Lydia teams up with wayward Soniclifer Thurston Moore for a Clint Ruin-produced noise overdose. Occasional verbal intersections make The Crumb one of the most tasteful insults for some time. NB

MCCARTHY Should The Bible Be Banned?

September RR C It's about time someone stood up and noticed how consistent McCarthy are. This, their sixth single, displays all their usual hallmarks — cunning melody, coy guitars, devious lyrics, and a title that's bound to get up someone's bottom. And with 45 revolutions a minute no less, it's £3.29 well spent — ask for McCarthy by name. JD

THE MEKONS Ghosts Of American Astronauts

Cooking Vinyl RR C A carefully crafted ode to northern life and its tie-in with US achievements (or some such analogy) which gives Meke Sally Timms the chance to let her twitching larynx do the talking. Coy but chaotic. DH

MIRRORS OVER KIEV Different Girl Playtime

C From Manchester with a tasty riff and some nice singing. Yes, Mirrors are purveyors of that cute, well played pop vibe that's laced with guitars and, although not decidedly politically-motivated, there's a soulful Housemartinsy feel to this one. Whimsey! DH

PAILHEAD I Will Refuse/No Bunny Wax Trax SRD

A marriage made in heaven between a Revolting Cock, a Furniture and God knows who else. Pailhead grit their teeth in the cause of heads-down thrash, cast down the iron glove with a noble dancebeat and rap it all up with a rant of quality. An album is mooted and it can't come too soon. DH

PLAYGROUND Seeking The Truth Fourth Dimension (£1.60 from 7 Wentworth Gardens, Bullockstone, Herne Bay, Kent CT6 7TT) A tape of some uninspiring waffle breaks down, an unfettered bass and drum sound catches breath and someone screams for three minutes in a relentless frenzy. Screeching and intense to the point of collapse. DH

RED LORRY YELLOW LORRY Nothing Wrong Situation

Two C There's nothing wrong with mood music, but this Lorry epic is so numbing and one-dimensional that it's difficult to discover the point. Fact is, there isn't one. Nothing Wrong sounds like a tumble dryer on half power. All background and no kachunga. DH

ROTE KAPELLE Fire Escape

SAD LOVERS AND GIANTS

Cow Boys Midnight Music RT C Floating in on a sea of sheer guitar rattle, Sad Lovers And Giants leapfrog their clumsy name and play seedless pop that's as hummable, if as mindless, as the next lot. BC

THE SNEETCHES Only For A Moment Kaleidoscope

RR C Within the harmonious world of The Sneetches there's a pop-boiled version of Byrdsian Beach Boy music. Only For A Moment is a fleeting introduction that'll swiftly be followed by their debut LP. Get in now and hope the summer comes around this year. BC

THE TIER GARDEN No

Pasaran Cogent (9 Orchard Gardens, Barrow-in-Furness, Cumbria) Political posturing on Nicaragua and South Africa from the northerly strike-torn wastelands. The Tier Garden play burgeoning rock music that demands attention but will always struggle to succeed, since they're caught with commercial sounds, outspoken views and only a micro-lite method of powering through with their self-financed label. DH

TONGUEMAN You Crooks Tryin' To Get Your Hooks

On My Meat Drunken Swan (£1 from 1 Sheppard House, High Trees, St Martin's Estate, London SW2)

These guys mean it, man! Flaunting sexual convention, biting the pricks that feed them.

This three track 12 inch has a sound that's fresh, guitar-heavy and of a confident grinding quality that's not been heard since Killing Joke's debut or PIL's Death Disco. Colossal sounds... every home should vibrate to this! BC

ULTRAVOX Peel Sessions

RT C The Prophs return to Creation with a rattle and roll of brash bar room bravado. Peter Astor trades his whining star-in-cahoots-with-manic-depressive strain for a more upbeat offering that offers some real menace. Plausibly the group's best since the melodramatic tearfulness of Almost Prayed. DH

THE WILD SWANS Young

Manhood WEA This is just the sexiest, peachiest, most awesome release of the year. Thank God the success of their Peel Sessions EP made them reform — how I've lived without them I do not know. THROBBING AND CUT

What ties M/A/R/R/S to JAMMS, Colcut to Bomb The Bass and T-Coy to WMTID?

Chris Mellor stubs his toe to the beat

Certainly, the surprise hit of last year was M/A/R/R/S' Pump Up The Volume. Consisting of half a group and a couple of DJs, a brilliant bassline and a few bits from other people's records, it made number one, and suddenly everybody was talking about new British dance music. The short-sighted said it was a craze that would die in a few months, terrified that the public might find out that you don't have to be a muso to make a record. The more enlightened saw the M/A/R/R/S hit as the drawing of a new era, as revolutionary as punk rock was in its time. The difference being that now the people making the music had no intention of becoming boring bloated rock stars. They were making a genuinely modern sound, not just more rock music with a different attitude, or rock at a different pace.

Pump Up The Volume brought it to the attention of the world, but British underground dance music has been around for a lot longer than six months. London, Manchester and Bristol have been buzzing to the sound of homegrown hip-hop, house, funk, soul and every mutant in between for the last couple of years.

Johnny J and Mc Buzz Bee are part of the Rock The House Crew from Manchester.

Johnny J: "In America, hardcore hip-hop around '79/'80 was a reaction against disco music. Street people were finding beats you couldn't dance to and rhyming about real life. In this country the music always had to be danceable to be big."

Buzz Bee: "I was involved in the break dancing scene until it got really commercial — when the Rock Steady Crew came over and it was on TV every five minutes. I wanted to stay involved in hip-hop, and I'd always written poetry, so I started rapping."

The media killed the first wave of hip-hop, but perhaps there was too much emphasis on dancing, relying too heavily on the Americans for the soundtrack. After initial interest rap went underground and, especially in the midlands and the north, house music (again an American music form) took over the clubs. When Run DMC and The Beastie Boys hit the charts last year club interest in hip-hop was rekindled, and this time the British crews were ready.

Johnny J: "The great thing is, now you don't need a major label to make records, independents like Rhythm King and Music Of Life can have hits too."

And these labels are going from strength to strength (finally being taken more seriously) with recent hits from Derek B (Music Of Life) and Bomb The Bass, Beatmasters and S-Express (Rhythm King).

At the moment Rock The House are producing an LP of Manchester hip-hop, to be released on an independent label. It includes a track by Baby Di, who can't remember much of the original breaking scene, or anything else, but that's because she's only 12 years old. The ages of the participants on the LP range from 12 to 21. It's young music made for young people, not for producers at Radio 1.

Johnny J: "We can produce a non commercial record and put it out on an indie label, or do something really commercial, like with the Wee Papa Girl Rappers, the possibilities are endless."

Hip-hop isn't the only type of British dance music that's thriving, there's house too. The first big British house track was Carino by T-Coy. An underground dance smash, it's a Latin-tinged track with some wild piano. At first many people thought that it was American, which probably increased its sale potential. Since then Krush, Beatmasters, Jack 'N' Chill and Coldcut have all had big pop hits with UK house, in a sense beating the Americans at their own game.

Buzz Bee and Johnny J

Nineteen year old rapper, Overlord X, who has a single out on Morgan Khan's Hardcore label, knows why.

"The British stuff is more inventive, not just a beat and a bassline, it's got more stuff in it."

But there's still a lot of snobbery. Some people still won't take British material seriously.

"That's because the Americans seem more glamorous, because of their accents and their image. They're not in the country very often, so when you see them it's something special. But that's changing now. I did a jam in Tunbridge Wells with Derek B and everybody was going mad. They all had the gear, so they were obviously seriously into the music, and it was a really mixed, half black, half white, audience. It's really happening now."

The ultimate masters of getting "more stuff in it" must be Jonathan More and Matt Black of Coldcut. Doctorin' The House is the only house track they have released so far. Before they were kings of the London bootleg scene. Inspired by the classic US cut-up tracks — Lessons 1 To 3 by Double Dee and Steinski, and the much used James Brown breakbeat record Feelin' James, they created Say Kids What Time Is It? using JB breaks and huge chunks from The Jungle Book. It's totally illegal, completely brilliant, and now, of course, impossible to get hold of. Various other hardcore mixes followed including Beats And Pieces (which was eventually also released through the Cartel), The Music Maker and Kick Out The James (a nod to the JAMMs with no James Brown in earshot).

All these records are more than just mixes. They use old records to create a new sound. This is not a new idea to hip-hop, where breakbeats from old records have always been used to rap over, but it has been taken a stage further by Coldcut and other London DJs.

Mixers and bootlegs circulating at the moment include constructions by Richie Rich, Greedy Beat Syndicate and Scam. All stretching the boundaries of music, copyright, and burning a hole in other DJs' pockets, as they usually masquerade as imports and sell for £4.99 a go.

The one danger is that these mixes will stray into the very dodgy Stars On 45 territory, ending up as no more than edited highlights with a backbeat, which is what has happened with the over-commercial Payback mix of James Brown done by Coldcut recently. But, Coldcut have turned down further remix offers from Krush, Bros, Was (Not Was) and many more, opting to concentrate on their next project which should see a return to form. Their label is called Ahead Of Our Time, and that's the way they should aim to stay.

The most successful cut-up record so far this year is Beat Dis by Bomb The Bass, which uses many now familiar samples. If I hear another record with that screechy noise from Public Enemy's Rebel Without A Pause I think I'll scream. The vultures are waiting with their "all this sampled music sounds the same" line, and they do have a point. It does get really boring hearing the same bits taken from the same old record, again and again.

Johnny J: "After M/A/R/R/S and Coldcut you're getting the rent-a-sample remix, throwing everything into the record, and the sooner that dies the better."

But never fear, there are a lot of people around with a more adventurous ear for cut-up selection, including Stereo MC's, who had a record out on new London-based independent Gee ST, which has now been picked up by 4th & Broadway.

"We're inspired by beats," reckon the MC's, "it doesn't matter where they come from. We get records from junk shops, anywhere. We like '70s Top Of The Pops compilations, Western themes, there's so many different records to use we could go on forever."

Stereo MC's and their label are firm believers in the old DIY punk ethic. "You don't need to do stuff on an expensive 24 track. Our record was done on 16, but you could do it with eight or even four. It's all about ideas, if you've got a good idea and a good beat you can make a record."

Gee ST: "It's not about acts, it's about tracks, people don't want eight album deals, that's ridiculous, it doesn't work like that any more."

There's a lot of action in London. Warrior Records have just released a UK acid house compilation and are currently working on a hip-hop compilation. Rhythm King and Music Of Life are always busy, but it's not just the capital and Manchester where things are happening. Each region has its own label and its own sound.

27 UNDERGROUND

Smith And Mighty are from Bristol and they have a surprise underground dance hit with their hip-hop reggae version of the Bacharach/ David classic Anyone Who had A Heart released on their own 3 Stripe label.

"There's a lot going on here, but no organisation, no way of getting stuff heard. We thought the best thing to do was just release something, because we knew that if people heard it they would like it. It was made for a British audience, and now it's doing well. We want to keep it on a small scale though, so it carries on being fun. We're not interested in America yet, it all needs time to develop."

Still in the West are Llwaeybyr Llaethog who, apparently, made the first ever Welsh hip-hop record called Dyddiau Braf (Lovely Day). Their latest record Tour De France/Yo! has some of the most brutally noisy scratching ever.

"We use a broken old Garrard deck", admits an LL, "you don't need anything flash. Our favourite records to scratch are our own, Welsh speeches, and Blancmange. Whatever's about, we'll use."

Another strain of dance music that's been neglected for too long is Eurobeat, Euro-electro, whatever you want to call it, which seemed to die with the demise of Deutsche Amerikanische Freundschaft (DAF to you mate) and the backlash against the northern industrial gloom of the descendants of Cabaret Voltaire. Rouska, the Leeds based label, are fighting back with recent releases by Son Of Sam and WMTID.

Richard at Rouska: "People think all northern white dance music is post-Cabs-minimalist-industrial-leather underpants funk. It's just not like that anymore."

Yes, and just maybe, in the fullness of time, electro will be back in vogue again after the recent hit for Music Of Life boss Simon Harris, with another crossover groove, electro-house-hip-hop being the closest definition.

The great thing about all this new British dance music, and there's plenty more than just the people I've mentioned, is that it is music for everyone, multi-cultural, a mix of sounds and styles. Black, white, brown, yellow — house, garage, hip-hop, electro, there's a bit of everything thrown in, and nobody knows what's going to happen next. The only rule is that it's got to move those feet. Do it!

El's most recent press handout with Mike Alway in the background

There's been a flurry of releases from the consistent él stable, culminating in a lavish collection of ten inch singles. But what lies behind the screens? Carole Linfield examines the wonderful world of its Svengali supremo, the eccentric and endearing Mike Alway want to create A FANTASYLAND OF POP. . .

Arguably, there's no other record label boss who's stamped his own mark on his product as much as Mike Alway has on él Records. His own subsidiary of Cherry Red, every act on the roster bears the indelible hallmark of Alway. The constants are immediately apparent — throughout, there's a quintessential Englishness, almost Dickensian in its lovable eccentricity; a certain lavish charm and boyish naivety, all wrapped in opulence and hinting at indulgence, like a Rococo easter egg, all rich, dark chocolate inlaid with pearls. And, best of all, there's quality pop oozing from the tracks, all relying on old-fashioned values like tunes and lyricism and originality.

Mike Alway is, of course, the embodiment of all this. A tall, gangly figure dressed in black jodhpurs and greatcoat, his pasty complexion perhaps harbouring a Miss Havesham complex towards daylight, he strides purposefully into the Italian Bayswater café and waves a hand towards the mouthwatering pastries.

"This is what él Records is about. . . confectionary. The small things in life which may not be important, but that people are really interested in. We want to be edible. . . ten inch records are really edible, don't you think? Packaging is so important, too, because people buy with their eyes. You see, él is the Marks & Spencer of pop, not the Wavy Line."

Proof of the pudding, so to speak, is the most recent batch of él releases, consisting of a compilation LP, London Pavilion Volume II, which rounds up él's 1987 output, and a set of five ten inchers from a selection of artistes on the label. In accordance with él's thematic quality, releases are always designed as sets, all carefully packaged with extensive detail and romantic nonsense written on the sleeves, giving the label an immediate identity as well as instant collectability status.

The five to hit the streets this time are Always, Ambassador 277, Anthony Adverse, Bad Dream Fancy Dress and Marden Hill, with music ranging from the pouty adolescent curry commotion of the Fancy Dress girls to the instrumental wandering of the Marden mob. Each act has its own characterisation, its own carefully staged persona. But why? What is the ideal of él? What theory lies behind this intricate sales pitch?

Mike Alway, 32 year old Cornish son of a trade unionist, stirs his expresso and explains.

"What I really wanted with él was to bring records of quality back to the charts. But not from a careerist point of view; I want to recreate the feeling I had as a child about The Beatles. I don't want anything from it personally, except to be able to do it more.

"Who are the next Beatles? Well, you can't really put it like that. . . we're aiming more to have the next Edison Lighthouse. The idea of one hit wonders really attracts me. I love the idea of, say, Louis Philippe having one hit and then disappearing altogether, reappearing as this hammy cabaret act."

Mike's formative years were spent shuttling between London and Falmouth, listening to "a lot of Radio 1. . . bands like Cupid's Inspiration and Honeybus. I think I did buy one Steely Dan record. I haven't kept it or anything". It was then that his interest in obscurities developed.

"I collected records by default because I bought singles without any musical guidelines, but always the absolute classic white melodic pop."

It was after being a manager ("with a small m") for The Soft Boys and running a club in Richmond that Mike came into contact with Cherry Red, being taken on as an A&R man.

"The first group I signed was Eyeless In Gaza, at a time when all the label had was The Dead Kennedys. See, by employing me they knew they were going to get something more strange. I'd just sign up bands I thought were good and would sell, or who I'd read about in the press from people like NME's Paul Morley or Sounds' Dave McCullough. But clearly there was nothing in common between the bands, between Felt and The Monochrome Set or Eyeless. The theme quality of él is a step on from that."

But Mike made a detour before stepping into the él persona, first setting up blanco y negro with Geoff Travis (Rough Trade entrepreneur), Dave McCullough and Michelle (from Disques du Crepuscule).

"I had realised there was a limit to what I could do at Cherry Red. It was run as a democracy, and I thought there were things I could do better. . . we sold 5,000 of The Nightingales' Pigs On Purpose LP, and I thought we had to move on from there, to get more backing. So I did an unprecedented thing. . . I got the best lawyer in town, broke all the contracts, and signed all the groups myself. But the groups were already leaving. . . I was only a step ahead, I was anticipating."

Unfortunately, things didn't go quite to plan.

"You can imagine what happened. . . all these people used to running their own show, all big headed, myself as much, so we all just argued over everything. The groups' attitude changed towards us, too. I thought it was God getting me back for what I did to Cherry Red. All I wanted to do was get out of it. I had shares, I had thousands of pounds invested, and I just gave it all back, said here, I don't want anything else to do with it."

Help came when Cherry Red heard the Momus LP which Mike had been involved with, offering a licensing deal for the record.

"I was amazed. I went up and said you can license it if you'll let me make a label of it. And él was born. So you can imagine what I think about the people at Cherry Red, when any other label would probably have had my kneecaps removed."

Important lessons were learned, though, which have made él a more solid concern all round.

"Now I won't accept anything less than complete control. I also realised when I conceived él that I had to make it attractive but integrate quality into it, and humour, and a certain Britishness, things which would be unique to me, without dissipating the essential entertainment value. The perfect thing is to get a lot of uncommercial ideas that together sound commercial."

"See, a lot of labels get it wrong. On the one hand you've got the indies saying, we've got to make it difficult to show people it's good, and on the other hand the majors are saying the public won't buy anything unless it's kept simple, and they're both wrong. The fact is that classic '60s pop had things in it that were uncommercial by default, and they've acted as preserving agents. So ambiguity and breadth of language and uncommercial things actually make things more commercial if they're in there in the right proportions."

Mike admits there have been mistakes.

"Yes, it's a question of trial and error to make sure it doesn't become whacky. Eccentricity is a bonus, but whackiness is a danger, because it's not sexy for one thing. Sexuality is important, in a naughty, playful way.

"Is it too much to suggest that perhaps él is a label for the single person? I'm just thinking this now. . . it's a soundtrack for the single life, like for myself, although it's by default because I prayed these girls would come along and want to marry me but they wouldn't, they just wouldn't, but I've come to know better now, to know I don't want it. So because I've avoided babies and houses and all of life's great burdens I can be more free to do what I want.

"All I do is go home and conceive these pop ideas. I order records by mail — and they're not free, it's not the same if you don't pay — so every other day there's a parcel of records waiting for me. So tonight I'm going to go home and listen to all these Four Seasons records. . . I can just indulge myself, and imagine what ideas I can steal from The Four Seasons to integrate into my pop records. Because we're just charlatans really. . . there are no new ideas, just combinations of a minimum of two old ones."

Mike, then, is a man living out his own fantasy. A true enthusiast, a film buff, a cricket freak, a man who loves reading the alternative football press, he overlays his character on the records he brings out. But what makes an él band? And what does he look for in prospective él cohorts?

"Increasingly it's becoming hard to find them, and please, if there's anyone out there, get in touch with me! Latterly I've signed people independently and swapped them around to give the impression of bands. Though the demarkation is improving, it's less incestuous than it was a year ago.

"The attitude has to be right, they have to think beyond records and the fact that it's an idea about themselves. Each band is a characterisation, but I don't say to Fred Smith, go and be an Arab, because if Fred Smith hasn't got it in him to be an Arab, he never will. Simon Turner is the King Of Luxembourg, because he's encouraged by this Ian Carmichael figure, slightly incompetent, forever juvenile, more the Peter Pan thing, that's really Simon's character. All we're doing is taking that part of his character and blowing it up out of all proportion."

As a case in point, the two Bad Dream Fancy Dress girls came to the label as complete novices.

"They said they'd do anything to make a single, and when I met them they had excellent attitudes, playful and strong, and had done some acting so were very confident. I gave them the characterisation and told Simon Turner to write a song for them about Indian food, in the way Mickie Most or someone might have done. I'm increasingly coming to view Simon and Louis as house writers, like Chinn and Chapman, writing to a specific brief.

"Lyrically, I want songs that are as good as those by The Carpenters, but not limited by language. I look at the biogs and see what people like to decide what the songs are going to be about. Now, Kevin Wright (Always) likes football, so how do we do a football song which is credible? For that, we've got the inspiration of the alternative football press doing something unique and different for the first time, moving away from the horrible of image of football fans.

"Jessica of The Would Be Goods, who is very middle class, with a seriously good education and a first at Oxford, is a really good songwriter because she sees it for what it is, as good use of language. And because she knows nothing about pop (she's an opera buff) there are no intrusions."

Despite the insistence on autocracy, Mike does admit that bands are never forced to do anything they don't want to. Problems are mostly avoided by Mike's screening process before signing them up, knowing then that their ideas will lie roughly along the same tracks as his.

Ambassador 277 are a cause in point. "They were completely paranoid about what was going to happen to them. I took care over their sleeve and they were delighted with it, and they initially wouldn't trust me one inch over that. It was all, 'what'ya gonna do? We don't want to dress up as pilots!' I said look, if it's good enough for Dirk Bogarde it's good enough for you."

El, though, is a label intent on improving itself. Mike doesn't want to see it lumber on indefinitely without ambition or results.

"These ten inch records should solidify our visual attitude and really show people finally what's different about él. The next lot, starting with the new King Of Luxembourg one, will really go on the offensive. . . and therefore I think we'll have a bit more of a go at it. I don't think there's any point now in constantly restating our attitude; what people want now are results.

"Nothing could be better than él, how could it be? With goodwill, we'll carry on with él because we can survive just on overseas sales, we're huge in Japan, and if it works, CBS or whoever can come and offer us a million quid. That will be just a token, it's not 'cos we want a million quid, but with that I would get control, and then force them to do what I wanted to in marketing terms. The possibility is a long way off, though. . .

"Now I've got to see whether or not it can be done."

El's current crop of performers: from the top, Anthony Adverse, Ambassador 277, Bad Dream Fancy Dress and Always. Pictures by Nickolai Wesolowski; concepts by Mike Alway (of course)

Prospective él artistes should send tapes, photos, witty remarks and eccentric oddities to Mike Alway at 53 Kensington Gardens Square, London W2 4BA.

THE

"STICK IT IN YOUR EAR!"

REVOLUTION WILL NOT BE RECORDED

Cassette-only releases haven't always fared as well as they should — let alone been given due care and attention by Joe Public — but, with the advent of both the cassette single, the success of New York's ROIR tape-only label and the arrival of Liverpool's Bop Cassettes, perhaps that's all about to change.

It's been ten years since the magazine Stick It In Your Ear began and now it's reached issue 126. For 50p (from Geoff Wall, 5 Sunvale Close, Sholing, Southampton, Hants SO2 8LX) you can find out about an extremely wide variety of music that's only available on cassette, while simultaneously tracking down the oddest collection of stuff that's available under their own banner. The music here is the message.

Far from being a cheap and minimal release project, SIYE's label, Color Tapes, is an alternative. While the majority of cassette labels haven't really succeeded, like the alternative video labels, there are highpoints in these areas.

The problem is that the majority of groups end up using cassettes as a step between demo and record. Some people, like SIYE, take it all a lot more seriously, but some sadly do not.

For example, Thule's double-pack four-track set is neat, but we don't know where the sub-industrial fuzz-garage came from. . . then there's The Salty Sea Dogs' braindeath! A live cut-up making pointless listening. The noise itself is, er, well. . . different. As is Perfect Gesture by The Violent Playground, comprising 11 sketches in mind-numbing strangeness (from plinky-plonk to fuzzy noise). The groove continues — but this time on acoustic, spoons, harmonica and chant-along drone from Psycho Ken And His 23 Concrete Pipes. And, with that, the medium realises why it can't be seen as a credible force.

But there are reasonable tape-only ideas. For instance, Lakeland Records, who brought the world various Icelandic things, now has 91 Vibrations' Radio Free Albania — a distorted vocal rant with electronic support — and Snarli, a compilation with tracks from SH Draumur, Muzzolini, Parror and more. Both tapes are of interest and can be obtained from 69 Leamington Road, Southend-On-Sea, Essex.

The Primitive label (28 Larke Way, Leagrove, Luton, Beds) also has a compilation — The Trance Compilation — with a more esoteric/left-field collection of acts in tow. Featured are Shiny Two Shiny, Len Liggins, Ex-F Explains, Jesus Couldn't Drum and a bundle of others.

Jarmusic in Berlin (Limastrasse 18, 1000 Berlin 37 West Germany) specialises in independent tapes and records (boasting a more than healthy catalogue). It's a good place to start your journey into ferric funland, especially with their Berlincassette 3-87, which boasts tracks by R Stevie Moore, Webcore, Schwefel, The Hardy Boys, Attrition, Idiot Sideshow and a load more.

Some acts, however, stay close to the alternative ethic, producing quality music that defies categorisation. For instance The Cleaners From Venus (who've had recordings on vinyl, CD and numerous cassettes) have a new cassette EP, the infectious four-tracker Mind How You Go out on Jarmusic (address above).

RE-RE-REWIND

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackages boasts some real gems. . .

Albums reviewed by Dave Henderson

ANDY ANDERSON

One Man's Rock 'N' Roll

Union Pacific UP006 Andy Anderson is something of an enigma. Looking a little like John Travolta circa Grease — but more original, of course — he adorns the front of this retro collection which spans '57 to '65. Steeped in car wax and Brylcreem, Anderson's development through those rock 'n' roll times had a raunchy edge, a few classy, cheeky licks and the usual tales of girls and motors. The most interesting cut here is Chop Suey, a timeless piece that's strangely stimulating with its unorthodox construction and shaky rhythm. An intriguing groove.

THE EDGAR

BROUGHTON BAND Sing

Brother Sing BGO LP 7 Men in serious sore throat threat. The Edgar Broughton Band strain and boogie on this sub-Beethoven album which was changing hands for 20 notes till recently. That their underground status in the '70s allowed them to shake their influences and produce tracks like the included There's No Vibrations But Wait! suggest that they were prone to mega ideas — this one with funk rhythms, megaphone vocals, taped speech interruption — but sadly most of the rest of this album doesn't hold a candle to that track. A timely re-issue that's worth checking for innovation at least.

ROBERT CALVERT

Captain Lockheed And The Starfighters BGO LP 5 7

Another service to collectors from BGO, with this metal/rock/post-Hawkwind oddity from Calvert. Employing spoken passages courtesy of Viv Stanshall and Jim Capaldi, Calvert gets into concept mode with some instrumental muscle from Lemmy, Twink and all the old faithfuls. It's really a routine mix of UK rock that's given that weird hue due to those spoken parts, the only problem being their humorous nature and the inevitability of it all wearing a little thin.

GENE CLARK WITH THE GOSDIN BROTHERS

Gene Clark With The Gosdin Brothers

Edsel ED263 Side one of this album ranks high alongside any piece of Byrds or Byrds-related paraphernalia — well on a par with the electronic interludes of Notorious Byrd Brothers or Gram Parsons' influential input to the legendary Sweetheart Of The Rodeo.

This is classic '60s music with ex-Byrd Clark teaming up with former cohorts Chris Hillman and Michael Clark, with the Gosdins, Doug Dillard and Leon Russell on keyboards and orchestral arrangements. A bittersweet, melodramatic view of life is something that seems to have disappeared from modern contemporary music which, in retrospect, is a great shame.

CLEAR LIGHT

Black Roses

Edsel ED245 Clear Light's one and only LP was released in 1967, in a climate vibed-up by The Doors' Strange Days and Tim Buckley's Goodbye And Hello, the double drumming and offbeat style resulting in instant prominence, great reviews and comparisons with Grateful Dead, then. . . nothing. Members departed for a variety of outfits leaving the perfect cult item. In retro, Black Roses has some fine songs and moves in the direction of high gloss strangeness. As a first LP it's fine, but just think what they might have done if they'd kept their heads together.

THE GROUNDHOGS

Blues Obituary

BGO Records BGOLP06

Originally formed in the '60s to back visiting US blues players, The Groundhogs eventually became synonymous with facial hair, "boogie music" and the like. Pre-empting Quo and ZZ Top and post-dating Cream they had the style, if not the image, to become a major band. Blues Obituary is a 1969 offering which lacks something in terms of songs, even if it succeeds in showing off Tony McPhee's distinctive guitar and vocal style.

THE HOLLIES

Stay With

BGO LP 4

In The Hollies Style

BGO LP 8 The first two Hollies albums, which have been hawked around for vast sums in recent years, are rife with cover versions. Both feature the unmistakable vocal style of Allan Clarke who, probably quite by accident, seems to have influenced a lot of today's jangle-handed UK guitar bands. Graham Nash's backing vocal embellishments further enhance the proceedings, lifting The Hollies out of the '60s UK pop bracket spiced with US pop covers and closer to the American sounds which they eventually exploited through Dylan, Byrds and country covers. Over 20 years on, these albums mostly sound strong, with the occasional twee legbreak.

ALBERT KING

Albert

Charly R&B CRB 1173

Ch Classic Albert taken from a Tomato US release circa '78. With a gratefully supportive band behind him there's more than enough quality playing going around to warrant a good earful. Albert does get tacky at the start though, on Guitar Man he's oh-so '70s and oh-so kitsch, but his string-bending blues style wins the day in the end.

PHIL OCHS

All The News That's Fit To Sing

Edsel Ed 247 P Politically aware strums from Ochs from '65, that sound as potent, if just a little thin in muscle tissue, today. Phil Ochs went through some serious personal traumas, a few self-questioning bouts and eventually died a premature death. These first steps capture him before he realised that even though he could sing the news and make political motions, there were few giants that the protest song could actually fell. A nice acoustic feel all the same.

THE SEEDS

Evil Hoodoo

Bam-Caruso Re C The sporadic greatness of The Seeds strained and sifted into a massive 45 minute block of energy. Bam-Caruso have picked through The Seeds' catalogue, albums and singles and come up with a compilation that'd be hard to beat, a monument to '60s

RED CRAYOLA

The Parable Of Arable Land

Decal LIK 20 Ch Further raves from the free-from-freak-out grave, with the Crayola's earliest incarnation — headed by Mayo Thompson — whooping up a nightmarish stream of sub-consciousness. The Crayola later went on to become more time-change/jazz-orientated, Mayo followed that by being a tricky little producer. In retrospect this album sounds politely arrogant and reasonably offbeat. Underneath it all, it's a little self-indulgent, but pretty damn lovable nonetheless.

WARREN SMITH

Real Memphis Rock 'N' Roll

Sun CDX23 Ch From Mississippi country to hillbilly rockabilly, Warren Smith's back catalogue at Sun makes up two sides of this double. His singles, with alternate takes and B-sides, ably display the neat guitar style and vocal slur of Smith, while the second album features a wealth of unreleased Sun material — again with various versions and mixes in some cases. Somehow, the clarity and minimal instrumental set-up seems unbelievable, but the sound produced is succinct and powerful.

THE SONS OF CHAMPLIN

Marin County Sunshine

Decal LIK 21 Ch Fully paid up members of the Summer Of Love circa '67, The Sons Of Champlin recordings here come from '68, '69 and '71 when their brand of brassy soul had developed into a Blood, Sweat And Tears meets Traffic kind of accessibility. There are some superb songs here, revolving around Bill Champlin's distinctive vocal, but there are also some of those hesitant dippy hippie moments that might have been better left to slumber. Still, The Sons Of Champlin are a little jewel worth dusting off.

Ferry Cross The Mersey

BGO LP10 P A 12 track film soundtrack LP which majors on the emergent Liverpool scene around 1965 — with little or no mention of The Beatles. The main tack is taken by Gerry And The Pacemakers, who of course sing the title track, with additional takes from the George Martin Orchestra, a youthful and throaty (in the nicest possible sense) Cilla Black, and The Fourmost. The Pacemakers' embodiment of Mersey beat is a touch overpowering, but this is mostly a decent album, and the George Martin instrumental is excellent.

VARIOUS

Major Bill's Texas Soul

Charly CRB 1167 Ch Yet another collection of US labels that've been uncovered in an attempt to gain wider exposure for an obscure, but essential, band of soulsters. Major Bill's Texan triad featured the Charay, Shalimar and Le Cam labels and, while he was having pop success with Paul And Paula and Bruce Channel, he was also releasing some fine soul music. This set boasts some excellent cuts from Willie Hobbs with Pic And Bill, Johnny Copeland, Willie Hobbs and Sons Of Moses, but the finest track must be Ede Robin's haunting ballad Dead, which is a disturbing, suicidal tune with an exotic twist in the tale.

VARIOUS

Peacock Chicks And Duchesses

Ace CHD 233 P Early '50s material taken from the Duke and Peacock labels, featuring an array of caterwauls and croons from a selection of female performers. Backed by the Duke and Peacock house bands, this collection also features five cuts that have previously only laid in the archives of mother label MCA. From the tongue-in-cheek explicit sexiness of Mildred Jones' Mr Thrill to Bonita Cole's perspective Life Is Like That, this is a period classic that is so adverse to the rock 'n' roll revolution that followed a mere two years after some of these recordings.

VARIOUS

The Unsung Heroes

Unicorn PHZA 17

NM C Post-Jam mods lurking beneath the glimmer in Secret Affair's eye and the barbed explosion of The Purple Hearts, these 12 renegades of button-down bravado play pop with rough edges. There's lyrical and creative verve present but none of the assembled can sing their way out of a zippered-up Parka, being more adept at citing their style than their feelings. There are some high points, but without the Hearts, Affair, The Chords, The Merton Parkas or Squire, this movement sounds a little shallow.

THE REVOLUTION WILL BE TELEVISED

Channel 4 looks back 20 years to 1968, the year when the love generation got serious.

Even though this is the May issue of Underground, you'll be glad to hear that it comes out the third week in April, so you'll be ready for April 29 when C4 climaxes a series of programmes looking at 1968. That was the year when students took to the streets in Berlin, Paris and Chicago (and it wasn't for a Branson-esque litter clear up, either).

Included in the week are several reportage and hindsight views of the events and their resultant effect on society, while musically there's two films of the time, The Stones In The Park (May 2) and the legendary Woodstock (May 5). The Stones footage is a unique documentary of their Hyde Park show, while Woodstock mixes America's awareness of Vietnam with festival hippiedom and slots from Country Joe And The Fish, Jimi Hendrix, Arlo Guthrie, Jefferson Airplane and many more — suitably attired — purveyors of "vibes".

However, the highlight of the week's activity is the long overdue screening of Lindsay Anderson's If... (screened on May 30), in which Malcolm McDowell leads a gaggle of public schoolies in a pre/post '60s generation game, taking the school with the power of the gun. A powerful piece of footage, it also contains the legendary "we ran out of money so the last reel's in black and white" ploy. A classic in the cult sense, on a par with A Clockwork Orange, and something your education won't be complete without. Dave Henderson

Meteors circa '88 Fenech in front

The Meteors play pure psychobilly

Paul Fenech tells Spike Sommer
why they're still flying
after all these years

"Whatever I do is psychobilly, it's The Meteors and it's what's in my head. I can't really think of any other way to put it."

Paul Fenech, vocalist and guitarist in The Meteors since their formation in the spring of 1980, shrugs his shoulders and lights yet another fag. He's sitting backstage in Leeds' Astoria opening his mind on all forms of Meteor madness, including the current Only The Meteors Are Pure Psychobilly album.

That record title says it all and, coupled with the psychotic selection encompassed on the vinyl, only goes one step closer to proving a point — a point which Fenech takes great delight in making.

"All these other so-called psychobilly bands wanna be so different but they're all doing exactly the same thing, the same thing The Meteors have been doing for years, only The Meteors did it first and they do it a lot better.

"If it wasn't for The Meteors these other bands wouldn't exist. I've tried to tell them this, 'cause without us they'd all still be teddy boys fighting punks in the King's Road.

"I wish anyone luck who does have a go but right now it seems that the first thing you've gotta do when you form a rockabilly band is rip off The Meteors and then slag 'em off. It's really stupid."

Fenech's contempt for the puerile pale imitations who've sprung up in the wake of his band is well justified. For The Meteors' eight years and 13 albums hasn't seen them reduced to such unmitigated plagiarism.

Fenech recalls the early days fondly, quickly admitting that he's been lucky to be in a position where he can do what he wants and get paid for it.

"Everyone always goes on about how good the first album, In Heaven, was. I mean it was good, but I think we've made better ones since, I think Don't Touch The Bang Bang Fruit and Stampede were much better.

"There have been worse ones though, like Wreckin' Crew. I didn't like the sound on that, the production wasn't right. I wasn't really that pleased with Monkey's Breath or Sewertime Blues either. There, again, it wasn't the songs that were bad but the production. The feeling wasn't quite right.

"Out of all the albums Stampede and Bang Bang Fruit are my favourites because that's exactly what I figured I wanted to sound like on record."

And the live album?

"Well, the first one, Live, wasn't really authorised as such. It was just that as our old manager was leaving he came up with this idea and put it out.

"The idea of a live LP is to capture the essence of a gig on tape or record but you can't really do it. It doesn't work, that's probably why that first live one, and Horrible Music, don't come across so well.

"Night Of The Werewolf? Well, I never knew about that one till I saw it in a shop in Paris, and I had nothing to do with Live And Loud, which sounds like it's been taken straight off a cassette, the quality is so bad.

"Those bad quality live albums are annoying 'cause someone who's never heard The Meteors before might listen to them and think that they're a true representation of what we're like. You can't get a fair idea from a Walkman recording that's been stuffed in a jacket all night."

Fair comment, but for the ardent collector such items do fill the gaps in their collections, especially with the otherwise unavailable material that's on those records.

"That's right, we do do a lot of covers live, we've got a heavy duty repertoire of songs and it's impossible to put them all on the albums. Originally I did intend to put them on the B-sides of singles, but the record company is always coming out with some other idea just as good, which is why I've not got around to it."

The subject of the band's ever changing line-up brings a wry grin across Fenech's face. He laughs as he recounts tales of those who've come and gone.

"Originally Nigel Lewis and me had the idea to form The Meteors. Aside from Nigel, everyone else who's been in the band I've never really liked. I think Nigel got lead astray by some other people. It's not his fault. I mean I've heard some of his other stuff but he always seems lost, like he doesn't know what direction he wants to take.

"I suppose other people have left because I can be a bit of a ct at times. Every time someone new joins I really try to make it last, but usually we've edged people out. Y'see they all start full of good intentions, like 'Meteors Forever' and all that, y'know all that about money not mattering, but they taste a little success and start changing. I've seen it happen so many times."

The line-up changes have marked a progression in the music, a result of Fenech's ever-improving songwriting. The charged blend of rockabilly nervous twitching beneath the often insane horror of the lyrics creates a wild 'n' wicked sound that's something a lot more special than yer run of the mill rock 'n' roll. It's more of a burning wreck 'n' roll on a road to hell and back.

"This band will carry on until I've had enough. If ever I go completely off the rails and starting making the band shitty, I hope someone'll tell me I've gone wrong somewhere so I can do something about it."

Fenech's commitment to the band is beyond doubt. After all, you don't trundle your wares around the globe if you don't reckon much to what you're doing, especially on a shoestring budget with no strings attached. No the man firmly believes what he's doing is right and he's proud of it.

"The Meteors has given me loads it's given me good friends and I've had a brilliant time. I've been all over the world and I've been paid for it, and I think I can keep it going for at least another ten years.

"If I give up now all those people who say that The Meteors are wanker will be right, and I won't let them be right, 'cause Paul Fenech's not wanker and, to quote an old song, friend of mine once wrote... you can't keep a good man down."

TIP SHEET

NEW TAPE DEMOS

FLORA ANDREWS is the researcher for The Chart Show, and it's she who decides which videos are screened on the Channel 4 programme each Friday night.

Flora says that she has a bias towards independent and new groups and points out that The Chart Show is the only place where you're likely to see the unsigned and the radical jostling alongside all the usual chart biggies.

Tip Sheet supremo Julian Henry took notes as Flora delivered her verdict on this month's contenders. (Less of the supremo, Henry — Ed.)

The numbered system after each review refer to marks out of ten for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of the overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a cheque book or two). Any outfits wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ.

TWENTY THREE PERSONS (29 Blaycourt, Orchard Park Estate, Hull) sent us several letters, badges and magazines with their cassette, all of which Flora found a bit much. "There's so much here I hardly know where to start," she said. "I like their music a lot though, it's acoustic, but powerful — if they had a decent video to go with this we'd definitely think about showing it." A glance through their letter reveals where the name comes from — 23 persons are the maximum allowed in the lift at their college. Fascinating.

BILL (74 Egerton Street, Middlesboro, Cleveland) appears to be about three years old. His biography goes on about the Bogley Factory, and his music sounds like the theme tune to Bill and Ben. Great stuff. "I think this is really sweet," blushed Flora. She looked embarrassed. "The music is very simple and his handout is funny, there's obviously some good ideas here."

3 5 7 5

FOLLOWERS OF THE VALE (137 Longwood Gate, Huddersfield, West Yorks) are young (around 17) and sound like they've taken a bit of acid — which bit we're not sure about. They ask us for a donation for their tape. Bloody cheek! What do you think Flora? "If the quality of recording was a bit better I would like it. As it is, you have to listen quite hard but there is potential here."

5 5 4 4

A GLURK TROLLING (317 Hazelwood Road, Northampton) make a horrible meaningless noise that we listened to for around 20 seconds. Is it Art? I don't think so. "They come from a musicians' workshop," commented Flora. Around ten years ago this would have sounded pretty bad. In 1988 it sounds completely worthless and you can only wonder why they bothered sending it in.

THE SMOKING MIRROR (86 Abbey Road, Bearwood, Birmingham B67 5LH) did not impress Flora with their middling rock effort. "I find this a bit dirge-like," she says. "On The Chart Show you have to have quite broad tastes and be able to appreciate everything from good noise to trash metal, and from new American funk to everyday chart stuff. But this lot don't really do anything for me at all, I'm afraid!"

3 4 2 4

THE RIVER DWELLERS (5 Sherwin Grove, Old Lenton, Nottingham) sent us a tape of jazzy, happy-go-lucky songs. "The music is great," says Flora. "I'm not too sure about the singer's voice though, it sounds a bit weak. With stuff like this you really need a strong vocal to sit on top. A good name though! They sound a bit like the Bonzo Dog Doo Dah Band."

6 5 5 6

DE DAGDA (01-349 0763) sent in a tape of four songs that sounded very quiet, introspective, maudlin and, unfortunately, ordinary. "There's not much here to get worked up about," said Flora. "Really too low key for my own tastes." The band say that they only came to know Ug magazine because they've written a song of the same title. How sad that we are unable to say anything more positive about their efforts.

3 3 2 4

THE PENNY ARCADE (122 The Willows, Colchester, Essex) made both Flora and myself leap for joy. Their letter tells us that they like Abba and Prince, and that they like to watch TV. So they're normal! "The music is great, really commercial, you can tell within 20 seconds," gushed Flora. We looked at their picture. They look about 12 years old (slight exaggeration). "They deserve to sign a major record deal immediately," said Flora. So quick boys, make yourselves a video and get on the phone to Flora!

7 7 6 8

THE ICONS OF NOISE (128 Dobbin Hill, Sheffield S11 7JD) are unhappy at being compared to early Cabaret Voltaire. They sound different to any of the other tapes thanks to a violent and slightly demented approach to their songs. "I don't like it," says Flora. "There's too much of this sort of thing." The Ug view of the band is more charitable and concludes some promise.

5 6 5 6

HERMANOS GUZANDOS (c/o 23118 Vanowen, Canoga Park, California 91307) make a wonderful Jimi Hendrix-style dirge that sounds totally long-haired and laid back. They also sent us some fantastic cartoons. "I like this," said Flora. "You can start conjuring up what they look like even though there's no picture. If they used the same approach for making a video, I bet it would be great. This reminds me of Frank Zappa and Beefheart."

CRUNCH!

TIP

...and the tapes just keep on rolling! We've had so many entrants to the Tip Sheet sweepstakes that we've decided to extend the service and cast a bleary eye over even more ferric frenzy. Dave Henderson lets his ears do the bleeding. . .

SAME stands for Sensual And Mentally Efficient and it seems they're from London (01-950 1514). Their demo tape is a tad grainy — recorded live onto two track — but there's enough to suggest that, with time, SAME could develop into something quite palatable in tempered rock terms.

Oblivion (Maesyllan, Boncath, Dyfed SA37 0HR) are mental. They sound musically debauched on their six track thrash but have a guitarist who can "burn it" given the chance. Required quality is so bad it's difficult to tell what they're on. They cover Louie Louie and have fun though.

Heroin And The Needles (20 Victoria Street, Sawley, Long Eaton, Notts) suffer from their name but have the knack to lift a few worthy riffs into a pseudo-rock middle ground. The demo is a little hesitant, the vocalist sounds a bit rocky, but there's promise in the arrangements.

Mosc (21 Tankerville Terrace, Jesmond, Newcastle-Upon-Tyne) claims to be a wreck of a guitar player with a voice to match. What's more he's got a broken heart and a lyrical style that could breathe fire if his humble accompaniment was increased. Mosc has a touch of charisma.

The Pyromaniacs (14 Marmion Close, Hartlepool, Cleveland TS25 1UH) have Smithsitis — and are quite convincing with it. With Mr Morrissey at number one that can't be a bad thing.

The Church Grims (041-889 2035) are Scotspeople and they burst forth with a folky James-styled sortie that's more than pleasant to behold. Excellent stuff with a penchant for commercial success.

The Pale Saints (0937 63701), from the Leeds area, almost jangle but they don't quite have enough muscle to fill out their sound. They almost make up for that with some commendable harmony lines. Bear this lot in mind.

Big Bang Theory (0603 633161) offer a decent six-track selection that'll certainly make you wonder about the wisdom of their name. As they slip into a bespectacled Smithsean intelligence, their commercial roots show through, but these Bangs need a little more preening before they can go all the way.

The Ramp-Antz (0602 603272) are one of those groups who only appear in a comic strip — but these nutters are a bit weirder than The Archies. Instead, The Ramp-Antz play thrashy metal on Skate To Skool and electro-reggae on Test Tube Baby. The editing is awful, the final is wobbly, but the noise is magic.

Millions Of Brazilians (0634 40919) sound destined for a big label. They have grand schemes and carefully orchestrated songs. Daytime radio possibles with a very capable female singer.

The Ogdens (01-274 2329) play dangerously commercial rock/pop in the gawky manner of Proclaimers-go-operative. Their potential is never realised due to production finish. They strive to sing something like Love Is Contagious while chewing gum.

GT Clean (021-454 1686) offer the world a fragmented offbeat vibe that's been seen as jazzy funk, and waves more than a hat at Ron Johnson's pop vision. The GT stands for Giant Treads and these Wolverhampton sons have a kind of cuddly cabaret version of performance rock in their wallets.

The Waiting List (0636 812346) have an almost unfinished sound. They write songs of character but don't seem to have the clout to push them through just yet.

Aitch (0742 580769) offer the next Sheffield funk wave, and it's more commercial than Cabaret Voltaire but not as immediate as ABC. Aitch sound like a Virgin signing on their third single, they beg for a big producer and an appearance on No 73.

Cold Vietnam (81 Ashorne Close, Matchborough W, Redditch, Wores), somewhat inevitably, play churning guitar noise with belched lyrics. Politically outspoken, emotional, but still rather retrogressive.

Dreamtime (01-998 9504) already have a Janice Long session to their credit and their four track demo is taken from that. In a way, the female vocal line and pubescent jangle is what you'd expect, but Dreamtime have songs of style and a vocalist with range and presence. Expect more (hopefully).

The Big Boat (01-423 2601) have been busy flaunting their talents to the press and playing a brace of gigs. They're rough-hewn and down to earth. . . a little like The Psychedelic Furs with none of the polish. Good songs though.

Into The Storm (0742 721410) are from Sheffield and have some of the ideas but not many of the tools to craft the final statue (or something like that). They end up sounding like Dire Straits without a distinctive vocal and guitar style. This is a vision in search of time and effort.

The Psychbombs (39 Medway Street, Highfields, Leicester LE2 1BR) have adopted a playful stance, spiced with bedroom humour, a straggly guitar and a drum machine. They sound incredibly Mary Chain-esque at first, later developing into an admirably credible pop sound.

Power Dressing (0923 54108) threaten a single and they're nearly there when it comes to being "tempting". The lyrics really suck, but Power Dressing's drive and well-played music — like Split Enz in their formative glory, with a touch more modernism — may well succeed.

Martin Bestwood (Flat 5, 15A Villa Road, St Anns, Nottingham) is a part-time member of Clint Bestwood And The Something Or Others, but this three song tape is a spark more enticing than barrelhouse whisky-sodden fun. The three tracks throw everything from John Martyn to Buffalo Springfield into a contemporary sound that's exceptionally potent. Very impressive.

The Australians (051 708 7921) are not Australian at all, in fact they feature Pale Fountains and Yeah Yeah Noh's and play a milky waft of melody that's difficult to tack. There's a potential signing here, with rewards not lurking too far over the hill.

The Resistance claim to be from the armpit of Britain. . . Oswestry (0691 773613) but they transcend their provincial status by playing a brand of swirling rock music that's tastefully edgy, a few steps closer to the real world than U2 and reminiscent of latter day SWA.

Portrait Gallery (01-567 9447) are a duo playing inoffensive strums. They have a melodic ear but there's no dynamics and presence on this understated set of popish sketches.

The Terminal Twist (15 Heathland Road, Stoke Newington, London N16) have a sophisticated pop style but none of the finish. Their demo has a brace of "funky" ideas that try hard but lack feeling — almost perfect for a post-Yes/It Bites comparison.

The Melroony Daddies have brought their confident psychedelia to London (01-200 5447). With a snatch of Cavern-style Beatles, a sliver of manic playing and some pretty short songs, they're a welcome thrust of feedback.

The Audience (0744 29386) present a demo of a million songs and simultaneously come from St Helens. Their influences (Severed Heads, Stranglers, Dead Kennedys and The Passage) make interesting reading, they have a keen keyboard player, a quite acidic guitarist and a nice line in monotone vocal delivery.

Lawnmower Deth (44 Church Drive, Ravenshead, Notts NG15 9FF) play thunderous instrumental rock music that strips Black Flag and Gore down to the bone as it heads for a brand of brain-numbed madness that's not been heard since, oh, you know when.

Ship Of Fools (01-799 2343) waft in on an ambient hue, then prickle the conscience with some truly deep lyrics. Feeling and emotion run rife, but there's just not enough going on to make it vitally gloomy.

Death By Milkfloat (0482 46717) are certainly the noisiest band to come out of Hull and they display this talent (including a bent for thrashing funk and offbeat lyrics) with great style. DBM sound as if they'd be more than at home doing a Peel session — and they may very well do so in the not too distant future.

Crawfish Daddy (Great Yarmouth 858454) undoubtedly get their aquatic name from their sea-faring exploits. And, with tracks like Down By The Sea and Drowning, their location has obviously influenced their pert strum. Perhaps there's not a gargantuan A side here, but they're moving along the right road.

Noise Noise (01-602 0012) have a hardcore electronic image, but their vocal style is a little too reminiscent of uptempo Numan. After that realisation it all seems to be a little pompous. Reasonable quirky pop, but nothing new.

Ha-Ha the Electorate (Top Flat, 11 Pitville Crescent, Cheltenham) are shaky and underpowered — but they do have a spirited thrust in their neanderthal minimalism. They're like a bluesy nightclub Nick Cave with Wire in attendance. The idea is sound, the execution just needs a little more care.

Throb Gut (8 Ashwin Street, Dalston, London E8 3DL) play buzzy-punk through a sweater. Crass-styled metal with theatrical anti-yuppie sentiments. Throb Gut are nothing new and not very convincing at what they do. "Fe, fi fo, fum, I smell the blood of yuppie scum." Yes, I should coco.

Jeffrey Roag and Le Sex (01-769 3739) play inoffensive electronic cock-rock (complete with guitar solos and funky bass). Tastefully presented, professionally performed but ultimately soul-less. Virgin, please copy!

The Golden Dawn (041-427 3639) are from Scotland and have more than a passing resemblance to the TV Personalities in their use of harmonies. Their eight tracks here suggest that they could soon be cleaning up their sound and oiling their throats on the proceeds of vinyl outing.

The Real Apartment (36 Grass Royal, Yeovil, Somerset) have an affinity with cider and opt to supply a wonky tape. Or maybe they just play wonky? Either way, their folky fiddle-driven air, spiced with echo OD and other effects, is interesting if not totally endearing. They are good at art though.

The Marinello Incident (51 Devana Road, Leicester LE2 1PJ) have a guitar that's untamed, some Stockhausen records in their pocket and some very loud shirts. Their three track trick is swirly and quite appealing.

Mel 'n' Kolly (15 Watson Avenue, South Shields, Tyne & Wear NE3 34 7Q) write great sleevenotes, have grand titles — For The Love Of A Marine Girl — but flatten out and flounder on their strummed depresso session. Shame.

Poor Fred and The Butcher (01-806 0228) claims his demo took 15 minutes to do, was recorded onto his Auntie's cassette and the blank tape was found in a dustbin. Yep, it's tinny. . . but it sounds like a cross between Barney New Order and Neil Young! Pretty twangy, well played and just think what he'd have done given halfan hour!

A Distant Garden (061-764 2839) are Bury's answer to alternative music. Recorded cheaply, this tape still manages to sound decent as there are a few good song ideas riding over the tinny drum machine and the occasionally over-powering keyboard lines.

The Visitors (03955 77441) play chiming pop music that just fails when the harmonies don't quite click. This is the group's second tape and it certainly sounds as if they're scurrying towards a brighter tomorrow.

The Pyramid Curve (Flat 1, 5A Great George Street, Weymouth, Dorset) start admirably — breaking into the Wire/effectuated pop/Manicured Noise market, but by track three they've lapsed into chirpy pop with few redeeming factors. More of the earlier stuff, more danger, more challenge, please.

This month we carry into rock's rich tapestry and say, "B-b-b-b-b-beh!"

BACKS: Cartel member involved in the manufacturing and distribution business for some time. Based in East Anglia, they've enthused over everyone from The Higsons to The Boonierats (via Survival Records).

BAD BRAINS: SST fusion of thrash and reggae which developed into a fusion of metal and reggae. . . seek out their excellent debut LP Against I.

BAUHAUS: Former home of Peter Murphy and Love And Rockets. This Northampton quartet started with lipstick and lace as Bauhaus 1919, got culty, invented goth and still sell lorryloads of their single Bela Lugosi's Dead.

BEACH BOYS: Brotherly harmony and tales of surf and sand. Did you know they were accused of nicking one of their songs from a Charles Manson idea?

BEASTIE BOYS: Commercial axe-grinding point for terror-through-hip-hop. Space-age kids rolling into the film biz after using music as a stepping stone.

BEATBOX: Drum-machine's trendier name. . . but remember the tackler the beatbox sound, the better. . . and never make it sound like real drums.

THE BEATLES: Pop icons as yardstick for everything new for an uncaring public. Featured Ringo Starr who went on to narrate Thomas The Tank Engine and Paul McCartney, who Johnny Marr recently played with. Of the other two, one is dead and the other is daft.

BEATNIK: Hey cool, wow. Term best associated with '60s film versions of trendy '50s jazz-life. Goatee beards, stripy T-shirts and "vibes" are essential (berets optional).

BEETLE: Trendiest car in the editor's street! But only if it's a convertible.

BELGIUM: Schizophrenic country (both class and language) with music varying wildly. Notable imports are Tuxedomoon and The Weathermen who love Brussels, while Play It Again Sam releases lots of records and Bene Gesserit lives in the backwaters.

BEN SHERMAN: Essential skinhead fashion shirt that's often revived in its checked, box-pleated and button-down-collar look. A must for latter day casuals — see Ug publisher for details.

In Italy, the indie scene is a burgeoning mass of excitement. Vittore Baroni introduces the hottest names to spout. . .

At the top of all the indie playlists and readers' polls in this first part of 1988 is the firmly established Barricada Rumble Beat, the second album from The Gang, a group that does not bother to hide in any way the fact that they choose The Clash for spiritual guidance (they even dress like their idols); yet, they aren't soulless copycats. They have their own personality and the right beat.

- Politically uncompromising, The Gang refused offers from many established labels and self-produced the LP on their own label, G.C.D. (distributed by Supporti Fonografici, Viale Coni Zugna 63, 20144 Milan).
- Their honest brand of ballads and reggae spiced combat-rock will satisfy any young street warrior, an extra incentive being the presence of Billy Bragg as special guest on a couple of tracks.
- Another band that have built a solid reputation on wild gigs of good-ole r'n'r, played at street level and maximum volume, is The Kim Squad And Dinah Shore Zeekapers from Rome. Their first release, Young Bastards (Caesar Records), tries hard to document on vinyl the raw energy of their stage show, through eight shots of the classic beat-psycho-garage cocktail. The singer is French, the guitarist is crazy, the bass and keyboard are played by two nice looking gals in mini-skirts, the platter is distributed (internationally?) by Virgin.
- Even better for my taste is the debut LP by Pikes In Panic, Keep It Cool And Dry (Contempo Records, PO Box 1369, Florence), an amazingly competent six-piece that carries the '60s revival thing to unusually creative heights. Timeless roots-garage, if you prefer. Any fan of The Fuzztones or Chesterfield Kings should hear this one.

The Difference with infant psyche

- Also on Contempo is the first work by The Difference, a sort of super-group formed by musicians active in various bands in the Turin area. Though the cover of its smells of '70s progressive rock and the sound abounds in psychedelic little tricks, the band hides a subversive bluesy soul. Dig the folksy Country Gay song, and the Braineaters coming at ya through a maze of cryptic verses. Teenage Captain Beefheart on dope. Different, indeed.

Bob Dobbs: at your service

Church of the poisoned mind

Welcome to the sacred portals of the World's First Industrial Church Of Love And MONEY — take a pew, vicar!

In a country like America, where freedom of religion is guaranteed by the constitution, anything is likely to develop. Enter the Church Of The SubGenius, a group of musicians, writers and performance artists who make a hobby of inventing new mythologies tailored to the demands of life under the Reagan administration. What do these people believe in? Virtually everything. Whom do they believe in? A mysterious character known only as Bob Dobbs, who, they claim, "is actually a pretty regular guy, just very rich and possessed by forces greater than man".

The SubGenius cultists operate from a base in the Redneck stronghold of Dallas, Texas. Over the past few years they've had a field day dreaming up new explanations for the mysteries of the universe — everything from UFOs and psychic phenomena to the Kennedy and Lennon killings. (Lennon, they claim, wasn't assassinated at all; he actually died of a drug overdose a split-second before being shot. "So in the end Chapman's bullets were wasted.") They derive much of their pleasure from the reactions of their victims — mostly baffled normals — and the inevitable resulting publicity.

Their activities include a weekly radio slot (The Hour Of Slack), plus regular conventions, street demonstrations, road-rants, multi-track studio seances and weird 'anti-music' concerts at which the Church's resident 'doktorbands' and performance artists are unleashed onto the public at large. The purpose of all this activity is not just to recruit new disciples, but to ensure that they're the right kind of disciples. As the Church's 'Sacred Scribe', the Rev Ivan Stang, once explained: "This church deliberately pulls the rug from under the preconceptions of 'follower' types, thus separating the wheat from the chaff. It uses shock value. We're often too sardonic for those smug hip types who thought they were already as sardonic as you can get."

Perhaps the Church's most impressive achievement to date is its back catalogue of cassette albums, containing somewhere in the region of 50 hardcore releases. Some are taken from SubGenius conventions and radio phone-in shows; others fall under the 'Media Barrage' heading. Those in the latter category form what is surely the world's most complete archive of

'found voice' material. Each contains hundreds of bizarre audio clips juxtaposed at random. Christian fundamentalist radio broadcasts are intercut with vintage horror movie soundtracks; tub-thumping Evangelists vie for attention with sincere UFO cranks and obscure beatnik poets; small-time local politicians are constantly shouted down by card-carrying SubGenius trance-spouters. Intense and challenging, hip, funny and grotesque, the Media Barrage tapes defy all attempts at classification. Every home should have at least one.

At the other end of the spectrum from all this lunacy lie the Church's notorious 'anti-music' cassettes. The earliest of these were relatively simple, almost innocent-sounding hymns to abnormality. Later releases have pushed back the tolerance barrier to new and previously undreamt-of frontiers. Artists featured include The Band That Dare Not Speak Its Name, Glassmadness, Blue Marmalade, LIES, The Swinging Love Corpses, D K Jones, The People's Temple, Puzzling Evidence and many more. The resulting tapes fall predictably into the same see-saw, hit-or-miss pattern as most conceptual/experimental stuff. You either get a good or bad song now and then, depending on the ebb and flow of the various bands' creative juices. On balance the material is, in every sense, an extreme manifestation of the human creative impulse. Recorded and trance-mixed under the most adverse conditions, it represents the Church's filthiest, most juvenile, least excusable contribution to popular culture.

Like all the Church's products, these 'arche-tapes' (a typical SubGenius play on words) are sold at hiked-up prices. The SubGenius Foundation is, you see, a profit-making body — "the World's First Industrial Church Of Love And MONEY!". Humour, wild irreverence and scabrous rock music from the bedrock on which it is built. Guilt, traditionally the mainspring of organised religion, has no part in the scheme of things. As the Rev Ivan Stang once explained: "The only time Dobbs'll lay a guilt trip on you is when you don't send him enough MONEY!".

Butthole's psychedelic excursion

Breaching the peace

What beverage do you think Texas's prime Mexicali grunge quartet would favour to wet their whistle? Mescal? Black Cat beer? No, here they are in Mute Records' recording studios and they're supping Yorkshire bitter! Talk about perverse. Yep, I think we're on the right track. . .

The Butthole Surfers have come to London to trace their favourite British comedian Jerry Arkwright, "the Northern Industrial Gay" (no, I've not heard of him either), to buy some cheap Doc Martens and eat bucketloads of Indian food. There's also work to be done; a collaborative recording project under the guise of The Jack Officers; a recording for Euro-MTV; two live shows and some promotion for their new and very groovy album Hairway To Steve.

The Butthole Surfers are, clockwise from my left, Theresa (drums), Paul (guitar and vocals), Jeff (bass), King (more drums), and Gibby (vocals and Gibbyness).

Their live shows have become almost legendary and are notoriously difficult to get into. This visit took in two small venues and at both the punters were turned away in droves. The same thing happened last year when they played the Clarendon and, even with heavy fire restrictions enforced, it was jam packed and steaming hot.

Hotter than their equipment could cope with.

Theresa: "It was like a million degrees. . ."

Gibby: "The stuff got a little bit hot and it fed the phasers even though we had power convertors. It made our digital equipment just choke."

Theresa: "The drums were the only thing working by the end and even then you couldn't hold onto the sticks 'cause everything was so sweaty."

Even the walls and ceiling were dripping sweat.

Gibby: "Yeah, I was gonna say, it was amazing 'cause you think you're getting spat on from out of nowhere like 'how are they hitting me on my back?'. Then you look up and see a guy spitting in circles, right? And it comes shooting right back into his mouth."

King: "A closed ecosphere! Y'know, like how oceans evaporate into clouds, the clouds raining over the land and the land goes back into the ocean, the ocean evaporates back into clouds. . ."

Paul: "Cool, we had our own little world going there!"

Jeff: "If only we'd had a couple of hedgehogs or something to go with it."

A couple of hedgehogs is about all they had missing. Despite all the technical difficulties they still managed to throw the audience way off balance. Not long into the set the stage was obliterated from view by swathes of dry ice, two flaming discs flared up and, with a monstrous cymbal crash, leapt up to the ceiling. When the smoke cleared the group's dancer, who'd previously been regaled with flowers and long blond tresses, now stood naked, sporting a shaved scalp and posturing aggressively at the audience. The atmosphere was electric, a mass hallucination where no-one knew quite what was happening or what was coming next. All the while a montage of filmic madness played through the dry ice, over and behind the group; coral reefs; kaleidoscope swirls; battling insects; household hints and, most disturbing of all, gruesome on-the-scene inspections of accident victims by the Ohio State Highway Patrol.

The Mechanised Death footage was topped at their recent ULU gig by a 'penis reconstruction move', close-up footage of a penis being skinned, impaled, trussed up and finally dressed in a stitch-up corset. Most of the audience were squirming, fascinated but repulsed, not wanting to look at that damn screen and not wanting to look away. The Buttholes hammered on regardless.

Talk turns to hospitals and incredible medical survivors, men with iron rods removed from their heads, bullets lodged between the hemispheres of the brain, that kind of thing. The band's own experiences of hospitals are less sensational.

Gibby: "I had to have some stitches after the Mean Fiddler show. . ."

Jeff: "Yeah, some asshole threw a glass at Gibby and it gashed his head open."

Gibby: "It didn't cost a cent, that was the good thing, had to wait around a good while but it didn't cost a cent."

Theresa: "King has a kernel of corn in his ear."

King: "I got this kernel of corn trapped in my ear when I was a kid, I went to the doctor and he told me it'd be too tricky to get at and it'd probably work its way out or rot away. But it's still there! I can still feel it sometimes."

The Buttholes are just regular people, you sonuvabitch

mad dog

Originally inspired to form a band out of a love for the electronic sounds emanating from Europe in the early '80s — our own Cabaret Voltaire, Portion Control and Chris And Cosey, plus SPK and Liaisons Dangereuses — Canada's Skinny Puppy have risen, phoenix-like, from the red sands of time to currently rank alongside Front 242 and maybe one or two others as leaders of the post-post-industrial dancefloor sequencer disco resurgence. Or something like that.

Now signed direct to Capitol in the UK, I met up with vocalist and onstage self-flagellator Nivek Ogre in Vancouver shortly before the start of their current European tour in support of their third full album, Cleanse Fold And Manipulate. How did he and fellow Puppys Cevin Cey and Dwayne Goettl feel about visiting the UK for the first time?

"We're really excited by the prospect, although it's really impractical to have expectations — whatever happens happens. We're just going to put on a show and hopefully people will accept what we're doing and think of it as something they can relate to."

I know other electronic bands like Front 242 have strong reservations about playing in the UK.

"When we toured Europe last time that was a complete culture shock for me, with so many different languages to cope with. At least the British speak the same language as me if nothing else!"

Is playing live necessary — many electronic bands don't bother and if they do they are often really boring to watch?

"I know what you mean, but personally I love performing live, and our show has developed into something very unusual and different and totally at odds with many other electronic groups. We feel that you have to play live for credibility's sake — we've lost a lot of money touring, but at the same time it has helped us to sell a lot more records, particularly in America. We still use tapes on stage, but we are performers — live drums, keyboards, guitar, vocals. After all, we're playing for the people who put us there in the first place, so we want to make it something worthwhile for them, as well as for ourselves."

Your personal onstage theatrics seem pretty intense, judging from the films I've seen, with enough blood and gore to make even King Kurt wince.

"I just think there's too much pussyfooting going on in the world today. This whole singer dancing to the music trip has its place I guess — it's just not my place! As far as the blood and stuff goes, it's mostly cosmetic I'm afraid, although if there was some way of cutting myself on stage and healing by the next show I'd do it!"

Do you think there is now an over emphasis on the 'clubability' of a record in the main area you are working in?

"We like making dance music, but I don't think a lot of our material is that danceable. Adrian Sherwood's 12 inch remix of Addiction is though, he was great, a real breath of fresh air. Working with him was another dream come true for me, and hopefully we'll use him again for future mixes."

And with the corporate muscle of Capitol behind you, it must be easier to reach people. Did you need them or did they chase you?

"I see it rather that they have us rather than we have them. I think we are their integrity in some ways, and each year we are progressing a bit more, so they are pleased. And there are people at Capitol who are really into our whole project..."

Skinny Puppy to sweep next year's Grammy Awards? Capitol's current rising star Jody Watley to move over and die? Maybe not, but if you're from the post Cabaret Voltaire generation and haven't yet heard Skinny Puppy, then you should. Cleanse, fold and investigate. ALEX BASTEDO

GREECE: LIBIDO BLUME

Libido Blume believe that they can live outside of pop music's western world. Emerging from Greece with their third album, Liquid Sensation, they've astonished their native fans by being able to attract a foreign producer, and that has given the LP a much bigger, more robust nature. The producer in question being Mekon/Three John Jon Langford.

The album is brimming with different sounds. Pop melodies, strong guitar riffs, whispering and screaming voices, it's a noise with a cutting edge. Libido Blume are convinced that people can succeed without speaking English, citing Minimal Compact, Les Thugs, The Ex, Young Gods, Phillip Boa and a brace of others. What's more, they're right. Anthony Fragos

USA: THE KRONOS QUARTET

Formed in '73, this US quartet have rewritten the string quartet pamphlet. Apart from Neil Young's use of the genre, followed ten years or so later by Marc Almond, that squeaky, stringy sound hasn't been bowed too often, but THE KRONOS QUARTET (no, not a metal band) offer a variation of interpretation — from Hendrix to Bartok, from Glass to Cage. Their Warner Brothers LP, White Man Sleeps, offers their view of a selection of misfits and should be savoured. Essential education. Dave Henderson

USA: ALGEBRA SUICIDE

Originally formed in 1982, Chicago based ALGEBRA SUICIDE have just released their first LP (a joint release between RRRRecords and DOM labels) entitled The Secret Like Crazy, which contains no less than 20 slices of the duo's engaging poetry set to minimal guitar and drum machine backing.

The tracks include rare compilation appearances — the best known of which is probably their contribution to ROIR's cassette The Best Of America Underground — selections from their previous hard to find single releases, plus many unreleased songs.

Perhaps the nearest musical comparisons for husband and wife team Lydia Tomkiw (words) and Don Hedeker (music) would be either Laurie Anderson or perhaps The Young Marble Giants. Have they always kept things this simple?

Don: "When we got together at first Lydia had been doing poetry readings for quite a while and I had been working in various rock bands, so it made sense to combine our two main skills. We're used to working as a duo now, although for live performances we also incorporate a film show. Alex Bastedo

Skinny Puppy: clinical but cute

CANADA: PSYCHE

Darren and Stephen Haas are better known as Evan Panic and Anthony Red, and they're better known as Psyche, from Edmonton, Alberta. They've lived in Paris for the last year and go down a storm in Holland and Germany, a pretty cosmopolitan bunch all round! Unfortunately, they're still relatively unknown in Britain, but their third LP, Mystery Hotel on New Rose, could change this situation.

Darren: "Mystery Hotel is everything we like electronically. It contains elements of the old synth-wave, OMD and Tangerine Dream, along with more diverse styles like The Doors and John Carpenter."

The album's successful mix of top 40 material with meaty, beaty, alternative dancefloor fillers, should turn a few doubters' heads, and the current rebirth of interest in European-styled electronic music might just let Psyche pummel those ears that they've been searching for. Peter Mash

WEST GERMANY: DIE SACHE

An exciting three-piece from south Germany (Tübingen), Die Sache combine '60s garage sounds with pure C-86 guitar pop. A few of the songs on the current album, The Girl Who Stole the Eiffel Tower (out on FAB through Backs in the UK), sound as if they could have been released by Subway.

Their best release however is Who's In My Garage, a self-released 12 track tape that came out in 1986. Try anything you can to get it, it's fantastic! FAB Records, Eislebener Stieg 6-8, 2000 Hamburg 50, West Germany. Jan Cux

The Great Fire Of London is a 14 track compilation LP containing selected Fire acts from the past, present and future. Blue Aeroplanes, Colenso Parade, Close Lobsters, Pulp, 1000 Mexicans, The Rose Of Avalanche and newest Fire artists The Parachute Men and The Royal Assassins are among the gems to be found on this damned fine quality record. All you have to do to win one is answer the following question set by a token Fire man: How many members make up The Blue Aeroplanes? Not as simple as you think, this one.

Blue Aeroplanes

First ten correct entries get a copy of the LP. Answers, if you please, to Underground / Fire Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ to arrive by May 10.

Life is

Lydia Lunch is a freelance conceptualist and creative exhibitionist. At present she's exploring the avenues of the lyrical, verbal, structured assault of word power. In London, she strides on stage, clad as only an ultimate feminist can be — sexy, knickerless. . . kind of 'abandoned'. She spits, snarls and cooes, it's a relentless barrage of clichés and home truths. The audience are non-plussed.

"The American way of life-death. . . prisons, penitentiaries, abortion clinics, shooting galleries, murder and arson and shooting and rape. . . born to a set of perpetual perversities in a pigsty-catholic style. . . I'm a man possessed! I did it ALL for Jesus. . . I'm just here to SPREAD the disease because the disease is the cure. . . now that's something we ALL have in common. . . annihilation. . . I don't wanna know NOTHING that I ALREADY don't know — YOU wouldn't know the truth if it slapped you in the face. And that's why I'm here. . . 'cos I LOVE slapping you in the face."

"In the past 27 years I have never compromised myself intellectually"

This is the shit flying back at a society provoked by anger, the contempt and frustration thrown against the kind of oppression induced by ignorance, censorship and perversion, the bulk of which inevitably forms the cross of bondage that the fairer sex are forced to bear, a continual assault to fight against.

"I had to move away from Brooklyn because it got to the stage where I hated going out on the street. . . there's always someone hassling your ass. It's a violation of basic personal rights!"

So you don't think women really ever got what our great aunts fought for?

"Freedom, equality, acceptance? That's BULLSHIT. This system still advocates and adheres to a phallic, patriarchal society, and that gets me. Ours is still a society where men have the largest slice of power, which they inevitably abuse. Men have the ultimate say. How many women still get beaten? Raped? How many are dominated, submerge their personalities, forsake their rights in the face of a male? How many women in power are there? Not enough by far. OK, so in this country a woman gets the chance to run the country, but just look at her! Censorship, something I'm really against, is getting worse, not better — in fact this whole country is stagnating rather than progressing. . . what an embarrassment to the female race!"

Lydia's pursuits since Teenage Jesus And The Jerks have taken the road of vinyl and literature, but more recently she's been involved with cult director Richard Kern in several videos. It's obvious that whatever limitations she comes up against she has the versatility to explore new mediums.

"There are two videos, The Right Side Of My Brain and Fingered. . . guess they're probably censored over here. . . I acted, co-wrote and co-directed them. They contain fairly 'explicit' scenes, but not for the sake of seedy sensationalism; it's to present things in a way that will make people think. . . to look into the true nature of what goes on and react."

These aren't exactly mainstream pieces, so how do you make money?

"I don't lead the kind of lifestyle that demands a lot of money. For instance, I have no expensive ritualistic habits. In the past 27 years I have never compromised myself intellectually, physically, or otherwise. So there is no realistic way of making cash without wasting my energy against my nature. Though I did have an idea for Lydia Lunch sex aids. . .!"

Lydia gets the thrust

check out the LP Hysterie, a compilation of her past work that's out on Widenspeak (through Rough Trade). Releases just around the corner include Honeymoon In Red, an LP she recorded with those masters of the soil, The Birthday party (RIP), preceded by the 12 inch The Crumb featuring Sonic Youth's Thurston Moore and Stinkfist, "done" with genial Jim (Foetus) Thirwell.

Currently under discussion is an 'anthological comic book', an idea which sprang from shared brainstorming with iconoclastic Nick Cave. A tape, featuring Jeffrey Lee Pierce's prose on one side and Lydia's 'therapeutic onslaught' on the other, shall also shortly be available from the ULU.

So you're not actually giving up music?

"No way! I will continue to use as many avenues as befit the various ways of expression. There are two other major forces on my label Widowspeak, namely the bands Mars and DNA."

Two bands that, musically speaking, are coming from the same place as Lydia, aka the NY 'no wave' movement circa '77. . . a movement akin to punk which destroys to build.

Do you see yourself as part of the so-called 'new flesh' movement, along with artists such as Swans, Sonic Youth, Henry Rollins and Neubauten?

"There's a strong link with Sonic Youth — the others more or less evolved around the same time, but the connection is really coincidental. What all those names do have in common is that we are all extreme, and therefore cannot but be individualistic."

Amid the free enterprise of the '80s, the misunderstood are often repressed — an obvious political example of this is the threatened reintroduction of clause 28, which intends to send homosexuality back into its closet, and against which there was a mere wave of disgust as opposed to an uprising.

Lydia: "Although we are extreme and in the minority, we are not powerless unless we make it so. That is one issue I stress again and again; it is up to us to turn around the cycle of abuse!" Beata A Burnska

letter from america

TONY FLETCHER IN TEXAS

First impressions can be misleading. Within half an hour of reaching the Lone Star State, we had witnessed a trouserless driver in a highway rest area scouting for male company, and a petrol pump attendant with a gun! But the reality is that Texans are some of the friendliest people you can hope to meet.

Where were all the JRs? Certainly the Dallas skyline, its skyscrapers' outlines lit up at night like icing on a wedding cake, remains an impressive monument to the '70s oil boom, but it is just a facade to a city of empty office space and bankrupt businesses.

Deep Ellum is the name given to the hip area in Dallas, home of enough intriguing music for Island to release a 'Sound Of Deep Ellum' compilation last year. And just in time: needless police paranoia forced many clubs to close and even succeeded in turning one hedonistic young night club entrepreneur to religion: The Prophet Bar is now strictly non-alcoholic! At Club Dada, further proof of the hippies' revenge reared its bearded, stoned head. Remember New York State's Mambo-X, from this page, three months ago? Well, The New Bohemians aren't quite as close to 10,000 Maniacs, but again the female singer has been studying Natalie Marchant, and again the musicians are perfecting sub-calypto. But The New Bohemians are definitely hippies, as was their 200-strong crowd: the only merchandise available was tie-die shirts and, like The Grateful Dead, the show went on all night. You think this is irrelevant? The New Bohemians are now on Geffen and celebrated by recording in the Druids' homeland of Wales. Do not take the threat of the hippie revival lightly.

And so to Austin, home of the biggest music scene in the south and to the second South By South West Music And Media Festival. Over four days, this regionalised convention played host to around 350 bands of all persuasions and over 100 singer-songwriters in some 27 venues around town. Almost all this musical talent was from the south, giving the event a healthy localised feel, yet it still proved important enough to entice industry executives from both coasts.

There was Eric And The Offbeats. Eric Hokkanen cutting a swathe, like a shorter Hank Williams in a double-breasted suit, cowboy hat and twintone shoes, beginning his show with some mediocre honky-tonk country. But as the evening progressed, Eric swapped from guitar to fiddle in a blink of the eye, his partner Danny doing likewise with the fiddle and the keys, and when the two dued on the bowed instrument, it was magical. Already something of a local celebrity, time will hopefully make him a legend.

Austin has thrown up some intriguing groups in the last few years — Timbuk 3, The Reivers and The Butthole Surfers being three very different examples — and from what I saw, The Wild Seeds are the next name to watch. At first sight your standard indie rock band, live they took on a potent threatening force. Occasionally aided and abetted by a strong-lunged girl (who I don't think is trying to be Natalie Marchant but you have to be careful these days) and on two songs by Richard Lloyd, they have a new album on Passport Records entitled Mud, Lies And Shame. You'll be hearing more from them.

Which can't be said of over half the bands to grace Austin over these four days of aural madness. So it was nice to see the odd quirk and peculiarity. Like The Fortune Tellers, whose singer sported a long-haired perm, a pencil moustache, a loud shirt with wide lapels and for all intents and purposes should have been a coke dealer in a 1975 episode of Hawaii 5-0. He belted out muted blues like Nick Cave on acid and attracted a dozen or so 'chicks' (as they are called here) in black leather to brighten up the dance floor.

Or, Band From Hell, whose hard-core-metal was forgettable, but whose Sid-styled bass player's destruction of his instrument at set's end was anything but. He let out a big grin when there was nothing left of it to break: there were too many guitars in Austin that weekend anyway.

Dash Rip Rock may not become world famous, but I wouldn't bet against it. From New Orleans, they are an eclectic mixture of comedy, power and obscenity. Though I only caught half their allotted 30 minutes, it was enough to witness a drummer with a voice like heaven, reworkings of spirituals and George Harrison's 'I've Got My Mind Set On You' ('I'm gonna shit on you... an it's gonna smell funky!') and fresh-from-the-grave insults to Andy Gibb and Divine, all performed with military precision.

Perhaps the most humbling event was the Tallahassee showcase, six bands who had journeyed 850 miles from Florida to play a Saturday night pool hall only to be shunned by the convention-goers and ignored by the pool players. The group members took the image of the wide variety of tribal styles they performed — a longhair here, a skinhead there, and a fat man with a goatee beard in the corner. Did anyone care? Perhaps not, but for the 20-odd band members, it meant telling the world that Tallahassee was 'not just swamps and 'gators'. If we never hear of any of them again, at least they tried.

SHEND ON THE RUN

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON NO 10: BROWNE OFF WITH BIMBO

FACT 1: Hot sun, San Miguel lager at 25p, the seaside and a relatively stable socialist government does not lead to angry spikey top discontents blasting out songs about the misery of life. Misery here seems to confine itself to the tardiness of the traffic lights changing from red to green. Even the Lords Of The New Church would have difficulty getting an LP out of that one.

The first strains of tune to caress your ears upon arrival will be one of two horrendous varieties. Either Julio Inglasias will be singing some dreary ditty about why his love ran off with a Bohemian goat herder. Or you'll discover the dubious delights of the more famous Bimbo music. This style of music takes its name from a make of stodgy, tasteless bread bought cheaply anywhere. Yes, with Snot, Aching And Wateringdown-like mixes of cretinous songs such as Sexy Girl, Hot Girl and the stupendous Give It Me Big Boy, I Need It Bad, Bad, Bad, Bad, silly teenagers with a mammary deformity prance about in their underwear and drive pot-bellied, macho, impotent retards into a frenzy of inactivity.

The worst factor of Bimbo is that after the British 18-30 holiday hooligans have returned to this island with their sombreroes, sick-stained T-shirts and strangely spotty public regions they will propel aforementioned crap high into our hallowed charts, thus ensuring doom and despondency in the rest of us till at least October.

So, is there any sign of hope in the heat? Yes, I believe there is, but it takes some finding.

Being forever on the lookout for freebies, my companion and myself accepted an invitation to view timeshare huts at Cakasuzuki (the pretty fluffy flower set in the heart of sunny loveland). Because, by doing this simple thing, we would be able to pick a free gift from a selection which included such wondrous articles as rides for two on the Whirling-Gerbil fairground ride in Malaga, a poster with a photo of your own head superimposed onto the body of some murderous bastard who, dressed as Gary Glitter, was sticking pointed sticks into a bull, or two tickets to see an independent music knockout contest at The Rigor Mortis Disco complex, just outside Marbella.

We chose the latter, and left Cakasuzuki clutching our contract for a week ownership of an unbuilt super-hut which our swarthy guide, Ricky Ace, had convinced my hypnotised companion she could not live without.

We arrived at the fluorescent giant marshmallow erection that was the Rigor Mortis at the opening time for many of these fun palaces, midnight, and ensconced ourselves in the only seats that remained untouched by the retina-shrivelling laser beams.

Here, we sipped our five quid a throw rum and Cokes (cheap drink prices do not exist in any of the world's tourist traps) and sleepily watched the pretty young things undulate to the "best" of Bimbo.

At 2am a frantic DJ introduced the competition and while exhausted dancers fled the floor in search of a vacant urinal, Side Car hit the stage.

Hailing from a village half the size of Croydon shopping precinct and situated in the mountains, these lads grappled with rockabilly as though it was a supplementary benefit form. Not knowing which song to do first they spent a third of their time quota arguing and adjusting their shades, but when they did burst into life it was as sweet as Adolf Presley's first gig. It was a big, joyous, discordant mess that left the Bimbo lovers reeling and frightened.

They got my vote, but, as the next band reminded me of The Police with Benny Hill on vocals, and the third band were called 99 On and sounded like Genesis, I left not too sure whether Spain was ready for entry into the record collections of Underground readers.

The sack of petty cash nearing emptiness convinced me to accept another free ticket to the next round of the contest from the organiser who, believing me to be the Mad Maxwell of pop Fleet Street, was foisting favours onto my undeserving shoulders. Before the big night, I wandered into Marbella harbour and, having explained to the scruffy man who leapt into my path that I was not in the least bit interested in buying a lump of Moroccan boot polish for £10, my gaze was filled by a thousand diminutive teds jiving to old '50s discs, with chewing gum sneers and Eddie Cochran quiffs. Hells' teeth! Side Car's audience had multiplied hysterically in only a few days. By the time I returned to England they would be more popular than Bobby Davro and totally unstoppable.

One may laugh arrogantly at others' attempts to create innovative music when they suffer from blanket broadcast Bimbo, and their knowledge of independent music ceases somewhere between The Communards and Samantha Fox, but the record must be straightened.

The folk I met provided first class PAs, looked after the bands with true kindness, paid the groups more than any small combo in Britain could ever hope to earn and laid on a half hourly bus service free of charge to and from the concert. Can you see The Crowbar Fun Palace in Rotherham providing such goodies?

The next round of the contest contained a band from Gibraltar called Devold Music and their dancey-Depechey-stuff was only spoiled by the singer's frequent demands for the audience to "get Funky".

As the spectators had no idea where "Funky" was, they went outside to search, and never returned.

FACT 2: At Heathrow customs they got a highly trained Alsatian to bite my suitcase several times. . . they said he could smell boot polish. The dog was a bloody liar.

I hope everyone saw Ken Russell's fabulous A B C Of British Music. I particularly admired his ingenious way of illustrating complex subjects with nude women. . . "S is for Scotland" (some Scottish-type music and a stripper). . . a Noel Coward song and some tits! . . . a piece of music about Norfolk and — oh, a pair of tits! Etcetera.

And so to radio, where the latest big story was "DJ Janice leaving the 'sexist' BBC" (Daily Mail) versus "Janice Long is to expand her coverage of 'alternative' bands on Radio 1" (Melody Maker). Would she? Wouldn't she? Did she? She said not; Fleet Street said 'rot'. However, at the last report, she was still hanging out at Broadcasting House.

April marked the 20th anniversary of the murder of Martin Luther King, whose 'dream' speech now features on a sampled dance track by The MLK Project. NME's report didn't specify whether this would be a cash-in or a tribute. However, they revealed to me an interesting fact about Star Trek, in the course of their TV O-D feature: apparently one episode was banned (and presumably remains banned) because of a romantic encounter between Captain Kirk and Lieutenant Uhura. I guessed the 23rd century wasn't such a liberated time after all.

On the subject of liberation, James Brown recently drew a lot of flak for his endorsement of the South African government in a NME interview. DM Elbourn of London wondered if Mr Brown was "several sandwiches short of a picnic", one of the few excuses not used by Status Quo in defence of their trip to Sun City. Despite having 'apologised' to the UN for their action (thus escaping the dreaded blacklist), they mysteriously maintained to Sounds that they'd done nothing wrong:

"So, what the Australians have done to the Aborigines, that's OK, is it?", pondered Francis Rossi. "What the 'Yanks' did to the 'niggers'? What they do over in Ireland? . . . If you're in Ireland and you're a Catholic, you can't get a fing job. . ."

It's all true — the old 'hypocrisy' routine — and it might even hold water if Status Quo were in the forefront of campaigns to recognise Aboriginal land rights, or to find a solution to the troubles in Northern Ireland. Correct me if I'm wrong, but I don't think they are.

Nevertheless, this summer looks like being the summer of unending benefits (except for the unemployed — yes, thank you Mrs Thatcher, I'll be sure to pass that on). Whitney Houston, Simple Minds, Sly And Robbie, Dire Straits and others will be celebrating Nelson Mandela's birthday at Wembley in June. On a slightly smaller scale, Joe Strummer's taking to the road in August, to help Rock Against The Rich attack the 'gentrification of the inner cities'.

Joseph will also lend support to Amnesty International's festival at Milton Keynes in June, along with Aswad, The Wedding Present, Spear Of Destiny and Motorhead. That's assuming the event doesn't get banned: Al recently provoked rage in the ranks of the Tory party by requesting an inquiry into the Gibraltar shootings of three IRA terrorists.

The possibility of 'extra-judicial executions' should be profoundly disturbing to anyone who remembers the near-murder of Stephen Waldorf a few years ago. Personally, I don't feel like getting shot and pistol-whipped in the middle of the street — but Britain is a nation which has always been more keen to expose human rights abuses in other countries than to acknowledge its own.

Still, at least Britain respects the rights of pop stars. Sounds reckons they'll come back to settle in droves following the latest budget's tax cut (though they warn that 'new noses and blood changes are hard to get on the financially-starved NHS'). I recall, in the mid-'70s, being frequently informed by Nationwide of the Labour government's worst sin; forcing the likes of the Bay City Rollers into tax exile. Well, Maggie hasn't quite managed to bring them back, but she can have my vote any time: so what if she's stolen and flogged most of the industries of which I used to be part-owner? She's lured back that warm and wonderful human being, Tom Jones. Tom Jones? Welsh! Cue some Welsh music and a stripper with a Welsh hat — Oh shut up, Ken.

NAG NAG NAG

Being a staunch Cabaret Voltaire fan, I'm in mourning. Mourn, mourn. Could you rustle up some kind of article on them, something for their 15 years? — John Wood, Sandbach Sure, why the hell not. Our ed seems to have interviewed the CV's every year since their inception, so let's see if we can't do an intelligent (?) resume in the next issue.

OBSCURIST FRENZY

A few facts for people who heard The Vandals on your recent tape. The Vandals are American, not Australian, and their first release was Peace Thru Vandalism, a six-track mini-album on Epitaph. Their When In Rome LP was originally released in the States on National Trust, then it was licensed to Hybrid for the UK. In my opinion, Ladykiller is the worst track ever done by The Vandals. Apart from that, how about some more hardcore info? — Richard Kilby, York

Richard takes over as tape compiler next week. Yes, we thought America and Australia were so culturally similar that we made that location error, although we knew the rest of that stuff. . . we just didn't have any room to print it. Still, we here think that Ladykiller is their finest and the reason for using it was because it's a lot more accessible than their other tracks and hopefully new Vandals fans might be sucked into their way of thinking.

As for h'core info, next issue sees thrash perspective by the honchoes from Grim Humour mag and they'll be following that up each month with the beat of what's burning.

ANGRY

I am shocked and disappointed at Underground's insistence on tackling subjects above its status. Robert Cohen's Big Comment is nothing but a cheap stab at the "Inky weeklies", something that Sounds, MM and NME already do enough to bore us all silly anyway. And now Gush is slagging anything which isn't indie. This smacks of ignorance and inverted snobbery. I was under the impression that Ug was there to communicate the merits of specialised music to the public at large. This sort of thing only succeeds in ghettoising the alternative scene even more. Please, Underground, be more positive in future and stick to what you're best at — good interviews and hard facts. — Richard Gossington, Leyton

Robert Cohen's Big Comment is about to be enlarged rather than dissolved. The idea is to place the

Got a gripe? Want to vent your spleen? Or give someone a pat on the back, even? Write to us at Underground, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 music that we write about in a bigger perspective and not to ghettoise it. Just because you don't like something, it doesn't mean you should just ignore it — although in the case of the weeklies it might be a good idea.

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF IT SO FAR?

The Flatmates interview (Ug issue 13) was pathetic, merely confirming that they are the village idiots of the indie scene. I don't know who's more stupid, The Flatmates, their fans, or you for wasting the centre spread on such worthless rubbish. I really can't believe that you feel your readers want to read this sort of thing! Simon Le Bot, Clevedon

Sure, the group didn't really come out of the feature looking like Mastermind contestants, it was conducted on a reasonably flippant level, but that's the kind of image they have nurtured. The Flatmates are a 'happening' act in as much as they've just toured with The Wedding Present, their most recent single scraped the bottom of the national charts and they have the potential to break much bigger. Personally, I thought it was quite funny.

PTV

Everybody's favourite subversives, Psychic TV, have just released the final cut in a series of Live LPs. Number ten arrives in the form of a limited edition (1,000 only) picture disc which is only available to diehards who've collected the previous nine. Genesis P Orridge, however, has kindly offered to give one of these rare items and a DJ's promo copy of the next PTV single to two Underground readers who can answer his question.

Genesis speaks: "Welcome to The House Of Fun. The new PTV single is an acid house dance track titled Love War Riot and features throughout the slogan 'turn on, tune in and drop out'. It was an (in)famous statement made by a respected (?) American luminary. Who was it?" Answers on a cosmic postcard to Underground/PTV Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ. No later than May 10, please.

SHACK

A dozen Shack LPs for the taking and all you have to do to win one of these illustrious items is tell us what it's called! A dead giveaway we know, but that's the kind of guys we are. Send all answers to Underground/Shack Competition, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ to reach here by May 10 or else!

PRIMITIVES

Wanna win a Primitives album? The first dozen correct entries out of the cupboard will receive a spanking brand new copy of Lovely by Tracey and the gang. Just answer us this: Which Primitives 45 preceded the current Crash single? Answers on something interesting to Underground/Primitives, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1, by May 10!

WIN OUT! COMPETITION WINNERS!

So amazingly overwhelming was the response to our Corn Dollies competition in issue 12 that it's taken the Underground team two months to sort out the winners. Well, that's our excuse and we're sticking to it! Still, after slogging hard through literally sacks of mail we've managed to whittle the entries down to five lucky winners who all knew that there were four Corn Dollies. So, John Pinnington from Oxon, Clive Fenwick from Cheshire, Debbie Ghant from Stowmarket, Kevin Keenan from London and Roy Barks from Penn, each get a Dollies seven incher and a T shirt.

BLACK FLAG III

Wasted Again. Imagine if your favorite Flag party tunes of all time were put together in a room. Then, the room was filled with hundreds of your best friends. Before the cops come, you better slap on Wasted Again, a collection of all the songs that make you want to party. Six Pack, T.V. Party, Wasted, Rise Above and twelve more festive Flag tunes. SST 166

Who's Got The 10 1/2? This release catches the Flag unfurled one night in Portland, Oregon. LP, 40 minutes, cassette, 70 minutes. Either version has enough Flag fury to raise the dead. Contains My War, Loose Nut, and Louie, Louie. SST 060

In My Head. Nine new Flag songs. Produced by Greg Ginn, this 1985 release of crunching rock tunes like Drinking And Driving and Retired At 21 destroys. Cassette features three bonus tracks. SST 045

Annihilate This Week. The ultimate party anthem of all time is backed with Best One Yet and Sinking on this smoking twelve-inch by Black Flag. These three are available only on his disc and the cassette (SST 060). SST 081

The Process Of Weeding Out. Greg, Kira and Bill combine on this 1985 recording of four instrumental cuts of pure Flag fever. Screw The Law, The Last Affront, Southern Rise, and the title track. SST 037

Loose Nut. 1985 saw this release of nine slabs of Flag's potent blend of metal and madness. Greg, Kira, Henry and Bill combine to create classics like Bastard In Love, Annihilate This Week plus seven. SST 035

Slip It In. Released in 1984, this Flag album has Kira, Bill, Henry and Greg working through eight pile-driving songs like Slip It In, Black Coffee, My Ghetto and You're Not Evil. SST 029

Family Man. 1984 saw the release of this stunning record that showcases the diversity of Black Flag. Side one contains nine riveting readings by Henry of his poetry. Side two has four instrumentals with bassist Kira. SST 026

My War. This pivotal 1984 release features nine blasts of primal power. Henry and Greg are joined by Dale Nixon (Greg Ginn) on bass and Bill Stevenson on drums for My War, Nothing Left Inside, I Love You and six more. SST 023

BLACK FLAG: Everything Went Black. A compilation released in 1983, this record examines the eras of Flag before Henry. Johnny Bob, Chavo and Dez plus outrageous radio ads. Songs include Gimme, Gimme, Gimme (three versions), My Rules and Louie Louie. SST 015

Damaged. Recorded in 1981, the songs on this LP defined an era. Dez Cadena has moved to guitar, and Henry Rollins takes over as vocalist. Stunning dual guitar Flag on: Rise Above, Damaged I & II, and 15 others.

The First Four Years. Sixteen classic BLACK FLAG aural nots. Originally appeared on SST 001, 003, 005, PBS 13 (infamous Louie Louie single) and two cuts from New Alliance compilations. SST 021

Jealous Again. It's 1980 and Greg, Chuck and Robo have a new singer named Chavo. Together these four produced an american classic. Tracks include title song, Revenge, White Minority, No Values and You Bet We've Got Something Personal Against You. SST 003

Nervous Breakdown. The breakdown heard around the world in 1978. Greg Ginn, Chuck Dukowski, Brian Migdol and Keith Morris sing and play the title track plus Fix Me, I've Had It and Wasted. SST 001

Live '84. This is an amazingly accurate portrayal of Black Flag live in concert. The Flag roar through Six Pack, My War, Jealous Again, Slip It In, Black Coffee and fourteen other incomparable Flag tunes. SST 030

Six Pack. Yet another vocalist for Flag, this time in the person of one Dez Cadena. Joining up with Greg, Chuck and Robo, Dez lends his vocal talents to Six Pack, I've Heard It Before and American Waste. SST 005

TV Party. The dual guitars of Greg and Dez fuel these three songs recorded in 1982. Bill Stevenson and Emil share drum duties on TV Party, My Rules and I've Got To Run. SST 012

The Shamen: a laugh, a smile, a hymn

SHAMEN CHALLENGE GOD!

A game of two halves says a spokesperson

I say, old bean, it's not been The Shamen Brothers month, has it? After their dismissal from the McEwans advertising campaign due to the group's Happy Days track being anti government, the company discovered that the group "advocated" LSD and used pornographic films in their live shows. They instructed the promoters of Glasgow's Mayfest to drop them from the bill.

Furthermore, religious gremiins began franking the group's mail with the slogan 'Jesus Is Alive'. Hold on matey!!! And just when they were about to release their anti-fundamentalist 'Christian' tirade Jesus Loves Amerika as a single on Ediesta. Well, hey. . . The Shamen throw caution to the wind and stand in the face of ridicuie as they head roadways on their Jesus Is A Lie tour (subtle spelling difference, eh?). By the time you read this they'll be adding further dates or will have been arrested by a bible-punching bimbeite! Stamp them out. . . and place your hand on the screen.

AAAAAAAARGH! THE blonde wave is here... not content to wrap themselves around our top spots, the generation of "raunchy post-Blondie blondes", attempting to punk-out of the Patsy Kensit fad, are already grabbing at the heels of The Primitives. The Darling Buds would probably never have raised a titter if it weren't for their peroxide flutter, Switzerland's Chin Chin wouldn't have been so welcome and The Flatmates wouldn't have slaughtered The Wedding Present at pool, if, you know. (Well, maybe.)

The latest in this long line of teeny Amazonian-types is former "Wild Child" Emma Ridley, who's already married (age seven) and is now embarking on a solo career with the release of her first 45, a cover of Alice Cooper's School's Out. Well, The Rhythm (or timing) Sisters it is not. But everyone's got to start somewhere. Or have they?

Back in '77, everyone and his dog turned blonde for the sheer dandruff-hiding of it all. Billy Idol — that youth, youth, youth — fronted Generation X and wailed how he was "trying to forget your generation", so strange that he should seem intent on repeating everyone but his own these days. His latest cover is a tacky rendition of Golden Earrings' Radar Love. Surprisingly enough, it sucks. Still, there's life after punk for former Buzzcock Howie Devoto in Luxuria, but what about Pete Shelley? Well, the man who launched a thousand Soup Dragons' songs is now wallowing under the name Zip with some less than appetising dance fodder.

More from the past? Yes, Joy Division's Love Will Tear Us Apart rears its tuneful brow again, with a cover version by SWANS looking likely to hurl that American alternative into the laps of the pre-pubescent. A fine version it is too, just bettering PJ Proby's searing Sinatra-esque reading, but surely they'll have to watch that Factory don't relaunch the original as the Joy Division Substance package finally emerges. Or maybe Strange Fruit will muster a Peel Sessions version. For ardent Underground readers, let's just say that we were intent on revealing who had won the competition to guess the 50th title in the Peel Sessions series in last month's issue. The prize, you may recall, was a year's worth of releases, but alas no-one got it right. There were sacks of replies, but no-one said 'The Cure'. Perhaps, no-one wanted the Cure... we seem to get quite enough of them these days anyway.

The Cure have become a tried and tested part of rock music's '80s scene, setting standards to be broken, equalled, cajoled or consumed. But, at least they are the acceptable face of pop, the smirking adolescents that grimaces behind Bros. And with that trio of starlets in mind, let's begin today by launching the ANTI-BROS PETITION. Let's rid our shores of these spotty quiffers. Let's strangle pimple-rock at birth. Signators for the anti-Bros campaign send your postcards to Underground-Anti-Bros, Greater London House, Spotlight Publications, Hampstead Road, London NW1. The war is on.

& FICTION

THE XXXX SESSIONS

The Chrysanthemums take a leaf out of Peelie's book and release a XXXX Session with a Strange Fruit copy sleeve, listing several million acts who've never had a Peel session. The platter includes five fab gear tracks and an etching on side two. Bizarre? You bet, but lovable all the same. Word up from 8 Denis Close, Leicester LE3 6DQ.

OH, JACK... didn't you say that Robyn Hitchcock had signed a mega deal? Right... Yeah, that's right. He's a popular guy, on A&M y'know! Crazyhead are popular too... they've been studio-bound — as we say in the biz — and pretty damn fine their debut Food album should be. That'll be available through EMI in August.

The independent heirarchy may be returning to its roots, but Food are taking the bread to the majors, and Sweatbox have floated their shares to raise megabucks for promotion of the '70s-sampled, soon-to-chart second single from Meat Beat Manifesto, that's if Simon Bates can get his dentures around the name. Green On Red follow up the rumours of their demise by signing (in one form or another) to Red Rhino. New album real soon, too. In Tape have lapped up Robert Lloyd with his first solo LP after the demise of The Nightingales, and the label also promises two mega-bands from Manch, real soon.

At Blast First, the word is that label boss Paul Smith is set to take the whole kaboodle to the States (he was last seen en route to a bar-be-cue with The Butthole Surfers in Texas). Paul's partner in management (Cabaret Voltaire, Miaow), Amrik Ria looks set to follow, taking his FUN label and portable telephone/office with him.

Simon McPartland (8 Mayne Road, Elgin, Scotland) is busy, but not emigrating. He's putting together a cassette of groovy demos and would be interested in hearing fab-gear samples of stuff! Help him, ladies and gentlemen!

The Wedding Present... well, they threaten a Ukrainian LP (taken from their diverse Ukrainian Peel sessions) around September time, while the enterprising Reaction label is still creating compilations of acts for promo purposes only. Groups involved get a track each, supply a press kit and the whole thing is mailed to A&R departments and press people. They can be contacted at Hemingborough Hall, Hemingborough, North Yorkshire, Y08 7QS, where they're currently hawking Underground Resistance III — which includes notable tracks from Des Tor, The Nearly Band and Shakedown — plus Sample And Hold — with tracks from Hotline To Mos- cow, Johnny Guitar, Primary and the wonderfully-named Potato Head. Already signed are Yargo — the Mancunian soul alternatives — whose excellent Bodybeat album has just arrived in CD format too. And, set to reap massive press without even existing is Cassius Clay, the latest signing (rumoured) to Medium Cool. More factual, perhaps, is the news that the excellent Coltraines are to sign to the label. Seek and love.

Weird award this month goes to the mysterious Julian who supplied a 15-minute version of Swan Lake recorded with bucket, bucket of water, tapes and guitar. Wow! (Contact: 42 Badminton Road, Newport, Gwent NP9 7NH.)

The Final Image label has a compilation, The Nocturnal Compilation, due with tracks from Muslingauze, Biting Tongues, Human Flesh, Pump, O Yuki Conjugate and more, while Cathexis Records begin their giant Total campaign, an audio-literary package which focuses on a different subject for each release. The first one looks at Global Manipulation and features tracks from Chris And Cozey, Flux, Coil, Jass and more, accompanied by a magazine. Looks like Demon are set to add a new label to their roster. Diablo will be launched in June and will feature American bands in one-off deals (in much the same way that Zippo has operated). So far six bands have been penciled in for releases. . . more news as it happens.

Last month's page three starlets, Johnny Marr and Colin Lloyd-Tucker seem to be making a go of it, and Colin phoned our editor, at way past his bedtime to complain that he didn't go to see Jethro Tull as our story suggested. Well, we did.

AS SEEN ON TV!

Recognise this man? Do you know who this strapping Celtic supporter is? Yes, it's that used car salesman and part-time poet, Richard Jobson when he was in The Skids some centuries ago. Now, there was a band, and nary a splack be squiffed in their spleep!

Head: regular Blue Velvet fans

HEAD

SCENE ONE — THE PARTY

Richard Beals: "You lot stay here, I'm going off to investigate!" This is typical! Only Head could throw this type of promotional party and still come up smelling of something mighty suspicious! While Richard Beals is off "investigating" the drink runs fast and furious and there's even a very civilised selection of food available for the less debauched among us. We're assembled to witness the "coming out" of Sin Bin, Head's new 45 on Virgin, their first on a major label. The extravagance of this party may be a testament to their new found accessibility but the spirit (if, indeed, there is such a thing,) still runs deep. . . as we shall see. Were the course of true justice a straighter path, Sin Bin would see Head speeding toward the centre spreads of teeny mags everywhere. That probably won't happen just yet because as we all know by now, Justice, just isn't.

The Joan Collins Fan Club minces around the stage, and even Fanny The Wonder Dog seems to be sneering at us. Yes, it is his/her job to poke pun at the music press this evening and while half of us are cowering behind pillars the other half are laughing brazenly, lest we should be considered bad sports! Like I said, this could only be Head's doing. Richard has completed his investigation and is reporting back to base. Nick Shepherd looks decidedly chuffed. "I never knew we had so many friends!"

The start of music as we know it. Head's new LP, Tales Of Ordinary Madness, drips with filmic unreality. . .

SCENE TWO — THE PREVIOUS DAY IN SOME HORRIBLE ROCK AND ROLL PUB IN LONDON

I am sitting in the presence of three schoolboy chums who grew up to become Head. They are Richard Beals, Gareth Sager and Nick Shepherd, although they insist they are really some people called Birty Beals, Hamilton Macademicals and Chopper Harris. Oh well.

Head, it has to be said, are hardly the most fashionable of bands, and I suppose that is all in keeping with the image. Isn't it?

Gareth: Are we the antithesis of everything a fashionable band should be? I suppose we are. Yes."

Richard: "No! I think we're everything a fashionable band should be. Some people might not think my trousers are fashionable but where I come from these are the things to be seen in!"

This prompts much raucous laughter from the other members of the band. Head, you see I have a velveteen approach to fashion. In fact, today Richard and Gareth look like a pair of ill-matching curtains, and they are quite seriously insulted when I ask if they've made these designer items themselves! The real point is, of course, that Head's new LP Tale of Ordinary Madness contains ten very good rock songs — Sin Bin is the perfect single and 1,000 Hangovers has more than enough epic grandeur to see U2 through a whole concept album.

So, what sort of people like Head? Nick: "People who react favourably to charm — genuine charm."

Gareth: "People with a twinkle in their eye."

Richard: "I think we're already aware that we're tickling the fancy of a wide range of people, you can't pin them down that easily."

Nick: For a long time Britain has been that sort of place where you're either this, that, or the other. Life isn't like that. Why should we be like that? Sometime were horrible and sometimes we're wonderful, and that's normal."

Gareth: "We're saying come out of the closet and be yourselves!"

Richard: 'That's why an honest sexuality is so important with Head, so many people tamper with a safe sexuality, but Head are saying 'Right, let's get the whole thing out in the open'. You have to get things out of your system, you can prolong it or do it immediately and Head say 'be immediate'.

SCENE THREE — NUMBER 7T3 LATER THAT YEAR.

Well, OK. . . but you never know. . . Alex Kadis

WIN OUT!

It's all systems go in the Head camp these days! What with a new Virgin deal and the release of their rather good Sin Bin 12-incher, Head are now preparing to release their appropriately titled second LP, Tales Of Ordinary Madness. And talking of things mad, was anyone fortunate enough to catch an eyeful of the Sin Bin vid? If you were then you'll remember seeing various members of the band cavorting all over the shops with footballs! Well, Ug has one of the those very footballs, personally kicked and signed by Head, to give to the first person who can tell us what Head's debut album was called. Runners up get a signed LP which can't be bad, can it?! Answers to Underground/Head, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ by June 13.

A MESSAGE FROM OUR SPONSORS

POP FAX with the Girl From Wahoo Country, USA (with the even richer mommy who still owns Ug.)

Hi Guys, I'm here again, by popular demand. The request by the editor for the return of the Underground company bubble-car was headed "Final Demand", so Cyndi just knows she's loved and, seeing as I gave the auto to some poor wino on the tube who asked me for a drink, I'd better be good (am I supposed to carry a crate of Beaujolais around with me?).

So, what fax has the first lady of vinyl got for you today. Well, I spoke to Timmy Saville about the "Scene" and, as he was rich as well, we got on fine and I even bought one of his kinky tracksuits, but as it was drenched with man-smell I had to bin it.

These Sugarcubes, I hear, are from Iceland, which I thought was a freezer centre, but it's a country, too. Hell, who would call a country Iceland? Still there's a good old American base on it, so it can't be that backward. Raoul Collic from Radio FRXQB, Seattle says 'Sugarcubes' are a "transmogrification of a subliminal quasi-ethos", but I don't know what the hell he's talking about.

I went to see Terence, Trent And D'Arby at a gig, but only one of them turned up. No-one seemed to mind and they all shrieked, just like at a Bruce 'The Bus' Springsteen concert. Bruce turned up at one of my Mom's balls last year, and though we watched him all night, he didn't do a single disgusting thing.

I'm real freaked by the amount of young kids over here who are into satanic groups like Missions and Jesus Chain Mary. I mean, look at their eyes, they're so brain-dead, they have to wear shades. I saw Spit On Your Gravel IV so I know what kind of spiritual dilemma they're in. So, send 200 dollar to the Rev Blayz, now Mr Hussy, and help him save those poor fallen women (I'm not sure why they need two-way mirrors and implements of medieval torture, but God's Limo must cruise in the slow lane of sin sometimes.)

What's with your quaint little label huh! In the States indie labels like EMT, ICI, and CBS have grasped Uncle Reagan's business sense. They keep their names snappy and put their tag on products we all use, like designer jeans, perfume, kangaroo skin accoutrement bags, and short range weaponry. Whereas Brit record companies have crummy windbag names like 4AD and Fire. Hell, the only four letter word that ever made money out of music was David Bowie!

Cyndi has to split now, so keep those party invites pouring in, hang loose and I'll see you at the Miami Wet Trunk Video jock Awards.

Life in a day with Wonderstuff, as relayed to Dick Mescal

The enticing, and aptly entitled, The Wonder Stuff, a chirpy bunch of gifted proto-grebes from out Birmingham way, have just seen their third single, the mouth-watering Give Give Give Me More More More, flirting with the nether regions of the charts. The brash and greedy number is a thoroughly raucous and totally irresistible tune that's their first to receive major distribution as their Far Out Recording Company, a legacy of a win on the pools, is now linked up with Polydor Records. Their last single, the exhilarating Unbearable, had already made serious inroads into the indie charts last year as well as topping many end of year polls.

So, to let you know just what it's like to be a member of a fast up-and-coming beat combo, we bring you an Ug Guide to A Day In The Life of The Wonder Stuff!

7.00am: Early morning wake-up call, from the desk of the spectacularly uninteresting Royal Court Hotel, Sloane Square, rouses our four heroes who promptly fall back to sleep!

7.10am: Room service delivers breakfast to loud groans.

7.50am: Panic sets in! Eat breakfast, now consisting of cold toast, cold coffee and a selection of those little marmalade packs, taken for later consumption.

7.55am: Get dressed and see to ablutions, including the impossible task of flushing away last night's vicious curry!

8.10am: Having eventually rounded everyone up, manager Les prods all concerned into infamous tour van for breakneck journey down A40 to studios for today's video shoot for the current single.

9.15am: Arrive flustered and late in cold hangar-like studios.

9.45am: Still waiting for something to happen, so send out the studio runner to gather supplies of chewing gum and Alka-Seltzer, the last to settle sore bottoms still ravaged by last night's aforementioned curry!

1.30pm: Still waiting for director and crew to finish positioning the set when the canteen van turns up for lunch.

1.50pm: During lunch, purely liquid one for The Bass Thing, the news arrives that they have made the front-page of a revered music weekly. This barely interrupts eating, which is a far more important activity, anyway.

2.00pm: Our four heroes, vocal guitarist Miles Hunt, guitaring vocalist Malcolm Treece, drummer Martin Gilks and Rob 'The Bass Thing' Jones are cornered in their dressing room by your intrepid Ug reporter and forced to succumb to Fill it up, mate!

Denture just love them?

the dreaded 'interview situation; where they are tortured until they reveal the answers to such penetrating questions as their views on the importance of the role of flared socks in the history of rock, and equally mind-blowing, the political significance of the rise of the Chaffinch in jokes currently appearing out of the Black Country!

The journo gathers himself. . .

Is there a connection between The Wonder Stuff's beaty, guitar thrash and the glam-boogie, of early Marc Bolan?

Miles believes not. "I like him but I've never really studied him."

Martin quickly retorts with "He bought his old wig, though" a reference to Miles' corkscrew hair! Unphased, Miles continues, "It just seemed that then there was a lot of tunes, whereas now a lot of records just seem to be sold on a beat."

Hmmm. Yes.

3.00pm: Action at last, as they are called one by one to make-up. This illicit various 'girly' remarks. (as expected.)

3.30pm: Called on to the set to check their positions. They have been through all this before but they only had an hour when making their own low-budget video for Unbearable as part of a conveyor belt of bands, it sounds a recipe for disaster, but it turned out to be an inventive effort that got a fair deal of exposure on the likes of MTV and Night Network.

"It was terrible," Martin recalls, "We were pissed out of our faces. When we'd sobered up we went back and did the edit really fast, putting this sort of grainy effect over the top and chucking in loads and loads of images from all over the place, coming in really fast, which really suited the song."

So video is art!

4.00pm: By now the band have already done a fair number of run throughs of the song on the stark white set which is punctuated only by vast multi-coloured letters depicting the song title. Enthusiasm is already beginning to wane, but being plucky chaps and mindful of the end result, they continue to mime to the song time after time with nary a complaint.

By the nth re-run, your Ug reporter has had enough and decides to leave them to it, knowing full well that after all this, many hours will be spent in an editing suite making sense of this chaos before the resulting masterpiece will reach your TV screens! As for The Wonder Stuff, they are going to be at this until 12.00 midnight, although it could have been longer if there wasn't a curfew on the video crew! Rock 'N' Roll - Phew!

Wonderstuff: big mouths!

Felt release two new LPs over the next month, Peter Perturbed leaps from Brooklyn Bridge in amazement

Lawrence in the shadow

LAWRENCE SPEAKS

As summer approaches and everybody sneezes a lot, Felt prepare for a burst of mayhem and activity. Lawrence, of Felt, has been telling Peter Perturbed all about it. . .

COMPLETELY INSANE FELT FRONT-MAN IN 'NORMAL' SHOCK!

Erm, no, well I wouldn't say normal exactly, but I'd be lying if I was to say that someone with a pathologically clean flat, a cheese phobia, a car full of litter and a distaste for ABBA wasn't exactly non-eccentric. They call him. . . "Lawrence"!
Age: "26."
Occupation "Songwriter."
Notable achievements: "Making Primitive Painters, a record, with The Cocteau Twins."
Desired Mode of Death: "Being thrown off the Brooklyn Bridge weighed down by my first edition Kerouacs."
Who would you most like to be: "Nastassja Kinski."

How many Nolan sisters can you name? "Erm. . . Coleen. . ."

Reading matter: "The World of Interiors."

Admired peers: "Andy Warhol."

Admired piers: "I've only seen a few and I thought they were all crap."

Death list: "I'd never kill anybody. No, not even Anne Diamond."

Miscellaneous likes: "Victorian door handles."

Favourite Suzanne Vega song: "Small Blue Thing."

Favourite Brazilian footballer: "None. I hate them all."

Favourite Rainbow character: "I used to like Zippy when I was younger but I hate them all now."

Political leanings: "I hate politics. I've no interest in it. I know nothing about it."

Name two Men Without Hats songs: God! F! What was that song called? I can't but . . . shit no. Not for the want of trying though."

What was the most beautiful thing you ever saw?: A girl. In a wet dream."

Is it someone you imagined or does she exist?: "Well, when you have a wet dream, right, you don't know them, but they're the girl that you're really looking for, right? But they only come into a wet dream. And they're sort of like 'love-dreams'. I've only ever had about four in my life. And you think it's actually happening. I think the only time I've ever known what love is, is in a wet dream."

What's the ugliest thing you ever saw?: "Olive from On The Buses in the nude. I've got a Celebrities In The Nude magazine, and Olive's in it."

Favourite question: "Can I take your clothes off?"

THIS IS LAWRENCE AND HE'S COMPLETELY MAD!!!

Oh dear. As the proceedings unravel, Lawrence seems to gradually disown about half the things he's said. The main characteristic that shines forth from his discourse is his tremendous self-consciousness. Taking over half a minute to answer some questions, you can hear his brain vibrating in that little head, gathering all the necessary words, collating them, and producing exactly the answer he wants to give. Except he follows it up with a worried disdain for his thoughts. Next to Lawrence, Woody Allen would seem like a brutish tower of strength.

Do you mind being seen as eccentric?

"It doesn't matter. No-one wants to know."

There was a feature in Record Mirror a while ago which listed ten supposedly weird things about you.

"That's a load of rubbish. Nancy Culp wants to know what's hap-

Who the hell is Edward Barton?

Edward Barton? You know him! He's the man who had no chicken but had five wooden chairs. What? Then there was the other single, Me And My Mini. He made two classic frenzied appearances on The Tube, he looks very strange, and when he sings he appears to be in the tight grip of a violent fit.

Edward Barton is the last of the great eccentrics. He sits cross-legged on his home-made wooden throne and tells me that he writes songs "the way that they should be written." Where the great man's previous efforts have featured a unique guitar accompaniment ("I'm the best Edward Barton-style guitarist there is"), his new EP Belly Box Brother Gob features that much neglected percussive instrument, the stomach (on I Slap My Belly). On Knob Gob angst is taken to a brand new level — that old problem of getting one's knob in one's gob is discussed, while, Telephone Box is Brief Encounter Barton-style and Everyday I Try To Find The Man That Killed My Brother is self-explanatory really.

Is Edward Barton mad? "A journalist once said that I was 'mad', but 'mad' is synonymous with dangerous. . . and I'm dangerous to no-one."

Except, quite possibly, to himself, of course.

The Barton 'style' has changed little since his first appearances three or four years ago. The content follows a familiar path, the songs invariably reflect the life of Edward's brother who shares his house. "He's in Thailand at the moment — so that things can happen to him and I can write about them."

Teamwork! If the raw material comes from his brother, where does he draw the inspiration to write the songs?

"From sitting here in my wooden room. I can pretend that I'm in Canada."

Edward has a love of wood — not the polished variety you understand, but things like railway sleepers and splintered planks. He even named his record label after it — Wooden Records. It will release five more records this year; Edward's been saving 18 months to finance these.

And his work's not without admirers — James took him on tour with them a couple of years ago and Stump have recently done the same. Admiration is not something the considers to be important though. . . "I don't mind if people want to hit me or kiss me." If you ever witness him in action, chances are you'll be too dumbstruck to consider either. Craig Ferguson

Barton: give me wood!

Gary Ainge

opening with Creation bands so she can fill up some space. It's just space-filling. I think it's just crap myself."

In All The People I Like Are Those That Are Dead, you sing "Maybe I should entertain the very fact that I'm insane".

"It wasn't about me, that song. It wasn't about anything specific."

Are your compositions based on personal experience?

"No. There's only about five that actually happened."

How about Ballad Of The Band? On that you said you felt like giving in.

"No. I never felt like giving in. It was about the fact that circumstances could make you give in if you weren't stronger. Like I say, most of the songs aren't real. Most of the stuff is just abstract lyrics, isn't it?"

Are your lyrics a metaphor for certain more specific things then? (There follows a pause longer than the Mississippi. Ladies and gentlemen, this is indeed a pause of epic proportions; a real Grand Canyon of the pause world. A pause so long in fact, that I have to clear my throat to see if I've gone deaf. I let the dramatic effect mount to such an unbearable state of high drama that I have to follow it up with another question that requires the same answer as the last one. . .) Or are they more phonetic?

"I don't know. It's all different. Some of them are real and some of them are abstract. It's boring to talk about. I don't think it's interesting for the reader."

A month after the release of Pictorial Jackson Review is approximately when another Felt LP hits the nation. Train Above The City is conspicuously Lawrenceless; the brainchild of Gary Ainge, the drummer, and Martin Duffy, who Lawrence has no hesitation in labelling the best keyboard player of the 1980s. It was made for £150 and is indeed a strange affair. My first reaction upon hearing it was uncontrollable laughter, but rest assured, it begins to make sense. Despite this apparent cocktail-bar-at-the-Hilton-music being a slightly more radical departure than the six o'clock express to Neptune, it's an extremely refreshing record. Meanwhile. . .

Don't you ever feel the urge to make a disco record?

"No, I don't like dance music at all. I don't aspire to rhythmic writing. I'm not into rhythmic music. I'm into melody."

If Felt's music had a fragrance what would it be? (A pause of 33 seconds elapsed (I counted) before a stumped Lawrence concedes) "Can I answer that later?" Hah!

Which do you consider to be more orange; oranges or carrots?

"Oh, I don't wanna answer that one! That's really bad, that question (laughs). . . I mean, that is really bad! No offence."

STOCK AITKEN AND WATERMAN TO PRODUCE FELT SHOCK!

Do you think you'd be at all suited to a major label? "Yes, we are."

But your music is so uncommercial it hurts. "I disagree."

Are we talking about the same charts? "We are suited to a major. Definitely."

Do you expect people to listen to your first album in a different way to the new one? (Bursts into rather loud laughter). "I don't know. They might stand on their heads to listen to this one."

What's your bag, maaaaan? "This Peddlers and Michael Nesmith who's the most consistent artist in the history of pop music."

What about ABBA? "I can't stand ABBA. I hate ABBA. I hate famous groups. When it comes down to it I'm an arty person. I know I'm a kind of art-loving person; Art-in-music loving person."

Lawrence says he likes poetry and hates jokes; this assertion could give me an ideal opportunity to have a giggle at this poetry, but I think I'll leave you with a little tester.

Which of the following three is not a Felt song? . . .

- a) Crumbling The Antiseptic Beauty
- b) Sunlight Bathed In Golden Glow
- c) Silvery Fleet Of Shimmering Pegasus Spectres Gliding Through The Phantom Sunrise At The Dawn Of Genesis.

Life and how to abuse it!

PRANKIN'

The Re/Search publishing company — formerly a magazine, latterly a series of books featuring diverse talents such as Throbbing Gristle, JG Ballard, Cabaret Voltaire, SPK and stuff — has its latest series of books published. Pranks is a highly entertaining collection featuring the wild antics of various members of the avant-crowd and is available through Rough Trade Shop or Compendium Books in London. It has the lowdown on Timothy Leary, Jello Biafra, Monte Cazazza, John Giorno, John Waters, Karen Finley and many more.

RAW!

Latest collection of illustrative monsters from the Raw Graphic stable is a book of skin-flick terror detections called Hard-Boiled Defective Stories. Created by Charlie Burns, it's a scribbler's daydream come to life with some ace stories. Available through Pantheon/Raw, selected bookstores or subversive dives around the planet.

HAND-ETCH. . .

Who is Pighead? The man, the myth, the groovy little xerox and staple selection that slapped on the private dick's desk said,

"Steve Albini doesn't seem to like Jello Biafra, Or anyone else for that matter, Cynical man, Bit of an. . . really."

Hmmmm. Cryptic, cynical art that says "the BMX Boys grew up and formed bands". Confused? You bet. . .

TRAPPED!!!!!!

Venus Fly Trap's slow realisation has seen releases in a number of formats in various territories. It would be juvenile to admit their haunting guitar noise as schlock goth, but many lesser organs have thrown that shroud. Instead, have a glance at their four track video package available. In that, even the most blatant of psychedelic self-abusers will be able to discover new colours. Phone them for details on 0604-250662.

ANGRY

Well, perhaps Man's Hate Prods aren't angry, but they're making a noise that's certainly something different. The cassette-only release Forward Into The Abyss is a cross between folkly strumming and lyrically-brained industrial slang. This is the kind of music that's scurrying under the floorboards of the squats of the rich-but-politically-unaware. In a sense this tape is sub-standard pop, less than Hawkwind, hippie-esque (almost laughable) but on the other fist, well, this at least has got something to say. (Details from Andi, 154 Alexandra Road, Peterborough, Cambs PE1 3DL.)

PEACHY

The Peach Thieves play zany twangpop on their debut flexi single, Out Of The Nowhere. They go whole-heartedly macgroovoid and suggest that you write for a copy to the Uncle label, Three Low Farm Close, Lindal-in-Furness, Cumbria. Go on, spoil y'self.

10 THINGS YOU NEVER KNEW ABOUT LEN LIGGINS

Len: a yodelling madman

1 He is affectionately known by the locals as 'Beethoven' — not because of any particular classical leaning, but because he's going deaf.

2 His first EP, the seven inch, A Remedy For Bad Nerves featured a track called Basil Purdy's Fridge.

3 His new EP, A Headful Of Ants, has raised a few eyebrows as all the tracks were recorded on a borrowed portable tape recorder.

4 He says: "I don't exaggerate things in my songs, I just try and bring out the ironic elements."

5 He then says: "I'm 100 per cent intolerant of so many archaic notions that people have about almost everything."

6 "Finally he admits: "I take Russell Grant as a serious commodity — he has more effect on people's lives than the average politician."

7 He is bad at typing.

8 He is the balalaika and shaky-violin player on The Wedding Present's two Ukrainian folk sessions for John Peel.

9 He has a thing about feather dusters.

10 He uses a lot of Tipp-Ex.

Membranes: personal graffiti

"We do ART."

The Membranes' new LP, Kiss Ass Godhead, has just been banned by HMV.

HMV?

Who needs 'em?

Down in the southern suburbs of Manchester, there's a big story breaking. Three people have disappeared, mysteriously, the latest victims of — wait for it — 'The Didsbury Triangle'. It could almost be a Membranes song: "those three people could be us — we go away on tour so often," muses John Robb king Mem. It's true. They're at it again; Preston last night, Darlington tonight. If that sounds less than exciting, then maybe I should mention that they've just returned from a tour of Germany where they are er, big. "People recognise us in the street, well the odd person does." John introduces his oft-used chuckle. "The Germans like a lot of the English stuff that can be termed 'eccentric' — it tells them something about England."

The Membranes are almost an English institution. They've been around, in one form or another, since 1980 — it just seems a lot longer. Back then, in their Blackpool days, The Membranes consisted of Mark Tilton on guitar and vocals, Coofy Sid on drums, and yer man John on bass and vocals. "It was the excitement of punk that created The Membranes. We were all scraping around, trying to get a band together. It was really weird that we all happened to live on the same road. We weren't people who should have been in a band — we just liked the idea of being in a band. We didn't have instruments at first, so we just used to tape records and splice them together — everybody's doing that now!"

On the back of John's fanzine, Rox and limited flexi-releases, The Membranes 'legend' grew steadily before 1984 when, it could be said, the whole thing started in earnest. A well-received LP, The Crack House, appeared; even better-received was the single Spike Milligan's Tape Recorder and EP Death To Trad Rock. Comparisons with The Fall were suffered, but survived. Lyrics, cuttingly sharp and brutally witty were important (establishing the humble pumpkin as a bona-fide rock 'n'roll symbol!) but the big thing about The Membranes was (and is) the noise, the VOLUME, THE Sound.

"When we started, we were always trying to get the right sound and we couldn't. We finally got it on Spike but then we relaxed, which was the wrong thing to do."

From there, things changed. They left Criminal Damage to go to Creation, where, predictably, things didn't work out — "they're about crafted 60s' songs with 12 - string guitars, and we're about what we do". "Til" left the ranks to join Marc Riley's Creepers and The Membranes started releasing records on the Glass label. These days John Robb takes on guitar and vocals, Coofy still slams the drums and the bass player is one Wallis Terror/Tadpole/Whatever.

They've just released a new Steve Albini — produced LP Kick Ass God Head, as the climax of a year which has seen them touring virtually non-stop round the world. The US of A, Germany, Holland, Spain, Belgium among others, have all had The Membranes Experience. Oh, and Greece.

Wallis gets a word in "When we played Athens, there were loads of 40 and 50-year-olds there, looking on us as English art or something".

Cue John. "What we do is art. People sometimes miss that and think we're just a bunch of idiots from the north of England. People might call us 'thrash' the first time that they hear us in this country, but in America they'd say 'oh yes, an interesting art experience' — like Sonic Youth." This, according to John, is where their 'scene' now is.

"There's us here, The Ex in Holland and Sonic Youth and Big Black in America. Ours is the music that gets down to the core."

Has their music changed since they started?

It feels like we play the same but the sound has changed — we play more aggressively."

And, it's because of that that The Membranes are unlikely to get daytime air play.

"German radio plays us, daytime, and it causes no motorway pile-ups. It's good rousing stuff — I'd like to hear it at 8 o'clock in the morning. It wouldn't kill anybody." Craig Ferguson

SHAKE THE RHYTHM

Adrian Sherwood brings the beat from another planet!

These are not easy times for producers. Just mention a DDU and you are instantly tarred with the brush of Stock Aitken And Wallydom. Fair enough in most cases, until you put an ear to the ground and track down the pounding system of On-U Sound, the creation of a genuine studio maestro and nice bloke extraordinaire, Adrian Sherwood.

After eight years of providing the most subversive sounds known to man, On-U seemed a spent force. Then last year Tackhead burst from the can, and Sherwood's label was rattling craniums like never before. But why have there been so few records? And who is Sherwood, anyway? He's legendary for being "together", that's for sure. . . .

"Oh yeah," he muses, "Underground innit? I'd forgotten all about it. Err. . . I just want to get this track finished off. Come in, have a seat, I'll be with you in a minute, alright? This is Bim by the way."

Sitting beside Sherwood is Bim Sherman whose honey-throated vocal graces a number of On-U LPs. He smiles from beneath his tam, swaying to the sound of Singers And Players. Sherwood is rocking back in his chair too. Every now and then a hand darts out to adjust something as 24 VU meters bounce in time to the bass.

"I've always been into reggae, not much else. I used to work for labels like Pama and Trojan," recalls Adrian. "In school holidays, that was, then I started a label called Carib Gems. One thing I'm proud of is putting out the first Black Uhuru sides. That's when I first worked with Prince Far-I as well."

Sherwood launched On-U in 1980 and almost immediately had attracted a staggeringly gifted army of musicians.

"I've always worked with the best. Any credit I get is just because the people I work with are so hot. The results are bound to be good and it looks good for me just to have my name there on the sleeve."

For example, the line-up on one of On-U's first projects featured two Slits, Keith Levene, Mark Stewart, a Raincoat and a Flying Lizard as the New Age Steppers.

"They were all people I shared a love of reggae with."

Sherwood and his studio troopers have attracted a steady stream of acts seeking that Midas touch. On the table in front of me is a tape reel marked Woodentops/Wheels Turning. Rolo's crowd are just one of a number who have looked to Sherwood for the dubmaster treatment.

"Yeah, I've done remixes for a few people, Einsturzende Neubaten was one, and Depeche Mode just recently."

So, why do you think they want to work with you?

"Because he makes something shit sound good," interjects Bim.

"No, Bim, you can't say that. You can't make a bad thing sound good."

If Sherwood wasn't such a disarming bloke I'd ask him how much he got paid for doing a remix. And that gives us some idea why he does what he does. But, even through his successes, he's still modest. . . .

"I don't know how to work all this. I swear to you."

He waves a hand over the studio console. I look at him disbelievingly.

"I only know how to operate here because I've been using it so long."

Even so, the frantic schedule, calls from New York, Deptford, wherever. . . there's still not that many On-U releases (even if what does get out is lapped up with rhythmic abandon).

"All these other production jobs have made On-U Sound take a back seat lately. I'm in the process of finishing off three LPs at the moment. All of them should have been out last year. It's ridiculous really. Friendly As A Hand Grenade (the forthcoming Tackhead LP) was all ready at Christmas, then we scrapped it and started again. And I'm on tour all through April with Tackhead and Mark Stewart. It's just too hectic. I'm pissing in the wind really. I'm not complaining, I just can't run the label how I would like to."

Sherwood goes back to work. The sound is pumping out of the speakers in the cramped little studio. In there you realise that it can tell me a lot more about Adrian Sherwood than any interview can. Matt Cole

Sherwood: a work in heavy bass

Though just a little more commonplace and a tad less cosmic than a visit from Halley's Comet, the appearance of On-U's finest LPs are moments to treasure for a lifetime. This potted history of the label is a chance to gaze once more at the brightest stars of the On-U constellation.

1981. . . NEW AGE STEPPERS VOL 1 launches the label to the top of the indie chart, and cries of "Adrian who?" are heard for the first time. With this legendary session recorded by selected darlings of the post punk demi-monde. AFRICAN HEAD CHARGE were responsible for two of the most startlingly creative of Sherwood's LPs. The slippery techno-dub of MY LIFE IN A HOLE IN THE GROUND and ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES have been turning heads, and stomachs, since 1982.

Shortly after the demise of The Pop Group, confetti was being thrown marriage of Sherwood to Mark Stewart. It was a match made in heaven. With The Mafia officiating at the ceremony LEARNING TO COPE WITH COWARDICE was unleashed in 1983. Still the best selling On-U LP, with its infernal vision of Liberly City and the sampled brass band of Jerusalem it makes William Blake seem like John Betjeman.

Mark Stewart And The Mafia touched the stars again with AS THE VENEER OF DEMOCRACY STARTS TO FADE (now licenced to Mute). This was the first On-U LP to feature Keith LeBlanc, Skip McDonald and Doug Wimbush, the Sugarhill trio and House pioneers headhunted by Sherwood in 1983. (Sherwood's initial recording with the most sought-after session men in New York had gone out earlier as Fats Comet on the World label.)

Now, with the drafting of ex-scaffolder Gary Clail from Bristol's dance halls, Sherwood's most thunderous project yet was under way. As studio heads blew and speakers crumbled to the floor, Tackhead blasted into being. . . . tune in next month for part two. . . .

№1 PICCADILLY CIRCUS W1 62 64 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET LONDON

Ex-Dead Kennedys vocalist, Jello Biafra has just about paid off the costs on his censorship victory. Next up? More spoken word chathatons and a return to music. . . Alex Bastedo plots the return

As all non-desert island resident readers must be aware, Jello Biafra and his co-defendant Michael P Bonanno won their 'No More Censorship' trial last summer, but his important victory was not without potentially crippling consequences, not least of which was the huge costs of their case which the 'victors' were still obliged to pay.

Love or loathe his music, the basic constitutional rights of freedom of speech for which Biafra was fighting should be supported by all and the man himself, much admired for the dedication to the cause, has shown great tenacity throughout the long drawn-out affair. The defence fund set up to pay for the costs of the case is just about paid, so what's Jello intending to do now he is basically his own man again?

I gather you've just about reached the initial defence fund target. Wasn't it about $60,000?

"It's actually closer to $80,000, but yes, we've just about cleared the debts of the fund now. The last big one is the printing of the transcript of the trial from the original court stenographer's copy."

Are there plans to print and sell it?

"No. I don't think many people would want to wade through a three-to-four inch thick wad of papers full of three weeks worth of court arguments. Most murder trials move quicker than this one did!"

Are you going to keep the fund going?

"We want to keep it running as a small potential organisation, if possible, but I don't want to make any empty promises that the campaign will keep on protecting free speech when we just aren't capable of bringing that much pressure to bear. There's no point winding up in the Bob Geldof doghouse!"
This case has obviously set a precedent. Do you think the fact that you 'won' will help other bands?

"So far it has proven otherwise. The prosecutor said from the very beginning that he wanted to make an example out of us and even though we weren't convicted, the example that was made was that it took away nearly two years of mine and others' time. I haven't written a song since before the cops tore my place apart in April '86. Consequently, I think other bands, especially mainstream bands, are more frightened now, especially as there is evidence that the P.M.R.C. are working behind the scenes to get bands' contracts cancelled that don't toe the line."

LIFE, POLITICS, MUSIC, CENSORSHIP

The P.M.R.C. — Parents Music Resource Centre — is the 'moral' group headed by Tipper Gore, whom Biafra regards as a prematurely fossilised ex-debutante, his censorship sparring opponent with the silver spoons coming out her ears.

I've read that people like Frank Zappa helped you out a lot.

"Yes, that's true. Zappa has been one of the biggest critics of the P.M.R.C. since the very beginning — he testified against the P.M.R.C. in Congress, against the wishes of the corrupt American music industry, and he has not shut his mouth since! Steve Van Zandt, Ray Manzarek from The Doors, and a few others were also supportive, but it was mostly the independents and more underground bands that were the real help."

There are also many small benefit gigs still going on in the UK. Is that also the case in the US?

"Not for a while. It seems a lot of people forget about the defence fund after the verdict came through, thinking, 'Oh well, Biafra got off,' everything had a happy ending and we can go home now. That, of course, isn't true at all. The P.M.R.C. is more powerful than ever and there is a genuine chance that a P.M.R.C. witch (good ole Tipper herself) could be occupying the White House before too long. If people thought Nancy Reagan's 'Just say no to drugs' campaign was an international embarrassment wait till they have Tipper Gore saying 'Just say no to your own music or else!'"

Her hubby, Albert, incidentally was winning most of the primaries in the deep South at the time of this interview.

"He's just about the most dishonest candidate in the entire race. If you thought people like Gary Hart has some problems keeping their stories straight wait until you hear Al Gore."

I've been told he makes Reagan look like Lenin.

"I wouldn't go that far, but I do think of him as a sort of crooked landlord. He should go far."

And, this dynamic duo are this side of 40.

"We haven't seen the last of these people by a long way. Al Gore could be the front-runner in the Presidential nominations next time or the time after that. . . really, the only way to avoid suicidal depression in America's ridiculous political situations is to just keep fighting against them and enjoy the fight as best you can. Resistance should be fun!"

Would you go through the whole trial again if you had to?

"I'd rather not, but it wouldn't surprise me if it happened again. In one sense, it was a pretty ugly affair that nearly drove me to suicide on several occasions. But at the same time it also opened a lot of doors and gave me a lot of adventures I wouldn't have had otherwise. I met people such as Frank Zappa, who I've admired since I was a teenager, and more importantly it has given the national press and music papers something to talk about rather than just the standard shop talk like when is your next record coming out and what do you think of the music scene."

So Jello, when is your next record coming out?

"I think there will probably be a sequel to the No More Cocoon spoken word album before I focus my efforts back towards music. Originally, I was kind of embarrassed that the censorship portion of Cocoon was actually recorded before the trial, but now I realise that it will work very well as a Part One and Part Two. I have been taping my recent lecture appearances where I go into great detail about what happened at the trial as well as the current vigilante tactics of the P.M.R.C. and their friends. There will also be a piece on Ollie-mania that goes hand in hand with my piece on corporate martial law on Cocoon One. However, I've no idea yet when that will be released."

Are there plans to bring the spoken word tour over to the UK?

"I'm in two minds about this as I've received mixed feedback from the UK. There does seem to be some problem with the cultural barrier because so many of my jokes and insights centre around American politics/TV commercials, etc. Also, I have done so much spoken word touring in the last six months that I'm getting a bit sick of it. I want to get back to work and write some songs!"

Were there any particular highlights of your reading tour?

"One in particular was a festival in Kansas called the River City Reunion, named after a cultural uprising movement in the late 60s. People such as William Burroughs and Allen Ginsberg were also reading, so that was a great honour for me to do. Ginsberg in particular seems to be a genuine fan of my work. . ."

I suppose, too, that the things Burroughs and Ginsberg have been writing about for years have been happening to you.

"Solid proof that the more things change the more they stay the same. I mean, I think we'll go through cycles of repression like this for at least as long as I manage to stay alive. This time, however, the pendulum has swung a good deal further to the right and stuck there."

So, now for the $64,000 question. Your new music.

"The last thing I intend to do is reform Dead Kennedys or butcher any of the songs we did that mean so much to me by playing bad versions of them in a road band. Consequently, I may disappear for a couple of years to get things worked out. I also write very slowly and am very finicky about my work. The lyrics to Macho-Rama and The Stars And Stripes Of Corruption, for example, were originally 30 pages apiece and had to be edited down. I don't think I'll be writing for a specific set of musicians this time around either which means that the possibilities of writing other kinds of songs are greater too. It could go in any number of directions — hopefully several. One thing for certain is that I'm just about through with hard-core. Bedtime For Democracy was meant to be the last of my thrash songs and I made sure that every thrash song I had waiting in the wings was used so I could put that phase of my music behind me."

Do you find the hardcore scene stagnated now?

"It is on the verge of becoming the new dinosaur and is certainly a sacred cow that needs to be slaughtered as soon as possible. There are still good hardcore bands around, but there is a side to it that has just become so formulated that more and more people are turning towards this kind of half-hardcore/half-speed metal approach. . . it's just as boring as the 70s rock that punk was meant to overthrow. I mean, our early demos were as generic as anyone else but we moved on from that a long way. I have a very bad time with bands that just stick to the same formula and never change."

Is there anyone you do like?

"I think the kind of growth that should be encouraged is with a band such as Head Of David who I think are uniquely powerful. Members of that group were originally in hardcore bands. Groups like The Exploited or Suicidal Tendencies on the other hand are just peddling totally formulated bullshit."

And so, a few more enemies made, we'll leave Biafra to contemplate his future and hope he manages to find a way back into your living room, either speaking, grunting or crooning.

BILLY BRAGG Help Save The Youth Of America Go!

Discs 870-306-1 •• A six-track live performance from Billy Bragg that establishes him in the international league, as he bends to all styles to cajole an American crowd into accepting his direct and considered deliberations. Three of the tracks here are classics that should rip at the hearts of any aspiring human. On Chile Your Waters Run Red Through Soweto you can't even hear the multitude breaths as Bragg holds court on an accapella tale of the times, while on the title track, a Russian translator compares the limitations of Soviet and American kids. Finally the man's joined by The Pattersons for the work Proud There Is Power In A Union and the will to win, the stature to achieve against the odds runs mightily to the run-out groove. Dave Henderson

BLYTH POWER The Barman And Other Stories Midnight

CHIME 00.36S RT C ••¼ I hated this album at first... I admit it. But, God, it's so good! Blyth Power have been kicking around for some time and they've developed a hybrid identity that's kinda like Fairport Convention playing punk. For those who don't remember the Fairport's beery and bawdy folk-rock, then just make do with Blyth Power, who even stoop to a harmonious version of He Who Would Valiant Be — that old scorcher from hymn lessons. Conjuring up the traditional English sound with a rollicking guitar burst for propulsion, Blyth Power might just be the next burping biggies. Dave Henderson

BRANIAC 5 World Inside

Reckless Records RECK 1 RT • A very average album from Braniac 5, which sees a strange desire to bring punk to its senses by adding quirky XTC-isms and early psychedelic trips (man!). Unfortunately, the end result is just rocky and monotone — a little like The Vibrators' second album, really. TC Wall

DAVE BROCK & THE AGENTS OF CHAOS The Agents Of Chaos Flickknife SHARP 042

RT G •½ You might not hold out too much hope for part-time Hawkwind Brock, but this loopy tape and electronic montage — peppered with some tasteful '60s organ and shards of synthetic fluff — has enough muscle to make it immediate. The lyrical zeal and the Sgt Peppers-meet-Floyd stance (with socio-political input) never make the proceedings dull. Like the soundtrack to an acid version of Dr Who, the real meaning of Wee-yud! Dave Henderson

THE BUTTHOLE SURFERS Hairway To Steven Blast

First BFFP 29 RT C
 •¾ Butthole's albums come and go like nightmares. At times here and there, the Butthole's Rembrandt Pussy Horse perfectly matched tales of torment, weirdo mondo vibes and the general caustic edge of the band. The follow-up, Locust Abortion Technician, broadened the sphere and Hairway To Steven comes right round again, completing the feedback circle. Sounding a touch like a sequel, Hairway has some intense moments but nothing as spectacularly different from its recent predecessors. A good album, but a classic? Well... Dave Henderson

CAMPER VAN BEETHOVEN Our Beloved

Revolutionary Sweetheart Virgin V2516
 ½ Methinks the Beethovens are sick of having their work measured up against the superb Take The Skinheads Bowling, since it's a tough yardstick to hold up to a band. But it has to be said that this collection of 14 tracks does little to demonstrate that the Camper Van people have anything like as good up their T shirts. This, then, is a strangely eclectic mixture of styles and ideas, with one or two quite dreadful bits the — instrumental Walka, which sounds like something Rick Wakeman might do for a rock opera, being one. Only One Of These Days, a nice little pop tune, hits any high spots, and even that's not exactly earth-shattering. Carole Linfield

THE CASSANDRA COMPLEX Theomania Play It Again, Sam BIAS 88 RT C •

• Definitely the Cassandras' best LP to date as they seem to have finally discovered that there's wealth and beauty in pacing your attack. True enough, side two of this album rips and roars at a regular pace, and there's the odd angry flashback, but side one's more tempered approach more than makes up for it. If there is life after the current bout of interest in Euro electronic music then The Cassandra Complex are certainly moving along the right lines. TC Wall

THE CATERAN Bite Deeper Vinyl Solution SOL 9 RT C •

•½ The Cateran seem to have been kicking around for some time without any substantial releases, but this debut album more than rewards your patience. In a climate where metallic rock-based thrash and AC/DC impersonations are the measure of modern rock, this Scottish quartet have taken an opportune moment to produce one of the most thankfully precise guitar LPs of the moment. The secret lies within the lead and backing vocal styles which hang beautifully over a double guitar sound — which seems intent on a schizophrenic in-band exorcism. The Cateran have an immediate attraction that's close to hearing a battered transistor in the middle of a frontal feedback blockade. Overhead there's an avalanche building, while this fab four create countrified memories of the old world. Ferocious. Dave Henderson

WILD BILLY CHILDISH I Remember... Hangman HANG 3UP RT C

•½ Although the recording quality and much of the playing here is dodgy beyond belief, there's an alluring charm and charisma surrounding Billy's megaphonic vocals and lacklustre guitar. This is a highly personal LP. Converts will OD, the uninitiated will gag... still, you've got just play it again. Dave Henderson

CICCONE YOUTH The Whitey Album Blast First BFFP28 RT C ••½ In which the

ALWAYS Thames Valley Leather Club EI Records

ACME 12 P •• Less quirky than the title actually suggests, Kevin Wright, the sole motivator of Always, is a man setting out to show you the real sound of the suburbs. The music, melancholy without being downbeat, melodic yet with a twist of the lyrics that helps it sting, is conducive to new towns and neo-Georgian streets everywhere, and should be played whenever indulging in all typically suburban activities, from washing the Metro to getting engaged. But take the trouble to look further and you'll find the music has a delicious hint of underlying forbidden fruit (hence the leather club). Sally Webster

A POPULAR HISTORY OF SIGNS England In The Rain

Jungle FREUD 21 RT C
 • Agit-proppers opt to run towards the swinging sounds of cash-orientated splurge to get their message over. Sadly the message is dissipated and this six track mini-set, although quaint, is terminally tedious. Johnny Tired-Boy

BARGEPOLE Sodbuster

Ediesta Records CALC LP 41 SR C A quirky number from an enterprising Manchester duo. The lyrics rely on a mixture of Pastiche and comic-based recollections ("remember when you used to read under the bedclothes with a torch, and Crimplene trousers were all the rage" type stuff). Generally, the instrumentation is denser than many nostalgia-induced bands use, with the emphasis on similarly nostalgic instruments like sitars and harmonicas. But unfortunately their ideas too often blur, trying too desperately, and subsequently becoming too whacky for enjoyment. Then it sadly becomes impossible to tell where taking the piss ends and the real band begins. By the time you reach the track Ambulance it's become like a second-rate comedy record. Carole Linfield

Sonics' part-time project becomes a totally different art of noise (as well as the sound of silence) with plenty of hidden tunes in the grooves. With only one real cover, a version of Robert Palmer's Addicted To Love played totally straight, there's definitely music in the Ciccone madness, and this song in particular helps to offset the mood of a lot of the rest of the record. Apart from that we have plenty more examples of their typically American sense of humour — especially in the titles — and there's more than enough variation in the 13 or so instrumental and vocal tracks to make this collection more than worthwhile.

CRIME AND THE CITY SOLUTION Shine Mute

STUMM 59 ••• Er, a game of two halves, as they say. . . with Crime shaking their Post-Birthday Party tatters on side one, then slipping, so neatly, into a Morrison-paced psychedelic wash for the longer pieces on side two. Shine has the highest points of the City Solution Pinnacle so far in the single On Every Gravy Train, while those flipside floaters are scaly skin tags which just drag on your heaving uncertainty. As I said, a game of two halves: an album with more to offer than most. Dave Henderson

THE CYNICS Twelve Flights Up Resonance 33-8813

• 1/3 Pure Pastiche, from the sleeve to the groove, The Cynics' '60s "style" wreaks of Post-Mersey mud, while attempting to be better than it really is. From Germany with all the correct images in all the right places. Enjoy in small doses only. Johnny Eager

THE DEL-LORDS Based On A True Story Enigma DI 73326

•• 1/2 Turn round any street corner in the States and you'll find another bunch of disenchanted youth with nothing better to do than strap on guitars and crank the volume up to 11. The Del-Lords do this as well as anyone, sounding so live that you expect them to appear in your living room should you blink. Actually, much of the strengths here might be in the production, the list of extra musicians appearing more like a cast of thousands. Check out Mojo Nixon's sermon at the start of the thumping River Of Justice, or the girls from The Pandoras (who?) lending a B-52s feel to The Cool And The Crazy; even Pat Benatar gets in on the act on the excellent pop single Judas Kiss, not that that should put you off. Throw in the dynamite-paced ode to lousy nightlife, Whole Lotta Nothing Going On, bypass the occasionally standard rock fare, and you have one of the best guitar albums to annoy your neighbours with this year. Tony Fletcher

DEVIATED INSTINCT Rock 'n' Roll Conformity Peaceville VILE 3 • Bad language and a senior with a throat infection make sure that this will appear to a slaughterhouse-full of would-be revolutionaries. Punk never died and Deviated Instinct, I think, are singing to celebrate that fact. Jerrrrrarghyy Ega

DOCTOR AND THE CRIPPENS Fired From The Circus

Manic Ears ACHE 14 • 7/8 Doc and the boys trash mercilessly through this 22-track explosion in a desperate bid to live fast and die young. From Lancaster, they feature a drummer who's beaten skins for Discharge, InsaneBlitzkrieg, Flux and more. . . he has his head down in an effort to draw blood to be heard. A disturbingly loud record. Johnny Eager

ERASURE The Innocents

Mute Stumm 55 ••• Instant mash! Erasure certainly spoon it all out here, with an album of diversity and depth that hits the gut right from the first helping. It's a powerful and evocative collection, with their most vital single to date, Ship Of Fools, setting the standard, being carried through to logical conclusions on tracks like Chains Of Love, which also gets beaty and bountiful. Andy Bell's voice has hit new heights, gaining in richness and tone, which, along with a stomping dance version of River Deep Mountain High and a lush mix throughout, all goes to prove wrong the Luddites who think electronic music can't be as emotional, symphonic or creative as traditional approaches. Guess who's having the last laugh. . . Sally Webster

FALSE PROPHETS Implosion Alternative Tentacles Records

VIRUS 58 Second album for Alternative Tentacles from this New York five-piece, who also list James White (The Blacks) and Gordon Gano (Violent Femmes) among their credit list of collaborators. The record itself starts off hardcore-ish but gets continually more varied, especially on Side Two, with the addition of brass and piano. Perhaps a bit too worthy and overblown in places, as well as a tad theatrical, but at least they are attempting to break out of what is often a constricting genre. Next time I hope they make a complete success of it.

FELT The Pictorial Jackson Review Creation

CRELP 30 ••• I shudder to imagine what people will say, seeing that we've got a feature with Felt in this ish. . . and we raved over the album, but, well, it's like this. Side one's mellow Velvet-paced songs — with Lawrence's smooth vocal made me really comfy. Then, well, the B side is pretty different. . . like cocktail jazz with a smoochy piano. . . I had to check the label, but it read Felt. . . FELT! This band have some tricks up their sleeves and this back to basics set, showing two sides of their character is mighty impressive. Of course, after the piano pieces I had to spin the other side again, then I put on side two again. . . and so the story rolls on. Dave Henderson

STEVE FISK 448 Deathless Days SST 159

••• Another notch in SST's cultural bow, as part-time producer, man-about-the-console and all round experimentalist, Steve Fisk fuses the big drum beat, everyday noise and a few magnetic melodies into a collection of more than worthy tunes. Outdoing Art Of Noise, trading on the post-industrial graveyard, grooving in mind and body next to the spiritual Beach Boys or Zappa and a vision as keen as Glenn Hoddle's passing, Fisk is a step further than the introverted Todd Rundgren albums like A Wizard, A True Star, more compassionate than Negativland and ultimately more accessible in what he does. Superb. . . not to be missed. A classic, well, OK it's not bad. Dave Henderson

4,000,000 TELEPHONES The Most Careful Summerhouse

SUML 1 • 1/2 Sometimes atmospheric collection of ramblings, talkovers and tunes which too often merge into a nondescript backing noise, albeit a very tuneful one. Best is She's There, which embosses their previously sketchy ideas, making a more three dimensional, and subsequently more entertaining, track. The rest have style, but not enough substance. Carole Linfield

JEREMY GLUCK Burning Skulls Rise Flickknife BLUNT

043 • 1/3 A countrified guitar whistles for a meeting of minds and continents — Rowland S Howard from down under, Nikki Sudden from the upside down world and Jeremy Gluck from across the Atlantic. A hybrid six-track strum that cowpokes like Lee Hazelwood gone folk, with a commercial desire and prose scripts about fun in a bottle and Burroughs-esque western wordplay. Claustrophobic, intense, eccentric and intoxicating. Brenda Collins

GOD SAID Off The Plot Third Mind Records TMLP25

•• From Brussels with love, a girl/boy duo (Heather and Mervyn Weight, whether bro and sis or man and wife I do not know) that rests heavily on breathy pop melody in the tried and trusted tradition. Sometimes they beef it all up with a more manic delivery, sometimes it's doomy, or dramatic, or sexy, or they even slow it right down to a whispered, solely female sung ballad. Which means that the tempo and variety here is excellent, making for an interesting and absorbing listen. Doubts that spring to mind though are the quality of Heather's voice, which isn't really special enough for some of the slowie (although it hasn't stopped countless others) and some of the material — Reunion sounds a bit like Raw Sex. Carole Linfield

THE GRIM Face Of Betrayal Alchemy CHEM 107

SRP ● 1/2 The Grim's guitarist decides to play as fast as his wrist can stand on track one and proceeds to slide all over the frets as this tortured rock 'n' rawl phlegm-snorter gargles and gobs. Guitar music that wanders into metal, lashes out at punk and never lets that darn singer get a word in. Who the hell does he think he is, anyway? The Grim are struck in gear with a concrete will and a deathwish of devotion. Johnny Eager

HAWKWIND The Xenon

Codex GWR GWLP 26 ●● A new Hawkwind album and it's a guaranteed seller before it even clicks into gear. Fans, and the temperamentally interested, won't be disappointed either as this is something of a return to Silver Machine-styled form for this space-rock conglomeration, who seem to have had more members than the Patsy Kensit fan club. The Xenon Codex is full of future world imagery, tight with Judge Dredd city centre scapes and the inevitable song subjects roll in just as you'd expect. What it's all about isn't too clear but, conceptually speaking, it's a finely-crafted noise. Nick Brody

HEAD Tales Of Ordinary

Madness Virgin ●●● They came. They unleashed a baffling debut album, complete with a grandiose 'hello — England — we've arrived' kinda title (I Am King) they did a few gigs and indulged in various activities for which minor God-Heads are renowned and then they buggered off. Still, it's finally here, Head's second LP. Of course, the question that's on everyone's lips (isn't it?) is, "Was it worth the wait?" In a word. Yes! make that a resounding YES!!!

Head, vinyl delinquents each and every one of them, will be the first to admit they've done their growing up in public. And they'll also be the first to point out that they don't give a toss about the indiscretion implied therein! Head have grown up. They've matured, they've, erm, blossomed, but unlike most things musical about to receive the vintage stamp they've neither mellowed nor grown old. They're more brazenly accessible — and see if they care! If the football stadium rock-til-you-drop opus of Sin Bin (the single so far) doesn't grab you by the inner ear then the self-pitying epicness of 1000 Hangovers will. Tear down your curtains, rip the dralon off your mum's three piece, run yourself up a pair of trousers and join the Head refrain. Dead sexy. Alex Kadis

HEAVENLY BODIES Celestial Third Mind Records TMLP27

RRG ●● 1/4 A fully-fledged member of the lesser-ambient-obscure-soundtrack-club, Heavenly Bodies weave a mystical spell with this beautifully packaged and lusciously-paced debut. Brittle, whisped and intelligently-orchestrated, Celestial lives up to its name without becoming airy-fairy. The chemistry of keyboards, wind instruments and the voice of Caroline Seaman make it all work to great effect, creating a unique sound that's intensely moving. Dave Henderson

THE HOLLOW MEN The Man Who Would Be King Dead Mans Curve DMC025 RRG

●● 3/8 "Here we are children — come and get your lollipops." The very nasty child catcher character from celluloid legend Chitty Chitty Bang Bang gets his picture on the cover and opens the latest Hollow record with the aforesaid. The music is guitar-driven, bass-and-drums-rhythmed with drops of harmonica, piano, violin, keyboards and other things splashed wherever needed. The vocal is sometimes slightly off-kilter yet feels right whether we're going slowly, moving along quickly, or contemplating The Drowning Man. Anoraks, leathers and denim jackets nestle comfortably together on the Hollow Men's coat rack. Good mixture makes good music — this time anyway. Daz Igmeth

THE HOUSE OF LOVE The House Of Love Creation

CRELP 034 RRG ●● 1/4 The House's debut LP proper (the last one was just an export only affair) and this selection certainly justifies all the recent press attention that they've been awarded. Superficially, this sounds like a mid-paced, typical Creation, album with few distinguishing marks but, after several plays, it becomes compulsive listening. From the opening bars of their Christine single, The House Of Love fashion a comfortable wrap, that meshes guitar and harmony into a highly memorable cocktail that's hard to ignore. Exceptional. Dave Henderson

MOVING TARGETS Burning In Water What Goes On GOES ON 14 SR ● 3/4 God, doesn't Ken Chambers sound like Husker Du's Bob Mould? Yes, he does. And don't The Moving Targets get sick of being categorised as a DU soundalike prior to that group's Warners deal? Yes, I bet they do. Whatever, this is a highly enjoyable, fast, melodic rock album that piles harmony, on melody, turning up its collar to get maximum effect. A bit like Husker Du really. T C Wall

THE MUTE DRIVERS 20,000 Millionaires Irradiated md2 RT C ● ● ● Snortingly colossal mini-album that better the Drivers' fabby debut. Hard to believe but true, 20,000 Millionaires is a better-paced collection which sees the pent-up aggression of this vitriolic duo allowed to breathe through a more spacious production job. There's no room for flab, corn or extra-terrestrial nonsense here. The Mute Drivers are circulating in more aware circles, they mean business. . . and with this approach they'll do more good, make more people aware, than a year's worth of Class War's graffiti campaigns. Brenda Collins

NAKED RAYGUN Jettison Caroline CAROL 1348 RT C ● ● There's something about naked Raygun that suggests they're nothing more than a fleeting noise scuttling into the backwaters of the cerebral motion. Fact is, they're a lot more upfront, structured, well-versed in song construction, dynamic and melodic than that. Yeah, all round good guys. Jettison is a flaky collection that has no one leaning, but it has some of the most powerful affected-rock outbursts to have appeared in the wilderness for some time. Beyond thrash, punk, junk and metal, Naked Raygun are churning a guitar overload, while whispering a poetic lullaby all the way to bed. Brenda Collins

NO MEANS NO The Day Everything Became Nothing Alternative Tentacles VIRUS 62 RT C ● 2/3 Not as striking as their debut album, this mini-set sees No Means No tanked up, less straightforward and, in a sense, cluttered. The minimal sound of the Sex Mad LP has a frenetic, noisy colouring now which doesn't give the songs enough room to breathe. That said, this is still much classier than a lot of current releases, it's just that when you start with a high it's so hard to accept anything less. Dave Henderson

NEUROSIS Pain Of Mind Alchemy VM105 SRD ● 1/3 Ayyayah! Neurosis plug into the wall, tear out their chest hairs and rip into one of the most relentless brain-scratching assaults since Neubauten's road-drill demolished the ICA. Uncompromising, difficult to grasp and totally uncompromising music that throws you against the wall for the kind of self-ridicule that most pundits would try to wheedle out of. Brad Manson

POTATO 5 True Fact Racket MASH 001 RT C ● ● 1/4 Potato 5's terminal untogetherness seems strangely absent from this first real studio album. With Laurel Aitken holding up the ska flag, the rest of this 43 piece orchestra find time to make each and every note really count as they wield a techno fist at this traditional form of music. Drum machines clatter, subliminal conversations wander in and out and True Fact soon becomes more of a dynamic proposition. Life after ska? You bet. Dave Henderson

RICH KIDS ON LSD Lifestyles Of The . . . Alchemy VM104 SRD ● ● 1/4 Rootsy hardcore with thrash and punky bits thrown on the heap for good measure, but that's not all. . . you also get a free comic — which seems to imply that the band are a hybrid between a dready Craig Johnston lookalike, a Pee Wee Herman imitator, a rodent on a skateboard, a John Lennon-style Jesus freak and a baldy skinhead set to stomp the world. The noise is uptempo

WIN OUT!

You've read the interview! You've heard the George Best LP! Now win the T.Shirt! (Yes, it's that old routine again!) Those nice Wedding Pressie chaps have offered five Ug types the opportunity to nab one of their trendy things for nothing. All you gotta do is tell them which football team George Best played for in his heyday! All answers to reach us by June 13 at Underground/Pressie comp, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ.

COMPETITION WINNERS

Seems like everyone wants a Psychic TV limited edition LP and a promo edition superman label Jack The Tab 12 incher! Only two sets to give away though and they go to Rob Richardson from Hornsey, London and Peter of Southwater, Sussex who has to be commended for sending in the most cosmic competition entry ever! Oh yeah, the answer to GP'O's question was, of course, Timothy Leary!

Those who knew that Ug correspondent Vittore Baroni was the bod who originally set up Trax were Michel Balbous from Epsom, Trevor King from Dorset and Trev Faulf from Ilford, Essex.

A most "interesting" selection of entries arrived in response to The Primitives quizzer! Including a replica of a fiver with Queen Tracey where Queen Liz used to be! That was from Ug reader John Pinnington, the other nine, who knew that Thru The Flowers was the single that preceded Crash, were David Brown (a coaster), Peter Hanson (a Stiff record label), Mark Footer (beermat), Mark Foucault (picture of his cat!), Richards Lewis (a Flora box), and Mr I R Jolley, Patrick Bean, Susan Alcock and Ros Eccles.

Practically everyone knows that Shack's LP is called Zilch and the winners are as follows: Chris Young, Clwyd, Stephen, N Ireland, David Sansbury, Liverpool, Mark Gorzalka, Edinburgh, John Shelton, Notts, Ole M Kristensen, Norway, John Gray, Preston, Alan Keachie, Motherwell, Sharon Thomas, Cornwall, Andrew Youngs, Norfolk, Chris Lloyd, Oxford, Patrick Fu, Manchester.

French Author George Bataille is French!!! (wasn't too obscure that one...) Alistair Duff, Edinburgh, Emma Wilton, Aberdeen, Graham Lambert, Oldham and Stuart Giles, Stafford, each receive a signed Knature Of A Girl 12 inch while Richard Harding gets a pesty Shamen Johnny Bag and a signed single!

The thought of a signed Peter Murph Love Hysteria LP moved many an Ug reader to sheer poetry, but those of you who thought that the man in question broke his knee caps in 1982 were wrong! It was THE SOUND BARRIER and the ten who get the goods are: Bernard Harman, Lancs, Adam Thompson, Oxford, Paul Furness, Chesterfield, Gareth Thomas, Port Talbot, F Alam, Manchester, Dave Huitson, Cumbria, S J Adams, Herts, Darrell Matthews, Walsall, S L Jakielski, Wilts, and Iku Yanase from Parsons Green who also bags herself Murph's CD!

The comp which wins 'most varied selection of answers ever to clutter the cupboard' award, is Ug's Fire compilation offer! What a palaver! Still, the ONLY people who knew that there are eight Blue Aeroplanes are Stuart Giles, Stafford, Ole M Kristensen, Norway, Roger Field, Herts, V J Hewson, Cornwall, Patrick Bean, Sheffield and A Jeffries, West Midlands — ya lucky blighters the lot of ya!

and relentless, drug references run rife and they wear shorts on the sleeve pic. Huh, kids today, eh? Dave Henderson

CLIVE PRODUCT, ARMS AND LEGS Care Assistant Big Untidu BUCP2

●3/4 Following their more than delightful, but splendidly naive debut 45, the first LP from C Prod swiftly follows. All neatly underplayed but full of heart, this combo fall strangely between the TV-novelty quirky wacko zone (as featured on Daytime Live) and the wantonly sub-Housemartins. Not a bad area to graze in and more than indicative that we'll be hearing more of Clive in one form or another. Dave Henderson

THE RAILWAY CHILDREN Recurrence Virgin V2525

●3/4 Something strange has happened since the Children went out from Factory to play with Virgin's bank balance. There was always an inkling that they were a more than competent pop band, with a bent for melody and a keen lyrical style, but Recurrence is all big, brash and polished. Isn't it? If anything this second LP from these soulful stalwarts falls nearer to the watershed of daytime play without tumbling into Steve Wright's back pocket, perhaps the intention was to stay the saner side of the pop-rock see-saw, but whatever, Recurrence will surely see The Railway Children established as one of the biggest "new rock" outfits this year. Brenda Collins

THE RISK AND THE THREADS

Out And About Unicorn Records PHZC 16 (191 Seven Sisters Road, Finsbury Park, London N4 3NG) 1/2 A tape consisting of one side of live recordings of The Risk in London and Vienna, with the second side displaying The Threads' wares in less glamorous Retford, plus local BBC interviews with each band (zzz). So, almost a home-made affair — certainly there's no concession to professionalism with The Risk, who perform possibly the worst cover of The Tracks Of My Tears known to man (even worse than the one on that beer advert). The Threads have a more instrumental approach, slightly ska-influenced, and their studio track, Alison, has a nice blend of styles. Come a major mod revival and they'll be frontrunners. On the whole, though, a tape for real enthusiasts of the genre only. Sally Webster

ROCKING RICHARD & WHISTLING VIC TEMPLAR

Tea And Baccy Hangman HANG14UP ●1/2 More studious life studies from beneath the armpit of modern civilisation. This duo, created in the image of all post-Milkshake bevies, make your local busker sound hi-tech as they hum through a selection of authentically "blue" tunes. Slightly tasteful, awesome, awful and inspiring — some of these words apply (but the kazoo sucks). Nick Brody

THE ROSE OF AVALANCHE In Rock Fire Records FIRELP12

●1/4 Pedestrian stumbles from the Roses, who come up smelling less than sweet. As single cuts, diversions, offbeat ideas, the collected bits might be quite alluring, but in total In Rock drags its heels, is directionless and pointless. That said, it'll sell anyway. Nick Brody

PAT RUTHENSMEAT

Ruthensmeat SST SST 154 ●●● Pat's a veteran of the US punk onslaught — forming The Germs with Belinda Carlisle and the late Darby Crash — and, after taking time to rev up 45 Grave, Twisted Roots and Nina Hagen, he now finds himself solo and with Ethan James helping him record. This album is like an exorcism of all those acid flashbacks; leaping from point to point, scraping guitars in Joe Walsh style against punk power, jazzy wrist actions, the noise that you heard next door, a radio playing something or other... the story goes on. Like Negativland partying with The Rolling Stones, the kind of thing that makes the world keep guessing. Dave Henderson

SEWER ZOMBIES Reach Out And... Ron Johnson Records ZRON 32

●1/4 Heads-down, no-nonsense (pretty mindless) thrash noises with little regard for any self-respecting neighbour's health. Sewer Zombies are American and loud, but they play with rubber gloves and belly-button fluff in their ears. Whimsically tense, Reach Out is a gyration closer to that final run-out groove in the sky. Not for the weak-willed. Nick Brody

THE SLICKEE BOYS

Fashionably Late New Rose ROSE147 ● The Slickee Boys seem to have been airing their particular brand of psychedelic pop for ages. Back in '76 they'd had around four singles out, now, some 12 years later, they still sound as effervescent and urgent as ever. However good they are at pulling that beat into line, however commendable they are for opening for the U2's of this world, the fact is that Fashionably Late is just a little too ordinary to make it vital. Average songs, an annoyingly familiar (Stranglers-style) keyboard sound and the basic good time "rock" stance don't make for gladiatorial victories. Nick Brody

THE STING-RAYS Goodbye To All That Media Burn MB18

●1/4 Some bright spark will dig up the, sadly-departed, Sting-Rays in about ten years time. Their singles, on a selection of labels, will be like gold dust when people finally realise just how good they were. Unfortunately on this death-throes live performances the quality is grim and vocalist Bal struggles to obtain psychic monitor help. Included is a wobbly version of Behind The Beyond which still has the ragged edge that the original single possessed. Other tracks, however, don't fare so well. Johnny Eager

SUGARCUBES Life's Too

Good One Little Indian

●1/2 Let's be brutally honest shall we? (Just this once, mind.) The Sugarcubes are one of those rare phenomenons whose public existence seems to have spurred the uprising of a self righteous, protective, and it has to be said, intellectual contingency. They've hollered and shouted praise until there's no real sight left. The Sugarcubes have been granted weird sanctuary. Of course it's exactly this type of sanctimonious bore who will tell you the 'cubes were "far better, far truer" when they sang in Icelandic. Not being au fait with the tongue myself, I'm as pleased as old punch that most of this album is sung in English. It has to appeal. It does strike home. But don't be misguided into blind relief. The 'cube has not yet reached the stage where it can do no wrong; blue-eyed pop sounds like any naff attempt at Euro-New Wave, and Deus (for me at any rate) just grates. But these are minor niggles. Life's Too Good has more than a few redeeming features, namely Sick For Toys with its macabre overtones or the mildly demented Mama, and, naturally, the brilliant Birthday. Alex Kadis

TAR BABIES No Contest

SST SST109

●1/4 Intense slap-bass funk with a repetitive beat and a jazz-sleaze vocal embellishment. Like Defunkt meets James Blood Ulmer on a good night for James White. Music for young gyrating trendies with their braces on back to front. Nick Brody

VARIOUS An Introduction To Latin Hip Hop Rhythm

●● Latin hip-hop is the missing link between pop and rap. It's more polished than most hip-hop and, with the addition of those clicky-jittery Latin rhythms, a lot more danceable. It has already influenced people like Madonna and Joyce Sims, and this LP boasts a good selection of Latin underground stars. From the super-commercial pop dance of Sa-Fire and Divya to the more rhythmic cut-ups of Bad Boy Orchestra and the almost New Order-like instrumental glory of C-

Bank. It also includes the classic track Clave Rocks by Amoretto, which perhaps best sums up the genre. Chris Mellor

VARIOUS The End Of Music As We Know It ROIR

Tapes A.156 RR C ●● An Albini-created cassette-only package featuring some of the more challenging elements of current youth anti-culture. Noise merchants and abrasive guitar re-designers scurry to corners and make like the apocalypse already happened. Those invited to entertain include The Honeymoon Killers, Phantom Tollbooth, Needlenose, Bank Of Sodom, Of Cabbages And Kings, Thurston Moore and Krackhouse. Some win, some lose, some trade ideas and reputations. An essential sequel to the no wave, a cult item too. TC Wall

VARIOUS God Save The USA Happy Mike Records

KTLPO01 RR C ●● A surprisingly good album that initially sets out to support the Nicaragua Solidarity Campaign. Usually these pro-cause shuffles stumble into four-letter expletives, trad arrangements and punk holocausts — which rarely even preach to the converted — but, beyond the uninviting sleeve, there's some uncompromising, and justifiably lovable omissions. Some Weird Sin, Karma Sutra, Anhrefn, Dan, Neurotics, Zounds and even Attila (he really should be a game show host) make credible performances. Dave Henderson

VARIOUS Good Feeling 53rd & 3rd AGAS 3 RR C

●●% Mighty fine collection of today's most talented exotroverts. Covering all areas, Good Feeling provides the weird tales on Loop's psychedelic grunge, The Shop Assistants' retrospective cuteness, Sonic Youth's undefined onslaught, Phillip Boa's well-honed deviations, Camper Van Beethoven's eccentricities, The Membranes, The Beat Happening, The Vaselines and, and, and... well, just get this one. TC Wall

VARIOUS

Indie Top 20 Vol IV Part II Beechwood Music TT 042

RR C ● 1/2 Eight house and special mixes of independent dance hits, as a chunky addition to volume one's jangle-happy veneer of the alternative world. As with all dance music, some of these cuts are best forgotten, being merely worthy stimulation when sweat is trickling and heads are poppin'. S-Express, as you know, surpasses all that and Smith And Mighty, Coco, Steel And Lovebomb and Gene And Jim are worthy bed partners. The rest is nothing new and slim on imagination. Blip, blip! TC Wall

VARIOUS Nightlands Final Image FIB5 RR C ● 2/3 Billed as a nocturnal broadcast, this album's worth of ambience is certainly one for being totally enveloped by. Put it on when you're making toast and you won't hear it for the sound of crumb crackle. There are ten variations in music by acupuncture and you can tell which acts have had the chance to develop their talents in this way before. Hands down winner is Tim Story who has the knack of catching the attention with the simplest of melodies. That said, Gush's New York 1940 is quite inspired, while Biting Tongues, Pump and several others are memorable. Dave Henderson

VEE V V Life, Liberty And The Pursuit Of Happiness Payola PAY LP 1 RR C

●● Crunchy pop punk... like a contemporary vision cast against a Gerald Scarfe backdrop of life, Vee V V adopt an accessible tone to get their pent-up aggressions out. Once channelled into useful energy, this album becomes a vibration that rattles cartilages out of position. Vee V V on previous discography seem to be a brash angst-ridden post-punk noise, but here they've certainly outlined their plans for future growth and productive what-have-yous. Johnny Eager

WEBCORE Webcore

Webcore Jungle FREUD 22

RR C ●●● This is a frightening good album. Webcore's last was a touch hippie, a mite subdued, but always probing, looking for a direction that was different and dynamic and on the subtly titled Webcore Webcore, it seems that they've found it. The mix now has all the old power and aggression liberally thwacked into a selection of musical interludes as diverse as spacy new age, surging, jazzy, Roxy Music-styled melodies moving all points towards the more acceptable side of sample and hold. A delight. Dave Henderson

X Live At The Whisky A-Go Go On The Fabulous Sunset Strip

Elektra 960 788-1 ● 1/2 A classic live recording featuring four sides of bar-be-cued X. X specials roll out like empty beer barrels as the, all too quiet of late, combo with the spit and sawdust turn up the volume. Guitars, inevitably run rife, get country and then rock out as Exene Chervenko unleashes her unique vocal talents — with John Doe in full support. X's recent life and times spent before this live album with, film work, offshoots and the like has been the talk of the day, but this set should satisfy punters waiting for more sprawling guitar drawl. Johnny Eager

On the Beat, cut-ups still in vogue — but now you have to be clever to cut through the mass of Bass, How Low Can You Sample The Jackson Five soundalikes.

Don't miss the new Meat Beat Manifesto epic, a fast-moving track with loads of samples and effects, including bits from Kraftwerk and Instant Replay by Dan Hartman, plus Jack (the nasty rapper) celebrating the death of rock music. It's adventurous and inventive and you can dance to it. Who could ask for more?

Also check Nasty Rox Inc's Escape From New York on ZTT. That's the latest incarnation of Dave Dorrell and CJ Macintosh, the men behind M/A/R/R/S. It's hyped up go-go-hip-hop, again with unusual samples and scratching, including some entirely new turntable techniques, and some horrible grinding guitar.

Two hot imports now available on British labels thank to a couple of Todd Terry Project, the future of house, plus And The Break Goes On by The Break Boys which is based on — guess what? — a break beat, with a few subtle choice cuts overlaid.

Most dodgy title of the month goes to the monster acid house track, Eat My Pussy by the Twat Sisters, but it's not as bad as it sounds, and it's closer to avant-garde noise than dance music.

Obscure house music pioneers New Order are back in the public eye in the US and UK with a Quincy Jones revamp of the dancefloor classic Blue Monday, which has been popping in and out of charts ever since it was first released five years ago.

The hip-hop highlight is the release of By All Means Necessary by KRS 1 and Boogie Down Productions on Jive. Intelligent, hard-core hip-hop at its best.

The greatest gold collectors, the kings of rap and roll, Run-DMC are back on the scene with a new LP Tougher Than Leather, and a hard single, Runs House/Beats To The Rhyme. Having music as uncompromising as this in the charts and on Radio 1 is good for everybody. The hardest UK hip-hoppers around at the moment must be Hijack, whose single, Style Wars on Music Of Life, is an uncompromising street rap.

And there's news of a new label aiming to liven up the hot 100 with some hard sounds. Based in Merseyside, Rham's secret weapon is Grand Groove from Manchester, whose first single is called Let's Dance. But don't let the title put you off, Mr Groove is at the forefront of a new generation of dance fanatics forging links between hip-hop, Chicago house and euro-electro. This track has bits of Depeche Mode and Yazoo played in to mix with that distinctive electro keyboard sound and a driving drum machine beat.

So it's still a case of mix and match. There are piles of records which sound the same. The ones that cut through have the most inventive samples, the best tunes, or simple the best dance grooves. Christopher Mellor

the page that dare not speak its name

World Domination Enterprises have only released four singles, in their three-year existence, but each has made quite an impact. Now they have a whole LP out called, quite naturally, Let's Play Domination. It may not be destined to dominate the airwaves but the noise is guaranteed to blow a few unsuspecting speakers, and if World Dom have their way, a few minds too.

The noise is like mutant '70s heavy rock. Strange names like Led Zeppelin and Deep Purple come to mind. It's not a copy, but those influences have filtered through the boys minds.

Keith: "... but it's not intentional."

Digger: "I remember hearing those tracks with my head down the toilet at a party."

That explains it!

That's sort of what your album sounds like. It's like the rock equivalent of what's happening in dance music — once-familiar bass lines or riffs are mutated and transformed until the original is unrecognisable. It's not influenced by the actual records but by vague memories of what the groups might have thought they sounded like. It's got the heavy, grinding guitar, pretty manic vocals, and some sort of structure to the riffs, but it's definitely not what you'd expect from an old-fashioned rock album.

Keith: "We do have a rigid structure to our songs so that within that we can

Loop: hairy

Loop's Collision 45, their first on Chapter 22, has been selling in hot poop proportions ever since its release a few weeks ago. It was a long time coming but well worth the wait. It's no good talking to Robert, Loop's guitarist/singer/songwriter about it though. Robert, you see, isn't interested in analysis or style or justification. He doesn't see Loop's complex, acid resonance as innovative or better or revolutionary. Loop neither aspire nor achieve, they just do. In years to come we'll probably refer to Robert as "luminary".

ACID(!)

Robert: "That's the one thing that really pisses us off, this whole acid enigma about us."

Mark: "That's usually the first question we're asked in interviews, 'How much acid have you taken today?'"

SOAPS!

Robert: "We love Brookside — it's so bad! But actually some of it is quite good too."

Mark: "Have you seen that programme that's on about ten o'clock every morning? Santa Barbara!" (very naff soap opera — a sort of low budget Dallas.) "Aaaaah! That's brilliant! It's so bad that it's compulsive viewing. I have to watch it every day."

BEING ON THE COVER OF MELODY MAKER!

Robert: "I thought that was a bit previous. Of course it was nice, but we didn't sell any more records and I just don't think we deserved to be on there at that stage."

SAMPLING?

Mark: "You get people like Adrian Sherwood and Mark Stewart and they're not using technology they're abusing it."

Robert: "People keep going on about how Loop ignore technological advancement. The point is that we grew up with guitars and amplifiers. It's authentic. We try to create that authentic sound by using very modern equipment."

THINGS OF AN UNPLEASANT NATURE...

Robert: "Oh God! So many of our quotes have been taken out of context. I do like dark things but that doesn't mean that I hate anything that's pleasant, which is the impression that's been given about me."

SEX!

Loop are very sexy aren't they?

Mark: "Yeah?"

Robert: "... Yeah!"

Mark: "Yeah!"

LOOP

Robert: "We're not doing anything astounding or original. We're just a rock and roll band."

Reasons to be jolly... (part 3)

Brilliant Corners: a smile, a vicar and a new LP

"Trust me who cares about the weather/when I'm feeling this profound" (Trust Me)

The word 'jolly' gets hurled on The Brilliant Corners like some giant-sized monster insult. Suspect critics describe them as 'chirpy' 'twee' — gagged because recognition of their talent, they somehow believe, would bring nappies and bibs in the post. Jolly is a massive marshmallow, a word associated with demented party bands and vicars with crimson cheeks who've taken heavily to the sherry. The one word that describes the Brilliant Corners to me is ROISTER (look it up, rhyme it with doister and see how great it sounds!).

Somebody Up There Likes Me is the band's first full-length long player and gad-zooks, it's a beezer. Containing songs as groovy, rollicking and essential as Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Trust Me, Oh! and Forever, these will tempt you with the plea of a crucial last minute goal. All

So that when they can trash about. It's like cartoons, sometimes the more distorted an image is, the more understandable it can be."

The Red Stripe arrives. Glug.

"Or, it's like Tiffany. There you've got a solid backing with a really trashy voice, like a 16-year old girl singing out of tune on a bus, with headphones on, really over the top, that's what makes it good. It's a bit out of order, definitely not what you would expect."

Is that why you did a cover of Funky Town (the old Lipps Inc disco classic)? To be different?

"We just love the record, and the words really happen — "Got to keep moving and grooving in sanity". It's taking the piss out of people who want me to lead them to funky town, which is, sort of, what people expect when they see you live."

But you're still trying to put ideas into people's heads, from your records.

Keith: "Someone's got to make records, so it may as well be us making people happier, trying to make a change, rather than stuff which just keeps the status quo. But you can't take on the industry, you have to be realistic in your idealism, otherwise you may as well just go to bed and dream."

Yeah, that's guaranteed to give you nightmares.

Chris Mellor

W Dom: loud!

Forever. The band's goal is to reach the top of the charts in the next 10 years. All those vital ingredients of joyousness, pop, youth combine into one glorious lyrical and melodic whole. Only the blind, Filo-faxed, or terminally dull could merely describe songs as loveable as this 'jolly'.

The tall, handsome Davey Woodward smiles and laughs like a father reading his sons copy of Viz comic. He is clumsy, friendly and author of some of the most engaging lyrics. Chris plays bass and has been designated second spokesman when it comes to these boring interview things.

Well let's get on with it. . .

Davey: "I'm a bit too, erm, frail to make all my songs personal. I tend to mask it a bit and maybe that's why there's certain ambiguities and people think 'is this quirky?'. A lot of the humour is there to hide something I'm trying to say seriously. They're not all jolly anyway. On the LP I think there's only. . ."

Chris: "Eleven humorous songs out of 12."

Davey: "No, you can only grin to about three."

I grinned to all of them except, that is, for the last single, Teenage, with its scent of candyfloss and fairground fun. However, the paradox of the lyrics save it from being completely terrible.

Davey: "When you're really young it's like shackles around you if you haven't got a girlfriend. You think you should really be out there with the other blokes. More often than not you start getting the pressure from your parents — 'why haven't you brought a nice girl home for tea?'"

Teenage years can be a troublesome, cumbersome, vulnerable time. Those awful times when you're learning what all your bits do. When 'going out' with someone for three weeks was long term. It's enough to give you a nosebleed just thinking about it.

Davey: "I've never asked a girl out. Ever. But I did send a girl a Valentine card when I was 15 — she sent it back."

When did you first fall in love?

"I sent a Valentine card. . . she sent it back."

B Corn: jovial

Davey: "About six years ago. How old was I six years ago Chris? How old am I now?"

Chris: "22."

Davey: "two, four, five, six, what's that?"

Chris: "16."

Davey: "I left school at 16, I don't know why. My parents wanted me to do the sensible thing, like get an apprenticeship as an electrician. I didn't know what I wanted to do — I was in the bottom class at school, so I wasn't very academic. The career officer said to me, 'Oh you're good at art, you're good with your hands. Have you ever thought of panel beating?'. I was unemployed, I'd never been to any concerts, I had about three records. I started reading books and thinking, so I went to college and started the band. Do I have to tell him about art?"

Chris: "You don't have to tell him anything."

Davey: "Underground never print any of this stuff anyway — they just go 'urghh'." Are The Brilliant Corners a fun band?

Davey: "It started off as a fun thing. It's art now."

...band playing rock and roll the way we like doing it. That's it, pure and simple. Rock and roll."

Funny how some people can get away with outrageous clichés isn't it?

Now, throw this article in the bin and go out and buy Collision. It's all you can do. Pure and simple, Sonic Love. Alex Kadis Heaven Sent!

Stars Of Heaven celebrate the release of their debut LP with a grim grin

This year is the fair city of Dublin's Millenium — the city of culture, caricatures and general bonhomie is celebrating a thousand years of existence. The birthplace of Oscar Wilde, immortalised by James Joyce, where Orson Welles launched his brilliant career, it is also the home town of The Stars Of Heaven.

Beneath this sheen of celebration there is an air of depression caused by mass unemployment and an economic slump. Both of which have resulted in the nation's youth migration, on a scale not seen since the infamous potato famine. It is under this cloud that I met Stan Erraught and Peter O'Sullivan, earnest six-string and four-string pluckers respectively for The Stars Of Heaven, where else but a bar by the banks of the River Liffey, their compatriots, drummer Bernard Walsh and singing guitarist Stephen Ryan, not joining us until the end of our drinking session.

Despite a gloriously sunny day, my enthusiasm for their new album, Speak Slowly, and assertions that they must be Rough Trade's band-most-likely-to they are both sunk in gloom. OK, things must be frustrating for a band determined to maintain high standards with little money and hampered by promoting an album recorded over a year ago, as Stan points out, "In the time we've taken over this record, we could have made two albums, easy."

Peter sighs and adds, "We wish we could pay the rent and buy new strings, you know, those little things that make life so easy!"

But surely things are on the up, what with a unanimous Ug thumbs up for their debut album and with their version of Gram Parsons' Wheels featured in the latest Steve Martin film, Trains, Boats And Aeroplanes?

"The financial restrictions on the band are such that it is hard to keep going. We're just so broke, without wishing to go on about it!"

This rampant pessimism is hard to reconcile with the wonderfully broad body of work that is Speak Slowly, an album that is sure to receive complementary comparisons with REM due to its guitar-based country feel, its nods towards the American West Coast and those striking harmonies. Other influences wander in and out, with Stan mortified that certain deft, wistful touches in places could be positioned alongside Everything But The Girl, himself preferring to suggest folk giant Nick Drake.

Peter sums it up, "It's just us playing with guitars. We don't have a conscious style, we don't try to impose a certain style on any song. It's not just a question of American influences, either, as the harmonies are more Beatles than Byrds. In fact the bass comes from Van Halen!"

Add to this intriguing mixture the keyboard and production talents of U2's Fairlight engineer, Paul Barrett and the mixing talents of Morrissey cohort Stephen Street and you have an important LP Dick 'Starry Eyed And Laughing' Mescal

Local radio micro-splored by Chris Mellor

OFF THE WALL: EVERY THURSDAY 10-11 PM ON RADIO 210-97/102.9 FM OR 210m/1431khz MEDIUM WAVE

210 is a small local station based in a tiny building in the middle of a sleepy housing estate on the outskirts of Reading. Its transmission area includes Slough, Andover and Newbury, but you can pick it up in Southampton and Harrow.

Off The Wall is probably the most casual radio show in the world. JB and The Fence, the two presenters, stroll into the studio at five to ten with a box of records and a few tapes, play record one, then start chatting, and find it hard to stop. It's only an hour a week but it's the only place to hear local demos and some indie music. Guests tonight are two people from a new studio in Reading called Refuge and your very own Underground reporter, taking notes and frantically plugging our great magazine.

We hear demos from Press Gang and Home And Abroad plus records from Sugarcubes, House Of Freaks and Soup Dragons, a very untogether gig guide, more of that chat and, strangest of all, some adverts for low price Led Zeppelin CDs and a local furniture store. Wow!

It's unusual for a commercial station to give any time over to local music, because it's hard to justify playing strange things to the advertisers, but local radio is supposed to be about serving the community and that's exactly what Off The Wall does.

They always play a couple of demos and used to do live sessions in the foyer, but had to stop because the neighbours complained that it was keeping the children awake.

Unfortunately, Off The Wall follows the Christian half hour. The theory is that it's one minority audience after another, but it's not exactly the best programming.

Off The Wall is as much about the personalities of JR and The Fence as it is about the music, but it is a fun show, and well worth a listen for those local groups. So check it out.

AR KANE Up Home Rough

Trade RTG The third AR Kane release sees them on their third label and, as they deconstruct their sound into a dubbed ambience, moving further from their commercial beginnings. Up Home is difficult to fully grasp, but as a taster for their upcoming LP it's ideal, demanding you queue at your local pop-shop for its arrival. Let's just hope it fulfils all the promise.

BLUE AEROPLANES Veils Of

Colour Fire RT The single to break the Aeroplanes? Well, this magnificent soundscape is by far the best vehicle for lead Aero Gerard Langley to vent his unique wandering prose. Veils Of Colour is moving, still beatnik, but enjoyable and plausible as a successful overture.

BOB Kirsty Sombrero

RTG Perfectly harmonic pop music from the much-touted Bob. More twists than a spag spiral in boiling water, as sax players cough, rhythms change and verses and choruses colour the proceedings. Love that toy organ to death.

BLYTH POWER Up From The Country Midnight Music

RTG Wizen and raggedy folk with electric guitars. Blyth Power offer a traditional (in the Fairport Convention manner) version of The Pogues, getting all hot and haughty over nothing. Cumbersome and uncute.

CATAPULT Sink Me

September RTG Second 45 from this bustling London-based crew. Emotive guitarings litter the back lot, an affected vocal skips across a simplistic (but effective) verse/chorus and it's already got its hooks in.

COIL Hellraiser Solar Lodge

RTS A lavishly packaged ten inch from Coil, which features excerpts from the group's soundtrack to Clive Barker's Hellraiser film. Unfortunately the takes were rejected as the group were deemed "too weird", but now we can all enjoy the real noises of terror in our own living room. The flipside cuts comprise a selection of jingle-come-effect pieces for advertisements which show an even quirkier spirit loose in the Coil camp. An essential purchase.

CUD Under My Hat Ediesta

RTG Flamboyant guitar music for a new age of strident enthusiasts. CUD have a mouthful of verbs ready to spit, here they're punctuated with abrasive wit and all the right expletives. CUD are an important band re-pointing the walls of contemporary music.

THE CURE Peel Sessions

Strange Fruit RT This story goes on and, well this sesh, courtesy of a fledgling Robert Smith circa '78, justifiably sees the series reach number 50 with quality and style. Killing An Arab, Boys Don't Cry and more cram for attention, underlining just how good this pre-schlock trio were.

DEATH BY MILKFLOAT TTYF

Constrictor Collectors

RRG A limited edition release, with Hull's DBM pounding the palms of their hands into their fretboards in search of the perfect beat. Driving fuzz with a melody showing itself occasionally.

FIREHOSE Sometimes SST

RTG You'd be excused for thinking that Firehose's strident debut discs might exclude them from a large audience, but no! Sometimes still retains that power, the conviction and intensity of sound, while shifting the rhythmic blend around the vocal line in a manner that could, quite strangely, pass as Beatlesque at times. Firehose haven't shaved off the uglier corners, they've allowed their brighter facets to show through a little more.

THE FLATMATES Janice Long Session Night Tracks

RT Crushingly vibrant selection from the in-form Flatmates that, although bizarrely tinny at points, is another giant leap towards their inevitable mass acceptance. What the Prims are doing now is nothing to the sweet pop pie that the Flatties are currently baking.

GOD BLESS YOU Sugar Mirror

Records RTG Snaky uptempo electronic dancefloor stuff with a leather jacket and a splash of potential pop success from these police-meet-sputnik teasers.

HEAD Sin Bin Virgin A rapturous celebration of new youth vitality (football) and subdued dance rhythms. Almost a novelty, with a guest sentence from Jimmy Greaves, and some reasonably over-enthusiastic cliches to boot. Oooh! What a scorcher!

INANDOUT Spine Cock

Constrictor Collector

RRG Seriously distorted rock 'n' roll with the sound of a hurricane blowing through the rigging, a demented sacrifice to technology and pretty fine with it too.

THE JACK RUBIES Foolish

Boy RRG You just can't help but feel that the Rubies are going to have a hit one of these days, and this tremolo-heavy tale of love gone wherever might just be the one. The Jacks can certainly write decent effective songs and just about know how to deliver that verse/chorus formula in something approaching harmony.

THE LEGEND! Step Aside

Constrictor RRG Someone once told me that The Legend! was created around a quiet, subdued dude who wouldn't say boo to a bear. Since then he's grown into the hero he was an analogy of. Step Aside is harmless strummed pop with little direction while Last Night The DJ Saved My Life is transformed into Last Night The Legend! Saved My Life. What's more, it's pressed on gross-out psyche vinyl.

MARDEN HILL Oh

Constance EIR Marden Hill's most diplomatically poetic single to date. The top vocal cuts neatly into the pumping keyboards, the verse/chorus interchange sound like Spanish guitars on a stroll from Love's Forever Changes and the

THE CHARITY CASE

SINGLE OF THE MONTH

THE CHARITY CASE Safe In The Mind Fishdisc (62 Camden Mews, London NW1 9BX) A desperately obscure gem, which seems to have something to do with ex-Sting-Rays, featuring a tremendous vocal line from a lady with maximum throat control. The main hook here, though, is a superb repetitive guitar riff which gives a psychedelic hue to a sketchy outline. Fine stuff indeed.

By way of contrast, the uptempo flipside, Sandie Shaw — World War, sounds as if Keith Moon is risen, while that darn guitarist rolls out another of those classic riffs. The vocal still bites but it's more structured, and less important on this piece. Either way, this is a classic single, a cherishable item, indeed. Buy two for posterity.

chin-in-chest ambience gives Marden Hill an extra-added kiss of style.

THE McLUSKEY BROTHERS She Said To The Diver

DDT RE C A flowing, long and elaborate guitar ballad, with the brothers getting emotional as they lean over their acoustics to pluck at your heart strings. She Said... is a big sound that gets into your fingernails, runs its fingers through your hair and should be never ending.

THE MILK MONITORS Dance With Me Vinyl Solution

P Just on the shady side of the crossroads of rock, R&B, metal, and all points Stookey, The Milk Monitors play "good time music". Not raw enough to be offensive and not clean enough to be novelty... They mean it, man!

THE MONDAYS! Fortune And Glory Unicorn

NM C Rampant mod beats, stylish vocals and a hyperactive delivery from this New York quartet. A crunchingly uplifting series of chords with harmonies and choruses in matching patterns.

THE POPPYHEADS Cremation Town Sarah

RE C Undoubtedly, the best offering yet from this fledgling — and very personal — label. The Poppyheads thread an impulsive hookline around a haunting guitar riff making Cremation Town into a heady blend of pop-meets-psychedelia without ever sounding predictable, bitter or twisted.

THE PRIMEVALS Fertile
Mind New Rose P Without doubt, this slice of slide guitar, cultured neatly with a strained vocal and thumping drums is The Primevals' best yet. Handclaps and thigh slaps make sure that this is glued to the Dansette.

THE RAW HERBS The Second Time Rooster
Records RE C First 45 for the Herbs on their own label sees them continue to tickle the thrill buds. Not as immediate as their last two, but The Second Time gets its hooks in courtesy of that silvery vocal delivery. A grower.

SEA URCHINS Solace Sarah
RE C A double A-side, but it's Solace that really takes the seafood and shakes it. Following the luscious Pristine Christine wasn't easy, but the off-balance urgency of Solace, the wobbling vocal range, the uneasy production, make it a cert to thrill. Like The Byrds after a bobsleigh accident... shaken but not stirred.

SHAKTI Forbidden Dreams
Subway RE C Following their Demonic Forces mini-set of last year, Shakti prove that they've a lot more substance than most of their contemporaries on this luscious, medium-paced smoocher — that has an underlying wail from eastern climes. Provocative and healthy.

SINGLE GUN THEORY Open The Skies Network

RE C Throbbing electronic opus with an Eastern feel. Single Gun are from Australia via the Canadian Network label and the magnificent female vocal line on Open The Skies adds an edge to this harmonious toe-tapper.

SUMMERHILL I Want You

Rocket 5 RE C A new partnership, an ex-Felt/Wishing Stones/Everything But The Girl meets Seori from Snakes Of Shake and a hit waves from the balcony. There's a distinctive guitar line, plus Seori's vocal, linked to a Byrds-paced twanger from the old school. Beautiful music to frolic with Julie Andrews.

SWANS Love Will Tear Us Apart Product Inc

RE C SWANS float in on an acoustic riff and deep throat vocal line for this Joy Division cover, which looks set to introduce them to a whole new generation of Filth seekers. This is a classic pop record that's done with enough charisma to win through.

THULE Dr Lloyd Crain

RE C Rolling guitars, industrial beat and a picture of a leather-clad dude make sure that Thule reach the right audience. Whether they'll thrill to his one dimensional grind is difficult to say though.

FRANK TOVEY Bridge St
Shuffle Mute RE C After the unconvincing discordant dance of Mkultra, Frank takes a scat-styled shuffle into another acid flashback. Perverse, slightly insane but ultimately commercial, Bridge St is Frank's finest moment since he went Back To Nature.

THE WILD FLOWERS Take Me For A Ride Chapter 22

NM C A five-track EP from the Flowers which amply explains their multi-million dollar deal with Slash in the States. A tasteful precursor to their new LP, the raucous rockerilla reaches new bounds as maximum noise barriers are breached. Chunky.

YEAH GOD! So Far Down Chapter 22

NM C Thrusting cock-rock from the hip of American-sounding Yeah God!. The singer sounds like his mouth is full of marbles, the commercial quota is high!

WIN OUT!

Mark Moore, renowned collector of religious artefacts and the man behind S-Express has been doing a spot of spring cleaning recently. The Ug Celebrity Trash Salvage Co were down his dustbins like the proverbial bat out of hell and managed to acquire, hot from the Moore sideboard, a wonderful plaster Jesus, complete with praying hands and eyes rolled Heavenward! To add to our good fortune a very nice person from Rhythm King has donated a dozen CD single remixes of the Theme From S-Express and a dozen more of the original mix CDs! All you have to do to win yourself a pair is answer us this one: What number did The Theme From S-Express peak at in the national charts? Send your answers on something tasteless, the most inventive entry cops a bonus Jesus! To arrive at Underground/S-Express, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ no later than June 13.

Keeping up with The Smiths

ban north. With the advantage of hindsight, he investigates the strangely ordinary career of The Smiths, while putting it into some sort of perspective, being both critical, appreciative, down to earth and admiring of the band's place in rock's (not so very) rich tapestry. Are they, as former Sounds writer Dave McCullough initially predicted, the last-ever major rock band? Or did Morrissey's increasing paranoia and artistic big-headedness form a partnership with "rockist" Johnny Marr that was at first dynamic, then inevitably combustible? And what part did Rourke and Joyce play in this — were they mere pawns?

Everyone's answer must rest with their own feeling about The Smiths' music; whether they found the lyrics reflective, meaningful, sensitive... or a load of pessimistic dross, and whether the guitar heroism and Interflora fastidiousness intrigued them or merely got up their nose. Mick himself investigates the possibilities thoroughly, keeping at a sensible distance, yet coming out on the side of their music, if not all their quirks. Rumour has it that he has become less than popular with Marr as a result of this book; certainly, while his approach to the band is positive, it is never clouded by sentimentality or a sense that the band could do no wrong. Even a staunch fan hates sycophants, and this certainly keeps its head, while compiling an interesting biography and compilation of press cuttings spanning the group's career.

The Smiths were, for my money, one of the best and most important groups of the past decade, and there's no doubt that history will be both kind and critical of their methods and music. They could foul up and frequently they did... but they also threw up some of the most lucid and intelligent music of the decade. Worth a book, and definitely worth this sort of book, I say. Carol Linfield

THE SMITHS The Complete Story Mick Middles (Omnibus Press, £6.95 softback)

Frequently, bands have books written about them; even more frequently, they turn out to be one of two sorts — the potted history, invariably dull and punctuated by glossy photographs, or the 'critical acclaim', which is usually not critical at all, having been written by a brown-nosed journalist making a bit of extra freelance money on the side. That bands as mundane as OMD have had artistic looking hardbacks invested on them is in itself a condemnation of the ilk... so, no surprise that someone has taken a magnifying glass to the (retrospectively brief) life and times of The Smiths.

Mick Middles is qualified to write this story because, as a Manchester journalist, he witnessed first hand the burgeoning fame and fortune of Morrissey and Marr from prime viewpoint within the maelstrom of the ur-

The Brothers Grim search for the highlights of thrash

"In a lot of ways, the hardcore scene just doesn't exist at all! So much varies from band-to-band or city-to-city. You really have to take each band as a separate thing. So long as they're doing something positive, then that's great!" Tom Lyle, GOVERNMENT ISSUE

Well, that's the opinion of someone who really ought to know what he's talking about, and it neatly sums up both the actual strength of hardcore at the present and the difficulties encountered when writing about it (excuses, excuses —ed).

There's such a great variety of bands and styles, that much more experimentation is available, as opposed to the more stagnant musical genres, such as rockabilly.

At the same time though, it does pose the question: What is hardcore, and what isn't?

Well, if you're interested in tracing the roots, there's a great book called Hardcore California (published by Last Gasp) which documents musical development between the mid-'70s and 1982 in the San Francisco and Los Angeles area. However, don't expect it to be a straightforward story, the book also features The Residents, Chrome, and even The Bangles — alongside more obvious inclusions such as Black Flag, Dead Kennedys and The Circle Jerks. . . and this section is confined to just California!

". . . My record collection goes, MINOR THREAT, MINUTE MEN, then MOTORHEAD. They're all rebellious, they all work up a sweat when they play and people slam-dance to them. So, maybe they're all hardcore but, you know, you can't say they all sound the same."
J. Robbins, GOVERNMENT ISSUE

Natural progression over a decade or so has seen older bands progressing into an assortment of styles (not always for the better, but at least they avoid niches) while new bands have been working out their own ideas. Healthy interest in hardcore now flourishes in Sweden, Italy, Japan and Germany besides America and the UK.

And, increased interest in the UK has recently led to better availability of imported records and a willingness on the part of British companies to either license or re-issue foreign releases. This has created a kind of snowball effect — as more material has become available, more interest has been generated, allowing both an increase in releases and higher prospects for foreign bands who tour here.

Perhaps the most ambitious outlet for foreign material in this country, so far, is Southern Studios who have been busy licensing various American labels such as Dischord, Alchemy and Pismort following its branching into the distribution business. Also notable in this field are Vinyl Solution/What Goes On (through Pinnacle), Wetspots, German-based Funhouse Records (both through Revolver/Cartel), and Fundamental (through Red Rhino and the Cartel).

Killdozer renegades

SO, OK. You have the money, which LP do you buy first? Which label does what to who and what is the best vintage?

Dischord made their name with early waxings from MINOR TREAT, GOVERNMENT ISSUE and SOA, and have developed steadily with recent output maintaining very high standards. DAG NASTY have consolidated their past popularity with their latest Wig Out At Denkos LP and new singer, Peter Cortner, proves himself to be one of the best vocalists/lyricists around, while the band demonstrate how easily they can veer from heads-down thrash through to slow, acoustic numbers. Ex-Minor Threat vocalist, Ian Mackaye, has resurfaced on the self-titled, EMBRACE LP, although the actual recordings date back to 1985, and the band themselves only existed until the following year. The songs are good but are let down by their low production, which is surprising because that's a department where Dischord releases are usually strong.

GRAY MATTER's Take It Back mini-album is another retrospective release, again from 1985. Altogether, it's far better produced and, perhaps, closest to DAG NASTY's Wig Out. . . (should you need a comparison), it's definitely an essential purchase for anyone interested in Dischord bands.

Ian Mackaye's next port of call was on SCREAM's third album, Banging The Drum, lending a hand on the production front besides adding some occasional backing vocals. Overall, the sound suffers from a rather streamlined, rock approach for the most part but when the songs are allowed to let go, some fine moments are created. Alchemy Records have several fine albums available in the UK. Most notably, the superb Rock 'n' Roll Nightmare by RKL, featuring some excellent songs, from the ridiculous Scab On My Brain through to serious, personal tunes such as Seein' You. The whole record is an appetising prospect and features some carefully thought-out artwork in the guise of a free, 32-page, comic/lyric book.

Pismort has been responsible for some of the first US/UK record releases by several Japanese hardcore acts. The sampler LP, Thrash Till Death, features some great materials from GAUZE, LIPCREEM, OUTO and SYSTEMA TIC DEATH. Gauze, in particular, stand out; slightly reminiscent of early Bad Brains, while Outo deliver in a style not a million miles away from Septic Death.

Albums by American bands on Pismort, that will enhance any ear-bleeding h'core investigation, include Back From The Dead by Negative Gain and Ashes To Ashes by FINAL CONFLICT. While the latter betray their liking for UK bands such as Discharge in both cover photos and musical content, NEGATIVE GAIN tear-out a trifling 20 high-velocity songs with a fine, original approach.

Southern handle various other intriguing releases including PRONG's Forced, CHRIST ON PARADE's A Mind Is A Terrible Thing and KILLDOZER's Little Baby Buntin, alongside PAILHEAD's I Will Refuse EP.

Prong feature ex-members of DA MAGE and SWANS' drummer Ted Parsons, at a considerably faster pace than his regular bands' material, while Christ On Parade are clearly attempting to break away from the archetypal hardcore styles and succeed in an laudable manner. Retaining both integrity and energy, they manage to experiment with tape-loops and keyboards, to great effect.

Killdozer spout from the same deadly vein as former Subterranean faves Flipper and those current Zeppies Butthole Surfers. Not the usual kinda hardcore sound but just as raw and energetic.

Pailhead have tried to keep their identity as obscure as their EP is confounding. Mind you, if we said that it comes across as being a cross between Naked Raygun, Minor Threat and Ministry, we wouldn't be giving away too many clues, would we?

Moving further north, we stumble across Fundamental who have recently established themselves as a label primarily concentrating on re-issues of classic noise. Presently, they're bombarding the market with albums licensed from the Placebo and Toxic Shock labels.

ZERO BOYS' Vicious Circle arrives from the aforementioned and features an extra six tracks to the US version. On show are 20, self-immolating songs which work free from a thrashy, melodic beat overcast with a nasal whine similar to pre-hip-hop Beastie Boys. It's an outstandingly punchy racket that comes highly recommended.

THE HICKOIDS' We're In It For The Corn, was also originally on Toxic Shock. It combines country, jazz and fast power. Dating back to '85, but re-mastered in late '87, it's an acquired taste, albeit admirable!

Fundamental have also been involved in establishing JFA in the UK. Their latest LP, Untitled, dispenses the awful bubbly-bass of their debut and strides towards a more flamboyant, less-manicured.

Nottingham's Wetspots label, which is just recovering from some minor controversy over its debut release by WHITE FLAG, has also been responsible for FLAG OF DEMOCRACY's excellent Shatter, Your Day album. On Shatter standard h'core sorepoints — such as conformity and victimisation — are tackled within 16 rampant songs that can only be described as an amalgamation of early Descendents and Adrenalin OD.

White Flag's Sgt Pepper album is a completely different kettle of mop-tops, however, merging neo-psychedelia and R&B into a kinda Ramones set-up.

And, there's more... through shops with more eccentric stocking policies, like Vinyl Solution in London, a host of less mainstream acts have filtered through. The hardcore section has never been so jammed...

Chicago's NAKED RAYGUN unleash their third LP Jettison, and look set to finally reach a wider audience in this country, with a possible tour in the very near future.

Arriving from Chicago as well, is the debut long-player by SCREECHING WEASEL. Originally out on Underdog but now put out through What Goes On over here, it features a brilliant sick sense of humour, fronting a crossover of Dickies and Descendents style tunes! Hippies Must Die! Indeed...

Descendents in search of All!

On the subject of THE DESCENDENTS, SST have released their Liveage platter through their new UK distribution deal through Rough Trade and the Cartel. It's a fitting, live end to an era as Milo goes back to college and the remaining members continue as ALL.

SPAZZTIC BLURR have their excellent debut album released on another Nottingham label, Earache through Revolver, and pretty damn strange it is as well! Hank Williams OD's on Suicidal Tendencies or was it Spike Milligan?

Through Meantime Records, there's HDOQ's You Suck — a very heavily drawn out American influence underlining this wonderful noise, but don't take it too seriously.

DEZERTER are a Polish band, and their Underground Out Of Poland LP on Maximum Rock 'n' Roll Records is interesting for the name of the label alone. Their style is plagiaristic in places but generally adopts a medium-paced, abrasive jaunt that rattles your attention easily. Stimulating!

Perhaps a good place to round off would be with another lot of recent visitors to these shores, Australia's premier skate-thrashers, THE HARD-ONS. Having already sold well on import, they've secured a deal with Vinyl Solution. Worst Of..., their retrospective album, serves as an exceptional introduction to what they do best — play loud and fast. Hot on its heels come the all new, 18 track, tastefully titled Dickcheese! Their UK debut gig, at London's Sir George Robey, heralded the group's arrival as a force to be reckoned with. Short songs, varying from Ramones-inspired thrash-pop to harder, more restrained, instrumentals which allow the Hard-Ons obvious lyrical talent to shine through. Guitarist, Blackie, filled us in with some comments on the Australian hardcore scene after the gig. "It's really good at the moment. The whole 'scene' is certainly on the 'up' again. At least, it is in Melbourne and Sydney anyway! There are a lot of good bands, like Mass Appeal and The Hellmen... and there doesn't seem to be much trouble at gigs these days either!"

Obviously there are areas in the post-punk, thrash and even modern hardcore movements (swaying from metal to punk) that we've not had room to elaborate on. But those mentioned are a good jumping off point and subsequent Underground issues will feature latest developments.

On reflection, it's worth mentioning that the following all offer comprehensive mail-over services that deserve more than a measly sae, so send one now:

Wetspots, 22 Meadow View, Southwell, Notts, NG25 0EQ.
Vinyl Solution, 39 Hereford Road, London W2.

TIP SHEET

NEW TAPE DEMOS

■ This month's guest critic on the Tip Sheet is Philip Hall, PR consultant for The Pogues, Nasty Rox Inc, Yargo, Hue & Cry, Boys Wonder etc. Philip used to work at Stiff Records and won the 'Music Week PR Of The Year' award in 1986. His hobbies include gatecrashing backstage parties and sweet-talking journalists into writing nice things about his groups. He is a hardened cynic.

Julian Henry mixes the drinks and keep count of the score while Philip rambles on (and on).

Points awarded are for content (of tape), delivery (in performance terms), presentation (of overall package) and potential (as to whether they'll bend a chequebook or two). Any groups wishing to have their tapes decimated, send them to Underground Tip Sheet, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ.

THE CILLAS (17 St Chads Close, Rochdale, Lancs) make a garage sound with a healthy beat feel. "Bit of a negative letter," commented Philip, as he swigged from his bottle of Grolsch. "They're going on about all the other bands with names like theirs which is not really what we want to hear about. The music sounds like it was recorded in their front room with a load of kids yelling in the background. It's OK, but not really my sort of thing. Got any more beer?"

5 5 4 3

STRAIGHT TO THE POINT (20 Newton Gardens, Ripon, Yorkshire) sent their tape to the editor of UG, addressing him as 'Mr Henderson'. "They seem like polite young men," sneered Philip unkindly, "It's good to see that they know their place, huh, huh, huh?" The band sounded promising but only included one song on their cassette. "Blimey, that's no bloody good is it?" exclaimed Philip, burping and opening another bottle of Grolsch. "The music seems alright but how are we supposed to judge them by one song? Pass me some niblets."

6 7 5 6

DIG (24 Orchard Drive, Cowley, Uxbridge, Middlesex) have a good name, but unfortunately did not impress Philip with their music. "You can tell that they're like by listening to this," he said. "Clothes from Jumble Sales, short hair and glasses, just finished their A-levels. They probably think that Red Lorry Yellow Lorry are a pop band and they buy all their records at the Rough Trade shop. The music is pretty boring, I've heard it all before."

2 1 3 1

THE REVEREND ARSONISTS (71 Elmfield Road, Newton Abbey, Co. Antrim, N Ireland) sent us a professional-sounding tape of well-executed rock — as in U2. "Well, looks like they've got their shit together over there in County Antrim, doesn't it?" scoffed Philip. "This is good, but it does lack the vital spark. The best so far, I suppose, though they sound like they might well be members of the Cure Fan Club."

6 7 5 6

THE CRISPS (14 The Drive, Hove, Sussex) wowed Philip to mutter, "Well! They've not been to Art School, have they?" Their music is bright and commercial. "Yes," agreed Philip, "Very Brighton, very middle class pop, reminds me of Manhattan Transfer, actually. Can we get a move on, it's almost opening time."

6 6 7 7

JAMES DEAN DRIVING EXPERIENCE (49 Grafton Way, London W1) had Philip umming and arring over their efforts. "Yes, best one so far? Or is it? Umm. Good. Quite refreshing. Glug, glug. Burp! Definitely better than a lot of indie singles you hear." JDDE's music is unashamedly jangly and, with song titles like Lonely Hearts X1 v The Rest Of The World, they're surely destined for great things.

7 8 6 7

THE NIVENS (63 Evesham Place, Beacon Lane, Cramlington, Northumberland) have a familiar name, and have quite possibly sent us a tape before. Their handout is short and funny. "A bit like Teardrop Explodes," said Philip, "But I'd happily go and down a few jars in the local boozier if they were playing down there. This is good enough to interest a major record label."

7 8 9 7

THE SINGING DETECTIVE (01-840 6007) have possibly the worst name in this month's Tip Sheet. Philip stares at their photo. "Ohmigod, look at this — the keyboard player's wearing marbled jeans, the bassist's got a Hawaiian shirt and one of those funny modern basses with no head on it... how absolutely awful." What about the music? "Extremely average songs, but quite well played. This band need a Paul McCartney pretty badly."

5 6 4 6

A DISTANT GARDEN (567 Bolton Road, Bury, Lancs) make a noise that Philip describes as 'atmospheric'. "Their handout makes them sound like Born Against Christians," he said. "I think it's really important for the group to send a decent picture and handout with their tapes. In some cases, it is 50 per cent as important as the music is." What about A Distant Garden? "Not much to say about them other than very low key and pleasant-ish."

7 7 4 6

THE OCTOBER GROUP (41 Gosforth Road, Blackpool) send their tape to us with a picture of the late Kenneth Williams. How strange. How upset they must have been when he recently passed on. "This group obviously care about presentation," said Philip, "They haven't even bothered to write their name on the cassette. There's 8 songs on the tape which is too much, and there's some complete claptrap in their handout saying that they've been 'critically acclaimed in Flyde'. The music isn't much cop. Is that it? Good, just in time for a drink!"

4 6 5 6

WIN OUT!

The Pixies have a rather brill new album to shout about! Surfer Rosa, on 4AD, produced by Steve Albini, a man much featured in Underground's hallowed pages! We have five of these illustrious items to give away to the first five smart arses who can answer the Pixies' puzzler:

What is Mrs John Murphy's maiden name? Answers on something artistic, please, to Underground/Pixies, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ by June 13.

WIN OUT!

Ha, ha, ha, Hairway To Steven... strap on your boards and head for the beach, bums, those lovely Butthole Surfers have six copies of their new wiped-out LP to give away. The question is: Hairway To Steven is a pun on a song title by a certain band, one member of which is dead. Who is the mystery corpse?

Answers on an acid-soaked postcard to Underground/Butties, Spotlight Publications, Greater London House, Hampstead Road, London NW1 7QZ by June 13, bongheads!

The Singing Detective

TIP

... yet more tapes? You bet! Underground gets another tape-shaped brick through the window, and Nick Brody wearily picks through some of the greatest, some of the most meaningful (and some of the most meaningless) chrome samples of the decade.

A handful of oddities introduce this section, like the twee pop of the poisoned Basement Blue (who should be knocking on Simon Bates's door), the perverted craziness of The Nero Wolf Experience (a man busting a spleen to wear leather undergarments), the bizarre Sulphate Family (whose tape was enlivened by a screeching whine that might not have been accidental), the metallic void of Shotgun Syndicate (who didn't bother with an address), The Candidates (who possibly should have offered us one) and Paradise Vendor (who play rock music for air-hangers). All in all, it's a zany collection, and there's more. . .

ENVY (0634 837933) are stuck in a Joy Division-buy-a-synth mode. Moody and more than a little old fashioned.

THE PLASTIC INFIDEL (0604 250827) have a sense of humour, but their plodding post-pomp songs needs one really. Sounds like someone got a synth for Christmas and it's their group, anyway. Decent songs that need arranging.

STRETCH CARLIE STRETCH (22 Lyndale Avenue, Osbaldwick, York) say ha, ha, ha. But will we want to even get the joke? Yet more synths, bedroom percussion and Mark E on vocals.

ACCELERATION COUCH (Eastbourne 22444) are deep, shaky, cut-up, choppy and pretty darn groovy. This release is off-the-wall and available for your hard-earned cash. . . I'd like to hear more.

JELLYSTONE PARK (051 920-7753) have blowtorch, will travel. Fused together on their two track tape is the kind of commercial creativity that major labels crave, plus some fine songs. If they look they could even take that dreadful name into the charts! OK, Boo Boo?

REMBRANDT (Praze 831490) have a list of influences as long as your Biff Bang Underground collection. Twangling along with a hint of ol' style rock 'n' roll, Rembrandt Paint Pictures of summer afternoons, with a dash of drama.

BOB HOPE (66 Kent Road, Old Town, Swindon, Wilts) have a trickling soulfulness, a well arranged sound like early Motown, opting to cream their pie with a dominant vocal line and some naturally embracing guitar lines. Worth inspection (and no synths anywhere).

GIRL OF MY BEST FRIEND (0933 314440) play pert Primitives/Darling Buds guitar splurge in the true style of everyday pop — the thing is that they have a lead vocalist whose range is far superior to both of the other aforementioned combos. The question is, can a major pluck this Willingborough outfit from obscurity before the Post-Crash depression hits?

MARCEL KOOPMAN (Prof Tremblaan 8, 3705C2 Zeist, Netherlands) is very much in the Edward Barton school of eccentric lunacy, except he's liable to break into a melodic/near harmonious interlude at the drop of a plectrum.

THE RELATIONS (0738 37110) have already unleashed two fine singles, but their latest has been temporarily shelved and now appears as a demo. There's no let-up in the well-constructed guitar-waddling pop of The Relations and you can't help but feel if Polydor are brave enough to fork out for The Wonderstuff, someone should be able to muster a few notes in support of these Scots purists.

ANGLES IN ASPIC (01-444 6031) have a vocalist with a near operatic delivery. You'll either love or hate this gothic pomp. Either way, it's certainly professional.

THE CAT KILLERS (01-759 0450) play wicked versions of country tunes (with sporadically in tune guitar). At other times they opt to have a lunge at more worthy, less off-the-wall noises. They sound like a rip-roaring combo, but the key word must be. . .LOUD!

FIREWORK'S FACTORY (Dublin 377180), dare we say, have a touch of the Bono vocals. Underneath it all, and through the hazy mix a few fine pop/rock ideas lurk, but it's all a little woolly at the moment.

LOVE JUNGLE (0272 566280) pretty and close to Fleetwood Mac (shriek). "I like you", the lady says in a Joni Mitchell sort of way. The drummer only knows one beat, but that vocal line is the business. I wonder if she wears long dresses?

EASTER ISLAND (0904 87406) have John Martyn and Ben Watt dribbling from their ears. Pleasant, strummed pop that'll have them rolling in the bedrooms.

CHALK GARDEN (01-541 4695) do it for real with songs and a singer who knows that words can rhyme. Instrumentally they need a little polish, but there's enough "rock" stature here to slot neatly into today's empty pages.

BREAK THE ICE (091 290 0060) wend a tense and taut melody screeching "Give us all your money and we'll outsell T'Pau."

THE FOLLOWING (031 443 0910) are from Scotland, but wait, they're far superior to Danny Wilson et al. The crux of the matter is that they're really two groups arm-wrestling for control. My bet is on the departure of the squidgy organ sound, then they'll be worth your time.

THE INDIAN FEAST (01-878 4090) claim to be fresh from Switzerland, and their choppy beat-poet stance has some of the international to it, but it all ends in tears as the vocals can't match the occasional blip and the scurrilous guitar. Worth investigation through.

THE BLUE MONKEY EXPERIENCE (041-889 8642) stray into the floating, near-ambient world of gushingly austere music. This three-track tape resounds around the inner ear with the ease or Cocteau of Eno, but it has a certain crafted edge that makes it urgently playable. Creative and intense.

POPE ON DOPE (0378 81-4255) offer haunted melodramas that just fail to make your worst nightmare come alive. Offbeat chords meet discordant disharmony.

DISGUISE (061 225 2972) title their five-tracker Jocky Wilson Says, which is a pretty cheap jibe for some accomplished music. First off they sound quite congenial — in a post-Pogues riotous folk vein — but track two's subtle reggae rhythms merely cement the idea that they're fine musicians in search of a tune.

KING CONEHEAD (01-221 9735) are lyrically suicidal. Swearing, skanking, cutting and claustrophobic, they take their plummy accents through the unemotional motions of rap and rant.

STRANGE LOOKS (01-449 4171) are strange. There's a fine chorus there, but there's just too much going on in the verses, it all gets a little confusing. Badly produced, but plenty upstairs.

PLEASURE THIEVES (01-767 2726) aim for an accessible lively sound and manage it quite well. On limited resources they've produced an emotive, soulful three-song tape that, although not top 40 yet, is a bolshy pretender.

GIANT INTERNATIONAL (01-737 5379) adopt the angst-heavy taped backing and throbbing punk chord overcoat. Like The Clash but lacking the political direction. That's either good or bad.

CIRCUIT BREAKERS

Sarah Davis covers the capital, from Hype to the Mean Fiddler, in search of the best new live acts Next month: hello Croydon, where's the bar?

Currently gigging round London, with occasional forays back into home territory, the north east, Shoo! is the archetypal punk/thrash band with a tinge of Magazine, for good measure. Neil's angry vocals and stage contortions being backed by manic noise, makes them a deservedly popular live act. Catch their just-released 12-inch single, Work And Wit and their video if you can. Diskord Datkord. Three men and a dog. The dog's name is Diskord, the men Jonny, Timley and Adam, play an electric blend of camp rauch, punk, covers and sampled sounds.

Timley, Adam (ex-Stupid Babies) and Jonny (ex-Specimen (sorry Jonny)) will be releasing a cover of X-Ray Spex's Identity shortly. Their "crazy" sense of humour is an integral part of seeing them live, with the only member of the band who doesn't leap about or rip off stripey tights, revealing a mere red G-string is Diskord the dog. A model pet. Diskord Datkord also have a video called The British Museum.

The Mute Drivers recently had a bad day at Hype. Early in the evening, amps and similar necessary stuff were nicked from their van. Two unhappy men came on stage and after 1 1/2 muteltrash tunes, guitarist hit tantrum boiler flung his guitar down and stormed off, leaving a very disappointed audience. But, I'm told, they did go back a couple of days later to apologise (and pick up the guitar, no doubt).

Diskord Datkord

Boolean Matrix (silly computer jargon name) from Doncaster are drum-machine-Gang-Of-Four that you can dance to. Phil and Paul (ex-Dreams Of Desire and Split Field) and Craig'll be on an EP soon. Look out for Craig's lyrics, very much in the thought-provoking angry poetry league.

At Hype, I also caught up with Uncle Fester, described by bassist The Essential Dooley as "Guinness with a dash of Holsten Pils." They've almost successfully blended Hendrix guitar with slap bass. The contrasting rhythms are intriguing and vocalist Rabbi has a rich Jim Morrison delivery. There's grebo rock with a different tang from Shine, down for a date from Manchester, who say they're "Newcastle Brown Rock". (beer metaphors are popular this month!). Shine, who recently supported Crazyhead, will have a flexi-disc soon. Post-punk-avant-garde-fury or what?

Sleeping Dogs Wake are a band you must look out for. Singer Robert and drummer Karen are deafening; their music sends shivers down your spine. Karen thwacks at her Simmons kit like she's demented, while Robert crashes his guitar and slams his sampler (ooh-er) in a gorgeous unholy row. They're going to record cassettes for sale at gig because people continually approach them longing to take home some of their fury.

If you swallow the Banshees and The Cure with one gulp then, Fat Babies could be what you've been longing for as a chaser. Their vocalist, who looks like a debutante from the waist up and a tart from the waist down, sounds startlingly like Siouxsie and sings what is apparently the same melody for each song over a background of well-executed Cure guitar. Don't get me wrong, I enjoyed them.

a glossary of glib

agog

Another punishing plunge into rock's tatty dictionary. Let the B-times roll. . .

JELLO BIAFRA: Censorship expert and ex-Dead Kennedy, featured in the centre spread of this very issue.

BIRDY: Classic Alan Parker film with Peter Gabriel soundtrack (Virgin). Deep and delving story of bird fetishist on his return from Vietnam.

BLACK FLAG: Originators of SST, now with 300 albums to their credit. From thrash, punk and short hair to greaseball metal.

BLAST FIRST: Industrious Mute subsidiary that's home for Sonic and Ciccione Youth, Big Stick, AC Temple and all that kind of loud mazumba no wave musak. Mucho cred and etc etc.

Debbie Harry's TV lips in Videodrome

BLONDIE: The blonde who launched a generation. Seminal '70s NY punky-pop band with Debbie Harry in full effect. Their debut British tour, supported by XTC, pulled in few faces, an appearance on Tony Wilson's TV show brought back the mini-skirt and Debs ended up in Cronenberg's Videodrome flick. Her nude-shot past was exposed and a recent revival was stodge-heavy.

MARC BOLAN: Ex-hippie who became a formidable influence on punk. Suffered glam and a kiddies' time TV special series before being killed in a car accident.

BOMB PARTY: Formerly Farm Life, these Leicester tunesmiths went metal before the Gaye Crazyheads got signed, subsequently getting none of the praise. Their latest album, Liberace Rising, is a stunner with new angles carved in their guitar cases.

BOMBER JACKETS: Very fashionable '70s leather tackle that ended up being the standard dress of beer-swilling brickies. Probably set for a revival after flares.

KALEIDOSCOPE SOUND REVOLUTIONS

sharp plastic?

Peter Perturbed says. . .

IS THIS THE NEW CREATION?

Erm, no, but it got your attention, didn't it? A flat somewhere in the deepest hell-holes of Moseley, Birmingham, is where record label Kaleidoscope Sound prepares its musical assaults, intended to effortlessly upstage the inhabitants of a stagnant Indianapolis. Indianapolis is a place where people like to hear the same things over and over again, be it something shambly, something def or something with long greasy hair. At best, quality is incidental, but usually irrelevant. In Indianapolis Kaleidoscope is an anomaly. (You see, the theme of this record label is not to have a theme, and at this point I find myself sounding a bit too much like Alan Whicker, so I'll tell you who its instigators are.)

One of them is Joe Foster, co-ordinator of Creation Records and subsequent house producer at that label. He is complemented by ex-journalist and chiropractist to many top entertainers (Terence Trent D'Arby, David Bowie, Richard Branson) Helen Fitzgerald (are you sure about this? — ed). Both are keen to stress the absence of a partyline running through the list of artists that comprise the Kaleidoscope vibe.

But hey, let's get a little more specific here.

Like, erm, there's the uplifting mayhem of those My Bloody Valentine people whose Lovely Sweet Darlene 45 turned a thousand ears to their direction and left them thinking, "Hmmm, not too bad". However, if you're in a mood of greater solemnity don't listen to I, Ludicrous; their preposterous tales will make you laugh and all your friends will deem you politically unsound, in the event of which you can pull out your Niall MacMahon LP; a captivating excursion into the shaky territory of social comment. Niall sails through with character, wit and sincerity, convincing me that the future of WhatEwanMacCollWasGoodAt will be safe for Niall to manipulate well after Ewan's pushing up daisies.

Then again, if you thought that pop music was, only ever a great big colostomy bag with the faces of Rick Astley and Bananarama painted on it, think again and hear The Sneetches' forthcoming LP, and then write idolatory letters to me in awe of my mind-bogglingly excellent taste. And while you're at it, how about purchasing the forthcoming Surf Drum LP; half a side of well-documented gems like Walkaway, Black Tambourine and All There Is — perfect examples of the Surf Drum's feel for a three minute classic, with all the charm of, erm. . . something very charming indeed.

And there's more! Aidan Walsh adds a whole new dimension to Kaleidoscope's peculiar roster; Ireland's only punk cabaret clown to appear on the same TV screen as Gary Byrne has just had Life Story Of My Life released; a largely autobiographical LP which may go quite some way towards explaining why it's completely devoid of anything approaching sanity.

Onto more serious matters though. Slaughter Joe's LP, All Around My Hobby Horse's Head, is a glorious joyride into a world where throwing a television through a window is standard behaviour on the lost highway of rawwwk'n'roll! And finally, a word for Nikki Sudden's seasoned sidekick, Dave Kusworth. His new group The Bounty Hunters have a truly horrendous line in post-Bolan grotesque haircuts; fortunately, their forthcoming five-track single does well to detract from their tragic appearance. However, don't take my word for it. See what Mr Foster has to say. . .

ARE YOU HAPPY WITH THE RECEPTION THAT KALEIDOSCOPE SOUND HAS RECEIVED?

"It could have been better, but it's harder because it doesn't have an easily identifiable nature, but then that's what real record companies are like. Polygram had The Velvet Underground and James Last. If they had had five Velvet Undergrounds, Polygram would be a crap little label working out of Hamburg, instead of being the biggest music corporation in the world."

BUT SURELY YOU BELIEVE IN THE QUALITY OF ALL YOUR ACTS. . .

"Well, I've no doubt Polygram believe James Last is very good."

RE-REWIND

Back on the racks, dusted off from the vaults, this month's selection of re-issues and repackage boasts some real gems. . .

Albums reviewed by Dave Henderson

THE CRAZY WORLD OF ARTHUR BROWN

Strangelands Reckless RECK 2 RE This lost second album of Arthur Brown hails from 1970 and features the loon himself, er, looning. There's a psychedelic and filmic overtone here as the druggie vibes take us into the inner-sanctum of Artie's visionary prose. He claims it's akin, in time and sound, to Miles Davis's Bitches Brew, but there couldn't have been two dudes so totally over the edge at the same time. Bizarre.

THE DAMNED

Music For Pleasure Demon Records FIEND108 P Wow, sick of punk. . . so soon. After The Damned's magnificent 90mph Damned, Damned album for Stiff in '77, their second LP saw a line-up change (enter Lu on second guitar) and a production credit for Pink Floyd's Nick Mason. The band were set on developing their geared-up rock sound but ended up floundering and directionless for most of this throbbing set. Stand out tracks are Problem Child, Stretcher Case and Don't Cry Wolf, but little else here has the energy of their former days or the professionalism of more recent hits.

THE GRAHAM BOND ORGANIZATION

The Sound of '65/ There's A Bond Between Us Edsel DED 254 P Two original Bond albums coupled to make an intriguing double set, which illustrates Graham Bond's brand of gritty blues — highlighted by that distinctive Hammond organ sound. There's rock legend here, with names like Ginger Baker, Jack Bruce and John McLaughlin passing through the group, and something of rock's tragedy as, after Bond's career failed to ignite due to the advent of different styles of UK pop/rock, he committed suicide. In retrospect, this is a fitting way to remember the highpoint of his career.

And Suddenly It's. . . Bam Caruso KIRI 021 RE The Banke have their former forays massaged, stealing the best from their wishy-washy Beatles psychedelia, with a cover of The Four Tops' Walk Away Renee, a few odd single cuts and a selection of album takes, and suddenly it's. . . another Left Banke LP, topped with the usual '60s hallmarks, sleeved in a quality Bam jacket and a cert to be a collector's item in a year or so. Not the most dynamic of musical alternatives, but the Left Banke have their moments.

THE STOOGES

Metallic 2xKO Skydog 62232-1 RE The final Stooges' concert in its entirety (previously only half of this excursion into self-abuse was available). Starting in fine, flowing rock 'n' roll style and working through Raw Power, Search And Destroy et al, the Ig gets some unpleasant response and by the end of the set he's cajoling the egg-throwing audience into more assaults. Their reward is a threatened 55-minute version of Louie Louie. Shame he didn't do that, really. "I am the greatest," he snorts as the stage invaders holt proceedings. Now that's what I call showbiz!

TRISOMIE 21

Le Repos Des Enfants Heureux Licensed LD 8814 RE Trisomie's early works get a retrospective dust-off on this second vinyl volume which will eventually comprise half a CD of primal Eurostrangeness. On this showing their roots vary dramatically between the Joy Division/early 4AD school of doomy wince and the American/Ralph Records-type eccentricity of anyone from Tuxedomoon to Chrome. I can't say I'm totally enamoured with the end result, as each section/track seems reasonably directionless, but perhaps that's the kind of effect they were chasing as the real unique quality here is the variation of interesting noises they utilise.

VARIOUS

The Blues Sessions Hi Records DHI UKLP 427 P The Demon archivists dig deeper into the Hi label swam-

THE BYRDS Never Before Re-flyte MH 70318 RE (import) Give Jim Dickens a big hand. He's been down the CBS vaults, dusted off some old Byrds sessions, tidied up a few ragged edges and this here is the result. Unreleased gems nestle next to alternative takes and stereo mixes of old favourites, all dating from '65 to '67, the Byrds' peak period. Those who shelled out for the Back Pages bootleg and were miffed by the poor sound quality will be eager to get their hands on this, with its pristine versions of She Has A Way and It's All Over Now, Baby Blue, and will be interested to hear the full version of Triad, the song that got David Crosby a well-deserved booting out of the group. That track apart, the record still kicks. A handsome package with fine sleeve notes and a cool pull-out wall poster! Vachel Booth pland and pull out a peach of a double set — collecting some of the wildest variations of the blues imaginable. Don Hines gets bleary and beery then moves uptempo, Big Amos Patton opts for some boogie woogie, gets a shade R&B and lets Big Lucky Carter introduce the more soulful side. The beat goes on with Joe Lee Carter (who unleashes a scorching guitar solo on one cut), then there's Don Bryant's gospel-inspired soul, the incomparable Willie Mitchell, Gene Miller and finally George Jackson's tribute to Aretha on Aretha, Sing One For Me. A wide ranging and very gratifying slice of history.

VARIOUS

Prestige Jazz Sampler Prestige/Ace RIVM 002 P A monster collection to let the semi-interested, the converted and the keen of ear to sample some of the finest jazz sounds from the Prestige catalogue, now made available by Ace. The tracks are taken from the sleazy, sweaty heydays of the '50s and '60s and the run-out reads like a who did what, when, in jazzland. John Coltrane shows up in moody, laidback style, Mose Allison poses questions with the exceptional A Young Man, Roland Kirk, Gene Ammons and Art Blakey keep the pressure on and a trip to the video shop to get Angel Heart again seems like a must. The secrets of jazz buffoonery and one-upmanship might have made the medium seem quite daunting, but this embracing collection will ease you in quite nicely.

THE YOUNGBLOODS

The Youngbloods Edsel 271 P Earth Music Edsel 274 P At the time, The Youngbloods were considered to be an acid rock combo but both of these albums are far too beaty and tasteful to be called "far out". Led by ex-folk singer Jesse Colin Young, the group are more like a good soulful R&B band, with a touch of country and some nice harmonies. As far as the rock things go, they fall on the tasteful side of Canned Heat (and they're hardly Grand Funk Railroad, if you know what I mean).

RE-PLAY

Antiques, curios and gems unearthed. . .

What were you doing in the second post-punk record revolution?

1977 ● JOHN COOPER CLARKE grits his teeth and offers the Innocents EP, a classic sketch linking poetry to minimal guitar-based "futuristic" noise splurge. Contains the wonderful Psyche Sluts track and led to a CBS contract and a starring role with the Honey Monster.

1978 ● THE MEKONS released Where Were You? on the forward looking Fast Product label. Soon to sign to Virgin, they're still with us in a slightly more beer-sodden stance. Groovod 45.

1980 ● SOFT CELL lunge forward with The Mutant Moments EP on their own A Big Frock Records label. It did very little and was only a treasured item in retrospect when their Memorabilia dance opus and Some Bizzare hit the scene. What's more? It still sound bloody awful. The perps are still boogieing in various moulds.

1981 ● THE THE hit the world head on with Cold Spell Ahead on SBL (the Some Bizzare Label), an incredibly messy version of what was later to become This Perfect Day. This drum machine-heavy version is at least different, if a little out of tune.

All are rare grooves, varying in price in today's collector-crazed market, from £1.50 to 20 notes. Shop carefully. . . and avoid panic buying.

SHEND ON THE RUN

CONFESSIONS OF A POP ICON: THE CHARTS WOULD BE A FINE THING.

Before we proceed with more eloquent prose, I must clear something up (never put full ashtrays on electric typewriters). Some people have asked why the photo of myself at the top of the Shend column has been replaced by that of a Bolivian trade union official orchestrating an all out strike at the 'Muddy Metal' magnesium mine outside La Paz. Well, the photo is in fact my good self, taken by Lord Lichfield as his entry for the 1987 Cadburys Creme Egg photographic competition. (He lied about his age, but still failed to be among the prize winners in the under sevens section. He said, what did I expect as there wasn't a single breast in his entry.)

Anyway, back to the world of pop and the one thing, after all the others, that every Billy Beat dreams of entering. . . The Charts!

FACT 1: Putting any pile of miscellaneous articles into a list, numbered one to ten, grabs the attention of Joe and Joanna Public. Charts are popular due to mankind's built in obsession with what scientists call the 'Who is winning the bloody race' syndrome. They give us a mild thrill but are of very little worth. (See Carlsberg, Heineken, Skol etc.)

Many of the independent charts are simply one person's favourite discs and other than seeing if your much loved 12 inch is among them, a collection by Radical Rob of the Sunny Sounds Roadshow, Halifax means bugger all in anyone's book. His floor fillers will always include the single that Samantha gave him and, by including it, he hopes she will accompany him to the British turntable and amplifier exhibition at Earls Court. Samantha says 'Sod off, creep!' and another sordid chapter of corruption in music fails to pervert.

Other indie charts purport to represent record sales and appear in the pop weeklies we always read but never buy. This can be verified by the mangled remnants strewn around the floor of WH Smith on any Wednesday afternoon. I was told that in order to get your record in these charts all one had to do was ring some man who was responsible for compiling them and tell him that it had sold thousands. I was given a telephone number and rang him frequently for years each time we released a new hotty. It was during, probably, the fiftieth phone conversation when. . . He said that, although he quite looked forward to updates on my career, he felt that as security man for the building, there was little he could do to help. I thanked him courteously and hung up.

FACT 2: Never believe a single jot anyone from another band tells you, especially when they begin with, 'What you need to do, is. . .'

What you need to do, is make sure your disc is in the shops and that someone else has rung the right person and told him fibs about sales to date. I have never found anyone important enough to bribe in order to get tunes up the indies, but being mates with the spotty Dire Straits fan who works in Our Price may be useful if he's ever asked to compile a chart for Melody Maker.

We now come to those sponges of sin. . . The national chart. Those, whether mixed with headache-inducing computer graphics on some poxy cheap 'We understand the kids. They're just unlicensed BMW drivers' ITV show, or the ones that they read very slowly in silly voices on Top Of The Pops, thus preventing any chance of you videoing Tiffany's latest masterpiece in full, constitute an infringement to your intelligence.

More intrigue and funny goings on surrounds those tachographs of taste than can be mustered for the raging 'Is Zola Budd Thatcher's illegitimate daughter?' controversy, with the word 'Hype' being bandied around like it was going out of fashion.

I mean, if you worked in Slip-A-Disc record emporium and some slimy smoothie from a record company turned up with a briefcase covered in Ozzy Osborne backstage pass stickers and he said 'Put down some sales ticks next to the new Iron Maiden 12 inch and I'll give you a padded satin tour jacket with 'Metal Behemoth' written on the back (which makes you look like the Michelin man on his hois), what would you say? Exactly! But it does work occasionally.

There are specialist companies who describe themselves as Strike Forces, (the A-Team has a lot to answer for) who charge huge sums of filthy lucre to ooze all over the chart return shops in the hope of hoisting their clients a few notches up Charlie Charts. These beings are just more parasites who realise music is money and are instantly recognisable by the Kiwi polish skid marks on their tongues.

Still, as all the big boys use them, the small fry feel obliged to mortgage their homes in order to compete.

One may slag off the charts as worthless nonsense, but even I remember the strange euphoria of seeing a disc which contained 'Essence de Shend' at number 98. Two places above Dave Edmunds, three places above Liquid Gold and only two places behind a re-release of Elvis Presley's early hit Wooden Head. These were big names, icons to the pop masses and we were right in there, brushing the stardust from our young shoulders. The next week we had vanished completely while Elvis waddled to number one. "It must have been due to the fact that we weren't dead." said the bitter, twisted cynic.

Throwing Muses' House Tornado LP heralds a new era of tampered rock'n'roll. Are they strangling the baby? Alex Bastedo shakes the rattle

Blowing

Having just released, arguably, their best record, the album House Tornado following the signing of a worldwide deal with Sire/Warner Brothers (excepting the UK, where they are staying loyal to 4AD), Throwing Muses are currently sitting very pretty. Kristin Hersh, the Muses' songwriter and one prong of the female front three, is pretty happy about it too. . .

"This is the first LP that was really produced the way we wanted it. It's sort of in between the production of our debut, which was never really pure enough for us, and the recent mini-LP, The Fat Skier, which we wanted produced simply but which actually ended up being too stripped down and empty. This time around we ended up having the freedom we asked for and spent two and a half months recording and mixing. At one point Lenny Kaye was being mentioned as a possible producer for us as was Johnny Marr, but in the end we stuck with home and chose Gary Smith who has his own studio."

Songwise though, is this a progression?

"I think so. The first LP tended to be somewhat 'dark', although I hate to talk about our music in that way. The Chains Changed 12-inch, which I really like, opened things up a lot more. With The Fat Skier the main intention was that Sire Records in America wanted to put the recording of Soul Soldier out as the soundtrack to a ten minute video we had made, so we just added six extra and older songs to it to make it a mini-LP. Consequently, we see that particular record as more of a step aside than a progression." A lot of people pick up on the fact that you're working within the standard guitar/bass/drums/vocals format but doing something strange with it, twisting it.

"Mind you, a lot of people in America don't think we have anything to do with the traditional rock format. They have no understanding of us or the context we're coming from. We received a review recently in the New York Times and the poor man who reviewed us seemed to be particularly frightened. He said we had rewritten music for our own use and that we had no place in the rock area. I mean, what the hell did he think we'd done? I play guitar, I play chords — they may be odd ones but I do play them — so I'm glad you think we're working in the standard rock area. I certainly do too! Actually, I've really learnt a lot about our music from reviews in the UK press. Some of them are beautifully written, really poetic. . ."

Kristin, I wandered lonely as a cloud. . . you've had some funny old comparisons, though — Patti Smith, Siouxsie, Grace Slick, Stevie Nicks and Suzanne Vega. . .

"Yeah, basically any woman that sings, although Jello Biafra and Gordon Gano from Violent Femmes have also been two male comparisons."

Would you still regard yourselves as primarily a live band?

"Very much so, and I think our music can come across as a bit cryptic if our faces aren't there to explain it. People have said that they finally understood us when they saw us live and I feel that too. I feel that I can never quite explain enough on vinyl. Maybe I'm just not used to that medium. When we're on stage we feel very much that we're playing for each other and a record does tend to kind of take that away. On stage we can articulate ourselves in a much more powerful, and louder, way."

You've come so far in the last 18 months since your first album was released. How does that make you feel?

"I'm only 21 and when we signed away seven years of our lives on our Warner Brothers contracts recently I thought for a moment 'God, I haven't finished school yet. I think I'd rather be a psychologist!'"

With that deal signed, are you worried about the growing distance between you and your fans as you get bigger? I remember you once saying that manic depressive people had started writing to you and claiming you as their favourite band, but for all the wrong reasons.

"That used to worry me more than it does now. One of the scariest things to me is the romanticising of the depressed person, the artist. . . it scares me to think that there are posers who think it is attractive. But then again I wonder if the dark tunnel of the depressive is something you have to go down before you see light — the attractiveness for me comes from the joy of it, the poetry of it, and I don't associate it with the wretchedness that it began with."

You'd rather be sitting at home with your feet up watching Fawlty Towers and ploughing through a bowl of popcorn would you?

"I just don't want to give up my right to be a happy person because some people have to see us as dark."

For anyone to claim that this compulsive giggler is dark or depressive, they'd have to be secretary of the national glee club. To anyone else she's just a normal person who happens to be blessed with musical talent and will be very famous quite soon. Then she'll probably laugh even more.

THE BINTII SCAM: PART 1

On his recent fact finding trip to Dublin, Ug reporter Dick Mescal decided to get in touch with the wonderfully outrageous Bintii, former Virgin Prune, to bring out the up-to-the-minute news on his incarnation as Princess Tinymeat. Contact was made, by telephone, and the meeting set up in a rather trendy, city centre brasserie with Bintii sure to be easily spotted, especially as he apparently now sports very long hair. Our intrepid correspondent sets out in his finest apparel, leathers, silver tipped boots and large black hat, not to be outdone by this legendary character.

Arriving in good time he sets out to wait, having checked that no-one of equally bizarre appearance is present and having informed the barman of his mission. One-and-a-half hours later he decides he's been stood up and leaves.

Later, our man Dick gets a message to call Bintii, which he does, to find that he had been there all the time but appears to have been in hiding. He even admits to spotting our man but it seems he was too timid (scared?) to approach him. Determined to track down his man, Dick is currently taking lessons in humility and planning on borrowing one the Ed's polo neck jumpers and a pair of corduroy trousers for their next encounter. Watch this space!

Hard-Ons: rock 'n' roll, doncha jes luv it?

HARDER THAN THE REST?

Holly Wood samples the finest Indian cuisine with Dickcheese specialists The Hard Ons

In at the kill

Tolson tattoo head, bad farts and the sound of infiltration

"Normality," says American anti-musician Michael Tolson, "is what cuts off your sixth finger and your tail." (?) He isn't kidding, either. When he isn't beating dead dogs with a fluorescent stick, or running TESTES 3, Baltimore's underground telephone network, this self-styled 'mad scientist' operates on the periphery of the music/performance art subculture, refusing either to be ignored or categorised, but always registering a strong presence. "I try to live as a possibility rather than a particular thing," he says. "Kill normality before it kills you."

His last visit to these shores, in 1984, went largely unreported, but the possibility of further infiltration cannot be ruled out. "I'm now writing my autobiography, Resumé Of A Blatant Pervert," he recently disclosed, "and will be touring Europe in mid-'88, when I hope to appear in London."

You have been warned. . . Ian Blake

Hey! Rock 'n' roll! When The Hard Ons, their manager, their record company (Yves and Alain from Vinyl Solution) and a token Brit (me) march into a celebrated Indian restaurant in Bayswater, the waiters take one look and gulp. Quite visibly. They sneak a second look and shoot off to set up a couple of tables in an annexe somewhere on the outskirts of Brighton.

Three of the slightest and nicest (if hairiest) rock 'n' roll animals I've ever met, Hard Ons Peter Black, Ray Ahn and Keish de Silva are used to bring misjudged by their appearances. But. . .

"F it, who cares?"

This is a band who can't even put up a poster without getting into trouble. A band whose first-ever gig was broken up by the Sydney police.

"F it, who cares?" Ray repeats to himself before elaborating. "We want to get up people's noses, that's why we chose the name in the first place.

"Rock 'n' roll, by definition, has got to be one step beyond the establishment. Something like U2 or Bon Jovi might call itself rock 'n' roll but they're accepted by everybody — they're just wimps.

"If you want to be rock 'n' roll you've got to go that one step further and produce music that's so loud and so shocking that people are going to have to sit up and take notice or walk out disgusted."

"Some people," Blackie continue, "call us sexist because of Ray's cartoon artwork, but it's all so over the top anyone with half a brain could see it was a joke. It's just a pissstake of heavy metal taken to the extreme. Y'know that comic Viz? Well, we've got the same sort of humour.

"Yeah, we sing about sex, but that's because we do it a lot. It's like the Stupids singing about food. The shit we get about sexism is almost as hard to understand as the shit we get about racism!"

The Hard Ons were accused of racism by the NME (What's that!—ed) on the grounds that the cartoon cover of the single All Set To Go showed them in KKK Klobber. But The Hard Ons are one-third Sri Lankan and one-third Korean! While Blackie's Yugoslavian! Maybe someone somewhere missed the point.

So how popular are The Hard Ons in Australia?

Blackie: "I wouldn't say we were bigger than The Go-Betweens but we're easily the biggest independent band in Australia. It's embarrassing really because Hot For Your Love, Baby has been top of the independent charts for ages and it's such a bad album. It's mostly old demos and we don't like it at all, so every week we look at the charts hoping to find it's disappeared and ever week there it is a number one. It's real embarrassing. Still the new LP's brilliant."

Indeed it is. Entitled Dickcheese (and the NME review of that should be something to look forward to) it's the album I thought thrash would never make. Live too, The Hard Ons excel. In April, on the away leg of their Highway To Hell tour with The Stupids, the trio from Sydney were a blurring revelation of manic, metallic power, pure-punk-rock-snot and unbelievably, too, there was classic pop melody. Catch them when they return from the European leg and hang hundreds on the crest of the biggest tidal wave of noise since Motorhead recorded their second LP.

Ray: "All the criticism we get and all the hatred we seem to inspire, just motivates us to do it even more, to be harder still. We just want to go as far as we can without ever compromising. Which is the main point really. We love what we're doing and we're going to keep on doing it no matter what anyone says.

"If my parents can't stop me doing this, no one else can — that's for sure."

Heading back down Westbourne Grove, Blackie spots some Scandinavian girls walking along behind us. Looking round as he walks, he adopts his best Yankee rock star drawl, 'Hey gurlz, come with us, we're rock stars, let's party!'

They laugh and he turns to face forwards just too late to stop himself falling arse over tit across a pile of builders' rubble. You'd never see Jon Bon Jovi make a dick of himself like that.

Yippee Yai Yo

Giant Sand are the windswept alternative breed, Howe Gelb is their Stetson-wearing ace-in-the-hole

Mexican border as part of Reagan's frontline against the supposedly encroaching Communist hordes of South and Central America. All this and it has suffered, with the rest of Arizona, the ignominy of the recent impeachment of their governor, the Republican Evan Mecham, a man made infamous for his first act in office, the abolition of Martin Luther King Day! On top of all this you've got the Mafia, the drug barons, and the underground railway bringing people up from Central America!

That's one hell of a melting pot, Howe?

"Yeah," he draws sardonically, "Tucson as town is as ugly as any other massive splodge of pavement. Outside it's simply the desert waiting for us to run out of water, so it can turn it into a ghost town. The water's bad and cancer is a problem in most parts of the city because of the toxic waste seeping into the water system. You've got that, the earthquakes and the crazy weather."

This is turning into a regular holiday brochure! But Howe's got the bullet between his teeth now.

"We got a 'quake every week. People are buying up property in Arizona so that they'll have beach front! You think, like there's no way the Pacific Ocean shouldn't be here. You don't think it's impossible. It is going to happen!"

That's what you call living on the edge. It is not surprising that our man Gelb shows signs of resigned desperation in his dry, cracked vocals as Giant Sand deliver the off-beat charm of Back To The Black And Grey or the stinging rebuttal of Town Where No Town Belongs with its tangled web of scorching guitars.

On the stormy side, Giant Sand rip-roar through potent bursts such as Big Rock or the witty, barnstorming 3 Sixes, showing that they can boogie with the best of them and in particular one track, the very magnificent Uneven Light Of Day, that is the most evocative slice of spaghetti western pop heard this side of the Pecos.

Our hero, his large hat still cemented firmly to his head, leaves us with one last word or warning.

"People have a willingness, especially over here, because the product is stamped 'From Arizona', to conjure up these images, but I feel as awkward as hell trying to say 'Yeah man, it's the desert. Blame it all on the desert!'"

With that he turns on his heels and walks of into the slow burning glory of a ruby red, Mexican sunset, returning as silently and as swiftly as he came. This leaves us staring into the bottom of our glass of finely-distilled cactus juice, wondering if it has all been some weird hallucination. That only leaves us to flip the record and wait for the visions to come flooding back. Dick 'the mind's a wonderful thing' Mescal

Giant Sand's Howe Gelb: the face beneath the hat

A lonesome coyote moans in the distance as an eerie, whistling wind whips across the plains. Tumbleweeds, er, tumble across the desert floor and very faintly the clink, clunk, clink of spurs is heard as the stranger hovers into view from out of the mad, swirling dust cloud. His large black hat is pulled down tight over his eyes and the warm glow of his burning cheroot pierces the gloom of his craggy features as he draws closer and closer.

"Howdy," he says introducing himself as Howe Gelb, the singing/songwriting frontman for a spicy little combo known as Giant Sand. He's just strolled in from their home town of Tucson, Arizona to announce that they have just whipped themselves up a striking typhoon of a new album, aptly entitled Storm.

These maverick sons of the Arizona desert create a whirlwind rush of a barnstorming garage sound that is tempered by their evocative, dust-blown imagery, a mixture that seems to be drawn from the vast desert of their surroundings.

Tucson is the town where no town belongs. Totally engulfed by the desert, heavily dependent for water, its residents suffer vast climatic extremes. It is also one of the frontier posts close to the

THE BLITZOIDS Stealing From Helpless Children

Mook Records Residents gone wrong, moving down a weird West Side Story, Jazz-cum-soundtrack road, with a tree-lined cityscape and surreal overtones. All the best bits of life with a selection of backbeat. ● ● 1/2

DECEPTION BAY Deception Bay

Independent Project No contact here as Nate Starkman are soon to release this gem in the UK, through Fundamental/Red Rhino/the Cartel. The sound of Cambridge, Mass is close to that of 23 Skidoo on downers, while the anthemic length of each piece suggests the intensity of Dead Can Dance and the eccentricity of Savage Republic. Excellent material. ● ● ●

FLETCHER GOES FROM PHILLY TO THE MOON

Take interstate 95 south from New York, bypass Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington DC, and stay on the Highway until you get to Richmond. (Should you ever find yourself with a free night there, by the way, try and locate a member to sign you into Fieldings, an after-hours nightclub. This three-tiered joint sells inexpensive beer and is still a thriving metropolis at 6am. (Every bit as classy as the late-night clubs of London and New York, it is less elitist and more fun. But anyway. . .) There, take a variety of minor roads south-west until you're 80 miles into the lush green countryside of Virginia, and you'll come across a campus by the name of Hampden-Sydney which, in true English double-barrelled style, is a posh college for wealthy white southern males.

Like all American colleges, Hampden-Sydney has a big spring weekend when live music takes over the campus; unlike most colleges, which put on maybe two evening concerts and a free outdoor show, H-S throws the event over to its fraternities, each of whom organise outdoor gigs two nights on the trot. The result: two dozen bands playing on up to ten different outdoor stages in one weekend. (To anyone unfamiliar with the American 'Greek' system fraternities are the boys' clubs; sororities are the names given to the girls' select houses.) That Hampden-Sydney is an all-male college is of no consequence; they simply bus girls in from as far away as Raleigh, North Carolina to enjoy the weekend. I'd like to tell you that the result was toga parties and orgies at least equivalent to anything John Belushi was capable of organising in Animal House, but the reality was more subdued, merely a couple of thousand drunken students wandering around the night air dancing to different bands and "making out". Sigma Nu frat, who were kind enough to book Three Colors and pay handsomely for the privilege, boldly prepared to be closed down for a week so the band could play past the designated finishing hour, but there were no complaints from the college authorities. One sensed some disappointment about that.

The biggest act of the weekend was probably The Del Fuegos, who performed the previous night; Atlanta's Driving'n'Crying, signed to Island, were possibly the most well-known name on display on the Saturday. Their heads-down-Southern-gothic-boogie was intriguing but not really what the frat kids were looking to freak out to; on the other hand the group of 40-year olds working their way through a Grateful Dead set were not what I had spent 14 hours in a van to endure. A young trio with a name like The Lost Spiders (I tried to ask the soundman, but he was too busy getting stoned; sound companies are booked from up to 200 miles away and can afford to give less than 100 per cent) were striking up a pretty good power pop song so I waited around for another number. It took but a few seconds to recognise the strains of Alternative Ulster, but a lot longer for it to sink in. Here in deepest Virginia, with the noise of a dozen bands and discos filling the cloudless cool night air, with rich white boys' and girls' soie purpose that night to drink and to score, we could not have been further away from Belfast had we been on the moon.

Unsuspecting of the size of the occasion, our entourage had failed to book a motel; all of them within 20 miles were booked with visiting, mostly female, students. Some nice girls up from North Carolina put us up and eight hours later we headed off on an epic drive back to the city. . . to any city. On the way we stopped at a diner for eggs and coffee; filling a jar on the counter that in an English chip shop would be expected to hold pickled onions were pigs feet, raw and swimming in blood. And only 60¢ each. Welcome to the South.

Talking of cover versions, as we were, it should be pointed out that they form the backbone of live music in America. Indeed, much of the country has no interest in booking anything other than cover bands, and even your hottest new acts have to learn up some standards to get them through those three-hour college parties. Perhaps that is why the tendency is now to perform the unlikeliest cover you can come up with. A couple of Ug's ago, I wrote of the fab Big Dipper and their habit of performing Fleetwood Mac's Little Lies or Wings' Jet. Two of America's other top indie bands take the game a step further, The Connells playing Bon Jovi's Wanted Dead Or Alive and Miracle Legion opting for Pink Floyd's Wish You Were Here. The reasoning would seem to fall somewhere between tease and testament: if the listener grooves to the song before being aware of who wrote it, it serves to break down his or her prejudices. Try telling that to the NME writer who ever reviews these bands!

The Godfathers, who have amassed a big following in the States and were witnessed recently in Philadelphia, also throw in a couple of unlikely covers: a faithful rendition of Anarchy In The UK and an equally aggressive Fight For Your Right To Party. The former send the crowd wild — the Pistols are a legend here as elsewhere, and Megadeth have just hit big with their version — while in the latter, what seems to be a British expatriate decides to emulate the second verb of the song's title and douses singer Peter Coyne with beer. Coyne chooses instead to follow the first verb and delivers a swift kick to the head of the bewildered punter. Good old punk rock! We get lost leaving the club and at 2.30am find ourselves in a McDonalds in deepest Philadelphia. No pigs feet for sale here, just a wild cacophony from assorted b-boys and girls, a drunken janitor falling over behind the counter and the all-pervasive tension of the inner city. Hampden-Sydney might as well have been on the moon.

FAST EDIT

Re the comment on tape-only releases in May's Underground, the writer criticises various groups for not taking the tape medium seriously, but surely this is not the case. Perhaps it is your writer not taking the groups involved seriously. I would also argue the point of these groups using the tape as a step between demo and record, when for some groups it is the only medium where they can vent their music. — I K C McGuffog, York

Yes, the writer didn't take some of the releases seriously, as some of them surely weren't meant as serious efforts, more likely jokes. A lot of groups do release high quality tape-only releases, but it still seems that many people do not use the tape medium in a unique way, merely as a substitute for records. In another context, Eno did a special recording for CD, but he made it the same length as an album. The CD would have allowed him 76 minutes, but he stuck to 42, suggesting that even his ambient and obscure bent couldn't readjust.

BEEHIVE YOURSELF

I was totally disgusted by your comments about The Voice Of The Beehive's last single. I must say I still haven't forgotten a single note of them. But then I haven't got the IQ and memory span of a senile mudskipper like you have. — Niall Pollock, Portstewart, N Ireland

The question is, can mudskipper go senile?

EMPEROR'S NEW DAN-CETRACK

I can't believe that people have fallen for hip-hop in such a totally banal way. After JAMS wore out the medium, Pop Will Eat Itself sucked up to the sampler and World Domination Enterprises went stagnant with I Can't Live Without My Radio. What's next for the UK scene? It seems that everyone wants to bung a dance track behind their secondhand ideas and make it into the charts. Fair enough, but what kind of satisfaction can bands get when they've totally compromised their sound to gain mass appeal? Surely they've just become part of what they set out to be an alternative to, no better than Curiosity Killed The Cat, Deacon Blue, Wet, Wet, Wet or any new Virgin act! Darren Nash, London

With people halving their options and aiming for the dancefloor, it does leave a big hole in the market. It seems like the time's ripe for some bright spark to realise that they can sample things and use them over something other than a dancebeat. But, there again, the records that are topping the charts — in terms of independent success — are the Bomb The Bass, M/A/R/R/S, Gene And Jim type things, while records like The Wedding Present's recent Nobody's Twisting Your Arm couldn't even muster airplay from wonderful (sic) Radio 1. Time for a change again.

Stickdog's Paul Keller sends a postcard to Underground

This is a bullshit period in independent rock music for the US, especially this disappointing scene in San Francisco (bunch o hippies). Our friends in Iowa, SDT and Iowa Beef Experience are really cooking with releases on Vinyl Solution in the UK soon. There'll be an underground compilation called To Sell Kerosene soon with Stickdog and Stiff Legged Sheep out, and Eric Cope's Wiring Department magazine is due (he's one devoted human). There's little of interest going on in SF, but Naut Human and Rhythm And Noise are gearing up for some spectacles, Naut's work with Mark Pauline on the new Survival Research Laboratory movie and video are excellent.

Negativland puts on a great kinky show and the The Beatnigs are amazin' — Victim's Family is happenin' — but haven't seem anything but wimps otherwise. Almost ready to head back to Iowa, impressed with the last few issues of Underground. I'll send some interesting stuff when we produce it, Take care,

Paul Keller

STICKDOG'S NEXT LP WILL BE ON ALTERNATIVE TENTACLES IN JUNE

AFTER

the fact

“There’s this terrible thing in the indie scene where they stay in that corner because it’s more ‘ideologically sound’. But I made a leap out of that. I will use any means necessary to put out information, get into people’s homes.”

So said Billy Bragg, talking to Melody Maker about the Childline single he shared with Wet Wet Wet. In the same week, indie isolationism and major snobbery were confounded by a minor piece of history-making: independent labels laid claim to the summits of the mainstream singles and album charts, with Theme From S-Express by S-Express on Rhythm King, and Erasure’s The Innocents on Mute.

And just while Harry Enfield’s shooting up the charts, let it be known that I shall personally strangle the editor of the next publication which uses as a headline any incarnation of the phrase ‘Lsamoney’ — or anyone else who describes James Brown as ‘The most sampled man in soul music’.

To be fair, though, not everyone knows who James Brown is. Smash Hits recently felt compelled to inform its readers that the most sampled. . .er, that he’s “An ancient soul sensation (60 in fact)”, who is “in a spot of bother with the authorities at the moment because he apparently just shot his wife”. Someone from The Sun must be moonlighting (pun intended) at Smash Hits, because, according to the NME version, the defendant is meant to have shot at his wife: in the end, being a reasonable guy, he merely beat her up with an iron pipe (allegedly, of course), and now stands accused of attempted murder. This could result in his being jailed or even having to cancel his tour of Britain!?! Mr Brown is, of course, 54.

But from court to controversy, as Wembley Arena cancels Run DMC gigs for fear of rap-inspired violence — an excuse rendered slightly dubious by the fact that they’ve also refused to host concerts by Bunny Wailer, who is nothing to do with rapping. As Wembley faced the possibility of investigation by the Commission for Racial Equality, Run DMC’s spokesman told NME that the gutter press “love to write things like ‘black riot’ when there’s been a bit of trouble. But they never write ‘white riot’ after bother at football matches, and that’s far more common than trouble at rap shows”.

Run DMC: banned

Coincidentally, we are now once again knee-pad-deep in football vinyl: odd how these records always start appearing as the season is drawing to a close. Mr Spencer of Sounds expressed concern that this year’s crop were well above average, and might signal “the death of the Bad Soccer Song”.

There’s certainly a trend towards innovation (or jumping on band-wagons, depending on how you see things): Liverpool drafted in Derek B to produce their Anfield Rap, which the NME’s James Brown (unknown to Smash Hits readers) reckons is “simply too good to even be considered a football song”.

Into the bargain, Stock, Aitken And Waterman masterminded the England team’s All The Way, while The Boss Squad’s Worst Song Ever was described by Mr Spencer as “a rather amusing spoof by a mob of unruly football managers”.

I don’t think the Bad Football Song is in much danger, though: there’ll never be another Back Home (England World Cup Squad, 1970) as long as Chas And Dave are lurking in the shadows. Back Home, of course, featured Jack Charlton, whose chequered recording career up to The Boss Squad included the less-than-classic Simple Little Things/Geordie Sunday in 1972 — possibly the most embarrassing record ever made.

No. The most embarrassing record in the world is that Black Sabbath one you’ve been keeping hidden ever since people started sneering at Sounds for their obsession with heavy metal. Now, however, as HM becomes more and more trendy, and the journos begin pulling their copies of Paranoid from under the bed, Melody Maker and NME are looking more like Sounds than Sounds ever has. Kerrang! here they come.

Paul Oldfield lately told a Blacklash correspondent that MM had undergone a “radical submission to the sound”. This, I suppose, means that they’ve actually decided to judge people on their music. That would explain David Stubbs’s contention that cover-stars Megadeth have “made heavy metal so heavy and so metal that they pretty much qualify as avant-garde”. Their views on homosexuality and women must also be avant-garde, I presume. Dave Mustaine: “Being a straight gay is OK, but playing both sides of the fence kind of fks it up for those of us that are heterosexual”.

Before Stubbs can say ‘Pardon?’, another band member interjects, “Bisexual girls are OK, though. They’re cool! No danger!

What are these people on about?

We are not told: they are not asked: no-one explains where the strait-jackets are kept.

James Brown: the most s...

BLACK FLAG III

Wasted Again. Imagine if your favorite Flag party tunes of all time were put together in a room. Then, the room was filled with hundreds of your best friends. Before the cops come, you better slap on Wasted Again, a collection of all the songs that make you want to party. Six Pack, T.V. Party, Wasted, Rise Above and twelve more festive Flag tunes. SST 166

Who's Got The 10 1/2? This release catches the Flag unfurled one night in Portland, Oregon. LP, 40 minutes, cassette, 70 minutes. Either version has enough Flag fury to raise the dead. Contains My War, Loose Nut, and Louie Louie. SST 060

In My Head. Nine new Flag songs. Produced by Greg Ginn, this 1985 release of crunching rock tunes like Drinking And Driving and Retired At 21 destroys. Cassette features three bonus tracks. SST 045

Annihilate This Week. The ultimate party anthem of all time is backed with Best One Yet and Sinking on This Smoking twelve-inch by Black Flag. These three are available only on his disc and the cassette (SST 060). SST 081

The Process Of Weeding Out. Greg, Kira and Bill combine on this 1985 recording of four instrumental cuts of pure Flag fever. Screw The Law, The Last Affront, Southern Rise, and the title track. SST 037

Loose Nut. 1985 saw this release of nine slabs of Flag's potent blend of metal and madness. Greg, Kira, Henry and Bill combine to create classics like Bastard In Love, Annihilate This Week plus seven. SST 035

Slip It In. Released in 1984, this Flag album has Kira, Bill, Henry and Greg working through eight pile-driving songs like Slip It In, Black Coffee, My Ghetto and You're Not Evil. SST 029

Family Man. 1984 saw the release of this stunning record that showcases the diversity of Black Flag. Side one contains nine riveting readings by Henry of his poetry. Side two has four instrumentals with bassist Kira. SST 026

My War. This pivotal 1984 release features nine slabs of primal power. Henry and Greg are joined by Dale Nixon (Greg Ginn) on bass and Bill Stevenson on drums for My War. Nothing Left Inside, I Love You and six more. SST 023

BLACK FLAG: Everything Went Black. A compilation released in 1983, this record examines the eras of Flag before Henry. Johnny Bob Chavo and Dez plus outrageous radio ads. Songs include Gimmie, Gimmie, Gimmie (three versions), My Rules and Louie Louie. SST 015

Damaged. Recorded in 1981, the songs on this LP defined an era. Dez Cadena has moved to guitar, and Henry Rollins takes over as vocalist. Stunning dual guitar Flag on: Rise Above, Damaged I & II, and 15 others. SST 015

The First Four Years. Sixteen classic BLACK FLAG aural notes. Originally appeared on SST 001, 003, 005, PBS 13 (infamous Louie Louie single) and two cuts from New Alliance compilations. SST 021

Jealous Again. It's 1980 and Greg, Chuck and Robo have a new singer named Chavo. Together these four produced an american classic. Tracks include title song, Revenge, White Mionity, No Values and You Bet We've Got Something Personal Against You. SST 003

Nervous Breakdown. The breakdown heard around the world in 1978. Greg Ginn, Chuck Dukowski, Brian Migdol and Keith Morris sing and play the title track plus Fix Me, I've Had It and Wasted. SST 001

Live '84. This is an amazingly accurate portrayal of Black Flag live in concert. The Flag roar through Six Pack, My War, Jealous Again, Slip It In, Black Coffee and fourteen other incomparable Flag tunes. SST 030

Six Pack. Yet another vocalist for Flag, this time in the person of one Dez Cadena. Joining up with Greg, Chuck and Robo, Dez lends his vocal talents to Six Pack, I've Heard It Before and American Waste. SST 005

TV Party. The dual guitars of Greg and Dez fuel these three songs recorded in 1982. Bill Stevenson and Emil share drum duties on TV Party, My Rules and I've Got To Run. SST 012
